Eli fell off from his seat and died on the same day as his sons. On the very same day another member of Eli's family died: his daughter-in-law, while giving birth to a son whom she called Ichabod, said: "Where is the glory? for the glory of the Lord is departed from Israel, since the ark of the Lord was taken." See ps.-Philo, 52–53; 54.3–6. On the parts played by Goliath and Saul in this campaign, see vol. IV, p. 65. The first part of the name Ichabod (יחבד) is explained as יח "where?" (the same explanation is also found in Kimhi on Sam. 4.21). The Septuagint renders this verse: And she called the child Οὐαιβαραβώθ, both because of the ark of God, and because of her father-in-law, and because of her husband. The Septuagint very likely takes יח in the sense of יי "woe" (Aramaic), whereas Josephus, Antiqui., V, 11.4, reads: Ichabod, which name signifies "disgrace", and this because the army received a disgrace at this time. Comp. the etymology of the name Aaron in footnote 36 on p. 474.

34. Sifre N., 88; Sifre Z., 96; Tehillim 93, 414; Shemuel 10, 77. According to Septuagint on 1 Sam. 5.6, seq., the punishment of the Philistines consisted in being smitten in "their secret parts". Furthermore mice sprang up in the midst of their country, and there was a great "confusion of death" among them when God smote the men of their cities, great and small. It is interesting that ER 11, 58, likewise speaks of the visitation of the mice, as well as of the plague causing death among men, women, and children. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 1.1, very likely following Septuagint, writes: God sent a very destructive disease upon the city and country of Ashdod, for they died of dysentery or flux, a sore distemper that brought death upon them very suddenly; for before the soul could, as usual in easy deaths, be well loosed from the body, they brought up their entrails, and vomited them up, entirely corrupted by the disease. And as to the fruits of their country, a great multitude of mice arose out of the earth and hurt them, and spared neither the plants nor the fruits. It is doubtful whether ps.-Philo's (53–54; 55.2.9) elaborate account of the plague is based on a text different from that of the Masorah or not. According to this writer, the plague consisted of scorpions and all kinds of noisome creeping things, which particularly attacked the children and the mothers. The number of them that died with child was seventy-five thousand, and of the sucklings sixty-five thousand, and of those that gave suck fifty-five thousand, and of men twenty-four thousand. The wise men of the Philistines therefore said: "Whereas all that are with child and give suck die, . . . and they that are suckled perish, we also will take kine that give suck and yoke them to a new cart, and place the ark upon it, and shut up the young of the kine. And it shall be, if the kine go forth . . . we shall know that we have suffered for the ark's sake." At the advice of their sages the Philistines set the kine at the head of the three ways that are about Ekron; for the middle way leads to Ekron, and the way on the right hand to Judea, and the way on the left hand to Samaria. The kine, albeit they lowed and yearned for their young, went forth nevertheless by the right-hand way which leads to Judea. And they knew that it was for the ark's sake that they were laid waste. And all the Philistines assembled and brought the ark again into Shiloh with timbrels and pipes and dances. And because of the noisome creeping things that laid them waste, they made seats of gold, and sanctified the ark. The "seats of gold" (sedilia aurea) correspond literally to αἱ ἔδραι αἱ χρυσαῖ of the Septuagint, 1 Sam. 6.17=טַחְרֵי הָהָב of the Hebrew text, whereas in 5.9 and 6.5 the Hebrew equivalent of ἔδραι is עֲפָלִים. It is not unlikely that the substitute used in the time of the Septuagint and ps.-Philo for עֲפָלִים (this word was considered obscene) was מוֹשֵׁב="sedilium" and "podex" (for מוֹשֵׁב in the sense of "podex" see Sanhedrin 82b). Accordingly there is no proof that ps.-Philo made use of the Septuagint. Very strange is the statement of ps.-Philo that the Philistines brought the ark to Shiloh. This contradicts not only the Bible (see 1 Sam. 6. 12), but also the story about the kine so minutely described by this author. It is very likely that Allohili (54D, line 6) is a copyist's error for Israel or populi. After the kine brought the ark to Judea all the people assembled, and took it to the sanctuary. "Israel" and not "the Philistine" is required as subjects of "sanctificaverunt arcum". When the ark returned from the Philistines it was "re-sanctified" by the people. With regard to the accident that befell the idol Dagon, ps.-Philo narrates that its priests were crucified by the people when they found it fallen on its face and its hands and feet lying before the ark. Kimhi quotes an opinion (of the Midrash?) that the upper part of the idol had a human form, the lower that of a fish. Comp. R. E. J. IV, 56 seq. and 269–271.

35. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 1.2; ps.-Philo (as quoted in the preceding note). Comp. also sources cited in note 33 which likewise mention the difference of opinion among the Philistines.

36. BR 54.4 (this passage has many other "songs of the kine"); 'Abodah Zarah 24b; ER 11, 58; Shemuel 12, 82; Tan. Wa-Yakhel 7. That the kine were set at the head of the three ways (a haggadic interpretation of 1 Sam. 6.12) is asserted not only by ps.-Philo (comp. note 34), but also by Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 1.2.

37. ER 11, 58 (the unseemly behavior of the Jews is contrasted with the great respect shown to the ark by the Philistines, who covered their faces that they should not behold the holy vessel); Sotah 35a; BaR 5.9; Tan. Wa-Yakhel 7 (the wind pushed back the cover from the ark, and the people did not refrain from looking at the uncovered ark); Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 1.4, reads: And the wrath of God overtook them, and struck seventy persons dead . . . who, not being priests, and so not worthy to touch the ark, had approached it. Josephus did not forget for a moment that he was a priest. As to the sin committed by the inhabitants of Beth-Shemesh, see also Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20b; Septuagint Targum and Tosefta-Targum on 1 Sam. 6.19. On the rejoicing of the people at the return of the ark, see the quotation from ps.-Philo in note 34.

38. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20b (another opinion has it: the loss of the seventy members of the Synedrion was as grave a loss as the death of fifty thousand men); Targum on 1 Sam. 6.19; BaR 5.9; ER 11, 58; Sotah 35b. In the last-named source two views are given: 1) seventy men, each one of whom was as important to Israel as fifty thousand other men; 2) fifty thousand men, each one of whom was as important as the seventy members of the Synedrion. Comp. Mekilta RS 26 and Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 20–21, where reference is made to ps.-Jerome 1 Sam 4, 19 who remarks: Hos septuaginta viros iudices septuaginta Hebraei intelligunt. See also the similar haggadic interpretation of Joshua 7.4–5, text on p. 845 and note 23 appertaining thereto.

39. Sotah 35a–35b. Comp. also sources referred to in preceding note.

THE ACTIVITIES OF SAMUEL

In the midst of the defeats and other calamities that overwhelmed the Israelites, Samuel's authority grew, and the respect for him increased, until he was acknowledged the helper of his people. His first efforts were directed toward counteracting the spiritual decay in Israel. When he assembled the people at Mizpah for prayer, he sought to distinguish between the faithful and the idolatrous, in order to mete out punishment to the disloyal. He had all the people drink water, whose effect was to prevent idolaters from opening their lips.<sup>40</sup> The majority of the people repented of their sins, and Samuel turned to God in their behalf: "Lord of the world! Thou requirest naught of man but that he should repent of his sins. Israel is penitent, do Thou pardon him."<sup>41</sup> The prayer was granted, and when, after his sacrifice, Samuel led an attack upon the Philistines, victory was not withheld from the Israelites. God terrified the enemy first by an earthquake, and then by thunder and lightning. Many were scattered and wandered about aimlessly; many were precipitated into the rents torn in the earth, the rest had their faces scorched, and in their terror and pain their weapons dropped from their hands.<sup>42</sup>

In peace as in war Samuel was the type of a disinterested, incorruptible judge, who even refused compensation for the time, trouble, and pecuniary sacrifices entailed upon him by his office.<sup>43</sup> His sons fell far short of resembling their father in these respects. Instead of continuing Samuel's plan of journeying from place to place to dispense judgment, they had the people come to them, and they surrounded themselves with a crew of officials who preyed upon the people for their maintenance.<sup>44</sup> In a sense, therefore, the curse with which Eli threatened Samuel in his youth was accomplished: both he and Samuel had sons unworthy of their fathers.<sup>45</sup> Samuel at least had the satisfaction of seeing his sons mend their ways. One of them is the prophet Joel, whose prophecy forms a book of the Bible.<sup>46</sup>

Though, according to this account, the sons of Samuel were by no means so iniquitous as might be inferred from the severe expressions of the Scripture, still the demand for a king made by the leaders of the people was not unwarranted. All they desired was a king in the place of a judge. What enkindled the wrath of God and caused Samuel vexation, was the way in which the common people formulated the demand. "We want a king," they said, "that we may be like the other nations."<sup>47</sup>

40. Ps.-Jerome, 1 Sam. 7.6, seq., quoting this legend as "Hebraei tradunt". The extant rabbinic literature knows of such an ordeal in connection with the worshippers of the golden calf, but not with regard to the sinners in the days of Samuel; see Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 21–23; text on p. 626.—A lengthy description of the "call of Samuel” is given by ps.-Philo, 52; 53.1, seq. When Samuel was only eight years old, God decided to reveal Himself to him; but, in order not to frighten the child, the voice that came to him was as that of a man and not as of God. Samuel at first thought that he heard the voice of Eli, and ran to him. The latter thought that an unclean spirit was attempting to deceive Samuel, and he warned him with the following words: “In thee do I behold the sign that men shall have from this day forward for ever (it is very likely an inaccurate translation of the Hebrew הָאָדָם מֵהַיּוֹם וְלָעוֹלָם and וְעַתָּה רָאָה אֶת זֶה לְכָל “And now behold that sign for all men from this day forward and for ever”; the translator, however, read, וְעַתָּה רָאָה instead of וְעַתָּה רָאָה), that if one call unto another twice in the night or at noonday (very likely an inaccurate translation of חֲצוֹת which here means “midnight”, and not “noonday”), they shall know that it is an evil spirit. But if he call a third time, they shall know that it is an angel.” The second time the voice of heaven which called Samuel sounded to him like the voice of his father Elkanah, and awakening from his sleep, he ran again to Eli. The latter said to him: “In those two voices, where-with God hath called upon thee, He likened Himself to thy father and to thy master; but now on the third time (He will speak) as God.” Eli then instructed Samuel as follows: Attend with thy right ear, and refrain with thy left. For phinehas the priest commanded us, saying: The right ear heareth the Lord by night, the left ear an angel. Therefore if thou hear with thy right ear, say thus: “Speak what Thou wilt, for I hear Thee, for Thou hast formed me.” But if thou hear with thy left ear, come and tell me. A third time a voice resembling that of Elkanah’s awoke Samuel from his sleep, and “filled” his right ear. He now knew that God was revealing Himself to him. The content of this revelation was the announcement of the doom decreed upon the “flower that came forth of the rod of Aaron” (the punishment of the priests). Because they transgressed the law concerning the “nest with birds” (comp. Deut. 22.26) it shall happen to them that the mothers shall die with the children, and the fathers with the sons. Samuel at first would not reveal the prophecy to Eli, saying: “How shall I prophesy the destruction of him that fostered me?” But Eli insisted on knowing the truth. Samuel was afraid, and told him all the words he had heard. And Eli said: “Can a thing formed answer him that formed it? Even so cannot I answer Him when He takes away that which He hath given; He who is the Faithful Giver, the Holy One who hath prophesied. I am subject to His power.” That Samuel began to prophesy at a very early age is also the view of Josephus, Antiqui., V, 10.4, who gives the age of twelve as the beginning of his activity. The statement of the Rabbis (comp. notes 23, 25, and 27, as well as Midrash Tannaim 89) that Samuel’s leadership lasted only twelve years, from his fortieth year until his death, refers to his activity as judge and head of the nation, and does not preclude the possibility of his having exercised his prophetic calling many years more. On the view that God addressed Samuel in the voice of his father, in order not to frighten him, see text on p. 729, where the same statement is given with regard to Moses. On the relation between Phinehas and Eli, see note 25. That the priests were punished for their transgression of the law concerning the “bird’s nest”, is a very strange statement, especially in view of the explicit words of Scripture (1 Sam. 2.12, seq., and 22). It seems therefore likely that the Hebrew original read: וְכַשֵּׁם שֶׁהֵם עֲבָרוּ עַל מִצְוַת קָנִים שִׁצִּיתִי לְמֹשֶׁה כִּי יָמוּתוּ וְגו’. The reference was not to the commandment given in Deut. 22.26, but to that of Lev. 12.6, in accordance with the tannaitic use of קָנִים to designate the purification offering of a woman after child-birth. Ps.-Philo, in agreement with the Rabbis (see note 26), is of the opinion that the sons of Eli were negligent in the sacrifices of the “birds” brought by the women. The translator, or perhaps a later glossator, not acquainted with the mishnaic use of the word קָנִים (the treatise dealing with the law given in Lev., loc cit., bears the name of קָנִים), took it in the sense of קָן צָפוּר of Deut., loc. cit. Eli’s words, at hearing the doom of his family, express his resignation to the will of God, or, as the Rabbis term it, his “acknowledgment of God’s justice” (צְדוּק הַדִּין); this is an obligation incumbent upon any one who hears bad “tidings”; comp. Berakot Mishnah 9.2 and footnote 256 on pp. 235–236. Samuel was chosen prophet by God as a reward for his humility. Three times he arose from his bed in response to what he thought was Eli’s summons. Had he not been so humble, he would never have found out through Eli that it was God who called him; Batte Midrashot, IV, 34; a quotation from a Midrash in Reshit Hokmah שַׁעַר עוֹנָה 7. Samuel did not sleep in the sanctuary, as one might erroneously infer from the words of Scripture (1 Sam. 3.3), but in the “hall of the Levites”. The voice calling Samuel went forth from the sanctuary, and passed Eli, who did not hear it, though he was near the holy place; see Shemuel 9, 75; Targum 1 Sam. 3.20. Comp. Rashi and Kimhi, ad loc.

41. Yerushalmi Ta’anit 2, 65d; Shemuel 13, 83; Tehillim 119, 503; Baraita de-Yeshu’a, 47a; Targum 1 Sam. 7.6; ER 17, 86–87.

42. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 2.2. On three occasions God wages a “war of confusion” against the enemies of Israel: in the battle of Gibeon (Josh. 10.10); in the battle against Sisera (Jud. 4.15); in the battle which Samuel fought against the Philistines. In the time of the Messiah Israel’s enemies will be destroyed by God in the same way. The Egyptians were likewise annihilated at the Red Sea in the same manner. See Shemuel 13, 84; Tehillim 18, 147. Before going into action, Samuel brought a sacrifice, and though not a priest, he performed the sacrificial rites. A divine command suspended on this occasion the laws pertaining to sacrifices, bidding a non-priest to perform the functions of a priest, and making him transgress seven other sacrificial laws; see Yerushalmi Megillah 1, 72c; Shemuel 13, 83; BaR 14.1; WR 22.9; Tehillim 27, 227; Tan. B. IV, 41. On similar suspensions of the law, see footnote 8 on p. 841.—This was the first war in which Samuel participated, as he did not take part in that disastrous campaign which resulted in the capture of the ark and the death of Eli's two sons. Three days before that battle God sent him away, saying: "Go and look upon the place of Arimatha (=Ramathaim); there shall be thy dwelling". When, at his return, he heard of the great calamity that befell Israel, he was deeply grieved. God consoled him, saying: "Before thou diest, thou shalt see the end which I will bring upon Mine enemies, whereby the Philistines shall perish and be destroyed by scorpions and by all manner of noisome creeping things." Ps-Philo, 53–54; 55.1–2. As to the sending away of Samuel, see a similar legend about Jeremiah in text on p. 1075.

43. Nedarim 38a; Tan. B. IV, 91; BaR 18.10. When Samuel spoke the words: "Witness against me . . . Whose ass have I taken, etc." (1 Sam. 12.3), a heavenly voice proclaimed: "I witness." Makkot 23b; BR 85.1; Shemuel 14, 90–91; comp. also Yelammedenu in Likkutim, V, 90b–91a, and text on p. 899, with regard to Samuel's disinterestedness and incorruptibility, wherein he was equal to Moses. Philo, De Inebrietas 34, describes Samuel as the greatest of kings (=rulers, i. e., judges) and prophets. As to Samuel's Naziriteship, see Nazir Mishnah, Babli, and Yerushalmi (end), as well as Shemuel 1, 49–50; Targum 1 Sam. 1.11. According to some authorities quoted in these sources, he was no Nazirite, and the words of Scripture (Sam. loc. cit.) are to be translated "And he shall know of no fear (of man) all his life." On Samuel as the "master of the prophets", see Yerushalmi Hagigah 2, 77a; Tan. B. IV, 82; Shemuel 24, 120; Tehillim 90, 387. He is said to have been equal to Moses and Aaron put together PR 43, 182a; Batte Mid-rashot, IV, 7. On the view that Samuel was Moses's equal, and in some respect his superior, see also Shemuel 9, 74–75; Tehillim 25, 212 (see Buber, note 24); BaR 3.8; PK 4, 38b; ShR 16.4; footnote 561 on p. 718. Comp. also Eccles. 46.11, which reads: The Nazirite of God among the prophets, Samuel who judged and performed the service of priests. On the last point see the preceding note. The Karaite Hadassi, Eshkol, 45b, No. 119, quotes a statement of the Rabbis to the effect that Samuel acted proudly in proclaiming in the presence of all the people his incorruptibility as a judge and his disinterestedness. No such remark is found in the rabbinic literature still extant, and in view of the extraordinary glorification of Samuel by the Haggadah, it is very unlikely that it brought this accusation against him. Hadassi either misunderstood his source, or deliberately invented a statement unfavorable to Samuel, that he might be able to reprove the Rabbanites for their lack of reverence towards the heroes of Israel. A late Karaitic writer (see Neubauer, Beiträge, Hebrew part, 65), drawing upon Hadassi, maintains that the Rabbanites accuse Samuel of having been a corrupt judge. What the Rabbis do say is that Samuel acted proudly in saying: I am the seer; compare with p. 913. Compare also footnote 60 on p. 863 (bottom).

44. Shabbat 56a (it contains several attempts to tone down the biblical report concerning Samuel's sons); Hullin 133a; Tosefta Sotah 14.5–6; BR 85.12; Shemuel 7, 67; Yerushalmi Sotah 1, 17a, and Ketubot 13, 35d (top). Comp. note 46, and Tosefta-Targum 1 Sam. 12.2.

45. Makkot 11a. The Haggadah finds in 1 Sam. 3.7 the curse uttered by Eli.

46. Shemuel 1, 45 (the views differ; according to one opinion, both were wicked; while others maintain that when they repented, both were found worthy of receiving the gift of the holy spirit); BaR 10.5; Ruth R. 2.1; Tehillim 80, 361. See also ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 6.13; who (following Jewish tradition?) maintains that Ahijah was an unworthy judge, but not his brother Joel, though he too is censured by Scripture for not having attempted to restrain his brother from his evil deeds. See a similar view with regard to the two sons of Eli, text on p. 891. Comp. Rahmer, Ein lateinischer Kommentar . . . zu den Büchern der Chronik, 29–30, and references given in note 44. It is very likely that, in agreement with ps.-Jerome, we are to read in Tehillim, loc. cit.: יואל הוא ושני הווא.

47. Sanhedrin, Tosefta 4.5, and Babli 20b; Sifre D., 156; Midrash Tannaim 103–104; Mekilta D., 5–6; DR 5.8–11. All these sources cite a difference of opinion among the Rabbis with reference to Deut. 17.14. According to some, the institution of a monarchy was commanded by God to Israel, and therefore the sin committed by Israel in Samuel's time consisted in the manner the common people formulated their demand for a king, or in asking for a king before the time was ripe for one. Others maintain that God never commanded the appointment of a king, but knowing Israel's inclination towards a monarchy, He permitted the establishment of such a rule, should the people desire it. This request made by Israel in Samuel's days was granted by God, who, however, did not approve of it. But the prevalent opinion is that Israel, after entering the Holy Land, had three national duties to discharge: the establishment of a monarchy, the annihilation of Amalek, and the building of the Temple. According to Sanhedrin 20b, these duties were to be fulfilled in the order given herewith, whereas Mekilta D., loc. cit., is of the opinion that the first national duty was the building of the Temple, and then the appointment of a king (first the establishment of the kingdom of heaven on earth, and then the organization of the earthly kingdom). In Samuel's days the people committed the sin of asking for a king before the Temple had been erected. The same view seems to be shared by ps.-Philo, 54; 56.1–3, who makes Samuel utter the words: “Behold, now I see that there is not yet for us the time of a perpetual kingdom, nor of building the house of the Lord our God, inasmuch as they desire a king before the time.” The last expression “petentibus regem ante tempus” is practically identical with the one found in Sifre, loc. cit., על ידן, שהקדימו עליהן or שהקדימו עליהן (comp. Tosefta, loc. cit.) in describing Israel’s sinful action in Samuel’s days. After Saul had been appointed king, the people attempted to excuse their demand for a king by saying to Samuel: “We, as well as our king with us, are thy servants; because we are unworthy to be judged by a prophet, therefore we said: Appoint a king over us to judge us.” See ps.-Philo, 55; 57.4; comp. also 55; 58.4. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 3.3, reads: These words (the people’s demand for a king) greatly afflicted Samuel on account of his hatred of the kingly government; for he was very fond of aristocracy, which is divine and makes men who possess it of a happy disposition. In Sanhedrin, Tosefta and Babli, loc. cit., a difference of opinion is cited with regard to the picture drawn by Samuel of the king’s powers. According to one view, the law accedes to the king all this arbitrary power, but another maintains that Samuel tried to “frighten the people” by picturing to them what a lawless king might do.

THE REIGN OF SAUL

There were several reasons for the choice of Saul as king. He had distinguished himself as a military hero in the unfortunate engagement of the Philistines with Israel under the leadership of the sons of Eli. Goliath captured the tables of the law. When Saul heard of this in Shiloh, he marched sixty miles to the camp, wrested the tables from the giant, and returned to Shiloh on the same day, bringing Eli the report of the Israelitish misfortune.<sup>48</sup> Besides, Saul possessed unusual beauty,<sup>49</sup> which explains why the maidens whom he asked about the seer in their city sought to engage him in a lengthy conversation.<sup>50</sup> At the same time he was exceedingly modest. When he and his servant failed to find the asses they were looking for, he said, “My father will take thought for us,” putting his servant on a level with himself,<sup>51</sup> and when he was anointed king, he refused to accept the royal dignity until the Urim and Thummim were consulted.<sup>52</sup> His chief virtue, however, was his innocence. He was as free from sin as “a one year old child.”<sup>53</sup> No wonder, then, he was held worthy of the prophetic gift. The prophecies he uttered concerned themselves with the war of Gog and Magog, the meting out of reward and punishment at the last judgment.<sup>54</sup> Finally, his choice as king was due also to the merits of his ancestors, especially his grandfather Abiel, a man interested in the public welfare, who would have the streets lighted so that people might go to the houses of study after dark.<sup>55</sup>

Saul’s first act as king was his successful attack upon Nahash, king of the Ammonites, who had ordered the Gileadites to remove the injunction from the Torah barring the Ammonites from the congregation of Israel.<sup>56</sup> In his next undertaking, the campaign against the Philistines, he displayed his piety. His son Jonathan had fallen under the severe ban pronounced by Saul against all who tasted food on a certain day, and Saul did not hesitate to deliver him up to death. Jonathan’s trespass was made known by the stones in the breastplate of the high priest. All the stones were bright, only the one bearing the name Benjamin had lost its brilliancy. By lot it was determined that its dimmed lustre was due to the Benjamite Jonathan. Saul desisted from his purpose of executing Jonathan only when it appeared that he had transgressed his father’s command by mistake. A burnt offering and his weight in gold paid to the sanctuary were considered an atonement for him.<sup>57</sup> In the same war Saul had occasion to show his zeal for the scrupulous observance of the sacrificial ordinances. He reproached his warriors with eating the meat of the sacrifices before the blood was sprinkled on the altar,<sup>58</sup> and he made it his task to see to it that the slaughtering knife was kept in the prescribed condition. As recompense, an angel brought him a sword, there being none beside Saul in the whole army to bear one.<sup>59</sup>

Saul manifested a different spirit in the next campaign, the war with the Amalekites, whom, at the bidding of God, he was to exterminate. When the message of God's displeasure was conveyed to Saul by the prophet Samuel, he said: "If the Torah ordains that a heifer of the herd shall be beheaded in the valley as an atonement for the death of a single man, how great must be the atonement required for the slaughter of so many men? And granted they are sinners, what wrong have their cattle done to deserve annihilation? And granted that the adults are worthy of their fate, what have the children done?" Then a voice proclaimed from heaven, "Be not overjust." Later on, when Saul commissioned Doeg to cut down the priests at Nob, the same voice was heard to say, "Be not overwicked."<sup>60</sup> It was this very Doeg, destined to play so baleful a part in his life, who induced Saul to spare Agag, the king of the Amalekites. His argument was that the law prohibits the slaying of an animal and its young on the same day. How much less permissible is it to destroy at one time old and young, men and children.<sup>61</sup> As Saul had undertaken the war of extermination against Amalek only because forced into it, he was easily persuaded to let the people keep a part of the cattle alive. As far as he himself was concerned, he could have had no personal interest in the booty, for he was so affluent that he took a census of the army by giving a sheep to every one of his soldiers, distributing not less than two hundred thousand sheep.<sup>62</sup>

Compared with David's sins, Saul's were not sufficiently grievous to account for the withdrawal of the royal dignity from him and his family. The real reason was Saul's too great mildness, a drawback in a ruler. Moreover, his family was of such immaculate nobility that his descendants might have become too haughty.<sup>63</sup> When Saul disregarded the Divine command about the Amalekites, Samuel announced to him that his office would be bestowed upon another. The name of his successor was not mentioned on that occasion, but Samuel gave him a sign by which to recognize the future king: he who would cut off the corner of Saul's mantle, would reign in his stead. Later on, when David met Saul in the cave and cut off a piece of the king's skirt, Saul knew him for a certainty to be his destined successor.<sup>64</sup>

So Saul lost his crown on account of Agag, and yet did not accomplish his purpose of saving the life of the Amalekite king, for Samuel inflicted a most cruel death upon Agag, and that not in accordance with Jewish, but with heathen, forms of justice. No witnesses of Agag's crime could be summoned before the court, nor could it be proved that Agag, as the law requires, had been warned when about to commit the crime.<sup>65</sup> Though due punishment was meted out to Agag, in a sense it came too late. Had he been killed by Saul in the course of the battle, the Jews would have been spared the persecution devised by Haman, for, in the short span of time that elapsed between the war and his execution, Agag became the ancestor of Haman.<sup>66</sup>

The Amalekite war was the last of Saul's notable achievements. Shortly afterward he was seized by the evil spirit and the rest of his days were passed mainly in persecuting David and his followers. Saul would have died immediately after the Amalekite war, if Samuel had not interceded for him. The prophet prayed to God that the life of the disobedient king be spared, at least so long as his own years had not come to their destined close: "Thou regardest me equal to Moses and Aaron."<sup>67</sup> As Moses and Aaron did not have their handiwork destroyed before their eyes during their life, so may my handiwork not cease during my life." God said: "What shall I do? Samuel will not let me put an end to Saul's days, and if I let Samuel die in his prime, people will speak ill of him.<sup>68</sup> Meanwhile David's time is approaching, and one reign may not overlap the time assigned to another by a hairbreadth." God determined to let Samuel age suddenly, and when he died at fifty-two,<sup>69</sup> the people were under the impression the days of an old man had come to an end. So long as he lived, Saul was secure.<sup>70</sup> Scarcely was he dead, when the Philistines began to menace the Israelites and their king. Soon it appeared how well justified had been the mourning services for the departed prophet in all the Israelitish towns.<sup>71</sup> It was not remarkable that the mourning for Samuel should have been universal. During his active administration as judge, he had been in the habit of journeying through every part of the country, and so he was known personally to all the people. This practice of his testifies not only to the zeal with which he devoted himself to his office, but also to his wealth, for the expenses entailed by these journeys were defrayed from his own purse. Only one person in all the land took no part in the demonstrations of grief. During the very week of mourning Nabal held feasts. "What!" God exclaimed, "all weep and lament over the death of the pious, and this reprobate engages in revelry!" Punishment was not withheld. Three days after the week of mourning for Samuel Nabal died.<sup>72</sup>

There was none that felt the death of Samuel more keenly than Saul. Left alone and isolated, he did not shrink from extreme measures to enter into communication with the departed prophet. With his two adjutants,<sup>73</sup> Abner and Amasa, he betook himself to Abner's mother, the witch of En-dor.<sup>74</sup> The king did not reveal his identity, but the witch had no difficulty in recognizing her visitor. In necromancy the peculiar rule holds good that, unless it is summoned by a king, a spirit raised from the dead appears head downward and feet in the air.<sup>75</sup> Accordingly, when the figure of Samuel stood upright before them, the witch knew that the king was with her. Though the witch saw Samuel, she could not hear what he said, while Saul heard his words, but could not see his person—another peculiar phenomenon in necromancy: the conjuror sees the spirit, and he for whom the spirit has been raised only hears it. Any other person present neither sees nor hears it.

The witch's excitement grew when she perceived a number of spirits arise by the side of Samuel. The dead prophet, when he was summoned back to earth, thought that the judgment day had arrived. He requested Moses to accompany him and testify to his always having executed the ordinances of the Torah as Moses had established them. With these two great leaders a number of the pious arose, all believing that the day of judgment was at hand. Samuel was apparelled in the "upper garment" his mother had made for him when she surrendered him to the sanctuary. This he had worn throughout his life, and in it he was buried. At the resurrection all the dead wear their grave-clothes, and so it came about that Samuel stood before Saul in his well-known "upper garment".

Only fragments of the conversation between Samuel and Saul have been preserved in the Scriptures. Samuel reproached Saul with having disturbed him. "Was it not enough", he said, "for thee to enkindle the wrath of thy Creator by calling up the spirits of the dead, must thou needs change me into an idol? For is it not said that like unto the worshippers so shall the worshipped be punished?" Samuel then consented to tell the king God's decree, that he had resolved to rend the kingdom out of his hand, and invest David with the royal dignity. Whereupon Saul: "These are not the words thou spakest to me before."<sup>76</sup> "When we dwelt together," rejoined Samuel, "I was in the world of lies, and thou heardest lying words from me, for I feared thy wrath and thy revenge. Now I abide in the world of truth, and thou hearest words of truth from me. As to the thing the Lord hath done unto thee, thou hast deserved it, for thou didst not obey the voice of the Lord, nor execute his fierce wrath upon Amalek.” Saul asked: “Can I still save myself by flight?” “Yes,” replied Samuel, “if thou fleest, thou art safe. But if thou acceptest God’s judgment, by to-morrow thou wilt be united with me in Paradise.”

When Abner and Amasa questioned Saul about his interview with Samuel, he replied: “Samuel told me I should go into battle to-morrow, and come forth victorious. More than that, my sons will be given exalted positions in return for their military prowess.” The next day his three sons went with him to the war, and all were stricken down. God summoned the angels and said to them: “Behold the being I have created in my world. A father as a rule refrains from taking his sons even to a banquet, lest he expose them to the evil eye. Saul goes to war knowing that he will lose his life, yet he takes his sons with him, and cheerfully accepts the punishment I ordain.”<sup>77</sup>

So perished the first Jewish king, as a hero and a saint. His latter days were occupied with regrets on account of the execution of the priests at Nob,<sup>78</sup> and his remorse secured pardon for him.<sup>79</sup> Indeed, in all respects his piety was so great that not even David was his equal: David had many wives and concubines; Saul had but one wife. David remained behind, fearing to lose his life in battle with his son Absalom; Saul went into the combat knowing he should not return alive. Mild and generous, Saul led the life of a saint in his own house, observing even the priestly laws of purity. Therefore God reproached David with having pronounced a curse upon Saul in his prayer.<sup>80</sup> Also, David in his old age was punished for having cut off the corner of Saul’s mantle, for no amount of clothing would keep him warm.<sup>81</sup> Finally, when a great famine fell upon the land during the reign of David, God told him it had been inflicted upon him because Saul’s remains had not been buried with the honor due to him, and at that moment a heavenly voice resounded calling Saul “the elect of God”.<sup>82</sup>

48. Shemuel 11, 78–79; Tehillim 7, 63; Tosefta-Targum 1 Sam. 4.12 (an angel assisted Saul to cover the long distance in a short time); ps.-Philo, 53; 54.3–4. Comp. note 32 and footnote 34 on p. 916.

49. Sotah 10a; compare with p. 58.

50. Berakot 48b; Shemuel 13, 86; Tehillim 7, 70.

51. Tosefta Berakot 4.18; Tan. B. III, 4; ARN 10 (second version 20), 43; a quotation from a Midrash in Reshit Hokmah, שער ענוה 7. When Saul refused to accept the crown offered to him on account of his youth (comp. 1 Sam. 9.2; but here he dwells on the insignificance of his tribe and family), the prophet replied: “Who will grant that the word should come into accomplishment of itself, that thou mayest live many days? But consider this that thy words shall be likened unto the words of a prophet, whose name shall be Jeremiah.” See ps.-Philo, 55; 56.6. The statement in ps.-Philo that Saul met Samuel walking hard by Baam (ille autem ambulabat juxta Baam; 54, bottom; 56.4) goes back to 1 Sam. 9.14: והנה שמואל יוצא לקראתם הבמה where the Septuagint has εἰς Βαμᾶ, as if במה were the name of a place. On Saul’s modesty and other virtues, see also note 80, and footnote 86 on p. 1098, as well as Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 4.5.

52. Tan. B. III, 4; Tosefta-Targum 1 Sam. 10.22. Saul, however, had a presentiment that he was destined to become king. For in a vision he saw himself on top of a palm-tree, which indicates accession to royal dignity; see ps.-Jerome, 1 Sam. 9.20, who gives it as a “Hebrew tradition.” Comp. Berakot 57a (towards the end) about dreaming of ascending a roof. In the incidents which happened to Saul on his way from Samuel to his father, the history of his life was shown to him. The three goats (comp. 1 Sam. 10.3, seq.) indicated to him that he would be the father of three sons, and the two loaves of bread which were given to him signified that two daughters would be born unto him; Tan. as quoted in Makiri, Is. 46.161. Comp. Tan. B. I, 22. On the haggadic interpretation of Zelzah (1 Sam. 10.2), comp. BR 82.9; Shemuel 14, 89; Tosefta Sotah 11.11.

53. Yoma 22b (1 Sam. 13.1 is explained to mean, innocent like a one-year-old child); PR 195a; Targum 1 Sam.

13.1; Yerushalmi Bikkurim 3, 65d; Shemuel 17, 95. The two last-named sources read: The bridegroom on the day of his wedding, the king on the day of his coronation, and the elder on the day of his ordination are forgiven all their sins up to that day. That Saul was free from sin is also mentioned by ps.-Jerome on 1 Sam. 13.1. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenu. 23–24. See also Targum 1 Chron. 8.40, and note 80.

54. Ps.-Jerome, 1 Sam. 10.6, giving this view as a Jewish tradition. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenu., 117.

55. Yerushalmi Shebi'it 3, 34d; WR 9.2; Tan. Tezaweh 8; Targum 1 Chron. 8. 33; compare with p. 677. Saul was one of the Benjamites who were told to get a wife by capturing one of the daughters of Shiloh (Jud. 21.21); but being very shy by nature, he had no courage to come near the dancing maidens. One of them, however, attracted by Saul's beauty (compare with p. 895), suggested to him that he should capture her; Rashi, 1 Sam. 20.30, and Rimze Hafiarot, Rosh ha-Shanah, 1.

56. Shemuel 14, 89 (other opinions are: he wanted them to slay the Jewish archers, or the members of the Synedrion); Tosefta-Targum 1 Sam. 11.2; comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 5.1, who remarks that if Nahash had accomplished what he wanted, he would have rendered Israel powerless in war, as the left eye of the warrior is covered with the shield.

57. PRE 38; Shemuel 17, 96. On the dimness of the stone of Benjamin, indicating the sin of that tribe, see text on p. 845.

58. Zebahim 120a, as an explanation of 1 Sam. 14.34. On the explanation of this verse by ps.-Jerome, see Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenu., 24–26. It is quite possible that ps.-Jerome has correctly transmitted the Haggadah to the effect that no meat except that of a sacrifice could be eaten in time of war, when all the people were near the holy ark that followed them to the battle-field; Saul prevented the use of other meat by the people. Comp. sources quoted in footnote 519 on p. 708 with regard to the use of meat during the journey of Israel in the wilderness.

59. WR 25 (end); BaR 11 (towards the end); Shemuel 17, 95–96.

60. Yoma 22b; Koheleth 7.16; Shemuel 18, 100; Alphabet of Ben Sira 4c; Jerome, Eccles. 7.16. Quite correct was Saul's attitude towards the Kenites, whom he had warned of the danger threatening them in case they should not separate themselves from the Amalekites. He owed this to them for the hospitality offered by the Kenite Jethro to Moses. Although this hospitality was prompted by selfish motives (he wanted Moses to marry one of his daughters), one ought to be grateful for a good deed, even if the motive thereof is not a pure one; Berakot 63b; WR 34.8; PRE 44;

Shir 2.5; Shemuel 18, 99; ps.-Jerome on 1 Sam. 15.6; Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 7.2–3.

61. Tehillim 52, 284; Shemuel 18, 99–100. On the contrast between the kindness of the law concerning animals and the severity of war, see text on p. 297, and the quotation from ps.-Philo, note 40. The Amalekites were great sorcerers (compare with p. 581), and used to transform themselves into animals to escape the attacks of the enemies in war. God therefore commanded Israel to kill all the animals of the Amalekites; see Ketab Tamim, 61, and R. Bahya, Ki-Teze (end), both of whom had that legend in their text of PRE 39.

62. Yoma 22b; Shemuel 18, 99; Targum 1 Sam. 16.4. Compare also with p. 637. Ps.-Philo, 55; 58.2–4, on the other hand, maintains that Saul had spared Agag and his wife because of the hidden treasures promised by the Amalekite king. But Saul never saw the hidden treasures which Agag had promised to show him, as the latter was shortly after killed by Samuel.

63. Yoma 22b; comp. the favorable opinion of Saul in vol. IV, pp. 65–66 and 72, as well as Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 4.1 and 12.7.

64. Tehillim 57, 297–298; Ephraem, 1 Sam. 15.27. Opinions differ as to the meaning of Scripture that Saul on his return from the campaign against Amalek set up a ת on Carmel (1 Sam. 15.12). According to some, Saul erected on Carmel, an altar, the one which was later used by Elijah (1 Kings 18.30, seq.); but according to others, Saul deposited the spoils on Carmel. See Midrash quoted by Rashi and Kimhi, ad loc. These two interpretations of ת are also known to Ephraem, ad loc., 362E. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenu., 27.

65. PK 3, 25a–26b (comp. Buber, note 90); PR 12, 52b; Ekah 3,139; Tan. B. V, 39–40; Tan. Ki-Teze 9; Shemuel 18, 101. In these sources opinions differ as to the way Samuel executed Agag. According to some, Samuel cut Agag's body into pieces, which he threw to the ostriches (מעדנות in 1 Sam. 15.32 is taken to mean the same as נעמיות, because the roots עדן and נעם are synonymous); but others maintain that he bound him on four poles, and killed him by pulling the poles apart. It is obvious, though none of the commentators noticed it, that this Haggadah attempts to solve the difficulty involved in the fact that Samuel who was a Nazirite would not have been permitted to slay Agag, since a Nazirite is forbidden to touch a dead body. The old view which denies the Naziriteship of Samuel was probably prompted by this difficulty; comp. note 43. Ps.-Philo, 55; 58 (end), maintains that Samuel slew Agag with a sword. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 7 (end) writes: He (Samuel) gave orders to slay him. This is a simple way out of the difficulty.

66. ER 20, 115 and 21, 117; Alphabet of Ben Sira 11c; Targum Shenit 4.13; compare with p. 1163. A similar legend is related in ps.-Philo, 55, 58.3–4. When Saul in his greed (see note 62) had spared Agag, God decided to punish him, and made this very sin to become the cause of his death. God therefore said to the prophet Samuel: “Suffer Agag and his wife to come together this night, and slay him tomorrow; but preserve thou his wife until she has given birth to a male child, and then she, too, shall die. The child born of her shall be an offence unto Saul.” This posthumous child of Agag, called Edad, later became Saul’s armor-bearer, and in the battle of Gilboa it was Agag’s son who delivered the death blow to the Hebrew king. Comp. also ps.-Philo (end). Comp. note 107.

67. On the view that Samuel was the equal of these two, see note 43, and text on p. 611. The evil spirit which afflicted Saul was “one born of an echo in chaos”, and David composed a psalm which when sung by him had the power to make the evil spirit depart; ps.-Philo 56; 60, where the text of the psalm is given.

68. I. e., his premature death will be declared to be due to his sins.

69. On Samuel’s age at the time of his death and the duration of his activity, see references cited in notes 23, 25, 27. In opposition to the prevalent opinion that Samuel ruled only twelve years, there is found in Tehillim 25, 212 (see Buber, ad loc.) the view that his activity lasted as long as that of Moses, forty years. This view is shared by Julius Africanus, 1, 93. This author very likely combined the statement of Josephus, Antiqui., V, 10.3 (to the effect that Samuel began to prophesy at the age of twelve), with that of the Rabbis that he died at the age of fifty-two. Comp. also BaR 3.8; ER 6, 37; Tehillim 92, 411; Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 13.5; Tabari I, 414.

70. Ta’anit 5b; Yerushalmi Berakot 4, 7b; Shemuel 25, 122 (שלו מטעת, i. e., Saul, “the planting of Samuel”); the planter would not have survived the destruction of his planting; accordingly, Samuel died about the time when Saul’s death was decreed; the reading of Yalkut II, 141, and Makiri, Ps. 51, 282, is not acceptable); BaR 3.8. “Hannah’s long prayer shortened the days of Samuel.” In her prayer she consecrated her son to the service of the sanctuary for his entire life (see 1 Sam. 1.11 and 22); but as a Levite Samuel could not perform any holy service after the age of fifty (Num. 8.24), and hence he died after having spent this number of years at the sanctuary, from the age of two (See 1 Sam. 1.24; she weaned him at that age; comp. Ketubot 60a) until the age of fifty-two. See Yerushalmi Berakot 4, 7b, and Ta’anit 4, 67c, as well as Bikkurim 2, 64c and Shemuel 2.50 and 3.52.

71. Tosefta Sotah 11.5. On the text, see Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 35–36, where it is suggested that we ought to read ודאי ושמואל מת אלא לענין שאול וימת שמואל מיתה. Tosefta, in agreement with the “Hebrew tradition” given by ps.-Jerome, 28.8, explains that 1 Sam.

25.1 contains the report concerning Samuel’s death and burial, whereas in 1 Sam. 28.3 Samuel’s death is merely referred to by the way, in connection with Saul’s visit to the witch of En-Dor, which would not have happened, had the great prophet still been alive. Comp. the following note.

72. Koheleth 7.1 and Shemuel 23, 111, 115, 117–118 (according to these sources, Samuel’s death is mentioned in 1 Sam. 25.1 by the way only, in connection with the story of Nabal; comp. the preceding note); Yerushalmi Bikkurim 2, 64a (the “ten days” mentioned in 1 Sam. 25.38 refer to the “ten days of penitence”, from New Year to the Day of Atonement, granted to the sinners as days of grace before their final doom is decreed on the Day of Atonement); Tehillim 26, 219–220; ER 18, 109; 2 ARN 43, 118. Nabal’s untimely death was due to his failure to assist the poor; EZ 1, 170. Greedy as he was, he was ashamed to refuse flatly the requests and petitions of the needy, but employed great cunning in avoiding his duty. He lived in Maon, but his possessions were in Carmel (1 Sam. 25.2); the poor who came to Maon were told that if they applied in Carmel, their wishes would be granted; those who came to Carmel were told that Nabal’s residence was in Maon where he transacted his affairs; quotation from a Midrash by Shu’aib, ‘Ekeb, 104b. Comp. also Tehillim 14, 113. Pride was another vice of Nabal. He was so proud of his aristocratic descent that he despised David, the descendant of Ruth the Moabite, and claimed the honor and privileges due to the tribe of Judah for himself, the representative of the noble clan of Caleb; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20b; Baraita de-Yeshu’a, 45a. In his pride he not only denied David’s claim to royal dignity, but also God, in whose name Samuel anointed David; denying God, Nabal led a loose life; Tehillim 53, 287–288.—On Samuel as the ideal type of judge, see text on p. 895.

73. WR 26.7; Tan. B. III, 81; Tan. Emor 2; Shemuel 24, 118. As to “the rule of conduct” to take two companions on a journey, see text on p. 766. The Midrashim mentioned above (see also PRE 33) dwell also upon Saul’s strange action, in that he first destroyed the sorcerers, and then sought the advice of the witch of En-dor. Ps.-Philo, 59; 64.1, maintains that Saul “scattered all the sorcerers out of the land” not out of zeal for God and His law, but that “men should remember him after his death.” For this he was punished by God that he himself sought help from the sorcerers.

74. PRE 33; ps.-Jerome, 1 Sam. 28.7. On the view that Abner accompanied Saul on his visit to the witch, see the references given in the preceding note. Comp. also Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 36–37. Ps.-Philo, 59; 64.3–5, calls the witch Sedecla (=צדק לא “unrighteous”; comp. the explanation of the name Tobal by Rashi, Is. 7.6), the daughter of Adod (the reading Debin is hardly acceptable), the Midianite (see text on p. 871), and maintains that she deceived the people of Israel with her sorceries for forty years. In PRE the name of the witch is Zephaniah=“the hidden one”.

75. WR 26.7; Tan. B. III, 82 (here it is supposed that necromancy can only be performed during the day, and accordingly לילה in 1 Sam. 28.8 is to be taken in the sense of gloom; comp. a similar explanation of לילה in Tan. B. I., 93; footnote 163 on p. 211); Tan. Emor 2; Shemuel 24.119. Septuagint, 1 Sam. 28.14, very likely read זקף instead of זקן, but the legend about the dead walking with their heads downwards and feet in the air is found in sources independent of this passage; see the references given in footnote 301 on p. 240. Frankel's remarks in Vorstudien, 188, and Wellhausen, Text der Bücher Samuelis, 13, are to be corrected accordingly. When Saul noticed that the witch did not recognize him, though she had seen him often, he wept and said: “Lo, now I know that my beauty is changed, and the glory of my kingdom is passed from me”; ps.-Philo, 59; 64.4. This author, however, does not explain how the witch, seeing Samuel rise from among the dead, knew that it was Saul who asked her services. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 14.2, maintains that Samuel informed her of Saul's presence.

76. Comp. 1. Sam. 15.28 with 28.17.

77. WR 26.7; Tan. B. III, 82–83; Tan. Emor 7; Shemuel 24, 119–120; Yerushalmi Ta'anit 2, 77a; Hagigah 4b; PRE. 23. The story of the witch of En-dor as narrated by ps.-Philo, 59; 64.5,8, offers many parallels to the rabbinic legends, but in some respects this author's description differs from that of the Rabbis. When Saul asked the witch to describe to him the form of the apparition, she replied: “Thou inquirest of me concerning the gods; for behold, his form is not the form of a man. He is arrayed in a white robe . . . and two angels lead him.” We have here two haggadic explanations of אל־עֲוֹלִים (1 Sam. 28.14); Samuel is like a God (so also Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 14.2), and with him two angels (see p. 57, and Index, s. v. “Guardian Angels”), whereas according to the Rabbis, “two men of God” (Moses and Samuel) ascended. Saul, continues ps.-Philo, recognized the mantle Samuel had rent; comp. 1 Sam. 15.27. On the views of the Rabbis as to whose garment was torn on this occasion, Samuel's or Saul's, see Ruth R. 41.8 and Shemuel 18, 100. In agreement with the Rabbis, ps.-Philo makes Samuel utter the words: “I thought that the time was come for me to receive the reward of my deeds (i. e., in the terminology of rabbinic theology, the day of judgment). Ps.-Philo and the Rabbis (comp. Shemuel 10.76; PRE, loc. cit.), as well as Eccles. 46.20, dwell upon Samuel's great distinction in having “prophesied after his death”. PRE and ps.-Philo maintain that the purpose of the “prophecy after death” was to call Saul to repentance, to atone by his heroic death for his sins. This throws light upon Eccles., loc. cit., where “to remove the sins” (λαοὺ of the Greek is not represented in the Syriac, and is based on a misunderstanding) refers to those of Saul, who, on hearing Samuel's words, went to his death, to atone thereby for his sins, as is explicitly stated by the Rabbis and ps.-Philo. The latter writes: And Saul heard the words of Samuel . . . and said: “Behold, I depart to die with my sons, if perchance my destruction may be an atonement for my iniquities”. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 14.2, likewise dwells upon Saul's heroic spirit, who, knowing what awaited him at the battle, did what duty demanded of him, and even took his sons with him to certain death. According to a Midrashic Genizah fragment, Saul in going into battle followed the advice of his son Abinadab (“father of the free-will offering”). The same statement is made by ps.-Jerome, 1 Sam. 31.6, with the additional remark that this son of Saul was also called Ishvi (1 Sam. 14.41), because of his being worthy (יָשָׁר) to be mentioned with his father.—The witch of En-dor succeeded in making Samuel appear, because he had only been dead a few months (comp. note 70), and the first year the bodies of the pious remain intact in the grave, while their souls “ascend and descend”; as soon as the bodies begin to decay, the souls remain above and descend no more; Shabbat 152b. The rationalistic view that necromancy, like sorcery in general, is nothing but a fraud, is first met with among authors who flourished about 900 C.E.; comp. the references given by Kimhi on 1 Sam. 18.25; R. Hananel on Sanhedrin 67b quoted by R. Bahya, Exod. 22.7. R. Bahya himself considers necromancy possible, and knows many things about it. See also Ziyoni, Kedoshim (end). As to the view that the dead will rise in the garments in which they were buried, see Yerushalmi Shebi'it 9, 32b; BR 90 (beginning); Tan. B. I, 208–209; Koheleth 5.10. On the punishment of those who were worshipped as gods, see text on p. 399.

78. Tan. B. III, 45, which reads: The thought of having caused the death of the priests of Nob drove him into the arms of death; he had executed eighty-five priests who were worthy to be high priests; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a; Targum 1 Sam. 22.18. Kimhi, ad loc., seems to have misunderstood the meaning of this passage of Targum; comp., however, note 92 which cites the unfavorable opinions on these priests expressed by ps.-Philo. This author nevertheless remarks (58; 63.3) that the defeat of Israel and the death of Saul and his sons at the hands of the Philistines were the punishment for the crime committed against the priests of Nob. God said: “Behold, in the first year of Saul's reign, when Jonathan sinned and was about to be put to death by his father, the people rose up and saved him. Now when the priests were slain, even three hundred and eighty-five (this number is found in Septuagint, whereas the Hebrew has only eighty-five; comp. Kimhi, loc. cit.), they kept silence and said nothing. Therefore . . . they shall fall down wounded, they and their king.”

79. Berakot 12b; 'Erubin 53b (top); Yoma 22b (which reads: David committed more sins than Saul, and yet they did not cause his fall); Alphabet of Ben Sira 3b. In the last passage Saul's severity toward his children is contrasted with David's leniency towards the sins and evil deeds of his children. On the virtues of Saul, see text on pp. 898 and 899, and the following note.

80. Tehillim 7, 62–63; Shemuel 24, 122; Yerushalmi Nedarim 10 (end; here a view is cited according to which, 2 Sam. 1.24–25 refers to Saul's great devotion to the Torah and its exponents; comp. 'Erubin 53a, bottom); PRK 5, 44a–44b; PR 15, 68a–68b; BaR 11.3; Tosefta-Targum 1 Sam. 10.23. The distinction of being the first Jewish king Saul owed to the tribe of Benjamin, which was rewarded in this way for its great faith in God displayed at the Red Sea, when it was the first to jump into the water; Targum 1 Sam. 15.7, and compare with p. 555. In contrast to these Haggadahs glorifying Saul, see ER 31, 159, where he is described as having been of a proud and distrustful nature, which led him to sin and finally to ruin. See also Yerushalmi Sotah 1, 17b; Shemuel 13, 85, and BaR 11.3, where the statement is made that Saul and Absalom possessed beauty of body but not of soul. Opinions differ as to whether Saul in taking away his daughter Michal from David and giving her to another man (comp. 1 Sam. 25.44) committed a crime or an error, the latter consisting in his thinking erroneously that his daughter's marriage to David was void according to the law; comp Sanhedrin 19b, and the list of Saul's sins in WR 26.9; Tan. B. III, 83; Tan. Emor 2; Shemuel 24, 120–121. ER, loc. cit., censures Saul severely for his taking away Michal from David, and according to Tosefta Sotah 11 (end) he did the same with his daughter Merab, whom he first gave unto marriage to David, and then took her away from her lawful husband to make her marry another man. Compare also with pp. 906 and 940. Instructive is the remark of BR 32.1 and 38.1, that Saul considered David's marriage to Michal void the moment he became an outlaw and legally dead. On the observance by Saul of the priestly laws of purity, see also Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 11.9. According to Seder 'Olam 12, Saul ruled two years, but Eupolemus, 477b maintains that he reigned twenty-one years. Josephus, Antiqui., VI (end) states that Saul reigned forty years. Comp. also Alphabet of Ben Sira 4a; Septuagint 1 Sam. 13.1; note 53, beginning.

81. Berakot 62b. David was all the more to be blamed for this act, as he cut off the fringes ("Zizit") from Saul's garment; Tehillim 7, 64, and somewhat differently in ראבי"ה I, 163, No. 162. Comp. also Toledot Adam we-Hawwah I; 19.3 and p. 1058.

82. Berakot 12b; 'Erubin 53b. Compare with p. 935.

THE COURT OF SAUL

The most important figure at the court of Saul was his cousin Abner, the son of the witch of En-dor.<sup>83</sup> He was a giant of extraordinary size. A wall measuring six ells in thickness could be moved more easily than one of Abner's feet.<sup>84</sup> David once chanced to get between the feet of Abner as he lay asleep, and he was almost crushed to death, when fortunately Abner moved them, and David made his escape.<sup>85</sup> Conscious of his vast strength he once cried out: "If only I could seize the earth at some point, I should be able to shake it." Even in the hour of death, wounded mortally by Joab, he grasped his murderer like a worsted ball. He was about to kill him, but the people crowded round them, and said to Abner: "If thou killest Joab, we shall be orphaned, and our wives and children will be a prey to the Philistines." Abner replied: "What can I do? He was about to extinguish my light." The people consoled him: "Commit thy cause to the true Judge." Abner thereupon loosed his hold upon Joab, who remained unharmed, while Abner fell dead instantly. God had decided against him.<sup>86</sup> The reason was that Joab was in a measure justified in seeking to avenge the death of his brother Asahel. Asahel, the supernaturally swift runner,<sup>87</sup>—so swift that he ran through a field without snapping the ears of wheat<sup>88</sup>—had been the attacking party. He had sought to take Abner's life, and Abner contended, that in killing Asahel he had but acted in self-defense. Before inflicting the fatal wound, Joab held a formal court of justice over Abner. He asked: "Why didst thou not render Asahel harmless by wounding him rather than kill him?" Abner replied that he could not have done it. "What," said Joab, incredulous, "if thou wast able to strike him under the fifth rib, dost thou mean to say thou couldst not have made him innocuous by a wound, and saved him alive?"<sup>89</sup>

Although Abner was a saint,<sup>90</sup> even a "lion in the law,"<sup>91</sup> he perpetrated many a deed that made his violent death appear just. It was in his favor that he had refused to obey Saul's command to do away with the priests at Nob.<sup>92</sup> Yet a man of his stamp should not have rested content with passive resistance. He should have interposed actively, and kept Saul from executing his bloody design. And granted that Abner could not have influenced the king's mind in this matter,<sup>93</sup> at all events he is censurable for having frustrated a reconciliation between Saul and David. When David, holding in his hand the corner of the king's mantle which he had cut off, sought to convince Saul of his innocence, it was Abner who turned the king against the suppliant fugitive. "Concern not thyself about it," he said to Saul. "David found the rag on a thorn-bush in which thou didst catch the skirt of thy mantle as thou didst pass it."<sup>94</sup> On the other hand, no blame attaches to Abner for having espoused the cause of Saul's son against David for two years and a half. He knew that God had designated David for the royal office, but, according to an old tradition, God had promised two kings to the tribe of Benjamin, and Abner considered it his duty to transmit his father's honor to the son of Saul the Benjamite.<sup>95</sup>

Another figure of importance during Saul's reign, but a man of radically different character, was Doeg. Doeg, the friend of Saul from the days of his youth,<sup>96</sup> died when he was thirty-four years old,<sup>97</sup> yet at that early age he had been president of the Sanhedrin and the greatest scholar of his time. He was called Edomi, which means, not Edomite, but "he who causes the blush of shame", because by his keen mind and his learning he put to shame all who entered into argument with him.<sup>98</sup> But his scholarship lay only on his lips, his heart was not concerned in it, and his one aim was to elicit admiration.<sup>99</sup> Small wonder, then, that his end was disastrous.

At the time of his death he had sunk so low that he forfeited all share in the life to come.<sup>100</sup> Wounded vanity caused his hostility to David, who had got the better of him in a learned discussion.<sup>101</sup> From that moment he bent all his energies to the task of ruining David. He tried to poison Saul's mind against David, by praising the latter inordinately, and so arousing Saul's jealousy.<sup>102</sup> Again, he would harp on David's Moabite descent, and maintain that on account of it he could not be admitted into the congregation of Israel. Samuel and other prominent men had to bring to bear all the weight of their authority to shield David against the consequences of Doeg's sophistry.<sup>103</sup>

Doeg's most grievous transgression, however, was his informing against the priests at Nob, whom he accused of high treason and executed as traitors. For all his iniquitous deeds he pressed the law into his service, and derived justification of his conduct from it. Abimelech, the high priest at Nob, admitted that he had consulted the Urim and Thummim for David. This served Doeg as the basis for the charge of treason, and he stated it as an unalterable Halakah that the Urim and Thummim may be consulted only for a king. In vain Abner and Amasa and all the other members of the Sanhedrin demonstrated that the Urim and Thummim may be consulted for any one whose undertaking concerns the general welfare. Doeg would not yield, and as no one could be found to execute the judgment, he himself officiated as hangman.<sup>104</sup> When the motive of revenge actuated him, he held cheap alike the life and the honor of his fellow-man. He succeeded in convincing Saul that David's marriage with the king's daughter Michal had lost its validity from the moment David was declared a rebel. As such, he said, David was as good as dead, since a rebel was outlawed. Hence his wife was no longer bound to him.<sup>105</sup> Doeg's punishment accorded with his misdeeds. He who had made impious use of his knowledge of the law, completely forgot the law, and even his disciples rose up against him, and drove him from the house of study. In the end he died a leper.

Dreadful as this death was, it was not accounted an atonement for his sins. One angel burned his soul, and another scattered his ashes in all the houses of study and prayer.<sup>106</sup> The son of Doeg was Saul's armor-bearer, who was killed by David for daring to slay the king even though he longed for death.<sup>107</sup>

Along with Abner and Doeg, Jonathan distinguished himself in the reign of his father. His military capacity was joined to deep scholarship. To the latter he owed his position as Ab Bet Din.<sup>108</sup> Nevertheless he was one of the most modest men known in history.<sup>109</sup> Abinadab was another one of Saul's sons who was worthy of his father, wherefore he was sometimes called Ishvi.<sup>110</sup> As for Saul's grandson Mephibosheth, he, too, was reputed a great man. David himself did not scorn to sit at his feet, and he revered Mephibosheth as his teacher.<sup>111</sup> The wrong done him by David in granting one-half his possessions to Ziba, the slave of Mephibosheth, did not go unavenged. When David ordered the division of the estate of Mephibosheth, a voice from heaven prophesied: "Jeroboam and Rehoboam shall divide the kingdom between themselves."<sup>112</sup> 83. PRE 33. Comp. note 74.

84. Koheleth 9.11.

85. 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 24b; Yalkut II, 285, on Jer. 9.22, which reads: The entire camp of Israel found place between Abner's knees. Compare with p. 919.

86. Yalkut II, 285, on Jer. 9.22. The text is not quite certain. The first edition reads: תפש בן אבנר, which, of course, must be emended to תפ' בו אבנר, whereas the later editions have תפ' אבנר. According to the second reading, it is Joab who laid hold of Abner, and the words שכבה את נר' were spoken by the former, who thus describes the killing of his brother by Abner as "extinguishing my light". Abner's words, "If I could, etc.", remind one of the famous saying of Archimedes: "Give me a place to stand and I will move the earth (δός μοι ποῦ στῶ καὶ κινῶ τὴν γῆν)."

87. PRK (Grünhut's edition, 72); PRE 53. Compare with pp. 58–59, and the note appertaining thereto. The loss caused to David by the death of Ashael was equal to that caused by the death of the nineteen men who were killed by Abner at the same time with him; Sifre D., 52; Midrash Tannaim 55.

88. Koheleth R. 9.11; Yalkut II, 285, on Jer. 9.22. For a similar remark concerning the swift runner Naphthali, see text on p. 386.

89. Sanhedrin 49a. Compare with p. 945.

90. BR 82.4; Yerushalmi Sotah 1, 17b.

91. Yerushalmi Peah 1, 16a; PK 4, 31b; Tehillim 7, 67; Tan. B. IV, 106; Tan. Hukkat 4; BaR 19.2; WR 26.2. In all these sources Abner and Amasa are described as "the two lions in the Torah" during the reign of Saul. Compare with p. 946. The name Abner signifies "father of light", and Saul's cousin bore this name on account of his having been the head (father) of the Synedrium, which illuminates the world by its wisdom; Rimze Hafiarot, Mahar Hodesh; comp. Baba Batra 4a.

92. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a, which reads: Abner and Amasa declared to Saal that they would rather resign the high position held by them than accede to the king's demand. The fate that overtook the priests of Nob was, however, well merited by them. These priests were polluting the holy things of the Lord, and making the first-fruits a reproach. God was wroth, and said: "Behold, I will wipe out the priests who dwell in Nob, because they walk in the ways of the sons of Eli." Ps.-Philo, 58; 63.1. Comp. note 78.

93. Sanhedrin 20a, which cites also the different view to the effect that Abner tried in vain to restrain Saul from his bloody act. See also Yerushalmi Sotah 1, 17b and the references cited in the following note.

94. Yerushalmi Peah 1, 16a, and Sotah 1, 17b; PK 4, 32b–33a; WR 26.2; Tan. B. IV, 107–108 and 168; Tan. Hukkat 4 and Mass'e 12; BaR 19.2 and 23.13. These sources cite four different opinions on the nature of the sin for which Abner paid with his life: 1) He did not try to restrain Saul from slaying the priests of Nob; 2) he prevented a reconciliation between Saul and David; 3) he was guilty of lése-majesté in using the words "from Abner to David" in writing to the latter (2 Sam. 3.12), instead of "to David from Abner"; 4) he thought little of human life, and for his amusement he arranged a tournament resulting in the death of many men; see 1 Sam. 2.14, seq. Comp. also Sanhedrin 20a.

95. BR 82.4; Tan. B. I, 177; comp. vol. I, p. 144.

96. Ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 8.38, quotes the Hebrew tradition that Doeg accompanied Saul when he went to seek the asses. Septuagint, 1 Sam. 21.8 reads הארמי "Aramean", instead of האדמי "Edomite". It is worth noticing that according to the view of the Rabbis (Tehillim 52, 284), Doeg was not at all of foreign extraction (indeed he belonged to the tribe of Judah like David), but he was blood-thirsty by nature, and hence his epithet אדמי "the bloody one". According to others, he acted like an Edomite; the Edomites were revengeful, so was he. A third view is that he hailed from the country south of Nob, and that part of the Holy Land was called Idumea. Ps.-Philo, 58; 63.1, and Josephus, Antiqui., 6.12, 1, follow Septuagint, and speak of "Doeg the Syrian". Comp. note 98.

97. Sanhedrin 69b and 106b. In the last passage Ahitophel is said to have died at the same age as Doeg. Comp. note 100.

98. Tehillim 52, 184–185 and 284 (in 284 many explanations of the epithet האדמי are given, see note 96); Tan. B. V, 29; Tan. Shofetim 1; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a; Babli 106b. The "Hebrew tradition" in ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 8.38, to the effect that Azrikam the first-born of Azael (this is in agreement with Septuagint and Peshitta which read בכרו instead of בכרו) is identical with Doeg, presupposes a haggadic explanation of Edomi, as this Azrikam is described as a descendant of the Benjamite Saul; Comp. note 96. On the names given in 1 Chron., loc. cit., see Pesahim 62b.

99. Sanhedrin 106b; Hagigah 15b; BaR 18.17. Ahitophel shared this moral weakness as well as Doeg.

100. Sanhedrin, Mishnah 10.1; Tan. B. III, 43 and 45; Tan. Mezora' 1 and 2; ARN 40, 133, and 36, 108. The rule laid down in these sources is that all Israelites have a share in the world to come, with the exception of the three kings Jeroboam, Ahab, and Manasseh, as well as the four "private men" Balaam, Doeg, Ahitophel, and Gehazi. See also Tosefta Sanhedrin 12.11, where Ahaz is counted among the hopeless sinners; Babli 101a–107b; Yerushalmi 10, 28b–29b; ARN 36, 108, which reads: Absalom and all the wicked kings of Israel (but not those of Judah) have no share in the world to come; but 41, 133 has: Five kings have no share in the world to come (these are: Jeroboam, Ahab, Manasseh, Ahaz, and Ahaziah; comp. Sanhedrin 103b); ER 3, 16. The view of the allegorists (רשומות) is quoted, according to which all the abominable sinners enumerated above have their share in the world to come; comp. Sanhedrin 104b–105a; Yerushalmi 10, 29b (end of section). Comp. also Yelammedenu in 'Aruk, s. v. גלעד=MHG I, 479, and footnote 93 on p. 976. As to the popular, but untenable, hypothesis that the "four private men" mentioned above stand for Jesus and some of his apostles, see footnote 722 on p. 760.

101. Zebahim 54b. This learned discussion, in which Samuel, David, and Doeg partook (see Targum 1 Sam. 19.19, 23, and 20.1), was about the explanation of Deut. 12.14. David carried his point that "the place which the Lord will choose", spoken of in the Torah, refers to Jerusalem.

102. Sanhedrin 83b; Ruth R. 2.1; Shemuel 19, 104; BaR 13.10. These sources dwell upon the cunning of Doeg, who knew how to arouse Saul's jealousy by pointing out to him that neither the king himself nor his son Jonathan, though they are great masters of the Torah, succeeds as often as David in "rendering decisions according to the law". The young man mentioned in 1 Sam. 16.18 is none other than Doeg, who praised David before Saul to arouse the latter's jealousy. David surpassed Saul not only in knowledge, but also in his great success as a teacher, 'Erubin 53a (end). He was so marvellous, that when his pupils looked at his face their memory became unfailing; WR 20.1; Koheleth 9.2. Comp. 'Erubin 13b; vol. VI, 170–171.

103. Yebamot 76b. Compare text on p. 598; footnote 53 on p. 862, and Index, s. v. "Moabites."

104. Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 131, on 1 Sam. 22; Tehillim 52, 284. Comp. also Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a (on the text of Yerushalmi, see Batte Midrashot I, 34–35). The death of the priests of Nob was the last act in the execution of the divine decree against the house of Eli; Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 12.6. Comp. note 78 and note 92. Abiathar, the only priest of Nob who escaped the massacre, is described in 1 Kings 2.26 as "a priest of Anathoth", which means "a priest of poverty". He who, during David's life-time, lived in affluence and wealth, was reduced by Solomon to poverty. Zohar I, 63b.

105. BR 32.1 and 38.1; Tehillim 52, 284. Comp. note 80.

106. Sanhedrin 106b; Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 131, on 1 Sam. 22. Comp. also ps.-Philo, 58–59; 63.4, which reads: And as to Doeg the Syrian (comp. note 96), thus said the Lord: "Behold, the day shall come quickly when the worm shall come upon his tongue, and shall cause him to pine away, and his dwelling shall be with Jair (see text on pp. 872–873) forever in the fire that shall not be quenched. According to the Rabbis, Doeg and Ahitophel will not be resurrected, nor will they (on the great judgment) be given over to punishment (BR 32.1 and 38.1; ER 18, 107; comp. references in note 100), and the burning of the soul amounts to the same thing. Ps.-Philo decrees eternal punishment for Doeg in fire, i. e., Gehenna. On being eaten alive by worms, see footnote 552 on p. 716. It is the punishment for blasphemers and slanderers. The Haggadah links Doeg and Ahitophel together, because of the similarity of their sins: both were "men of evil tongues". See BR, loc. cit.; Tan. B. I, 51–52, and III, 43; Tan. Noah 17 and Mezora' 1.

107. Tan. B. V, 44; Tan. Ki-Teze 11; PK 2, 28b–29a; PR 12, 51a; ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 1.2. Our texts of the Pesik-tas read as though it were Doeg himself and not his son who was Saul's armor-bearer slain by David. But see Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 39. R. Solomon b. ha-Yatom, in his commentary on Mo'ed Katan 9b, quotes a Midrash to the effect that Saul split Doeg like a fish (a haggadic play on the word דוּיג in 1 Sam. 22.18; see Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a, where נִתְפַּשְׁתָּה כְּדִיג is to be read in the text, with Batte Midrashot I, 35), which would support the view that Doeg was Saul's armor-bearer slain by David. It seems certain that in Ben ha-Yatom שְׂאוֹל is a scribal error for דוּד. Ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 9.44, mentions the Hebrew tradition that Doeg was Saul's armor-bearer; but in the last battle in which the king fell it was Doeg's son who acted as his armor-bearer. On the death of the latter at the hands of David, see also text on p. 582. According to Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 130, on 1 Sam. 21, David came to the high priest Ahimelech on a Sabbath, just when he found the priests occupied with the baking of the shew-bread. Astounded at their desecration of the Sabbath, he was told by them that they were acting in accordance with the instructions given them by Doeg, who taught them that the baking of the shew-bread, being a Temple ceremony, superseded the Sabbath. David, however, called their attention to the grave error of Doeg, who confused the arranging of the shew-bread, which must take place on the Sabbath, with the baking thereof, which ought to be done on the previous day. Comp., however, Menahot 95b–96a, where an opinion is quoted that the error of the priests of Nob consisted in baking the shew-bread on Friday; whereupon David pointed out to them that it must be done on the Sabbath. In this passage it is also said that David and his men were at the point of starvation, and therefore partook of the holy bread, as there is no ceremonial law which one is bound to observe at the risk of death. They received the holy bread which had been removed from the table of the sanctuary to be distributed among the priests; but David pointed out to the priests that whenever it is necessary to preserve life, it is permitted to take the shew-bread from the holy table. The statement of ps.-Jerome, 1 Sam. 21.6, that, according to Jewish tradition, David did not partake of the holy bread, is very strange, for the explicit words of the Talmud and Yelammedenu, loc. cit., are to the contrary. The view of Matth. 12.3–4 is shared by the Rabbis and not, as ps.-Jerome maintains, opposed by them.

108. Mo'ed Katan 26a. On Jonathan's scholarship, see also note 102.

109. Baba Mezi'a 85a; Yerushalmi Pesahim 6, 33a; comp. on the other hand, Baraita de-Yeshua' 46a which reads: He who regrets having performed a good deed delays the (Messianic) salvation. Such a man was Jonathan, who used to say: "If I had not been kind to David, he would never have had designs on the life of my father."

110. Ps.-Jerome, 1 Sam. 31.6. On Abinadab, see also note 77.

111. Berakot 4a; 'Erubin 53b; compare with pp. 927, 935, 941.

112. Yoma 22b; ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 19.29. Comp. also Yerushalmi Yebamot 2, 4a, where allusion is very likely made to the wrong done by David to Mephibosheth in granting one half of the latter's possessions to Ziba. This wrong was all the more grievous because David granted Ziba one half of Mephibosheth's personal property, besides his real estate. The Temple was destroyed because David gave ear to Ziba's slander against Mephibosheth. See Alphabet of Ben Sira 11b.

XV DAVID

DAVID'S BIRTH AND DESCENT

David, the "elect of God",<sup>1</sup> was descended from a family which itself belonged to the elect of Israel. Those ancestors of his who are enumerated in the Bible by name are all of them men of distinguished excellence. Besides, David was a descendant of Miriam,<sup>2</sup> the sister of Moses, and so the strain of royal aristocracy was reinforced by the priestly aristocracy. Nor was David the first of his family to occupy the throne of a ruler. His great-grandfather Boaz was one and the same person with Ibzan, the judge of Bethlehem.<sup>3</sup> Othniel, too, the first judge in Israel after the death of Joshua, and Caleb,<sup>4</sup> the brother of Othniel, were connected with David's family. As examples of piety and virtue, David had his grandfather and more particularly his father before him. His grandfather's whole life was a continuous service of God,<sup>5</sup> whence his name Obed, "the servant", and his father Jesse was one of the greatest scholars of his time,<sup>6</sup> and one of the four who died wholly untainted by sin.<sup>7</sup> If God had not ordained death for all the descendants of our first parents after their fall, Jesse would have continued to live forever. As it was, he died at the age of four hundred,<sup>8</sup> and then a violent death, by the hand of the Moabite king,<sup>9</sup> in whose care David, trusting in the ties of kinship between the Moabites and the seed of Ruth, left his family when he was fleeing before Saul. Jesse's piety will not go unrewarded. In the Messianic time he will be one of the eight princes to rule over the world.<sup>10</sup>

In spite of his piety, Jesse was not always proof against temptation. One of his slaves caught his fancy, and he would have entered into illicit relations with her, had his wife, Nazbat, the daughter of Adiel, not frustrated the plan. She disguised herself as the slave, and Jesse, deceived by the ruse, met his own wife. The child borne by Nazbat was given out as the son of the freed slave, so that the father might not discover the deception practiced upon him. This child was David.<sup>11</sup>

In a measure David was indebted for his life to Adam. At first only three hours of existence had been allotted to him. When God caused all future generations to pass in review before Adam, he besought God to give David seventy of the thousand years destined for him. A deed of gift, signed by God and the angel Metatron, was drawn up. Seventy years were legally conveyed from Adam to David, and in accordance with Adam's wishes, beauty, dominion, and poetical gift<sup>12</sup> went with them.

1. 2 ARN 43, 121. Compare footnote 35 on p. 255 and p. 256, towards beginning. Besides David, the following are described in Scripture as “the elect of God”: Abraham, Jacob, Israel (the people of), Saul, Levi (the tribe of), Moses, the Messiah, Joshua, Judah, Solomon, and Jerusalem. Just as Moses was “the elect” among the prophets, so was David “the elect” among the kings; Tehillim 1, 3, and parallel passages cited by Buber. These sources point out the great similarity between the life of the great king and that of the great prophet. Footnote 68 on p. 485.

2. Sifre N., 78. On the view that the kings of Judah (including the Messiah) were descendants of Judah, the royal tribe, and Levi, the priestly tribe, see text on p. 469.

3. Baba Batra 91a; Targum Ruth 1.6, 3.7, and 4.21. Compare footnote 31 on p. 862.

4. Sifre N., 78; Sotah 11b; PRE 45. Compare with p. 469.

5. Targum Ruth 4.21. Compare with p. 864.

6. Berakot 58a and Yebamot 76b, which read: Jesse went to the front at the head of an army of sixty myriads, returned from the front with such an army, and delivered his lectures before a similar multitude. See also Makiri on Ps. 118, 214.

7. Shabbat 55b (hence the name Nahash, “serpent”, by which Jesse is known; he died merely because death was decreed for all men in consequence of the serpent’s seduction of Eve); Baba Batra 17a; Targum Is. 14.29; Targum Ruth 4.22; ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 17.25. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 58–59. The four men untainted by sin are, according to Baba Batra, loc. cit.: Benjamin, Amram, Jesse, and Kilab the son of David. Zohar I, 57b, has Levi instead of Kilab. Allusion to the great piety of Jesse is made by ps.-Philo, 57–58; 62.5, who makes David say to Jonathan: “Yet the righteousness of my father shall help me that I fall not into thy father’s hands.” The Hebrew original perhaps, read: וצדקת אבות=וצדקת אבי “and the righteousness of my fathers” (in rabbinic Hebrew the phrase used is זכות אבות), which the translator misread as וצדקת אבי “and the righteousness of my father”. Compare footnote 30 on p. 473 and note 142 on p. 100.

8. BR 96.4. Comp. Lekah, Gen. 46.29.

9. BaR 14.1. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 12.3, on the other hand, maintains that the king of Moab was very kind to David’s parents. Comp. also Zohar III, 190a. The Haggadah attempts to excuse David’s cruelty towards the Moabites (comp. 2 Sam. 2.2) by accusing them of having killed his parents.

10. Sukkah 52b. On “the Messianic princes”, see footnote 142 on p. 99.

11. 11 An unknown Midrash quoted by Makiri, Ps. 118, 214. On the references to this legend by the medieval authors, see Zunz, Synagogale Poesie, 129. Comp. also Kele

Yakar, 1 Sam. 17; Azulai, Midbar Kedemot, s. v. ישי, No. 20; R. Elijah Wilna in his commentary on Yoreh De’ah, 157.24. Comp. note 23. Josephus, Antiqui., XII, 4.6, narrates a similar story about Hyrcanus the son of Joseph the tax collector. As to the names of Nazbat and Adiel (which occur only in Baba Batra 91a), see Güdermann, Religionsgeschichtliche Studien, 49, seq. The reading עדאל and עדה, instead of עדיאל are incorrect; see 1 Chron. 27.25, where a son of Adiel is mentioned as King David’s treasurer.

12. PRE 19; BaR 14.12; Tehillim 92, 409; Midrash in Yalkut I, 41; Aggadat Bereshit (introduction), XXXVIII; Zohar I, 55a–55b, 140a, 248b; II, 235a. In Zohar I, 168a–168b, the legend reads that Abraham presented David with five years, Jacob with twenty-eight, and Joseph with thirty-eight; all of which amount to seventy-one, i. e., David died in his seventy-first year. Comp. also Epstein, Eldad, 67, and Zohar Hadash, Ruth, 98b, beginning עיר קטנה דבר אחר. On the Mohammedan version of this legend, see Grünbaum, Neue Beiträge, 64; text on p. 69 and note 28 appertaining thereto. The Mohammedan writers misunderstood the point made by the legend, and state that Adam donated forty of his years. Of course, the point is that David lived seventy years, corresponding to the number missing in Adam’s life to make up a thousand years = a “day of the Lord”. As to the deeds signed by God and the angels, see also the quotation from Tosafot in manuscript given by Poznanski, Kommentar . . . von Eliezer aus Beau-gency, Einleitung, CX. Here a deed is drawn up on the sixth day of creation between the Most High, called the Almighty God, and the earth, in which the latter takes upon itself the obligation of furnishing every day “one hundred dead men like Adam”. The witnesses are Michael, the prince of wisdom, and Gabriel, the prince of strength. On the daily deaths, see note 123. The legend in Seymour, Tales of Solomon 15–16, applies to Solomon what really belongs to his father David.

ANOINTED KING

Beauty and talent, Adam’s gifts to David, did not shield their possessor against hardship. As the supposed son of a slave, he was banished from association with his brothers, and his days were passed in the desert tending his father’s sheep.<sup>13</sup> It was his shepherd life that prepared him for his later exalted position. With gentle consideration he led the flocks entrusted to him. The young lambs he guided to pastures of tender grass; the patches of less juicy herbs he reserved for the sheep; and the full-grown sturdy rams were given the tough weeds for food. Then God said: "David knows how to tend sheep, therefore he shall be the shepherd of my flock Israel."<sup>14</sup>

In the solitude of the desert David had opportunities of displaying his extraordinary physical strength. One day he slew four lions and three bears,<sup>15</sup> though he had no weapons. His most serious adventure was with the reëm. David encountered the mammoth beast asleep, and taking it for a mountain, he began to ascend it. Suddenly the reëm awoke, and David found himself high up in the air on its horns. He vowed, if he were rescued, to build a temple to God one hundred ells in height, as high as the horns of the reëm. Thereupon God sent a lion. The king of beasts<sup>16</sup> inspired even the reëm with awe. The reëm prostrated himself, and David could easily descend from his perch. At that moment a deer appeared. The lion pursued after him, and David was saved from the lion as well as the reëm.<sup>17</sup>

He continued to lead the life of a shepherd until, at the age of twenty-eight,<sup>18</sup> he was anointed king by Samuel, who was taught by a special revelation that the despised youngest son of Jesse was to be king. Samuel's first charge had been to anoint one of the sons of Jesse, but he was not told which one. When he saw the oldest, Eliab, he thought him the king of God's choice. God had allowed him to be deceived, in order to punish Samuel for his excessive self-consciousness in calling himself the seer. It was thus proved to him that he could not foresee all things.<sup>19</sup> However, Samuel's error was pardonable. God's first choice had rested upon Eliab. Only on account of his violent nature, his swiftness to anger against David, the position destined for him was transferred to his youngest brother.<sup>20</sup> Eliab was in a sense compensated by seeing his daughter become the wife of Rehoboam. Thus he, too, enjoys the distinction of being among the ancestors of the Judaic kings, and Samuel's vision of Eliab as king was not wholly false.<sup>21</sup>

The election of David was obvious from what happened with the holy oil with which he was anointed.<sup>22</sup> When Samuel had tried to pour the oil on David's brothers, it had remained in the horn, but at David's approach it flowed of its own accord, and poured itself out over him. The drops on his garments changed into diamonds and pearls, and after the act of anointing him, the horn was as full as before.

The amazement was great that the son of a slave should be made king. Then the wife of Jesse revealed her secret, and declared herself the mother of David.<sup>23</sup>

The anointing of David was for a time kept a secret, but its effect appeared in the gift of prophecy which manifested itself in David,<sup>24</sup> and in his extraordinary spiritual development. His new accomplishments naturally earned envy for him. None was more bitterly jealous than Doeg, the greatest scholar of his time. When he heard that Saul was about to have David come to court as his attendant, Doeg began to praise David excessively, with the purpose of arousing the king's jealousy and making David hateful in his eyes. He succeeded,<sup>25</sup> yet Saul did not relinquish his plan of having David at court. David had become known to Saul in his youth, and at that time the king had conceived great admiration for him. The occasion was one on which David had shown cleverness as well as love of justice. A rich woman had had to leave her home temporarily. She could not carry her fortune with her, nor did she wish to entrust it to any one. She adopted the device of hiding her gold in honey jars, and these she deposited with a neighbor. Accidentally he discovered what was in the jars, and he abstracted the gold. On her return the woman received her vessels, but the gold concealed in them was gone. She had no evidence to bring up against her faithless neighbor, and the court dismissed her complaint. She appealed to the king, but he was equally powerless to help. When the woman came out of the palace of the king, David was playing with his companions. Seeing her dejection, he demanded an audience of the king, that truth might prevail. The king authorized him to do as he saw fit. David ordered the honey jars to be broken, and two coins were found to adhere to the inner side of the vessels. The thief had overlooked them, and they proved his dishonesty.<sup>26</sup>

---

13. Makiri, Ps. 118, 214. Verses 22–24 of this psalm are put by this Midrash into the mouth of David's mother and brothers. This is a very old Haggadah; comp. Pesahim 119a and Shemuel 19, 104, where it is said that verses 21–27 were uttered on the occasion when David was anointed by Samuel. David said: "I will give thanks . . . for Thou hast afflicted me (עֲנִיתָנִי from עָנָה "afflicted"), but now Thou art become my salvation." Jesse said: "The stone which the builders, etc." David's brothers said: "This is the Lord's doing, etc." Samuel said: "This is the day, etc." David's brothers said once more: "O Lord, save now." David joined in their singing: "O Lord, make us prosper", and Jesse continued their prayer with the verse: "Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Whereupon Samuel responded: "We bless you out of the house of the Lord." Then they all exclaimed: "The Lord is good, and hath given us light." Ps.-Philo 56.59.4 also gives a psalm by David composed on the occasion of his anointment, in which the new king contrasts his good fortune with the sad fate of Abel who was slain by his brother out of envy. "But it is not so with me", David is alleged to have said, "for God hath kept me, and hath delivered me unto His angels and His guardians to watch over me. For my brothers envied me, and my father and my mother made me of no account." David's ruddy complexion (comp. 1 Sam. 16.12; according to Septuagint, this verse speaks of the reddish color of David's hair. See also Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 8.1) was due to Jesse's great passion at the time of begetting his youngest son. And this unusual color nearly caused the death of David and his mother, as his brothers suspected her of adultery. Jesse, however, restrained them from carrying out their evil designs, and they yielded to his wish on the condition that David should be considered as a slave, and thus for twenty-eight years he was shepherd of his father's flock. See Makiri, loc. cit. where בָּנִים is to be read for בָּנִים; David's age at the time of his anointment is said to have been twenty-eight years; comp. Seder 'Olam 13; note 18. The older sources maintain that David's ruddy complexion indicated that he was destined to shed blood, and accordingly Samuel was terrified when he beheld the "red David", whom he thought a second Esau. God, however, informed him that David would shed much blood, but only of those who by their iniquity have forfeited their lives. One could see at David's birth that he was destined for great things, as he was born with the sign of the Abrahamic covenant on him; Sotah 10b; Tehillim 9, 58; footnote 318 on p. 248.

14. Tehillim 78, 357; ShR 2.2. Comp. Grünbaum, Neue Beiträge 193–194, and text on p. 500.

15. Shemuel 20, 107; Baraita of 32 Middot 3. Of the fleece of the sheep saved from the claws of the wild beasts David made himself a garment, that he should always remember the miracle wrought for him; see quotation from an unknown Midrash by R. Elijah Wilna in Toledot Adam I, 59. According to ps.-Philo, 56; 59.5, a lion came out of the wood and a she-bear (the female of this species is considered more ferocious than the male, comp. BR 87, beginning) came from the mountain, and took the bulls of David (did this author read שָׂר instead of שֶׁה in 1 Sam. 17.34?). Whereupon David said: "Lo, this shall be a sign unto me for a mighty beginning of my victory in the battle"; and he went after the wild beasts with stones, and slew them. God then said unto him: "Lo, by stones have I delivered unto thee these beasts . . . and this shall be a sign unto thee that hereafter thou shalt slay with stones the adversary of My people." Comp. also Mekilta Amalek 2, 56a, where, with reference to David's slaying of the wild beasts, it is said "that a sign was given unto him of which he took notice." David was of such unusual strength that he could bend a "bow of brass"; Tehillim 18, 155. The first battle in which David engaged took place shortly after the encounter with the wild beasts, while he was still feeding his sheep, when the Midianites came and would have taken his sheep; but he fought against them, and slew of them fifteen thousand men; ps.-Philo 56; 61.1.

16. This designation of the lion is very frequent in Jewish literature; comp., e. g. Hagigah 13b.

17. Tehillim 22, 195; 91, 395; 92, 408. Compare with p. 1103.

18. Seder 'Olam 12 (on the variant "twenty-nine", see Ratner, ad loc.); Makiri, Ps. 118, 24. Comp. note 13.

19. Sifre D., 17; Midrash Tannaim 10; Tan. Wayera 6; Shemuel 14, 88. Compare footnote 322 on p. 640. See also ps.-Philo 56; 59.2, which reads: And the Lord said unto him: "Where is thy vision which thy heart hath seen? Art not thou he that saidst: I am that seeth? And how knowest thou not him whom thou must anoint? And now let this rebuke suffice thee, and seek out the shepherd, the least of them all, and anoint him.” Samuel, though sure of God’s help, kept his journey to Beth-lehem a secret (1 Sam. 16.2, seq.), and did not betray to any outsider the purpose of his visit. This teaches us that one must not expose himself to danger (as far as it can be avoided) even while carrying out God’s command. See Pesahim 8b; Yoma 11a; Yebamot 65b (here it is said: For the sake of peace Samuel told an untruth); Zohar I, 209a; Maimonides, Shemonah Perakim, 8. Comp. also MHG I, 519, and Yalkut II, 123. In the last source the statement about the importance of peace, the same almost verbatim as MHG, is quoted from Yerushalmi Yoma, but our texts do not have it. On Samuel’s self-consciousness, see footnote 43 on p. 895.

20. Pesahim 66b; Shemuel 14, 88. The Haggadah finds that Eliab’s violent character is indicated in 1 Sam. 17.28.

21. Yalkut II, 124, where in Tan. is erroneously given as source instead of Yelammedenu; see Yalkut II, 750, on Ps. 45.8.

22. On the “holy oil” (Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 8.1), see Shemuel 19, 102, and text on p. 657. In anointing David Samuel used a “horn” filled with oil, but in anointing Saul he took a cruse: the horn was the symbol of David’s everlasting kingdom, whereas the cruse represented Saul’s temporary rule. Compare with p. 1037. See Megillah 14a, and also Hippolytus, 5.4 (end).

23. Makiri on Ps. 118, 214; Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 124 (comp. note 21), and 750, on Ps. 45.8; Ephraem, 1 Sam. 16.13. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 28. As to the secret of David’s mother, see text p. 911 and note 11. While still a youth, David began to prophesy that he would slay Goliath the Philistine and erect the house of God. His father thought him weak-minded, and therefore made him keep the sheep, the only occupation for which he considered him fit. When Samuel arrived at Jesse’s house, he, too, was struck by David’s insignificant looks, and hardly took notice of him. But God said to Samuel: “Arise; My anointed one stands, and thou sittest.” It is with reference to the low esteem in which he had been held that David praised God with the words: “The stone which the builders rejected is become the chief corner-stone” (Ps. 118.22); see Midrash Tannaim 10, and comp. references cited in note 13. David was not the youngest son of Jesse, as one might be inclined to infer from Scripture (1 Sam. 16.11), but “the least esteemed of his sons”. Comp. note 88, end. Jesse’s youngest son was Elihu; see Midrash Tannaim l. c. and comp. 1 Chron. 27.18.

24. Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 8.2, and comp. the quotations from ps.-Philo in note 13. Although the Psalms, the book of David, does not form part of the prophetic section of the Bible, he was nevertheless a prophet, see Seder ‘Olam 20; Mekilta Bo (פתיחתא) 2a. According to Sotah 48, Yerushalmi 9, 24b, the term “the first prophets” refers to Samuel and David. Some, however, maintain that by this term Gad and Nathan are meant, while others think that it stands for Jeremiah and Baruch. Compare footnote 358 on p. 652.

25. Sanhedrin 93b. Compare footnote 102 on p. 906.

26. BHM IV, 150–151; Ma’aseh-buch, No. 199, 67d. In many sources the hero of this legend is Solomon. Comp. Gaster, Exempla, No. 403; Seymour Tales of Sol. 17 and 33; footnote 27 on p. 950.

ENCOUNTER WITH GOLIATH

David was not long permitted to enjoy the ease of life at court. The aggressive manner assumed by Goliath drove him to the front. It was a curious chance that designated David to be the slayer of Goliath, who was allied with him by the ties of blood. Goliath, it will be remembered, was the son of the Moabite Orpah,<sup>27</sup> the sister-in-law of David’s ancestress Ruth, and her sister as well, both having been the daughters of the Moabite king Eglon.<sup>28</sup> David and Goliath differed as widely as their grandams, for in contrast to Ruth, the pious, religious Jewess, Orpah had led a life of unspeakable infamy. Her son Goliath was jeered at as “the son of a hundred fathers and one mother”.<sup>29</sup> But God lets naught go unrewarded, even in the wicked. In return for the forty steps Orpah had accompanied her mother-in-law Naomi,<sup>30</sup> Goliath the Philistine, her son, was permitted to display his strength and skill for forty days, and in return for the four tears Orpah had shed on parting from her mother-in-law, she was privileged to give birth to four giant sons.<sup>31</sup>

Of the four, Goliath was the strongest and greatest. What the Scriptures tell about him is but a small fraction of what might have been told. The Scriptures refrain intentionally from expatiating upon the prowess of the miscreant.

Nor do they tell how Goliath, impious as he was, dared challenge the God of Israel to combat with him, and how he tried by every means in his power to hinder the Israelites in their Divine worship. Morning and evening he would appear in the camp at the very time when the Israelites were preparing to say the Shema'.<sup>32</sup>

All the more cause, then, for David to hate Goliath and determine to annihilate him. His father encouraged him to oppose Goliath, for he considered it David's duty to protect Saul the Benjamite against the giant, as Judah, his ancestor, had in ancient days pledged himself for the safety of Benjamin, the ancestor of Saul.<sup>33</sup> For Goliath was intent upon doing away with Saul. His grievance against him was that once, when, in a skirmish between the Philistines and the Israelites, Goliath had succeeded in capturing the holy tables of the law, Saul had wrested them from the giant.<sup>34</sup> In consequence of his malady, Saul could not venture to cross swords with Goliath, and he accepted David's offer to enter into combat in his place. David put on Saul's armor, and when it appeared that the armor of the powerfully-built king fitted the erstwhile slender youth, Saul recognized that David had been predestined for the serious task he was about to undertake, but at the same time David's miraculous transformation did not fail to arouse his jealousy.<sup>35</sup> David, for this reason, declined to array himself as a warrior for his contest with Goliath. He wanted to meet him as a simple shepherd. Five pebbles came to David of their own accord,<sup>36</sup> and when he touched them, they all turned into one pebble.<sup>37</sup> The five pebbles stood for God, the three Patriarchs, and Aaron. Hophni and Phinehas, the descendants of the last, had only a short time before been killed by Goliath.<sup>38</sup>

Scarcely did David begin to move toward Goliath, when the giant became conscious of the magic power of the youth. The evil eye David cast on his opponent sufficed to afflict him with leprosy,<sup>39</sup> and in the very same instant he was rooted to the ground, unable to move.<sup>40</sup> Goliath was so confused by his impotence that he scarcely knew what he was saying, and he uttered the foolish threat that he would give David's flesh to the cattle of the field, as though cattle ate flesh. One can see, David said to himself, that he is crazy, and there can be no doubt he is doomed.<sup>41</sup> Sure of victory, David retorted that he would cast the carcass of the Philistine to the fowls of the air. At the mention of fowls, Goliath raised his eyes skyward, to see whether there were any birds about. The upward motion of his head pushed his visor slightly away from his forehead, and in that instant the pebble aimed by David struck him on the exposed spot.<sup>42</sup> An angel descended and cast him to the ground face downward, so that the mouth that had blasphemed God might be choked with earth. He fell in such wise that the image of Dagon which he wore on his breast touched the ground, and his head came to lie between the feet of David, who now had no difficulty in dispatching him.<sup>43</sup>

Goliath was encased, from top to toe, in several suits of armor, and David did not know how to remove them and cut off the head of the giant. At this juncture Uriah the Hittite offered him his services, but under the condition that David secure him an Israelitish wife. David accepted the condition, and Uriah in turn showed him how the various suits of armor were fastened together at the heels of the giant's feet.

David's victory naturally added fuel to the fire of Saul's jealousy. Saul sent Abner, his general, to make inquiry whether David, who, he knew, was of the tribe of Judah, belonged to the clan of the Perez or to the clan of the Zerah. In the former case his suspicion that David was destined for kingship would be confirmed. Doeg, David's enemy from of old, observed that David, being the descendant of the Moabitess Ruth, did not even belong to the Jewish communion, and Saul need entertain no fears from that quarter. A lively discussion arose between Abner and Doeg, as to whether the law in Deuteronomy regarding Moabites affected women as well as men. Doeg, an expert dialectician, brilliantly refuted all of Abner's arguments in favor of the admission of Moabitish women. Samuel's authority had to be appealed to in order to establish for all times the correctness of Abner's view.<sup>44</sup> Indeed, the dispute could be settled only by recourse to threats of violence. Ithra, the father of Amasa, in Arab fashion, for which reason he was sometimes called the Ishmaelite, threatened to hew down any one with his sword who refused to accept Samuel's interpretation of the law, that male Moabites and male Ammonites are forever excluded from the congregation of Israel, but not Moabite and Ammonite women.<sup>45</sup>

27. Sotah 42b (here several etymologies of the names ערפָּה Orpah, Naomi's daughter-in-law, and הרפָּה 2 Sam. 21.16, are given, to show their identity); Tan. B. I, 208; Ruth R. 1.14; Ruth Z., 49; Shemuel 20, 106–108; ps.-Philo, 57; 61.6. In the last source mater tua ("thy mother") very likely means "thy ancestress", since David describes Ruth as "my mother", which, of course, cannot be taken literally. On the meaning of the name Goliath, and his designation as אִישׁ הַבִּינִים, see Sotah, loc. cit., and Targum Ps. 9.1. In the latter source לִבָּן = אִישׁ הַבִּינִים Goliath. On Orpah, Goliath's mother, see text on pp. 862–863 and 934.

28. Ruth R. 1.4; Ps.-Philo, 57; 61.6. Compare with pp. 862–863.

29. Sotah 42b; Ruth R. 1.14; Ruth Z., 49; Vulgate 1 Sam. 17.4. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 30–31. According to Tosefta-Targum Sam., loc. cit., Goliath's father (ancestor?) was Samson, and his mother was Orpah.

30. See, on the other hand, text on pp. 862–863, according to which Orpah accompanied her mother-in-law a long distance.

31. Sotah 42b; Ruth R. 1.14; Shemuel 20, 106–107; Tan. B. I, 208. The forty days are explained by ps.-Philo, 57; 61.2, as corresponding to "the number of days wherein Israel feasted when they received the law in the wilderness."

Goliath said: "For forty days I will reproach them, and after that I will fight with them." Similar is the meaning of the statement in Sotah, loc. cit. כִּנְגַד מ' יוֹם שְׁתַּנְּנָה בָהֶן תּוֹרָה. For other explanations of the forty days, see Shemuel 20, 106.

32. Sotah 42b (Scripture hints at Goliath's extraordinary strength and powers, that we might properly appreciate David's achievement); Shemuel 20, 106; Tosefta-Targum 1 Sam. 17.9–10 and 16. Targum has the morning and evening sacrifice instead of the morning and evening prayer. See also ps.-Philo, 57; 61.2, where Goliath challenged Saul to fight him, and "if not, he will come unto him and cause him to be taken captive, and his people will be forced to serve the gods of the Philistines."

33. Tan. V. I. 207 and 208; Haserot 44. This Haggadah is given as an explanation of Jesse's words, who told David to "take the pledge" of his brothers; comp. 1 Sam. 17.18. According to another view, David was bidden by his father to see to it that his brothers send their wives bills of divorce, so that in case they do not return from the battle, their wives would have no difficulty in remarrying. See Ketubot 9a; Shabbat 56a; ps.-Jerome, 1 Sam., loc. cit. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 31–32, and text on p. 928.

34. Shemuel 11, 78–79; ps.-Philo, 53; 54.3–4, and 56–57; 61.2. Compare with p. 898.

35. Tan. B. III, 84; Tan. Emor 4; Shemuel 21, 108. Saul suspected that David must have been anointed with "holy oil" (see text on p. 913), which had the effect of changing the body of the anointed one; if he was short he became tall; if he was black, he became white, etc; Tanhuma., loc. cit., and Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 750, on Ps. 45.2. It is very likely that Philo was acquainted with the legendary qualities of the holy oil, and in his way attempted to rationalize this legend. Comp. De Nobilitate, 5.

36. Shemuel 21, 108.

37. Zohar III, 272a; compare with p. 277.

38. Shemuel 21, 108, and somewhat differently in the unknown Midrash quoted by Kimhi on 1 Sam. 17.40. According to ps.-Philo, 57; 61.5, David wrote upon seven stones "the names of his fathers Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and Aaron, and his own name, and the name of the Almighty." See also 2 Maccabees 10.29, where the five men are very likely the three patriarchs, and Moses and Aaron. Comp. further Aggadot Bereshit 50.102–103 (only in manuscript not in printed text).

39. WR 21.2; PK 27, 175a; Shemuel 21, 109; Zohar II, 206a–206b. The last-named source gives many details about the power of David's eye. Compare with p. 677.

40. WR 21.2; PK 27, 175a; Shemuel 21, 108. The sources dwell upon the fact that the beauty of David aroused an impure passion in Goliath.

41. Shemuel 21, 109, according to the reading of Kimhi, 1 Sam. 17.44.

42. A Midrash quoted by Kimhi, 1 Sam. 17, 49. According to others, a miracle was performed, and the small pebble pierced the hard metal of which Goliath's visor was fashioned; see Shemuel 21, 109 and Tehillim 78, 350, which read: On five occasions God made the "soft" conquer the "hard": the frogs crawled through the marble buildings of the Egyptians (compare with p. 527); the horns penetrated through the rocks to the hiding-places of the Amorites, and killed them (text on p. 755); the mice sent upon the Philistines gnawed through the metal vessels (text on p. 892); the pebble which David threw at Goliath and the missile which struck Ahab (see text on p. 988) penetrated through the hard metal to the bodies of Goliath and Ahab, respectively. Comp. also Tehillim 105, 452.

43. Tehillim 18, 160, and 144, 533; WR 10.7; Shir 4.4; Shemuel 21, 109. According to ps.-Philo, 57; 61.4–8, it was the angel Ceruihel, the angel appointed over strength (i. e., זרועאל; compare footnote 17 on p. 858), who gave David strength to slay Goliath. While there was still life in him, Goliath said unto David: "Hasten and slay me, and rejoice." But David said: "Before thou diest, open thine eyes and behold the slayer who hath killed thee." And the Philistine looked and saw the angel, and said: "Thou hast not killed me by thyself, but he that was with thee, whose form is not like the form of a man." Ps.-Philo, loc. cit., makes David harangue Goliath as follows: "Were not the two women, of whom thou and I were born, sisters (comp. notes 27, 28)? Thy mother was Orpah, and mine was Ruth. Orpah chose for herself the gods of the Philistines, and went after them, but Ruth chose for herself the ways of the Almighty, and walked in them. And now . . . I that am born of thy kindred am come to avenge my people. For thy three brothers also shall fall into my hands after thy death."

44. The Uriah story is quoted, from an unknown Midrash, by R. Moses Al-Sheikh, on 2 Sam. 13, and by R. Samuel Laniado on 1 Sam. 17.50. Compare with p. 928. The controversy between the scholars of that time concerning David's admission to "the congregation of the Lord" is found in Ruth R. 2.5; Shemuel 22, 109–110, and, in a somewhat different form, in Yebamot 76b and Ephraim, 1 Sam. 17.55. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 32–33. This Haggadah is an attempt to harmonize 1 Sam. 16.18, seq., with 1 Sam. 17.55, seq. Another solution of this difficulty is given by ps.-Philo, 57; 61.89, who remarks: And the angel of the Lord "lifted up the face" of David and no man knew him, and when Saul saw David, he asked him who he was, and there was no man who knew who he was. There can be no doubt that erexit faciem ("lifted up his face") is a mistranslation, and I would suggest that the original Hebrew read שָׁנָא אֶת פָּנָיו = "changed his face", which was misread as נִשָּׂא פָּנָיו "lifted up his face." On the "changing of the face" in ps.-Philo, see the quotation in footnote 75 on p. 900.

45. Yebamot 77a; Yerushalmi 8, 9c; Tehillim 9, 87; Ruth R. 1.21; Targum and ps.-Jerome on 1 Chron. 2.17. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 124, and Index, s. v. "Moabites". With regard to Ithra, another view is given in Tehillim, loc. cit., according to which, he was an Ishmaelite, but became converted to Judaism when he heard Jesse recite the verse: "Look unto Me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth" (Is. 45.22).

PURSUED BY SAUL

As God stood by David in his duel with Goliath, so he stood by him in many other of his difficulties. Often when he thought all hope lost, the arm of God suddenly succored him, and in unexpected ways, not only bringing relief, but also conveying instruction on God's wise and just guidance of the world.

David once said to God: "The world is entirely beautiful and good, with the one exception of insanity. What use does the world derive from a lunatic, who runs hither and thither, tears his clothes, and is pursued by a mob of hooting children?" "Verily, a time will come," said God in reply, "when thou wilt supplicate me to afflict thee with madness." Now, it happened when David, on his flight before Saul, came to Achish, the king of the Philistines, who lived in Gath, that the brothers of Goliath formed the heathen king's bodyguard, and they demanded that their brother's murderer be executed. Achish, though a heathen, was pious, for which reason he is called Abimelech in the Psalms, after the king of Gerar, who also was noted for piety. He therefore sought to pacify David's enemies. He called their attention to the fact that Goliath had been the one to challenge the Jews to combat, and it was meet, therefore, that he should be left to bear the consequences.

The brothers rejoined, if that view prevailed, then Achish would have to give up his throne to David, for, according to the conditions of the combat, the victor was to have dominion over the vanquished as his servants. In his distress, David besought God to let him appear a madman in the eyes of Achish and his court. God granted his prayer. As the wife and daughter of the Philistine king were both bereft of reason, we can understand his exclamation: "Do I lack madmen, that ye have brought this fellow to play the madman in my presence?" Thus it was that David was rescued. Thereupon he composed the Psalm beginning with the words, "I will bless the Lord at all times," which includes even the time of lunacy.<sup>46</sup>

On another occasion David expressed his doubt of God's wisdom in having formed such apparently useless creatures as spiders are. They do nothing but spin a web that has no value. He was to have striking proof that even a spider's web may serve an important purpose. On one occasion he had taken refuge in a cave, and Saul and his attendants, in pursuit of him, were about to enter and seek him there. But God sent a spider to weave its web across the opening, and Saul told his men to desist from fruitless search in the cave, for the spider's web was undeniable proof that no one had passed through its entrance.<sup>47</sup>

Similarly, when David became indebted to one of them for his life, he was cured of his scorn for wasps. He had thought them good for nothing but to breed maggots. David once surprised Saul and his attendants while they were fast asleep in their camp, and he resolved to carry off, as proof of his magnanimity, the cruse that stood between the feet of the giant Abner, who like the rest was sleeping. Fortunately his knees were drawn up, so that David could carry out his intention unhindered. But as David was retiring with the cruse, Abner stretched out his feet, and pinned David down as with two solid pillars. His life would have been forfeit, if a wasp had not stung Abner, who mechanically, in his sleep, moved his feet, and released David.<sup>48</sup>

There were still other miracles that happened to David in his flight. Once, when Saul and his men compassed David round about, an angel appeared and summoned him home, to repulse the raid of the Philistines upon the land. Saul gave up the pursuit of David, but only after a majority had so decided, for some had been of the opinion that the seizure of David was quite as important as the repulse of the Philistines.<sup>49</sup> Again, in his battle with the Amalekites, David enjoyed direct intervention from above. Lightning in flashes and sheets illumined the dark night, so enabling him to carry on the struggle.<sup>50</sup>

46. Tehillim 34, 294; 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 24a–24b: Kimha Dabishuna שבת בראשית.

47. 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 24b; Targum Ps. 57.3. Comp. Grünbaum, Neue Beiträge, 195.

48. 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 24b; compare with p. 905. Abner, however, never believed David that he had been near him while he was asleep, and therefore tried to convince Saul that David found the cruse of water lost by the servant; Yerushalmi Peah 1, as quoted in Aruk, s. v. בר 7, but not in our texts; compare footnote 94 on p. 906.

49. Tehillim 18, 138; 9, 85; comp. also 142, 532, which reads: David was within the cave, and Saul was watching outside at the entrance.

50. WR 21.3; PK 27, 175b; Ekah, introduction, XXX; Tehillim 18, 162.—The legend tells of many things (not mentioned in Scripture) which happened to David during the time he was pursued by Saul. Although his position on the day of his flight was precarious (1 Sam. 21.35, seq.), he nevertheless insisted on saying his morning prayers with the quorum required for the service, and he requested his friend Jonathan to bring eight men (the quorum מנין, consists of ten) to the hiding-place; Rimze Haftarot, Mahar Hodesh. The prolix description of the last meeting between David and Jonathan in ps.-Philo, 57–58; 62.3, seq., hardly contains any other legendary material except the statement that Jonathan knew already then that David was destined to possess "the kingdom in this world". If Jonathan had thought of giving his departing friend a few loaves of bread on his journey, Nob, the city of the priests, would not have been destroyed, Doeg would not have been excluded from the community of the pious, and Saul and his three sons would not have been slain. This teaches us that the refraining from giving a departing guest the necessary provisions for his journey is accounted to one as a deliberate sin, even though it might be due to forgetfulness, as in the case of Jonathan; Sanhedrin 104a. David, who started on his journey without provisions, arrived in Nob almost in a state of collapse, and was forced to partake of the holy bread to save his life. On that occasion he ate bread baked of seven seah of flour; Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 130. Compare footnote 107 on p. 907. From Nob he fled to Adullam, where fourteen hundred scholars joined him; EZ 5, 181. Later he was forced to leave the Holy Land, and this caused him extreme pain, as "he who leaves the Holy Land to settle in another country is considered as though he worshipped idols". It is in this sense that we have to understand David's words: "Cursed be they before the Lord, for they have driven me out this day that I should not cleave unto the inheritance of the Lord, saying: Go, serve other gods" (1 Sam. 26.19). See ARN 26, 85; Ketubot 110b; Tosefta 'Abodah Zarah 4(5).5; Sifra 25.38. David was so much attached to the Holy Land, that he used to say: "I prefer to stand at the threshold of the house of my God and live in the Holy Land, though lacking all necessities of life, even the carob, rather than dwell in any other land in affluence and prosperity." Yelammedenu in 'Aruk, s. v. סַפְּנָיָהּ וְסַטְסִימָה. He showed his devotion to his country when immediately after he married Michal he went to war against the Philistines, who had hoped that he would stay home, availing himself of the privilege granted by the law (Deut. 20.7) to newly-married men. David went still further, and promulgated the law that nobody is exempt from military duty in a defensive war, as the exemptions mentioned in the Torah refer to an offensive war only; Shemuel 22, 110; Sotah, Mishnah 8(end); Babli 44b; Yerushalmi 8, 23a; Tosefta 7 (end). In his zeal to expand the confines of the Holy Land he engaged in offensive wars against Syria before he conquered all that belonged to the Holy Land. This mistaken zeal resulted in the fact that the Syrian provinces conquered by him never received the holy character of Palestine proper; Sifre D., 52; Midrash Tan-naim 44; Yerushalmi Hallah 2, 58b; Tosefta Kelim, Baba Kamma, 1.5.; Gittin 8a; Baba Batra 90b.

WARS

David's first thought after ascending the throne was to wrest Jerusalem, sacred since the days of Adam, Noah, and Abraham, from the grasp of the heathen. The plan was not easy of execution for various reasons. The Jebusites, the possessors of Jerusalem, were the posterity of those sons of Heth who had ceded the Cave of Machpelah to Abraham only on condition that their descendants should never be forcibly dispossessed of their capital city Jerusalem. In perpetuation of this agreement between Abraham and the sons of Heth, monuments of brass were erected, and when David approached Jerusalem with hostile intent, the Jebusites pointed to Abraham's promise engraven upon them and still plainly to be read.<sup>51</sup> They maintained that before David could take the city, which they had surrounded with a high wall, he would have to destroy the monuments. Joab devised a plan of getting into Jerusalem. He set up a tall cypress tree near the wall, bent it downward, and, standing on David's head, he grasped the very tip of the tree. When the tree rebounded, Joab sat high above the wall, and could jump down upon it. Once in the city, he destroyed the monuments, and possessed himself of Jerusalem.<sup>52</sup> For David a miracle had happened; the wall had lowered itself before him so that he could walk into the city without difficulty. David, however, was not desirous of using forcible means. He therefore offered the Jebusites six hundred shekels, fifty shekels for each Israelitish tribe. The Jebusites accepted the money, and gave David a bill of sale.<sup>53</sup>

Jerusalem having been acquired, David had to prepare for war with the Philistines, in which the king gave proof at once of his heroic courage and his unshakable trust in God. The latter quality he displayed signally in the battle that took place in the Valley of the Giants. God had commanded David not to attack the host of the Philistines until he heard "the sound of marching in the tops of the mulberry trees." God desired to pass judgment upon the tutelary angels of the heathen, before surrendering the heathen themselves to the pious,<sup>54</sup> and the motion of the tops of the trees was to indicate that the battle could proceed. The enemy advanced until there were but four ells between them and the Israelites. The latter were about to throw themselves against the Philistines, but David restrained them, saying: "God forbade me to attack the Philistines before the tops of the trees begin to move. If we transgress God's command, we shall certainly die. If we delay, it is probable that we shall be killed by the Philistines, but, at least, we shall die as pious men that keep God's command. Above all, let us have confidence in God." Scarcely had he ended his speech when the tops of the trees rustled, and David made a successful assault upon the Philistines. Whereupon God said to the angels, who were constantly questioning him as to why he had taken the royal dignity from Saul and given it to David: "See the difference between Saul and David."<sup>55</sup>

Of David's other campaigns, the most notable is his war with Shobach the Aramean, whom he conquered in spite of his gigantic size and strength. Shobach was very tall, as tall as a dove-cote, and one look at him sufficed to strike terror to the heart of the beholder.<sup>56</sup> The Aramean general indulged in the belief that David would treat the Syrians gently on account of the monument, still in existence at that time, which Jacob and Laban had erected on the frontier between Palestine and Aram as a sign of their covenant that neither they nor their descendants should wage war with each other. But David destroyed the monument.<sup>57</sup> Similarly, the Philistines had placed trust in a relic from Isaac, the bridle of a mule which the Patriarch had given to Abimelech, the king of the Philistines, as a pledge of the covenant between Israel and his people. David took it from them by force.<sup>58</sup>

However, David was as just as he was bold. Disregard of the covenants made by the Patri-archs was far removed from his thoughts. Indeed, before departing for the wars with the Arameans and the Philistines, he had charged the Sanhedrin to investigate carefully the claims of the two nations. The claims of the Philistines were shown to be utterly unfounded. In no sense were they the descendants of those Philistines who had concluded a treaty with Isaac; they had immigrated from Cyprus at a much later date. The Arameans, on the other hand, had forfeited their claims upon considerate treatment, because under the "Aramean" Balaam, and later again, in the time of Othniel, under their king Cushan-rishathaim, they had attacked and made war upon the Israelites.<sup>59</sup>

---

51. PRE 36. According to another view, the Jebusites were the descendants of Abimelech, king of Gerar, who later settled in Jerusalem, where he built a strong fortress (Zion), which for many centuries had withstood all attacks until David captured it; Yalkut Reubeni 44c, giving ספר הקבלה as his authority; but neither ספר הקבלה of R. Abraham ibn Daud, nor שלשלת הקבלה of Ibn Yahya, has this legend. The Jebusites had, on the top of a high tower, two monuments, one representing a blind man (Isaac), the other a lame man (Jacob). Attached to these monuments was the text of the covenant between Abraham and the Philistine king Abimelech, some of whose descendants inhabited Jerusalem. The Jews respected the covenant as long as some of Abimelech's descendants were still in existence, but in David's time Abimelech's family became extinct, and there was no longer any reason for refraining from driving out the Jebusites from Jerusalem. See Midrash quoted by Rashi and Kimhi, 2 Sam. 5.6, as well as Yalkut Reubeni, loc. cit. According to Targum, ad loc., "the blind and the lame" mentioned in this verse refer to the sinners (i. e., the Jebusites).

52. Tehillim 18, 152; PRE 36; MHG I, 351; compare footnote 268 on p. 235.

53. Tehillim 18, 152; PRE 36; Shemuel 32, 139; Sifre N., 52; Sifre D., 62; Zebahim 116b; BaR 11.7; Baraita of 32 Middot, 15; ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 24.24; Midrash 13 Middot, 70–71. Only the last source has the statement that David himself contributed as much as all the twelve tribes together. The money given to the Jebusites, according to the sources just cited, was for the site of the Temple (comp. 2 Sam., loc. cit., and 1 Chron. 21.25); but PRE, loc.

cit., maintains that it was for the city of Jerusalem. As to the miracle of the wall lowering itself, see also Baba Mezi'a 95b; Yerushalmi Mo'ed Katan 3, 81d; ps.-Matthew 20. According to a Christian legend, the Jebusites, after having been driven out from Palestine by David, settled in Cyprus. Comp. Acts of Barnabas (towards the end); see also footnote 57 on p. 965.

54. Ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 5.24, which very likely follows a Jewish tradition. On the judgment inflicted upon the guardian angels of the nations, see text on p. 557 and note pertaining thereto. According to Rashi, 2 Sam., loc. cit., the motion of the tops of the trees indicated the approach of the angels who came to David's assistance. With regard to the meaning of בְּכָאִים in 2 Sam., loc. cit., and 1 Chron. 14.14, ps.-Jerome, on the latter passage, quotes a Jewish tradition, according to which the Philistines used to bring human sacrifices to their idol (Moloch), and hence בְּכָאִים is the same as בְּכָאִים "the weeping ones", because they wept when they offered up their human sacrifices. Another explanation of בְּכָאִים is given by ps.-Jerome on 2 Sam., loc. cit.: All idols deserve this name, "the weeping", for they are the cause of the tears of their worshippers. Quite similar is the remark of the Rabbis 2 ARN 28, 101, and Tehillim, 96, according to the reading of Makiri on Ps. 96, 112.

55. Tehillim 27, 222–223; PR 8, 30b. On the view that Saul lacked trust in God, see 1 Sam. 14.19.

56. Sotah 42b; Tehillim 3, 38.

57. PRE 36. On the covenant between Jacob and Laban, see Yalkut Reubeni on Deut. 12.2, and the text on p. 293.

58. PRE 36; MHG I, 410.

59. Tehillim 60, 304; Tan. B. V, 2; Yelammedenu in Aruk, s. v. שִׁשִּׁי; Targum Ps. 60. 1; BR 74.15. The last source dwells upon the fact that the Mobites, the Ammonites, and the Edomites, the moment they attacked the Israelites, forfeited the claim they might have had to be treated kindly. See also Jub. 24.28–33; note 77 text on p. 214. David engaged in eighteen campaigns (WR 1.4), and was forced to defend himself against the attacks of ten adversaries: Saul, Doeg, Ahitophel, Sheba, Shimei, Shobach and Goliath and the latter's three brothers (Tehillim 18, 139); yet there was nothing for which he was so grateful to God as for the help granted him against Saul. During his flight from Saul he prayed to God for two things: that he should not be delivered into the hands of his enemy, and that the latter should not be delivered into his hands, so that he should not be led into temptation to slay the anointed of the Lord; Tehillim 6, 69. David used a sword upon which the name of God was engraved. He was therefore accustomed to swear by his sword. He did not, however, use this sword to slay Uriah, but employed for this purpose the sword of the children of Ammon (2 Sam. 12.9), upon which was engraved a serpent, the idol of the Ammonites. David had some excuse for slaying Uriah (see text on p. 928), but not for using this "unclean" sword; Zohar II, 107a–108a. As to the sword used in slaying Uriah, see also text on p. 258; text on p. 796. These passages record similar legends concerning the swords of Esau and Phinehas. In Gaster, Exempla No. 351 reference is made to the sword of David upon which the Name was engraved; see footnote 32 on p. 952.

AHITHOPHEL

Among David's courtiers and attendants, a prominent place is occupied by his counsellor Ahithophel,<sup>60</sup> with whom the king was connected by family ties, Bath-sheba being his granddaughter.<sup>61</sup> Ahithophel's wisdom was supernatural, for his counsels always coincided with the oracles rendered by the Urim and Thummim, and great as was his wisdom, it was equalled by his scholarship. Therefore David did not hesitate to submit himself to his instruction,<sup>62</sup> even though Ahithophel was a very young man, at the time of his death not more than thirty-three years old.<sup>63</sup> The one thing lacking in him was sincere piety,<sup>64</sup> and this it was that proved his undoing in the end, for it induced him to take part in Absalom's rebellion against David. Thus he forfeited even his share in the world to come.<sup>65</sup>

To this dire course of action he was misled by astrologic and other signs, which he interpreted as prophecies of his own kingship, when in reality they pointed to the royal destiny of his granddaughter Bath-sheba.<sup>66</sup> Possessed by his erroneous belief, he cunningly urged Absalom to commit an unheard-of crime. Thus Absalom would profit nothing by his rebellion, for, though he accomplished his father's ruin, he would yet be held to account and condemned to death for his violation of family purity, and the way to the throne would be clear for Ahithophel, the great sage in Israel.<sup>67</sup>

The relation between David and Ahithophel had been somewhat strained even before Absalom's rebellion. Ahithophel's feelings had been hurt by his being passed over at the time when David, shortly after ascending the throne, invested, on a single day, no less than ninety thousand functionaries with positions.

On that day a remarkable incident occurred. When the Ark was to be brought up from Geba to Jerusalem, the priests who attempted to take hold of it were raised up in the air and thrown violently to the ground. In his despair the king turned for advice to Ahithophel, who retorted mockingly: "Ask thy wise men whom thou hast but now installed in office." It was only when David uttered a curse on him who knows a remedy and withholds it from the sufferer, that Ahithophel advised that a sacrifice should be offered at every step taken by the priests. Although the measure proved efficacious, and no further disaster occurred in connection with the Ark, yet Ahithophel's words had been insincere. He knew the real reason of the misadventure, and concealed it from the king. Instead of following the law of having the Ark carried on the shoulders of priests, David had had it put on a wagon, and so incurred the wrath of God.<sup>68</sup>

Ahithophel's hostility toward David showed itself also on the following occasion. When David was digging the foundations of the Temple, a shard was found at a depth of fifteen hundred cubits. David was about to lift it, when the shard exclaimed: "Thou canst not do it." "Why not?" asked David. "Because I rest upon the abyss." "Since when?" "Since the hour in which the voice of God was heard to utter the words from Sinai, 'I am the Lord thy God', causing the earth to quake and sink into the abyss. I lie here to cover up the abyss." Nevertheless David lifted the shard, and the waters of the abyss rose and threatened to flood the earth. Ahithophel was standing by, and he thought to himself: "Now David will meet with his death, and I shall be king." Just then David said: "Whoever knows how to stem the tide of waters, and fails to do it, will one day throttle himself."<sup>69</sup> Thereupon Ahithophel had the Name of God inscribed upon the shard, and the shard thrown into the abyss. The waters at once commenced to subside, but they sank to so great a depth that David feared the earth might lose her moisture, and he began to sing the fifteen "Songs of Ascents", to bring the waters up again.<sup>70</sup>

Nevertheless David's curse was realized. Ahithophel ended his days by hanging himself. His last will contained the following three rules of conduct:<sup>71</sup> 1. Refrain from doing aught against a favorite of fortune. 2. Take heed not to rise up against the royal house of David. 3. If the Feast of Pentecost falls on a sunny day, then sow wheat.<sup>72</sup>

Posterity has been favored with the knowledge of but a small part of Ahithophel's wisdom, and that little through two widely different sources, through Socrates,<sup>73</sup> who was his disciple, and through a fortune-book written by him.<sup>74</sup>

---

60. Berakot 3b, which reads: David did not engage in any war before he took counsel with Ahithophel. Targum Ps. 141.10 describes Ahithophel as the head of the Synedion.

61. Sanhedrin 101b; ps.-Jerome 2 Sam. 11.3. Ahithophel was at first David's best friend; Tehillim 55, 290.

62. Nedarim 37b; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a; Tehillim 3, 38, which reads: His wisdom was superhuman, like that of an angel. Comp. also Tehillim 55, 391, which reads: David feared nobody except Ahithophel, who was his master and teacher in the knowledge of the Torah. According to some, David learned two things only from Ahithophel, to acquire colleagues with whom to study the Torah, and to walk quickly to the house of God for prayer and service; see Abot 6.2; Nispahim 18; Kallah 6, 16; Mahzor Vitry 556; Nehemias, Commentary on Abot, 77; BaR 18.17.

63. Sanhedrin 69b; compare footnote 97 on p. 906.

64. Sanhedrin 106b; Hagigah 15b; Tehillim 55, 292-293, and 119, 495 and 500. Compare with p. 906, where a similar characteristic is attributed to Doeg. Ahitophel used to compose three prayers for each day; Yerushalmi Berakot 4, 8a (bottom), which is a play on the name Ahitophel אֲחִיתּוֹפֶל = אֲחִי תּוֹפֶל “brother of prayer”, i. e. “man of prayers”; comp., however, Ratner, Ahabat Ziyon, ad. loc. It was his pride which brought destruction upon him, as may be seen from his haughty behavior towards David at the removal of the ark (compare with p. 906); ER 31, 157.

65. Sanhedrin Mishnah 10.1. Compare footnote 100 on p. 906.

66. Sanhedrin 101b; an unknown Midrash in Yalkut II, 151 on 2 Sam. 16. Compare footnote 52 on p. 898, and footnote 2 on p. 981.

67. Yalkut II, 151 on 2 Sam. 16. Ahitophel thought that David was fallen from the grace of God for ever since he had committed the sin with Bath-sheba. But he did not know that “no sin can efface the merit acquired by the study of the Torah”, and these merits stood David in good stead in the time of his disgrace; see Sotah 21a; comp. also Baba Mezi’a 59a; PK 2, 10b; Tan. B. II, 106; Tan. Ki-Tissa 4; Tehillim 2, 38, which reads: Doeg and Ahitophel used to remark mockingly: “Is it conceivable that he who took the sheep and slew the shepherd should be able to make good?” On the reading “Doeg” in this passage, see Tosafot שניץ on Sotah, loc. cit.

68. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a; BaR 4.20; ER 31, 157, which reads: The ark was suspended in the air, and Uzzah “put forth his hand” to take hold of it. The sinners in Israel then said: “Were it not for Uzzah, the ark would have dropped down to the ground.” No sooner did they utter these blasphemous words than Uzzah dropped dead. All then became convinced that the ark was able to support itself without human help. According to Sotah 35a, Uzzah eased himself near the ark, and as a punishment was smitten dead, whereas according to Rimze Hafiarot, Shemini, he brought his death upon himself by uncovering the ark. Compare footnotes 37 and 39 on p. 892. As to the grave error committed by David in putting the ark on a wagon, see Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 4.2; Aphraates, 363; Ephraem, 2 Sam. 6.7; see text on pp. 665 and 786; Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 47–48. On the number of functionaries appointed by David, see text on p. 587. The king chose pious men, and therefore passed over Ahitophel, who was wise but not pious; Hasidim 416.

69. Ahitophel ended his life by strangling himself; see 2 Sam. 17.18. A somewhat different reason for Ahitophel’s death by strangling is given in ER 31, 157.

70. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a; Sukkah 53a–53b; Makkot 11a; Shemuel 26, 125; Ma’asiyyot (Gaster’s edition, 113–114); Raziel שמואל שמואל, Sode Raza as quoted in Yalkut Reubeni, Gen. 1.1; Hakam ha-Razim in Yalkut Reubeni, Num. 26.56; Al-Barceloni, 72–73; Zohar

III, 198b. In the last source it is stated that David found a pot filled with magic herbs at the abyss where it was placed by Balak; compare with p. 605, and footnote 47 on p. 863. As to the waters below the holy of holies, see Mid-dor 2.6, and Yoma 77b–78a. All these Haggadahs belong to the cycle of legends concerning the Eben Shetiyah; see Index, s. v.

71. 2 Sam. 17.23 is quoted as proof for the law that the last wish of the dying has legal validity; comp. Baba Batra 147a.

72. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29a–29b; Baba Batra 147a (here the first rule of conduct reads: Do not engage in dissension, which is very likely a doublet to rule 2; comp. ER 31, 157); PRK 23a (as in Baba Batra, with the addition: When you begin to suffer the “travail of the Messiah”, start to prepare gifts for him). Comp. also Tosefta ‘Arakin 1.9.

73. R. Moses Isserles, Torat ha-‘Olah 1.11, quoting an “old source”.

74. On the fortune-book, see Steinschneider, Hebräische Uebersetzungen, 870.

JOAB

Joab, the warrior, was a contrast to Ahitophel in every essential. He was David’s right hand. It was said, if Joab had not been there to conduct his wars, David would not have had leisure to devote himself to the study of the Torah. He was the model of a true Jewish hero, distinguished at the same time for his learning, piety, and goodness. His house stood wide open for all comers, and the campaigns which he undertook redounded invariably to the benefit of the people. They were indebted to him for luxuries even,<sup>75</sup> and more than that, he took thought for the welfare of scholars, he himself being the president of the Sanhedrin.<sup>76</sup>

It interested Joab to analyze the character of men and their opinions. When he heard King David’s words: “Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him,” he expressed his astonishment that the comparison should be made with the love of a father for a child, and not with the love of a mother; mother love as a rule is considered the stronger and the more self-sacrificing. He made up his mind to keep his eyes open, and observe whether David's idea was borne out by facts. On one of his journeys he happened into the house of a poor old man who had twelve children, all of whom the father supported, however meagrely, with the toil of his own hands. Joab proposed that he sell him one of the twelve children; he would thus be relieved of the care of one, and the selling-price could be applied to the better support of the rest. The good father rejected the proposition brusquely. Then Joab approached the mother, offering her a hundred gold denarii for one of the children. At first she resisted the temptation, but finally she yielded. When the father returned in the evening, he cut the bread, as was his wont, into fourteen pieces, for himself, his wife, and his twelve children. In allotting the portions he missed a child, and insisted upon being told its fate. The mother confessed what had happened during his absence. He neither ate nor drank, and next morning he set out, firmly resolved to return the money to Joab and to slay him if he should refuse to surrender the child. After much parleying, and after the father had threatened him with death, Joab yielded the child to the old man, with the exclamation: "Yes, David was right when he compared God's love for men to a father's love for his child. This poor fellow who has twelve children to support was prepared to fight me to the death for one of them, which the mother, who calmly stayed at home, had sold to me for a price."

Among all the heroic achievements of Joab, the most remarkable is the taking of the Amalekite capital. For six months the flower of the Israelitish army, twelve thousand in number, under the leadership of Joab, had been besieging the capital city of the Amalekites without result. The soldiers made representations to their general, that it would be well for them to return home to their wives and children. Joab urged that this not only would earn for them contempt and derision, but also would invite new danger. The heathen would be encouraged to unite against the Israelites. He proposed that they hurl him into the city by means of a sling, and then wait forty days. If at the end of this period they saw blood flow from the gates of the fortress, it should be a sign to them that he was still alive.

His plan was executed. Joab took with him one thousand pieces of money and his sword. When he was cast from the sling, he fell into the courtyard of a widow, whose daughter caught him up. In a little while he regained consciousness. He pretended to be an Amalekite taken prisoner by the Israelites, and thrown into the city by his captors, who thus wished to inflict death. As he was provided with money, which he dispensed lavishly among his entertainers, he was received kindly, and was given the Amalekite garb. So apparelled, he ventured, after ten days, on a tour of inspection through the city, which he found to be of enormous size.

His first errand was to an armorer, to have him mend his sword, which had been broken by his fall. When the artisan scanned Joab's weapon, he started back—he had never seen a sword like it. He forged a new one, which snapped in two almost at once when Joab grasped it firmly. So it happened with a second sword, and with a third. Finally he succeeded in fashioning one that was acceptable. Joab asked the smith whom he would like him to slay with the sword, and the reply was, "Joab, the general of the Israelitish king." "I am he," said Joab, and when the smith in astonishment turned to look at him, Joab ran him through so skilfully that the victim had no realization of what was happening. Thereupon he hewed down five hundred Amalekite warriors whom he met on his way, and not one escaped to betray him. The rumor arose that Asmodeus, the king of demons, was raging among the inhabitants of the city, and slaying them in large numbers.

After another period of ten days, which he spent in retirement with his hosts, Joab sallied forth a second time, and caused such bloodshed among the Amalekites that his gory weapon claved to his hand, and his right hand lost all power of independent motion, it could be made to move only in a piece with his arm. He hastened to his lodging place to apply hot water to his hand and free it from the sword. On his way thither the woman who had caught him up when he fell into the city called to him: "Thou eatest and drinkest with us, yet thou slayest our warriors." Seeing himself betrayed, he could not but kill the woman. Scarcely had his sword touched her, when it was separated from his hand, and his hand could move freely, for the dead woman had been with child, and the blood of the unborn babe loosed the sword.

After Joab had slain thousands, the Israelites without, at the very moment when they were beginning to mourn their general as dead, saw blood issue from the city, and joyfully they cried out with one accord: "Hear, O Israel, the Lord is our God, the Lord is One." Joab mounted a high tower, and in stentorian tones shouted: "The Lord will not forsake his people." Inspired with high and daring courage, the Israelites demanded permission to assault the city and capture it. As Joab turned to descend from the tower, he noticed that six verses of a Psalm were inscribed on his foot, the first verse running thus: "The Lord answers thee in the day of trouble, the name of the God of Jacob is thy defense." Later David added three verses and completed the Psalm. Thereupon the Israelites took the Amalekite capital, destroyed the heathen temples in the city, and slew all its inhabitants, except the king, whom, with his crown of pure gold on his head, they brought before David.<sup>77</sup>

75. Sanhedrin 49a; Yerushalmi Makkot 2,31d; ps.-Jerome, 1 Kings 2.34.

76. Yerushalmi Makkot 2, 31d; Tan. B. IV, 166; Tan. Mass'e 12; BaR 23.13; PR 11, 43b. In these sources the Tahchemonite (2 Sam. 23.8) is said to refer to Joab who bore this name, "the wise", because of his having been the head of the academy. Allusion to this Haggadah is made in Chronicle of Ahimaaz, 112, line 12 where מְבִית יֹאב = of the house of the head of the academy. According to Mo'ed Katan 16b and Targum, 2 Sam., loc. cit., as well as 1 Chron. 11.11, Tahchemonite is an attribute of David, who was as famous a scholar as a warrior.

77. The first Joab legend is found in BHM V, 52–53 (on the text see Löw, Monatsschrift XXVI, 240), and comp. VI, introduction, XVI–XVII; the second legend of which Joab is the hero is found in several sources independent of one another; see Gaster, Exempla No. 304; BHM V, 146–148; Makiri, Ps. 18, 115 (here correctly קְסָרִין=קְסָרִי Caesarea and not קִינְסָלִי as in BHM; comp. Megillah 6a אָדוֹם (קְסָרִי בֵּת אָדוֹם); Mahzor Vitry 332, giving Tehillim as source; Ma'aseh-book 42d–43c, No. 145. The last two call the city, captured by Joab, Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and this is very likely the correct reading, as the story ends with the incident that the crown of the captured king was given to David. This obviously refers to the biblical narrative (Sam. 12.30) concerning the crown of the king of Rabbah. On the effect of the blood upon the sword, see text on p. 858. The old sources contain many details concerning the war against Edom waged by David and Joab, some of which have been made use of in this Joab legend. It is said in Baba Batra 21a–21b that Joab had first slain the men of Edom only, sparing the women. This action was based on a faulty reading of Deut. 25.19, where the Bible speaks of "blotting out the remembrance of Amalek"; but instead of זִכָּר "remembrance", Joab's teacher had made him read זָכָר "male". When Joab found out the grave consequences of the faulty reading, he was so enraged that he was about to slay his teacher. ER 11, 54, on the other hand, maintains that Joab exterminated all the Edomites, with the exception of one pregnant woman; as proof for this assumption 1 Kings 11.16 is quoted, and this is only intelligible if we suppose that the Midrash read in 1 Kings, loc. cit., זָכָר (= Deut., loc. cit.), and not זִכָּר as the Masorah has it. In his campaign against Edom Joab almost despaired of victory, and in a moment of despondency he addressed the following words to God: "O God, Thou hast cast us off, Thou hast broken us down, Thou hast been angry.” No sooner did he utter these words than the earth began to tremble and quake because of Joab’s lack of trust in God. David became so enraged by Joab’s lack of faith that he intended to slay him. The shaking and trembling of the earth ceased at Joab’s prayer: “Heal the breaches thereof, for it tottereth.” See Tehillim 60, 305; the text is slightly corrupt, but by reading יִאֲמַר יְיָ get the proper meaning of the passage, which has baffled the commentators. Notwithstanding the great victory over Edom it was not as great as David had wished; Rome did not, like the rest of Edom (on Rome = Edom, see footnote 19 on p. 252), fall into his hands. The entire annihilation of Edom, including Rome, will not take place before the advent of the Messiah. Until then the descendants of Esau enjoy power and prosperity as a reward for the filial piety of their ancestor. See BR 1.16; DZ 21–23 and 24; Makiri, Ps. 60, 309; comp. Index, s. v. “Edom”, “Rome”, and “Esau”. David though fierce in battle, treated the bodies of the fallen warriors with piety, and cared for their burial. These human acts spread his fame throughout the world. See the quotation, from an unknown Midrash, in Rashi and Kimhi on 2 Sam. 8.13.

DAVID’S PIETY AND HIS SIN

Neither his great achievements in war nor his remarkable good fortune moved David from his pious ways, or in aught changed his mode of life. Even after he became king he sat at the feet of his teachers, Ira the Jairite<sup>78</sup> and Mephibosheth. To the latter he always submitted his decisions on religious questions, to make sure that they were in accordance with law.<sup>79</sup> Whatever leisure time his royal duties afforded him, he spent in study and prayer. He contented himself with “sixty breaths” of sleep.<sup>80</sup> At midnight the strings of his harp,<sup>81</sup> which were made of the gut of the ram sacrificed by Abraham on Mount Moriah,<sup>82</sup> began to vibrate. The sound they emitted awakened David, and he would arise at once to devote himself to the study of the Torah.<sup>83</sup>

Besides study, the composition of psalms naturally claimed a goodly portion of his time. Pride filled his heart when he had completed the Psalter, and he exclaimed: “O Lord of the world, is there another creature in the universe who like me proclaims Thy praise?” A frog came up to the king, and said: “Be not so proud; I have composed more psalms than thou, and, besides, every psalm my mouth has uttered I have accompanied with three thousand parables.”<sup>84</sup> And, truly, if David indulged in conceit, it was only for a moment. As a rule he was the exemplar of modesty. The coins which were stamped by him bore a shepherd’s crook and pouch on the obverse, and on the reverse the Tower of David.<sup>85</sup> In other respects, too, his bearing was humble, as though he were still the shepherd and not the king.<sup>86</sup>

His great piety invested his prayer with such efficacy that he could bring things in heaven down to earth.<sup>87</sup> It is natural that so godly a king should have used the first respite granted by his wars to carry out his design of erecting a house of worship to God. But in the very night in which David conceived the plan of building the Temple, God said to Nathan the prophet: “Hasten to David. I know him to be a man with whom execution follows fast upon the heels of thought, and I should not like him to hire laborers for the Temple work, and then, disappointed, complain of me. I furthermore know him to be a man who obligates himself by vows to do good deeds, and I desire to spare him the embarrassment of having to apply to the Sanhedrin for absolution from his vow.”<sup>88</sup>

When David heard Nathan’s message for him, he began to tremble, and he said: “Ah, verily, God hath found me unworthy to erect His sanctuary.” But God replied with these words: “Nay, the blood shed by thee I consider as sacrificial blood, but I do not care to have thee build the Temple, because then it would be eternal and indestructible.” “But that would be excellent,” said David. Whereupon the reply was vouchsafed him: “I foresee that Israel will commit sins.

I shall wreak My wrath upon the Temple, and Israel will be saved from annihilation. However, thy good intentions shall receive their due reward. The Temple, though it be built by Solomon, shall be called thine.”<sup>89</sup>

David’s thinking and planning were wholly given to what is good and noble. He is one of the few pious men over whom the evil inclination had no power.<sup>90</sup> By nature he was not disposed to commit such evil-doing as his relation to Bath-sheba involved. God Himself brought him to his crime, that He might say to other sinners: “Go to David and learn how to repent.”<sup>91</sup> Nor, indeed, may David be charged with gross murder and adultery. There were extenuating circumstances. In those days it was customary for warriors to give their wives bills of divorce, which were to have validity only if the soldier husbands did not return at the end of the campaign. Uriah having fallen in battle, Bath-sheba was a regularly divorced woman. As for the death of her husband, it cannot be laid entirely at David’s door, for Uriah had incurred the death penalty by his refusal to take his ease in his own house, according to the king’s bidding.<sup>92</sup> Moreover, from the first, Bath-sheba had been destined by God for David, but by way of punishment for having lightly promised Uriah the Hittite an Israelitish woman to wife, in return for his aid in unfastening the armor of the prostrate Goliath, the king had to undergo bitter trials before he won her.<sup>93</sup>

Furthermore, the Bath-sheba episode was a punishment for David’s excessive self-consciousness. He had fairly besought God to lead him into temptation, that he might give proof of his constancy. It came about thus: He once complained to God: “O Lord of the world, why do people say God of Abraham, God of Isaac, God of Jacob, and why not God of David?” The answer came: “Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were tried by me, but thou hast not yet been proved.”

David entreated: “Then examine me, O Lord, and try me.” And God said: “I shall prove thee, and I shall even grant thee what I did not grant the Patriarchs. I shall tell thee beforehand that thou wilt fall into temptation through a woman.”

Once Satan appeared to him in the shape of a bird. David threw a dart at him. Instead of striking Satan, it glanced off and broke a wicker screen which hid Bath-sheba combing her hair. The sight of her aroused passion in the king.<sup>94</sup> David realized his transgression, and for twenty-two years he was a penitent. Daily he wept a whole hour and ate his “bread with ashes”.<sup>95</sup> But he had to undergo still heavier penance. For a half-year he suffered with leprosy, and even the Sanhedrin, which usually was in close personal attendance upon him, had to leave him. He lived not only in physical, but also in spiritual isolation, for the Shekinah departed from him during that time.<sup>96</sup>

---

78. Mo’ed Katan 16b; Targum 2 Sam. 20.26. As to the supposition that in Sam., loc. cit., as well as in many other places, כהן means “master”, “teacher”, and not “priest”, see also Mekilta Amalek 1, 57b; Comp. note 141 and footnote 82 on p. 493. David is the bearer of many names in Scripture, some of which characterize him as a great warrior and others as a prominent scholar. See Mo’ed Katan, loc. cit.: Targum 2 Sam. 21.19 and 23.8; ps.-Jerome on Sam., loc. cit., and 1 Chron. 11.11; Ruth R. 1.1; Targum Chron., loc. cit. Comp. also note 76. By assigning a multitude of names to David, the Haggadah harmonizes the contradictions between 2 Sam. 21.19, where the slayer of Goliath is called Elhanan, and 1 Sam. 17.1–54, where the slaying of this Philistine is ascribed to David. These two names belong to one person: David was called Elhanan, “he to whom God was gracious”. In 2 Sam. 23.8 it is David himself who is the greatest warrior of his time, “who slew at one time eight hundred,” and were it not for the sin he committed with Bath-sheba, he would have slain a thousand of his enemies at one time, as promised in the Torah to the pious; see Lev. 26.8; comp. Moed Katan l. c.; Targum and ps.-Jerome ad loc. Just as Amram received the priesthood as a reward for his zeal in the study of the Torah, even so did David receive the kingdom as a reward for his zeal in the study of the Torah, 2 ARN 48, 13l; comp.

also ER 2, 8; 3, 13, 15–16; Tehillim 25, 211. His devotion to the fulfilment of the Torah (see footnote 102 on p. 906) was equal to his zeal in the study thereof, so that he felt disappointed at the thought that there were moments in the life of a man when the body requires his entire attention, disturbing him from his religious activity. He, however, consoled himself with the thought that the Jew has the sign of the covenant of Abraham on his body, and may therefore be said to be constantly fulfilling God's command; see Sifre D., 36; Midrash Tannaim 29; Tosefta Berakot (end); Yerushalmi 9,14d; Menahot 43b; Tehillim 6, 38; Makiri, Ps. 119, 230. Lovingkindness was one of David's chief virtues; he would not permit a day to pass without giving alms to the poor. He would usually distribute charity before entering the house of prayer (Alphabet of Ben Sira 8a). But above all virtues he prized justice. In his capacity as judge he never decided a case in favor of a poor man, if he was guilty, but insisted on justice being done (compare with p. 587), though after the poor man had satisfied the law, he could count without fail on the liberality and generosity of the king. See ARN 33, 94; DR 5.3; Tosefta Sanhedrin 1.2 and Babli 6b. The last two sources maintain that it was David's rule to arbitrate between the litigants; but when he failed in his effort, he let justice take its course. His respect for justice was so great that he never availed himself of his constitutional rights as king (on these rights see footnote 47, end, on p. 895), which permitted him, under certain circumstances, to disregard the right of private property. If interests of the state compelled him to make use of his royal prerogative, he would first apply to the court for a permit, and even then he would indemnify those whose property he seized. A case of this kind is hinted at in 2 Sam. 23.13–17. David was in need of such a permit, but the Synedion which could grant him one was not near him; so three of his valiant warriors volunteered to break through the battle-lines of the enemy and put the case before the Synedion. According to another view, however, the passage in 2 Sam., loc. cit., refers to something entirely different. The three valiant warriors risked their lives to fetch water for libation, as it was the feast of Tabernacles, when the ceremony of the water-libation is performed. See Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20b–20c; Baba Kamma 60b; Shemuel 20, 105; Ruth R. 2.9; ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 11.18. Notwithstanding the great care David took in meting out justice, he nevertheless once committed a judicial murder, and had a very pious man executed on the false testimony of two witnesses, who accused him of bug-gery; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 6, 23b–23c. This legend with many elaborations is also found in Arabic literature; comp. Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, I. 55, who is not acquainted with the Jewish prototype of the legend given by him. That David described himself as “godly” (Ps. 86.2, חַסִּיד) was not due to conceit, which would have been pardonable in his case, but he wished to say that he was “like God”, inasmuch as he bore the insults heaped upon him, like the Lord who patiently bears the blasphemies of the heathen. See Tehillim 16, 123, and 96, 372. This Haggadah derives חַסִּיד “godly” from חָסַד “insult”; as to the etymology of this word, see note 190 on p. 43 towards the middle. David was called “the servant of the Lord” (compare footnote 880 on p. 802) after he repented of his sin because the Lord exalts the honor of the repentant sinner. See Tehillim 18, 136.

79. Berakot 4a; compare with p. 906. According to a Jewish legend in ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 4.2, it was Mephibosheth who instigated the slaying of his uncle Ishbosheth in the hope of succeeding him as king.

80. Sukkah 26b; Zohar I, 206b–207b, which reads: The deep sleep after “sixty breaths of the horse” is a foretaste of death, and therefore David would never indulge in a deep sleep. Comp. Berakot 57b. It is said that “sixty breaths” are a little more than half an hour. Comp. Lewysohn, Zoologie d. Tal. 137, note 2.

81. Opinions differ as to the number of these strings. Some maintain that David's harp had only seven strings, whereas the harp to be used in Messianic times will have eight; but according to others, the strings of David's harp numbered ten. See Tosefta 'Arakin 2.7; Babli 13b; PR 21 (beginning); Tan. B. IV, 50; BaR 15.11; Tehillim 81, 366, and 92, 406; PRE 19. David would never have composed the Psalms without the aid of music, as the Holy Spirit came over him only when he was put in a state of ecstasy by music, see Tehillim 24, 204, and comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 12.3, as well as text on p. 391. The Psalms, to a great extent, consist of revelations made to David by the Holy Spirit concerning the future history of Israel; see Tehillim 4, 40, and 24, 204; Pesahim 117a–118a; Gittin 57b; Ekah 2, 111. Comp. note 24. The passages in Psalms dealing with Israel's salvation refer to the Messianic salvation; see quotation from Midrash in Mahzor Vitry 8; Pardes 57d; Siddur Rashi 9.

82. PRE 21 (on the text see R. Bahya, Exod. 19.13); compare with p. 230.

83. Berakot 3b; Yerushalmi 1, 2d; PK 7, 62b–63a; PR 196a; Tehillim 22, 185; 57, 298; 108, 464; Ekah 2, 121; ER 18, 96; Zohar III, 175b. Comp. Löw, Lebensalter, 315–316, who fully discusses this legend and its relation to the Aeol's harp of the Greeks. See also R. Schmidt, Pancatantram, 21, on the Indian form of the legend. A rationalistic explanation of the legend concerning David's harp is given by R. Hai Gaon; see Löw op. cit., 317, and Shu'aib, Bo, 28c. The Talmudim and Midrashim often speak of the night as the proper time for prayer and study (comp., e. g., 'Abodah Zarah 3b, and footnote 254 on p. 617), but the praying at midnight (Hazot) is first found in the mystic literature of the Middle Ages. Compare footnote 194 on

p. 45. Great praise is bestowed upon David for the devotion with which he prayed; see Berakot 30b; PR 9, 32a.

84. Perek Shirah; Yalkut on Ps. (end); Zohar III, 222b and 232b (as to the remark made here concerning the frogs, see text on p. 527); Zohar Hadash, Ahare Mot תנא חזי (end); comp. Steinschneider, Hebräische Bibliographie, XIII, 104. On the parables, see text on p. 131, and text on p. 950. David prayed to God that the reading of his Psalms might be accounted to men as meritorious as the reading of the Torah, so that "his lips should move gently in the grave" while the people occupy themselves with his work, and in this manner he would have eternal life as his share; Tehillim 1, 9; 30, 334; 61, 306; Yerushalmi Berakot 2, 4b, and parallel passages. On the composition of the Psalms, see text on p. 823, and further Tehillim 1, 8 (parallel passages are cited by Buber); Zohar II, 101a; Berakot 9b–10a. In the last passage it is stated that the favorite psalms of David are those beginning with Ashre, "Happy is he", whereas according to others the alphabetic ones have this distinction. Comp. the quotation from an unknown Mid-rash in Shu'aib, Shelah (beginning); Kimha Dabishuna ברוך שומר for Sabbath morning. According to Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 12.3, David being freed from wars and dangers, and enjoying for the remainder of his life a profound peace, composed songs and hymns to God in several sorts of meters: some of those which he made were trimeters, and others pentameters. He also made instruments of music, and taught the Levites to sing hymns to God, both on the Sabbath day and on festivals. It is rather strange that Josephus limits the songs in the Temple to the Sabbaths and festivals, though there can be no doubt that in his time the song was a daily feature; comp. Tamid (end). See, however, Sifre N., 77 and Sifre Z., 72.

85. BR 39.11; Baba Kamma 97b. The money coined by Solomon bore his own and his father's names (figures?) on the obverse, and Jerusalem (figure or name?) on the reverse side. Compare footnote 46 on p. 180.

86. Sotah 10b; Megillah 11a; Mo'ed Katan 16b. On the reverence shown by David to the scholars, and particularly to his master Ira, see also Shir 1.2, and ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 20.26. When, however, the interests of the state demanded resolute and decisive action, David knew how to play the master and lord; Sotah 40b; compare with p. 817. After he had slain Goliath, the women hailed him with the words: "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands." But David with true humility, spoke: "O Lord of the universe, Thou wagest war, and unto Thee belongs the victory." See Tehillim 36, 249. As a truly modest man, he even doubted whether the promises of honor and glory made to him by God would ever be fulfilled. Not that he doubted the power of God, but being aware of his sinfulness, he feared that he forfeited them. Comp. Berakot 4a, and see text on p. 296.

87. Hagigah 12b; compare with p. 5. David's prayer for "exiled Israel" had the effect that even when subjected to foreign powers, Israel never occupies a despised state. Were it not for David's prayer, the Israelites in exile would have been "sellers of wax" (= poor peddlers); Sotah 49a. Juvenal, Saturnalia, 6, 542, alludes to the Jews selling wax-candles in Rome. Comp. Sanhedrin 95a; note 110, end; note 115 on p. 1158.

88. Shemuel 26, 125. It is a prerogative of the Davidic kings that they (according to some sources, they and the high priests) are permitted to sit in the Temple court (עזרה), whereas all others must remain standing. Hence Scripture (2 Sam. 7.18) mentions the fact that David, on receiving the divine revelation concerning the building of the Temple by his son, "went and sat before the Lord." Comp. Tehillim 1, 1–3; Yerushalmi Pesahim 5, 32d and parallel passages on the margin; Yoma 25b, and parallel passages on the margin, as well as footnote 9 on p. 983. David desired so ardently to erect the house of God, that he was full of joy when he heard the people say: "O that the time would soon come when the old man (David) will die, and Solomon will proceed with the building of the Temple." See Makkot 10a; Yerushalmi Berakot 21, 4b; DR 5.3. Nathan the prophet before receiving the revelation concerning the building of the Temple by Solomon strongly encouraged David in his plan to erect a permanent house of God; Tehillim 62, 308–309. This prophet, by the way, was the son of one of David's brothers, but was brought up by his grandfather Jesse, and is therefore counted sometimes as a son of the latter. Accordingly there is no contradiction between 1 Sam. 16.10 and 1 Chron. 3.13. Comp. ps.-Jerome on Sam., loc. cit. See also note 23, and footnote 11 on p. 947.

89. PR 2, 7a–7b; Tehillim 62, 309. Comp. also Mekilta Shirah 1, 34b, which reads: The Temple, though built by Solomon, is nevertheless called the "house of David" (see Ps. 30.1), because the latter had set his heart upon the building of the Temple; had not God prevented him, he would have carried out his plan. Compare footnote 59 on p. 562.—David was engaged in war all his life. He never had a pleasant dream, being always troubled by bad dreams, whereas Ahitophel always had pleasant dreams; Berakot 55b; Zohar I, 200a.

90. Baba Batra 17a. Compare with p. 237.

91. 'Abodah Zarah 4b–5a. Comp. also quotation from an unknown Midrash in Shu'aib, Kippurim, 121a.

92. Shabbat 56a; Ketubot 9b; Kiddushin 43a. In contrast to this exoneration of David, comp. Shemuel 25, 122–123, where he is severely censured not only for his sins attributed to him in Scripture, but for many others. The Midrash maintains that Uriah was not the only one whose death was caused by David. Even Nathan the prophet would have been killed by him, if he had dared to talk about the king's crime. The prophet was continually watched by the king's spies that he should not "divulge" anything. See also quotation from an unknown Midrash in Shu'aib, Kippurim, 121a; text on p. 901, and note 33.

93. Quotation from an unknown Midrash in Al-Sheikh, 2 Sam. 12. Compare with p. 916. Sanhedrin 107a reads: Bath-sheba was destined to become David's wife from the creation of the world; but he took her while she was not mature. This is a play on the name Bath-sheba, which in later Hebrew denotes "a fine quality of figs" (comp., e. g., Ma'aserot 2.8), with פגה "an unripe fig". A brilliant defence of David by God against the accusations of the angel Duma (= prince of hell; comp. Index, s. v.) is given in Zohar I, 8b (on the "three months" in this passage, see Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 31, note 2), 94a; II, 107a; III, 78b. The question about the shepherd and the lambkin in Yoma 66b refers, according to a geonic tradition, to David (comp. R. Hananel and Tosafot, ad loc., as well as Ginzberg, Geonica II, 19), and was very likely addressed to R. Eliezer by Jewish Gnostics who condemned David. Comp. Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 28–30. Comp. also note 67.

94. Sanhedrin 107a; Tehillim 18, 157; 26, 216; midrashic Genizah fragment in the University Library at Cambridge. As to David's wish to be considered like the three patriarchs, see also Justin Martyr, Dialogue, 141; Pesahim 117b; Shemuel 26, 126; Tehillim 18, 139; Yerushalmi Rosh ha-Shanah 4, 59c; Zohar I, 82a; ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 17.8. Comp. Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 295–297, with regard to the relation of God to the three patriarchs as shown in the expression "the God of Abraham, etc." and see further footnote 304 on p. 318, as well as footnote 4 on p. 451. The liturgy has the expression "God, the shield of David", but it is used only in the benediction after reading the Haftarah. Did the Haftarah, in olden times, close with a passage from the Psalms? According to Mo'ed Katan 16a, God spoke to David: "I shall reward thee for thy humility, and shall make thee like unto Me, inasmuch as thou shalt be able to annul my decrees (David's prayer will avert the decreed punishment). I shall further make thee 'the head of the three' (patriarchs)". Compare also with p. 318; text on p. 451.

95. ER 2, 7. Comp. also Apocalypse of Sedrach 14, which reads: David was saved by tears.

96. Yoma 22b; Yerushalmi Rosh ha-Shanah 1, 56b; Sanhedrin 107b; Shemuel 26, 127. On the basis of this Haggadah, 2 Sam. 5.5 is brought in harmony with 1 Kings 2.11. According to the last source, the six months during which David was isolated physically and spiritually are disregarded in giving the number of the years of his reign. Other authorities (Yerushalmi, Shemuel, loc. cit.; Ruth R. 2.14) maintain that the six months during which David was in flight from Absalom are disregarded in 1 Kings, loc.

cit. Both these views are also given in ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 5.4–5. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 43–46. The word נמרצת (1 Kings 2.8) is to be taken as the initials of the five insulting names hurled at David by Shimei; he called him "adulterer" (נואף=נ), Moabite (מואבי=מ), "murderer" (רוצח=ר), according to others, רשע "wicked", "leper" (צרוע=צ), and "abomination" (תועבה=ת). See Shabbat 105a; Tehillim 3, 36; BaR 9.7; ps.-Jerome, 1 Kings, loc. cit. Comp. Ginzberg, ibid., 72. On the view that David was punished with leprosy for committing adultery, compare also with p. 435, where it is said that Reuben was punished in the same manner for a similar sin, and see further note 2 on p. 982, end; Index, s. v. "Leprosy". Comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 9, 4.

ABSALOM'S REBELLION

Of all the punishments, however, inflicted upon David, none was so severe as the rebellion of his own son.

Absalom was of such gigantic proportions that a man who was himself of extraordinary size, standing in the eyesocket of his skull, sank in down to his nose.<sup>97</sup> As for his marvellous hair, the account of it in the Bible does not convey a notion of its abundance. Absalom had taken the vow of a Nazarite. As his vow was for life, and because the growth of his hair was particularly heavy, the law permitted him to clip it slightly every week.<sup>98</sup> It was of this small quantity that the weight amounted to two hundred shekels.

Absalom arranged for his audacious rebellion with great cunning. He secured a letter from his royal father empowering him to select two elders for his suite in every town he visited. With this document he travelled through the whole of Palestine. In each town he went to the two most distinguished men, and invited them to accompany him, at the same time showing them what his father had written, and assuring them that they had been chosen by him because he had a particular affection for them. So he succeeded in gathering the presidents of two hundred courts about him. This having been accomplished, he arranged a large banquet, at which he seated one of his emissaries between every two of his guests, for the purpose of winning them over to his cause. The plan did not succeed wholly, for, though the elders of the towns stood by Absalom, in their hearts they hoped for David's victory.<sup>99</sup>

The knowledge that a part of Absalom's following sided with him in secret,—that, though he was pursued by his son, his friends remained true to him,—somewhat consoled David in his distress. He thought that in these circumstances, if the worst came to the worst, Absalom would at least feel pity for him.<sup>100</sup> At first, however, the despair of David knew no bounds. He was on the point of worshipping an idol, when his friend Hushai the Archite approached him, saying: "The people will wonder that such a king should serve idols." David replied: "Should a king such as I am be killed by his own son? It is better for me to serve idols than that God should be held responsible for my misfortune, and His Name thus be desecrated." Hushai reproached him: "Why didst thou marry a captive?" "There is no wrong in that," replied David, "it is permitted according to the law." Thereupon Hushai: "But thou didst disregard the connection between the passage permitting it and the one that follows almost immediately after it in the Scriptures, dealing with the disobedient and rebellious son, the natural issue of such a marriage."<sup>101</sup>

Hushai was not the only faithful friend and adherent David had. Some came to his rescue unexpectedly, as, for instance, Shobi, the son of Nahash, who is identical with the Ammonite king Hanun, the enemy of David at first, and later his ally.<sup>102</sup> Barzillai, another one of his friends in need, also surprised him by his loyalty, for on the whole his moral attitude was not the highest conceivable.<sup>103</sup>

Absalom's end was beset with terrors. When he was caught in the branches of the oak-tree, he was about to sever his hair with a sword stroke, but suddenly he saw hell yawning beneath him, and he preferred to hang in the tree to throwing himself into the abyss alive.<sup>104</sup> Absalom's crime was, indeed, of a nature to deserve the supreme torture, for which reason he is one of the few Jews who have no portion in the world to come.<sup>105</sup> His abode is in hell, where he is charged with the control of ten heathen nations in the second division. Whenever the avenging angels sit in judgment on the nations, they desire to visit punishment on Absalom, too, but each time a heavenly voice is heard to call out: "Do not chastise him, do not burn him. He is an Israelite, the son of My servant David." Whereupon Absalom is set upon his throne, and is accorded the treatment due to a king.<sup>106</sup> That the extreme penalties of hell were thus averted from him, was on account of David's eightfold repetition of his son's name in his lament over him. Besides, David's intercession had the effect of re-attaching Absalom's severed head to his body.<sup>107</sup>

At his death Absalom was childless, for all his children, his three sons and his daughter, died before him, as a punishment for his having set fire to a field of grain belonging to Joab.<sup>108</sup>

97. Niddah 24b; BaR 9.24.

98. Tosefta Sotah 3.16; Nazir 4a; BaR 9.24; Shemuel 27 (here two conflicting views are also given, according to one Absalom clipped his hair monthly; according to the other, once a year only); Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 8.5; Vulgate and ps.-Jerome on 2 Sam. 14.26. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 54.

99. Tan. B. I, 155–156; BaR 9, 24 (the elders who joined Absalom soon found out his true character); Yerushalmi Sotah 1, 17b. Comp. also Tehillim 55, 292, which reads: The prayers of the members of the Synedion for David had the effect that the counsel given by Ahitophel was not followed by Absalom. Compare with p. 983.

100. Berakot 7b; Tehillim 3, 34. Owing to an incorrect reading in Tehillim, loc. cit. (עם instead of אצל), Zohar, I, 151b, maintains that David felt some consolation in the fact that the leaders of the people remained faithful to him, and did not join Absalom; comp. the preceding note. In the Book of Psalms the psalm which David composed “when he fled from Absalom” follows the one concerning Gog and Magog (the “nations in uproar against God and the Messiah”; comp. Ps. 2 and 3). The reason is that if one should say: “How is it possible that the slave should rebel against his master?”, he will receive the answer: “Behold, it even happened that the son rebelled against his father.” See Berakot 10a.

101. Sanhedrin 107a; DR 4.4; Zohar III, 24a; EZ 3, 177; ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 15.25. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 53–54. David served an idol because he wished to make his fate appear just in the eyes of men, who would say: “Behold, he merited his punishment.” That David on this occasion had his head covered and went barefoot (2 Sam. 16.30) was due to the fact that the Synedion excommunicated him (on account of his sin with Bath-sheba?), and one who is excommunicated is forbidden to put on shoes or to have his head uncovered. The ban was removed from him by his master Ira. Comp. Shemuel 8, 70; BaR 3.2; Zohar II, 107b. See also Mo’ed Katan 15a.

102. Tehillim 2, 34–36, where also the different kinds of food sent by David’s friends (2 Sam. 17.28–29) are described in detail.

103. Shabbat 152a, which reads: Barzillai had led a lascivious life, and having spent his strength, he could not enjoy life any more when he became old; comp. 2 Sam. 19.36. In Tehillim 2, 35–36 it is stated that David had feared these very men who came to his assistance. Barzillai was a proselyte; see Jerushalmi Kiddushin 4.65b.

104. Sotah 10b; BaR 9.24; PRE 53. Absalom’s miserable end is often referred to in the Haggadah to illustrate the rule that God “punishes measure for measure,” and it is shown in detail how Absalom’s fate corresponded to his sins. Comp. Sotah, Mishnah 1.8; Tosefta 3.16–17; Yerushalmi 1, 17b; Babli, and BaR, loc. cit.; Mekilta Shirah 6, 40a.

105. Sanhedrin 103b. Comp. Yoma 66b, and footnote 100 on p. 906.

106. Ma’aseh de Rabbi Joshua b. Levi in BHM II, 50–51.

107. Sotah 10b. This passage records also the different view that David’s prayer brought Absalom into paradise. David, however, was punished for his great love for his wicked son, and eight of his sons (Bath-Sheba’s first child, Amnon, Absalom, Adonijah, and four others; compare with p. 936) died a premature death, corresponding to the eight times he cried out in agony: “My son”, about the wicked Absalom (2 Sam. 19.1 and 5). Eight rulers of the Davidic dynasty likewise died a violent death. These are: Joram, Ahaziah, Athaliah, Jehoash, Amaziah, Amon, Josiah, and Jehoiakim. See the quotation, from an unknown Midrash, in Hasidim 107; compare also p. 901. As to Jehoiakim’s violent death, see text on p. 1060. The death of David’s sons and descendants was also a punishment for his having kept himself in a place of safety, while his army fought against Absalom. Comp. 2 Sam. 18.3, seq. See further text on p. 901. David’s great love for Absalom may be judged from the way he acted towards the Ethiopian and Ahimaaz. The former who informed him of Absalom’s death he had executed, and the latter, who attempted to keep it a secret for a time, was appointed to a high office. Comp. PK 32, 196a–196b; see also PRE 53.

108. Sotah 11a. This passage records also the different opinion that Absalom left sons, but that they were so insignificant that Scripture (2 Sam. 18.18) speaks of them as though he died childless. Ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam., loc. cit., mentions both views in a somewhat confused manner. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggadah bei den Kirchenv., 60–61, where attention is drawn to Targum 2 Sam., loc. cit., which paraphrases בן of the text by בר קימא: Absalom had children, but they died at an early age. In view of 2 Chron. 11.21 there can be no doubt that Absalom had a daughter, and accordingly בנים in the sources quoted is to be taken literally “sons”.

DAVID’S ATONEMENT

All these sufferings did not suffice to atone for David’s sin. God once said to him: “How much longer shall this sin be hidden in thy hand and remain unatoned? On thy account the priestly city of Nob was destroyed,<sup>109</sup> on thy account Doeg the Edomite was cast out of the communion of the pious, and on thy account Saul and his three sons were slain. What dost thou desire now—that thy house should perish, or that thou thyself shouldst be delivered into the hands of thine enemies?” David chose the latter doom.

It happened one day when he was hunting, Satan, in the guise of a deer, enticed him further and further, into the very territory of the Philistines, where he was recognized by Ishbi the giant, the brother of Goliath, his adversary. Desirous of avenging his brother, he seized David, and cast him into a winepress, where the king would have suffered a torturous end, if by a miracle the earth beneath him had not begun to sink, and so saved him from instantaneous death. His plight, however, remained desperate, and it required a second miracle to rescue him.

In that hour Abishai, the cousin of David, was preparing for the advent of the Sabbath, for the king's misfortune happened on Friday as the Sabbath was about to come in. When Abishai poured out water to wash himself, he suddenly caught sight of drops of blood in it. Then he was startled by a dove that came to him plucking out her plumes, and moaning and wailing. Abishai exclaimed: "The dove is the symbol of the people of Israel. It cannot be but that David, the king of Israel, is in distress." Not finding the king at home, he was confirmed in his fears, and he determined to go on a search for David on the swiftest animal at his command, the king's own saddle-beast. But first he had to obtain the permission of the sages to mount the animal ridden by the king, for the law forbids a subject to avail himself of things set aside for the personal use of a king. Only the impending danger could justify the exception made in this case.

Scarcely had Abishai mounted the king's animal, when he found himself in the land of the Philistines, for the earth had contracted miraculously. He met Orpah, the mother of the four giant sons. She was about to kill him, but he anticipated the blow and slew her. Ishbi, seeing that he now had two opponents, stuck his lance into the ground, and hurled David up in the air, in the expectation that when he fell he would be transfixed by the lance. At that moment Abishai appeared, and by pronouncing the Name of God he kept David suspended 'twixt heaven and earth.

Abishai questioned David how such evil plight had overtaken him, and David told him of his conversation with God, and how he himself had chosen to fall into the hands of the enemy, rather than permit the ruin of his house. Abishai replied: "Reverse thy prayer, plead for thyself, and not for thy descendants. Let thy children sell wax, and do thou not afflict thyself about their destiny." The two men joined their prayers, and pleaded with God to avert David's threatening doom. Abishai again uttered the Name of God, and David dropped to earth uninjured. Now both of them ran away swiftly, pursued by Ishbi. When the giant heard of his mother's death, his strength forsook him, and he was slain by David and Abishai.<sup>110</sup>

---

109. By his lack of precaution he caused Saul's suspicion against the priests of Nob; comp. also vol. IV, pp. 257–258. Against this view, see Sanhedrin 104a; ER 12, 60. Compare also footnote 92 on p. 901.

110. Sanhedrin 95a; BR 59.11; Tan. B. I, 150–151; Tan. Wa-Yeze (according to the Tanhumas, Joab and Abishai hastened to David's assistance from the land of the Ammonites; comp., however, Tehillim, 60, 305); Hullin 91b; Tehillim 18, 157–159; BHM IV, 140–141; Hibbur Ma'as. No 5; Likkutim, I, 21b–22b; Neweh Shalom 55–56; Zohar Ruth 1.14. Comp. also Gaster Exempla, 111–113 which offers some interesting variants to our texts of Sanhedrin. On the withering of the wreath as a sign of death, see footnote 20 on p. 457. On the Persian elements in this legend see R.E.J. II, 300, and XVII, 202, seq. On the dove as Israel's symbol, see Berakot 53b; Shir 2.14 and 4.1; 4 Ezra 5.26; ps.-Philo, 40; 39.5. On David's saddle-beast, see text on p. 945. On the miracle of the contraction of the earth, see footnote 287 on p. 239. On Orpha the mother of the giants, see text on pp. 863 and 915. As to the saying, "Let thy children sell wax", see note 87.

VISITATIONS

Among the sorrows of David are the visitations that came upon Palestine during his reign, and he felt them all the more as he had incurred them through his own fault. There was first the famine, which was so desolating that it is counted among the ten severest that are to happen from the time of Adam to the time of the Messiah.<sup>111</sup> During the first year that it prevailed, David had an investigation set on foot to discover whether idolatry was practiced in the land, and was keeping back the rain. His suspicion proved groundless. The second year he looked into the moral conditions of his realm, for lewdness can bring about the same punishment as idolatry. Again he was proved wrong. The third year, he turned his attention to the administration of charity. Perhaps the people had incurred guilt in this respect, for abuses in this department also were visited with the punishment of famine.<sup>112</sup> Again his search was fruitless, and he turned to God to inquire of Him the cause of the public distress. God's reply was: "Was not Saul a king anointed with holy oil, did he not abolish idolatry, is he not the companion of Samuel in Paradise? Yet, while you all dwell in the land of Israel, he is 'outside of the land.' " David, accompanied by the scholars and the nobles of his kingdom, at once repaired to Jabesh-gilead, disinterred the remains of Saul and Jonathan, and in solemn procession bore them through the whole land of Israel to the inheritance of the tribe of Benjamin. There they were buried. The tributes of affection paid by the people of Israel to its dead king aroused the compassion of God, and the famine came to an end.<sup>113</sup>

The sin against Saul was now absolved, but there still remained Saul's own guilt in his dealings with the Gibeonites, who charged him with having killed seven of their number. David asked God why He had punished His people on account of proselytes. God's answer to him was: "If thou dost not bring near them that are far off, thou wilt remove them that are near by." To satisfy their vengeful feelings, the Gibeonites demanded the life of seven members of Saul's family. David sought to mollify them, representing to them that they would derive no benefit from the death of their victims, and offering them silver and gold instead. But though David treated with each one of them individually, the Gibeonites were relentless. When he realized their hardness of heart, he cried out: "Three qualities God gave unto Israel; they are compassionate, chaste, and gracious in the service of their fellow-men. The first of these qualities the Gibeonites do not possess, and therefore they must be excluded from communion with Israel."<sup>114</sup>

The seven descendants of Saul to be surrendered to the Gibeonites were determined by letting all his posterity pass by the Ark of the law. Those who were arrested before it were the designated victims. Mephibosheth would have been one of the unfortunates, had he not been permitted to pass by unchecked in answer to the prayer of David,<sup>115</sup> to whom he was dear, not only as the son of his friend Jonathan, but also as the teacher who instructed him in the Torah.<sup>116</sup>

The cruel fate that befell the descendants of Saul had a wholesome effect. All the heathen who saw and heard exclaimed: "There is no God like unto the God of Israel, there is no nation like unto the nation of Israel; the wrong inflicted upon wretched proselytes has been expiated by the sons of kings." So great was the enthusiasm among the heathen over this manifestation of the Jewish sense of justice that one hundred and fifty thousand of them were converted to Judaism.<sup>117</sup>

As for David, his wrong in connection with the famine lay in his not having applied his private wealth to the amelioration of the people's suffering. When David returned victorious from the combat with Goliath, the women of Israel gave him their gold and silver ornaments. He put them aside for use in building the Temple, and even during the three years' famine this fund was not touched. God said: "Thou didst refrain from rescuing human beings from death, in order to save thy money for the Temple. Verily, the Temple shall not be built by thee, but by Solomon."<sup>118</sup>

David is still more blameworthy on account of the census which he took of the Israelites in defiance of the law in the Pentateuch. When he was charged by the king with the task of numbering the people, Joab used every effort to turn him away from his intention. But in vain. Incensed, David said: "Either thou art king and I am the general, or I am king and thou art the general." Joab had no choice but to obey. He selected the tribe of Gad as the first to be counted, because he thought that the Gadites, independent and self-willed, would hinder the execution of the royal order, and David would be forced to give up his plan of taking a census. The Gadites disappointed the expectations of Joab, and he betook himself to the tribe of Dan, hoping that if God's punishment descended, it would strike the idolatrous Danites. Disliking his mission as he did, Joab spent nine months in executing it, though he might have dispatched it in a much shorter time. Nor did he carry out the king's orders to the letter. He himself warned the people of the census. If he saw the father of a family of five sons, he would bid him conceal a few of them. Following the example set by Moses, he omitted the Levites from the enumeration, likewise the tribe of Benjamin, because he entertained particularly grave apprehensions in behalf of this greatly decimated tribe.<sup>119</sup> In the end, David was not informed of the actual number obtained. Joab made two lists, intending to give the king a partial list if he found that he had no suspicion of the ruse.<sup>120</sup>

The prophet Gad came to David and gave him the choice of famine, oppression by enemies, or the plague, as the penalty for the heavy crime of popular census-taking. David was in the position of a sick man who is asked whether he prefers to be buried next to his father or next to his mother. The king considered: "If I choose the calamities of war, the people will say, 'He cares little, he has his warriors to look to.' If I choose famine, they will say, 'He cares little, he has his riches to look to.' I shall choose the plague, whose scourge strikes all alike."<sup>121</sup> Although the plague raged but a very short time,<sup>122</sup> it claimed a large number of victims. The most serious loss was the death of Abishai, whose piety and learning made him the counterpoise of a host of seventy-five thousand.<sup>123</sup>

David raised his eyes on high, and he saw the sins of Israel heaped up from earth to heaven. In the same moment an angel descended, and slew his four sons, the prophet Gad, and the elders who accompanied him. David's terror at this sight, which was but increased when the angel wiped his dripping sword on the king's garments, settled in his limbs, and from that day on they never ceased to tremble.<sup>124</sup>

---

111. BR 25.3. Compare with p. 189, and text on p. 862. David caused the famine by bestowing all the priestly gifts on one person, his master Ira, instead of distributing them among several priests; 'Erubin 63a. On Ira, see also note 78 beginning, according to which he was not a priest. This famine was so grievous that the people were forced to eat bitter vetches (כרשינר ervilia; comp. Löw, Erve und Wicke, in Zeitschrift für Assyriologie XXX) which is ordinarily used only as fodder. David then ordained that the priestly gifts should be set aside from vetches, since in case of necessity it can be used as food for men; Yerushalmi Hallah 4, 60b; ER 13,67.

112. Yerushalmi Ta'anit 3, 66c, and Kiddushin 4, 65b–65c; Yebamot 78b; PRE 17; BaR 8.4. The last-named source contains a glowing praise of the proselytes; see the similar remarks of the Rabbis concerning proselytes in Tan. B. I, 63, and ShR 19.4. As to the sins which keep back the rain, see Ta'anit 7b; Mishle 25, 97–98; Yelammedenu in Yalkut I, 771; quotation from Yerushalmi (?) in Sabba', Bereshit, 5a (not in our texts); ps.-Philo, 45; 44 (end), which reads: Therefore if they shall speak lies before Me, I will command the heaven and it shall defraud them of rain. This is based on a midrashic interpretation of Prov.

25.14. Comp. Ta'anit and Midrash Mishle, loc. cit. See also Ta'anit 10b, which reads: Just as the Babylonians are deceptive, even so are the clouds of their country.

113. PRE 17; BaR 8.4. See also Shemuel 28, 132–133, and the references cited in the preceding note. On the piety of Saul, “Samuel’s companion in paradise”, see text on p. 701. According to ps.-Philo, 57; 62.2, the spirit rested on Saul, and he prophesied, saying: “Why art thou deceived, O Saul? Whom dost thou persecute in vain? The time of thy kingdom is at an end. Go to thy place, for thou shalt die, and David shall reign. Shalt not thou and thy sons (read filios tuos, instead of filius tuus) die together? And then shall the kingdom of David appear.” And the spirit departed from Saul, and he knew not what he had prophesied.

114. Yerushalmi Kiddushin 4, 65c, and Ta'anit 3, 66c; Shemuel 28.134; Tehillim 1, 100; ShR 39.16; Yebamot 78b–79a; BaR 8.4; WR 22.6; Tan. B. IV, 23. In the last four sources the view is expressed that Saul did not kill any of the Gibeonites; but the destruction of Nob, the city of the priests, caused great misery to their servants, the Gibeonites, and this was accounted to Saul as though he had brought about their death. On the Gibeonites, see also text on p. 846. On the three qualities God gave to Israel, see also PRK 33b; Abot 4.19; John 8. 39–44; footnote 240 on p. 611.

115. Yerushalmi Kiddushin 65c; Yebamot 79a; Shemuel 28, 133; BaR 8.4. Compare footnote 28 on p. 846; text on p. 797; on p. 960.

116. Berakot 4a. Comp. further references in the preceding note, and text on p. 906.

117. Yebamot 79a; Yerushalmi Kiddushin 65c; BaR 8.4; Shemuel 28, 134; compare with p. 1176. According to Yebamot 76a, no proselytes were admitted into the Jewish fold during the time of David and Solomon, because there was good reason to suspect the sincerity and religious convictions of those who wished to become Jews.

118. Ruth Z., 51; PR 6, 26a. Compare with p. 966.

119. PR 11, 43b–44a; Shemuel 30, 136. David’s sin consisted not so much in taking the census, but in taking it without making “every man give a ransom for his soul unto the Lord”, half a shekel for an offering, as God had commanded Moses. See Exod. 30.11, seq. God made David forget this law as a punishment for using unbecoming words in speaking of God as the one who had “stirred up” Saul against him (1 Sam. 26.18); see Berakot 62b. On the view that David forgot a commandment of the Torah, see text on pp. 665, 786; text on p. 923. Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 13.1, is likewise of the opinion that David’s sin consisted in not paying half a shekel for each man that was numbered, whereas according to PK 2, 18b, and BaR 2.17, he sinned in taking the census without having any valid reason for doing so. On the idolatrous Danites, see text on p. 579 and Index, s. v. “Danites”.

120. PK 2, 18b; PR 11, 43b; Shemuel 30, 137; ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 24.9. The contradiction between Sam., loc. cit., and 1 Chron. 21.5 disappears if we assume that the number given in the first passage is not the complete one.

121. PR 11, 44b; Targum 1 Chron. 21.13; ER 7, 39; Tehillim 17, 126; Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 13.2.

122. Opinions are unanimous that the plague lasted only a few hours, but they differ as to the exact number; comp. Berakot 62b; PR 11, 44b; Tehillim 17, 126–127; Shemuel 30, 137–138; Targum, Peshitta, and ps.-Jerome on 2 Sam. 24.15. Comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 13.3, and the following note.

123. Tehillim 18, 126; Shemuel 30, 38; Berakot 62b; Targum 1 Chron. 21.15. A detailed description of the plague is given by Josephus Antiqui., VII, 13.3. A widespread legend states that one hundred youths died daily during the plague (but comp. the preceding note: on the one hundred deaths, see note 12), whereupon David instituted that one hundred benedictions should be recited in the daily prayers (for the oldest enumeration of the one hundred benedictions, see Ginzberg, Geonica II, 116–117). The plague ceased as soon as this change in the liturgy was introduced. See BaR 18.21; Eshkol of R. Abraham b. Isaac I.56 (geonic source); Orehot Hayyim 1, 4c; Kad ha-Kemah ברכה 36b; Mahzor Vitry 3, and the parallel passages given by Hurwitz, ad loc. The plague was a punishment for Israel’s lack of enthusiasm for the building of the Temple; Tehillim and Shemuel, loc. cit. Abishai, though distinguished for his piety and learning, was not free from the sin of having been an accomplice of his brother Joab in the killing of Abner. To indicate his sin, Scripture (2 Sam. 10.10) spells his name defectively. See the Jewish tradition in ps.-Jerome, ad loc., and Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 50–51. Comp. also footnote 267 on p. 235.

124. ER 7, 39; Aggadat Bereshit 38.77 (comp. Buber, note 9). Against this, see ShR 15.20, which reads: The “board of intercalation” at the time of Solomon consisted of ten members, three of whom were Solomon, Nathan the prophet, and Gad the seer. The angel who caused the death of so many men in Israel was nevertheless an “angel of mercy”; he hoped that the dreadful calamity brought upon Israel would pacify God’s anger kindled against them. This angel pleaded with God for Israel, and entreated Him that He should remember His covenant with the patriarchs and be merciful to Israel. God looked at the terrestrial sanctuary, the place where Isaac was tied to be sacrificed (see text on p. 231), and at the celestial sanctuary, where the souls of the pious are (text on p. 5) and where Jacob’s image is engraved (see text on p. 758), and He caused the plague to cease. See Aggadat Bereshit, loc. cit., and 30, 61; Berakot 62b; Targum 1 Chron. 21.15.

THE DEATH OF DAVID

David once besought God to tell him when he would die. His petition was not granted, for God has ordained that no man shall foreknow his end. One thing, however, was revealed to David, that his death would occur at the age of seventy on the Sabbath day. David desired that he might be permitted to die on Friday. This wish, too, was denied him, because God said that He delighted more in one day passed by David in the study of the Torah, than in a thousand holocausts offered by Solomon in the Temple. Then David petitioned that life might be vouchsafed him until Sunday; this, too, was refused, because God said it would be an infringement of the rights of Solomon, for one reign may not overlap by a hairbreadth the time assigned to another.

Thereafter David spent every Sabbath exclusively in the study of the Torah, in order to secure himself against the Angel of Death, who has no power to slay a man while he is occupied with the fulfilment of God's commandments. The Angel of Death had to resort to cunning to gain possession of David.<sup>125</sup> One Sabbath day, which happened to be also the Pentecost holiday,<sup>126</sup> the king was absorbed in study, when he heard a sound in the garden. He rose and descended the stairway leading from his palace to the garden, to discover the cause of the noise. No sooner had he set foot on the steps than they tumbled in, and David was killed. The Angel of Death had caused the noise in order to utilize the moment when David should interrupt his study.<sup>125</sup> The king's corpse could not be moved on the Sabbath, which was painful to those with him, as it was lying exposed to the rays of the sun. So Solomon summoned several eagles, and they stood guard over the body, shading it with their outstretched pinions.<sup>127</sup>

---

125. Shabbat 30a–30b; Ruth R. 1.17; Koheleth 5.10. As to the conception that God never reveals to man the time of his death, see also Pesahim 54b (top), PRK 35b, and 4 Ezra 5.25. God said to David: "I delight more in thy acts of justice than in the multitude of sacrifices brought by Solomon; Yerushalmi Berakot 2, 4b, and Rosh ha-Shanah 1, 56b; Makkot 10a. As to the conception that the angel of death has no power over those who are occupied with the study of the Torah, see also Mo'ed Katan 28a; Baba Mezi'a 86a; text on p. 812; text on p. 1025.

126. Ruth R. 1.17; Yerushalmi Bezah 2, 61b. In the last source it is presupposed that David died on a week-day. David, it is stated there, died on the feast of Pentecost, and as all Israel was in a state of mourning, the festive offerings were brought on the following day. Comp. also Koheleth 5.10.

127. Ruth R. 1.17. For the contrary view, see Shabbat 30b; Kohelet 5.10, where it is said that the removal of the corpse was accomplished without any miracle. Comp. also Mirkhond, 72 on the birds sheltering the crowds from the sun at the funeral of David.

DAVID IN PARADISE

The death of David did not mean the end of his glory and grandeur. It merely caused a change of scene. In the heavenly realm as on earth David ranks among the first. The crown upon his head outshines all others, and whenever he moves out of Paradise to present himself before God, suns, stars, angels, seraphim, and other holy beings run to meet him. In the heavenly court-room a throne of fire of gigantic dimensions is erected for him directly opposite to the throne of God. Seated on this throne and surrounded by the kings of the house of David and other Israelitish kings, he intones wondrously beautiful psalms. At the end he always cites the verse: "The Lord reigns forever and ever," to which the archangel Metatron and those with him reply: "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts!" This is the signal for the holy Ḥayyot and heaven and earth to join in with praise. Finally the kings of the house of David sing the verse: "And the Lord shall be king over all; in that day shall the Lord be one, and His name one."<sup>128</sup>

The greatest distinction to be accorded David is reserved for the judgment day, when God will prepare a great banquet in Paradise for all the righteous. At David's petition, God Himself will be present at the banquet, and will sit on His throne, opposite to which David's throne will be placed. At the end of the banquet, God will pass the wine cup over which grace is said, to Abraham, with the words: "Pronounce the blessing over the wine, thou who art the father of the pious of the world." Abraham will reply: "I am not worthy to pronounce the blessing, for I am the father also of the Ishmaelites, who kindle God's wrath." God will then turn to Isaac: "Say the blessing, for thou wert bound upon the altar as a sacrifice." "I am not worthy," he will reply, "for the children of my son Esau destroyed the Temple." Then to Jacob: "Do thou speak the blessing, thou whose children were blameless." Jacob also will decline the honor on the ground that he was married to two sisters at the same time, which later was strictly prohibited by the Torah. God will then turn to Moses: "Say the blessing, for thou didst receive the law and didst fulfil its precepts." Moses will answer: "I am not worthy to do it, seeing that I was not found worthy to enter the Holy Land." God will next offer the honor to Joshua, who both led Israel into the Holy Land, and fulfilled the commandments of the law. He, too, will refuse to pronounce the blessing, because he was not found worthy to bring forth a son. Finally God will turn to David with the words: "Take the cup and say the blessing, thou the sweetest singer in Israel and Israel's king. And David will reply: "Yes, I will pronounce the blessing, for I am worthy of the honor."<sup>129</sup> Then God will take the Torah and read various passages from it, and David will recite a psalm in which both the pious in Paradise and the wicked in hell will join with a loud Amen. Thereupon God will send his angels to lead the wicked from hell to Paradise.<sup>130</sup>

---

128. BHM V, 167–168, and VI, 25–26; Or Zarua I, 39a, and II, 18b. As early an authority as R. Akiba (Sanhedrin 38b, and parallel passages) speaks of the throne upon which David will sit on the Day of Judgment. Footnote 118 on pp. 508–509. See also ER 18, 89–90, where it is said that David will sit at God's right hand on the Day of Judgment. There can be no doubt that these legends about David are connected with the view that he is the promised Messiah; see Sanhedrin 98a; Rosh ha-Shanah 25a which reads: David, the king of Israel, lives for ever; Tehillim 5, 52; 57, 298; 75, 340; 2 ARN 45, 125; Shitah Hadashah 2 (which reads: David is the first and the last of the Jewish rulers); Zohar I 82b; III, 84a. The last passage is a kabbalistic rendering of the statement (Sanhedrin 98b) that in the days to come God will raise "another David" to be the Messiah, whose viceroy will be the first David. See also Mishle 19, 87, where David is given as one of the names of the Messiah. One of David's distinctions which he shares with the three patriarchs, and Moses, Aaron, Miriam, and Benjamin is that his corpse was not touched by worms; Baba Batra 17a; Tehillim 119, 492; Derek Erez Z., I (end). Comp. also Acts 13.36. Baba Batra, loc. cit., states that David is one of the few over whom the evil inclination had no power; compare footnote 276 on p. 237. Somewhat different is the statement of Yerushalmi Sotah 5, 20c: Abraham turned the evil inclination into the good inclination, but David was unable to do that, and he therefore slew the evil inclination. This wishes to convey that David (as repentance for his sin with Bath-sheba) denied himself the pleasures which are permitted by the law, and lived like an ascetic, whereas Abraham served God in enjoying life. On David's ascetic life, comp. the remark in Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20a, with regard to 2 Sam. 20.30. The world was created for the sake of David; Sanhedrin 98b, where Moses and the Messiah are regarded by some authorities as those for whose sake the world was created. See the similar statement in Berakot 61b, which reads: The world was created only for the very pious or for the extremely wicked; for the former the world to come, and this world for the latter. See footnote 8, top, on p. 48.

129. BHM V, 45–46, and VI, 47 (in this passage David is said to be on a horse of fire), which is based on older sources; see Pesahim 119b; Yoma 76a; Tehillim 23, 202; Nispahim 32–33. In ShR 25.8 Michael is first requested to say the blessing; but with "angelic" modesty passes on this honor to Gabriel, who likewise refuses the honor, and asks the patriarchs to say the blessing. They in turn ask Moses and Aaron, who pass on the honor to the elders, and the latter find David to be the one deserving of this great distinction. Compare, however, with p. 965, p. 838. In the world to come there will be no company of righteous of which David will not be a member; Shemuel 19, 104. On the throne of David see the preceding note, and Index, s. v. "Thrones of the Righteous".

130. BHM V, 46; Nispahim 33. Comp. also Visio Pauli 29.

THE FAMILY OF DAVID

David had six wives, including Michal, the daughter of Saul, who is called by the pet name Eglah, "Calfkin", in the list given in the Bible narrative.<sup>131</sup> Michal was of entrancing beauty,<sup>132</sup> and at the same time the model of a loving wife. Not only did she save David out of the hands of her father, but also, when Saul, as her father and her king, commanded her to marry another man, she acquiesced only apparently. She entered into a mock marriage in order not to arouse the anger of Saul, who had annulled her union with David on grounds which he thought legal. Michal was good as well as beautiful; she showed such extraordinary kindness to the orphan children of her sister Merab that the Bible speaks of the five sons of Michal "whom she bore to Adriel." Adriel, however, was her brother-in-law and not her husband, but she had raised his children, treating them as though they were her own.<sup>133</sup> Michal was no less a model of piety. Although the law exempted her, as a woman, from the duty, still she executed the commandment of using phylacteries.<sup>134</sup> In spite of all these virtues, she was severely punished by God for her scorn of David, whom she reproached with lack of dignity, when he had in mind only to do honor to God. Long she remained childless, and at last, when she was blessed with a child, she lost her own life in giving birth to it.<sup>135</sup>

But the most important among the wives of David was Abigail, in whom beauty, wisdom, and prophetic gifts were joined. With Sarah, Rahab, and Esther, she forms the quartet of the most beautiful women in history. She was so bewitching that passion was aroused in men by the mere thought of her.<sup>136</sup> Her cleverness showed itself during her first meeting with David, when, though anxious about the life of her husband Nabal, she still, with the utmost tranquillity, put a ritual question to him in his rage. He refused to answer it, because, he said, it was a question to be investigated by day, not by night. Thereupon Abigail interposed, that sentence of death likewise may be passed upon a man only during the day. Even if David's judgment were right, the law required him to wait until daybreak to execute it upon Nabal. David's objection, that a rebel like Nabal had no claim upon due process of law, she overruled with the words: "Saul is still alive, and thou art not yet acknowledged king by the world."

Her charm would have made David her captive on this occasion, if her moral strength had not kept him in check. By means of the expression, "And this shall not be unto thee," she made him understand that the day had not yet arrived, but that it would come, when a woman, Bath-sheba, would play a disastrous part in his life. Thus she manifested her gift of prophecy.

Not even Abigail was free from the feminine weakness of coquetry. The words "remember thine handmaid" should never have been uttered by her. As a married woman, she should not have sought to direct the attention of a man to herself.<sup>137</sup> In the women's Paradise she supervises the fifth of the seven divisions into which it is divided, and her domain adjoins that of the wives of the Patriarchs, Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, and Leah.<sup>138</sup>

Among the sons of David, Adonijah, the son of Haggith, must be mentioned particularly, the pretender to the throne. The fifty men whom he prepared to run before him had fitted themselves for the place of heralds by cutting out their spleen and the flesh of the soles of their feet. That Adonijah was not designated for the royal dignity, was made manifest by the fact that the crown of David did not fit him. This crown had the remarkable peculiarity of always fitting the legitimate king of the house of David.<sup>139</sup>

Chileab was a son worthy of his mother Abigail. The meaning of his name is “like the father”, which had been given him because of his striking resemblance to David in appearance, a circumstance that silenced the talk against David’s all too hasty marriage with the widow of Nabal.<sup>140</sup> Intellectually, too, Chileab testified to David’s paternity. In fact, he excelled his father in learning, as he did even the teacher of David, Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan.<sup>141</sup> On account of his piety he is one of the few who have entered Paradise alive.<sup>142</sup>

Tamar cannot be called one of the children of David, because she was born before her mother’s conversion to Judaism. Consequently, her relation to Amnon is not quite of the grave nature it would have been, had they been sister and brother in the strict sense of the terms.

To the immediate household of David belonged four hundred young squires, the sons of women taken captive in battle. They wore their hair in heathen fashion, and, sitting in golden chariots, they formed the vanguard of the army, and terrified the enemy by their appearance.<sup>143</sup>

131. Sanhedrin 21a; BR 82.7; BaR 4.8; Shemuel 11, 79, and 22.111; Tehillim 59, 303; Tosefta-Targum and ps.-Jerome on 2 Sam. 3.5. All these sources agree on the identity of Eglah and Michal, but they differ as to the reason why the designation “little calf” was given to Michal; comp. Ginzberg, Haggadah bei den Kirchenv., 41–42. According to an unknown Midrash quoted by Kimhi, 2 Sam. 21.10, David also married (took as concubine?) Rizpah, whom he greatly admired for the reverence and devotion she displayed for Saul’s unlucky descendants; see Sam., loc. cit. Comp. also Yerushalmi Yebamot 3, 3d, which reads: David married Rizpah. On Rizpah’s noble deeds, see also Yerushalmi Kiddushin 4, 65c, and BaR 8.4.

132. Megillah 15a. This passage contains different views as to who were the most beautiful women. The unanimous opinion seems to be that there were only four women of perfect beauty, but there is no agreement on their identification. Sarah, Rachel, and Abigail are three of the undisputed beauties. As to the fourth, Esther, Vashti, Jael, and Michal are the competitors. Compare also footnote 24 on p. 59.

133. Sanhedrin 19b–20a. As to the legality of David’s marriage with Michal, or rather Michal’s second marriage to Palti, see footnote 80 on p. 901, and footnote 105 on p. 906. Palti, Michal’s second husband, is highly praised for his control of his passions; see Sanhedrin, loc. cit., and many other places; footnote 85 on p. 868. Obeying Saul’s command, he went through the ceremony of marriage with Michal, and as far as the outside world was concerned, they lived as a married couple; but he never came near her, knowing that she was David’s lawful wife. He placed a sword between her and himself, saying: “The one who will dare to do it (i. e., have conjugal relations) will be slain with this sword.” On the expression נעץ חרב בחרב, comp. also Shabbat 17a; Yebamot 77a. Accordingly there is not the slightest reason to assume, with Heller, R.E.J. XLIX, 190, that this legend is dependent on Indian sources. Comp. also Gaster, Exempla 242, col. 2. On the view that God was the witness to Palti’s continence (hence he is called Paltiel), see PRE 39; WR 23.10; ps.-Jerome 1 Sam. 25.44; footnote 85 on p. 868; Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 33–35 and 64. On the children of Merab, see Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 4.3, and ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 21.8. The latter shares the views of the Rabbis that Michal brought up her sister’s orphaned children, and this is why Scripture speaks of Michal as being their mother. As to the means employed by Michal to save David (1 Sam. 19, seq.), see Shemuel 22, 110–111; Tehillim 59, 303; Josephus, Antiqui., VI, 11.4. According to MHG I, 337, Michal boldly declared to her father that she enabled David to escape because she was convinced of his innocence.

134. Mekilta Bo 17, 21; ‘Erubin 96a; Yerushalmi Berakot 2, 4c; PR 22, 112b. With the exception of ‘Erubin, loc. cit., Michal is described in these sources as “the daughter of Cush”, which is another name for Saul, who was called Cush, “Ethiopian” (comp. Ps. 7.1), antiphrastically. Saul was distinguished for his beauty as the Ethiopian for his (dark) color; see Sifre N., 99; Sifre Z., 204 (here it is said: Distinguished for his looks and pious deeds); Mo’ed Katan 16b; Tehillim 7, 69, 70, 71–72 (this passage gives a different explanation of this designation of Cush); 2 ARN 43, 12; Targum and Ibn Ezra on Ps. 7.1. The legend about Michal using phylacteries is of midrashic origin. The last section of Prov. is said by the Haggadah to refer to the twenty-two pious women mentioned in the Bible (comp. MHG I, 344, seq.; Mishle 31; footnote 271 on p. 237), each of the twenty-two verses of this section containing the praise of each of these pious women. It was therefore quite natural for the Haggadah to find in verse 25 an allusion to Michal, of whom one might have rightly said: "And she rejoices at the last day" (this is the literal translation of the Hebrew), as it was in her very last day that she had the joy of motherhood (compare with p. 940). The first half of this verse reads: "Strength and dignity are her clothing." Now since in the Haggadah "strength" עֹז is equivalent to "phylacteries" (comp. Berakot 6a), it follows that the woman whose praise is sung in this verse (i. e., Michal) is lauded for having clothed herself with phylacteries. It should also be mentioned that תַּפְּלִין לִרְבוֹשׁ, which literally means "clothing oneself with phylacteries", is the technical expression in Palestinian sources for putting on phylacteries; comp. Yerush. Berakot 2, 4c.

135. Sanhedrin 21a. The narrative given in 2 Sam. 4.20, seq., was adorned with many legends by the Haggadah; comp. Yerushalmi Sukkah 5, 55c, and Sanhedrin 2, 20b; Shemuel 25, 124; BaR 4.20. The legend about Obed Edom in the last-named source is very old, see Berakot 63b–64a; Yerushalmi Yebamot 4.6b; 2 ARN 11, 27; Shir 2.5; ps.-Jerome, 2 Sam. 6.11. The reward of this pious Levite, who lit the lamp twice a day before the ark which had been placed in his house, consisted in his having been blessed with many children. The women in his house gave birth after a pregnancy of two months only, and bore six children at one time. Israel became now convinced that the ark, far from bringing misfortune, as they thought, upon those who are near it, was a source of blessing and good fortune. It is true the people at Beth-Shemesh (see text on p. 892) and Uzza (see text on pp. 922–923) were punished when they came near to the ark, but this was on account of not having shown due reverence to the holy ark. See Mekilta Wa-Yassa' 6, 52a–52b. On Obed-Edom see also Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 4.20.

136. Megillah 15a; Seder 'Olam 21. See also Mishnah Sanhedrin 2, 4, where Abigail is described as the highest ideal of the pious woman.

137. Megillah 14b; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20b, and 4, 22b; Shemuel 23, 116–117; Tehillim 53, 287–288. The expression הַלְכוּת הַלֹּחֶם in the three first-named sources is to be taken literally. On the conception of the "bright light" emanating from the body of persons (men as well as women) distinguished for their beauty, comp. Berakot 5b and Ketubot 65a. For further details concerning Nabal, see Tehillim, loc. cit., and 14, 113; text on p. 900. On Abigail's beauty, see note 132, and comp. further Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 13.6 and 8, who has many embellishments of this biblical story about her and Nabal her husband.

138. BHM III, 136.

139. Sanhedrin 21b; comp. text on p. 1037. On the similarity of Adonijah's and Absalom's characters which made both act in like manner, see Baba Batra 109b; Tehillim 2, 28; ps.-Jerome, 1 Kings 1.6.

140. Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 141, and in 'Aruk, s. v. כְּלָאב; Wa-Yekullu in Likkutim, II, 16a–17a; comp. also VI, 82b–83a; Tan. Toledot 6; Targum I Chron. 3.1. On the similar legend concerning the striking likeness of Isaac to Abraham, see text on p. 218.

141. Berakot 4a (the real name of this son of David's was Daniel); ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 3.1. This author remarks (2 Sam. 20.26) with reference to כְּהֲנִים in 2 Sam. 8.19 that some of David's sons were the masters of their brothers; but comp. Targum, ad loc.; Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 5.4 and note 78, beginning.

142. Derek Erez Zuta 1 (end), and parallel passages cited by Taw rogi. Comp. Index, s. v. "Paradise, Entering Alive into".

143. Sanhedrin 21b; Kiddushin 76b; ps.-Jerome 2 Sam. 13, 37; compare with p. 932. To prevent such misdeeds as the one committed by Ammon, David and his Synedrion ordained that even an unmarried woman must not be alone with a man; though the biblical law prohibits only a married woman to be alone with a man. See Sanhedrin 21a–21b and Excursus II, Reuben. The description of David's vanguard in rabbinic sources reminds one of that given by Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 7.3, of Solomon's guard.

HIS TOMB

When David was buried, Solomon put abundant treasures into his tomb. Thirteen hundred years later the high priest Hyrcanus took a thousand talents of the money secreted there to use it in preventing the siege of Jerusalem by the Greek king Antiochus. King Herod also abstracted great sums. But none of the marauders could penetrate to the resting-place of the kings,—next to David his successors were interred,—for it was sunk into the earth so skillfully that it could not be found.<sup>144</sup>

Once on a time, a Moslem pasha visited the mausoleum, and as he was looking through the window in it, a weapon of his ornamented with diamonds and pearls dropped into the tomb. A Mohammedan was lowered through the window to fetch the weapon. When he was drawn up again, he was dead, and three other Mohammedans who tried to enter in the same way met the fate of their comrade. At the instigation of the kadi, the pasha informed the Rabbi of Jerusalem that the Jews would be held responsible for the restoration of the weapon. The Rabbi ordered a three days' fast, to be spent in prayer. Then lots were cast to designate the messenger who was to be charged with the perilous errand. The lot fell upon the beadle of the synagogue, a pious and upright man. He secured the weapon, and returned it to the pasha, who manifested his gratitude by kindly treatment of the Jews thereafter. The beadle later told his adventures in the tomb to the Hakam Bashi. When he had descended, there suddenly appeared before him an old man of dignified appearance, and handed him what he was seeking.<sup>145</sup>

Another miraculous tale concerning the tomb of David runs as follows: A poor but very pious Jewish washerwoman was once persuaded by the keeper of the tomb to enter it. Hardly was she within, when the man nailed up the entrance, and ran to the kadi to inform him that a Jewess had gone in. Incensed, the kadi hastened to the spot, with the intention of having the woman burnt for her presumptuousness. In her terror the poor creature had begun to weep and implore God for help. Suddenly a flood of light illumined the dark tomb, and a venerable old man took her by the hand, and led her downward under the earth until she reached the open. There he parted from her with the words: "Hasten homeward, and let none know that thou wert away from thy house." The kadi had the tomb and its surroundings thoroughly searched by his bailiffs, but not a trace of the woman could be discovered, although the keeper again and again swore by the Prophet that the woman had entered. Now the messengers whom the kadi had sent to the house of the woman returned, and reported they had found her washing busily, and greatly astonished at their question, whether she had been at the tomb of David. The kadi accordingly decided that for his false statements and his perjury, the keeper must die the very death intended for the innocent woman, and so he was burnt. The people of Jerusalem suspected a miracle, but the woman did not divulge her secret until a few hours before her death. She told her story, and then bequeathed her possessions to the congregation, under the condition that a scholar recite Kadish for her on each anniversary of her death.<sup>146</sup>

---

144. Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 15.3. This statement of Josephus is quoted by Yahya in Shalshelet ha-Kabbalah, 16a (bottom; headed אחיה השלוני), with the following additions. Herod after having abstracted large sums from the cave where David's tomb was located, wished to enter the tomb itself, but fearing that some misfortune might befall him, ordered two young men to try it first. They were, however, destroyed by a fire that went forth from the tomb, and Herod who stood outside, watching them, fled for his life. To make atonement for the attempted sacrilege, Herod erected a beautiful monument over the tomb; nevertheless from that time on none of Herod's undertakings succeeded. Comp. also R. Benjamin of Tudela, 35 and Nallino, Tomba di Davide.

145. Sha'are Yerushalayim 47a–47b. The beadle of the synagogue (usually one of the poorest men of the congregation) as the most worthy member of the community, is also found in the legend given on p. 249.

146. Sha'are Yerushalayim 47b. Until David's time man's average span of life was much longer than in later generations. He died at the age of seventy years, and this came to be considered a good age; Yebamot 64b.—To David's heroic deeds we must add his victory over Lahmi, the brother of Goliath, both of whom he slew in one day; see Targum, Kimhi, and ps.-Rashi on 1 Chron. 20.5, as well as Targum 2 Sam. 21.19, and note 78, toward the beginning. See note 12.

XVI SOLOMON

SOLOMON PUNISHES JOAB

At the youthful age of twelve<sup>1</sup> Solomon succeeded his father David as king. His real name was Jedidiah, the “friend of God”, but it was superseded by the name Solomon on account of the peace that prevailed throughout the realm during his reign. He bore three other names besides: Ben, Jakeh, and Ithiel. He was called Ben because he was the builder of the Temple; Jakeh, because he was the ruler of the whole world; and Ithiel, because God was with him.<sup>2</sup>

The rebellion Adonijah intended to lead against the future king was suppressed during David’s lifetime, by having Solomon anointed in public. On that occasion Solomon rode upon a remarkable she-mule, remarkable because she was not the product of cross-breeding, but of a special act of creation.<sup>3</sup>

As soon as he ascended the throne, Solomon set about executing the instructions his father had given him on his death-bed. The first of them was the punishment of Joab.<sup>4</sup>

Notwithstanding all his excellent qualities, which fitted him to be not only David’s first general, but also the president of the Academy,<sup>5</sup> Joab had committed great crimes, which had to be atoned for. Beside the murder of Abner<sup>6</sup> and Amasa of which he was guilty, he had incurred wrong against David himself. The generals of the army suspected him of having had Uriah the Hittite put out of the way for purposes of his own, whereupon he showed them David’s letter dooming Uriah. David might have forgiven Joab, but he wanted him to expiate his sins in this world, so that he might be exempt from punishment in the world to come.<sup>7</sup>

When Joab perceived that Solomon intended to have him executed, he sought the protection of the Temple. He knew full well that he could not save his life in this way, for the arm of justice reaches beyond the doors of the sanctuary, to the altar of God. What he wished was to be accorded a regular trial, and not suffer death by the king’s order. In the latter case he would lose fortune as well as life, and he was desirous of leaving his children well provided for. Thereupon Solomon sent word to him that he had no intention of confiscating his estates.<sup>8</sup>

Though he was convinced of Joab’s guilt, Solomon nevertheless granted him the privilege of defense. The king questioned him: “Why didst thou kill Abner?”

Joab: “I was the avenger of my brother Asahel, whom Abner had slain.”

Solomon: "Why, it was Asahel who sought to kill Abner, and Abner acted in self-defense."

Joab: "Abner might have disabled Asahel without going to extremes."

Solomon: "That Abner could not do."

Joab: "What! Abner aimed directly at Asahel's fifth rib, and thou wouldst say he could not have managed to wound him lightly?"

Solomon: "Very well, then, we shall drop Abner's case. But why didst thou slay Amasa?"

Joab: "He acted rebelliously toward King David. He omitted to execute his order to gather an army within three days; for that offense he deserved to suffer the death penalty."

Solomon: "Amasa failed to obey the king's order, because he had been taught by our sages that even a king's injunctions may be set at defiance if they involve neglect of the study of the Torah, which was the case with the order given to Amasa. And, indeed," continued Solomon, "it was not Amasa but thou thyself who didst rebel against the king, for thou wert about to join Absalom, and if thou didst refrain, it was from fear of David's strong-fisted troops."<sup>9</sup>

When Joab saw that death was inevitable, he said to Benaiah, who was charged with the execution of the king's order: "Tell Solomon he cannot inflict two punishments upon me. If he expects to take my life, he must remove the curse pronounced by David against me and my descendants on account of the slaying of Abner. If not, he cannot put me to death." Solomon realized the justness of the plea. By executing Joab, he transferred David's curse to his own posterity: Rehoboam, his son, was afflicted with an issue; Uzziah suffered with leprosy; Asa had to lean on a staff when he walked; the pious Josiah fell by the sword of Pharaoh, and Jeconiah lived off charity. So the imprecations of David were accomplished on his own family instead of Joab's.<sup>10</sup>

---

1. Seder 'Olam 14. Comp. the parallels cited by Ratner, as well as Nazir 5a; Temurah 15a; Sanhedrin 69b; Targum Sheni 1.2 (which remarks: About thirteen years old, i. e., after having completed his twelfth year); Jerome, Epistola, 72, (22, 674); Eupolemus, 452. According to Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 7.8, Solomon ascended the throne at the age of fourteen, and reigned eighty years. The Masorah and Septuagint read "forty", and not "eighty", in 1 Kings 11.42.

2. Targum Sheni 1.2, 4; Shir 1.1 (here the real names are: Koheleth, Solomon, and Jedidiah, whereas Agur, Jakeh, Lemuel, and Ithiel are attributes); BaR 10.4; Mishle 30, 103–104; Tan. Wa-Era 5; Tan. B. II, 18; Yellammedenu in 'Aruk, s. v. אָגוּר; Koheleth 1.1; Jerome, Eccles. 1.1. Comp. also Ephraem, 2 Sam. 12.24–25, who remarks: He was later called Solomon because of the peace that prevailed during his reign. According to the Rabbis, Solomon is one of the names of God, and in Song of Songs God is designated by that name; comp. Shabbat 35b; Shir, loc. cit. On the view that Solomon received his name before he was born, see text on p. 122, and comp. further Tan. B. I, 21; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 4.2. On Ithiel, see footnote 13 on p. 856.

3. Yerushalmi Kil'ayim 8, 31c; Tosefta 5.7. According to Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 4.2, God revealed to David, before the birth of Solomon, that this son promised to him would succeed him as king and build the Temple; comp. 1 Chron. 22.9. A rabbinic legend tells us that after the death of Bath-Sheba's first child David swore unto her that her next child would be his successor; see ps.-Jerome, 1 Kings 1.17, and Kimhi, 2 Sam. 12.24. The anointing of Solomon served the purpose of counteracting Adonijah's claim to the throne, otherwise this move would not have been necessary, since Solomon succeeded to the throne by the law of inheritance; see Midrash Tannaim 106; Tosefta Sanhedrin 4.11; Horayot 11b. See footnote 371 on p. 657 and Index, s. v. "Anointing of Kings". The request made by Adonijah to be permitted to marry Abishag (1 Kings 2.13, seq.) clearly indicates that he still considered himself David's legitimate successor, as it is only the king who is allowed to make use of the servants of the deceased king. Solomon therefore ordered the execution of Adonijah for this attempt at rebellion. That David did not marry Abishag was not due to his advanced age and impotence, as some mockingly remarked to him, but to his respect for the law which does not permit a king to marry more than eighteen wives, and David already had that number. See Sanhedrin 22a.

4. On Joab's pious descendants, among whom were priests and prophets, see Targum 1 Chron. 2.54.

5. Yerushalmi Makkot 2, 31c; Tan. B. IV, 166. Compare footnote 76 on p. 924.

6. On this point see text on pp. 905–906. The people had suspected David of having conspired the death of Abner, but they became convinced of the king's innocence by the genuine grief which he expressed at Abner's funeral. It was fortunate for David that the people realized their error, otherwise they would have killed him in their rage against the murderer of Abner. The king, to show his respect for the dead hero, participated in the funeral, though, according to the law, a king must never be present at a funeral: see Sanhedrin, Mishnah 2.3; Tosefta 4.2; Babli 20a; Yerushalmi, 2, 20c. See footnote 275 on p. 304. In the last source it is said that David addressed first the men then the women, to convince them that Joab acted entirely without his knowledge. As to the suspicion against David, see also the references in the following note.

7. Tan. B. IV, 167; Tan. Mass'e 12; BaR 23.13.

8. Yerushalmi Makkot 2, 31a; Shemuel 35, 123. As to the question whether the sanctuary at Jerusalem offered asylum to criminals, and under what conditions, see also Babli Makkot 12a, and Mahzor Vitry 33. The latter made use of a version of Midrash Tehillim in which the trial of Joab was dealt with at full length; but our texts of this Midrash have preserved no reference to it; comp. also note 10.

9. Sanhedrin 49a; comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 1.5 and 11.7; text on pp. 905–906.

10. Sanhedrin 48b–49a; Jerushalmi Kiddushin 1.61a, Shemuel 25.123–124; Tan. B. IV, 167; Tan. Mass'e 12; BaR 23.13. A poetic description of Joab's tragic end, partly based on an unknown Midrash, is found in Mahzor Vitry 341–342; comp. also ibid. 331–332 (the commentary on the poem); see further note 8. In this poem Jacob first laments his innocent death, and then proceeds to ask Solomon and Israel to have pity on him. When, however, he saw that his pleadings were in vain, he called his son Joel, to give him his last message. He said to him: "Observe the Torah, educate thy (younger) brothers, and honor thy mother." Solomon first called upon his son Rehoboam to slay Joab, and in this way avenge the death of Absalom caused by Joab (see 2 Sam. 18.14–15); but Rehoboam could not muster enough courage for the deed, when he saw all Israel weep. Benaiah was therefore sent by the king to carry out this command instead of his hesitating son. When Joab saw him approach with his sword in his hand, he said: "Benaiah, Benaiah, attempt not what will end in a great disappointment (this is how לא תשנך רוחך is to be understood, and is not to be emended as done by the editor); my neck is strong and thy sword too weak, and thou canst not kill me." Joab, however, was mistaken. Benaiah succeeded in carrying out the king's command to the great consternation of Israel who out of fear of the king dared not give expression to the deep sorrow in their heart for the bitter end of Joab. As to the great loss sustained by Israel through Joab's death, see also Yerushalmi Makkot 2, 31a; Shemuel 25, 124. The high priest Abiathar was not slain by Solomon. The king merely removed him from his high position, and appointed Zadok to the office of high priest; see Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 1.4. According to the views of the Rabbis, Abiathar was removed from his office by David, on his flight from Absalom, when the Urim and Tummim refused to give answer to Abiathar; when Zadok succeeded in obtaining a response, he was appointed high priest; see Yoma 73b; Sotah 48b; Seder 'Olam 14. Zadok was the man best fitted for holding the office of high priest in his time, as his ancestor Aaron in his time. See Koheleth 1.1, and comp. also ps.-Jerome 1 Chron. 21.7, where Zadok is said to have been a second Aaron, and, like his great ancestor, had stopped a plague by his prayers. As to the anointing of Zadok, see footnote 371 on p. 657.

THE MARRIAGE OF SOLOMON

The next to suffer Joab's fate was Shimei ben Gera, whose treatment of David had outraged every feeling of decency. His death was of evil portent for Solomon himself. So long as Shimei, who was Solomon's teacher, was alive, he did not venture to marry the daughter of Pharaoh. When, after Shimei's death, Solomon took her to wife, the archangel Gabriel descended from heaven, and inserted a reed in the sea. About this reed more and more earth was gradually deposited, and, on the day on which Rehoboam erected the golden calves, a little hut was built upon the island. This was the first of the dwelling-places of Rome.<sup>11</sup>

Solomon's wedding-feast in celebration of his marriage with the Egyptian princess came on the same day as the consecration of the Temple.<sup>12</sup> The rejoicing over the king's marriage was greater than over the completion of the Temple. As the proverb has it: "All pay flattery to a king." Then it was that God conceived the plan of destroying Jerusalem. It was as the prophet spoke: "This city hath been to me a provocation of mine anger and of my fury from the day that they built it even unto this day."

In the nuptial night Pharaoh's daughter had her attendants play upon a thousand different musical instruments, which she had brought with her from her home, and as each was used, the name of the idol to which it was dedicated was mentioned aloud. The better to hold the king under the spell of her charms, she spread above his bed a tapestry cover studded with diamonds and pearls, which gleamed and glittered like constellations in the sky. Whenever Solomon wanted to rise, he saw these stars, and thinking it was night still, he slept on until the fourth hour of the morning. The people were plunged in grief, for the daily sacrifice could not be brought on this very morning of the Temple dedication, because the Temple keys lay under Solomon's pillow, and none dared awaken him. Word was sent to Bath-sheba, who forthwith aroused her son, and rebuked him for his sloth. "Thy father", she said, "was known to all as a God-fearing man, and now people will say, 'Solomon is the son of Bath-sheba, it is his mother's fault if he goes wrong.' Whenever thy father's wives were pregnant, they offered vows and prayed that a son worthy to reign might be born unto them. But my prayer was for a learned son worthy of the gift of prophecy. Take care, 'give not thy strength unto women nor thy ways to them that destroy kings,' for licentiousness confounds the reason of man. Keep well in mind the things that are necessary in the life of a king.<sup>13</sup> 'Not kings, Lemuel.' Have naught in common with kings who say: 'What need have we of a God?' It is not meet that thou shouldst do like the kings who drink wine and live in lewdness. Be not like unto them. He to whom the secrets of the world are revealed,<sup>14</sup> should not intoxicate himself with wine."<sup>15</sup>

Apart from having married a Gentile, whose conversion to Judaism was not dictated by pure motives, Solomon transgressed two other Biblical laws. He kept many horses, which a Jewish king ought not to do, and, what the law holds in equal abhorrence, he amassed much silver and gold. Under Solomon's rule silver and gold were so abundant among the people that their utensils were made of them instead of the baser metals.<sup>16</sup> For all this he had to atone painfully later on.

---

11. Berakot 8a; Tosefta-Targum 1 Kings 2.36 and 3.1; comp. vol. IV, pp. 381–382. As to the insults heaped by Shimei on David, and the reconciliation of these two men, see Tehillim 3, 36–37; footnote 96 on p. 928. According to Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 5.1, Shimei was executed by Solomon for breaking the oath he had given to him. On death as a punishment for perjury or similar offences, see Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 135–137. Solomon slew Shimei by pronouncing God's Name upon him (compare with p. 486); Shimei sinned by the word of mouth, and his punishment, in accordance with his sin, was executed by a word. See Zohar II, 108. Comp. also ibid., 107b, where Berakot, loc. cit., and perhaps also Kimhi, 1 Kings 2.8, are made use of. That Nathan the prophet was Solomon's teacher, as maintained in Zohar, is found nowhere in rabbinic literature, nor are Septuagint and Vulgate, 2 Sam. 12.25, to be understood in that sense. On the view of ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 20.7, that Nathan is identical with Jonathan, David's nephew, who slew one of the Philistine giants (1 Chron. 20.7), see footnote 88 on p. 927. On the founding of Rome, see Shabbat 56b; Yeru-shalmi 'Abodah Zarah 1, 39c (here it is Michael who inserted the reed in the sea; compare footnote 8 on p. 9); Sifre D., 52; Shir 1.6. Comp. Grünbaum, Gesammelte Aufsätze, 169; Schlatter, Verkanntes Griechisch 64 and Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, s. v. "Abba Kolon". This Abba Kolon ("Father of Colony", or Abba Kalon, "father of shame"?) is said in Shir, loc. cit., to have made the settlement of Rome possible. The first settlers of Rome found that the huts collapsed as soon as built. Whereupon Abba Kolon said to them: "Unless ye mix water from the Euphrates with your mortar, nothing that ye build will stand." He then offered to supply such water, and for this purpose journeyed through the east as a cooper, and returned with water from the Euphrates in wine-casks. The builders poured this water into the mortar, and built new huts which did not collapse. Hence the proverb: "A city without Abba Kolon is not worthy of the name." The newly-built city was therefore called Babylonian Rome. On Babylon = Rome, see Rev. 14.8, 17.18, and the references to rabbinic literature in Ginzberg, Geonica, I, 29, note 1, as well as Hekalot, ed. Wertheimer, 32, 39, and Mahzor Vitry 520. The Babylonian myth about the origin of the city of Babylon (see King, Creation Tablets, 132) resembles the Jewish legend about the founding of Rome. Comp. also Zohar III, 251b–252a, and Nehemias מִכְתָּבֵי דָּוִד, 161.

12. Comp., however, Seder 'Olam 15, according to which Solomon's marriage with Pharaoh's daughter took place at the time when he started to build the Temple; hence the word of God (Jer. 32.31) that this city (Jerusalem, i. e., the Temple) has been to Him a provocation from the day that they built it. The first four years of Solomon's reign were the only ones during which he walked in the ways of the Lord; comp. also Niddah 70a and EZ 8, 185. The last passage reads: The first Temple existed four hundred and ten years, but Israel was free from idolatry for twenty years only. This number very likely refers to the twenty years of the reign of the pious king Josiah; comp. Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 302. According to Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 7.5, Solomon "fell into an error about the observance of the laws, when he made the images of the brazen oxen, which supported the brazen sea and the images of the lions about his own throne." The Rabbis, on the other hand, are far from blaming him for these images, and the images of the throne occupy a very important position in the rabbinic legend; compare with p. 968, seq.

13. Shabbat 56b; Sanhedrin 70b; Yelammedenu in 'Aruk, s. v. בִּטְנִי; Tan. Shemot 1; WR 12.5; BaR 10.4; Mishle 30, 107–108. לִמְחֹות in Prov. 31.3, is derived from חִיה "he lived". The warning against drunkenness on this occasion had its good reasons. Solomon had not touched any wine all the years he was engaged in building the Temple. To celebrate his marriage with Pharaoh's daughter, which took place on the day when the building of the Temple was completed, he changed his mode of life, and drank wine, with the effect that he was overpowered by a heavy sleep; see WR, loc. cit.—Bath-sheba is here, as elsewhere in the Haggadah, well spoken of, and is counted as one of the twenty-two virtuous women, whose praise is sung in the last chapter of Prov. Comp. Mishle, 31, 112, and MHG I, 337. Compare footnote 271 on p. 237. In the latter source it is maintained that she had, by means of the holy spirit, foreseen that her son would be the wisest of men.

14. רוֹזְנִים in Prov. 31.4, is connected with the Aramaic רִז "a secret". The secret refers to the secret lore of the Torah.

15. BaR 10.4. Comp. also Sanhedrin 70b; WR 12.5, and the references given at the beginning of note 13.

16. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20c; PK 27, 169a; Tan. B. III, 55; Tan. Ahare 1; Shir 1.1 (י); Koheleth 2.2. Wealth came to Solomon in a miraculous way. God commanded the sea to cast up all the valuable things that had ever been thrown into it; see Tub ha-Arez, 37c. As soon as Solomon married Pharaoh's daughter, his wealth began to diminish, though he remained very rich all his life; Niddah 70b.

With regard to the foreign women whom he married, the following views are found: 1) He married women belonging to the nations with which it is forbidden to enter into marriage relations (the so-called "seven nations") even when converted to Judaism; 2) he did not marry the foreign women, but had illicit relations with them; 3) the women he married were converts to Judaism, but as their conversion was not prompted by love for God, they did not observe the commandments of the Torah, and particularly neglected those which are incumbent on married women, and yet Solomon did not remonstrate with them; 4) he married those women to convert them to Judaism; but though his intentions were good, he is blamed for having done it, as one should not take a wife without being certain of her piety and virtue. Comp. the sources cited at the beginning of the note, and further Seder 'Olam 15; Yebamot 76a; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 7.5. Kimhi, 1 Kings 3,3, quotes from an unknown midrashic source the view that the biblical prohibition against intermarriage with Egyptians refers only to the marriage of Egyptian males and Jewish females, but not vice versa; comp. Index, s. v. "Moabite Women". The difference of opinion concerning Solomon's marriages reflects not only the difference in estimating Solomon's character (comp. note 59), but also in the attitude toward intermarriage. Solomon's favorite wife was Pharaoh's daughter, whom he loved as much as all the others put together. But she led him astray, and made him commit as many sins as all the others put together. See Sifre D., 52, and Midrash Tannaim 45; the sources quoted at the beginning of the note refer also to the sin of Solomon in marrying a multitude of wives; compare footnote 81 and note 40 on pp. 864–865.

HIS WISDOM

But Solomon's wealth and pomp were as naught in comparison with his wisdom. When God appeared to him in Gibeon, in a dream by night, and gave him leave to ask what he would,—a grace accorded to none beside except King Ahaz of Judah, and promised only to the Messiah in time to come,<sup>17</sup>—Solomon chose wisdom, knowing that wisdom once in his possession, all else would come of itself.<sup>18</sup> His wisdom, the Scriptures testify, was greater than the wisdom of Ethan the Ezrahite, and Heman, and Calcol, and Darda, the three sons of Mahol.

This means that he was wiser than Abraham,<sup>19</sup> Moses,<sup>20</sup> Joseph,<sup>21</sup> and the generation of the desert.<sup>22</sup> He excelled even Adam.<sup>23</sup> His proverbs which have come down to us are barely eight hundred in number. Nevertheless the Scripture counts them equal to three thousand, for the reason that each verse in his book admits of a double and a triple interpretation. In his wisdom he analyzed the laws revealed to Moses, and he assigned reasons for the ritual and ceremonial ordinances of the Torah, which without his explanation had seemed strange.<sup>24</sup> The "forty-nine gates of wisdom" were open to Solomon as they had been to Moses, but the wise king sought to outdo even the wise legislator. He had such confidence in himself that he would have dispensed judgment without resort to witnesses, had he not been prevented by a heavenly voice.<sup>25</sup>

The first proof of his wisdom was given in his verdict in the case of the child claimed by two mothers as their own. When the women presented their difficulty, the king said that God in His wisdom had foreseen that such a quarrel would arise, and therefore had created the organs of man in pairs, so that neither of the two parties to the dispute might be wronged. On hearing these words from the king, Solomon's counsellors lamented: "Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a youth." In a little while they realized the wisdom of the king, and then they exclaimed: "Happy art thou, O land, when thy king is a free man." The quarrel had of set purpose been brought on by God to the end that Solomon's wisdom might be made known. In reality the two litigants were not women at all, but spirits. That all doubt about the fairness of the verdict might be dispelled, a heavenly voice proclaimed: "This is the mother of the child."<sup>26</sup>

During the lifetime of David, when Solomon was still a lad, he had settled another difficult case in an equally brilliant way. A wealthy man had sent his son on a protracted business trip to Africa. On his return he found that his father had died in the meantime, and his treasures had passed into the possession of a crafty slave, who had succeeded in ridding himself of all the other slaves, or intimidating them. In vain the rightful heir urged his claim before King David. As he could not bring witnesses to testify for him, there was no way of dispossessing the slave, who likewise called himself the son of the deceased. The child Solomon heard the case, and he devised a method of arriving at the truth. He had the father's corpse exhumed, and he dyed one of the bones with the blood first of one of the claimants, and then of the other. The blood of the slave showed no affinity with the bone, while the blood of the true heir permeated it. So the real son secured his inheritance.<sup>27</sup>

After his accession to the throne, a peculiar quarrel among heirs was brought before Solomon for adjudication. Asmodeus, the king of demons, once said to Solomon: "Thou art the wisest of men, yet I shall show thee something thou hast never seen." Thereupon Asmodeus stuck his finger in the ground, and up came a double-headed man. He was one of the Cainites, who live underground, and are altogether different in nature and habit from the denizens of the upper world.<sup>28</sup> When the Cainite wanted to descend to his dwelling-place again, it appeared that he could not return thither. Not even Asmodeus could bring the thing about. So he remained on earth, took unto himself a wife, and begot seven sons, one of whom resembled his father in having two heads. When the Cainite died, a dispute broke out among his descendants as to how the property was to be divided. The double-headed son claimed two portions. Both Solomon and the Sanhedrin were at a loss; they could not discover a precedent to guide them. Then Solomon prayed to God: "O Lord of all, when Thou didst appear to me in Gibeon, and didst give me leave to ask a gift of Thee, I desired neither silver nor gold, but only wisdom, that I might be able to judge men in justice.”

God heard his prayer. When the sons of the Cainite again came before Solomon, he poured hot water on one of the heads of the double-headed monster, whereupon both heads flinched, and both mouths cried out: “We are dying, we are dying! We are but one, not two.” Solomon decided that the double-headed son was after all only a single being.<sup>29</sup>

On another occasion Solomon invented a lawsuit in order to elicit the truth in an involved case. Three men appeared before him, each of whom accused the others of theft. They had been travelling together, and, when the Sabbath approached, they halted and prepared to rest and sought a safe hiding-place for their money, for it is not allowed to carry money on one’s person on the Sabbath. They all three together secreted what they had in the same spot, and, when the Sabbath was over, they hastened thither, only to find that it had been stolen. It was clear one of the three must have been the thief, but which one?

Solomon said to them: “I know you to be experienced and thorough business men. I should like you to help me decide a suit which the king of Rome has submitted to me. In the Roman kingdom there lived a maiden and a youth, who promised each other under oath never to enter into a marriage without obtaining each other’s permission. The parents of the girl betrothed their daughter to a man whom she loved, but she refused to become his wife until the companion of her youth gave his consent. She took much gold and silver, and sought him out to bribe him. Setting aside his own love for the girl, he offered her and her lover his congratulations, and refused to accept the slightest return for the permission granted. On their homeward way the happy couple were surprised by an old highwayman, who was about to rob the young man of his bride and his money. The girl told the brigand the story of her life, closing with these words: ‘If a youth controlled his passion for me, how much more shouldst thou, an old man, be filled with fear of God, and let me go my way.’ Her words took effect. The aged highwayman laid hands neither on the girl nor on the money.

“Now,” Solomon continued to the three litigants, “I was asked to decide which of the three persons concerned acted most nobly, the girl, the youth, or the highwayman, and I should like to have your views upon the question.”

The first of the three said: “My praise is for the girl, who kept her oath so faithfully.” The second: “I should award the palm to the youth, who kept himself in check, and did not permit his passion to prevail.” The third said: “Commend me to the brigand, who kept his hands off the money, more especially as he would have been doing all that could be expected of him if he had surrendered the woman—he might have taken the money.”

The last answer sufficed to put Solomon on the right track. The man who was inspired with admiration of the virtues of the robber, probably was himself filled with greed of money. He had him cross-examined, and finally extorted a confession. He had committed the theft, and he designated the spot where he had hidden the money.<sup>30</sup>

Even animals submitted their controversies to Solomon’s wise judgment. A man with a jug of milk came upon a serpent wailing pitifully in a field. To the man’s question, the serpent replied that it was tortured with thirst. “And what art thou carrying in the jug?” asked the serpent. When it heard what it was, it begged for the milk, and promised to reward the man by showing him a hidden treasure. The man gave the milk to the serpent, and was then led to a great rock. “Under this rock”, said the serpent, “lies the treasure.” The man rolled the rock aside, and was about to take the treasure, when suddenly the serpent made a lunge at him, and coiled itself about his neck. “What meanest thou by such conduct?” exclaimed the man. “I am going to kill thee,” replied the serpent, “because thou art robbing me of all my money.” The man proposed that they put their case to King Solomon, and obtain his decision as to who was in the wrong. So they did. Solomon asked the serpent to state what it demanded of the man. “I want to kill him,” answered the serpent, “because the Scriptures command it, saying: ‘Thou shalt bruise the heel of man.’” Solomon said: “First release thy hold upon the man’s neck and descend; in court neither party to a lawsuit may enjoy an advantage over the other.” The serpent glided to the floor, and Solomon repeated his question, and received the same answer as before from the serpent. Then Solomon turned to the man and said: “To thee God’s command was to bruise the head of the serpent—do it!” And the man crushed the serpent’s head.<sup>31</sup>

Sometimes Solomon’s assertions and views, though they sprang from profound wisdom, seemed strange to the common run of men. In such cases, the wise king did not disdain to illustrate the correctness of his opinions. For instance, both the learned and the ignorant were stung into opposition by Solomon’s saying: “One man among a thousand have I found; but a virtuous woman among all those have I not found.” Solomon unhesitatingly pledged himself to prove that he was right. He had his attendants seek out a married couple enjoying a reputation for uprightness and virtue. The husband was cited before him, and Solomon told him that he had decided to appoint him to an exalted office. The king demanded only, as an earnest of his loyalty, that he murder his wife, so that he might be free to marry the king’s daughter, a spouse comporting with the dignity of his new station. With a heavy heart the man went home. His despair grew at sight of his fair wife and his little children. Though determined to do the king’s bidding, he still lacked courage to kill his wife while she was awake. He waited until she was tight asleep, but then the child enfolded in the mother’s arms rekindled his parental and conjugal affection, and he replaced his sword in its sheath, saying to himself: “And if the king were to offer me his whole realm, I would not murder my wife.” Thereupon he went to Solomon, and told him his final decision. A month later Solomon sent for the wife, and declared his love for her. He told her that their happiness could be consummated if she would but do away with her husband. Then she should be made the first wife in his harem. Solomon gave her a leaden sword which glittered as though fashioned of steel. The woman returned home resolved to put the sword to its appointed use. Not a quiver of her eyelids betrayed her sinister purpose. On the contrary, by caresses and tender words she sought to disarm any suspicion that might attach to her. In the night she arose, drew forth the sword, and proceeded to kill her husband. The leaden instrument naturally did no harm, except to awaken her husband, to whom she had to confess her evil intent. The next day both man and wife were summoned before the king, who thus convinced his counsellors of the truth of his conviction, that no dependence can be placed on woman.<sup>32</sup>

The fame of Solomon’s wisdom spread far and wide. Many entered the service of the king, in the hope of profiting by his wisdom. Three brothers had served under him for thirteen years, and, disappointed at not having learnt anything, they made up their minds to quit his service. Solomon gave them the alternative of receiving one hundred coins each, or being taught three wise saws. They decided to take the money. They had scarcely left the town when the youngest of the three, regardless of the protests of his two brothers, hastened back to Solomon and said to him: "My lord, I did not take service under thee to make money; I wanted to acquire wisdom. Pray, take back thy money, and teach me wisdom instead." Solomon thereupon imparted the following three rules of conduct to him: "When thou travellest abroad, set out on thy journey with the dawn and turn in for the night before darkness falls; do not cross a river that is swollen; and never betray a secret to a woman." The man quickly overtook his brothers, but he confided nothing to them of what he had learned from Solomon. They journeyed on together. At the approach of the ninth hour—three hours after noon—they reached a suitable spot in which to spend the night. The youngest brother, mindful of Solomon's advice, proposed that they stop there. The others taunted him with his stupidity, which, they said, he had begun to display when he carried his money back to Solomon. The two proceeded on their way, but the youngest arranged his quarters for the night. When darkness came on, and with it nipping cold, he was snug and comfortable, while his brothers were surprised by a snow storm, in which they perished. The following day he continued his journey, and on the road he found the dead bodies of his brothers. Having appropriated their money, he buried them, and went on. When he reached a river that was very much swollen, he bore Solomon's advice in mind, and delayed to cross until the flood subsided. While standing on the bank, he observed how some of the king's servants were attempting to ford the stream with beasts laden with gold, and how they were borne down by the flood. After the waters had abated, he crossed and appropriated the gold strapped to the drowned animals. When he returned home, wealthy and wise, he told nothing of what he had experienced even to his wife, who was very curious to find out where her husband had obtained his wealth. Finally, she plied him so closely with questions that Solomon's advice about confiding a secret to a woman was quite forgotten. Once, when his wife was quarrelling with him, she cried out: "Not enough that thou didst murder thy brothers, thou desirest to kill me, too." Thereupon he was charged with the murder of their husbands by his two sisters-in-law. He was tried, condemned to death, and escaped the hangman only when he told the king the story of his life, and was recognized as his former retainer. It was with reference to this man's adventures that Solomon said: "Acquire wisdom; she is better than gold and much fine gold."<sup>33</sup>

Another of his disciples had a similar experience. Annually a man came from a great distance to pay a visit to the wise king, and when he departed Solomon was in the habit of bestowing a gift upon him. Once the guest refused the gift, and asked the king to teach him the language of the birds and the animals instead. The king was ready to grant his request, but he did not fail to warn him first of the great danger connected with such knowledge. "If thou tellest others a word of what thou hearest from an animal," he said, "thou wilt surely suffer death; thy destruction is inevitable." Nothing daunted, the visitor persisted in his wish, and the king instructed him in the secret art.

Returned home, he overheard a conversation between his ox and his ass. The ass said: "Brother, how farest thou with these people?"

The ox: "As thou livest, brother, I pass day and night in hard and painful toil."

The ass: "I can give thee relief, brother. If thou wilt follow my advice, thou shalt live in comfort, and shalt rid thyself of all hard work."

The ox: "O brother, may thy heart be inclined toward me, to take pity on me and help me. I promise not to depart from thy advice to the right or the left."

The ass: "God knows, I am speaking to thee in the uprightness of my heart and the purity of my thoughts. My advice to thee is not to eat either straw or fodder this night. When our master notices it, he will suppose that thou art sick. He will put no burdensome work upon thee, and thou canst take a good rest. That is the way I did to-day."

The ox followed the advice of his companion. He touched none of the food thrown to him. The master, suspecting a ruse on the part of the ass, arose during the night, went to the stable, and watched the ass eat his fill from the manger belonging to the ox. He could not help laughing out loud, which greatly amazed his wife, who, of course, had noticed nothing out of the way. The master evaded her questions. Something ludicrous had just occurred to him, he said by way of explanation.

For the sly trick played upon the ox, he determined to punish the ass. He ordered the servant to let the ox rest for the day, and make the ass do the work of both animals. At evening the ass trudged into the stable tired and exhausted. The ox greeted him with the words: "Brother, hast thou heard aught of what our heartless masters purpose?" "Yes," replied the ass, "I heard them speak of having thee slaughtered, if thou shouldst refuse to eat this night, too. They want to make sure of thy flesh at least." Scarcely had the ox heard the words of the ass when he threw himself upon his food like a ravenous lion upon his prey. Not a speck did he leave behind, and the master was suddenly moved to uproarious laughter. This time his wife insisted upon knowing the cause. In vain she entreated and supplicated. She swore not to live with him any more if he did not tell her why he laughed. The man loved her so devotedly that he was ready to sacrifice his life to satisfy her whim, but before taking leave of this world he desired to see his friends and relations once more, and he invited them all to his house.

Meantime his dog was made aware of the master's approaching end, and such sadness took possession of the faithful beast that he touched neither food nor drink. The cock, on the other hand, gaily appropriated the food intended for the dog, and he and his wives enjoyed a banquet. Outraged by such unfeeling behavior, the dog said to the cock: "How great is thy impudence, and how insignificant thy modesty! Thy master is but a step from the grave, and thou eatest and makest merry." The cock's reply was: "Is it my fault if our master is a fool and an idiot? I have ten wives, and I rule them as I will. Not one dares oppose me and my commands. Our master has a single wife, and this one he cannot control and manage." "What ought our master to do?" asked the dog. "Let him take a heavy stick and belabor his wife's back thoroughly," advised the cock, "and I warrant thee, she won't plague him any more to reveal his secrets."

The husband had overheard this conversation, too, and the cock's advice seemed good. He followed it, and death was averted.<sup>34</sup>

On many occasions, Solomon brought his acumen and wisdom to bear upon foreign rulers who attempted to concoct mischief against him. Solomon needed help in building the Temple, and he wrote to Pharaoh, asking him to send artists to Jerusalem. Pharaoh complied with his request, but not honestly. He had his astrologers determine which of his men were destined to die within the year. These candidates for the grave he passed over to Solomon. The Jewish king was not slow to discover the trick played upon him. He immediately returned the men to Egypt, each provided with his grave clothes, and wrote: "To Pharaoh! I suppose thou hadst no shrouds for these people. Herewith I send thee the men, and what they were in need of."<sup>35</sup>

Hiram, king of Tyre, the steadfast friend of the dynasty of David, who had done Solomon such valuable services in connection with the building of the Temple, was desirous of testing his wisdom. He was in the habit of sending catch-questions and riddles to Solomon with the request that he solve them and help him out of his embarrassment about them. Solomon, of course, succeeded in answering them all. Later on he made an agreement with Hiram, that they were to exchange conundrums and riddles, and a money fine was to be exacted from the one of them who failed to find the proper answer to a question propounded by the other. Naturally it was Hiram who was always the loser. The Tyrians maintain that finally Solomon found more than his match in one of Hiram's subjects, one Abdamon, who put many a riddle to Solomon that baffled his wit.<sup>36</sup>

Of Solomon's subtlety in riddle guessing only a few instances have come down to us, all of them connected with riddles put to him by the Queen of Sheba.<sup>37</sup> The story of this queen, of her relation to Solomon, and what induced her to leave her distant home and journey to the court at Jerusalem forms an interesting chapter in the eventful life of the wise king.

17. BR 44.8; Aggadat Shir 1.5; Tehillim 2, 29; 12, 179; 119, 494; 2 ARN 43. According to the dissenting view given in these sources Abraham and Jacob shared this distinction with the three other men mentioned there.

18. PR 14, 59a; Shir 1.1 (ט). Solomon fasted forty days, that God should grant him wisdom, and as a reward for his modesty and humility his wish was fulfilled so that he became "the father of wisdom". See Mishle 1, 1, where אבי הנבואה "father of prophecy" is to be struck out as a copyist's error, who while writing of Solomon put down the title of Moses, who is often called the father of wisdom and the father of prophecy. Compare with p. 485, note 68 towards the end. Glowing descriptions of Solomon's wisdom are found in Ecclus, 47.13, seq.; Wisdom 7.15, seq.; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 2.5. According to the Hellenistic writers, Solomon's wisdom consisted in his great knowledge of science and philosophy. But for the Rabbis there is no other wisdom than the knowledge of the Torah, and accordingly, Solomon's great mastery of the Torah is praised; see references in note 24. He attempted to find not only the reasons of the divine commandments, but also the profound secret of divine retribution for the fulfilment of the commandments. He further attempted to discover the "end" (the time of the advent of the Messiah). See Tehillim, 9, 80–81. As to Solomon's wisdom, see also Shir 1.1; Koheleth 1.1 and 13; 'Erubin 21b; Shabbat 14b; Yebamot 21a. In the three last passages Solomon is said to have contributed a great deal to the further development of the Torah by his introducing new ordinances and ceremonies. The institution of the 'Erub and the ceremony of washing the hands before meals as well as the extension of the prohibited marriages (שניות לעריות), are attributed to him. When Alexander the Great conquered Jerusalem, he found there Solomon's books of wisdom which he gave to his teacher Aristotle, who drew all his knowledge from them. The wisdom of the Greeks is accordingly entirely dependent upon Solomon. See Derek Emunah 46b; Shalshet ha-Kabbalah 102b (שמעון הצדיק); Iggeret Ba'ale Hayyim 3.7; Ginzberg, Aristotle in Jewish Literature in Jewish Encyclopedia, s. v.

19. Jewish tradition identifies Ethan the Ezrahite (Ps. 89.1) with Abraham. Comp. Baba Batra 15a.

20. Heman, "the confidant" (of God), i. e., Moses; comp. Num. 12.7.

21. Calcol, "the giver of food", i. e., Joseph; comp. Genesis 47.12.

22. Dar-Da; "Dor" = "generation", and Da = "wisdom"; they are called "the sons of Mahol", that is, the "sons of pardon", because their sins were forgiven; compare with p. 592.

23. האדם (= man), in this verse, is taken to mean Adam.

24. PK 4, 33a–33b; PR 12, 59a–60b; Tan. B. IV, 109–112; Tan. Hukkat 6; BaR 19.3; Koheleth 7.23; Mishle 1, 39; Midrash Shir 23a; ps.-Jerome, 1 Kings 4.31–32. On the variants of this Haggadah in ps.-Jerome, see Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 73. On the three thousand parables of Solomon, see also 'Erubin 21a; Shir 1.1; text on p. 927, and Ginzberg, ibid., 74. As Solomon excelled all Israel in wisdom, even so did he excel all the wisest men among other nations, the dwellers in the east, who were renowned for their wisdom (on these, see also Yerushalmi Shabbat 12, 13d, towards the end), the Egyptians, who were famous as masters of astrology and magic. In his great wisdom Solomon was not only able to supplement the wise words of his father David, but sometimes also to correct them, and accordingly the views expressed in the Book of Proverbs are not always in harmony with those of the Book of Psalms, notwithstanding the great reverence Solomon had for his father, to whose glorification he devoted his entire life. See Mishle 1, 42, 43; 15, 79; Shir 1.6 (here the parallels between the lives of David and Solomon are dwelled upon) and 1.10; Baba Batra 10b. To the opinions wherein David and Solomon differed belongs also this: the former holds that the heart (=feeling and will) is the seat of wisdom, whereas the latter declares that the head (intellect) generates wisdom. See Mishle 1, 42, and the Mohammedan legend in Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, 66, who, strangely enough, did not see the dependence of this legend on the rabbinic Midrash, comp. note 27 (middle). On Solomon's literary products, see note 93.

25. Rosh ha-Shanah 21b. According to another version, Solomon's wisdom was in one respect akin to the divine wisdom; like God he could give judgment without the evidence of witnesses, for he penetrated into the secrets of man's thoughts. See Tehillim 72, 324 (with regard to Solomon's decision in the case of the two women); Targum Shir 1.2, followed by Zohar II, 78a; Shir 1.1; ShR 15.26; Wisdom 7.20. As to the "forty-nine gates of wisdom", which were open to Moses and Solomon (according to one view in Rosh ha-Shanah, loc. cit., however, the former only had that privilege), see the numerous passages containing the Haggadah that each statement of the Torah admits of forty-nine correct interpretations ("and as many incorrect ones" in PR 21.101a is a later addition). Comp. PR 14, 58a–58b, 60b, and 21, 101a; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 4, 22a; Ekah, introduction, XXIII, 20; PK 4, 31a–31b; Soferim 16.6; 'Erubin 13b. The reading "sixty gates of wisdom" in Hinnukh, No. 152 is very likely a copyist's error. A different Haggada is given in Alphabet of R. Akiba 16, according to which no less than five thousand gates of wisdom, eight thousand gates of understanding, and eleven thousand gates of knowledge were opened to Moses on Sinai. These numbers correspond to the number of the books of the Bible multiplied by a thousand. This Scripture consists of the five books of Moses, eight of the prophets (the Minor Prophets are counted as one book), and eleven of the Hagiographa (counting Ezra and Nehemiah as one book; see Baba Batra 14b; Sanhedrin 93b). See also Norzi, Num. 28.5.

26. Tehillim 72, 324–325; Shir 1. 1,10; Koheleth 1.1; Makkot 23b; BR 85.12; Yalkut Reubeni on Gen. 4.8, which reads: These female spirits were Lilith and Naamah. It is hardly admissible to assume dependence upon the similar Indian legend (comp. Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, 52–53). This Haggadah very likely has its origin in the quite natural supposition that no woman, and particularly no mother, would have a child killed to satisfy a grudge. Comp. Shu'aib, Shekalim, 34c. Tehillim, loc. cit., has the fine remark that the Bible, in describing the procedure in Solomon's court, is employing forensic style, and therefore 1 Kings 3.23 is not superfluous, as it is the duty of the judge to sum up the claims of the litigants before rendering his decision.

27. BHM IV, 145–146; Hibbur Ma'as. No. 10; Ha-sidim 91, where the wise judge is R. Sa'adya Gaon. On the widespread legend concerning the test of kinship, see Steinschneider, Hebräische Bibliographie, XIII, 133, and XVIII, 39; Kohut, Journal of American Oriental Society, XXIX, 84–85; Davidson, Sepher Sha'ashuim, LXII; Gaster, Exempla No. 391; Gaston Paris, R. E. J. XI, 7. The legend in vol. IV, pp. 88–85, about young David's discovery of the thief very likely belongs to the cycle of legends clustering around Solomon, a copyist erroneously putting the name of the father instead that of the son. Comp. Steinschneider, op. cit. XVIII, 40; Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, 57; note 8; footnote 26 on p. 914. The legend is very fond of showing the great wisdom of the youth Solomon, who even then often overruled the seemingly just decisions of his father David. A poor servant of David once borrowed an egg with the promise to return all that might come from it. When his creditor insisted upon the fulfilment of the promise, David, before whom the case was tried, condemned him to an enormous amount of money, in view of the fact that from the egg a chicken could be hatched which would lay eighteen eggs, from which eighteen chickens could be hatched, each of which would lay eighteen eggs, etc. On the advice of Solomon the debtor sowed boiled peas, and when seen by David and asked how he could expect these to grow, he replied: How can a boiled egg be hatched and produce chickens? David had neglected to find out before giving judgment whether the egg borrowed was boiled or not. Levi, R.E.J. XXXIII, 65 seq. Gaster, Exempla, Nos. 329 and 342. Seymour, Tales of King Solomon, 18 seq., gives a considerable number of legends all of which have the same aim, to show the superiority of Solomon's wisdom to that of his father. The earlier Jewish literature hardly knows of this rivalry between father and son, though we find there some remarks to the effect that certain views expressed by Solomon in his writings do not always agree with those of his father, comp. Shabbat 30a and note 24. Some of these legends however, contain old material. Comp. e. g. the tale about the treasure (Seymour 18–19) which belongs to the circle of Alexander legends, compare footnote 35 on p. 1034. Great as was Solomon's wisdom, he nevertheless was not free from human limitations. Once a poor man was carrying a sack of flour in his hand when a wind came and blew it into the sea. He complained to David about the wind, but all that the King could do was to make his loss good and send him home. Solomon, however, was not satisfied with his father's action in this matter and insisted on calling the wind to justice and David finally yielded to the wish of his son. He conjured the spirit of the wind and asked him to explain why he had blown the poor man's flour into the sea. The answer was as follows: a ship, on high sea with many people on board had sprung a leak and was on the point of foundering; the flour, however, stopped the leak and all were saved. A few days later the ship came into port and they gave the poor man a third of their possessions which they had vowed as a thank-offering; Gaster, Exempla, No. 444; Jacob Saphir אבן ספיר I, 26 seq.; Seymour, Tales of King Solomon 18.

28. On the dwelling-place of the Cainites, see text on p. 110.

29. Hibbur ha-Ma'asiyyot, No 11; BHM IV, 151–152; Ma'asiyyot (Gaster's edition), 113, 75; Al-Barceloni, 173; Mordecai, Tefillin, who gives PRE as his source. See Gaster, Exempla, No. 113; Steinschneider, Hebräische Bibliographie, XVIII, 16, and Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, 58.

30. Rabbenu Nissim 38; Midrash 'Aseret ha-Debarim in Hibbur ha-Ma'asiyyot (eighth commandment) and BHM I, 86–87; Ma'asiyyot ed. Gaster 73–75; Baraita de-Yeshua (end); Hegyon ha-Nefesh, 10a. Comp. Steinschneider, Hebräische Bibliographie, XVIII, 40. The legend given in BHM ibid. 87–88, and Hibbur Ma'asiyyot (third commandment) concerning the thief who betrayed himself is brought into relation with Solomon in the version thereof in the Constantinople edition of משלים של שלמה. This legend is as follows: A man arriving in a strange place shortly before the beginning of the Sabbath, hastened to bury the money he had with him, as it is forbidden to carry about any money on the day of rest. For he had no friend in that place to whom he could entrust his purse. At the termination of the Sabbath he went to get his money, but it was not there; his host had watched him on the previous day, and stole the purse. The stranger suspected his host, but having no evidence, he thought it best to ask the wise Solomon for advice, and he did not regret it. On the king's advice, he went up to his host, and told him that he had lately buried a large sum of money for safety, but having retained a still greater sum on his person, he would like to be advised whether he should put it in the same place as the other sum, or should entrust it to somebody. The dishonest host, greedy for the stranger's money, advised him to bury the larger sum in the same place, and hastened to replace the stolen money so that the owner should add more thereto. The latter, however, joyfully took his money and went his way. Comp. Steinschneider, op. cit. XIII, 129, seq. Gaster, Exempla, No. 111.

31. Tan. B. Introduction, 157, and in a very elaborate form, Ma'asch-Buch, No. 144. Comp. Gaster, Exempla, Nos. 441a–441b. On the view that the serpent knew the place of the hidden treasures, see text on p. 71.

32. Rabbenu Nissim 14; Meshalim No. 3; BHM IV, 146–147; Zabara, Sepher Sha'ashuim, Davidson's edition, XLIX–XXLII; Gaster Exempla Nos. 328, 401. Another legend illustrating the truth or Solomon's words, "a woman, etc." (Eccles. 7.28) is given in Meshalim, No. 2, and BHM

IV, 146; but this source does not attribute any part in it to the wise king. On the other hand he plays a very important part in the following two legends. Once Solomon had to make use of his knowledge of magic to convince people of the truth of his words against women. Once he warned a man against the faithlessness of his wife, but the latter did not believe him. Solomon gave him as a present a silver goblet, which the man took home. The paramour of his wife came, saw the goblet and asked the woman to drink out of it together with him. They did so and their lips remained attached to the goblet. When brought before Solomon, the wise king said: "The spell can only be broken if their heads be pierced with red hot iron. The wronged husband pleaded, however, for the culprits. Solomon took David's sword (compare footnote 59, end, on p. 921) on which was engraved the Name, poured water over it and sprinkled their faces with this water. They were thus released. Others say that two scholars passed a scroll of the Torah between them which released them; Gaster, Exempla 351a. The variant of this legend (No. 351b) in which Bath-sheba is introduced, to illustrate the wickedness of women, has some relation to that given by Seymour, Tales of King Solomon, 14–15. Here it is told that the mother of Solomon decided to kill him because of his slighting remark about women made by him while still an infant of three years, when he said that "a woman's soul is not as heavy as a handful of chips of wood."

33. Meshalim No. 4; BHM IV, 148–150; Gaster, Exempla No. 402. Comp. Steinschneider, Hebräische Bibliographie, XVIII, 39–40. As to the three rules of conduct imparted by Solomon to his disciple, see text on pp. 381 and p. 390, where the first one is referred to; the second is a verbal variant of the proverb: "he who throws himself against a wave is overthrown by it" (comp. BR 14.15); the third is found verbatim in Musar Haskel beginning (Steinschneider's edition), and comp. also Eccles. 7.26, according to the Greek. On hundred as a round number see footnote 316 on p. 320, and comp. also Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 4, 22b (middle of column).

34. Ben ha-Melek we-ha-Nazir, XXIV, and in abridged form in Prym and Socin, Der Dialekt des Tur Abdin, LXVI. There are several versions of this legend, in some of which Solomon does not play any part. Comp. Gaster Exempla, Nos. 381, 449; Neuhoﬀ, Afrikanische Märchen 51; footnote 190 on pp. 42–43. The conception that he who knows the language of animals must keep it secret at the peril of his life seems to be presupposed also in the Arabic legend given by Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, 60. The view that Solomon understood the languages of all animals is based upon 1 Kings 5.13, and is often referred to in the midrashic literature; comp. Shir. 1.1; Koheleth 1.11 (here an attempt is made to rationalize the popular belief. Comp. also Tan. B. IV, 112 top, and parallel passages cited by Buber); Targum Shenì 1.2, 5. Solomon's knowledge of the languages of the animals plays an important part in Mohammedan legends; see footnote 58 on p. 69. The following legend given by Sabba', Wa-Yeze, 33b, is very likely of Mohammedan origin: Solomon once overheard a male bird say to his mate: "If thou desirest it, I shall forthwith destroy the throne upon which Solomon sits." Astonished at its impudence, the wise king had this bird appear before him, and asked it to explain what it meant by these boasting words. The bird replied: "O Solomon, where is thy wisdom? Knowest thou not that one utters foolish things to gain the admiration of the woman one loves?" A similar tale is found in Hanauer, Folklore of Holy Land 48.

35. PK 4, 34a; PR 12, 59b; Tan. B. IV, 110; Tan. Hukkat 6; BaR 19.3.

36. Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 5.3. The correspondence between the two kings is given by Josephus, op cit., VIII, 2.6–7, and by Eupolemus, 448–449, in a very lengthy form, whereas Scripture only refers to it in a few words. Eupolemus, 451, speaks of a golden pillar which Solomon presented to Hiram, and which the latter dedicated to Zeus; comp. Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 5.3. Another legend relates that Hiram fashioned his daughter's statue of the gold which Solomon presented to him; comp. Theophilus in Eusebius, Praep. Evang., 452. This is also to be supplemented by the legend that Solomon married Hiram's daughter; see Clemens Alexandrinus, Stromata, 1.21. In the kabbalistic literature the legend concerning the rivalry between Solomon and Hiram in solving riddles is connected with the Hiram legend given in text on pp. 1104–1105; comp. Zohar II, 159a, and II, 61a; Sabba', Tezaw-weh, 84, and wa-Ethanan, 134a. As to the possessions given by Solomon to Hiram (1 Kings 9.13), see Shabbat 54a, where several opinions are given why the king of Tyre was dissatisfied with the gift. According to one view, the inhabitants of these cities "were laden with gold and silver", so that Hiram apprehended that they would not be willing to engage in warlike expeditions; see also Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 5.3.

37. In Baba Batra 15b an opinion is quoted that a "queen of Sheba" never existed, and that the expression מַלְכַּת שְׁבָא means "dominion of Sheba" (מְלִכְתָּ). This statement very likely refers to Job. 1.15, where the Rabbis seem to have read מַלְכַּת שְׁבָא; comp. Targum, ad loc. See, however, MHG I, 379; footnote 311 on p. 243; Schechter in Folk-Lore, 1890, pp. 350–351.

THE QUEEN OF SHEBA

Solomon, it must be remembered, bore rule not only over men, but also over the beasts of the field, the birds of the air, demons, spirits, and the spectres of the night. He knew the language of all of them and they understood his language.<sup>38</sup>

When Solomon was of good cheer by reason of wine, he summoned the beasts of the field, the birds of the air, the creeping reptiles, the shades, the spectres, and the ghosts, to perform their dances before the kings, his neighbors, whom he invited to witness his power and greatness. The king's scribes called the animals and the spirits by name, one by one, and they all assembled of their own accord, without fetters or bonds, with no human hand to guide them.

On one occasion the hoopoe<sup>39</sup> was missed from among the birds. He could not be found anywhere. The king, full of wrath, ordered him to be produced and chastised for his tardiness. The hoopoe appeared and said: "O lord, king of the world, incline thine ear and hearken to my words. Three months have gone by since I began to take counsel with myself and resolve upon a course of action. I have eaten no food and drunk no water, in order to fly about in the whole world and see whether there is a domain anywhere which is not subject to my lord the king.<sup>40</sup> And I found a city, the city of Kitor, in the East. Dust is more valuable than gold there, and silver is like the mud of the streets. Its trees are from the beginning of all time, and they suck up water that flows from the Garden of Eden. The city is crowded with men. On their heads they wear garlands wreathed in Paradise. They know not how to fight, nor how to shoot with bow and arrow. Their ruler is a woman, she is called the Queen of Sheba. If, now, it please thee, O lord and king, I shall gird my loins like a hero, and journey to the city of Kitor in the land of Sheba. Its kings I shall fetter with chains and its rulers with iron bands, and bring them all before my lord the king."

The hoopoe's speech pleased the king. The clerks of his land were summoned, and they wrote a letter and bound it to the hoopoe's wing. The bird rose skyward, uttered his cry, and flew away, followed by all the other birds.

And they came to Kitor in the land of Sheba. It was morning, and the queen had gone forth to pay worship to the sun. Suddenly the birds darkened his light. The queen raised her hand, and rent her garment, and was sore astonished. Then the hoopoe alighted near her. Seeing that a letter was tied to his wing, she loosed it and read it. And what was written in the letter? "From me, King Solomon! Peace be with thee, peace with the nobles of thy realm! Know that God has appointed me king over the beasts of the field, the birds of the air, the demons, the spirits, and the spectres. All the kings of the East and the West come to bring me greetings. If thou wilt come and salute me, I shall show thee great honor, more than to any of the kings that attend me. But if thou wilt not pay homage to me, I shall send out kings, legions, and riders against thee. Thou askest, who are these kings, legions, and riders of King Solomon? The beasts of the field are my kings, the birds my riders, the demons, spirits, and shades of the night my legions. The demons will throttle you in your beds at night, while the beasts will slay you in the field, and the birds will consume your flesh."

When the Queen of Sheba had read the contents of the letter, she again rent her garment, and sent word to her elders and her princes: "Know you not what Solomon has written to me?" They answered: "We know nothing of King Solomon, and his dominion we regard as naught." But their words did not reassure the queen. She assembled all the ships of the sea, and loaded them with the finest kinds of wood, and with pearls and precious stones. Together with these she sent Solomon six thousand youths and maidens, born in the same year, in the same month, on the same day, in the same hour—all of equal stature and size, all clothed in purple garments. They bore a letter to King Solomon as follows: "From the city of Kitor to the land of Israel is a journey of seven years. As it is thy wish and behest that I visit thee, I shall hasten and be in Jerusalem at the end of three years."

When the time of her arrival drew nigh, Solomon sent Benaiah the son of Jehoiada to meet her. Benaiah was like unto the flush in the eastern sky at break of day, like unto the evening star that outshines all other stars, like unto the lily growing by brooks of water. When the queen caught sight of him, she descended from her chariot to do him honor. Benaiah asked her why she left her chariot. "Art thou not King Solomon?" she questioned in turn. Benaiah replied: "Not King Solomon am I, only one of his servants that stand in his presence." Thereupon the queen turned to her nobles and said: "If you have not beheld the lion, at least you have seen his lair, and if you have not beheld King Solomon, at least you have seen the beauty of him that stands in his presence."

Benaiah conducted the queen to Solomon, who had gone to sit in a house of glass to receive her. The queen was deceived by an illusion. She thought the king was sitting in water, and as she stepped across to him she raised her garment to keep it dry. On her bared feet the king noticed hair, and he said to her: "Thy beauty is the beauty of a woman, but thy hair is masculine; hair is an ornament to a man, but it disfigures a woman."<sup>41</sup>

Then the queen began and said:<sup>42</sup> "I have heard of thee and thy wisdom; if now I inquire of thee concerning a matter, wilt thou answer me?" He replied: "The Lord giveth wisdom, out of His mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." She then said to him:

1. "Seven there are that issue and nine that enter; two yield the draught and one drinks."

Said he to her: "Seven are the days of a woman's defilement, and nine the months of pregnancy; two are the breasts that yield the draught, and one the child that drinks it." Whereupon she said to him: "Thou art wise."

2. Then she questioned him further: "A woman said to her son, thy father is my father, and thy grandfather my husband; thou art my son, and I am thy sister." "Assuredly," said he, "it was the daughter of Lot who spake thus to her son."

3. She placed a number of males and females of the same stature and garb before him and said: "Distinguish between them." Forthwith he made a sign to the eunuchs, who brought him a quantity of nuts and roasted ears of corn. The males, who were not bashful, seized them with bare hands; the females took them, putting forth their gloved hands from beneath their garments. Whereupon he exclaimed: "Those are the males, these the females."

4. She brought a number of men to him, some circumcised and others uncircumcised, and asked him to distinguish between them. He immediately made a sign to the high priest, who opened the Ark of the covenant, whereupon those that were circumcised bowed their bodies to half their height, while their countenances were filled with the radiance of the Shekinah; the uncircumcised fell prone upon their faces. "Those", said he, "are circumcised, these uncircumcised."<sup>43</sup> "Thou art wise, indeed," she exclaimed.

5. She put other questions to him, to all of which he gave replies. "Who is he who neither was born nor has died?" "It is the Lord of the world, blessed be He."

6. "What land is that which has but once seen the sun?" "The land upon which, after the creation, the waters were gathered, and the bed of the Red Sea on the day when it was divided."

7. "There is an enclosure with ten doors, when one is open, nine are shut; when nine are open, one is shut?" "That enclosure is the womb; the ten doors are the ten orifices of man—his eyes, ears, nostrils, mouth, the apertures for the discharge of the excreta and the urine, and the navel; when the child is in the embryonic state, the navel is open and the other orifices are closed, but when it issues from the womb, the navel is closed and the others are opened."

8. "There is something which when living moves not, yet when its head is cut off it moves?" "It is the ship in the sea."<sup>44</sup>

9. "Which are the three that neither ate, nor did they drink, nor did they have bread put into them, yet they saved lives from death?" "The signet, the cord, and the staff are those three."

10. "Three entered a cave and five came forth therefrom?" "Lot and his two daughters and their two children."

11. "The dead lived, the grave moved, and the dead prayed: what is that?" "The dead that lived and prayed, Jonah; and the fish, the moving grave."

12. "Who were the three that ate and drank on the earth, and yet were not born of male and female?" "The three angels who visited Abraham."<sup>45</sup>

13. "Four entered a place of death and came forth alive, and two entered a place of life and came forth dead?" "The four were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, and the two were Nadab and Abihu."

14. "Who was he that was born and died not?" "Elijah and the Messiah."

15. "What was that which was not born, yet life was given to it?" "The golden calf."

16. "What is that which is produced from the ground, yet man produces it, while its food is the fruit of the ground?" "A wick."

17. "A woman was wedded to two, and bore two sons, yet these four had one father?" "Tamar."

18. "A house full of dead; no dead one came among them, nor did a living come forth from them?" "It is the story of Samson and the Philistines."

19. The queen next ordered the sawn trunk of a cedar tree to be brought, and she asked Solomon to point out at which end the root had been and at which the branches. He bade her cast it into the water, when one end sank and the other floated upon the surface of the water. That part which sank was the root, and that which remained uppermost was the branch end. Then she said to him: "Thou exceedest in wisdom and goodness the fame which I heard, blessed be thy God!"<sup>46</sup>

The last three riddles which the Queen of Sheba put to Solomon were the following:

20. "What is this? A wooden well with iron buckets, which draw stones and pour out water." The king replied: "A rouge-tube."

21. "What is this? It comes as dust from the earth, its food is dust, it is poured out like water, and lights the house."—"Naphtha."

22. "What is this? It walks ahead of all; it cries out loud and bitterly; its head is like the reed; it is the glory of the noble, the disgrace of the poor; the glory of the dead, the disgrace of the living; the delight of birds, the distress of fishes."—He answered: "Flax."<sup>47</sup>

---

38. Solomon's knowledge of the languages of the animals is hardly referred to in the older literature; comp. the references given in notes 24 and 34 to the Midrashim, where 1 Kings 5.13 is interpreted in a rationalistic manner. But Solomon's dominion over the entire creation, men, animals, demons, and angels, is not disputed; comp. ShR 15.6 and 30.16; BaR 11.3; BR 34.12 (which reads: The power over the animal world, lost by Adam through his sin, was regained by Solomon); Sanhedrin 20b (which reads: Solomon before his fall was lord over all the terrestrials and celestials); compare also with pp. 962, seq., and 973, seq.

39. For details concerning this bird, see Grünbaum, Gesammelte Aufsätze, 139, seq.; note 85 and footnote 696 on p. 754.

40. Solomon is one of the few (three or ten) monarchs who ruled over the entire world; see Shir 1.1, 10; Mishle 20, 88, and 30, 104; PRE 11; Esther R. 1.1 (here David is also said to have been a "Cosmocrator"); Megillah 11b (top). Compare with p. 161; text on pp. 666, 760. The Church Fathers are at pains to contradict this assertion of the Jewish legend, not out of dislike for Solomon, but for polemical reasons, maintaining that the scriptural passages speaking of man's dominion over the entire creation can only refer to Jesus. See Justin Martyr, Dialogue, 34; Tertullian, Adversus Judaeos, 7.

41. Certain particulars concerning the relations between the queen of Sheba and Solomon have been omitted here because of their too realistic character. In the Arabic legend in which the queen bears the name Bilkis (Hebrew פִּלְגֵשׁ "concubine"?), we are told that the genii wanted to hinder the marriage of Solomon and the queen of Sheba; they therefore called the king's attention to the growth of hair on her legs. To convince himself that they spoke the truth, Solomon had a glass palace built, and when he found that their allegation was confirmed, he ordered them to make Nurah, a mixture of arsenic and unslaked lime, which he used as a depilatory. Comp. Grünbaum, Neue Beiträge, 219, and Seymour Tales of King Solomon 146–148. The legend concerning the hair on the queen's legs very likely supposes that she was of the genii (this is explicitly stated by the Arabs), and hence the hair, for the bodies of demons are covered with hair; compare footnote 58 on p. 863. That Solomon married the queen of Sheba is stated also in 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira, 21b, where the depilatory is also mentioned. Compare footnote 311 on p. 243 and footnote 21 on p. 1072.

42. Targum Sheni 1.3, 8–10. Read either לשמשא instead of ליומא, or "day" is here used instead of "sun"; comp. BR. 6.7. The description of Benaiah (concerning whom see vol. IV, pp. 166, 172) reminds one of that given of the high priest Simeon in Ecclus. 50.6, seq. It is, however, possible that Targum Sheni made use of the old piyyut נהדרמה (Musaf of Day of Atonement), the author of which was acquainted with the Hebrew original of Ecclus. Comp. Rapoport, Bikkure ha-Ittim IX, 116.

43. Those who are not sons of the covenant of Abraham cannot bear the divine presence; compare footnote 131 on p. 204, and footnote 727 on p. 761. See also text on p. 935.

44. The living tree had no motion; the trunk from which the crowning branches have been severed supplies the material for the moving vessels.

45. As to the question whether the angels who visited Abraham actually ate, or only “feigned to eat”, see footnote 143 on p. 205. The fifth riddle seems to be anti-Christian. For the sixth riddle, see PRE 10 and Midrash Jonah 98, where it is said that the fish showed Jonah the “roads of the Red Sea” through which Israel passed. The ninth riddle refers to the story of Judah (comp. Gen. 38.25).

46. These nineteen riddles found in the MS. Midrash ha-Hefez were translated and explained by Schechter in Folk-Lore I, 349–358. It is noteworthy that the fifth and eighth riddles are introduced by the words, “and furthermore she asked him”, from which it may be inferred that three different sources have been made use of by the compiler of this Midrash. The first four occur in Mishle I, 40–41. It is further noteworthy that the seventh and eighth are in Aramaic while the others are in Hebrew. This would probably show that the former belonged to some Targum. Comp. Herz, Die Rätsel d. König. von Saba; Grünbaum, Neue Beiträge, 220–221, and the following note. On the fourteenth riddle, see footnote 61 on p. 130.

47. Targum Sheni 1,3, 10. The second riddle is given in Hebrew (מבִּיט literally “look”, means here “lights”), though the Targum is of course in Aramaic. The following points may contribute to the understanding of the third riddle. The sail of the boat is made of flax, in a storm it waves to and fro, and when beaten by the wind, it emits sounds; the rich wear byssus, the poor have rags, and shrouds are usually made of linen (comp. Ketubot 8b); the birds steal the flax-seed, and the fish are caught with nets made of flax, comp. Wünsche, Räthsel-Weisheit bei den Hebräern; Cassel, Zweites Targum, 21–22. The meaning of אַרְקִלִין in Targum Sheni is a riddle which the lexicographers attempted to solve; but not being as wise as Solomon, they failed. Comp. Krauss, Lehnwörter, s. v., and Ha-Shiloah, XIV. 92. According to Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 6.5, the “queen of Egypt and Ethiopia” (that is how he designates the queen of Sheba) was inquisitive about philosophy, and was “a woman that on other accounts also was to be admired”. She showed her admiration of Solomon by many and precious gifts she made to him, and it is said that the root of that balsam which Palestine produces (comp. Berakot 43a, where balsam oil, אַפְרִסְמוֹן, is described as שֶׁמֶן אֶרְצוֹ, “the oil of our land”) was the gift of this woman; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 6.6.

SOLOMON MASTER OF THE DEMONS

Never has there lived a man privileged, like Solomon, to make the demons amenable to his will. God endowed him with the ability to turn the vicious power of demons into a power working to the advantage of men. He invented formulas of incantation by which diseases were alleviated, and others by which demons were exorcised so that they were banished forever.<sup>48</sup> As his personal attendants he had spirits and demons whom he could send hither and thither on the instant. He could grow tropical plants in Palestine, because his ministering spirits secured water for him from India.<sup>49</sup>

As the spirits were subservient to him, so also the animals. He had an eagle upon whose back he was transported to the desert and back again in one day, to build there the city called Tadmor in the Bible.<sup>50</sup> This city must not be confounded with the later Syrian city of Palmyra, also called Tadmor. It was situated near the “mountains of darkness”,<sup>51</sup> the trysting-place of the spirits and demons. Thither the eagle would carry Solomon in the twinkling of an eye, and Solomon would drop a paper inscribed with a verse among the spirits, to ward off evil from himself. Then the eagle would reconnoitre the mountains of darkness, until he had spied out the spot in which the fallen angels ‘Azza and ‘Azrael<sup>52</sup> lie chained with iron fetters—a spot which no one, not even a bird, may visit. When the eagle found the place, he would take Solomon under his left wing, and fly to the two angels. Through the power of the ring having the Holy Name graven upon it, which Solomon put into the eagle’s mouth, ‘Azza and ‘Azrael were forced to reveal the heavenly mysteries to the king.<sup>53</sup>

The demons were of greatest service to Solomon during the erection of the Temple. It came about in this wise: When Solomon began the building of the Temple, it once happened that a malicious spirit snatched away the money and the food of one of the king’s favorite pages. This occurred several times, and Solomon was not able to lay hold on the malefactor. The king besought God fervently to deliver the wicked spirit into his hands. His prayer was granted. The archangel Michael appeared to him, and gave him a small ring having a seal consisting of an engraved stone, and he said to him: "Take, O Solomon, king, son of David, the gift which the Lord God, the highest Zebaot, hath sent unto thee. With it thou shalt lock up all the demons of the earth, male and female; and with their help thou shalt build up Jerusalem. But thou must wear this seal of God; and this engraving of the seal of the ring sent thee is a Pentalfa."<sup>54</sup> Armed with it, Solomon called up all the demons before him, and he asked of each in turn his or her name, as well as the name of the star or constellation or zodiacal sign and of the particular angel to the influence of which each is subject. One after another the spirits were vanquished, and compelled by Solomon to aid in the construction of the Temple.

Ornias, the vampire spirit who had maltreated Solomon's servant, was the first demon to appear, and he was set to the task of cutting stones near the Temple. And Solomon bade Ornias come, and he gave him the seal, saying: "Away with thee, and bring me hither the prince of all the demons." Ornias took the finger-ring, and went to Beelzeboul, who has kingship over the demons. He said to him: "Hither! Solomon calls thee." But Beelzeboul, having heard, said to him: "Tell me, who is this Solomon of whom thou speakest to me?" Then Ornias threw the ring at the chest of Beelzeboul, saying: "Solomon the king calls thee." But Beelzeboul cried aloud with a mighty voice, and shot out a great, burning flame of fire; and he arose and followed Ornias, and came to Solomon. Brought before the king, he promised him to gather all the unclean spirits unto him. Beelzeboul proceeded to do so, beginning with Onoskelis, that had a very pretty shape and the skin of a fair-hued woman, and he was followed by Asmodeus; both giving an account of themselves.

Beelzeboul reappeared on the scene, and in his conversation with Solomon declared that he alone survived of the angels who had come down from heaven. He reigned over all who are in Tartarus, and had a child in the Red Sea, which on occasion comes up to Beelzeboul and reveals to him what he has done. Next the demon of the Ashes, Tephros, appeared, and after him a group of seven female spirits, who declared themselves to be of the thirty-six elements of the darkness. Solomon bade them dig the foundation of the Temple, for the length of it was two hundred and fifty cubits. And he ordered them to be industrious, and with one united murmur of protest they began to perform the tasks enjoined.

Solomon bade another demon come before him. And there was brought to him a demon having all the limbs of a man, but without a head. The demon said to Solomon: "I am called Envy, for I delight to devour heads, being desirous to secure for myself a head; but I do not eat enough, and I am anxious to have such a head as thou hast." A hound-like spirit, whose name was Rabdos, followed, and he revealed to Solomon a green stone, useful for the adornment of the Temple. A number of other male and female demons appeared, among them the thirty-six world-rulers of the darkness, whom Solomon commanded to fetch water to the Temple. Some of these demons he condemned to do the heavy work on the construction of the Temple, others he shut up in prison, and others, again, he ordered to wrestle with fire in the making of gold and silver, sitting down by lead and spoon, and to make ready places for the other demons, in which they should be confined.

After Solomon with the help of the demons had completed the Temple, the rulers, among them the Queen of Sheba, who was a sorceress, came from far and near to admire the magnificence and art of the building, and no less the wisdom of its builder.<sup>55</sup>

One day an old man appeared before Solomon to complain of his son, whom he accused of having been so impious as to raise his hand against his father and give him a blow. The young man denied the charge, but his father insisted that his life be held forfeit. Suddenly Solomon heard loud laughter. It was the demon Ornias, who was guilty of the disrespectful behavior. Rebuked by Solomon, the demon said: "I pray thee, O king, it was not because of thee I laughed, but because of this ill-starred old man and the wretched youth, his son. For after three days his son will die untimely, and, lo, the old man desires to make away with him foully." Solomon delayed his verdict for several days, and when after five days he summoned the old father to his presence, it appeared that Ornias had spoken the truth.

After some time, Solomon received a letter from Adares, the king of Arabia. He begged the Jewish king to deliver his land from an evil spirit, who was doing great mischief, and who could not be caught and made harmless, because he appeared in the form of wind. Solomon gave his magic ring and a leather bottle to one of his slaves, and sent him into Arabia. The messenger succeeded in confining the spirit in the bottle. A few days later, when Solomon entered the Temple, he was not a little astonished to see a bottle walk toward him, and bow down reverently before him; it was the bottle in which the spirit was shut up. This same spirit once did Solomon a great service. Assisted by demons, he raised a gigantic stone out of the Red Sea. Neither human beings nor demons could move it, but he carried it to the Temple, where it was used as a cornerstone.

Through his own fault Solomon forfeited the power to perform miraculous deeds, which the Divine spirit had conferred upon him. He fell in love with the Jebusite woman Sonmanites. The priests of Moloch and Raphan, the false gods she worshipped, advised her to reject his suit, unless he paid homage to these gods. At first Solomon was firm, but, when the woman bade him take five locusts and crush them in his hands in the name of Moloch, he obeyed her. At once he was bereft of the Divine spirit, of his strength and his wisdom, and he sank so low that to please his beloved he built temples to Baal and Raphan.<sup>56</sup>

---

48. Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 2.5. The recognized authorities of rabbinic Judaism condemn the use of the conjuring books ascribed to Solomon (compare footnote 90 on p. 1051), whereas the early Church held them in high esteem, and preserved considerable fragments of them; see Schürer, Geschichte, III, 407–414. Comp. note 93, and Jewish Encyclop., s. v. Solomon.

49. Koheleth 2.5. On Solomon's dominion over the spirits and demons, see PK 5, 45b, and the parallel passages cited by Buber, as well as the references given in note 38. In agreement with the view given in Testament of Solomon (compare with p. 962, seq.), Shir 1.1, 5, and ShR 52.4 limit Solomon's power over the world of spirits to the time of the building of the Temple, when they were forced by him into service, since "all creatures contributed their share to the glory of God."

50. Koheleth 2.25; Apocalypse of Baruch 87.26; compare also with pp. 938 and 1090.

51. The "mountains of darkness" are mentioned in the Alexander legend of the Talmud (Tamid 32a), and play an important part in the later folklore of the Jews.

52. On these angels see text on pp. 135, seq., and text on p. 711.

53. Zohar III, 233a–233b. Palmyra is said to be the place where the queen of Sheba was buried by Solomon; comp. Seymour, Tales of King Solomon 148, and hence the remark of Zohar on Palmyra, the city of magic. For another version of the visits paid by Solomon to the fallen angels, see Zohar III, 112b; comp. also Aggadat Bereshit (end of introduction); Emek ha-Melek 107c; Zohar III, 208a; Zohar Ruth (beginning נחמיה פתח 'ר); note 55.

54. This, five A's interlaced, is somewhat different from the Magen David, "the shield of David", to whose magic power the Karaite Judah Hadassi (Eshkol, 92c, No. 242) is the earliest authority to make reference. Comp. Monatsschrift, 66, 1–9.

55. On Sheba as the land of sorcerers, see also MHG I, 378–379; footnote 311 on p. 243. It is possible that the substitution of “Egypt” for “Sheba” by Josephus, who consistently speaks of the “queen of Egypt” (comp. note 47), is to be ascribed to the fact that in the Haggadah Egypt is the land of magic and witchcraft par excellence; comp. Index, s. v. “Egypt”. In the Arabic legend the “sorceress” became the daughter of a female jinn (Peri); comp. Grünbaum, Neue Beiträge, 219. As to the Jewish sources, where the queen of Sheba appears as a female demon, see Zohar III, 309b; note 41; footnote 20 on p. 457. As she was a sorceress or demon, it is quite natural that the question she asked Solomon had reference to magic and witchcraft; see Zohar III, 194b. Comp., on the other hand, Aggadat Shir 1, 65, where it is said that the queen of Sheba praised Solomon for the wisdom he displayed in rendering justice and providing for the poor.

56. Testament of Solomon, which is a pseudepigraphic book of Jewish origin, but with many Christian layers, and it is therefore often difficult to distinguish between the Jewish and the Christian elements of this work; comp. Conybeare, J.Q.R. XI, 1–45, and Salzberger, Salomos Tempelbau, 12–15. The following are the rabbinic parallels to the Solomon legend of this pseudepigraph. The demons assisted Solomon in the erection of the Temple; see the references cited in note 49. For Solomon’s magic ring in the Ashmedai legend of the Talmud, see text on p. 973. Beelzeboul (= Beelzebub) holds in this writing the same position as Sammael in the rabbinic legend, and the statement that the name Beelzeboul describes its bearer as the dweller of the first heaven (chapter 25) is to be explained in accordance with the view of the Rabbis that Zebul is the name of one of the heavens (comp. Hagigah 12b), though it is to be noticed that it is the fourth heaven which is called Zebul in the Talmud. On the son of Beelzeboul, see the Jewish legend concerning the son of Sammael (text on p. 141). It should also be noticed that Cain is said to have been the son of Sammael; see text on p. 101. The green stone which Solomon needed for the building of the Temple is very likely identical with the Shamir of the rabbinic legend; see note 82. The episode related by Ornia is only a slightly different version of the rabbinic legend, text on p. 973, where Ashmedai takes the place of Ornia. As to the sacrifices of the locusts, see text on pp. 219–220, and comp. also Kebra Negast, 60 (German translation), where this incident is told about Solomon and the daughter of Pharaoh. The idol Rephaim is probably a reminiscence of רפאים “the shades” in Sheol; comp. also the etymology of רפאים, “images of idols”, in ARN 38, 101. The name Abezithod, borne by a very powerful spirit, is probably the Hebrew אב עזות אבד, “the father who is devoid of counsel”; comp. Deut. 32.28 (גוי אבד עזות). This evil spirit is said to have fought against Moses in Egypt by means of magic, hardened Pharaoh’s heart, assisted Jannes and Jambres, caused the Egyptians to pursue the Israelites after having permitted them to leave Egypt, and finally been drowned with the Egyptians in the Red Sea, where he is kept a prisoner under a pillar. In the rabbinic legend it is Sammael, in the Book of Jubilees Mastema, who is the great adversary of Moses and Israel in Egypt and at the Red Sea; but there is also a rabbinic legend which ascribes this part to Uzza, the angel of Egypt, who like Abezithod was thrown into the Red Sea. Compare with pp. 550, 551–552, 689, and see also Index, s. v. “Mastema”. See also Zadokite Fragm. 5.18, which reads: And Belial raised Johanan (=Jannes) and his brother. That Ornia has the form of a lion (9) is very likely to be explained by the fact that he is said to have been the offspring of Uriel, whose name is taken to be identical with Ariel, “lion of God”, hence the form of a lion is ascribed to him. Comp. Zohar III, 32b, where Yoma 21a is made use of; note 13 on pp. 52–53. The Testament of Solomon, though containing a great many Jewish elements, is on the whole of a strongly syncretistic character. The pagan element is obvious in the fact that the angels (not only the fallen ones) are made to have offspring. This is neither Jewish nor Christian, but pagan.

THE BUILDING OF THE TEMPLE

Among the great achievements of Solomon first place must be assigned to the superb Temple built by him. He was long in doubt as to where he was to build it. A heavenly voice directed him to go to Mount Zion at night, to a field owned by two brothers jointly. One of the brothers was a bachelor and poor, the other was blessed both with wealth and a large family of children. It was harvesting time. Under cover of night, the poor brother kept adding to the other’s heap of grain, for, although he was poor, he thought his brother needed more on account of his large family. The rich brother, in the same clandestine way, added to the poor brother’s store, thinking that though he had a family to support, the other was without means. This field, Solomon concluded, which had called forth so remarkable a manifestation of brotherly love, was the best site for the Temple, and he bought it.<sup>57</sup>

Every detail of the equipment and ornamentation of the Temple testifies to Solomon's rare wisdom. Next to the required furniture, he planted golden trees, which bore fruit all the time the building stood. When the enemy entered the Temple, the fruit dropped from the trees, but they will put forth blossoms again when it is rebuilt in the days of the Messiah.<sup>58</sup>

Solomon was so assiduous that the erection of the Temple took but seven years, about half the time for the erection of the king's palace, in spite of the greater magnificence of the sanctuary. In this respect, he was the superior of his father David, who first built a house for himself, and then gave thought to a house for God to dwell in. Indeed, it was Solomon's meritorious work in connection with the Temple that saved him from being reckoned by the sages as one of the impious kings, among whom his later actions might properly have put him.<sup>59</sup>

According to the measure of the zeal displayed by Solomon were the help and favor shown him by God. During the seven years it took to build the Temple, not a single workman died who was employed about it, nor even did a single one fall sick. And as the workmen were sound and robust from first to last, so the perfection of their tools remained unimpaired until the building stood complete. Thus the work suffered no sort of interruption. After the dedication of the Temple, however, the workmen died off, lest they build similar structures for the heathen and their gods. Their wages they were to receive from God in the world to come,<sup>60</sup> and the master workman, Hiram,<sup>61</sup> was rewarded by being permitted to reach Paradise alive.<sup>62</sup>

The Temple was finished in the month of Bul, now called Marheshwan, but the edifice stood closed for nearly a whole year, because it was the will of God that the dedication take place in the month of Abraham's birth. Meantime the enemies of Solomon rejoiced maliciously. "Was it not the son of Bath-sheba," they said, "who built the Temple? How, then, could God permit His Shekinah to rest upon it?" When the consecration of the house took place, and "the fire came down from heaven," they recognized their mistake.<sup>63</sup>

The importance of the Temple appeared at once, for the torrential rains which annually since the deluge had fallen for forty days beginning with the month of Marheshwan, for the first time failed to come, and thenceforward appeared no more.<sup>64</sup>

The joy of the people over the sanctuary was so great that they held the consecration ceremonies on the Day of Atonement. It contributed not a little to their ease of mind that a heavenly voice was heard to proclaim: "You all shall have a share in the world to come."

The great house of prayer reflected honor not only on Solomon and the people, but also on King David. The following incident proves it: When the Ark was about to be brought into the Holy of Holies, the door of the sacred chamber locked itself, and it was impossible to open it. Solomon prayed fervently to God, but his entreaties had no effect until he pronounced the words: "Remember the good deeds of David thy servant." The Holy of Holies then opened of itself, and the enemies of David had to admit that God had wholly forgiven his sin.<sup>65</sup>

In the execution of the Temple work a wish cherished by David was fulfilled. He was averse to having the gold which he had taken as booty from the heathen places of worship during his campaigns used for the sanctuary at Jerusalem, because he feared that the heathen would boast, at the destruction of the Temple, that their gods were courageous, and were taking revenge by wrecking the house of the Israelitish God. Fortunately Solomon was so rich that there was no need to resort to the gold inherited from his father, and so David's wish was fulfilled.<sup>66</sup>

57. Costa, Mikveh Israel, No. 59, based perhaps on Berthold Auerbach, who refers to this legend in his Village Stories. It is not sure whether these sources have been made use of by the writer in Ha-Zefirah, 1897, No. 172. It is possible that he drew upon an oral legend current among the Jews of Russia of today as it was among those of Germany at the time of Auerbach. This legend seems to be based on a midrashic exposition of Ps. 133.1. According to old sources, the site of the Temple had been known before Solomon, see footnote 101 on p. 906, and footnote 53 on p. 920. See further Sifre D., 62, where it is said that the prophet Gad made known the holy site to David. See also PR 43, 179b; Eupolemus, 447d; Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 13.4. As to the original possessor of the site, Araunah the Jebusite, see Josephus loc. cit., who seems to have been acquainted with some legends concerning the Jebusite. According to 'Abodah Zarah 24b, he was "a proselyte of the gate". Araunah is described in Scripture as king (2 Sam. 24.23), which means that he was the legitimate owner of the site of the Temple, for every one is "king" of his possessions; Zohar II, 214b. Just as David transmitted to Solomon the tradition about the site of the Temple, even so did he give him the necessary instructions about the furniture and vessels of the Temple; these traditions were handed down to him by Moses, through the long chain of authorities (Joshua, the elders, and the prophets). See Shemuel 16, 92–93; Yerushalmi Megillah 1, 70a. Just as a woman after giving birth to a male child remains impure for thirty-three days (see Lev. 12.4), even so did the earth after giving birth to Adam remain impure for thirty-three generations, that is, until the time of Solomon; Aguddat Aggadot 77, and note 15 on pp. 54–55. Another Haggadah reads: Just as the moon acquired its complete light after fifteen days, even so did the light which began to shine at the time of Abraham reach its full strength in Solomon's time, the fifteenth since Abraham; as the moon loses its light completely on the thirtieth day, even so did this light become dark after thirty generations during the time of Zedekiah, when the Temple was destroyed and Israel sent into exile; see ShR 15.26; PR 15, 76b–77a; BaR 13.14. A parallel to this Haggadah is perhaps Matth. 1.17; comp. however, Moore, Harvard Theological Review, XIV, 97–103, and Ginzberg, op. cit. 196.

58. Yoma 39b; Yerushalmi 4, 41d; BaR 12.4; Tan. B. IV, 33; Tan. Naso 9; Shir 3.9. A rationalistic rendering of this legend is found in Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 5.2. On the "gold that grows", see also BaR 13.18, and text on p. 647.

59. Sanhedrin 104b; Yerushalmi 10, 29b (as to the meaning of הדר עלה, see the remarks of R. Abraham Schiff in ספר יראים, note 140, end; but comp. the explanation given further below); PR 6, 23b–24a; Tan. B. III, 43;

Tan. Mezora' 1; Mishle 22, 93 (on this passage see Ketab Tammim, 63); BaR 14 (beginning); comp. also Shabbat 56b; Yoma 66b; footnote 100 on p. 906. The sin on account of which some of the Rabbis were inclined to count him among the wicked kings is the one committed by him in marrying foreign women, particularly Pharaoh's daughter; see note 16 about the different views on this question, and comp. further Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 7.2. See also Sanhedrin 103b; where it is stated that Ahaz, Ahaziah, and all the kings of Israel concerning whom Scripture uses the words, "and they did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord" have no share in the world to come. Notice the emphasis laid upon the "kings of Israel", to exclude Solomon from this class of the wicked, though Scripture employs the words "and he did that, etc." with regard to him; see 1 Kings 11.16. When the authors of the Mishnah decided to count Solomon among the kings who have no share in the world to come, David appeared to them in a vision, and prostrated himself before them that they should change their decision. Others narrate that a fire broke out from the holy of holies, and consumed everything around them, forcing them to interrupt their discussions. Later they intended to take it up again (this is how הדר עלה, read הדרו עלה, is to be understood in Yerushalmi; comp. חזרו לשנות in the Tanhumas), but finally they gave it up, as they found that their prayers which used to be granted remained now unanswered or, according to another view, because a heavenly voice pleaded for Solomon; comp. the references at the beginning of the note. Targum Sheni 1.2, 5, seems to take Solomon as the promised Messiah. On the controversy among the Church Fathers concerning the salvation of Solomon, see Seymour Tales of King Solomon 187–188.

60. PR 6, 25a. Here it is also stated that the Temple "had built itself", the stones broke loose from the quarries and placed themselves in layers on the site of the Temple. The same view is also given in Shir 1.1, 5; Tehillim 24, 208; BaR 14.13; Zohar I, 74a. A similar statement concerning the tabernacle erected by Moses is found in ShR 52.4. For the symbolism of the Temple, see Midrash Tadshe 2, and text on pp. 705–706.

61. To harmonize the contradiction between 1 Kings 7.14 and 2 Chron. 2.13, it is assumed that the architect Hiram was a Naphtalite on his father's side and a Danite on his mother's side, a descendant of the Danite Oholiab, the assistant of Bezalel in the erection of the tabernacle; comp. 'Arakin 16a; PR 6, 26a; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 3.4; ps.-Jerome on 1 Kings 7.14. As to the view of ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 2.13, according to which צרי in this passage of Chron. means "artist" (צַרִּי), see Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 74–75.

62. Derek Erez 1 (end). Comp. the parallel passages cited by Tawrogi, ad loc., and Epstein, Mikkadmoniyot, 111. See also note 67 on p. 73 and Index, s. v. "Paradise, Entering Alive".

63. PR 6, 24b–25a. Compare with p. 655; note 65. On the brazen altar which was withdrawn from use by Solomon on the occasion of the dedication of the Temple (1 Kings 8.64), see Midrash Tannaim 54; Mekilta Bahodish 11, 73a.

64. Tan. B. I, 43; Tan. Noah 11. As to the blessings which came upon the world at the erection of the Temple and disappeared at its destruction, see ARN 4, 19–20 (second version 5, 18–19); Tan. B. IV, 5, and the parallel passages cited by Schechter and Buber.

65. Mo'ed Katan 9a; Shabbat 30a; Sanhedrin 107b; Tan. B. II, 22 (here it is said that the door of the holy of holies did not open of itself until Solomon had David's coffin brought into the sanctuary), and IV, 83; ShR 8.1 (here it is said that the ark measured exactly ten cubits, and the opening of the door of the sanctuary was exactly the same measure; hence it was impossible to bring in the ark; compare footnote 330 on p. 643), and 44.2; BaR 14.3 and 15.13; Tehillim 7, 66, and 24, 207–208; PR 2, 6b; Koheleth 4.2; Targum Ps. 76.17 and 132.10; Targum 2 Chron. 7.10. Comp. also BR 35.3; Justin Martyr, Dialogue, 36; text on p. 644.

66. PR 6, 25b. Compare footnote 102 on p. 872. According to another legend, David begrudged himself food and other necessities of life, so that Solomon should have plenty of gold and silver for the vessels of the temple; but God would not allow him to make use of the money left him by his father, because the latter kept his treasures in the time of the great famine, instead of using them to alleviate the sufferings of the poor; compare text on p. 935, and DR. 2.27.

THE THRONE OF SOLOMON

Next to the Temple in its magnificence, it is the throne of Solomon that perpetuates the name and fame of the wise king. None before him and none after him could produce a like work of art, and when the kings, his vassals, saw the magnificence of the throne they fell down and praised God. The throne was covered with fine gold from Ophir, studded with beryls, inlaid with marble, and jewelled with emeralds, and rubies, and pearls, and all manner of gems. On each of its six steps there were two golden lions and two golden eagles, a lion and an eagle to the left, and a lion and an eagle to the right, the pairs standing face to face, so that the right paw of the lion was opposite to the left wing of the eagle, and his left paw opposite to the right wing of the eagle. The royal seat was at the top, which was round.

On the first step leading to the seat crouched an ox, and opposite to him a lion; on the second, a wolf and a lamb; on the third, a leopard and a goat;<sup>67</sup> on the fourth perched an eagle and a peacock; on the fifth a falcon<sup>68</sup> and a cock; and on the sixth a hawk and a sparrow; all made of gold. At the very top rested a dove, her claws set upon a hawk, to betoken that the time would come when all peoples and nations shall be delivered into the hands of Israel. Over the seat hung a golden candlestick, with golden lamps, pomegranates, snuff dishes, censers, chains, and lilies. Seven branches extended from each side. On the arms to the right were the images of the seven patriarchs of the world, Adam, Noah, Shem, Job, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and on the arms to the left, the images of the seven pious men of the world, Kohath, Amram, Moses, Aaron, Eldad, Medad, and the prophet Hur. Attached to the top of the candlestick was a golden bowl filled with the purest olive oil, to be used for the candlestick in the Temple, and below, a golden basin, also filled with the purest olive oil, for the candlestick over the throne. The basin bore the image of the high priest Eli; those of his sons Hophni and Phinehas were on the two faucets protruding from the basin, and those of Nadab and Abihu on the tubes connecting the faucets with the basin.

On the upper part of the throne stood seventy golden chairs for the members of the Sanhedrin, and two more for the high priest and his vicar. When the high priest came to do homage to the king, the members of the Sanhedrin also appeared, to judge the people, and they took their seats to the right and to the left of the king. At the approach of the witnesses, the machinery of the throne rumbled—the wheels turned, the ox lowed, the lion roared, the wolf howled, the lamb bleated, the leopard growled, the goat cried, the falcon screamed, the peacock gobbled, the cock crowed, the hawk screeched, the sparrow chirped—all to terrify the witnesses and keep them from giving false testimony.

When Solomon set foot upon the first step to ascend to his seat, its machinery was put into motion. The golden ox arose and led him to the second step, and there passed him over to the care of the beasts guarding it, and so he was conducted from step to step up to the sixth, where the eagles received him and placed him upon his seat. As soon as he was seated, a great eagle set the royal crown upon his head. Thereupon a huge snake rolled itself up against the machinery, forcing the lions and eagles upward until they encircled the head of the king. A golden dove flew down from a pillar, took the sacred scroll out of a casket, and gave it to the king, so that he might obey the injunction of the Scriptures, to have the law with him and read therein all the days of his life. Above the throne twenty-four vines interlaced, forming a shady arbor over the head of the king, and sweet aromatic perfumes exhaled from two golden lions, while Solomon made the ascent to his seat upon the throne.<sup>69</sup>

It was the task of seven heralds to keep Solomon reminded of his duties as king and judge. The first one of the heralds approached him when he set foot on the first step of the throne, and began to recite the law for kings, "He shall not multiply wives to himself." At the second step, the second herald reminded him, "He shall not multiply horses to himself"; at the third, the next one of the heralds said, "Neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold." At the fourth step, he was told by the fourth herald, "Thou shalt not wrest judgment"; at the fifth step, by the fifth herald, "Thou shalt not respect persons," and at the sixth, by the sixth herald, "Neither shalt thou take a gift." Finally, when he was about to seat himself upon the throne, the seventh herald cried out: "Know before whom thou standest."<sup>70</sup>

The throne did not remain long in the possession of the Israelites. During the life of Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, it was carried to Egypt. Shishak, the father-in-law of Solomon, appropriated it as indemnity for claims which he urged against the Jewish state in behalf of his widowed daughter. When Sennacherib conquered Egypt, he carried the throne away with him, but, on his homeward march, during the overthrow of his army before the gates of Jerusalem, he had to part with it to Hezekiah. Now it remained in Palestine until the time of Jehoash, when it was once more carried to Egypt by Pharaoh Necho. His possession of the throne brought him little joy. Unacquainted with its wonderful mechanism, he was injured in the side by one of the lions the first time he attempted to mount it, and forever after he limped, wherefore he was given the surname Necho, the hobbler.<sup>71</sup> Nebuchadnezzar was the next possessor of the throne. It fell to his lot at the conquest of Egypt, but when he attempted to use it in Babylonia, he fared no better than his predecessor in Egypt. The lion standing near the throne gave him so severe a blow that he never again dared ascend it. Through Darius the throne reached Elam, but, knowing what its other owners had suffered, he did not venture to seat himself on it, and his example was imitated by Ahasuerus. The latter tried to have his artificers fashion him a like artistic work, but, of course, they failed.<sup>72</sup> The Median rulers parted with the throne to the Greek monarchs, and finally it was carried to Rome.<sup>73</sup>

67. אינקא “a goat”, from ינק “sucked”; comp. Hebrew יונק and Aramaic ינוקא, as well as Hebrew טלה “lamb”, and Aramaic טליא “lamb”, “youth”. The Assyrian uniku is to be explained in the same manner. As to the prosthetic א, it is to be remarked that in primae yod verbs the use of such an א is the rule in Syriac, whereas in Judeo-Aramaic it is not very frequent.

68. Read שורניקא “falcon” instead of שוניא “cat”.

69. Targum Sheni 1.2, 5–7. Other versions of the description of the throne (more or less different from that given in Targum Sheni) are found in Abba Gorion 4–8; Panim Aherim 57; Kolbo, No. 119, republished from there by Jellinek in BHM II, 83–85; Ma’asiyyot (Gaster’s edition) 78–79; Midrash on the Throne of Solomon, published from a MS. by Perles in Monatsschrift XXI, 128–133, and hence in BHM V, 34–37 (a very fantastic description, in which also the demons play a part; they fly with Solomon through the air “between heaven and earth” before he takes his seat); Yerahmeel 84, 251–253; Esther R. 1.2, 12; Midrash Shir 31b. Comp. also Shu’aib, who quotes from Targum (Sheni) a description of the throne different from that found in our texts, and further R. Bahya’s introduction to his commentary, who seems to have been acquainted with the Midrash published by Perles; comp. also the following note. On the “seven patriarchs” see PR 7, 29b, and on the other distinguished men whose images were engraved on the throne, see Index, under the respective names.

70. BaR 12.17; Shir 6.4; Esther R. 1.1, 12; DR 5.6; PK 1, 7a–7b. The descriptions of the throne as given in the later sources state that there were inscriptions on the throne or on the animals thereof which reminded him of his duties as king and judge. BaR, loc. cit., contains many symbolic explanations of the six steps of Solomon’s throne. According to one explanation, Solomon’s throne was fashioned after the pattern of the divine throne; now since God’s throne is in the seventh heaven, therefore the seat Solomon occupied was also above six elevations; Compare footnote 39 on p. 862. The legends concerning Solomon’s throne are treated in detail by Cassel, Der Thron Salomos and in his edition of Targum Sheni, as well as by Salzberger, Salomos Thron. Comp. also Gaster, Exempla, No. 115.

71. This etymology of the name Necho, connecting it with Hebrew נכה רגלים “lame”, is very old, as may be seen from the Peshitta and Targum on 2 Kings 23.29. Comp. also PK 27, 168a. The daughter of Pharaoh (=Siamun), whom Solomon took as wife, is called Bithiah in Targum on 2 Chron. 8.11. This is very likely due to a confusion of Shishak’s daughter with the one of his predecessor, the foster-mother of Moses; compare footnote 60 on p. 481 and Index, s. v. “Bithiah”.

72. Abba Gorion 2–4; Esther R. 1.2, 10; Aguddat Aggadot 57–59 (on p. 59, top, read של מצרים=של מ’; “Alexandria of Egypt” is the usual way in which the Rabbis refer to Alexandria); Panim Aherim 57–59; Kolbo 119 (=BHM II, 83); WR 20 (beginning); Koheleth 9.2; Tan. B. V, 7; Targum 1 and Targum Sheni 1.2. Compare further with text on p. 983 and 1130. The sources quoted differ with regard to the details of the “wandering of the throne”, but agree that none but Solomon and his descendants were able to make use of the throne, whereas the pagan rulers who attempted to ascend it not only failed of their purpose, but were punished for their efforts.

73. Esther R. 1.2, 12, where the Tanna R. Eleazar the son of R. Jose, who visited Rome about 170 C. E., states that he saw fragments of Solomon’s throne in Rome. On this Tanna’s visit to Rome, see Graetz, Geschichte, IV, 191. Here also it is stated that only “Cosmocrators”, like Nebuchadnezzar and Cyrus, had the privilege of making use of this throne; Ahasuerus had therefore to be satisfied with a replica and was not permitted to sit on the original, because he ruled only over one hundred and twenty-seven provinces. Footnote 13 on p. 1132, top.

THE HIPPODROME

The throne was not the only remarkable sight at the court of the magnificent king. Solomon attracted visitors to his capital by means of games and shows. In every month of the year the official who was in charge for the month, was expected to arrange for a horse race, and once a year<sup>74</sup> a race took place in which the competitors were ten thousand youths, mainly of the tribes of Gad and Naphtali, who lived at the court of the king year in, year out, and were maintained by him. For the scholars, their disciples, the priests, and the Levites, the races were held on the last of the month; on the first day of the month the residents of Jerusalem were the spectators, and, on the second day, strangers. The hippodrome occupied an area of three parasangs square, with an inner square measuring one parasang on each side, around which the races were run. Within were two grilles ornamented with all sorts of animals. Out of the jaws of four gilded lions, attached to pillars by twos, perfumes and spices flowed for the people. The spectators were divided into four parties distinguished by the color of their garb: the king and his attendants, the scholars and their disciples, and the priests and Levites were attired in light blue garments; all the rest from Jerusalem wore white; the sight-seers from the surrounding towns and villages wore red, and green marked the heathen hailing from afar, who came laden with tribute and presents. The four colors corresponded to the four seasons. In the autumn the sky is brilliantly blue; in winter the white snow falls; the color of spring is green like the ocean, because it is the season favorable to voyages, and red is the color of summer, when the fruits grow red and ripe.<sup>75</sup>

As the public spectacles were executed with pomp and splendor, so the king's table was royally sumptuous. Regardless of season and climate, it was always laden with the delicacies of all parts of the globe. Game and poultry, even of such varieties as were unknown in Palastine, were not lacking, and daily there came a gorgeous bird from Barbary and settled down before the king's seat at the table. The Scriptures tell us of great quantities of food required by Solomon's household, and yet it was not all that was needed. What the Bible mentions, covers only the accessories, such as spices and the minor ingredients. The real needs were far greater, as may be judged from the custom that all of Solomon's thousand wives arranged a banquet daily, each in the hope of having the king dine with her.<sup>76</sup>

---

74. The great animal race was under the supervision of the official mentioned in 1 Kings 4.19, whose duties are explained in this manner. See also Sanhedrin 12a, where he is said to have been the superior of the other twelve, each of whom served one month. Others maintain that he exercised his functions only in leap years, performing his duties during the additional month.

75. Midrash published by Perles from a MS. in Monatsschrift, XXI, 134–136, and reprinted by Jellinek in BHM V, 37–39. On pp. 38–39 read לכרות כחדקל ופרת “He will dig channels as deep as the Tigris and Euphrates”; the subject is קטן שבישראל mentioned before. The Naphthalites were swift runners (see text on p. 465), and the Gadites excelled in military skill; see footnote 393 on p. 408. Index, s. v.

76. PK 6, 58a–58b; PR 16, 81b; BaR 21.19; Teshillim 50, 280; Baba Mezi'a 86b; Tan. Pinchas 12; Koheleth 2.7 and 9.11; comp. also DR 1.5 (parallel passages are cited on margin); Baba Mezi'a Mishnah 7.1; Matthew 7.29.

LESSONS IN HUMILITY

Great and powerful as Solomon was, and wise and just, still occasions were not lacking to bring home to him the truth that the wisest and mightiest of mortals may not indulge in pride and arrogance.

Solomon had a precious piece of tapestry, sixty miles square, on which he flew through the air so swiftly that he could eat breakfast in Damascus and supper in Media. To carry out his orders he had at his beck and call Asaph ben Berechiah<sup>77</sup> among men, Ramirat among demons, the lion among beasts, and the eagle among birds. Once it happened that pride possessed Solomon while he was sailing through the air on his carpet, and he said: “There is none like unto me in this world, upon whom God has bestowed sagacity, wisdom, intelligence, and knowledge, besides making me the ruler of the world.” The same instant the air stirred, and forty thousand men dropped from the magic carpet. The king ordered the wind to cease from blowing, with the word: “Return!” Whereupon the wind: “If thou wilt return to God, and subdue thy pride, I, too, will return.” The king realized his transgression.

On one occasion he strayed into the valley of the ants in the course of his wanderings. He heard one ant order all the others to withdraw, to avoid being crushed by the armies of Solomon. The king halted and summoned the ant that had spoken. She told him that she was the queen of the ants, and she gave her reasons for the order of withdrawal. Solomon wanted to put a question to the ant queen, but she refused to answer unless the king took her up and placed her on his hand. He acquiesced, and then he put his question: "Is there any one greater than I am in all the world?"—"Yes", said the ant.

Solomon: "Who?"

Ant: "I am."

Solomon: "How is that possible?"

Ant: "were I not greater than thou, God would not have led thee hither to put me on thy hand."

Exasperated, Solomon threw her to the ground, and said: "Thou knowest who I am? I am Solomon, the son David."

Not at all intimidated, the ant reminded the king of his earthly origin, and admonished him to humility, and the king went off abashed.

Next he came to a magnificent building, into which he sought to enter in vain; he could find no door leading into it. After long search the demons came upon an eagle seven hundred years old, and he, unable to give them any information, sent him to his nine hundred years old brother, whose eyrie was higher than his own, and who would probably be in a position to advise them. But he in turn directed them to go to his still older brother. His age counted thirteen hundred years, and he had more knowledge than himself. This oldest one of the eagles reported that he remembered having heard his father say there was a door on the west side, but it was covered up by the dust of the ages that had passed since it was last used. So it turned out to be. They found an old iron door with the inscription: "We, the dwellers in this palace, for many years lived in comfort and luxury; then, forced by hunger, we ground pearls into flour instead of wheat—but to no avail, and so, when we were about to die, we bequeathed this palace to the eagles." A second statement contained a detailed description of the wonderful palace, and mentioned where the keys for the different chambers were to be found. Following the directions on the door, Solomon inspected the remarkable building, whose apartments were made of pearls and precious stones. Inscribed on the doors he found the following three wise proverbs, dealing with the vanity of all earthly things, and admonishing men to be humble:

1. O son of man, let not time deceive thee; thou must wither away, and leave thy place, to rest in the bosom of the earth.

2. Haste thee not, move slowly, for the world is taken from one and bestowed upon another.

3. Furnish thyself with food for the journey, prepare thy meal while daylight lasts, for thou wilt not remain on earth forever, and thou knowest not the day of thy death.<sup>78</sup>

In one of the chambers, Solomon saw a number of statues, among them one that looked as though alive. When he approached it, it called out in a loud voice: "Hither, ye satans, Solomon has come to undo you." Suddenly there arose great noise and tumult among the statues. Solomon pronounced the Name, and quiet was restored. The statues were overthrown, and the sons of the satans ran into the sea and were drowned. From the throat of the lifelike statue he drew a silver plate inscribed with characters which he could not decipher, but a youth from the desert told the king: "These letters are Greek, and the words mean: 'I, Shadad ben Ad, ruled over a thousand thousand provinces, rode on a thousand thousand horses, had a thousand thousand kings under me, and slew a thousand thousand heroes, and when the Angel of Death approached me, I was powerless.'"<sup>79</sup>

77. This hero of the Arabic legend is known in Jewish sources only as the father of "medicine"; compare footnote 75 on p. 158. The attempt of Venetianer, Asaf Judaeus, 18. seq., to distinguish between the legendary Asaph and the author of medical books bearing the same name is not to be taken seriously.

78. "To prepare for a journey" in Jewish parlance means "to do good as long as life lasts, before the great journey to the great beyond is begun"; comp. Ketubot 67b.

79. Ma'aseh ha-Nemalah published several times separately and also in BHM V, 22–26. The Arabic origin of this legend is obvious, and the Arabic original is still in existence, though less known than the Hebrew translation; see Hebräische Bibliographie, XIII, 105, and Jellinek, Introduction to BHM V, 11–13. Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, 90, published an Arabic text containing the first part of Ma'aseh ha-Nemalah, but did not recognize the nature of the text. Comp. also Gaster, Exempla, No. 343 and Seymour Tales of King Solomon 80–99. See further Ben ha-Meleh, XVI, where David is said to have found an inscription upon which a king told of himself that he had ruled a thousand years, destroyed a thousand cities, annihilated a thousand armies, and married a thousand princesses. This is only a somewhat different version of the inscription by Shadad supposed to have been found by Solomon.

ASMODEUS

When Solomon in his wealth and prosperity grew unmindful of his God, and, contrary to the injunctions laid down for kings in the Torah, multiplied wives unto himself, and craved the possession of many horses and much gold, the Book of Deuteronomy stepped before God and said: "Lo, O Lord of the world, Solomon is seeking to remove a Yod from out of me,"<sup>80</sup> for Thou didst write: "The king shall not multiply horses unto himself, nor shall he multiply wives to himself, neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold"; but Solomon has acquired many horses, many wives, and much silver and gold." Hereupon God said: "As thou livest, Solomon and a hundred of his kind shall he annihilated ere a single one of thy letters shall be obliterated."<sup>81</sup>

The charge made against Solomon was soon followed by consequences. He had to pay heavily for his sins. It came about in this way: While Solomon was occupied with the Temple, he had great difficulty in devising ways of fitting the stone from the quarry into the building, for the Torah explicitly prohibits the use of iron tools in erecting an altar. The scholars told him that Moses had used the shamir,<sup>82</sup> the stone that splits rocks, to engrave the names of the tribes on the precious stones of the ephod worn by the high priest. Solomon's demons could give him no information as to where the shamir could be found. They surmised, however, that Asmodeus,<sup>83</sup> king of demons, was in possession of the secret, and they told Solomon the name of the mountain on which Asmodeus dwelt, and described also his manner of life. On this mountain there was a well from which Asmodeus obtained his drinking water. He closed it up daily with a large rock, and sealed it before going to heaven, whither he went every day, to take part in the discussions in the heavenly academy. Thence he would descend again to earth in order to be present, though invisible,<sup>84</sup> at the debates in the earthly houses of learning. Then, after investigating the seal on the well to ascertain if it had been tampered with, he drank of the water.

Solomon sent his chief man, Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, to capture Asmodeus. For this purpose he provided him with a chain, the ring on which the Name of God was engraved, a bundle of wool, and a skin of wine. Benaiah drew the water from the well through a hole bored from below, and, after having stopped up the hole with the wool, he filled the well with wine from above. When Asmodeus descended from heaven, to his astonishment he found wine instead of water in the well, although everything seemed untouched. At first he would not drink of it, and cited the Bible verses that inveigh against wine, to inspire himself with moral courage. At length Asmodeus succumbed to his consuming thirst, and drank till his senses were overpowered, and he fell into a deep sleep. Benaiah, watching him from a tree, then came, and drew the chain about Asmodeus's neck. The demon, on awakening, tried to free himself, but Benaiah called to him: "The Name of thy Lord is upon thee." Though Asmodeus now permitted himself to be led off unresistingly, he acted most peculiarly on the way to Solomon. He brushed against a palm-tree and uprooted it; he knocked against a house and overturned it; and when, at the request of a poor woman, he was turned aside from her hut, he broke a bone. He asked with grim humor: "Is it not written, 'A soft tongue breaketh the bone'?" A blind man going astray he set in the right path, and to a drunkard he did a similar kindness. He wept when a wedding party passed them, and laughed at a man who asked his shoemaker to make him shoes to last for seven years, and at a magician who was publicly showing his skill.

Having finally arrived at the end of the journey, Asmodeus, after several days of waiting, was led before Solomon, who questioned him about his strange conduct on the journey. Asmodeus answered that he judged persons and things according to their real character, and not according to their appearance in the eyes of human beings. He cried when he saw the wedding company, because he knew the bridegroom had not a month to live, and he laughed at him who wanted shoes to last seven years, because the man would not own them for seven days, also at the magician who pretended to disclose secrets, because he did not know that a buried treasure lay under his very feet; the blind man whom he set in the right path was one of the "perfect pious", and he wanted to be kind to him; on the other hand, the drunkard to whom he did a similar kindness was known in heaven as a very wicked man, but he happened to have done a good deed once, and he was rewarded accordingly.

Asmodeus told Solomon that the shamir was given by God to the Angel of the Sea, and that Angel entrusted none with the shamir except the moor-hen,<sup>85</sup> which had taken an oath to watch the shamir carefully. The moor-hen takes the shamir with her to mountains which are not inhabited by men, splits them by means of the shamir, and injects seeds, which grow and cover the naked rocks, and then they can be inhabited. Solomon sent one of his servants to seek the nest of the bird and lay a piece of glass over it. When the moor-hen came and could not reach her young, she flew away and fetched the shamir and placed it on the glass. Then the man shouted, and so terrified the bird that she dropped the shamir and flew away. By this means the man obtained possession of the coveted shamir, and bore it to Solomon. But the moor-hen was so distressed at having broken her oath to the Angel of the Sea that she committed suicide.

Although Asmodeus was captured only for the purpose of getting the shamir, Solomon nevertheless kept him after the completion of the Temple. One day the king told Asmodeus that he did not understand wherein the greatness of the demons lay, if their king could be kept in bonds by a mortal. Asmodeus replied, that if Solomon would remove his chains and lend him the magic ring, he would prove his own greatness. Solomon agreed. The demon stood before him with one wing touching heaven and the other reaching to the earth. Snatching up Solomon, who had parted with his protecting ring, he flung him four hundred parasangs away from Jerusalem, and then palmed himself off as the king.

80. That means: He fails to pay attention to the Yod in לא ירבה (Deut. 17.16–17); comp. also Matthew 5.18.

81. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20c; WR 19.2; ShR 6.1; Tan. Wa-Era 5; Tan. B. II, 18; Aggadat Bereshit 75, 146. It is worthy of notice that Solomon is censured for having married many wives, but not for having married foreign women. Comp. note 16.

82. On the Shamir, see text on p. 35, and the notes appertaining thereto. The Tannaim speak of the Shamir as having been created (in the twilight between the sixth day and the Sabbath of creation; see references in footnote 99 on p. 78) ad hoc, that is, for the use of the sanctuary. Accordingly it disappeared after the destruction of the Temple. See, e. g., Tosefta Sotah 15.1. The old sources do not state explicitly whether it was a mineral, plant, or animal; but the tradition which considers it to have been some kind of an insect represents the view of the old authorities; see footnote 165 on p. 35. The Testament of Solomon, however, seems to regard the Shamir as a stone; see note 56. In an Abyssinian legend the Shamir is supposed to have been a kind of wood; see Seymour, Tales of King Solomon, 149.

83. For Ashmedai in the Solomon legend, see Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, s. v. "Asmodeus". The Aramaic origin of the name Asmodeus is pointed out there.

84. As to the demons being present at the debates of the scholars in the academies, see Berakot 6a (top). The demons are divided into three classes: 1) the angel-like; 2) the human-like; 3) the animal-like. Asmodeus and his family are "Jewish demons", i. e., they profess the true religion, and observe the Torah. See Zohar III, 253a and 277a (below). According to the Arabs, there are different religions among the genii, as among men, and this view is "Judaized" by the Zohar. The older view considers the demons to be either fallen angels, or at least spirits akin to them. See Index, s. v. "Demons".

85. The guardian bird of the Shamir is called ברא תרנגולא, "the wild cock", in the Talmud, where it is identified with the biblical דוכיפת (Lev. 11.19), usually rendered by "hoopoe". The important part played by the hoopoe in the later Solomon legend (comp. note 39) is very likely to be explained by Arabic folk-lore; comp. Grünbaum, Gesammelte Aufsätze, 39, seq. According to some it was the eagle which brought the Shamir from paradise, see Tehillim 78.351 = Yalkut II.182; text on p. 35.

SOLOMON AS BEGGAR

Banished from his home, deprived of his realm, Solomon wandered about in far-off

lands, among strangers, begging his daily bread. Nor did his humiliation end there; people thought him a lunatic, because he never tired of assuring them that he was Solomon, Judah's great and mighty king. Naturally that seemed a preposterous claim to the people.<sup>86</sup> The lowest depth of despair he reached, however, when he met some one who recognized him. The recollections and associations that stirred within him then made his present misery almost unendurable.

It happened<sup>87</sup> that once on his peregrinations he met an old acquaintance, a rich and well-considered man, who gave a sumptuous banquet in honor of Solomon. At the meal his host spoke to Solomon constantly of the magnificence and splendor he had once seen with his own eyes at the court of the king. These reminiscences moved the king to tears, and he wept so bitterly that, when he rose from the banquet, he was satiated, not with the rich food, but with salt tears. The following day it again happened that Solomon met an acquaintance of former days, this time a poor man, who nevertheless entreated Solomon to do him the honor and break bread under his roof. All that the poor man could offer his distinguished guest was a meagre dish of greens. But he tried in every way to assuage the grief that oppressed Solomon. He said: "O my lord and king, God hath sworn unto David He would never let the royal dignity depart from his house, but it is the way of God to reprove those He loves if they sin. Rest assured, He will restore thee in good time to thy kingdom." These words of his poor host were more grateful to Solomon's bruised heart than the banquet the rich man had prepared for him. It was to the contrast between the consolations of the two men that he applied the verse in Proverbs: "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith."

For three long years Solomon journeyed about, begging his way from city to city, and from country to country, atoning for the three<sup>88</sup> sins of his life by which he had set aside the commandment laid upon kings in Deuteronomy—not to multiply horses, and wives, and silver and gold. At the end of that time, God took mercy upon him for the sake of his father David, and for the sake of the pious princess Naamah, the daughter of the Ammonite king, destined by God to be the ancestress of the Messiah. The time was approaching when she was to become the wife of Solomon<sup>89</sup> and reign as queen in Jerusalem. God therefore led the royal wanderer to the capital city of Ammon.<sup>90</sup> Solomon took service as an underling with the cook in the royal household, and he proved himself so proficient in the culinary art that the king of Ammon raised him to the post of chief cook. Thus he came under the notice of the king's daughter Naamah, who fell in love with her father's cook. In vain her parents endeavored to persuade her to choose a husband befitting her rank. Not even the king's threat to have her and her beloved executed availed to turn her thoughts away from Solomon. The Ammonite king had the lovers taken to a barren desert, in the hope that they would die of starvation there. Solomon and his wife wandered through the desert until they came to a city situated by the sea-shore. They purchased a fish to stave off death. When Naamah prepared the fish, she found in its belly the magic ring belonging to her husband, which he had given to Asmodeus, and which, thrown into the sea by the demon, had been swallowed by a fish. Solomon recognized his ring, put it on his finger, and in the twinkling of an eye he transported himself to Jerusalem. Asmodeus, who had been posing as King Solomon during the three years, he drove out, and himself ascended the throne again.

Later on he cited the king of Ammon before his tribunal, and called him to account for the disappearance of the cook and the cook's wife, accusing him of having killed them. The king of Ammon protested that he had not killed, but only banished them. Then Solomon had the queen appear, and to his great astonishment and still greater joy the king of Ammon recognized his daughter.<sup>91</sup>

Solomon succeeded in regaining his throne only after undergoing many hardships. The people of Jerusalem considered him a lunatic, because he said that he was Solomon. After some time, the members of the Sanhedrin noticed his peculiar behavior, and they investigated the matter. They found that a long time had passed since Benaiah, the confidant of the king, had been permitted to enter the presence of the usurper. Furthermore the wives of Solomon and his mother Bath-sheba informed them that the behavior of the king had completely changed—it was not befitting royalty and in no respect like Solomon's former manner. It was also very strange that the king never by any chance allowed his foot to be seen, for fear, of course, of betraying his demon origin.<sup>92</sup> The Sanhedrin, therefore, gave the king's magic ring to the wandering beggar who called himself King Solomon, and had him appear before the pretender on the throne. As soon as Asmodeus caught sight of the true king protected by his magic ring, he flew away precipitately.

Solomon did not escape unscathed. The sight of Asmodeus in all his forbidding ugliness had so terrified him that henceforth he surrounded his couch at night with all the valiant heroes among the people.<sup>93</sup>

---

86. Gittin 68a–68b (for a correct text use must be made of Ma'asiyyot 75–78 (Gaster's edition and Makiri, Prov. 20, beginning); Tehillim 78, 351–353; Likkutim I, 20b–21b; BHM VI, 106–107; Neweh Shalom, 53–55; Hibbur Ma'asiyyot, No. 4; Manzur al-Dhamari, 13–14; Targum on Eccles. 1.12; Midrash Shir 29a–30a. In contrast to Babli and the above-mentioned sources dependent upon it, the Palestinian sources maintain that it was an angel who, disguised as Solomon, occupied the throne during the time that the real Solomon wandered about through the world as a beggar; comp. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20c; PK 27, 168b–169a; Tan. B. III, 55–56; Tan. Ahare 1 and Wa-Ethanan 2; Shir 1.1, 10 and 3.17; Ruth R. 2.14; Koheleth 1.12, 2.2, and 9.12. Comp. also Megillah 11b (top; on the test see Aggadat Esther 7); Sanhedrin 29b; ShR 30.16; Aggadat Shir 3.33. In the Babylonian version of the legend Persian influence is apparent. It is, however, doubtful whether one is justified in assuming Persian influence in the Palestinian version. Comp. R.E.J. XVII, 59, seq.; Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, II, s. v. “Asmodeus” and Gaster, Exempla, No. 114.

87. Mishle 15, 78–79; on the text, see R. Bahya, Pe-kude (beginning).

88. The marrying of foreign women is not accounted as a sin unto him; comp. notes 16 and 81.

89. According to 1 Kings 14.21, Naamah the Ammonitish woman was the mother of Rehoboam; hence the ancestress of the Messiah, who is to be a descendant of the Davidic kings. Comp. Baba Kamma 38b; BR 50.10; Index, s. v. “Messiah”. The text explicitly states: משיח בן דוד שיצא ממנה.

90. This city is called משכמם, probably an intentional corruption of עם כמם, which, though it stands for Moab in Num. 21.29, might be taken for Ammon in accordance with Jud. 11.24.

91. Emek ha-Melek 14d–15a and 108c–109d, whence it is incorporated in BHM II, 86–87. Comp. also Azulai, Midbar Kedemot, 96, No. 24. The relation of the Jewish legend to the Arabic one, published by Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, 124, seq., needs careful examination; see Midrash Shir 29b–30a, Steinschneider, Hebräische Bibliographie, XVIII, 57–58 and Gaster, Exempla, No. 404. The old Jewish sources often speak of the “two precious doves”, Ruth the Moabitish woman and Naamah the Ammonitish woman, on whose account Ammon and Moab escaped destruction; comp. BR 50.10; Baba Kamma 38a, Yebamot 63a. But the authors of the Talmud (comp. Yebamot 77a) speak of David playing with his grandson Rehoboam, and accordingly are of the opinion that Solomon married Naamah the Ammonitish woman, the mother of Rehoboam, during his father’s lifetime. This view is shared by Aphraates, 461. The assertion of Ephraem on 1 Kings 14.25 that Naamah misled her son into idolatry is not found in the talmudic-midrashic literature. Kimhi, 1 Kings, loc. cit., is the first to mention it. Compare footnote 18 on p. 985.

92. The feet of demons resemble those of the cock; see Berakot 6a; Zohar III, 309a. On the feet of angels, see text on p. 245.

93. Gittin 68b; Tehillim 78, 353. Comp. also the references cited in note 86. A different view is given in the Talmud, loc. cit., and elsewhere, to the effect that Solomon never regained the throne, but died (in his wanderings?) as a private man. It is said that Solomon was at first the ruler over the entire world, then over Tadmur only (on Tadmur, see text on p. 962), then over Israel only, and finally he only possessed the couch upon which he slept; even this possession he did not enjoy entirely, as he was terrified by evil spirits in his sleep. See Aggadat Shir 3, 33–34, and (somewhat differently) 1, 6; Shir 3.6; comp. also the parallel passages cited by Schechter. It was towards the end of his life that the holy spirit came to him (according to some, he was a prophet; see Sotah 48b, top; Targum 1 Kings 5.13; Ratner on Seder ‘Olam 20; notes 8, 25), by means of which he composed three books: Song of Songs, Proverbs, and Ecclesiastes; see Seder ‘Olam 15. On the reasons for this trilogy, see Aggadat Shir 1, 6. It is the first book, the “holiest of holy books” (= Hagiographa) upon which Solomon’s glory is based, whereas the last had for a long time to encounter the opposition of the sages against its admission into the Canon, because the passages thereof, owing to their obscure language, seem to contradict the dogma or reward and punishment and other essential doctrines of Judaism; see Yadayim 3.5; Tosefta 2.14; Shabbat 30b; Mishle 25, 97; PK 8, 68b; PR 18, 90b; WR 28 (beginning); ARN (both versions) 1, 2–3; Jerome, Eccles. 12.13. On the great esteem in which Song of Songs was held (it was taken as an allegorical presentation of the history of Israel from the beginning of its career until the advent of the Messiah), see Targum Shir 1.1; Aggadat Shir 1, 4–6 and 10; Midrash Shir 1b; Shir 1.1; Zohar I, 98b and 135a; quotation from an unknown Midrash in the anonymous Arabic commentary on Song of Songs published by Friedlaender in Steinschneider-Festschrift, 54, seq. Those who recite this book like a (love) song will be severely punished for their sacrilege. See Sanhedrin 101a; Kallah 1, 1b. Solomon composed his first book while he was still young, songs having a special attraction for the youth; when he reached the age of manhood he wrote Proverbs, containing the ripe fruit of a man who knows life; but when he became old he composed Ecclesiastes, the key-note of which is the vanity of all human pleasures and desires. See Shir. 1.1; Aggadat Shir 1.6. In the Zohar reference is made to the following books of Solomon: 1) The book which Ashmedai gave Solomon, from which something bearing on magic is quoted in III, 194b; 2) the book of the wisdom of Solomon, from which three sayings are quoted (the first is found in Shabbat 33a) in III, 193b; 3) the book on physiognomy, from which a lengthy passage is quoted in II, 70a, seq.; comp. Davidson, Sepher Sha’ashuim, Introduction, LXXXII, seq.; 4) Solomon’s book on the knowledge of precious stones in II, 127a (top). The book of Solomon's wise counsels referred to in I, 225b, is very likely identical with No. 2. Solomon is probably the author, or rather the redactor of the book (or books) of the Sons of the East; see Zohar I, 99b, and II, 171b. Compare footnote 70 on p. 1049. Comp. notes 18 and 24.

THE COURT OF SOLOMON

As David had been surrounded by great scholars and heroes of repute, so the court of Solomon was the gathering-place of the great of his people. The most important of them all doubtless was Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, who had no peer for learning and piety either in the time of the first or the second Temple.<sup>94</sup> In his capacity as the chancellor of Solomon, he was the object of the king's special favor. He was frequently invited to be the companion of the king in his games of chess. The wise king naturally was always the winner. One day Solomon left the chess-board for a moment, Benaiah used his absence to remove one of the king's chessmen, and the king lost the game. Solomon gave much thought to the occurrence. He came to the conclusion that his chancellor had dealt dishonestly with him, and he was determined to give him a lesson.

Some days later Solomon noticed two suspicious characters hanging about the palace. Acting at once upon an idea that occurred to him, he put on the clothes of one of his servants and joined the two suspects. The three of them, he proposed, should make the attempt to rob the royal palace, and he drew forth a key which would facilitate their entrance. While the thieves were occupied in gathering booty, the king roused his servants, and the malefactors were taken in custody. Next morning Solomon appeared before the Sanhedrin, which was presided over by Benaiah<sup>95</sup> at the time, and he desired to know from the court what punishment was meted out to a thief. Benaiah, seeing no delinquents before him, and unwilling to believe that the king would concern himself about the apprehension of thieves, was convinced that Solomon was bent on punishing him for his dishonest play. He fell at the feet of the king, confessed his guilt, and begged his pardon. Solomon was pleased to have his supposition confirmed, and also to have Benaiah acknowledge his wrongdoing. He assured him he harbored no evil designs against him, and that when he asked this question of the Sanhedrin, he had had real thieves in mind, who had broken into the palace during the night.<sup>96</sup>

Another interesting incident happened, in which Benaiah played a part. The king of Persia was very ill, and his physician told him he could be cured by nothing but the milk of a lioness. The king accordingly sent a deputation bearing rich presents to Solomon, the only being in the world who might in his wisdom discover means to obtain lion's milk. Solomon charged Benaiah to fulfil the Persian king's wish. Benaiah took a number of kids, and repaired to a lion's den. Daily he threw a kid to the lioness, and after some time the beasts became familiar with him, and finally he could approach the lioness close enough to draw milk from her udders.

On the way back to the Persian king the physician who had recommended the milk cure dreamed a dream. All the organs of his body, his hands, feet, eyes, mouth, and tongue, were quarrelling with one another, each claiming the greatest share of credit in procuring the remedy for the Persian monarch. When the tongue set forth its own contribution to the cause of the king's service, the other organs rejected its claim as totally unfounded. The physician did not forget the dream, and when he appeared before the king, he spoke: "Here is the dog's milk which we went to fetch for you." The king, enraged, ordered the physician to be hanged, because he had brought the milk of a bitch instead of the milk of a lion's dam. During the preliminaries to the execution, all the limbs and organs of the physician began to tremble, whereupon the tongue said: "Did I not tell you that you all are of no good? If you will acknowledge my superiority, I shall even now save you from death." They all made the admission it demanded, and the physician requested the executioner to take him to the king. Once in the presence of his master, he begged him as a special favor to drink of the milk he had brought. The king granted his wish, recovered from his sickness, and dismissed the physician in peace. So it came about that all the organs of the body acknowledge the supremacy of the tongue.<sup>97</sup>

Besides Benaiah, Solomon's two scribes, Elihoreph and Ahijah, the sons of Shisha, deserve mention. They both met their death in a most peculiar way. Solomon once upon a time noticed a care-worn expression on the countenance of the Angel of Death. When he asked the reason, he received the answer, that he had been charged with the task of bringing the two scribes to the next world. Solomon was desirous of stealing a march upon the Angel of Death, as well as keeping his secretaries alive. He ordered the demons to carry Elihoreph and Ahijah to Luz, the only spot on earth in which the Angel of Death has no power.<sup>98</sup> In a jiffy, the demons had done his bidding, but the two secretaries expired at the very moment of reaching the gates of Luz. Next day, the Angel of Death appeared before Solomon in very good humor, and said to him: "Thou didst transport those two men to the very spot in which I wanted them." The fate destined for them was to die at the gates of Luz, and the Angel of Death had been at a loss how to get them there.<sup>99</sup>

A most interesting incident in Solomon's own family circle is connected with one of his daughters. She was of extraordinary beauty, and in the stars he read that she was to marry an extremely poor youth. To prevent the undesirable union, Solomon had a high tower erected in the sea, and to this he sent his daughter. Seventy eunuchs were to guard her, and a huge quantity of food was stored in the tower for her use.

The poor youth whom fate had appointed to be her husband was travelling one cold night. He did not know where to rest his head, when he espied the rent carcass of an ox lying in the field. In this he lay down to keep warm. When he was ensconced in it, there came a large bird, which took the carcass, bore it, together with the youth stretched out in it, to the roof of the tower in which the princess lived, and, settling down there, began to devour the flesh of the ox. In the morning, the princess, according to her wont, ascended to the roof to look out upon the sea, and she caught sight of the youth. She asked him who he was, and who had brought him thither? He told her that he was a Jew from Accho, and had been carried to the tower by a bird. She showed him to a chamber, where he could wash and anoint himself, and array himself in a fresh garb. Then it appeared that he possessed unusual beauty. Besides, he was a scholar of great attainments and of acute mind. So it came about that the princess fell in love with him. She asked him whether he would have her to wife, and he assented gladly. He opened one of his veins, and wrote the marriage contract with his own blood. Then he pronounced the formula of betrothal, taking God and the two archangels Michael and Gabriel as witnesses, and she became his wife, legally married to him.

After some time the eunuchs noticed that she was pregnant. Their questions elicited the suspected truth from the princess, and they sent for Solomon. His daughter admitted her marriage, and the king, though he recognized in her husband the poor man predicted in the constellations, yet he thanked God for his son-in-law, distinguished no less for learning than for his handsome person.<sup>100</sup>

94. Berakot 18b; Targum 2 Sam. 23.20–25; Zohar I, 105b–106b; 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 20a. See also the undoubtedly Jewish Haggadah in ps.-Jerome on 2 Sam. loc. cit.

95. Berakot 4a = Sanhedrin 16b (on the text see Tosafot and Rabbenu Hananel, ad loc.; Aruk, s. v. אחר; R. Nissim in R.E.J. XLIV, 29, 295–296), where the assertion is made that the Cherethites and Pelethites whose chief was Benaiah (2 Sam. 8.18), represent the Great Synhedrion, whose president was Benaiah. Mahzor Vitry, 332, is of the opinion that this Benaiah is not identical with his namesake, the commander-in-chief of Solomon's army (1 Kings 2.35). The reason for this is probably to be found in the fact that Benaiah, the general of Solomon, was not a priest (see 1 Kings 2.34, where he acts as executioner, which work cannot be done by a priest on account of the Levitical laws of purity), whereas according to the Haggadah, Benaiah, the head of the Synhedrion was a priest; see Midrash Shir 30a, and 1 Chron. 37.5. Comp. also Tosafot, loc. cit.

96. Ma'aseh-Buch, No. 230; translated into Hebrew in BHM VI, 124–126; Comp. Gaster, Exempla, No. 426.

97. Tehillim 39, 255. The legend about the rivalry of the human organs, without any reference to Solomon and Benaiah, is also found in Makiri, Prov. 18, 3a; Orehot Zaddikim, 25; Shu'aib, Shelah, 83d–84a. The last-named author offers several other variants for our texts of Tehillim.

98. On Luz see text on p. 861.

99. Sukkah 58a. Another version is found in Yerushalmi Kil'ayim 9, 32c; Ma'asiyyot (Gaster's edition 100). The two servants of Solomon are described in Babli as איסקבטירי "scribes", and hence in Yerushalmi as אליחרף ואחיה, which is ἐξασέπτωρ = "exceptor", "copyist", correctly spelled אסקפטריא in Ma'asiyyot. The words אליחרף ואחיה in Babli are very likely a later addition from Yerushalmi, whereas the original version of Babli spoke of Solomon's "two slaves". Rashi's explanation of כושאי is not acceptable.

100. Tan. B. Introduction, 136; Arabic parallels to this legend are cited by Grünbaum, Neue Beiträge, 233, seq., and Salzberger, Salomo-Sage, 80. In another version of this legend many new points of interest are introduced; it reads as follows. During a war between Solomon and Hiram the Jewish soldiers were 101. attempting to cross a river on a very hot day. Solomon called upon the birds to protect his soldiers from the heat, and when Hiram came to see this miracle he was received peaceably, and the war thus ended. While the two kings were conversing, an eagle removed his wing from over Solomon's head, informing him at the same time that the High Priest Joshua (sic!) would die and the king's daughter would marry a bastard. This information the eagle gave to Solomon as he had received it from his spouse. Solomon shut his daughter up in a high tower, etc. as given in the text. Gaster, Exempla, No. 336.

XVII

JUDAH AND ISRAEL

THE DIVISION OF THE KINGDOM

The division of the kingdom into Judah and Israel, which took place soon after the death of Solomon, had cast its shadow before. When Solomon, on the day after his marriage with the Egyptian princess, disturbed the regular course of the Temple service by sleeping late with his head on the pillow under which lay the key of the Temple, Jeroboam with eighty thousand Ephraimites approached the king and publicly called him to account for his negligence. God administered a reproof to Jeroboam; “Why dost thou reproach a prince of Israel? As thou livest, thou shalt have a taste of his rulership, and thou wilt see thou art not equal to its responsibilities.”<sup>1</sup>

On another occasion a clash occurred between Jeroboam and Solomon. The latter ordered his men to close the openings David had made in the city wall to facilitate the approach of the pilgrims to Jerusalem. This forced them all to walk through the gates and pay toll. The tax thus collected Solomon gave to his wife, the daughter of Pharaoh, as pin-money. Indignant at this, Jeroboam questioned the king about it in public. In other ways, too, he failed to pay Solomon the respect due to royal position, as his father before him, Sheba the son of Bichri, had rebelled against David, misled by signs and tokens which he had falsely interpreted as pointing to his own elevation to royal dignity, when in reality they concerned themselves with his son.<sup>2</sup>

It was when Jeroboam was preparing to depart from Jerusalem forever, in order to escape the dangers to which Solomon’s displeasure exposed him,<sup>3</sup> that Ahijah of Shilo met him with the Divine tidings of his elevation to the kingship. The prophet Ahijah, of the tribe of Levi, was venerable, not only by reason of his hoary age,—his birth occurred at least sixty years before the exodus from Egypt,<sup>4</sup>—but because his piety was so profound that a saint of the exalted standing of Simon ben Yoḥai associated Ahijah with himself. Simon once exclaimed: “My merits and Ahijah’s together suffice to atone for the iniquity of all sinners from the time of Abraham until the advent of the Messiah.”<sup>5</sup>

---

1. WR 12.5. On the delay caused by Solomon’s long sleep, see text on pp. 947–948. See also ER 24, 125, which reads: Jeroboam received the rulership over the tribes as a reward for his courage in calling Solomon to account.

2. Sanhedrin 101b; text on p. 882. As to the legal question whether the inhabitants of Abel of Beth-maacah acted in accordance with the law when they surrendered Sheba, who had taken refuge with them, see Tosefta Terumot 7.20; Yerushalmi 8, 46b; BR 94.9; Shemuel 32, 140;

Koheleth 9.18. The only excuse given for the inhabitants of this city is that Sheba as a rebel against the “throne of David” had no claim upon them. The Midrashim just quoted (as well as Tan. B. I, 92; PK 10, 87a; Aggadat Bereshit 22, 45–46) maintain that the woman at whose counsel Sheba was killed by the inhabitants of Abel of Beth-maacah was Serah the daughter of Asher, concerning whom see text on p. 391, and Index, s. v. “Paradise, Entering Alive”. The Midrashim cited above give, in full, her pleadings with the inhabitants of the city to yield to the demands of Joab for the surrender of Sheba. On the confusion of Sheba with Shemi the son of Gera by ps.-Jerome on 2 Sam. 16.10, see Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 56–57. About the early history of Jeroboam, comp. the following addition to 1 Kings 12.24 found in Septuagint. There was a man...a servant to Solomon, and his name was Jeroboam, and the name of his mother was Sarira, a harlot...And he built for Solomon Sarira in mount Ephraim, and he had three hundred chariots of horses. He built the citadel with the levies of the house of Ephraim, fortified the city of David, and aspired to the kingdom. And Solomon sought to kill him, and he escaped to Sousakim king of Egypt, and was with him until Solomon died. And Jeroboam heard in Egypt that Solomon was dead, and he spoke in the ears of the king of Egypt, saying: “Let me go, and I will depart into my land”; and Sousakim gave to Jeroboam Ano, the eldest sister of Thelkemina his wife, to be his wife. She was great among the daughters of the king, and she bore to Jeroboam Ahijah...And Jeroboam departed out of Egypt, and came into the land of Sarira...And hither the whole tribe of Ephraim assembled, and Jeroboam built a fortress there. The description of Jeroboam’s mother as a harlot is perhaps an old haggadic explanation of her name Zarua צָרוּעַ, literally “leper”. Comp. Yebamot 63b: אִשָּׁה רְעָה צָרְעָה לְבַעֲלָה “A shrew is like leprosy to her husband”, and see also p. 931, footnote 96.

3. According to Sanhedrin 102a, Jeroboam left Palestine with the intention never to return there again.

4. Seder ‘Olam 1, and the parallel passages cited by Ratner; Baba Batra 121b. Ahijah is one of the seven whose terms of life overlapped one another, so that they form a chain extending from the creation of the world until the end of time. These seven are: Adam, Methuselah, Noah, Shem, Jacob, Amram, Ahijah, and Elijah, the last of whom continues to live. According to Septuagint 1 Kings 12.24, Ahijah was sixty years old when Ano the wife of Jeroboam (comp. note 2) made him inquire about the outcome of her son’s illness; see 1 Kings 14.1, seq. Septuagint further differs from the masoretic text of 1 Kings 11, 29, seq., by making the prophet Shemaiah, instead of Ahijah, the bearer of the divine message to Jeroboam.

5. BR 35.2; Yerushalmi Berakot 9, 13d (bottom); PK 10, 88a. In the legends of the Hasidim Ahijah figures as the teacher of R. Israel Baal Shem Tob, the founder of the sect; comp. Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, II, 389; see also text on p. 1043. Ahijah suffered a martyr’s death: He was executed by Abijah (the wicked king of Judah and not his namesake, the son of Jeroboam, who is praised in the Haggadah for his piety; compare with p. 984), as was his contemporary Shemaiah by Basha the wicked king of Israel. See Midrash Aggadah Num. 30.5.

JEROBOAM

Jeroboam was the true disciple<sup>6</sup> of this great prophet. His doctrine was as pure as the new garment Ahijah wore when he met Jeroboam near Jerusalem, and his learning exceeded that of all the scholars of his time except his own teacher Ahijah alone. The prophet was in the habit of discussing secret lore with Jeroboam and subjects in the Torah whose existence was wholly unknown to others.<sup>7</sup>

Had Jeroboam proved himself worthy of his high position, the length of his reign would have equalled David’s.<sup>8</sup> It was his pride that led him into destruction. He set up the golden calves as objects to be worshipped by the people, in order to wean them from their habit of going on pilgrimages to Jerusalem. He knew that in the Temple only members of the royal house of David were privileged to sit down. No exception would be made in favor of Jeroboam, and so he would have had to stand while Rehoboam would be seated. Rather than appear in public as the subordinate of the Judean king, he introduced the worship of idols, which secured him full royal prerogatives.

In the execution of his plan he proceeded with great cunning, and his reputation as a profound scholar and pious saint stood him in good stead. This was his method: He seated an impious man next to a pious man, and then said to each couple: “Will you put your signature to anything I intend to do?” The two would give an affirmative answer. “Do you want me as king?” he would then ask, only to receive an affirmative answer again. “And you will do whatever I order?” he continued. “Yes,” was the reply. “I am to infer, then, that you will even pay worship to idols if I command it?” said Jeroboam. “God forbid!” the pious member of the couple would exclaim, whereupon his impious companion, who was in league with the king, would turn upon him: “Canst thou really suppose for an instant that a man like Jeroboam would serve idols? He only wishes to put our loyalty to the test.” Through such machinations he succeeded in obtaining the signatures of the most pious, even the signature of the prophet Ahijah. Now Jeroboam had the people in his power. He could exact the vilest deeds from them.<sup>9</sup>

So entrenched, Jeroboam brought about the division between Judah and Israel, a consummation which his father, Sheba the son of Bichri, had not been able to compass under David, because God desired to have the Temple erected before the split occurred.<sup>10</sup> Not yet satisfied, Jeroboam sought to involve the Ten Tribes in a war against Judah and Jerusalem. But the people of the northern kingdom refused to enter into hostilities with their brethren, and with the ruler of their brethren, a descendant of David. Jeroboam appealed to the elders of the Israelites, and they referred him to the Danites, the most efficient of their warriors; but they swore by the head of Dan, the ancestor of their tribe, that they would never consent to shed the blood of their brethren. They were even on the point of rising against Jeroboam, and the clash between them and the followers of Jeroboam war prevented only because God prompted the Danites to leave Palestine.

Their first plan was to journey to Egypt and take possession of the land. They gave it up when their princes reminded them of the Biblical prohibition<sup>11</sup> against dwelling in Egypt. Likewise they were restrained from attacking the Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites, for the Torah commands considerate treatment of them. Finally they decided to go to Egypt, but not to stay there, only to pass through to Ethiopia. The Egyptians were in great terror of the Danites, and their hardiest warriors occupied the roads travelled by them. Arrived in Ethiopia, the Danites slew a part of the population, and exacted tribute from the rest.<sup>12</sup>

The departure of the Danites relieved Judah from the apprehended invasion by Jeroboam, but danger arose from another quarter. Shishak,<sup>13</sup> the ruler of Egypt, who was the father-in-law of Solomon, came to Jerusalem and demanded his daughter's jointure. He carried off the throne of Solomon,<sup>14</sup> and also the treasure which the Israelites had taken from the Egyptians at the time of the exodus. So the Egyptian money returned to its source.<sup>15</sup>

---

6. Jeroboam was as distinguished a scholar as his master, the prophet Ahijah; see Tehillim 5, 55, and comp. also MHG I, 412.

7. Sanhedrin 102a. Ahijah and Jeroboam discussed the mysteries of the divine throne (מעשה מרכבה). The angels therefore asked God: “Dost Thou reveal the secrets of the Torah to this man who is going to set up two calves to be worshipped?” God rejoined: “Is this man at present righteous or wicked?” “Righteous”, replied the angels. Whereupon God said: “I deal with a man as he is, not as he will be.” See Tehillim 5, 55. Compare footnote 215 on p. 220. The opposite view is given in Zohar Hadash, Bereshit (end) and Ahare (end), where it is said that God had intended to take away Jeroboam from this world while he was still young and pious; but at the pleading of the angels He did not carry out His intention. Later, when Jeroboam forsook God and His Torah, the angels realized that in their short-sightedness they pleaded for the life of a terrible sinner.

8. Seder ‘Olam 15. That Jeroboam persisted in his evil ways, notwithstanding the miracle performed by the prophet of Judah (on this miracle, see Tan. B. III, 10; Tan. Tehillim 12), was the fault of the false prophet of Beth-el (1 Kings 13.11, seq.) who persuaded the king that no miracle took place at all, and supported his words by the fact that the prophet of Judah was killed by a lion, from which incident one ought to conclude that he was not a true prophet; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 9. For further details concerning the true prophet of Judah and the false prophet of Beth-el, see PK 2, 14b–15a, and the parallel passages cited by Buber, ad loc., and Ratner's note 29 on Seder 'Olam 20, as well as the references cited in footnote 133 on p. 881. One might infer the great merit of hospitality from the fact that the false prophet of Beth-el received a revelation (see 1 Kings 13.20) as a reward for his kindness towards the prophet of Judah to whom he offered hospitality; Sanhedrin 103b; ER 12, 60–61.

9. Sanhedrin 101b; compare with p. 1037. As to the view that only members of the house of David were privileged to sit down in the Temple (i. e., עזרה "Temple court"), see footnote 88 on p. 927 and comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 4.2, who takes pains to point out that on the occasion of the dedication of the Temple Solomon sat down and then rose for his prayer. Another legend charges the people rather than Jeroboam with the sin of idolatry. Intoxicated with wine at the coronation of Jeroboam, they urged him to erect idols; but not being sure that they would not change their mind on becoming sober, he delayed his decision till the following day. When he saw that the people persisted in their demand, he yielded to them on the condition that the members of the Synhedrion be killed (or, according to others, removed from office), so that one might worship idols without fear of being executed for the offence. Jeroboam then sent emissaries through the entire country to entice the pious to worship idols. These emissaries used to address the people in the following manner: The most illustrious generation was that of the wilderness (see text on p. 592), and it worshipped the golden calf, without receiving severe punishment. Our king therefore desires to follow the example set by this generation. It was Jeroboam's pride and ambition which made him forsake his God. He knew that in the Sabbatical year the king is commanded to read the word of God to the people in the Temple (see Deut. 31.10), and as long as Israel should make pilgrimages to Jerusalem, Rehoboam would inevitably appear to the entire nation as the real king. Jeroboam therefore established the worship of the calves, and in this way prevented the people from going up to Jerusalem. He abolished not only the three festivals, when pilgrimages were made, but also the Sabbaths; Yerushalmi 'Abodah Zarah 1, 39b; Jerome on Hos. 7.4–7. See also the quotation from an unknown Midrash in Shu'aib, Nizzabim 114a, where it is likewise said that Jeroboam claimed to be the legitimate king of Israel on account of his Ephraimitic descent. At first, however, he refused to accept the offered crown because of his poverty; whereupon the people (or, according to some, Ahijah) bestowed great wealth upon him; Aggadat Shir 95, according to the reading of Makiri, Is. 7, 105.

10. Koheleth 2.11, 3. On Jeroboam's father see text on p. 981. At Shechem Israel renounced not only his allegiance to the house of David, but also his loyalty to God and his sanctuary, (see 1 Kings 12.16, where לאהליך is taken to be an "emendation of the Scribes" for לאלהיך "to thy gods"); the salvation of Israel will therefore not come before Israel "seeks the Lord their God, David their king, and the sanctuary" which God in His great goodness had given to His people; Shemuel 13, 84.

11. According to the Rabbis, the Bible forbids one to dwell in Egypt. Comp. Mekilta Beshallah 2, 28b; Yerushalmi Sukkah 55b; Esther R. 1.3 (פתיחתא).

12. Eldad 25–26.

13. His real name was Zebub, "fly", and he is called Shishak (from Shuk, "desire"), because he longed for the death of Solomon whom he feared to attack; Seder 'Olam 20; Aggadat Shir 7, 43. Comp. Esther R. 1.2, 13.

14. On the history of the throne, see text on p. 969.

15. Pesahim 119a. On the further history of these treasures see text on p. 397. Three returned to the place whence they came: Israel, the Torah, and the treasures. Israel came originally from Babylon (Abraham from the other side of the river), and returned thither after having been exiled from the Holy Land; the Torah came from heaven, and the letters of the tables ascended to heaven after Moses broke the tables (see text on p. 625); the treasures which came from Egypt returned thither; Pesahim 87a; Mekilta Amalek 1, 53b; ARN 41, 132–133; second version 47, 130.

THE TWO ABIJAHs

Jeroboam did not entirely forego his plan of a campaign against Judah, but it was not executed until Abijah had succeeded his father Rehoboam on the throne of Jerusalem. The Judean king was victorious. However, he could not long enjoy the fruits of his victory. Shortly after occurred his death, brought on by his own crimes. In his war against Jeroboam he had indulged in excessive cruelty; he ordered the corpses of the enemy to be mutilated, and permitted them to be buried only after putrefaction had set in. Such savagery was all the more execrable as it prevented many widows from entering into a second marriage. Mutilating the corpses had made identification impossible, and so it was left doubtful whether their husbands were among the dead.

Moreover, Abijah used most disrespectful language about the prophet Ahijah the Shilonite; he called him a “son of Belial” in his address to the people on Mount Zemaraim. That in itself merited severe punishment. Finally, his zeal for the true worship of God, which Abijah had urged as the reason of the war between himself and Jeroboam, cooled quickly. When he obtained possession of Beth-el, he failed to do away with the golden calves.<sup>16</sup>

In this respect his namesake, the Israelitish king Abijah, the son of Jeroboam, was by far his superior. By removing the guards stationed at the frontier, he bade defiance to the command of his father, who had decreed the death penalty for pilgrimages to Jerusalem. More than this, he himself ventured to go up to Jerusalem in fulfillment of his religious duty.<sup>17</sup>

---

16. Seder 'Olam 16; Yerushalmi Yebamot 16, 15a; BR 56.20; WR 33.5; Ruth R. 4.8; Shemuel 18, 100; comp. Josephus, Antiqui., VII, 11.3, who also maintains that Abijam (= Abijah in 2 Chron. 13.1) died directly after his victory over Jeroboam. Abijah, in speaking of the supporters of Jeroboam as “sons of Belial” (see 2 Chron. 13.7, where the Hebrew representing “vain men” is בְּנֵי בָלִיעַל), insulted the prophet Ahijah, who more than anybody else contributed to the elevation of Jeroboam to the throne of Israel.

17. Mo'ed Katan 28b. According to the Kabbalists, the son of Abijah will be the Ephraimitic Messiah; Zohar Hadash Balak (end). Besides Abijah there were others who, like him, disregarded the command of Jeroboam against pilgrimages to Jerusalem, and by clever ruses fooled the guards at the frontier. The descendants of these pious men celebrated the fifteenth of the month of Ab as a festival by bringing sacrifices to the Temple; see Yerushalmi Ta'anit 4, 68b; Targum 1 Chron. 2.54. Comp., however, Babli Ta'anit 28a, and Megillat Ta'anit 5.9–10, where the pious men, who at the risk of their lives made pilgrimages to Jerusalem, are said to have lived at the time when the Greek government decreed against the Jews ordinances “like those of Jeroboam”. With regard to Jeroboam's edict against pilgrimages to Jerusalem, see Yerushalmi 'Abodah Zarah 1, 39b, where the text seems to be corrupt, though Yalkut II, 542, on Hos. 7, has the same reading as our texts.

ASA

Asa, the son of Abijah of Judah, was a worthier and a more pious ruler than his father had been. He did away with the gross worship of Priapus,<sup>18</sup> to which his mother was devoted. To reward him for his piety, God gave him the victory over Zerah, the king of the Ethiopians. As a result of this victory he came again into possession of the throne of Solomon and of the treasures Shishak had taken from his grandfather, which Zerah in turn had wrested from Shishak.<sup>19</sup> Asa himself did not long keep them. Baasha, the king of Israel, together with Ben-hadad, the Aramean king, attacked Asa, who tried to propitiate Ben-hadad by giving him his lately re-acquired treasures.<sup>20</sup> The prophet justly rebuked him for trusting in princes rather than in God, and that in spite of the fact that the Divine help had been visible in his conflict with the Ethiopians and the Lubim; for there had been no need for him to engage in battle with them; in response to his mere prayer God had slain the enemy.<sup>21</sup> In general, Asa showed little confidence in God; he rather trusted his own skill. Accordingly, he made even the scholars of his realm enlist in the army sent out against Baasha. He was punished by being afflicted with gout, he of all men, who was distinguished on account of the strength residing in his feet.<sup>22</sup> Furthermore, the division between Judah and Israel was made permanent, though God had at first intended to limit the exclusion of David's house from Israel to only thirty-six years. Had Asa shown himself deserving, he would have been accorded dominion over the whole of Israel.<sup>23</sup> In point of fact, Asa, through his connection by marriage with the house of Omri, contributed to the stability of the Israelitish dynasty, for as a result of the support given by the southern ruler Omri succeeded in putting his rival Tibni out of the way. Then it was that God resolved that the descendants of Asa should perish simultaneously with the descendants of Omri. This doom was accomplished when Jehu killed the king of Judah on account of his friendship and kinship with Joram the king of Samaria.<sup>24</sup>

---

18. 'Abodah Zarah 44a; Vulgate 1 Kings 15.13; Jerome on Hos. 4, 14. The assonance of "Phallus" and מַלְלָצָה [מַלְלָצָה] may have suggested this assumption. Comp., however, Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 10.3, who quotes Herodotus of Halicarnassus to the effect that the king of Egypt (i. e., Shishak, who, shortly before Asa, conquered Jerusalem) left behind him pillars upon which were engraved the secret parts of women. To reconcile the contradiction between 1 Kings 15.10 and 2 Chron. 13.2, it is asserted that after repenting of her idolatrous practices, the name of Asa's mother was changed; her father's name, too, was changed; the latter was none other than the wicked Absalom. See Targum 2 Chron., loc. cit., and 15.16. Comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 10.1, and ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 15.16. The latter quotes the Jewish tradition, according to which the water of the brook of Kidron turned into fire, and burned the image of the idol which Asa threw into it. The commentators Kimhi and Gersonides on 1 Kings 15.2, as well as ps.-Rashi on 2 Chron. 13.2, call attention to the fact that it was not the mother, but the grandmother, of Asa who had been addicted to idolatry. This is another attempt to reconcile the contradiction between 1 Kings 15.2 and 15.10. Compare footnote 91 on p. 976.

19. Pesahim 119a; Seder 'Olam 16; Esther R. 1.2. Compare with p. 397, and text on pp. 969, 993. The number in the hostile army (comp. 2 Chron. 14.8) was established by Asa from the number of the chariots; comp. Mekilta Beshallah 1, 27b. Most historians identify Zerah with Osorchan I, the successor of Sesanchis (Shi-shak). It is noteworthy that Seder 'Olam merely states that Zerah restored to Asa what Shishak had won in the battle with Rehoboam, and does not mention that Zerah had in turn taken it from Shishak in war. This latter statement appears first in the Talmud.

20. Pesahim 119a; Seder 'Olam 16. Comp. the references at the beginning of the preceding note.

21. Ekah, introduction, XXX, and Tehillim 79, 358, which read: Four kings expressed four different wishes, and God granted to each of them his desire. David prayed for strength to attack his enemies (Ps. 18.38), and God granted his prayer (1 Sam. 30.17). Asa said: "I have no strength to attack my enemies; but if God so wills, I shall defeat them by pursuing them"; his prayer was heard (2 Chron. 14. 11–12). Jehoshaphat said: "I can neither attack the enemy nor pursue him; but I shall leave the carrying on of the war to God, whom I shall continue to praise and glorify"; God defeated the enemies of Jehoshaphat, while the pious king was engaged in praising Him (2 Chron. 20.21–22). Hezekiah said: "I cannot attack the enemy, nor pursue him, nor engage in continually praising God; but I pray that He should annihilate him while I sleep"; God destroyed the army of the Assyrians while the Jews were asleep (2 Kings 19.35). According to the Haggadah, the words addressed by the prophet Azariah to Asa and his people (2 Chron. 15.3, seq.) contain a prophecy and are to be translated: And for long seasons Israel will be without the true God, etc.; WR 19.9; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 12.2.

22. Sotah 10a. See also Nedarim 31b, where it is stated that the servitude of Israel in Egypt was a punishment for Abraham's having made the scholars engage in war against the kings. On the view that Asa was distinguished for having his strength in his feet, see text on p. 58.

23. Seder 'Olam 16; Tosefta Sotah 12.1–2

24. Seder 'Olam 17; Tosefta Sotah 12.13.

JEHOSHAPHAT AND AHAB

The successors of Omri and Asa, each in his way, were worthy of their fathers. Jehoshaphat, the son of Asa, was very wealthy. The treasures which his father had sent to the Aramean ruler reverted to him in consequence of his victory over the Ammonites, themselves the conquerors of the Arameans, whom they had despoiled of their possessions.<sup>25</sup> His power was exceedingly great; each division of his army counted no less than one hundred and sixty thousand warriors.<sup>26</sup> Yet rich and powerful as he was, he was so modest that he refused to don his royal apparel when he went to the house of the prophet Elisha to consult him; he appeared before him in the attire of one of the people.<sup>27</sup> Unlike his father, who had little consideration for scholars, Jehoshaphat was particularly gracious toward them. When a scholar appeared before him, he arose, hastened to meet him, and kissing and embracing him, greeted him with “Rabbi, Rabbi!”<sup>28</sup>

Jehoshaphat concerned himself greatly about the purity and sanctification of the Temple. He was the author of the ordinance forbidding any one to ascend the Temple mount whose term of uncleanness had not expired, even though he had taken the ritual bath.<sup>29</sup> His implicit trust in God made him a complete contrast to his skeptical father. He turned to God and implored His help when to human reason help seemed an utter impossibility. In the war with the Arameans, an enemy held his sword at Jehoshaphat’s very throat, ready to deal the fatal blow, but the king entreated help of God, and it was granted.<sup>30</sup>

In power and wealth, Ahab, king of Samaria, outstripped his friend Jehoshaphat, for Ahab is one of that small number of kings who have ruled over the whole world.<sup>31</sup> No less than two hundred and fifty-two kingdoms acknowledged his dominion.<sup>32</sup> As for his wealth, it was so abundant that each of his hundred and forty children possessed several ivory palaces, summer and winter residences.<sup>33</sup> But what gives Ahab his prominence among the Jewish kings is neither his power nor his wealth, but his sinful conduct. For him the gravest transgressions committed by Jeroboam were slight peccadilloes. At his order the gates of Samaria bore the inscription: “Ahab denies the God of Israel.” He was so devoted to idolatry, to which he was led astray by his wife Jezebel, that the fields of Palestine were full of idols. But he was not wholly wicked, he possessed some good qualities. He was liberal toward scholars, and he showed great reverence for the Torah, which he studied zealously. When Ben-hadad exacted all he possessed—his wealth, his wives, his children—he acceded to his demands regarding everything except the Torah; that he refused peremptorily to surrender.<sup>34</sup> In the war that followed between himself and the Syrians, he was so indignant at the presumptuousness of the Aramean upstart that he himself saddled his war-horse for the battle. His zeal was rewarded by God; he gained a brilliant victory in a battle in which no less than a hundred thousand of the Syrians were slain, as the prophet Micaiah had foretold to him.<sup>35</sup> The same seer<sup>36</sup> admonished him not to deal gently with Ben-hadad. God’s word to him had been: “Know that I had to set many a pitfall and trap to deliver him into thy hand. If thou lettest him escape, thy life will be forfeit for his.”<sup>37</sup>

Nevertheless the disastrous end of Ahab is not to be ascribed to his disregard of the prophet’s warning—for he finally liberated Ben-hadad, —but chiefly to the murder of his kinsman Naboth, whose execution on the charge of treason he had ordered, so that he might put himself in possession of Naboth’s wealth.<sup>38</sup> His victim was a pious man, and in the habit of going on pilgrimages to Jerusalem on the festivals. As he was a great singer, his presence in the Holy City attracted many other pilgrims thither. Once Naboth failed to go on his customary pilgrimage. Then it was that his false conviction took place—a very severe punishment for the transgression, but not wholly unjustifiable.<sup>39</sup> Under Jehoshaphat’s influence and counsel, Ahab did penance for his crime, and the punishment God meted out to him was thereby mitigated to the extent that his dynasty was not cut off from the throne at his death.<sup>40</sup> In the heavenly court of justice,<sup>41</sup> at Ahab’s trial, the accusing witnesses and his defenders exactly balanced each other in number and statements, until the spirit of Naboth appeared and turned the scale against Ahab. The spirit of Naboth it had been, too, that had led astray the prophets of Ahab, making them all use the very same words in prophesying a victory at Ramothgilead. This literal unanimity aroused Jehoshaphat's suspicion, and caused him to ask for "a prophet of the Lord", for the rule is: "The same thought is revealed to many prophets, but no two prophets express it in the same words."<sup>42</sup> Jehoshaphat's mistrust was justified by the issue of the war. Ahab was slain in a miraculous way by Naaman, at that time only a common soldier of the rank and file. God permitted Naaman's missile to penetrate Ahab's armor, though the latter was harder than the former.<sup>43</sup>

The mourning for Ahab was so great that the memory of it reached posterity.<sup>44</sup> The funeral procession was unusually impressive; no less than thirty-six thousand warriors, their shoulders bared, marched before his bier.<sup>45</sup> Ahab is one of the few in Israel who have no portion in the world to come.<sup>46</sup> He dwells in the fifth division of the nether world, which is under the supervision of the angel Oniel. However, he is exempt from the tortures inflicted upon his heathen associates.<sup>47</sup>

25. Pesahim 119a; compare with pp. 397; note 19.

26. Tehillim 15.118 הספירה is very likely a gloss to הדירגון.

27. BaR 21.6; Tan. B. IV, 152; Tan. Pinehas 3. According to another view quoted in these sources, Jehoshaphat did not don his royal robes from the moment he heard that God had decreed the punishment of Asa's descendants; see note 24, as well as the following note. Jehoshaphat had to pay dearly for his friendship and close connection with the wicked house of Omri; his commercial undertakings ceased to prosper from the time he associated himself with the goddess; ARN 9, 42; Alphabet of Ben Sira 14a, as a comment upon 2 Chron. 20.37.

28. Ketubot 103b; Makkot 24a; Tehillim 15, 118. Comp. also Yerushalmi Sotah (end), where the king's humility is praised (read שרץ מן). Notwithstanding his lack of regard for scholars (text on p. 985), Asa nevertheless married the daughter of the prophet Hanani (2 Chron. 16.7), and the issue of this marriage was Jehoshaphat. The prophet Eliezer, who was active during the reign of Jehoshaphat

(2 Chron. 20.37), was a grandson of Hanani, and accordingly בן דודוהו in the verse referred to is to be translated "the son of his uncle"; ps.-Jerome, 2 Chron. 20.31 and 37.

29. Yebamot 7b, given as a haggadic interpretation of החצר החדשה of 2 Chron. 20.5. For another Haggadah on this verse see ps.-Jerome, ad loc.

30. Yerushalmi Berakot 9, 13b; Tehillim 4, 3. See also Babli Berakot 10a (bottom), which contains an allusion to it not recognized by Rashi (caption מקובלני).—In reality God had condemned Jehoshaphat to death for having joined Ahab in war, and he was only saved by his prayer. He lived seven years longer, a period which Scripture puts to his son's account, not to his own. Seder 'Olam 17; notes 24 and 27.

31. Megillah 11a; PRE 11. Compare footnote 82 on p. 161. See also Septuagint 1 Kings 18.10, where Obadiah's words to Elijah read: "There is not a nation or a kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee; and if they said: He is not here, then hath he (Ahab) set fire to the kingdom and its territories, because he hath not found thee." This undoubtedly presupposes that Ahab had power over all the kingdoms. Comp. Index, s. v. "Cosmocrators".

32. Esther R 1.1. ER 9, 49, counts only two hundred and thirty-two, who, according to 1 Kings 20.15, are supposed to be the sons of the conquered kings whom Ahab held as hostages. Of them it is said that life in the midst of Jewish surroundings made them pious, and through them God granted victory to Ahab in his war with Ben-hadad. According to Esther R., loc. cit., twenty of the satrapies owing allegiance to Ahab were devastated by the famine which took place in his time, and therefore only two hundred and thirty-two hostages are mentioned in 1 Kings, loc. cit.

33. Shemuel 2, 47; Koheleth 6.3; Esther R. 1.1; Nispahim 44. On the winter and summer residences of the rich, see Midrash Shir 24a; on Ahab's great wealth see Berakot 61b; ER 9, 49. On Ahab's wicked children, see Koheleth 1.18.

34. Sanhedrin 102b; 103b. Comp. also Tan. Shemot 29 and Gaster, Exempla, pp. 184–185. In Tanḥuma the story of the Talmud is elaborated. In the latter passage the great learning of Ahab and of the two other wicked kings (Jeroboam and Manasseh) is emphasized. See also MHG I, 412; text on pp. 982 and 1054.

35. Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 219; Tan. B. II, 16; Tan. Shemot 29. During the reign of Ahab Israel was addicted to idolatry, but possessed the great virtue of keeping away from slander and backbiting. During the time of Samuel and Saul the Israelites were just the reverse: they were devoted to the study of the Torah (even young boys and girls were learned in the law), but they had "evil tongues". The former were victorious in their wars, the latter were unfortunate in their military expeditions. One may infer from this that one is severely punished for the “evil use of his tongue”. See Yerushalmi Peah 1, 16a; WR 26.2; DR 5.10; Tehillim 7, 67; PK 4, 31b; Tan. B. IV, 106; Tan. Hukkat 4; BaR 19.2. Ahab’s generation did not reveal the hiding-place of Elijah and the other hundred prophets; but David’s abode in his flight from Saul was betrayed many a time. The great victory of Ahab and his people over the Syrians was the reward for their observance of the Sabbath. Likewise under Ahab’s son it was because of the observance of the Sabbath that Israel was victorious in the war against Mesha. See Mekilta RS, 162 = Midrash Gadol 124.

36. Seder ‘Olam 20; Tosefta Sanhedrin 14.15; Babli 89b; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 14.15. The first and the last sources take the prophet mentioned in 1 Kings 20.13, 22 and 28 to be Micaiah, whose activity at the time of Ahab is spoken of in 1 Kings 22.8.

37. WR 26.8; Tan. B. III, 84; Tan. Emor 3; Shemuel 24, 121; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 11, 30c. Comp. also Baraita di-Yeshua’ 46, where חזק בן דוד should be read instead of חזק.

38. Sanhedrin 48b; Tosefta 4.6. Two views are given there with regard to Ahab’s claims upon Naboth’s possessions. According to one, the king and Naboth were cousins, and when the latter died without issue, his possessions reverted to the nearest of kin, that is, Ahab. According to the other view, the property of those executed for lèse majesté fell to the royal treasury; compare with p. 945. That Naboth was of noble descent is asserted by Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 13.7.

39. PR 25, 127a. Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 13.7, speaks of the three false witnesses who testified against Naboth. This presupposes the old Halakah according to which in cases involving capital punishment three witnesses (or to be more accurate, one accuser and two witnesses) are necessary. Comp. Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 170, note 5. Naboth’s fate illustrates the saying, “Woe unto the wicked and woe to his associate”; Naboth paid with his life for having been on friendly and close relations with the wicked Ahab; Alphabet of Ben Sira, 4b.

40. PK 25, 160b; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28b; Sotah 3, 18d; Ta’anit 25b; PRE 43; Shir 1.5.

41. Commenting on 1 Kings 22.19, the Rabbis remark that in the heavenly court there were some who pleaded for Ahab’s life and others who demanded his death; this is the meaning of Scripture in speaking of the host of heaven standing by God on His right and on His left; Tan. B. I, 96; II, 8 and 84; Tan. Shemot 18 and Mishpatim 15; Yelammedenu in Aruk, s. v. שמאל.

42. Sanhedrin 89a; Shabbat 102b. But Naboth’s soul had to leave the abode of the pious, which is near God, for God tolerates not in His presence those who resort to lies; Sanhedrin and Shabbat loc. cit.; Tosefta-Targum 1 Kings 22.21 and 23. On the view that no two prophets express themselves in the same words, see also Aggadat Bereshit 14, 30; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 15.4. The last-named author writes: Zedekiah exhorted him (the king) not to hearken to Micaiah, for he did not speak the truth at all. To support his words, he instanced the saying of Elijah, who was a greater prophet to foretell the future than Micaiah. Now Elijah prophesied that the dogs would lick his (Ahab’s) blood in the field of Naboth (see 1 Kings 21.19). It was therefore plain that Micaiah was a false prophet, since he contradicted the words of a prophet greater than himself, and asserted that Ahab would be slain in a place three days’ journey distant from there. It was, however, subsequently seen that Micaiah did not contradict Elijah: Ahab fell in Ramoth Gilead, but his blood was licked by the dogs in Samaria, when they washed the king’s chariot there (1 Kings 22.38). See Josephus, ibid.; comp. also Sanhedrin 39b; Tosefta-Targum 1 Kings 22.34. Ahab’s sad end illustrates the truth of the sayings: “He who honors his enemy is like an ass”, and “He who honors his enemy will meet his death through him”. Ahab honored his enemy Ben-hadad, and was slain in the war against him; Alphabet of Ben Sira 10b–11a.

43. Tehillim 78, 350; Shemuel 11, 80. That it was Naaman’s missile which struck Ahab is also mentioned by Josephus, Antiqui., XVIII, 15.5; in Targum 2 Chron. 18.33; by Ephraem, 2 Kings 6.1. On the nature of this miracle, see footnote 44 on p. 917. Ahab was the only Jew slain in this battle; the suffering of the prophet Micaiah who had himself wounded to bring home the truth of his prophecy concerning the fatal result of the war against the Syrians (1 Kings 22.37; comp. note 36) atoned for the sins of Israel, who were spared further punishment. See Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 11, 30c. This passage, however, is very obscure, and its purport probably is that the suffering of the pious Jehoshaphat (see text on p. 987) had the atoning power.

44. Megillah 3a; Mo’ed Katan 28b; Targum Zech. 12.11. Comp., however, Sanhedrin 39b, where 1 Kings 22.36 is explained: And a jubilant song was heard through the battle arrays; the army rejoiced in the final execution of the divine punishment on Ahab.

45. Baba Kamma 17a. On the baring of the shoulders as a sign of mourning, see Büchler, Zeitschrift für alttest. Wissenschaft, XXI, 81. seq.

46. Sanhedrin, Mishnah 10.1. On the persons who have no share in the world to come, see footnote 100 on p. 906. Compare also footnote 65 on p. 922.

47. Konen 31. Compare with pp. 882 and 932.

JEZEBEL

Wicked as Ahab was, his wife Jezebel was incomparably worse. Indeed, she is in great part the cause of his suffering, and Ahab realized it. Once Rabbi Levi expounded the Scriptural verse in which the iniquity of Ahab and the influence of his wife over him are discussed, dwelling upon the first half for two months. Ahab visited him in a dream, and reproached him with expatiating on the first half of the verse to the exclusion of the latter half. Thereupon the Rabbi took the second half of the verse as the text of his lectures for the next two months, demonstrating all the time that Jezebel was the instigator of Ahab's sins.<sup>48</sup> Her misdeeds are told in the Scriptures. To those there recounted must be added her practice of attaching unchaste images to Ahab's chariot for the purpose of stimulating his carnal desires. Therefore those parts of his chariot were spattered with his blood when he fell at the hand of the enemy.<sup>49</sup> She had her husband weighed every day, and the increase of his weight in gold she sacrificed to the idol.<sup>50</sup> Jezebel was not only the daughter and the wife of a king, she was also co-regent with her husband, the only reigning queen in Jewish history except Athaliah.<sup>51</sup>

Hardened sinner though Jezebel was, even she had good qualities. One of them was her capacity for sympathy with others in joy and sorrow. Whenever a funeral cortege passed the royal palace, Jezebel would descend and join the ranks of the mourners, and, also, when a marriage procession went by, she took part in the merry-making in honor of the bridal couple. By way of reward the limbs and organs with which she had executed these good deeds were left intact by the horses that trampled her to death in the portion of Jezreel.<sup>52</sup>

48. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28b. Comp. also ER 9, 49, and Babli 102b, where several authorities are quoted to the effect that Jezebel was mainly responsible for Ahab's wicked life.

49. Sanhedrin 39b.

50. Sanhedrin 100b, and somewhat different Yerushalmi 10, 28b. On the custom to devote to the Temple gold corresponding to one's increase in weight, see Yoma 38b; Sifra 26.29; Ekah 1, 86–87; comp. further 'Arakin Mishnah 5.1.

51. Esther R. 1.9. Among the heathen Semiramis and Vashti are considered the two reigning queens. Shemuel 2 (beginning) calls Jezebel "the daughter of a priest", while 1 Kings 16.31 describes her father as a king.

52. PRE 17.

JORAM OF ISRAEL

Of Joram, the son of Ahab, it can only be said that he had his father's faults without his father's virtues. Ahab was liberal, Joram miserly, nay, he even indulged in usurious practices. From Obadiah, the pious protector of the prophets in hiding, he exacted a high rate of interest on the money needed for their support. As a consequence, at his death he fell pierced between his arms, the arrow going out at his heart, for he had stretched out his arms to receive usury, and had hardened his heart against compassion.<sup>53</sup> In his reign only one event deserves mention, his campaign against Moab, undertaken in alliance with the kings of Judah and Edom, and ending with a splendid victory won by the allied kings. Joram and his people, it need hardly be said, failed to derive the proper lesson from the war. Their disobedience to God's commands went on as before. The king of Moab, on the other hand, in his way sought to come nearer to God. He assembled his astrologers and inquired of them, why it was that the Moabites, successful in their warlike enterprises against other nations, could not measure up to the standard of the Israelites. They explained that God was gracious to Israel, because his ancestor Abraham had been ready to sacrifice Isaac at His bidding. Then the Moabite king reasoned, that if God sets so high a value upon mere good intention, how much greater would be the reward for its actual execution, and he, who ordinarily was a sun worshipper, proceeded to sacrifice his son, the successor to the throne, to the God of Israel. God said: "The heathen do not know Me, and their wrong-doing arises from ignorance; but you, Israelites, know Me, and yet you act rebelliously toward Me."<sup>54</sup>

As a result of the seven years' famine, conditions in Samaria were frightful during the greater part of Joram's reign. In the first year everything stored in the houses was eaten up. In the second, the people supported themselves with what they could scrape together in the fields. The flesh of the clean animals sufficed for the third year; in the fourth the sufferers resorted to the unclean animals; in the fifth, to reptiles and insects; and in the sixth the monstrous thing happened that women crazed by hunger consumed their own children as food. But the acme of distress was reached in the seventh year, when men sought to gnaw the flesh from their own bones.<sup>55</sup> To these occurrences the prophecies of Joel apply, for he lived in the awful days of the famine in Joram's reign.

Luckily, God revealed to Joel at the same time how Israel would be rescued from the famine. The winter following the seven years of dearth brought no relief, for the rain held back until the first day of the month of Nisan. When it began to fall, the prophet said to the people, "Go forth and sow seed!" But they remonstrated with him, "Shall one who hath saved a measure of wheat or two measures of barley not use his store for food and live, rather than for seed and die?" But the prophet urged them, "Nay, go forth and sow seed." And a miracle happened. In the ant hills and mouse holes, they found enough grain for seed, and they cast it upon the ground on the second, the third, and the fourth day of Nisan. On the fifth day of the month rain fell again. Eleven days later the grain was ripe, and the offering of the 'Omer could be brought at the appointed time, on the sixteenth of the month. Of this the Psalmist was thinking when he said, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy."<sup>56</sup>

---

53. ShR 31.9; Tan. Mishpatim 9; Tehillim 15.6. Compare with pp. 1025–1026. According to Gaster, Exempla, p. 185, however, Joram was wicked only "from without", but within he was good, as shown by the sympathy he felt with the sufferings of his people. Comp. 2 Kings 6.30.

54. PK 2, 13; Tan. Ki-Tissa 9; Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 3.27; Ta'anit 4a; Midrash Tannaim 100; Sifre D., 148; Ephraem, 2 Kings 3.26–27; Jerome, Micah 6.7; Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 3.2. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 83–86. According to one view (Sanhedrin 39b), the king of Moab brought his son as a sacrifice to an idol and not to God.

55. Ta'anit 5a; comp. also PR 29, 136b–137a; Sanhedrin 12a; Tosefta 2.9; Yerushalmi 1, 18d; Nedarim 6, 39d.

56. Ta'anit 45a; Yerushalmi 1, 64a. Others identify this Joel with Joel the son of Samuel (see footnote 46 on p. 895), whereas Seder 'Olam 20 (but see Ratner, ad loc.) maintains that Joel, Nahum, and Habakkuk were contemporaries of Manasseh. A fourth view found in PK 16.128b declares Joel, Amos, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi, Ezekiel, and Jeremiah to have been the eight post-exilic prophets. The reading is not certain; some texts have Micah and Habakkuk instead of Joel and Jeremiah. Jerome, Joel 1.1, very likely on the authority of his Jewish masters, maintains that Joel lived shortly after Hosea, and therefore their books follow one another. Besides the literal interpretation of Joel's prophecy, according to which a grievous famine took place in his time which was caused by the locust (see Ta'anit, loc. cit., and Jerome 1.6), there is also a symbolic explanation maintaining that the prophet refers to the devastations brought upon Israel by the "four kingdoms" (comp. Index, s. v.), and therefore he speaks of four kinds of locusts. See Targum and Jerome on Joel 1.4 (he writes: Hebraei interpretantur); WR 5.3. Comp. Rahmer, Die Commentarii zu den XII Kleinen Propheten, Joel,

4–6.; footnote 20 on p. 1039. On the etymologies of the names Joel and his father Pethuel given by Jerome, Joel 1.1, see Rahmer, ibid., 1–3, and the references in footnote 20 on p. 1039. For an interesting description of the different kinds of locusts which devastated the Holy Land in Joel's times, see PRK 43a. Comp. also MHG II, 80. As to this statement in PRK that the heart of a certain kind of locust has the shape of the letter Heth, it is to be remarked that to this day this kind of locust is believed to be the only one permitted to be eaten by the Jews of North Africa. On the war against Moab, which took place during the reign of Joram, the contemporary of Joel, see text on p. 849. This war was caused by the inhuman cruelty of the Moabite king, who had the bodies of the Edomite kings exhumed and their bones burned to lime. God could not permit such an evil deed to pass unpunished, and the Moabites suffered a crushing defeat at the hands of the allied kings. See Baba Batra 22a; Targum and Jerome (who introduces it by tradunt Hebraei) on Amos 2.1. Comp. also Rashi, ad loc.

XVIII ELIJAH

ELIJAH BEFORE HIS TRANSLATION

The Biblical account of the prophet Elijah,<sup>1</sup> of his life and work during the reigns of Ahab and his son Joram, gives but a faint idea of a personage whose history begins with Israel's sojourn in Egypt, and will end only when Israel, under the leadership of the Messiah, shall have taken up his abode again in Palestine.

The Scripture tells us only the name of Elijah's home,<sup>2</sup> but it must be added that he was a priest, identical with Phinehas,<sup>3</sup> the priest zealous for the honor of God, who distinguished himself on the journey through the desert, and played a prominent rôle again in the time of the Judges.<sup>4</sup>

Elijah's first appearance in the period of the Kings was his meeting with Ahab in the house of Hiel, the Beth-elite, the commander-in-chief of the Israelitish army, whom he was visiting to condole with him for the loss of his sons. God Himself had charged the prophet to offer sympathy to Hiel, whose position demanded that honor be paid him. Elijah at first refused to seek out the sinner who had violated the Divine injunction against rebuilding Jericho, for he said that the blasphemous talk of such evil-doers always called forth his rage. Thereupon God promised Elijah that fulfilment should attend whatever imprecation might in his wrath escape him against the godless for their unholy speech. As the prophet entered the general's house, he heard Hiel utter these words: "Blessed be the Lord God of the pious, who grants fulfilment to the words of the pious." Hiel thus acknowledged that he had been justly afflicted with Joshua's curse against him who should rebuild Jericho.

Ahab mockingly asked him: "Was not Moses greater than Joshua, and did he not say that God would let no rain descend upon the earth, if Israel served and worshipped idols? There is not an idol known to which I do not pay homage, yet we enjoy all that is goodly and desirable. Dost thou believe that if the words of Moses remain unfulfilled, the words of Joshua will come true?" Elijah rejoined: "Be it as thou sayest: 'As the Lord, the God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word.' " In pursuance of His promise, God could not but execute the words of Elijah, and neither dew nor rain watered the land.<sup>5</sup>

A famine ensued, and Ahab sought to wreak his vengeance upon the prophet. To escape the king's persecutions, Elijah hid himself. He was sustained with food brought from the larder of the pious king Jehoshaphat by ravens,<sup>6</sup> which at the same time would not approach near to the house of the iniquitous Ahab.<sup>7</sup>

God, who has compassion even upon the impious, tried to induce the prophet to release Him from His promise. To influence him He made the brook run dry<sup>8</sup> whence Elijah drew water for his thirst. As this failed to soften the inflexible prophet, God resorted to the expedient of causing him pain through the death of the son of the widow with whom Elijah was abiding, and by whom he had been received with great honor. When her son, who was later to be known as the prophet Jonah,<sup>9</sup> died, she thought God had formerly been gracious to her on account of her great worthiness as compared with the merits of her neighbors and of the inhabitants of the city, and now He had abandoned her, because her virtues had become as naught in the presence of the great prophet.<sup>10</sup> In his distress Elijah supplicated God to revive the child.<sup>11</sup> Now God had the prophet in His power. He could give heed unto Elijah's prayer only provided the prophet released Him from the promise about a drought, for resuscitation from death is brought about by means of dew, and this remedy was precluded so long as Elijah kept God to His word withholding dew and rain from the earth.<sup>12</sup> Elijah saw there was nothing for it but to yield. However, he first betook himself to Ahab with the purpose of overcoming the obduracy of the people, upon whom the famine had made no impression. Manifest wonders displayed before their eyes were to teach them wisdom. The combat between God and Baal took place on Carmel. The mount that had esteemed itself the proper place for the greatest event in Israelitish history, the revelation of the law, was compensated, by the many miracles now performed upon it, for its disappointment at Sinai's having been preferred to it.<sup>13</sup>

The first wonder occurred in connection with the choice of the bullocks. According to Elijah's arrangement with Ahab, one was to be sacrificed to God, and then one to Baal. A pair of twins, raised together, were brought before the contestants, and it was decided by lot which belonged to God and which to Baal. Elijah had no difficulty with his offering; quickly he led it to his altar. But all the priests of Baal, eight hundred and fifty in number, could not make their victim stir a foot. When Elijah began to speak persuasively to the bullock of Baal, urging it to follow the idolatrous priests, it opened its mouth and said: "We two, yonder bullock and myself, came forth from the same womb, we took our food from the same manger, and now he has been destined for God, as an instrument for the glorification of the Divine Name, while I am to be used for Baal, as an instrument to enrage my Creator." Elijah urged: "Do thou but follow the priests of Baal that they may have no excuse, and then thou wilt have a share in that glorification of God for which my bullock will be used." The bullock: "So dost thou advise, but I swear I will not move from the spot, unless thou with thine own hands wilt deliver me up." Elijah thereupon led the bullock to the priests of Baal.<sup>14</sup>

In spite of this miracle, the priests sought to deceive the people. They undermined the altar, and Hiel hid himself under it with the purpose of igniting a fire at the mention of the word Baal. But God sent a serpent to kill him.<sup>15</sup> In vain the false priests cried and called, Baal! Baal!—the expected flame did not shoot up. To add to the confusion of the idolaters, God had imposed silence upon the whole world. The powers of the upper and of the nether regions were dumb, the universe seemed deserted and desolate, as if without a living creature. If a single sound had made itself heard, the priests would have said, "It is the voice of Baal."<sup>16</sup>

That all preparations might be completed in one day,—the erection of the altar, the digging of the trench, and whatever else was necessary,—Elijah commanded the sun to stand still. “For Joshua,” he said, “thou didst stand still that Israel might conquer his enemies; now stand thou still, neither for my sake, nor for the sake of Israel, but that the Name of God may be exalted.” And the sun obeyed his words.<sup>17</sup>

Toward evening Elijah summoned his disciple Elisha, and bade him pour water over his hands. A miracle happened. Water flowed out from Elijah’s fingers until the whole trench was filled.<sup>18</sup> Then the prophet prayed to God to let fire descend, but in such wise that the people would know it to be a wonder from heaven, and not think it a magician’s trick.<sup>19</sup> He spoke: “Lord of the world, Thou wilt send me as a messenger ‘at the end of time’, but if my words do not meet with fulfilment now, the Jews cannot be expected to believe me in the latter days.”<sup>20</sup> His pleading was heard on high, and fire fell from heaven upon the altar, a fire that not only consumed what it touched, but also licked up the water.<sup>21</sup> Nor was that all; his prayer for rain was also granted. Scarcely had these words dropped from his lips, “Though we have no other merits, yet remember the sign of the covenant which the Israelites bear upon their bodies,” when the rain fell to earth.<sup>22</sup>

In spite of all these miracles, the people persisted in their idolatrous ways and thoughts. Even the seven thousand who had not bowed down unto Baal were unworthy sons of Israel, for they paid homage to the golden calves of Jeroboam.<sup>23</sup>

The misdeeds of the people had swelled to such number that they could no longer reckon upon “the merits of the fathers” to intercede for them; they had overdrawn their account.<sup>24</sup> When they sank to the point of degradation at which they gave up the sign of the covenant, Elijah could control his wrath no longer, and he accused Israel before God.<sup>25</sup> In the cleft of the rock in which God had once aforesaid appeared to Moses, and revealed Himself as compassionate and long-suffering, He now met with Elijah,<sup>26</sup> and conveyed to him, by various signs, that it had been better to defend Israel than accuse him. But Elijah in his zeal for God was inexorable. Then God commanded him to appoint Elisha as his successor, for He said: “I cannot do as thou wouldst have me.”<sup>27</sup> Furthermore God charged him: “Instead of accusing My children, journey to Damascus, where the Gentiles have an idol for each day of the year. Though Israel hath thrown down My altars and slain My prophets, what concern is it of thine?”<sup>28</sup>

The four phenomena that God sent before His appearance—wind,<sup>29</sup> earthquake, fire, and a still small voice—were to instruct Elijah about the destiny of man. God told Elijah that these four represent the worlds through which man must pass: the first stands for this world, fleeting as the wind; the earthquake is the day of death, which makes the human body to tremble and quake; fire is the tribunal in Gehenna, and the still small voice is the Last Judgment, when there will be none but God alone.<sup>30</sup>

About three years<sup>31</sup> later, Elijah was taken up into heaven,<sup>32</sup> but not without first undergoing a struggle with the Angel of Death. He refused to let Elijah enter heaven at his translation, on the ground that he exercised jurisdiction over all mankind, Elijah not excepted. God maintained that at the creation of heaven and earth He had explicitly ordered the Angel of Death to grant entrance to the living prophet, but the Angel of Death insisted that by Elijah’s translation God had given just cause for complaint to all other men, who could not escape the doom of death. Thereupon God: “Elijah is not like other men. He is able to banish thee from the world, only thou dost not recognize his strength.” With the consent of God, a combat took place between Elijah and the Angel of Death. The prophet was victorious, and, if God had not restrained him, he would have annihilated his opponent. Holding his defeated enemy under his feet, Elijah ascended heavenward.<sup>33</sup>

In heaven he goes on living for all time.<sup>34</sup> There he sits recording the deeds of men<sup>35</sup> and the chronicles of the world.<sup>36</sup> He has another office besides. He is the Psychopomp, whose duty is to stand at the cross-ways in Paradise and guide the pious to their appointed places;<sup>37</sup> who brings the souls of sinners up from Gehenna at the approach of the Sabbath, and leads them back again to their merited punishment when the day of rest is about to depart; and who conducts these same souls, after they have atoned for their sins, to the place of everlasting bliss.<sup>38</sup>

Elijah's miraculous deeds will be better understood if we remember that he had been an angel from the very first, even before the end of his earthly career. When God was about to create man, Elijah said to Him: "Master of the world! If it be pleasing in Thine eyes, I will descend to earth, and make myself serviceable to the sons of men." Then God changed his angel name, and later, under Ahab, He permitted him to abide among men on earth, that he might convert the world to the belief that "the Lord is God." His mission fulfilled, God took him again into heaven, and said to him: "Be thou the guardian spirit of My children forever, and spread the belief in Me abroad in the whole world."<sup>39</sup>

His angel name is Sandalphon,<sup>40</sup> one of the greatest and mightiest of the fiery angel host. As such it is his duty to wreath garlands for God out of the prayers sent aloft by Israel.<sup>41</sup> Besides, he must offer up sacrifices in the invisible sanctuary, for the Temple was destroyed only apparently; in reality, it went on existing, hidden from the sight of ordinary mortals.<sup>42</sup>

1. Popularly he is always called Elijah the Prophet (אליהו הנביא); but in the talmudic-midrashic literature Elijah alone, without any qualification, is of more frequent occurrence. The eulogy זכור לטוב "remembered to good" is often added to his name; comp. Berakot 3a; Yerushalmi Terumot 1, 40a; PK 18, 136a; PR 22, 111b; Tan. B. I, 20; II, 7 and 28. In Ecclus. 45.1 this eulogy is added to the name of Moses. See Zunz, Zur Geschichte, 321, seq.

2. Elijah was one of the original inhabitants of Jabesh-Gilead who escaped the war of annihilation waged against this city by the rest of Israel (see Jud. 21.10, seq.), and who called themselves "the inhabitants of Gilead" when they returned to their native city after the war, to indicate the difference between themselves and the new settlers. See Tosafot Ta'anit 3a (beginning ויאמר), and, without giving his authority, Bahur, Tishbi, s. v. תשבי. Elijah never married, and therefore nothing is said in Scripture concerning his family. Zohar Hadash Ruth 2.1 (beginning ר' נתן); Ps.-Matthew 7. Comp. (against it?) the responsum of R. Judai Gaon in תשובות הגאונים (Lyck edition, 19, No. 45); Mishle 30, 105.

3. Baba Mezi'a 114b and Tosefta-Targum 1 Kings 17.13 consider Elijah to have been a priest, but do not identify him with Phinehas. This view is shared by several Church Fathers; comp. Aphraates, 314; Epiphanius, Haereses, 55.3; ps.-Epiphanius, De Vitis Prophetarum, s. v.; the Armenian pseudepigraph in Apocrypha Anecdota II. 164. The identification of Elijah with Phinehas is first met with in ps.-Philo, 48; 48, 1–2, and this view prevails in the later Midrashim; comp. PRE 44; Targum Yerushalmi Exod. 6.18; Num. 25.12; Deut. 30.4; BaR 21.3; Tan. Pinehas 1. Comp. Buber on Tan. B. III, 151, note 19. This identification is very likely presupposed in Sifre N., 131. Compare with pp. 821–822; text on p. 882, and the notes appertaining to them. The tribes of Gad and Benjamin compete with the tribe of Levi for the honor of counting Elijah as theirs; see BR 71.9; ShR 40.4; ER 18, 97; EZ 15, 199. See the full discussion on this point by Friedmann, introduction to ER 2–12, and Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., 76–80. The designation of Elijah as "the disciple of Moses" in talmudic literature (Tosefta Sotah 4.8 and Eduyyot, end; Mekilta Beshallah פתיחתא, 24b) is not to be taken literally, since all prophets may aptly be described as the disciples of Moses, "the father of prophecy"; see footnote 68 on p. 484. The real teacher of Elijah was Ahijah the Shilonite; see Yerushalmi 'Erubin 5, 22a, in accordance with Seder 'Olam 1 and Baba Batra 121b; compare footnote 4 on p. 981. The description of Elijah as התשבי מתשבי גלעד in 1 Kings 17.1 is said in PRE loc. cit., to mean: Elijah whose name was changed (from Pinehas) and who is destined to bring Israel back to their heavenly Father. The identification of Elijah with Phinehas is also known to Origen, John 6.7; Petrus Damascus (Migne's edition CXLV, 382B); ps.-Jerome on 1 Sam. 2.27. Comp. Ginzberg, op. cit. On the identification of Elijah with Khadir by the Arabs, see Friedlaender, Die Chadhirlegende, Index, s. v. "Elias".

4. Phinehas is "the angel of God" mentioned in Jud. 2.1, as well as the prophet in Jud. 6.8. See Seder 'Olam 20; WR 1. Comp. also Ratner's remark on the Seder 'Olam passage referred to. See also Josephus, Antiqui., V, 2.1; footnote 22 on p. 860.

5. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28b; Babli 113a; Tosefta-Targum 1 Kings 16.34; EZ 8, 185–186; 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 36a–36b (Addenda); Midrash 'Aseret Melakim 41. It was love for his people that prompted Elijah to request God for the famine; he hoped that the sufferings of the people would turn God's wrath from them; PR 44, 183a. The people mocked at Elijah, not only on account of the unfulfilled threat hurled at them by him because of their wickedness, but they also derided him for his looks. Elijah was a hairy man (2 Kings 1.8), and when they saw him they would say: "Behold, Elijah curls his locks." PR 26, 129a. Footnot 32 on pp. 1042–1043.

6. Some early rationalists, however, deny that Elijah was fed by ravens; they explain ערבים (1 Kings 17.4) to mean "the inhabitants of the city of Oreb"; BR 33.5; Hulin 5a; Jerome on Is. 15.7 (who gives it as Jewish tradition). Comp. also Kimhi on 1 Kings, loc. cit., who quotes the opinion according to which ערבים denotes "merchants".

7. Tan. B. IV, 165; Tan. Mass'e 8; BaR 23.9; WR 19.1. In opposition to this view it is said in Sanhedrin 113b and Hulin 5a, as well as in BR 33.5, that the ravens brought the meat from the slaughter house of Ahab. According to Aphraates, 314, the ravens brought Elijah his priestly portion (comp. note 3) from the Temple of Jerusalem. Aphraates very likely follows a Jewish tradition.

8. Sanhedrin 113b. When God sent Elijah to inform Ahab of the impending rain (1 Kings 18.1), the prophet exclaimed: "How could rain come, when Israel did not repent of his sins?" God replied: "I sent rain upon the earth when Adam was the only man on it." See Tehillim 117, 480.

9. Yerushalmi Sukkah 5, 55a; PRE 33; Jerome, introduction to his commentary on Jonah (he gives the midrashic interpretation of the name Amittai אמיתי, as being connected with אמת in 1 Kings 17.24); BR 98.11. Koheleth R. 8.10 maintains, on the other hand, that the son of the widow at Zarephath was a sinner. Comp. also Luke 4.26, where emphasis is laid on the fact that this widow was not a Jewess. The sources cited at the beginning of this note are of the opinion that she belonged to the tribe of Asher and her deceased husband to that of Zebulun. As to the view that the son of the widow was the future "Messiah of the tribe of Joseph", see footnote 35 on p. 996. The midrashic basis for this statement is found in the words of Elijah addressed to the widow to the effect that he should receive his portion first and afterwards her son should receive his (see 1 Kings 17.13). By this he wished to convey that at the end of time he would appear as the forerunner of the "Messiah of the tribe of Joseph". According to Tosefta-Targum, ad loc., however, Elijah told the widow that he, being a priest, must receive his priestly portion first (see Num. 15.20), before she and her son could partake of the bread. See ER 18, 97–98 (read לבשר, instead of לבלל), where both explanations of 1 Kings, loc. cit., are given.

10. BR 50.11; PR 3, 10a. Comp., however, PRE 33, which mentions the insinuating reproaches made by the widow of Zarephath to Elijah for having taken his lodging with her, a single and unprotected woman.

11. A man owes his life to one who opens his door hospitably for him to enter. Hence Elijah exercised his resuscitating powers not upon his own dead parents, but upon the child of the hostess; ShR 4.8.

12. Yerushalmi Berakot 5, 9b; Ta'anit 1, 63d. There is a different version of this Haggadah: God entrusted the "key of rain" to Elijah who asked for it, and God Himself retained the "keys of quickening the dead" and the "key of birth". When Elijah further requested that the "key of quickening the dead" should also be given to him, God said that it was not seemly that the master should hold only one key and the servant two. Whereupon Elijah returned the "key of rain". See Sanhedrin 113a; DR 7.6; PR 42, 178a; Tehillim 78, 346; BR 73.4; Ta'anit 2b; Tan. B. I 106 (which says: There are four keys with which God does not part: the key of sustenance, the key of rain, the key of graves, and the key of the womb of a barren woman), 139, and 135; Targum Yerushalmi Deut. 28.12; 2 Targum Yerushalmi Gen. 30.22; BHM VI, 62. Compare footnote 177 on p. 286. On the dew of resurrection of the dead, see text on pp. 6, 267; text on pp. 1101–1102. As to the similarity of the "reviving of the soil by rain" and the quickening of the dead, see Ta'anit 7a; vol. V, p. 119, note 113.

13. Tehillim 68, 318. Compare with p. 595. The altar upon which Elijah sacrificed had been erected by Saul on his victorious return from the war against Amalek, but was destroyed by the sinful inhabitants of Samaria, and Elijah "repaired the altar of the Lord" (see 1 Kings 18.30). See quotation from an unknown Midrash by Kimhi on 1 Sam. 15.12. Compare footnote 64 on p. 899. The law forbidding to sacrifice outside the Temple of Jerusalem was suspended temporarily by Elijah at the command of God. Prophets have no right to abrogate the law, but only to suspend it temporarily; Yebamot 90b; Yerushalmi Ta'anit 2, 65a; WR 23.9; Shemuel 13 (end); BaR 14.1, 113a; Tan. B. IV, 41. Comp. also the references cited by Buber on Shemuel, loc. cit., and footnote 8 on p. 841. According to an unknown Midrash quoted in Midrash Aggada Deut. 12.9, Elijah permitted himself the temporary suspension of this law on the strength of the words of God spoken to Jacob when He announced to him the approaching birth of Benjamin. He said: "A nation among a multitude of Gentiles shall be of thee (Gen. 35.11; גוים ובקהל = וקהל = Gentiles, i. e., idolatrous and sinful Jews). By these words God revealed to Jacob that Benjamin would have a son (Elijah belonged to this tribe, see note 3), who would perform a great deed among a multitude of Gentiles (= sinful Jews) and would erect an altar outside the holy place.

14. Tan. B. IV, 165; Tan. Mass'e 8; BaR 23.9. On the talking of animals, see text on pp. 13, 37.

15. Yalkut II, 214 on 1 Kings 18.26, giving מדרש as source (see the first edition); ShR 15.15; PR 14, 13a. This Haggadah is also known to Christian authors; see Ephraem, 1 Kings 18.19; Chrysostomus, In Petram et Eliam I, 765 (edition Fronto Ducaeus); Armenian pseud-epigraph, Apocrypha Anecdota, II, 164. Comp. Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., I, 80–82.

16. ShR 29 (end). On a similar "silence of nature", see text on p. 604.

17. Aggadat Bereshit 76, 148, and from there in Yalkut II, 215, on 1 Kings 18 (first inserted in Leghorn edition, and accordingly R. Elijah ha-Kohen in his Midrash Talpiyyot, s. v. אליהו quotes this Haggadah from Yalkut).

18. ER 17, 87. Here it is also stated that the miracle or rather the miracles (besides the fire, the small quantity of water poured by Elisha over the hands of Elijah caused ten springs to gush forth) performed by Elijah brought Israel back to God; they gave up their idolatry, and became God-fearing with all their hearts. The afternoon prayer (Minhah) is the most acceptable to God, and it was therefore in this Minhah prayer that Elijah besought God to grant his wishes. See Berakot 6b and Aggadat Bereshit 76, 147, with reference to המנחה בעלות (1 Kings 18.36). He began his prayer with the words: "O Lord, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel". He did not employ the liturgical formula: "God of Abraham, God of Isaac, God of Jacob" (=Israel), that the people should not be misled to believe that there are three gods (anti-Christian). He therefore did not repeat the word God. Elijah further said: "If Thou grantest not my request for the merits of the fathers, do it for the merits of the tribes." See Aggadat Bereshit 76, 148–149. On the merits of the tribes see footnote 3 on p. 433. Elijah, in his great love for Israel, spoke the very bold words: "For Thou didst turn their heart backward" (1 Kings 18. 37), as if God were the cause of Israel's apostasy. See Berakot 31b–32a (which reads: God admitted that He was partly the cause of man's sin, by having created the evil inclination); Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28c (top); Tan. B. IV, 96; BaR 18.12. Compare footnote 571 on p. 721.

Other explanations of 1 Kings 18.37 are given in Targum and Kimhi, ad loc.

19. Berakot 9b. It is an interpretation of Elijah's double exclamation, "Hear me, hear me!" (1 Kings 18.37). Another interpretation of the double exclamation is found in Yerushalmi Ta'anit 2, 65d: Elijah said: "Hear me for my own merits; hear me for the merits of my disciples." Targum, ad loc., and Aggadat Bereshit 76, 149 offer still other explanations. As to Elijah's desire not to have the miracle misinterpreted by the people, see also Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 13.5.

20. Midrash Shir 25a; Aggadat Bereshit 76, 149.

21. Yoma 21b, where six different kinds of fire are enumerated; compare with p. 13. "The majority decides everything"; the fire would never have fallen from heaven, were it not for the fact that the majority of Israel exclaimed on mount Carmel: "The Lord, He is God"; Yerushalmi Ta'anit 3, 66c (towards the end).

22. WR 31.4; Shir 7.6; PK 30, 192a, and Koheleth 11.2, which read: Elijah prayed that God might remember to Israel the merits of observing the commandments of circumcision and of Sabbath. The words: "and Elijah put his face between his knees" (1 Kings 18.42), are thus explained to mean that he besought God to remember the sign of the covenant, comp. WR loc. cit. As to the observance of the Sabbath by the "generation of Ahab", see footnote 35 on p. 987. Elijah did not for a moment forget the honor due to a king, and he ran before Ahab's chariot as a precursor; Mekilta Bo 13, 14a, with reference to 1 Kings 18, 46. Comp., on the other hand, Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 13.6, which reads: And the prophet was under a divine fury, and ran along with the king's chariot. Against this interpretation of יד יי, see Targum ad loc.

23. Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 219; they are identified with Gideon warriors (their descendants? Jud. 7.5) in Tan. B. I, 138. Comp. also Jerome, Obadiah 1.1, who quotes a Jewish tradition that the hundred prophets hidden by Obadiah (1 Kings 18.4) did not "bow unto Baal", and belonged to the seven thousand whom "Elijah is accused of having ignored". On this rather obscure statement, see Rahmer, Die Commentarii zu den XII Propheten, Obadja, 2–3.

24. WR 36 (end); Shabbat 55a; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 27d; Aggadat Bereshit 10, 24. These sources quote different views as to the time when the "merits of the fathers" ceased to be effective. The times of Elijah, Hosea, Jehoahaz, and Hezekiah are mentioned in this connection. On the different explanations given by the medieval authorities of the statement about the "end of the merits of the fathers", see Tosafot Shabbat, loc. cit. (beginning ושמואל); Or Zarua I, 39, No. 106, and II, 12b, No. 23. Comp. also Index, s. v. "Fathers, Merits of".

25. PRE 29. On the zeal displayed by Elijah for the observance of the law of circumcision, see note 103. Elijah was zealous for the honor of God, and hence was ready to appear as the accuser of Israel before God (comp., however, note 18). Jonah was zealous for the honor of Israel, but less so for the honor of God (see footnote 27 on p. 1040). Jeremiah, however, was as zealous for the honor of God as for the honor of His people. Jeremiah therefore remained a prophet all his life, while Elijah was commanded to appoint Elisha as his successor, and Jonah received but two revelations from God. See Mekilta Bo (פתיחתא), 2a; ARN 47, 129. Elijah had no fear of man, and did not flee to the desert to escape Jezebel, but to ascertain his fate at the holy mount of Horeb, for he had noticed that the angel of death had no power over him, and was anxious to know what God had decided concerning his person. See Zohar I, 209a.

26. Megillah 19b; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 13.7. Compare with p. 630.

27. Shir 1.6; Aggadat Shir 8, 45; EZ 8, 186; Zohar I, 209a–209b; II, 90b; Zohar Hadash, Noah (towards the end, beginning יהושע ר' אליעזר).

28. Shir 1.6.

29. This wind was so strong that it nearly brought about the ruin of the entire world, which was swept by it. Of the same violence, but limited to certain places, were the winds which God sent on the sea when Jonah was on his way to Tarshish (Jonah 1.4), and the wind which “smote the four corners of the house” in which Job’s sons were (Job. 1.19; text on p. 457). Yerushalmi Berakot 9, 13c; BR 24.4; WR 15.1; Koheleth 1.6; Koheleth Z., 87.

30. Tan. Pekude 2; Yezirat ha-Walad 155. According to Targum 1 Kings 19.11, seq., God first showed Elijah three different classes of angels (“angels of wind”, “angels of storm”, and “angels of fire”), and then appeared Himself. Comp. also Zohar I, 16; 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 22a; Berakot 58a. On the four worlds through which man must pass, see Ginzberg, Hazofeh IV, 27, and 98. Comp. also 4 Ezra 3.19, which reads: And Thy glory went through the four gates of fire, earthquake, wind, and cold. It is obvious that this author, in describing the theophany at Horeb on the occasion of the revelation of the Torah, uses as his pattern the theophany at Horeb in the time of Elijah. Accordingly, gelu “cold” is out of place here, and vox “voice” must be one of the four gates. The misreading of קל “voice” for קר “cold” in the Hebrew original is responsible for the present text.

31. Seder ‘Olam 17. On the day on which Elijah was taken from this world, the first king of Edom was appointed; Shir 1.6; Yerushalmi ‘Abodah Zorah 1.39c.

32. Septuagint, as well as Targum, on 2 Kings 2.1, seems to oppose the popular view of Elijah’s translation to heaven. Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 2.2, explicitly states: Elijah disappeared from among men . . . It is written in the Sacred Books that they (i. e. Elijah and Enoch) disappeared, but so that nobody knew that they died. R. Jose, living a generation after Josephus, definitely states that neither Moses (at the time of the revelation on Sinai) nor Elijah ascended to heaven (Mekilta Bahodesh 4, 65b; Sukkah 5a), and according to the Talmud, it is the opinion of this Tanna that the temporary abode of Moses and the permanent one of Elijah are to be looked for in the close vicinity of heaven but not in heaven itself. In ‘Erubin 45a it is unqualifiedly assumed that Elijah “dwells on high”, which refers to heaven, or the vicinity thereof. Paradise is often spoken of as the abode (permanent?) of Elijah (comp., e. g., Derek Erez Z. 1, and the numerous parallel passages cited by Tawrogi concerning Elijah and the others who entered paradise alive; text on pp. 1001, 1010), but in view of the confused notions of the location of paradise prevailing in the mid-rashic and talmudic writings, this does not give us any clue as to whether these passages assume Elijah’s translation to heaven or not. That Elijah never “tasted death” (on this phrase see BR 21.5; Mark 9.1; Hebrews 2.9), but continued “to live for ever”, is the almost unanimous opinion of the talmudic-midrashic literature and (disregarding a few rationalists; see e. g., Kimhi on Malachi 3.23) also of the medieval Jews; see Seder ‘Olam 2 and 17; Mo’ed Katan 26a; BR, loc. cit.; PK 9, 76a; WR 27.4; Koheleth 3.16; Tan. B. III, 90; Tan. Emor 9. Comp. also the references cited by Friedmann, introduction to ER 14–20. His statement that some of the old sources refer to the translation of Elijah’s soul, but not to his body, is a rationalistic conception entirely alien to the old sources, and there can be no doubt that Elijah was considered to have been translated, body and soul, to a place beyond the earth, that is, to heaven or paradise, or in the vicinity of heaven. Zohar II, 197a, asserts that Elijah received a celestial body which enabled him to ascend to heaven; but when he descends to earth to reveal himself, he resumes his terrestrial body. Comp. Index, s. v. “Celestial Garments”. See also notes 34 and 37. For Christian views concerning Elijah’s translation, see Bollandi, Acta Sanctorum, July 20, V, 1.9. There is no cogent reason for assuming that the view of R. Jose mentioned above was prompted by an anti-Christian tendency, to combat the Christian doctrine of the ascension of Jesus. This view seems to be shared not only by Septuagint but also by Ecclesi. 48.9, where the Hebrew text has מעלה and מרום but not שמים “heaven”, and there can hardly be any doubt that the substitution of the words “upwards” and “on high” for שמים “heaven” was intentional.

33. Zohar Hadash Ruth 1.1 (beginning משכיל מאמר רבי אשרי). On the struggle between Elijah and Samael on the Day of Judgment, see footnote 275 on p. 304, and comp. also the struggle between Moses and Samael in text on pp. 827, seq.

34. Seder 'Olam 1; Baba Batra 121b; 2 ARN 38, 103. See the full discussion on Elijah's immortality in note 32, and comp. further the words quoted from ps.-Philo in text on p. 882.

35. WR 34.8; Ruth R. 2.14, which reads: Elijah and the Messiah write down the good deeds of man, and God affixes His seal to this record. See also Kiddushin 70a, which says: Every marriage is recorded in writing by Elijah (Rashi's explanation of the contents of the writing is unacceptable, as may be seen from the parallel passages cited further below; the sentence אוי לו, etc. is a remark by the author of the Baraita and not the text of the writing of Elijah), and God affixes His seal to the marriage record. He who marries a woman not worthy of him (i. e., not of pure descent) will be put in stocks on the pole by Elijah, and flogged by God. Some quote a similar statement from Abot 5 (end; comp. Taylor, Appendix to Sayings of the Jewish Fathers, 172), but this addition to Abot is found in none of the extant texts of Abot. See also Derek Erez R. 1, which reads: He who marries a woman worthy of him is loved by God and kissed by Elijah; but he who marries an unworthy woman is hated by God and flogged by Elijah. For the correct text of Derek Erez see Halakot Gedolot 52b (Hildesheimer's edition, 254). That Elijah in these passages is not the prophet Elijah, but an angel called Elijah, is maintained by Rashi to Kiddushin, loc. cit. But there is no good reason for this assumption. Elijah's zeal for the purity of the family is perhaps connected with the view that he is identified with Phinehas who slew a man and a woman for their unchastity. Comp. also note 107.

36. Seder 'Olam 7. It is possible that the phrase מעשה כל הדורות means: "the deeds of all living". Comp. the quotations from WR and Ruth R. in the preceding note.

37. PRE 15, which reads: Elijah sits at the crossways; one road is that of justice, the other of love. On the arrival of a righteous person, Elijah calls out: "Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation that keepeth faithfulness may enter in."

38. Yalkut Reubeni (Addenda), s. v. אליה. See also MaHaRil, hilkot shabbat (end; Frankfort edition, 76b), where it is said that Elijah is seated under the tree of life and records the good deeds of those who observe the Sabbath. MaHaRil cites Tosafot (or Tosefta?) as his source; but in Tosafot on the Talmud and Pentateuch (and still less in the Tosefta) no such passage can be found. I doubt whether he is right in connecting the popular belief as to Elijah's occupation at that hour with the custom of reciting piyyutim in his praise at the conclusion of the Sabbath. For further details, see Kohn, Monatsschrift, XII, 287–288.

39. R. Moses De Leon quoted by Cordovero, Pardes, 24.4, whence Yalkut Reubeni, Gen. 1.26, 9d (Amsterdam edition). This conception cannot be found in any old source, but its resemblance to the teaching of the Mel-chizedekites is so striking that one is warranted in assuming a connection between them. It must be borne in mind that Ambrosius (De Fide, III, 11.88; Migne's edition XVI, 607) assigns a Jewish origin to the doctrine of the Melchizedekites. It is also noteworthy that Epiphanius, in his polemic against this sect (Haer. 15; Migne's edition XLI, 976), uses the expression "As for Elijah, we have the following tradition about his descent, etc." Epiphanius, as may be seen, deemed it necessary to prove, in opposition to the Melchizedekites, that Elijah was not an angel sent from heaven. The designation of Elijah as an "angel in heaven" מלאך בשמים (in Zohar Hadash Ruth 2.1, beginning רבי נתן שאל) refers to his state after his translation. The celestial body of Elijah spoken of in Zohar II, 197, likewise refers to his body after his translation.

40. Emek ha-Melek, 175c. Sandalphon is explained as a compound of σύν = "with" and ἀδελφός = "brother"; Elijah is the "brother" of Enoch-Metatron, both of whom were changed to angels after their translation.

41. Zohar II, 58a, based in the main on Hagigah 13b and PR 20.79a. In the old sources Elijah has nothing to do with Sandalphon. Compare with pp. 613–614.

42. Emek ha-Melek 65 (end); compare with p. 783.

AFTER HIS TRANSLATION

Elijah's removal from earth, so far from being an interruption to his relations with men, rather marks the beginning of his real activity as a helper in time of need, as a teacher and as a guide. At first his intervention in sublunar affairs was not frequent. Seven years after his translation,<sup>43</sup> he wrote a letter to the wicked king Jehoram, who reigned over Judah. The next occasion on which he took part in an earthly occurrence was at the time of Ahasuerus, when he did the Jews a good turn by assuming the guise of the courtier Harbonah,<sup>44</sup> in a favorable moment inciting the king against Haman.<sup>45</sup>

It was reserved for later days, however, for Talmudic times, the golden age of the great scholars, the Tannaim and the Amoraim, to enjoy Elijah's special vigilance as protector of the innocent, as a friend in need, who hovers over the just and the pious, ever present to guard them against evil or snatch them out of danger. With four strokes of his wings Elijah can traverse the world.<sup>46</sup> Hence no spot on earth is too far removed for his help. As an angel<sup>47</sup> he enjoys the power of assuming the most various appearances to accomplish his purposes. Sometimes he looks like an ordinary man, sometimes he takes the appearance of an Arab, sometimes of a horseman, now he is a Roman court-official, now he is a harlot.

Once upon a time it happened that when Nahum, the great and pious teacher, was journeying to Rome on a political mission, he was without his knowledge robbed of the gift he bore to the Emperor as an offering from the Jews. When he handed the casket to the ruler, it was found to contain common earth, which the thieves had substituted for the jewels they had abstracted. The Emperor thought the Jews were mocking at him, and their representative, Nahum, was condemned to suffer death. In his piety the Rabbi did not lose confidence in God; he only said: "This too is for good."<sup>48</sup> And so it turned out to be. Suddenly Elijah appeared, and, assuming the guise of a court-official, he said: "Perhaps the earth in this casket is like that used by Abraham for purposes of war. A handful will do the work of swords and bows." At his instance the virtues of the earth were tested in the attack upon a city that had long resisted Roman courage and strength. His supposition was verified. The contents of the casket proved more efficacious than all the weapons of the army, and the Romans were victorious. Nahum was dismissed, laden with honors and treasures, and the thieves, who had betrayed themselves by claiming the precious earth, were executed, for, naturally enough, Elijah works no wonders for evildoers.<sup>49</sup>

Another time, for the purpose of rescuing Rabbi Shila, Elijah pretended to be a Persian. An informer had denounced the Rabbi with the Persian Government, accusing him of administering the law according to the Jewish code. Elijah appeared as witness for the Rabbi and against the informer, and Shila was honorably dismissed.<sup>50</sup>

When the Roman bailiffs were pursuing Rabbi Meïr, Elijah joined him in the guise of a harlot. The Roman emissaries desisted from their pursuit, for they could not believe that Rabbi Meïr would choose such a companion.<sup>51</sup>

A contemporary of Rabbi Meïr, Rabbi Simon ben Yoḥai, who spent thirteen years in a cave to escape the vengeance of the Romans, was informed by Elijah of the death of the Jew-baiting emperor, so that he could leave his hiding-place.<sup>52</sup>

Equally characteristic is the help Elijah afforded the worthy poor. Frequently he brought them great wealth. Rabbi Kahana was so needy that he had to support himself by peddling with household utensils. Once a lady of high standing endeavored to force him to commit an immoral act, and Kahana, preferring death to iniquity, threw himself from a loft. Though Elijah was at a distance of four hundred parasangs, he hastened to the spot in time to catch the Rabbi before he touched the ground. Besides, he gave him means enough to enable him to abandon an occupation beset with perils.<sup>53</sup>

Rabba bar Abbahu likewise was a victim of poverty. He admitted to Elijah that on account of his small means he had no time to devote to his studies. Thereupon Elijah led him into Paradise, bade him remove his mantle, and fill it with leaves grown in the regions of the blessed. When the Rabbi was about to quit Paradise, his garment full of leaves, a voice was heard to say: "Who desires to anticipate his share in the world to come during his earthly days, as Rabba bar Abbahu is doing?" The Rabbi quickly cast the leaves away; nevertheless he received twelve thousand denarii for his upper garment, because it retained the wondrous fragrance of the leaves of Paradise.<sup>54</sup>

Elijah's help was not confined to poor teachers of the law; all who were in need, and were worthy of his assistance, had a claim upon him. A poor man, the father of a family, in his distress once prayed to God: "O Lord of the world, Thou knowest, there is none to whom I can tell my tale of woe, none who will have pity upon me. I have neither brother nor kinsman nor friend, and my starving little ones are crying with hunger. Then do Thou have mercy and be compassionate, or let death come and put an end to our suffering." His words found a hearing with God, for, as he finished, Elijah stood before the poor man, and sympathetically inquired why he was weeping. When the prophet had heard the tale of his troubles, he said: "Take me and sell me as a slave; the proceeds will suffice for thy needs." At first the poor man refused to accept the sacrifice, but finally he yielded, and Elijah was sold to a prince for eighty denarii. This sum formed the nucleus of the fortune which the poor man amassed and enjoyed until the end of his days. The prince who had purchased Elijah intended to build a palace, and he rejoiced to hear that his new slave was an architect. He promised Elijah liberty if within six months he completed the edifice. After nightfall of the same day, Elijah offered a prayer, and instantaneously the palace stood in its place in complete perfection. Elijah disappeared. The next morning the prince was not a little astonished to see the palace finished. But when he sought his slave to reward him, and sought him in vain, he realized that he had had dealings with an angel. Elijah meantime repaired to the man who had sold him, and related his story to him, that he might know he had not cheated the purchaser out of his price; on the contrary, he had enriched him, since the palace was worth a hundred times more than the money paid for the pretended slave.<sup>55</sup>

A similar thing happened to a well-to-do man who lost his fortune, and became so poor that he had to do manual labor in the field of another. Once, when he was at work, he was accosted by Elijah, who had assumed the appearance of an Arab: "Thou art destined to enjoy seven good years. When dost thou want them—now, or as the closing years of thy life?" The man replied: "Thou art a wizard; go in peace, I have nothing for thee." Three times the same question was put, three times the same reply was given. Finally the man said: "I shall ask the advice of my wife." When Elijah came again, and repeated his question, the man, following the counsel of his wife, said: "See to it that seven good years come to us at once." Elijah replied: "Go home. Before thou crossest thy threshold, thy good fortune will have filled thy house." And so it was. His children had found a treasure in the ground, and, as he was about to enter his house, his wife met him and reported the lucky find. His wife was an estimable, pious woman, and she said to her husband: "We shall enjoy seven good years. Let us use this time to practice as much charity as possible; perhaps God will lengthen out our period of prosperity." After the lapse of seven years, during which man and wife used every opportunity of doing good, Elijah appeared again, and announced to the man that the time had come to take away what he had given him. The man responded: "When I accepted thy gift, it was after consultation with my wife. I should not like to return it without first acquainting her with what is about to happen." His wife charged him to say to the old man who had come to resume possession of his property: "If thou canst find any who will be more conscientious stewards of the pledges entrusted to us than we have been, I shall willingly yield them up to thee." God recognized that these people had made a proper use of their wealth, and He granted it to them as a perpetual possession.<sup>56</sup>

If Elijah was not able to lighten the poverty of the pious, he at least sought to inspire them with hope and confidence. Rabbi Akiba, the great scholar, lived in dire poverty before he became the famous Rabbi. His rich father-in-law would have nothing to do with him or his wife, because the daughter had married Akiba against her father's will. On a bitter cold winter night, Akiba could offer his wife, who had been accustomed to the luxuries wealth can buy, nothing but straw as a bed to sleep upon, and he tried to comfort her with assurances of his love for the privations she was suffering. At that moment Elijah appeared before their hut, and cried out in supplicating tones: "O good people, give me, I pray you, a little bundle of straw. My wife has been delivered of a child, and I am so poor I haven't even enough straw to make a bed for her." Now Akiba could console his wife with the fact that their own misery was not so great as it might have been, and thus Elijah had attained his end, to sustain the courage of the pious.<sup>57</sup>

In the form of an Arab, he once appeared before a very poor man, whose piety equalled his poverty. He gave him two shekels. These two coins brought him such good fortune that he attained great wealth. But in his zeal to gather worldly treasures, he had no time for deeds of piety and charity. Elijah again appeared before him and took away the two shekels. In a short time the man was as poor as before. A third time Elijah came to him. He was crying bitterly and complaining of his misfortune, and the prophet said: "I shall make thee rich once more, if thou wilt promise me under oath thou wilt not let wealth ruin thy character." He promised, the two shekels were restored to him, he regained his wealth, and he remained in possession of it for all time, because his piety was not curtailed by his riches.<sup>58</sup>

Poverty was not the only form of distress Elijah relieved. He exercised the functions of a physician upon Rabbi Shimi bar Ashi, who had swallowed a noxious reptile. Elijah appeared to him as an awe-inspiring horseman, and forced him to apply the preventives against the disease to be expected in these circumstances.

He also cured Rabbi Judah ha-Nasi of long-continued toothache by laying his hand on the sufferer, and at the same time he brought about the reconciliation of Rabbi Judah with Rabbi Ḥayyah, whose form he had assumed. Rabbi Judah paid the highest respect to Rabbi Ḥayyah after he found out that Elijah had considered him worthy of taking his appearance.<sup>59</sup>

On another occasion, Elijah re-established harmony between a husband and his wife. The woman had come home very late one Friday evening, having allowed herself to be detained by the sermon preached by Rabbi Meïr. Her autocratic husband swore she should not enter the house until she had spat in the very face of the highly-esteemed Rabbi. Meantime Elijah went to Rabbi Meïr, and told him a pious woman had fallen into a sore predicament on his account. To help the poor woman, the Rabbi resorted to a ruse. He announced that he was looking for one who knew how to cast spells, which was done by spitting into the eye of the afflicted one. When he caught sight of the woman designated by Elijah, he asked her to try her power upon him. Thus she was able to comply with her husband's requirement without disrespect to the Rabbi; and through the instrumentality of Elijah conjugal happiness was restored to an innocent wife.<sup>60</sup>

Elijah's versatility is shown in the following occurrence. A pious man bequeathed a spice-garden to his three sons. They took turns in guarding it against thieves. The first night the oldest son watched the garden. Elijah appeared to him and asked him: "My son, what wilt thou have—knowledge of the Torah, or great wealth, or a beautiful wife?" He chose wealth, great wealth. Accordingly Elijah gave him a coin, and he became rich. The second son, to whom Elijah appeared the second night, chose knowledge of the Torah. Elijah gave him a book, and "he knew the whole Torah." The third son, on the third night, when Elijah put the same choice before him as before his brothers, wished for a beautiful wife. Elijah invited this third brother to go on a journey with him. Their first night was passed at the house of a notorious villain, who had a daughter. During the night Elijah overheard the chickens and the geese say to one another: "What a terrible sin that young man must have committed, that he should be destined to marry the daughter of so great a villain!" The two travellers journeyed on. The second night the experiences of the first were repeated. The third night they lodged with a man who had a very pretty daughter. During the night Elijah heard the chickens and the geese say to one another: "How great must be the virtues of this young man, if he is privileged to marry so beautiful and pious a wife." In the morning, when Elijah arose, he at once became a matchmaker, the young man married the pretty maiden, and husband and wife journeyed homeward in joy.<sup>61</sup>

If it became necessary, Elijah was ready to do even the services of a sexton. When Rabbi Akiba died in prison, Elijah betook himself to the dead man's faithful disciple, Rabbi Joshua, and the two together went to the prison. There was none to forbid their entrance; a deep sleep had fallen upon the turnkeys and the prisoners alike. Elijah and Rabbi Joshua took the corpse with them, Elijah bearing it upon his shoulder. Rabbi Joshua in astonishment demanded how he, a priest, dared defile himself upon a corpse. The answer was: "God forbid! the pious can never cause defilement." All night the two walked on with their burden. At break of day they found themselves near Cæsarea. A cave opened before their eyes, and within they saw a bed, a chair, a table, and a lamp. They deposited the corpse upon the bed, and left the cave, which closed up behind them. Only the light of the lamp, which had lit itself after they left, shone through the chinks. Whereupon Elijah said: "Hail, ye just, hail to you who devote yourselves to the study of the law. Hail to you, ye God-fearing men, for your places are set aside, and kept, and guarded, in Paradise, for the time to come. Hail to thee, Rabbi Akiba, that thy lifeless body found lodgment for a night in a lovely spot."<sup>62</sup> 43. Seder 'Olam 17. Comp., however, Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 5.2.

44. PRE 50; Esther R. 7.9.

45. The origin of this Haggadah is as follows: The prayer after the reading of the Megillah closes with the words: "May Harbonah, too, be remembered unto good" (Yerushalmi Megillah 3, 74b, bottom; Soferim 14.6). Now the expression זכור לטוב "remembered unto good" is the ancient eulogy attached to Elijah (see note 1), and accordingly its application to Harbonah in the prayer for Purim was interpreted to mean that he was identical with Elijah. The last words of the prayer וגם חרבונה זכור לטוב were thus understood to mean: "And as for Harbonah, he is the one (Elijah) who is remembered unto good." As to Elijah's participation in the delivery of the Jews from the hands of Haman, see text on p. 1160.

46. Berakot 4b, which reads: Michael traverses the world with one stroke, Gabriel with two, Elijah with four, the angel of death with eight (this is only in ordinary cases, but in the time of plague with one). Comp. also Zohar I, 13a.

47. On the ability of the angel to assume the most varied appearances and forms, see text on p. 13. In the note appertaining thereto it is pointed out that an angel never assumes the form of a woman, and in this respect Elijah is their superior, as he, at least once, appeared as a harlot; see 'Abodah Zarah 18b. On Elijah as an angel comp. notes 34 and 39–40.

48. גם זו לטובה. This favorite expression of the Rabbis was supposed to have given rise to his appellation Gamzu (גמזו). But in fact it is the name of his birthplace.

49. Ta'anit 21a; Sanhedrin 108b. Compare with p. 195.

50. Berakot 58b.

51. 'Abodah Zarah 18b. In the legend given ibid. 17b, concerning R. Eliezer b. Parata, Elijah assumed the appearance of a high official for the purpose of silencing the accusers of the Rabbi in court. Failing in this, he made the Rabbi disappear (the Rabbi suddenly found himself in a place four hundred parasangs away from court).

52. Shabbat 33b, and, with additions, Zohar Hadash Ki-Tabo (beginning). In the Zohar, which claims to be the work of this Rabbi and saint, Elijah's conversations with the pious, particularly the masters of the Kabbalah, are frequently referred to. Friedmann, introduction to ER, 38–40, gives an almost complete list of these Zohar passages. Comp. note 98.

53. Kiddushin 40a. Palestine, as well as Egypt, extends over four hundred parasangs (Pesahim 94a; Index, s. v. "Palestine", "Egypt"), and therefore the expression "four hundred parasangs" is often used to describe a great distance. Comp. note 51.

54. Baba Mezi'a 114a–114b. אכל לעלמיה in this passage, as well as דליכליה לעלמא in Gittin 68b means: "he used up his share in the world to come during his lifetime." Grünbaum, Gesammelte Aufsätze, 49, and many other scholars misunderstood the passage in Gittin. On the fragrance of paradise, see text on p. 19.

55. Hibbur Yafeh, 57–59, and hence in later sources; comp., e. g., BHM V, 140–141. The relation of this Jewish legend to the Christian one, as elaborately set forth in the Acta Thomae, ought to be examined. A poetic version of this Elijah legend by R. Jesse b. Mordecai was incorporated in the liturgy and is sung at the conclusion of the Sabbath. Comp. Zunz, Literaturgeschichte, 486 and Gaster, Exempla, No. 415.

56. Ruth Z., 55; Hibbur Yafeh 82–84. On Elijah assuming the guise of an Arab, see also note 62. Another legend about Elijah as the one to bring succor to the needy is found in Hemdat ha-Yamim III, 14b, and hence in 'Oseh fele II, 52, seq. Once upon a time there lived a pious and learned Rabbi in Jerusalem, who was in the habit of providing the poor with food and other necessities for Passover. But it happened once that he entirely forgot to provide for the needs of a very poor but worthy scholar, who on the day before Passover had neither mazzot nor wine for the feast. In his miserable state he decided to leave his home rather than see his family dying of hunger. Walking aimlessly in the streets, he was addressed by a venerable looking old man with the following words: "I am a stranger in this place; I beg of you to take me to your house for the days of the festival, and here is the money to furnish us with all our needs. The poor scholar, though depressed by his inability to be the host to the stranger without payment, did as he was requested, and with the ample funds now at his disposal prepared a really sumptuous meal for the first night of Passover. But when the time of the Seder arrived, the stranger did not appear; all the searching was in vain, as no trace could be found of him. The poor scholar then realized that the stranger was none other than Elijah the prophet who came to his assistance. On the very same night Elijah appeared to the Rabbi of the place, and awakened him by seizing him by his throat and nearly choking him to death. Elijah chided him for having neglected the poor scholar, and told him that if it were not for his quick action, God would have destroyed the entire community for not having taken care of the worthy man. He then commanded the Rabbi to hasten to the poor scholar and beg his pardon for not having provided him with the necessities of life.

57. Nedarim 50a. Comp. Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, s. v. "Akiba in Legend".

58. Luzzatto, Kafior wa-Ferah, 7b; collection of Ma'asiyyot published from MS. in R.E.J., XXXIII, 58–60. A shorter form of this legend is found in Ruth Z., 50. Four other versions of this legend are found in Gaster, Exempla, Nos. 301, p. 193, and 307, pp. 206–207; Comp. also No. 334. On Elijah assuming the guise of an Arab, see note 62. The following is a widespread legend about Elijah as a helper in need. Shortly before the arrival of the Sabbath a man came to a town where he had no friends at all, and did not know what to do with his money, as it is prohibited to carry money on the day of rest (see the same motive in the text on p. 951). He betook himself to the synagogue, where he found a man praying with his phylacteries on his forehead and arm. Deeming him a pious man, he entrusted the money to him. At the termination of the Sabbath the stranger asked him for the money. But the hypocrite denied that he had ever received any money from him. In his distress he prayed to God as follows: "O Lord, I did not trust that man, but Thy name (the letter 'ש' as an abbreviation of שדי "almighty", is written on the phylactery for the forehead), believing that a man who bears Thy name on him would not defraud people." After praying he fell asleep, and in his dream Elijah appeared unto him, saying: "Go to the wife of this man and tell her that her husband commands her to return the money to you. That she may believe your words, say unto her: Your husband, to show his confidence in me, revealed unto me the secret that you both ate the meat of a swine on the Day of Atonement." The stranger did as he was advised by Elijah, and the woman returned the money to him. See PR 22, 111b; Yellammedenu in Or Zarua I, 149; Ma'asiyyot, ed. Gaster 83. For the later version of this legend, see Ma'asiyyot ed. Araki, Nos. 96 and 105; Hebräische Bibliographie, XIII, 129–130; Gaster, Exempla, No. 123. In the profuse legend concerning the "two faithful friends" ('Oseh Fele II, 44a, seq.), Elijah appears in a dream to the Rabbi, and informs him of the fraud perpetrated by one of the "two faithful friends" against the other.

59. The legend concerning R. Shimi is found in Shabbat 109b; that about R. Judah is in Yerushalmi Kil'ayim 9, 32b; BR 33.3 and 96.5; Tan. B. I, 215; Tan.

Wa-Yehi 3. Elijah plays the rôle of a physician also in the legend about the "woman with the animal face" in Oseh Fele II, 36a, seq. The medicine given by him changes the monstrosity into a beauty. Comp. also Ginzberg, Hagoren, IX, 34, seq.

60. DR 5 (end). The parallel passages in Yerushalmi Sotah I, 198a; WR 9.9 and BaR 9.30 have "the holy spirit" instead of Elijah. Comp. also Gaster, Exempla, No. 145, the text of which is different from those of the Midrashim and Yerushalmi. On spittle as a remedy for sickness, see also Mark 8.22 and John 9.6.; Comp. Ginzberg, Journal Bibl. Literature, XLI, 123, note 20.

61. Ma'aseh-buch, No. 157, 47d, and No. 169, 52c. The animals notice the presence of Elijah; when dogs bark gleefully it is a sign that Elijah is not far from them; when they whine, the angel of death is near them. See Baba Kamma 60b; comp. Imre No'am, Bo (end) and footnote 284 on p. 238. On a different version of this legend, see Gaster, Exempla, No. 355.

62. Mishle 9, 62; Elleh Ezkerah 68; Ma'aseh Haruge Malkut 27–28. Mishle is the source of MHG (Ms.), whence Gaster, Exempla, No. 245. On the cave in the vicinity of Caesarea, see text on p. 1012, and on the furniture thereof see text on p. 741; comp. also 2 Kings 4.10.

CENSOR AND AVENGER

Helpfulness and compassion do not paint the whole of the character of Elijah. He remained the stern and inexorable censor whom Ahab feared. The old zeal for the true and the good he never lost, as witness, he once struck a man dead because he failed to perform his devotions with due reverence.<sup>63</sup>

There were two brothers, one of them rich and miserly, the other poor and kind-hearted. Elijah, in the garb of an old beggar, approached the rich man, and asked him for alms. Repulsed by him, he turned to the poor brother, who received him kindly, and shared his meagre supper with him. On bidding farewell to him and his equally hospitable wife, Elijah said: "May God reward you! The first thing you undertake shall be blessed, and shall take no end until you yourselves cry out Enough!" Presently the poor man began to count the few pennies he had, to convince himself that they sufficed to purchase bread for his next meal. But the few became many, and he counted and counted, and still their number increased. He counted a whole day, and the following night, until he was exhausted, and had to cry out Enough! And, indeed, it was enough, for he had become a very wealthy man. His brother was not a little astonished to see the fortunate change in his kinsman's circumstances, and when he heard how it had come about, he determined, if the opportunity should present itself again, to show his most amiable side to the old beggar with the miraculous power of blessing. He had not long to wait. A few days later he saw the old man pass by. He hastened to accost him, and, excusing himself for his unfriendliness at their former meeting, begged him to come into his house. All that the larder afforded was put before Elijah, who pretended to eat of the dainties. At his departure, he pronounced a blessing upon his hosts: "May the first thing you do have no end, until it is enough." The mistress of the house hereupon said to her husband: "That we may count gold upon gold undisturbed, let us first attend to our most urgent physical needs." So they did—and they had to continue to do it until life was extinct.<sup>64</sup>

The extreme of his rigor Elijah displayed toward teachers of the law. From them he demanded more than obedience to the mere letter of a commandment. For instance, he pronounced severe censure upon Rabbi Ishmael ben Jose, because he was willing to act as bailiff in prosecuting Jewish thieves and criminals. He advised Rabbi Ishmael to follow the example of his father and leave the country.<sup>65</sup>

His estrangement from his friend Rabbi Joshua ben Levi is characteristic. One who was sought by the officers of the law took refuge with Rabbi Joshua. His pursuers were informed of his place of concealment. Threatening to put all the inhabitants of the city to the sword if he was not delivered up, they demanded his surrender. The Rabbi urged the fugitive from justice to resign himself to his fate. Better for one individual to die, he said, than for a whole community to be exposed to peril. The fugitive yielded to the Rabbi's argument, and gave himself up to the bailiffs. Thereafter Elijah, who had been in the habit of visiting Rabbi Joshua frequently, stayed away from his house, and he was induced to come back only by the Rabbi's long fasts and earnest prayers. In reply to the Rabbi's question, why he had shunned him, he said: "Dost thou suppose I care to have intercourse with informers?" The Rabbi quoted a passage from the Mishnah to justify his conduct, but Elijah remained unconvinced. "Dost thou consider this a law for a pious man?" he said. "Other people might have been right in doing as thou didst; thou shouldst have done otherwise."<sup>66</sup>

A number of instances are known which show how exalted a standard Elijah set up for those who would be considered worthy of intercourse with him. Of two pious brothers, one provided for his servants as for his own table, while the other permitted his servants to eat abundantly only of the first course; of the other courses they could have nothing but the remnants. Accordingly, with the second brother Elijah would have nothing to do, while he often honored the former with his visits.

A similar attitude Elijah maintained toward another pair of pious brothers. One of them was in the habit of providing for his servants after his own needs were satisfied, while the other of them attended to the needs of his servants first. To the latter it was that Elijah gave the preference.<sup>67</sup>

He dissolved an intimacy of many years' standing, because his friend built a vestibule which was so constructed that the supplications of the poor could be heard but faintly by those within the house.<sup>68</sup>

Rabbi Joshua ben Levi incurred the displeasure of Elijah a second time, because a man was torn in pieces by a lion in the vicinity of his house. In a measure Elijah held the Rabbi responsible, because he did not pray for the prevention of such misfortunes.<sup>69</sup>

The story told of Elijah and Rabbi Anan forms the most striking illustration of the severity of the prophet. Someone brought Rabbi Anan a mess of little fish as a present, and at the same time asked the Rabbi to act as judge in a lawsuit he was interested in. Anan refused in these circumstances to accept a gift from the litigant. To demonstrate his single-mindedness, the applicant urged the Rabbi to take the fish and assign the case to another judge. Anan acquiesced, and he requested one of his colleagues to act for him, because he was incapacitated from serving as a judge. His legal friend drew the inference, that the litigant introduced to him was a kinsman of Rabbi Anan's, and accordingly he showed himself particularly complaisant toward him. As a result, the other party to the suit was intimidated. He failed to present his side as convincingly as he might otherwise have done, and so lost the case. Elijah, who had been the friend of Anan and his teacher as well, thenceforth shunned his presence, because he considered that the injury done the second party to the suit was due to Anan's carelessness. Anan in his distress kept many fasts, and offered up many prayers, before Elijah would return to him. Even then the Rabbi could not endure the sight of him; he had to content himself with listening to Elijah's words without looking upon his face.<sup>70</sup>

Sometimes Elijah considered it his duty to force people into abandoning a bad habit. A rich man was once going to a cattle sale, and he carried a snug sum of money to buy oxen. He was accosted by a stranger—none other than Elijah—who inquired the purpose of his journey. "I go to buy cattle," replied the would-be purchaser.

“Say, if it please God,” urged Elijah. “Fiddlesticks! I shall buy cattle whether it please God or not! I carry the money with me, and the business will be dispatched.” “But not with good fortune,” said the stranger, and went off. Arrived at the market, the cattle-buyer discovered the loss of his purse, and he had to return home to provide himself with other money. He again set forth on his journey, but this time he took another road to avoid the stranger of ill omen. To his amazement he met an old man with whom he had precisely the same adventure as with the first stranger. Again he had to return home to fetch money. By this time he had learned his lesson. When a third stranger questioned him about the object of his journey, he answered: “If it please God, I intend to buy oxen.” The stranger wished him success, and the wish was fulfilled. To the merchant’s surprise, when a pair of fine cattle were offered him, and their price exceeded the sum of money he had about his person, he found the two purses he had lost on his first and second trips. Later he sold the same pair of oxen to the king for a considerable price, and he became very wealthy.<sup>71</sup>

As Elijah coerced this merchant into humility toward God, so he carried home a lesson to the great Tanna Eliezer, the son of Rabbi Simon ben Yoḥai. This Rabbi stood in need of correction on account of his overweening conceit. Once, on returning from the academy, he took a walk on the sea-beach, his bosom swelling with pride at the thought of his attainments in the Torah. He met a hideously ugly man, who greeted him with the words: “Peace be with thee, Rabbi.” Eliezer, instead of courteously acknowledging the greeting, said: “O thou wight,<sup>72</sup> how ugly thou art! Is it possible that all the residents of thy town are as ugly as thou?” “I know not,” was the reply, “but it is to the Master Artificer who created me that thou shouldst have said: ‘How ugly is this vessel which Thou hast fashioned.’ ”

The Rabbi realized the wrong he had committed, and humbly begged pardon of the ugly man—another of the protean forms adopted by Elijah. The latter continued to refer him to the Master Artificer of the ugly vessel. The inhabitants of the city, who had hastened to do honor to the great Rabbi, earnestly urged the offended man to grant pardon, and finally he declared himself appeased, provided the Rabbi promised never again to commit the same wrong.<sup>73</sup>

The rigor practiced by Elijah toward his friends caused one of them, the Tanna Rabbi Jose, to accuse him of being passionate and irascible. As a consequence, Elijah would have nothing to do with him for a long time. When he reappeared, and confessed the cause of his withdrawal, Rabbi Jose said he felt justified, for his charge could not have received a more striking verification.<sup>74</sup>

---

63. Berakot 6b, where it is also stated that on this account Elijah assumed the guise of an Arab. Comp. note 56. He often took the opportunity to point out the importance of prayer and devotion to the saints and scholars to whom he revealed himself. R. Eleazar the son of R. Jose once met Elijah driving four thousand camels heavily laden, and at his question concerning the nature of the load, he received the following answer from the prophet: “These camels are laden with wrath and fury for those who talk during their prayers.” He further informed this Tanna that prayers of this kind are never granted, whereas those who pray with devotion and do not talk in their prayers will be heard by God. To the father of this Tanna Elijah once gave the same piece of information. The legend is quoted by many medieval authors from the Yerushalmi or Midrash respectively but is not found in the extant Midrashim and not in the Yerushalmi. See the references cited by Buber, Yerushalayim ha-Benayyah, No. 33, 18, and Friedmann, introduction to ER 32. This legend is further quoted from the Midrash by Shu’aib, 33b; R. Bahya, Kad ha-Kemah II, 57b קדושה; Abudrahim ישתבח; Treves, Kimha Dabishuna ישתבח. To his friend R. Jose (comp. note 74) Elijah imparted the following piece of information: As often as Israel, in the houses of worship, praise God, He exclaims: “Happy the King who is praised in His house; but woe unto the father (מה לו) is a euphemism for (אוי לו) who exiled his children, and woe to the children who were exiled from their father's table." See Berakot 3a.

64. Tendlau, Sprüchwörter, 14–15, who took down this legend in the form he found it current among German Jews. It is the Jewish version of a widespread legend among European nations. Comp. Dähnhardt, Natursagen, II, 140, seq. Comp. also Gaster, Exempla, No. 435.

65. Baba Mezi'a 84a. A contemporary of this Rabbi, who subsequently became famous under the name of R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon, was in his earlier days very ignorant, but of a very strong physique. On account of sturdiness he was appointed overseer of the laborers employed by the government. Elijah appeared to him once as an old man, and after convincing him of the uselessness of his life, advised him to take up the profession of his fathers and to study the Torah. R. Eleazar objected, as he had no teacher to instruct him, and Elijah became his master for thirteen years. See PK 10, 92b–93a (for the text use Gaster, Exempla, No. 94), and with additional embellishments Zohar Hadash, Lek (end of וישמע).

66. Yerushalmi Terumot 8, 96b; BR 94 (end). According to the law, the Rabbi was permitted to surrender one man, that all the inhabitants of the place might be saved; but a pious man is expected to do more than the strict law requires of him. On another occasion this Rabbi, to his great humiliation, had found out that too much rigor in ceremonial matters was far from being commendable. Elijah pointed out to the disciple of the Rabbi the unpleasant consequences of a too rigorous decision by the master. See Yerushalmi Shabbat 9, 39a; Dammai 2, 22c.

67. Ketubot 61a. Comp. Rashi, who has a somewhat different interpretation of this passage.

68. Baba Batra 7b.

69. Makkot 11a.

70. Ketubot 106a. The conclusion of this narrative is: Hence the titles "the great order of Elijah" and "the small order of Elijah", that is, the collection of teachings imparted by Elijah to R. Anan before this occurrence is called the "great order", and that imparted after is called "the small order". The nature of these works attributed to Elijah is entirely unknown, as there can be no doubt that the extant Midrashim Seder Eliyyahu Rabba and Seder Eliyyahu Zutta date from post-talmudic times, and may have nothing in common but the titles with the works referred to in the Talmud. The nine haggadic Baraitot cited by the Talmud from Tanna de be Eliyyahu (see the references in Friedmann, Introduction to ER 45) are very likely taken from a haggadic compilation by a Tanna called Elijah. On the use of this name in the time of the Tannaim and Amoraim, see Ratner, Ahabat Ziyon, Pesahim, 61. In the above-mentioned Midrashim attributed to Elijah these nine Baraitot are incorporated (see Friedmann, loc. cit.), and in three passages the talmudic דבי אליהו is changed to דבי משיח הנביא by the author (authors?) of these Midrashim. This shows that at a comparatively early date דבי אליהו of the Talmud was misunderstood to refer to the prophet Elijah. These Midrashim quite often introduce the prophet as narrating events and incidents of his life, but they lack the simplicity of legend, and one immediately sees that the author puts into the mouth of Elijah his own views concerning God, Israel, and the Torah. Another work by Elijah is ספר אליהו, an apocalyptic book, in which Elijah reveals the secrets made known to him by the angel Michael concerning the Messianic times. Closely related to it is the apocalyptic writing פרקנ'ן משיח, in which Elijah imparts to R. Jose more valuable information about the Messiah and the Messianic redemption. These two apocalyptic works were very likely composed about the middle of the eighth century.

71. Alphabet of Ben Sira 9b–10a. Comp. Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, s. v. "Ben Sira, Alphabet", and Lévi, R.E.J., LIII, 66. The pious custom to say: "If it please God" is known to the New Testament (1 Corinth. 4.19; Heb. 6.3; James 4.15) and to Plato; see the references cited by Neumark, Geschichte der jüdischen Philosophie, II, 292. On the use of the familiar אם ירצה השם, "If it please God", and בעזר השם, "with God's help" in medieval writings, see Zunz, Gesammelte Schriften, III, 268.

72. Aramaic ריקה "Reka"; but Ma'asiyyot (Gaster's edition 139) has אָקָה as in Matth. 5.2.

73. Ta'anit 20 (below); 2 ARN 41.131; Derek Erez R. 4, where the Tosafists (Ta'anit, loc. cit.) read that the "ugly man" was Elijah; Kallah 6.13a.

74. Sanhedrin (end). Comp. James 5.17.

INTERCOURSE WITH THE SAGES

Elijah's purely human relations to the world revealed themselves in their fulness, neither in his deeds of charity, nor in his censorious rigor, but rather in his gentle and scholarly intercourse with the great in Israel, especially the learned Rabbis of the Talmudic time. He is at once their disciple and their teacher. To one he resorts for instruction on difficult points, to another he himself dispenses instruction. As a matter of course, his intimate knowledge of the supernatural world makes him appear more frequently in the rôle of giver than receiver. Many a bit of secret lore the Jewish teachers learnt from

Elijah, and he it was who, with the swiftness of lightning, carried the teachings of one Rabbi to another sojourning hundreds of miles away.<sup>75</sup>

Thus it was Elijah who taught Rabbi Jose the deep meaning hidden in the Scriptural passage in which woman is designated as the helpmeet of man. By means of examples he demonstrated to the Rabbi how indispensable woman is to man.<sup>76</sup>

Rabbi Nehorai profited by his exposition of why God created useless, even noxious insects. The reason for their existence is that the sight of superfluous and harmful creatures prevents God from destroying His world at times when, on account of the wickedness and iniquity prevailing in it, it repents Him of having created it. If He preserves creatures that at their best are useless, and at their worst injurious, how much more should He preserve human beings with all their potentialities for good.

The same Rabbi Nehorai was told by Elijah, that God sends earthquakes and other destructive phenomena when He sees places of amusement prosperous and flourishing, while the Temple lies a heap of dust and ashes.<sup>77</sup>

To Rabbi Judah he communicated the following three maxims: Let not anger master thee, and thou wilt not fall into sin; let not drink master thee, and thou wilt be spared pain; before thou settest out on a journey, take counsel with thy Creator.<sup>78</sup>

In case of a difference of opinion among scholars, Elijah was usually questioned as to how the moot point was interpreted in the heavenly academy.<sup>79</sup> Once, when the scholars were not unanimous in their views as to Esther's intentions when she invited Haman to her banquets with the king, Elijah, asked by Rabba bar Abahu to tell him her real purpose, said that each and every one of the motives attributed to her by various scholars were true, for her invitations to Haman had many a purpose.<sup>80</sup>

A similar answer he gave the Amora Abiathar, who disputed with his colleagues as to why the Ephraimite who caused the war against the tribe of Benjamin first cast off his concubine, and then became reconciled to her. Elijah informed Rabbi Abiathar that in heaven the cruel conduct of the Ephraimite was explained in two ways, according to Abiathar's conception and according to his opponent Jonathan's as well.<sup>81</sup>

Regarding the great contest between Rabbi Eliezer ben Hyrcanus and the whole body of scholars, in which the majority maintained the validity of its opinion, though a heavenly voice pronounced Rabbi Eliezer's correct, Elijah told Rabbi Nathan, that God in His heaven had cried out: "My children have prevailed over Me!"<sup>82</sup>

On one occasion Elijah fared badly for having betrayed celestial events to the scholars. He was a daily attendant at the academy of Rabbi Judah ha-Nasi. One day, it was the New Moon Day, he was late. The reason for his tardiness, he said, was that it was his daily duty to awaken the three Patriarchs,<sup>83</sup> wash their hands for them, so that they might offer up their prayers, and after their devotions lead them back to their resting-places. On this day their prayers took very long, because they were increased by the Musaf service on account of the New Moon celebration, and hence he did not make his appearance at the academy in good time. Elijah did not end his narrative at this point, but went on to tell the Rabbi, that this occupation of his was rather tedious, for the three Patriarchs were not permitted to offer up their prayers at the same time. Abraham prayed first, then came Isaac, and finally Jacob. If they all were to pray together, the united petitions of three such paragons of piety would be so efficacious as to force God to fulfil them, and He would be induced to bring the Messiah before his time. Then Rabbi Judah wanted to know whether there were any among the pious on earth whose prayer possessed equal efficacy. Elijah admitted that the same power resided in the prayers of Rabbi Ḥayyah and his two sons. Rabbi Judah lost no time in proclaiming a day of prayer and fasting and summoning Rabbi Ḥayyah and his sons to officiate as the leaders in prayer. They began to chant the Eighteen Benedictions. When they uttered the word for wind, a storm arose; when they continued and made petition for rain, the rain descended at once. But as the readers approached the passage relating to the revival of the dead, great excitement arose in heaven, and when it became known that Elijah had revealed the secret of the marvellous power attaching to the prayers of the three men, he was punished with fiery blows. To thwart Rabbi Judah's purpose, Elijah assumed the form of a bear, and put the praying congregation to flight.<sup>84</sup>

Contrariwise, Elijah was also in the habit of reporting earthly events in the celestial regions. He told Rabba bar Shila that the reason Rabbi Meïr was never quoted in the academy on high was because he had had so wicked a teacher as Elisha ben Abuyah. Rabba explained Rabbi Meïr's conduct by an apologue. "Rabbi Meïr", he said, "found a pomegranate; he enjoyed the heart of the fruit, and cast the skin aside." Elijah was persuaded of the justness of this defense, and so were all the celestial powers. Thereupon one of Rabbi Meïr's interpretations was quoted in the heavenly academy.<sup>85</sup>

Elijah was no less interested in the persons of the learned than in their teachings, especially when scholars were to be provided with the means of devoting themselves to their studies. It was he who, when Rabbi Eliezer ben Hyrcanus, later a great celebrity, resolved to devote himself to the law, advised him to repair to Jerusalem and sit at the feet of Rabban Johanan ben Zakkai.<sup>86</sup>

He once met a man who mocked at his exhortations to study, and he said that on the great day of reckoning he would excuse himself for his neglect of intellectual pursuits by the fact that he had been granted neither intelligence nor wisdom. Elijah asked him what his calling was. "I am a fisherman," was the reply. "Well, my son," questioned Elijah, "who taught thee to take flax and make nets and throw them into the sea to catch fish?" He replied: "For this heaven gave me intelligence and insight." Hereupon Elijah: "If thou possessest intelligence and insight to cast nets and catch fish, why should these qualities desert thee when thou dealest with the Torah, which, thou knowest, is very nigh unto man that he may do it?" The fisherman was touched, and he began to weep. Elijah pacified him by telling him that what he had said applied to many another beside him.<sup>87</sup>

In another way Elijah conveyed the lesson of the great value residing in devotion to the study of the Torah. Disguised as a Rabbi, he was approached by a man who promised to relieve him of all material cares if he would but abide with him. Refusing to leave Jabneh, the centre of Jewish scholarship, he said to the tempter: "Wert thou to offer me a thousand million gold denarii, I would not quit the abode of the law, and dwell in a place in which there is no Torah."<sup>88</sup>

By Torah, of course, is meant the law as conceived and interpreted by the sages and the scholars, for Elijah was particularly solicitous to establish the authority of the oral law,<sup>89</sup> as he was solicitous to demonstrate the truth of Scriptural promises that appeared incredible at first sight. For instance, he once fulfilled Rabbi Joshua ben Levi's wish to see the precious stones which would take the place of the sun in illuminating Jerusalem in the Messianic time. A vessel in mid-ocean was nigh unto shipwreck. Among a large number of heathen passengers there was a single Jewish youth. To him Elijah appeared and said, he would rescue the vessel, provided the boy went to Rabbi Joshua ben Levi, and took him to a certain place far removed from the town and from human habitation, and showed him the gems. The boy doubted that so great a man would consent to follow a mere slip of a youth to a remote spot, but, reassured by Elijah, who told him of Rabbi Joshua's extraordinary modesty, he undertook the commission, and the vessel with its human freight was saved. The boy came to the Rabbi, besought him to go whither he would lead, and Joshua, who was really possessed of great modesty, followed the boy three miles without even inquiring the purpose of the expedition. When they finally reached the cave, the boy said: "See, here are the precious stones!" The Rabbi grasped them, and a flood of light spread as far as Lydda, the residence of Rabbi Joshua. Startled, he cast the precious stones away from him, and they disappeared.<sup>90</sup>

This Rabbi was a particular favorite of Elijah, who even secured him an interview with the Messiah. The Rabbi found the Messiah among the crowd of afflicted poor gathered near the city gates of Rome, and he greeted him with the words: "Peace be with thee, my teacher and guide!" Whereunto the Messiah replied: "Peace be with thee, thou son of Levi!" The Rabbi then asked him when he would appear, and the Messiah said, "To-day." Elijah explained to the Rabbi later that what the Messiah meant by "to-day" was, that he for his part was ready to bring Israel redemption at any time. If Israel but showed himself worthy, he would instantly fulfil his mission.<sup>91</sup>

Elijah wanted to put Rabbi Joshua into communication with the departed Rabbi Simon ben Yoḥai also, but the latter did not consider him of sufficient importance to honor him with his conversation. Rabbi Simon had addressed a question to him, and Rabbi Joshua in his modesty had made a reply not calculated to give one a high opinion of him.<sup>92</sup> In reality Rabbi Joshua was the possessor of such sterling qualities, that when he entered Paradise Elijah walked before him calling out: "Make room for the son of Levi."<sup>93</sup>

---

75. 'Erubin 43a. On the basis of this and similar passages of the Talmud, where Elijah appears as the teacher of the wise, it was thought that he is alluded to wherever the Talmud speaks of a "certain old scholar", ההוא סבא. Comp. Responsen der Geonim (Harkavy's edition, No. 23) and Tosafoth on Hullin 6a. As to Elijah assuming the appearance of an "old man", see also PK 10, 92b–93a. Elijah used to appear daily to R. Joseph, the Gaon of Pumbedita, but nobody knew of it until this Rabbi became very old and absent-minded (this is how ואשטף is to be understood), so that he once remarked to the scholars of the academy: "Leave some room next to me for the 'old man' who comes to see me." They did not see anybody come, and knew that he meant Elijah. See Iggeret R. Sherira Gaon 37, lines 7–5 (from bottom.)

76. Yebamot 63a, and more fully ER 9, 61. On certain regulations concerning prayer imparted by Elijah to this Rabbi, see Berakot 3a, and note 63. Elijah pointed out to another Rabbi that "poverty is the most precious gift which God could have bestowed upon Israel," as it leads them to be kind, self-sacrificing, and God-fearing. See Hagigah 9b; EZ 3, 176, and 6, 181.

77. Yerushalmi Berakot 9, 13c; ER 1, 15; Tehillim 18, 140–141, and 104, 447–448. Comp. also quotation from Yerushalmi (not in our texts) in Yalkut I, 836, on Deut. 6.4, and Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 862, on Ps. 104. On the causes of earthquakes and other phenomena, see also Sibyll. 4.130–135; Enoch 59.1–5; Berakot 59a. On the relation of Elijah to R. Nehorai, see Ruth R. 2.21, and Friedmann, introduction to ER 33, note 2.

78. Berakot 29b (bottom). The correct reading of the second maxim is to be found only in MHG I, 175, whereas all the other texts have תחטי instead of תדני, which is used as a play on the preceding תני. It is to be observed that the first two maxims are in Aramaic and the third in Hebrew. This very likely points to the use of different sources by the Talmud. The third maxim means: "Pray before thou settest out on a journey."

79. The "heavenly academy", in which the pious who departed this life and the angels study the Torah with God, is frequently mentioned in the Haggadah, as for instance Gittin 68a and Baba Mezi'a 86a.

80. Megillah 15b.

81. Gittin 6b; compare footnote 134 on p. 882.

82. Baba Mezi'a 59b. R. Nathan received from Elijah the wise counsel never to fill himself with food and drink, but to leave one third of his stomach unfilled, one third thereof filled with food and one third with beverages. See Gittin 70a.

83. For a similar function of Elijah, see Esther R. 4.9.

84. Baba Mezi'a 85b. In a similar legend (Ma'aseh-buch No. 157) it is Jeremiah who performs the function of the Hazzan in the congregation of the pious who departed this life. On the view that the dead pray, see also footnote 97 on p. 20. In Baba Mezi'a, loc. cit., it is also stated that Elijah showed to a scholar the fiery chariots in which the pious ascend to the heavenly academy. The scholar, however, lost his eye-sight, because, notwithstanding Elijah's warning, he looked at the chariot of R. Hiyyah, the lustre of which blinded him. As to the nature of the punishment inflicted upon Elijah, see footnote 896 on p. 809. That prayer combined with repentance will bring about the Messianic redemption of Israel is also stated by Philo, De Praemiis et Poenis 8.

85. Hagigah 15b.

86. PRE 1; Bet Eked ha-Aggadot 8 and 14; 2 ARN 13, 30.

87. EZ 14, 195–196; Tan. Wa-Yelek 2.

88. ER 18, 95 (read קסדור=קדור instead of קודיר), and EZ 1, 167. Comp. also Kinyan Torah 9; Mekilta RS, 98; quotation from the Midrash in Steinschneider-Festschrift, Hebrew section, 55.

89. ER 14–15, 70–80, and EZ 2, 171–175 give Elijah's conversation with people who accepted the "written Torah", but not the "oral Torah", and his arguments in favor of the binding power of both, the written and the unwritten Torot. Comp. note 70.

90. PK 18, 136; PR 32, 148b (this passage has the rare description of the prophet as "Abba Elijah" "father Elijah"; comp. Sanhedrin, (end); Ma'asiyyot, ed. Gaster 135. These stones were at the bottom of the "great sea", and the shipwreck was necessary to enable the Jewish lad to lift them and show them to the Rabbi. As to the cave where the stones were placed, see note 62. A confusion of Caesarea and Lydda seems to prevail in the sources. On the stones to be used in the Messianic times, see text on p. 856, and Jerome on Joel 4.4–12.

91. Sanhedrin 98a. In the Hebrew the reply made by the Messiah contains a play on words, which cannot be reproduced in another language.

92. PK 10, 87b; BR 35 (beginning). The question addressed to R. Joshua was whether he had seen a rainbow. His affirmative answer implied that his piety did not suffice to ward off the extreme punishment due to a wicked generation. For a rainbow appears only to remind God of His promise to Noah not to destroy the world on account of the iniquity of its inhabitants. Comp. Ketubot 77b and Zohar I, 72b.

93. Ketubot 77b. In the numerous legends concerning the intercourse of Elijah with the sages and saints it is presupposed that these men knew his identity when he appeared to them. Other mortals, on the other hand (even those who were found worthy to be helped by Elijah in time of need and distress), were not aware of the great distinction conferred upon them until he had disappeared from among them, and sometimes did not find out at all about the supernatural company granted to them. Comp., for instance, the legend given in the text on pp. 1006 and 1007–1008. A third form of communication between Elijah and certain people is known as גלוי אליהו, the "appearance of Elijah", in dreams to give advice and counsel. In the old literature this is very rarely mentioned, and besides the legend quoted from PR and Yelammedenu in note 58, there is only one other in which Elijah is said to have appeared to a "Roman ruler" in a dream, and warned him against squandering the treasures left him by his ancestors; BR 83.4. On the other hand, this "appearance of Elijah" is very frequently referred to in later literature. Comp. note 103. They favored this form of communication with wicked and cruel rulers to make them change their evil designs against the Jews. The Calif Al-Mutadhid (892–902), a veritable Haman, became a friend and protector of the Jews after Elijah had appeared to him in a dream and threatened him with a cruel death if he did not immediately change his attitude towards the Jews. See Arabic fragment published by Harkavy in Berliner-Festschrift, 35, seq. The same thing happened to the Sultan Sulaiman I (1545); Elijah not only prevented him from carrying out the cruel persecution of the Jews upon which he had decided, but changed him into their staunch friend. As a reward for this he was visited by Elijah (in a dream) every month. That the Sultan should have no doubt as to the reality of the appearance, Elijah first revealed himself to R. Moses Hamon, the physician-in-ordinary of the Sultan, and told him to prepare his majesty for the visit he (Elijah) would pay him. See Sambari in Neubauer's Medieval Jewish Chronicles, I, 147–149. Sambari, ibid., 121, is the only source for the statement that Elijah was born in a village near Cairo. In view of the prevalent opinion that Elijah is none other than Phinehas (compare with p. 993), it was quite natural that some locality in Egypt should claim the distinction of being the birthplace of the prophet.

GOD'S JUSTICE VINDICATED

Among the many and various teachings dispensed by Elijah to his friends, there are none so important as his theodicy, the teachings vindicating God's justice in the administration of earthly affairs. He used many an opportunity to demonstrate it by precept and example. Once he granted his friend Rabbi Joshua ben Levi the fulfilment of any wish he might express, and all the Rabbi asked for was, that he might be permitted to accompany Elijah on his wanderings through the world. Elijah was prepared to gratify this wish. He only imposed the condition, that, however odd the Rabbi might think Elijah's actions, he was not to ask any explanation of them. If ever he demanded why, they would have to part company. So Elijah and the Rabbi fared forth together, and they journeyed on until they reached the house of a poor man, whose only earthly possession was a cow. The man and his wife were thoroughly good-hearted people, and they received the two wanderers with a cordial welcome. They invited the strangers into their house, set before them food and drink of the best they had, and made up a comfortable couch for them for the night. When Elijah and the Rabbi were ready to continue their journey on the following day, Elijah prayed that the cow belonging to his host might die. Before they left the house, the animal had expired. Rabbi Joshua was so shocked by the misfortune that had befallen the good people, he almost lost consciousness. He thought: "Is that to be the poor man's reward for all his kind services to us?" And he could not refrain from putting the question to Elijah. But Elijah reminded him of the condition imposed and accepted at the beginning of their journey, and they travelled on, the Rabbi's curiosity unappeased. That night they reached the house of a wealthy man, who did not pay his guests the courtesy of looking them in the face. Though they passed the night under his roof, he did not offer them food or drink. This rich man was desirous of having a wall repaired that had tumbled down. There was no need for him to take any steps to have it rebuilt, for, when Elijah left the house, he prayed that the wall might erect itself, and, lo! it stood upright. Rabbi Joshua was greatly amazed, but true to his promise he suppressed the question that rose to his lips. So the two travelled on again, until they reached an ornate synagogue, the seats in which were made of silver and gold. But the worshippers did not correspond in character to the magnificence of the building, for when it came to the point of satisfying the needs of the way-worn pilgrims, one of those present said: "There is no dearth of water and bread, and the strange travellers can stay in the synagogue, whither these refreshments can be brought to them." Early the next morning, when they were departing, Elijah wished those present in the synagogue in which they had lodged, that God might raise them all to be "heads". Rabbi Joshua again had to exercise great self-restraint, and not put into words the question that troubled him profoundly. In the next town, they were received with great affability, and served abundantly with all their tired bodies craved. On these kind hosts Elijah, on leaving, bestowed the wish that God might give them but a single head. Now the Rabbi could not hold himself in check any longer, and he demanded an explanation of Elijah's freakish actions. Elijah consented to clear up his conduct for Joshua before they separated from each other. He spoke as follows: "The poor man's cow was killed, because I knew that on the same day the death of his wife had been ordained in heaven, and I prayed to God to accept the loss of the poor man's property as a substitute for the poor man's wife. As for the rich man, there was a treasure hidden under the dilapidated wall, and, if he had rebuilt it, he would have found the gold; hence I set up the wall miraculously in order to deprive the curmudgeon of the valuable find. I wished that the inhospitable people assembled in the synagogue might have many heads, for a place of numerous leaders is bound to be ruined by reason of the multiplicity of counsel and disputes. To the inhabitants of our last sojourning place, on the other hand, I wished a 'single head', for with one to guide a town, success will attend all its undertakings. Know, then, that if thou seest an evil-doer prosper, it is not always unto his advantage, and if a righteous man suffers need and distress, think not God is unjust." After these words Elijah and Rabbi Joshua separated from each other, and each went his own way.<sup>94</sup>

How difficult it is to form a true judgment with nothing but external appearances as a guide, Elijah proved to Rabbi Baroka. They were once walking in a crowded street, and the Rabbi requested Elijah to point out any in the throng destined to occupy places in Paradise. Elijah answered that there was none, only to contradict himself and point to a passer-by the very next minute. His appearance was such that in him least of all the Rabbi would have suspected a pious man. His garb did not even indicate that he was a Jew. Later Rabbi Baroka discovered by questioning him that he was a prison guard. In the fulfilment of his duties as such he was particularly careful that the virtue of chastity should not be violated in the prison, in which both men and women were kept in detention. Also, his position often brought him into relations with the heathen authorities, and so he was enabled to keep the Jews informed of the disposition entertained toward them by the powers that be. The Rabbi was thus taught that no station in life precluded its occupant from doing good and acting nobly.

Another time Elijah designated two men to whom a great future was assigned in Paradise. Yet these men were nothing more than clowns! They made it their purpose in life to dispel discontent and sorrow by their jokes and their cheery humor, and they used the opportunities granted by their profession to adjust the difficulties and quarrels that disturb the harmony of people living in close contact with each other.<sup>95</sup>

---

94. Hibbur Yafeh 8–11 (reprinted by Jellinek in BHM V, 133–135). A different version is found in Ma'asiyyot 12 (reprinted by R. Elijah ha-Kohen in Me'il Zedakah, No. 439, and by Jellinek in BHM VI, 131–133. The latter did not know that R. Elijah ha-Kohen used Ma'asiyyot for his text). Comp. also Ma'asiyyot ed. Gaster 96–97. For Judeo-German and later German versions, see Zunz, Gottesdienstliche Vorträge (second edition, 138). A version agreeing with neither of the two just mentioned is given by Peter Venerabilis; comp. R.E.J., XLIII, 284; See also ibid. VIII, 64–73 and Gaster, Exempla, No. 393. The antiquity of the legend is attested by Mohammed who reproduces it in the Koran (18.59–82) in his anachronistic fashion. There is no valid reason to doubt the Jewish origin of this legend, especially if one considers the fact that Elijah appears as the "vindicator of God's justice" in the old Haggadah, preceding the Koran by centuries. It may not be out of place to quote a few examples of this rôle, played by Elijah. At the destruction of Jerusalem Elijah walked about among the inhabitants of the city, who were dying of starvation, to find out whether they deserved their sad fate. Coming across a young child, he said to him: "Repeat the words I am going to recite to you, and thou shalt live." But when the child heard the Shema' recited by Elijah, he preferred death to proclaiming God's unity. And the child died hugging and kissing his idol. See Sifra 26.30; Sanhedrin 63b. It is noteworthy that in these passages Elijah received the attribute הצדיק, literally "the righteous one", but it very likely means: "he who acknowledged God's justice." Elijah once remarked to a great saint: "You are astounded why the Messiah has not come yet. To-day is the Day of Atonement, and on this day of repentance many a virgin is deflowered in your city of Nehardea." See Yoma 19b. The young widow of a promising scholar was inconsolable at the premature death of her husband, and exclaimed all the time: "God said of the Torah: 'It is thy life and the length of thy days' (comp. Deut. 30.2); Where is the length of my husband's days, who devoted his life to the study of the Torah?" None of the great scholars could explain the premature death of their young disciple. But Elijah went to see the widow, and in his conversation with her led her to admit certain failings of her deceased husband and consequently to acknowledge that his death was a deserved punishment. See Shabbat 13a–13b; ER 15, 76; ARN 2, 8, and parallel passages cited by Schechter. Most of the incidents narrated of Elijah's life in the Midrashim ER and EZ (comp. note 70) have no other purpose but to vindicate God's justice in the history of nations and in the lives of individuals. Comp. Friedmann, introduction to ER 31–32. For the dependence of the Arabic Khadhir legend on the Jewish Elijah Haggadah, see Friedlaender, Die Chadhirlegende, 255, seq.

95. Ta'anit 22a. A similar lesson on the impossibility to judge things by appearances was given by Elijah to another wise and pious Rabbi when they were walking together. Passing by a carcass, the Rabbi put his hand to his nose in order not to inhale the awful stench, whereas Elijah walked hard by the carcass without taking the slightest notice of it. Shortly after a proud and haughty man passed by them, whereupon Elijah put his hand to his nose. Astonished at this strange behavior, the Rabbi asked him to explain it. Elijah replied: "The proud man is worse than the carcass; if one touches a carcass, he becomes defiled only until sunset (Lev. 11.24); but contact with the proud generates impurities lasting for a long time. Kab ha-Yashar 7, whence Ma'asiyyot (Bagdad edition, No. 89). Comp. WR (end).

ELIJAH AND THE ANGEL OF DEATH

Among the many benevolent deeds of Elijah, special mention ought to be made of his rescue of those doomed by a heavenly decree to fall into the clutches of the Angel of Death. He brought these rescues about by warning the designated victims of their impending fate, and urging them to do good deeds, which would prove a protection against death.

There was once a pious and rich man with a beautiful and saintly daughter. She had had the misfortune of losing three husbands in succession, each on the day after the wedding. These sorrows determined her never again to enter into the marriage state. A cousin of hers, the nephew of her father, induced by the poverty of his parents, journeyed from his distant home to apply for help to his rich uncle. Scarcely had he laid eyes upon his lovely cousin when he fell a victim to her charms. In vain her father sought to dissuade his nephew from marrying his daughter. But the fate of his predecessors did not affright him, and the wedding took place. While he was standing under the wedding canopy, Elijah came to him in the guise of an old man, and said: "My son, I want to give thee a piece of advice. While thou art seated at the wedding dinner, thou wilt be approached by a ragged, dirty beggar, with hair like nails. As soon as thou catchest sight of him, hasten to seat him beside thee, set food and drink before him, and be ready to grant whatever he may ask of thee. Do as I say, and thou wilt be protected against harm. Now I shall leave thee and go my way." At the wedding feast, a stranger as described by Elijah appeared, and the bridegroom did according to Elijah's counsel. After the wedding the stranger revealed his identity, introducing himself as the messenger of the Lord sent to take the young husband's life. The supplications of the bridegroom failed to move him; he refused to grant a single day's respite. All he yielded was permission to the young husband to bid farewell to his newly-wed wife. When the bride saw that what she had feared was coming to pass, she repaired to the Angel of Death and argued with him: "The Torah distinctly exempts the newly-wed from all duties for a whole year. If thou deprivest my husband of life, thou wilt give the lie to the Torah." Thereupon God commanded the Angel of Death to desist, and, when the relatives of the bride came to prepare the grave for the groom, they found him well and unharmed.<sup>96</sup>

A similar thing befell the son of the great and extremely pious scholar Rabbi Reuben. To him came the Angel of Death and announced that his only son would have to die. The pious man was resigned. "We mortals can do nothing to oppose a Divine decree," he said, "but I pray thee, give him thirty days' respite, that I may see him married." The Angel of Death acquiesced. The Rabbi told no one of his encounter, waited until the appointed time was drawing to a close, and, on the very last day, the thirtieth, he arranged his son's wedding feast. On that day, the bridegroom-to-be met Elijah, who told him of his approaching death. A worthy son of his father, he said: “Who may oppose God? And am I better than Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? They, too, had to die.” Elijah told him furthermore, that the Angel of Death would appear to him in the guise of a ragged, dirty beggar, and he advised him to receive him in the kindest possible manner, and in particular he was to insist upon his taking food and drink from him. All happened as Elijah had predicted, and his advice, too, proved efficacious, for the heart of the Angel of Death, who finally revealed his identity with the beggar, was softened by the entreaties of the father, combined with the tears of the young wife, who resorted to the argument cited above, of the year of exemption from duty granted to the newly-married. The Angel of Death, disarmed by the amiable treatment accorded to him, himself went before the throne of God and presented the young wife’s petition. The end was that God added seventy years to the life of Rabbi Reuben’s son.<sup>97</sup>

96. Tan. Haazinu 8. It is difficult to determine with certainty the relation of this legend to the story of Tobit, as it would be a rash conclusion to consider the former directly dependent upon the latter. The legend about R. Akiba’s daughter (Shabbat 156b) has obviously influenced our legend. The astrologers predicted that the daughter of this famous Rabbi would die on the day of her wedding. This prophecy would have been fulfilled, had she not, at the moment when the serpent was to sting her, hastened to the door to give alms to a beggar, and instead of being killed by the serpent, it was killed by her. As to the angel of death assuming the appearance of a beggar, see text on pp. 34–35. The motive: “Charity delivereth from death” (Prov. 10.2; according to the interpretation of the Rabbis, צדקה loc. cit.) is also found in the legend about the youth who was saved by Elijah from the gallows as a reward for his having been very generous to his parents (Oseh Fele, II, 21, seq.; it is of very late origin); also in the diffuse legend about R. Phineas, ibid., 23, seq. Comp. also the references in next note.

97. Ma’asiyyot, No. 1, and, with some additions, Ma’asiyyot (Gaster’s edition, 139, 100); comp. also BHM V, 152–154, where this legend is republished from Me’il Zedakah, No. 434. Jellinek did not know that the author of this book reproduced this legend from Ma’asiyyot. Another version of this legend occurs in Midrash ‘Aseret ha-Dib-rot 83–84, where, however, Elijah does not play any part at all.—Elijah’s activity is not limited to the helping of the pious to save them from death, poverty, and physical pain; he sometimes comes to relieve mental pain and anguish. A very saintly man was once punished for his excessive self-consciousness by being misled to sin by a female demon. God wished thus to humiliate him for his pride in his continence. Long and intense were the mental sufferings of this pious man, who could not for a moment forget his sin. But having been humiliated for a sufficiently long time, he was visited by Elijah who informed him that the beautiful woman who misled him to sin was not a human being but a spirit, and his sin was accordingly not a real one. Tan. B. I, 20. Comp. Yerushalmi Shabbat 13b. Sometimes Elijah himself inflicted punishment upon the pious for their frailties and failings, that they might mend their ways. A rich and learned young man once decided to take up some trade and profession, but not knowing what to choose, he resolved to look around before making up his mind. He first visited the market-place to study the life of the merchants, and when he saw that commerce was carried on by lying and cheating, he gave up the idea of becoming a merchant. Finally he noticed a man tilling the soil (it was none else but Elijah), and asked him what his business was. Elijah replied: “I till the soil to provide food for myself, my wife, and children, the poor and the needy, the animals of the fields, the fowl of the air, and the beasts of the earth.” The young man thereupon decided to stay with Elijah, and became a tiller of the soil. The latter took him to his house, and promised to fulfill all his wishes. The young man, however, had only one wish: to be married. Elijah knowing who was destined to become this man’s wife, took him to her (she lived in a place a three-days’ journey distant from them; but Elijah brought the young man to her in a second), and they were married. In his new happy state the young man entirely forgot his resolution to become a tiller of the soil. At the end of seven days Elijah appeared to him, and informed him that as a punishment for his having neglected his duty for seven days, he would spend seven years in slavery. Elijah’s prediction came true. On his way to his family (אבותיו) is not to be taken literally; his father was dead), with his wife, her slaves and bondwomen, the caravan halted near a big river. While the young man was trying to wash his feet in the river, Elijah appeared, seized him, and carried him off to a distant country, where he sold him into slavery. The young man’s wife did not complain, but was convinced that “whatever God did was for the best." She settled down in the place where her husband disappeared, and opened a store for the sale of corn, in the hope that her husband would turn up in the course of time. After five years she recognized her husband as a slave of a corn merchant. Their joy was great, and also their trust in God. When the young man told his wife that heaven decreed seven years of slavery against him, of which two years were still lacking, they parted without a murmur. At the termination of the seventh year Elijah brought the young man to his wife, and henceforth they lived happily together. See 'Aseret ha-Dibrot, 85–86.

TEACHER OF THE KABBALAH

The frequent meetings between Elijah and the teachers of the law of the Talmudic time were invested with personal interest only. Upon the development of the Torah they had no influence whatsoever. His relation to the mystic science was of quite other character. It is safe to say that what Moses was to the Torah, Elijah was to the Kabbalah.

His earliest relation to it was established through Rabbi Simon ben Yohai and his son Rabbi Eliezer. For thirteen years he visited them twice daily in their subterranean hiding-place, and imparted the secrets of the Torah to them.<sup>98</sup> A thousand years later, Elijah again gave the impetus to the development of the Kabbalah, for it was he that revealed mysteries, first to the Nazirite Rabbi Jacob, then to his disciple Abraham ben Isaac Ab Bet Din, and, finally, to the disciple of the latter, Abraham ben David. The mysteries in the books "Peliash" and "Kānah", the author Elkanah owed wholly to Elijah. He had appeared to him in the form of a venerable old man, and had imparted to him the secret lore taught in the heavenly academy. Besides, he led him to a fiery rock whereon mysterious characters were engraved, which were deciphered by Elkanah.

After his disciple had thus become thoroughly impregnated with mystical teachings, Elijah took him to the tomb of the Patriarchs, and thence to the heavenly academy. But the angels, little pleased by the intrusion of one "born of woman", inspired him with such terror that he besought Elijah to carry him back to earth. His mentor allayed his fears, and long continued to instruct him in the mystical science, according to the system his disciple has recorded in his two works.<sup>99</sup>

The Kabbalists in general were possessed of the power to cite Elijah, to conjure him up by means of certain formulas.<sup>100</sup> One of them, Rabbi Joseph della Reyna, once called upon Elijah in this way, but it proved his own undoing. He was a saintly scholar, and he had conceived no less a purpose than to bring about the redemption of man by the conquest of the angel Samael, the Prince of Evil. After many prayers and vigils and long indulgence in fasting, and other ascetic practices, Rabbi Joseph united himself with his five disciples for the purpose of conjuring up Elijah. When the prophet, obeying the summons, suddenly stood before him, Rabbi Joseph spoke as follows: "Peace be with thee, our master! True prophet, bearer of salvation, be not displeased with me that I have troubled thee to come hither. God knows, I have not done it for myself, and not for mine own honor. I am zealous for the name and the honor of God, and I know thy desire is the same as mine, for it is thy vocation to make the glory of God to prevail on earth. I pray thee, therefore, to grant my petition, tell me with what means I can conquer Satan." Elijah at first endeavored to dissuade the Rabbi from his enterprise. He described the great power of Satan, ever growing as it feeds upon the sins of mankind. But Rabbi Joseph could not be made to desist. Elijah then enumerated what measures and tactics he would have to observe in his combat with the fallen angel. He enumerated the pious, saintly deeds that would win the interest of the archangel Sandalphon in his undertaking, and from this angel he would learn the method of warfare to be pursued. The Rabbi followed out Elijah's directions carefully, and succeeded in summoning Sandalphon to his assistance. If he had continued to obey instructions implicitly, and had carried out all Sandalphon advised, the Rabbi would have triumphed over Satan and hastened the redemption of the world. Unfortunately, at one point the Rabbi committed an indiscretion, and he lost the great advantages he had gained over Satan, who used his restored power to bring ruin upon him and his disciples.<sup>101</sup>

The radical transformation in the character of Kabbalistic teaching which is connected with the name of Rabbi Isaac Loria likewise is an evidence of Elijah's activity. Elijah sought out this "father of the Kabbalistic Renaissance", and revealed the mysteries of the universe to him. Indeed, he had shown his interest in him long before any one suspected the future greatness of Rabbi Isaac. Immediately after his birth, Elijah appeared to the father of the babe, and enjoined him not to have the rite of circumcision performed until he should be told by Elijah to proceed. The eighth day of the child's life arrived, the whole congregation was assembled at the synagogue<sup>102</sup> to witness the solemn ceremonial, but to the great astonishment of his fellow-townsmen the father delayed it. The people naturally did not know he was waiting for Elijah to appear, and he was called upon once and again to have the ceremony take place. But he did not permit the impatience of the company to turn him from his purpose. Suddenly, Elijah, unseen, of course, by the others, appeared to him, and bade him have the ceremony performed. Those present were under the impression that the father was holding the child on his knees during the circumcision; in reality, however, it was Elijah. After the rite was completed, Elijah handed the infant back to the father with the words: "Here is thy child. Take good care of it, for it will spread a brilliant light over the world."<sup>103</sup>

It was also Elijah who in a similar way informed Rabbi Eliezer, the father of Rabbi Israel Baal Shem Tob,—the father of him whose name is unrivalled in the annals of the Hasidic Kabbalah—that a son would be born to him who should enlighten the eyes of Israel. This Rabbi Eliezer was justly reputed to be very hospitable. He was in the habit of stationing guards at the entrances to the village in which he lived, and they were charged to bring all strangers to his house. In heaven it was ordained that Rabbi Eliezer's hospitable instincts should be put to a test. Elijah was chosen for the experiment. On a Sabbath afternoon, arrayed in the garb of a beggar, he entered the village with knapsack and staff. Rabbi Eliezer, taking no notice of the fact that the beggar was desecrating the Sabbath, received him kindly, attended to his bodily wants, and the next morning, on parting with him, gave him some money besides. Touched by his kind-heartedness, Elijah revealed his identity and the purpose of his disguise, and told him that, as he had borne the trial so well, he would be rewarded by the birth of a son who should "enlighten the eyes of Israel."<sup>104</sup>

---

98. Zohar Hadash Ki-Tabo (beginning); Zohar Shir beginning ש"ך חדי; Tikkune Zohar (beginning). Friedmann, introduction to ER, 38–40, gives a list of all the passages in the Zohar dealing with Elijah's relations to R. Simeon and his son R. Eleazar. Tikkune Zohar, No. 17, contains an exposé of the Zoharic Kabbalah by Elijah. This exposé found its way into the Sefardic prayer-book. Comp. also note 52.

99. As for Elijah's being the teacher of R. Jacob and R. Abraham b. Isaac, see Shem ha-Gedolim, 3–4; Jellinek, Auswahl Kabbalistischer Mystik, 4–5. Comp. also Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, I, s. v. "Abraham ben David of Posquières". As to the relation of Elijah to Elkanah, see introduction to Peliah; Jellinek, BHM III, 38 (German part); Graetz, Geschichte, VII, note 3.

100. Emek ha-Meleḥ, introduction, 10a. Elijah is often conjured to give aid to women at childbirth against Lilith and the machinations of witches.

101. לֵקוּטֵי שׁ"ס לְהַאֲרִי ז' 55a–59a, which is the oldest printed source of the legend about R. Joseph della Reyna found in many Hebrew, as well as Judeo-German, collections of legends. Vital, Sha'are Kedushah (end) refers to this legend in a few words.

102. Formerly the ceremony of circumcision was performed in the synagogue, as it still is to-day in some Oriental countries.

103. Shibhe ha-Ari (beginning) and comp. the references in Schechter's Studies in Judaism, II, 323, note 117. A similar story about R. Phinehas is found in Oseh Fele II, 22b–23a. During the persecution of the pious by the wicked Jezebel, Elijah displayed great zeal for the observance of the Abrahamic covenant (comp. note 25), and as his reward Cod promised him that he should be present at every ceremony of circumcision. Accordingly the "chair of Elijah" must not be forgotten at the ceremony of circumcision, as he is always present on these occasions, though not visible to the eyes of the ordinary man. See PRE 29; Halakot Gedolot, according to the text of Shibbale ha-Leket, 376, No. 6. Comp. Jewish Encyclopedia, s. v., "Elijah's Chair". A child was once brought in for circumcision, and all present greeted him with the customary formula of Baruk ha-Ba ("Blessed be he that cometh"), which is at the same time a welcome to Elijah, the guest expected to come. R. Judah he-Hasid of Regensburg, the Sandek at the circumcision ceremony, remained silent. Asked for the reason of his strange silence, he answered: "I do not see Elijah seated at my side." While he was speaking, a venerable old man (comp. note 75) appeared at the window, and R. Judah was seen addressing him. The old man (of course, it was Elijah) declared to them that he refused to come because the child would one day abandon Judaism. The prophecy was fulfilled. See Ma'aseh-buch, No. 180, 54d. Elijah's ubiquity was explained in different ways; see Glasberg, Zikron la-Rishonim, 233, seq. In view of Elijah's acting as an assistant to the Sandek, it is quite natural that he is regarded as the patron of those performing the function of Sandek. See the diffuse legend concerning the help granted to the Sandek by Elijah in Rosenberg, אֱלִיהוּ הַנְּבִיא, 34, seq. As his source the author gives the Midrash Wa-Yosha' in MS. But there can be no doubt that this is a pure invention. Rosenberg has the temerity to state that a part of this legend is found in the printed text of this Midrash. This is not the case.

104. Ma'asiyyot Peliot 24–25. Comp. also Shibhe ha-Besht (beginning). The admirers of the Gaon, R. Elijah Wilna, the great opponent of R. Israel Baal Shem Tob, tell of their hero's intercourse with Elijah as well. Comp. Aliyyot Eliyyahu, 35. I remember to have heard a temptation legend, similar to the one given in the text, told in Wilna of R. Moses Krammer, the great grandfather of the Gaon; see Sa'arat Eliyyahu, 18; Tr Wilna, 10. Comp. also the similar legend in Ma'asiyyot (Gaster's edition, 161, 115–116), where אֲבִיּוֹן is to be read instead of הַגְּמוֹן; the angel who tempted the saint assumed the appearance of a beggar. Compare footnote 15 on p. 456 and text on pp. 1016–1017.

FORERUNNER OF THE MESSIAH

Many-sided though Elijah's participation in the course of historical events is, it cannot be compared with what he is expected to do in the days of the Messiah. He is charged with the mission of ordering the coming time aright and restoring the tribes of Jacob.<sup>105</sup> His Messianic activity thus is to be twofold: he is to be the forerunner of the Messiah, yet in part he will himself realize the promised scheme of salvation. His first task will be to induce Israel to repent when the Messiah is about to come,<sup>106</sup> and to establish peace and harmony in the world.<sup>107</sup> Hence he will have to settle all legal difficulties, and solve all legal problems, that have accumulated since days immemorial,<sup>108</sup> and decide vexed questions of ritual concerning which authors entertain contradictory views. In short, all differences of opinion must be removed from the path of the Messiah.<sup>109</sup> This office of expounder of the law Elijah will continue to occupy even after the reign of peace has been established on earth, and his relation to Moses will be the same Aaron once held.<sup>110</sup>

Elijah's preparatory work will be begun three days before the advent of the Messiah. Then he will appear in Palestine, and will utter a lament over the devastation of the Holy Land, and his wail will be heard throughout the world. The last words of his elegy will be: "Now peace will come upon earth!" When the evil-doers hear this message, they will rejoice. On the second day, he will appear again and proclaim: "Good will come upon earth!" And on the third his promise will be heard: "Salvation will come upon earth."<sup>111</sup> Then Michael will blow the trumpet, and once more Elijah will make his appearance, this time to introduce the Messiah.<sup>112</sup> To make sure of the identity of the Messiah, the Jews will demand that he perform the miracle of resurrection before their eyes, reviving such of the dead as they had known personally.<sup>113</sup> But the Messiah will do the following seven wonders: He will bring Moses and the generation of the desert to life; Korah and his band he will raise from out of the earth; he will revive the Ephraimitic Messiah, who was slain; he will show the three holy vessels of the Temple, the Ark, the flask of manna, and the cruse of sacred oil, all three of which disappeared mysteriously; he will wave the sceptre given him by God; he will grind the mountains of the Holy Land into powder like straw, and he will reveal the secret of redemption. Then the Jews will believe that Elijah is the Elijah promised to them, and the Messiah introduced by him is the true Messiah.<sup>114</sup>

The Messiah<sup>115</sup> will have Elijah blow the trumpet, and, at the first sound, the primal light, which shone before the week of the Creation, will reappear; at the second sound the dead will arise, and with the swiftness of wind assemble around the Messiah from all corners of the earth; at the third sound, the Shekinah will become visible to all; the mountains will be razed at the fourth sound, and the Temple will stand in complete perfection as Ezekiel described it.<sup>116</sup>

During the reign of peace, Elijah will be one of the eight princes forming the cabinet of the Messiah.<sup>117</sup> Even the coming of the great judgment day will not end his activity. On that day the children of the wicked who had to die in infancy on account of the sins of their fathers will be found among the just, while their fathers will be ranged on the other side. The babes will implore their fathers to come to them, but God will not permit it. Then Elijah will go to the little ones, and teach them how to plead in behalf of their fathers. They will stand before God and say: "Is not the measure of good, the mercy of God, larger than the measure of chastisements? If, then, we died for the sins of our fathers, should they not now for our sakes be granted the good, and be permitted to join us in Paradise?" God will give assent to their pleadings, and Elijah will have fulfilled the word of the prophet Malachi; he will have brought back the fathers to the children.<sup>118</sup>

The last act of Elijah's brilliant career will be the execution of God's command to slay Sam-ael, and so banish evil forever.<sup>119</sup>

---

105. Ecclus. 48.10–11. This is more than a free rendering of Malachi 3.25; to the author of Ecclus. Elijah is very likely the promised Messiah. Traces of this view are found in rabbinical sources, see Friedmann, introduction to ER, 25–37; Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 346, seq. The statement that Elijah is one of the names of the Messiah is inferred from Malachi, loc. cit.; Mishle 19, 87. This shows that even later this biblical passage was taken to refer to the Messiah. But since it later became a fixed conception that the Messiah must be a "son of David", there is no other way out of the difficulty than to give the name Elijah to the son of David. On the four Messiahs (that is: Messiah the son of David, the Messiah of the tribe of Joseph, Elijah, and the priest of righteousness), see Ginzberg, ibid.

106. PRE 43 and 47. This was probably the prevalent notion in the early formative period of Christianity, as may be inferred from the New Testament account of John the Baptist (=Elijah), the alleged precursor of the Messiah. On repentance as the conditio sine qua non of the "final redemption", see Sanhedrin 97b; Yerushalmi Ta'anit 1, 63d; PRE 43; Tan. B. III, 111; Tan. Behukkotai 3; Philo, De Praemiis et Poenis, 8. Comp. also note 84.

107. Mishnah and Tosefta at the end of 'Eduyyot, where different views are cited concerning the means by which Elijah will restore peace and harmony in Israel. All these views presuppose that Elijah's chief activity will consist in restoring the purity of the family. See the thorough discussion on this point by Friedmann, introduction to ER, 20–24. Comp. also note 35.

108. Mishnah and Tosefta at the end of 'Eduyyot. Comp. the following note.

109. Menahot 45a. The phrase, "This must remain undecided until Elijah comes", is of frequent occurrence in tannaitic literature. Comp. the references given by Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 304, seq., where the meaning of this expression is also fully discussed.

110. Zohar III, 27b–28a.

111. PR 35, 161. This passage also gives him the designation of "Harbinger of good tidings", which later became his favorite appellation; see Ginzberg, Geonica, I, 55, note 1. See also the Messianic Midrash in Lekah IV, 259, and Tefillat R. Simon, 123 (top).

112. Otot ha-Mashiah, 62; Tefillat R. Simeon, 125. It is noteworthy that according to a widespread belief, Elijah, with the "rest of the righteous", will flee into the desert, whence they will return after a stay of forty-five days, led by the Messiah, who will then begin his work of redemption. PK 5, 49a–49b (משיח=Elijah; see note 105); PR 15, 72a–73a; Pirke Mashiah, 72; ShR 5.2; BaR 11.2; Shir 2.9; Aggadat Shir 5, 38; Ruth R. 2.14; Rev. 12.6. Comp. Friedmann, introduction to ER 25–26; Bousset, Antichrist Legende, 212–213 and 203–208. The part ascribed to Elijah in the work of Messianic redemption in Zerubbabel, 56, and Otot ha-Mashiah, 62, is rather an unimportant one compared with that assigned to him in the other Midrashim cited above. Christian authors (comp. f. i. Justin Martyr, Dialogue, 49) mention the Jewish belief that Elijah will anoint the Messiah; but the old rabbinic writings know nothing of this function of Elijah's, and the prevalent opinion in these works is that the Messiah will not be anointed at all. Only later Jewish writers, as the Karaite Joseph ha-Levi (in Neubauer, The LIII Chapter of Isaiah 1.21) and Nahmanides, Wikkuah, mention the anointing of the Messiah by Elijah, and one may be permitted to question whether these writers represent an original Jewish view or not. See Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 349, note 4.

113. Aggadat Shir 7, 44. In Christian legendary lore it is Elijah who demands the same sign from the anti-Christ as his credential; comp. Bousset, Antichrist Legende, 203. In the Jewish version of this belief it is presupposed that the resurrected dead will have the same appearance and form as they had before their death. See Apocalypse of Baruch 50.2–4; Pesahim 68a.

114. Pirke Mashiah, 72; Pirke R. Yoshiyyahu, 115. On the view that Moses will lead the "generation of the wilderness", see text on p. 541. As to Korah's rising from the earth, see text on p. 20. On the revealing of the three holy vessels which were hidden for a long time, see text on p. 572. On the scripture of the Messiah, see text on p. 730. On the view that the mountains will disappear in Messianic times, see text on p. 76, and note 116; p. 109, footnote 31. According to a Midrash quoted in Rimze Hafiarot, Nahamu, Elijah and Jeremiah will hasten to the Holy Land, seize it, and give it to Israel as a possession. Jeremiah's part in the work of redemption is presupposed in Matth. 16.14. Compare also p. 1071, footnote 13.

115. It is Elijah who, during the long exile, consoles the Messiah for the suffering inflicted upon him for the atonement of Israel's sins. See Konen 29; Ma'aseh R. Joshua, 50; text on pp. 19–20.

116. Apocalypse of Daniel (towards the end). In other (earlier) sources it is God who blows the Shofar; see text on p. 230 and Alphabet R. Akiba 31. Comp. also Otot ha-Mashiah 61–62, where it is said that Michael will blow the Shofar twice. On the primeval light, see text on p. 84. On the levelling of the mountains, see note 114.

117. Sukkah 52b. On the eight princes see footnote 142 on p. 99.

118. Koheleth 4.1. As to the doctrine that the death of young children is due to the sins of the fathers, see Hashkem 3b, and text on p. 605. Opinions differ as to the age of the children who will have a share in the world to come. According to some, all children, even those who only lived a moment, have a share, while others maintain that children are not entitled to a share, unless they died at an age when they could speak (i. e., say Amen after a prayer). Other authorities think that male children are entitled to a share as soon as they are circumcized. One Rabbi is very generous, and puts embryos on equal footing with grown up children. See Yerushalmi Shebi'it 4, 45c. The custom, first referred to by the Babylonian Gaon R. Nahshon (comp. Sha'are Zedek, 22a, No. 5), of circumcizing children who died before their eighth day, has its origin in the above-mentioned view that only children after circumcision are entitled to a share in the world to come. On the status of the children of the wicked and of the idolaters in the world to come, see Yerushalmi Shebi'it, loc. cit.; Bera-kot 9, 13b; Tosefta Sanhedrin 13.1, Babli 110b. Connected with the conception that God in His mercy would not have the children suffer for the sins of the fathers is the view that in the time to come "the bastards", that is, the offspring of forbidden marriages, will not be excluded from the community of Israel. See Kiddushin 72b; Tosefta 5.4; WR 32.8; Koheleth, loc. cit. Against this view comp. ARN 22, 53, and Wisdom 4.6.

119. Abkir in Yalkut I, 153. Compare with p. 304; text on p. 996; note 33. Comp. also the statement: "Happy is he who met Elijah or sat next to him; such a man is destined for the world to come"; Talmud Kallah 3 (end). This is probably a paraphrase of Ecclus. 48.11, where the author of Kallah very likely read יחיה כי יחיה ומת, and, according to a well-known hermeneutical rule of the Hag-gadah, explained the phrase יחיה יחיה in the sense of eternal life, or, as the Rabbis express it, "life in the world to come". Comp., e. g., the midrashic explanation of 2 Kings 20.1 in Berakot 10a. The old versions of Ecclus. have similar interpretations of the text; see Smend, Die Weisheit des Jesus Sirach, ad loc. The old piyyut אליהו הנביא, sung at the termination of the Sabbath, closes with the stanza: “Happy is he who saw his (Elijah’s) face in a dream; happy is he whom he offered the greeting of peace, or to whom he responded the greeting of peace.” It is safe to assume that the Paitan made use of Kallah, loc. cit., or of a source akin to it. As to seeing Elijah in a dream, see note 93.

XIV ELISHA AND JONAH

ELISHA THE DISCIPLE OF ELIJAH

The voices of the thousands of prophets of his time were stilled when Elijah was translated from earth to heaven. With him vanished the prophetic spirit of those who in former times had in no wise been his inferiors.<sup>1</sup> Elisha was the only one among them whose prophetic powers were not diminished. On the contrary, they were strengthened, as a reward for the unhesitating readiness with which he obeyed Elijah's summons, and parted with the field he was ploughing, and with all else he possessed, in favor of the community. Thenceforward he remained Elijah's unwearying companion. When the angel descended from heaven to take Elijah from earth, he found the two so immersed in a learned discussion that he could not attract their attention, and he had to return, his errand unfulfilled.<sup>2</sup>

Elijah's promise to bestow a double portion of his wondrous spirit upon his disciple was realized instantaneously. During his life Elisha performed sixteen miracles, and eight was all his master had performed. The first of them, the crossing of the Jordan, was more remarkable than the corresponding wonder done by Elijah, for Elisha traversed the river alone, and Elijah had been accompanied by Elisha. Two saints always have more power than one by himself.<sup>3</sup>

His second miracle, the "healing" of the waters of Jericho, so that they became fit to drink, resulted in harm to himself, for the people who had earned their livelihood by the sale of wholesome water were very much incensed against the prophet for having spoiled their trade. Elisha, whose prophetic powers enabled him to read both the past and the future of these tradesmen, knew that they, their ancestors, and their posterity had "not even the aroma of good about them." Therefore he cursed them. Suddenly a forest sprang up and the bears that infested it devoured the murmuring traders. The wicked fellows were not undeserving of the punishment they received, yet Elisha was made to undergo a very serious sickness, by way of correction for having yielded to passion.<sup>4</sup> In this he resembled his master Elijah; he allowed wrath and zeal to gain the mastery over him. God desired that the two great prophets might be purged of this fault. Accordingly, when Elisha rebuked King Jehoram of Israel, the spirit of prophecy forsook him, and he had to resort to artificial means to reawaken it within himself.<sup>5</sup>

Like his teacher, Elisha was always ready to help the poor and needy, as witness his sympathy with the widow of one of the sons of the prophets, and the effective aid he extended to her. Her husband had been none other than Obadiah, who, though a prophet, had at the same time been one of the highest officials at the court of the sinful king Ahab. By birth an Edomite, Obadiah had been inspired by God to utter the prophecy against Edom. In his own person he embodied the accusation against Esau, who had lived with his pious parents without following their example, while Obadiah, on the contrary, lived in constant intercourse with the iniquitous King Ahab and his still more iniquitous spouse Jezebel without yielding to the baneful influence they exercised.<sup>6</sup> This same Obadiah not only used his own fortune, but went to the length of borrowing money on interest from the future king, in order to have the wherewithal to support the prophets who were in hiding. On his death, the king sought to hold the children responsible for the debt of the father. In her despair the pious wife of Obadiah<sup>7</sup> went to the graveyard, and there she cried out: "O thou God-fearing man!" At once a heavenly voice was heard questioning her: "There are four God-fearing men, Abraham, Joseph, Job, and Obadiah. To which of them dost thou desire to speak?" "To him of whom it is said, 'He feared the Lord greatly.'"

She was led to the grave of the prophet Obadiah, where she poured out the tale of her sorrow. Obadiah told her to take the small remnant of oil she still had to the prophet Elisha and request him to intercede for him with God, "for God", he said, "is my debtor, seeing that I provided a hundred prophets, not only with bread and water, but also with oil to illuminate their hiding-place, for do not the Scriptures say: 'He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord?'" Forthwith the woman carried out his behest. She went to Elisha, and he helped her by making her little cruse of oil fill vessels upon vessels without number, and when the vessels gave out, she fetched potsherds, saying, "May the will that made empty vessels full, make broken vessels perfect." So it was. The oil ceased to flow only when the supply of potsherds as well as vessels gave out. In her piety the woman wanted to pay her tithe-offering, but Elisha was of the opinion that, as the oil had been bestowed upon her miraculously, she could keep it wholly and entirely for her own use. Furthermore, Elisha reassured her as to the power of the royal princes to do her harm: "The God who will close the jaws of the lions set upon Daniel, and who did close the jaws of the dogs in Egypt, the same God will blind the eyes of the sons of Ahab, and deafen their ears, so that they can do thee no harm."<sup>8</sup> Not only was the poor widow helped out of her difficulties, her descendants unto all times were provided for. The oil rose in price, and it yielded so much profit that they never suffered want.<sup>9</sup>

---

1. Seder 'Olam 21; Tosefta Sotah 12.5; Megillah 14a; Shir 4.11; Ekah 4 (end). Comp. Ratner on Seder 'Olam, loc. cit. The statement in the two Midrashim just mentioned, that in Elijah's time there were sixty myriads of prophets (according to some, double this number), is very likely based on a misconception of the old source given in Seder 'Olam, where so large a number of prophets refers not to the time of Elijah, but to the entire course of Jewish history. The words in the old source read: There were forty-eight prophets and seven prophetesses, whose prophecies are written down in Scripture; but besides them there were as many prophets as men delivered from Egypt (i. e., sixty myriads), whose prophecies, however, were not written down. In the quotation from Seder 'Olam in Megillah the variant is found: "double the number of those who were delivered from Egypt". Four of Elijah's disciples are mentioned by name; they are Micah, Jonah, Obadiah, and Elisha. PRK (Grünnhut's edition, 64). Comp. Index, under these names. Elisha's birthplace was Abel-meholah, "mourning-dance", so called because the inhabitants of this place had the custom of performing dances in the house of mourning. But thus they expressed their trust in God's justice, who rewards the pious after their departure from this life, and who will bring them to life in the time of resurrection. Aguddat Shemuel, 1 Kings. Comp. Zeker Natan, 92a, אבילות No. 2. On the disciples of Elijah and Elisha, see also Targum Deut. 34.3.

2. ER 5, 22–23. Comp. also Ta'anit 10b; Sotah 49a; Berakot 31a, and Yerushalmi 5, 8d. As to the conception that the angel of death has no power over one occupied with the study of the Torah, see text on p. 938, and note 125 appertaining thereto. The angel who came to take Elijah was not the angel of death, but his task was similar to that entrusted to the latter. Comp. Friedmann, Introduction to ER, 16–17.

3. Baraita of 32 Middot, No. 1. For the correct text, see MHG I, XIX. As to the question whether Elisha revived two dead persons (one more than his master Elijah), or only one, see note 21. Neither the eight miracles of Elijah nor the sixteen of Elisha are enumerated in the Midrashim extant to-day, but the reading מִיֵּכֶן אִמְרוֹ in MHG undoubtedly refers to an old source where they were given in detail. Comp. Katzenellenbogen, Netivot 'Olam, 9, seq.

4. Sotah 46b–47a. According to the Haggadah, Elisha's mockers were not boys, but grown-up men who "behaved like silly boys". The leading men of Jericho were not entirely free from blame, for if they had done their duty and accompanied the prophet on his way from the city to Bethel, nobody would have dared to insult the prophet Elisha in their presence, and the regrettable incident would not have occurred. See Sotah, loc. cit. In this passage it is also stated that the number of men killed by the bears amounted to forty-two, corresponding to the sacrifices brought by Balak (Num. 23.1, seq.), since God records good deeds even if not prompted by good motives; see footnote 39 on p. 862. Comp. also the quotation from an unknown Midrash by Shu'aib 90d; Hadar on Num. 23.28; Zohar II, 224a–224b; Kimhi 2 Kings 2.24. The relation of the forty-two sacrifices to the forty-two persons devoured by the bears is not quite clear, and the attempted explanations of the talmudic statement by the commentators are far from being satisfactory. On the sickness of Elisha, see text on pp. 1029–1031.

5. Pesahim 66b. On Elijah's irascibility, see text on pp. 1008. It was on account of the merit of the observance of the Sabbath that God gave victory to Joram and his allies in the war against Moab; Mekilta RS, 162. Compare footnote 35 on p. 954.

6. Sanhedrin 39b; Sifre N., 133; Tan. B. I, 167; WR 13.3; Jerome, introduction to his commentary on Obadiah (who remarks: Hunc ajunt Hebraei, qui sub rege Samariae Achab...pavit...prophetas); ER 24, 125–126. Obadiah was reluctant to announce the doom of the nation to which he belonged by birth, but was forced to do it by the seventy-one members of the "heavenly Synedrium"; Aggadot Bereshit 14, 32 (whence Rimze Haftarot, Wa-Yishlah). Comp. also ibid. 55, 101–114, and 58, 118–119. See further text on p. 323; text on p. 579; p. 1058, footnote 104. The Haggadah concerning Obadiah's non-Jewish descent is very likely based upon the fact that he is described in Scripture as a "God-fearing man" (1 Kings 18.3), which later was the usual name of a proselyte. See Schürer, Geschichte (fourth edition), III, 174, note 70. During the great famine Ahab said to Obadiah: "It seems that thou art not as worthy a man as the pious of the former generations; Laban was blessed for the merits of Jacob, and Potiphar received blessings on account of Joseph; but thou bringest no blessings to me." A heavenly voice thereupon proclaimed: "And Obadiah feareth the Lord greatly." See Sanhedrin, loc. cit.; ER, 24, 126. Comp. the following note.

7. ShR 31.4 and Tan. Mishpatim 9 read: Jehoram stretched out his hands to receive the interest paid him by Obadiah. His punishment for taking interest was that Jehu's bow smote him "between his arms" and killed him; see 2 Kings 9.24. Compare with p. 990. That it was Obadiah's widow for whose benefit Elisha performed the miracle with the cruse of oil is presupposed in many old sources, Jewish as well as Christian. Comp. Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 4.2; PK 2, 13b (which reads: Were it not for the merits of Obadiah's widow, Israel would have been destroyed); Tehillim 16, 118; Targum and Theodoretus on 2 Kings 4.1; ps.-Epiphanius, De Vitis Prophetarum, Obadiah; Ephraem I, 526C. Comp. also MHG I, 338; Zohar Haddash, Ruth 1.7 (beginning רַבִּי אֶלְכָּסָנְדֵּרִי אֱלִיהוֹ instead of אֶחָזִיקָה הָבָא and perhaps also בְּעוֹלָם הָבָא is to be read instead of בְּעוֹלָה' but it is possible that בְּעוֹלָה' in the mouth of Elijah, addressed to one dwelling in paradise, is the same as בְּעוֹלָם הָבָא when used by those dwelling in "this world"). Comp. also the references in the next note. The Haggadah identifying the prophet Obadiah with Obadiah who was "over the household" of Ahab (see preceding note) is due to an inference from the Haggadah that the "certain woman of the wives of the sons of the prophets" was the widow of Obadiah, the high official of Ahab's court.

8. Tosefta-Targum in Kimhi on 2 Kings 4, and in several MSS.; see the text of Targum published by Luzzatto in Geiger's Wissenschaftliche Zeitschrift V, 132–136, and in Kobez Debarim Nehmadim, No. 3. The text of the Tosefta-Targum in Targ, Way-yera, differs from all the other texts, and contains additional legendary material. On the "four God-fearing men", see 2 ARN 10, 26, and footnote 332 on p. 397, as well as Ozar Midrashim, ed. Wertheimer 42. God's blessings extend and expand that which exists, but do not make things arise "from nothing"; hence it was necessary, in order that Elisha should perform this miracle, that the widow should have some oil in her possession, though its quantity was hardly sufficient to anoint the little finger. See Zohar I, 88a.

9. BR 35.3.

THE SHUNAMMITE

The great woman of Shunem, the sister of Abishag and wife of the prophet Iddo,<sup>10</sup> also had cause to be deeply grateful to Elisha. When Elisha came to Shunem on his journey through the land of Israel, his holiness made a profound impression upon the Shunammite. Indeed, the prophet's eye was so awe-inspiring that no woman could look him in the face and live.<sup>11</sup> Contrary to the habit of most women, who are intent upon diminishing their expenses and their toil, the Shunammite took delight in the privilege of welcoming the prophet to her house as a guest. She observed that not even a fly dared approach close to the holy man, and a grateful fragrance exhaled from his person. "If he were not so great a saint," she said, "and the holiness of the Lord did not invest him, there were no such pleasant fragrance about him." That he might be undisturbed, she assigned the best chambers in the house to the prophet. He on his part, desiring to show his appreciation of her hospitality, knew no better return for her kindness than to promise that she should be blessed with a child within a year.<sup>12</sup> The woman protested: "O, my husband is an old man, nor am I of an age to bear children; the promise cannot be fulfilled." Yet it happened as the prophet had foretold. Before a twelvemonth had passed, she was a mother.

A few years later her child died a sudden death. The mother repaired to the prophet, and lamented before him: "O that the vessel had remained empty, rather than it should be filled first, and then be left void." The prophet admitted that, though as a rule he was acquainted with all things that were to happen, God had left him in the dark about the misfortune that had befallen her. With trust in God, he gave his staff to his disciple Gehazi, and sent him to bring the boy back to life. But Gehazi was unworthy of his master. His conduct toward the Shunammite was not becoming a disciple of the prophet, and, above all, he had no faith in the possibility of accomplishing the mission entrusted to him. Instead of obeying the behest of Elisha, not to speak a word on his way to the child of the Shunammite, Gehazi made sport of the task laid upon him. To whatever man he met he addressed the question: "Dost thou suppose this staff can bring the dead back to life?" The result was that he forfeited the power of executing the errand with which he had been charged. Elisha himself had to perform the miracle. The prophet uttered the prayer: "O Lord of the world! As Thou didst wonders through my master Elijah, and didst permit him to bring the dead to life, so, I pray Thee, do Thou perform a wonder through me, and let me restore life to this lad."<sup>13</sup> The prayer was granted, and the child was revived. The act of the prophet proves the duty of gratitude in return for hospitality. Elisha did not attempt to resuscitate his own kith and kin who had been claimed by death; he invoked a miracle for the sake of the woman who had welcomed him kindly to her house.<sup>14</sup>

10. PRE 33. Comp. Luria, ad loc., who calls attention to the reading מִן, according to which she was the mother, not the wife, of the prophet Iddo. The old sources identify Iddo with the prophet mentioned in 1 Kings 13.1, seq. Comp. Seder 'Olam R. 20; Tosefta Sanhedrin 14.5; Sifre D., 177; Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 8.5, and X. 4.4. The reading Ἀχίαν in the last passage does not occur in the better texts; comp. Niese. In PRE 111 is perhaps to be read instead of נָדָה. Zohar I, 7b (introduction), and II, 44a, considers the Shunammite to have been the mother of the prophet Habakkuk. The same statement is found in Rimze Haftarot, Shebu'ot 2.

11. PRE 33.

12. Zohar II, 44a, based in the main on Berakot 10b; Baba Mezi'a 87a; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29b; WR 24.6. For the fragrance issuing from the bodies of the pious, see text on p. 337; text on p. 546. On the view that the flies cannot approach the pious, see text on p. 831. The day on which Elisha "promised" a child to the Shunammite woman was New Year, when God decides the fate of all men for the coming year. See Zohar I, 64b, 160b; II, 44a; III, 231.

13. PRE 33; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29b; Mekilta Amalek 1, 53b. As to Gehazi's denying the quickening of the dead and as to his sensuousness, see Sifre Z., 202, and text on p. 1029. On the heat that caused the death of the child, see Yerushalmi Yebamot 15, 14d. It is incumbent on a disciple to visit his master on festival days, and when the Shunammite told her husband on a week-day that she was going to visit Elisha (2 Kings 4.23), he was greatly surprised. See Rosh ha-Shanah 16b; Zohar III, 265b.

14. ShR 4.2; footnote 11 on p. 994. Comp. also Batte Midrashot, III, 25, which reads: The son of the Shunammite was resuscitated from death as a reward for her hospitality to Elisha. This prophet revived two persons (see note 21), whereas his master Elijah only one, and this distinction of Elisha was his reward for having given up all his possessions and joined Elijah at the command of God; See ER 5, 22–23.

GEHAZI

Gehazi, proved untrustworthy by his conduct on this occasion, again aroused the ire of the prophet when he disregarded the order not to accept money from Naaman, the Syrian captain. He did not succeed in deceiving the prophet. On his return from Naaman he found Elisha occupied with the study of the chapter in the Mishnah Shabbat which deals with the eight reptiles. The prophet Elisha greeted him with the rebuke: "Thou villain! the time has come for me to be rewarded for the study of the Mishnah about the eight reptiles. May my reward be that the disease of Naaman afflict thee and thy descendants for evermore." Scarcely had these words escaped his lips, when he saw the leprosy come out on Gehazi's face.<sup>15</sup> Gehazi deserved the punishment on account of his base character. He was sensual and envious, and did not believe in the resurrection of the dead. His unworthy qualities were displayed in his conduct toward the Shunammite and toward the disciples of Elisha. When the pretty Shunammite came to the prophet in her grief over the death of her child, Gehazi took her passionately in his arms, under the pretext of forcing her away from the prophet, on whom she had laid hold in her supplications.

As for the other disciples of Elisha, he endeavored to keep them away from the house of the prophet. He was in the habit of standing without the door. This induced many to turn away and go home, for they reasoned that, if the house were not full to overflowing, Gehazi would not be standing outside. Only after Gehazi's dismissal did the disciples of Elisha increase marvellously. That Gehazi had no faith in the resurrection of the dead, is shown by his incredulity with regard to the child of the Shunammite.<sup>16</sup>

In spite of all these faults, Elisha regretted that he had cast off his disciple, who was a great scholar in the law, especially as Gehazi abandoned himself to a sinful life after leaving the prophet. By means of magnetism he made the golden calves at Beth-el float in the air, and many were brought to believe in the divinity of these idols. Moreover, he engraved the great and awful Name of God in their mouth. Thus they were enabled to speak, and they gave forth the same words God had proclaimed from Sinai: "I am the Lord thy God—Thou shalt have no other gods before Me." Elisha accordingly repaired to Damascus to lead Gehazi back to the paths of righteousness. But he remained impenitent, for he said: "From thyself I have learned that there is no return for him who not only sins himself, but also induces others to sin."<sup>17</sup> So Gehazi died without having done aught to atone for his transgressions, which were so great that he is one of the few Jews who have no share in Paradise.<sup>18</sup> His children inherited his leprosy. He and his three sons are the four leprous men who informed the king of Israel of the precipitate flight of the Syrian host.<sup>19</sup>

Elisha's excessive severity toward his servant Gehazi and toward the mocking boys of Jericho did not go unpunished. He had to endure two periods of disease, and the third sickness that befell him caused his death. He is the first known to history who survived a sickness. Before his death had been the inevitable companion of disease.<sup>20</sup>

A great miracle marked the end of a life rich in miraculous deeds: a dead man revived at the touch of Elisha's bier, and stood on his feet. It was a worthy character for whom the wonder was accomplished—Shallum the son of Tikvah, the husband of Huldah the prophetess, a man of noble descent, who had led a life of lovingkindness. He was in the habit of going daily beyond the city bearing a pitcher of water, from which he gave every traveller to drink, a good deed that received a double reward. His wife became a prophetess, and when he died and his funeral, attended by a large concourse of people, was disturbed by the invasion of the Arameans, he was given new life by contact with the bones of Elisha. He lived to have a son, Hanamel by name.<sup>21</sup>

The death of Elisha was a great misfortune for the Israelites. So long as he was alive, no Aramean troops entered Palestine. The first invasion by them happened on the day of his burial.<sup>22</sup>

15. Sanhedrin 107b (comp. Rashi, ad loc.), and Sotah 47a, according to the reading of Yalkut II, on 2 Kings 5. The haggadic writings dwell upon the great humility of Naaman, who appeared before Elisha in a simple manner, without any pomp, though he was commander-in-chief of a great kingdom. See Haserot 35 (as haggadic explanation of the Ketib בִּטְסוֹ in 2 Kings, 5:9; comp. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10.29b); Tan. (or WR?) in Kad ha-Kemah, גִּאֹרָה I, 50a but not found in our texts of the Midrashim. Before his conversion, however, Naaman was very proud, and his leprosy was a punishment for his pride. See BaR 7.5.

16. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29b; WR 24.7; PRE 33 (on this passage see Wertheimer, Batte Midrashot, III, 19, note 46); Berakot 10b. On the reason of Gehazi's punishment, see Sanhedrin 100a; ARN 9, 41 and 155; footnote 413 on p. 675; text on p. 1028.

17. Sotah 47a; Sanhedrin 107b. In the Zadokite Fragments 8.20 reference is made to the "words of Elisha spoken to Gehazi", and it is probable that a pseudepigraphic work containing the history of Elisha and his wicked disciple was known to this sectarian writer. Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 53, calls attention to the fact that according to the talmudic passages mentioned above, Gehazi settled in Damascus, the home of this sect.

18. Mishnah Sanhedrin 11 (10).1. Compare footnote 100 on p. 980.

19. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29b.

20. Baba Mezi'a 87a; Sotah 47a; Sanhedrin 107b; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29b. Compare with p. 1025. As to the view that the generations before Elisha did not know of illness which was not fatal, see the references given in footnote 357 on p. 400; text on p. 1050; Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 874 on Ps. 116. On Elisha's disease and severity, see also Hasidim 78, and ps.-Tertullian, Adversus Marcionias 3.210, seq. The prophet's severity towards his disciple is censured also in Mekilta Yitro 1, 58b, where it is said: Elisha acted against the rule: "Let thy right hand push away and thy left hand bring back."—Tosefta-Targum Kings 5.19 reads: Elisha told Naaman that it was not lawful to bring sacrifices outside the Holy Land, and accordingly if he desires to bring sacrifices to God, he must send them annually to the holy Temple in Jerusalem.

21. PRE 33. According to Koheleth 13.10, it was the false prophet Zedekiah (1 Kings 22.24) who was brought back to life by the contact with Elisha's corpse, but only for a moment, to avoid his burial near Elisha. A similar statement is found in Sanhedrin 47a; Hullin 7b; Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 13.21; Tehillim 26, 220. In all these sources it is stated that the man who touched Elisha's bones "stood up on his feet", but did not go to his house, for he immediately died and was buried in another place. Tehillim, loc. cit., adds that he was the son of the Shunammite whom Elisha had once resuscitated, and when he died a second time, they threw his corpse near that of Elisha, that he might come to life again. He revived again, but died immediately after, because he was wicked. At all events, the promise made to Elisha by Elijah to give him "a double portion of his spirit" (2 Kings 2.9–10) was fulfilled; the master resuscitated only one person, and the disciple two. Comp. Sanhedrin, loc. cit.; text on p. 1017; note 3.

22. Tosefta Sotah 12.6. Comp. also ER 8, 39, where פִּוּטְסִין = "fossata", an allusion to כְּרֶה in 2 Kings 6.23. The Arameans esteemed the prophet so highly, that when their king Ben-Hadad became ill, he sent a present to Elisha, the value of which outweighed all the treasures of Damascus, and requested him to predict the outcome of his illness. See Shir 4.8. On the contrast between the pagan ruler, who in time of illness inquired of the prophet of the Lord, and the Jewish king Ahaziah, who sent his messengers to inquire of Baal-Zebub whether he would recover from his sickness (2 Kings 1.2), see Batte Midrashot, III, 28–29; Aggadat Shir 1, 26. On the divine honors paid to Ben-Hadad and his successor Hazael by the Arameans, see Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 4.6. Israel's victory over the Arameans, under king Joash, was the reward of this king for his refusal to listen to the accusations brought against the prophet Amos by Amaziah (Amos 7.10, seq.). The king said to Amaziah: God forbend that the prophet should have uttered such a prophecy; but if he did, he merely obeyed the command of God. See ER 16, 88.

THE FLIGHT OF JONAH

Among the many thousands<sup>23</sup> of disciples whom Elisha gathered about him during the sixty years<sup>24</sup> and more of his activity, the most prominent was the prophet Jonah. While the master was still alive, Jonah was charged with the important mission of anointing Jehu king.<sup>25</sup> The next task laid upon him was to proclaim their destruction to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.<sup>26</sup> The doom did not come to pass, because they repented of their wrong-doing, and God had mercy upon them. Among the Israelites Jonah was, therefore, known as “the false prophet”. When he was sent to Nineveh to prophesy the downfall of the city, he reflected: “I know to a certainty that the heathen will do penance, the threatened punishment will not be executed, and among the heathen, too, I shall gain the reputation of being a false prophet.”<sup>27</sup> To escape this disgrace, he determined to take up his abode on the sea, where there were none to whom prophecies never to be fulfilled would have to be delivered.

On his arrival at Joppa, there was no vessel in port. To try him, God caused a storm to arise, and it carried a vessel back to Joppa, which had made a two days' journey away from the harbor. The prophet interpreted this chance to mean that God approved his plan. He was so rejoiced at the favorable opportunity for leaving land that he paid the whole amount for the entire cargo in advance, no less a sum than four thousand gold denarii. After a day's sailing out from shore, a terrific storm<sup>28</sup> broke loose. Wonderful to relate, it injured no vessel but Jonah's. Thus he was taught the lesson that God is Lord over heaven and earth and sea, and man can hide himself nowhere from His face.

On the same vessel were representatives of the seventy nations of the earth, each with his peculiar idols. They all resolved to entreat their gods for succor, and the god from whom help would come should be recognized and worshipped as the only one true God. But help came from none. Then it was that the captain of the vessel approached Jonah where he lay asleep, and said to him: “We are suspended 'twixt life and death, and thou liest here asleep. Pray, tell me, to what nation dost thou belong?” “I am a Hebrew,” replied Jonah. “We have heard,” said the captain, “that the God of the Hebrews is the most powerful. Cry to Him for help. Perhaps He will perform such miracles for us as He did in days of old for the Jews at the Red Sea.”

Jonah confessed to the captain that he was to blame for the whole misfortune, and he besought him to cast him adrift, and appease the storm. The other passengers refused to consent to so cruel an act. Though the lot decided against Jonah, they first tried to save the vessel by throwing the cargo overboard. Their efforts were in vain. Then they placed Jonah at the side of the vessel and spoke: “O Lord of the world, reckon this not up against us as innocent blood, for we know not the case of this man, and he himself bids us throw him into the sea.” Even then they could not make up their minds to let him drown. First they immersed him up to his knees in the water of the sea, and the storm ceased; they drew him back into the vessel, and forthwith the storm raged in its old fury. Two more trials they made. They lowered him into the water up to his navel, and raised him out of the depths when the storm was assuaged. Again, when the storm broke out anew, they lowered him to his neck, and a second time they took him back into the vessel when the wind subsided.<sup>29</sup> But finally the renewed rage of the storm convinced them that their danger was due to Jonah's transgressions, and they abandoned him to his fate. He was thrown into the water, and on the instant the sea grew calm.<sup>30</sup>

23. Ketubot 106a, which reads: Elisha was always surrounded by at least two thousand and two hundred disciples. Comp. also Targum Yerushalmi Deut. 34.3, and note 1.

24. Seder 'Olam 19.

25. Seder 'Olam 19; BR 21.5 (here very likely Jonah is identified with the "one" of the sons of the prophets mentioned in 2 Kings 6.3, seq.); Alphabet of Ben Sira 10b. Jonah first attempted to convey to Jehu the divine message by signs, but the latter being somewhat foolish by nature (comp. 2 Kings 9.20, where שׂוֹנֵעוֹן is taken to mean foolishness, madness), did not understand the signs, and the prophet had to speak plainly to him. Truly says the proverb: "For the wise a hint, for the fool a punch." See Alphabet of Ben Sira, loc. cit. Jehu belonged to the tribe of Manasseh (נַמְשִׁי in 2 Kings 9.2=מְנַשִּׁי), and was the last legitimate king of the northern kingdom; those who succeeded him were nothing else than chieftains of brigands; PR 3, 12b; Tadshe 8; Yerushalmi Horayyot 3, 47c. On Jonah's relation to Elijah, see text on p. 994, and note 38.

26. PRE 10; Tan. Wa-Yikra 8; Midrash Jonah 96; Yalkut on Jonah 1. According to these sources, the first prophecy of Jonah is that mentioned in 2 Kings 14.25; against this view, see Mekilta Bo (פְּתִיחָתָא), 2a, and Yebamot 98a, where it is stated that this prophet received only two divine revelations, both concerning Nineveh (comp. Jonah 1.1 and 3.1). The passage of 2 Kings 14.25 is therefore explained as follows: The impending punishment of Israel was averted, as in the case of the doom decreed against Nineveh.

27. PRE 10; Tan. Wa-Yikra 8; Midrash Jonah 96. God conferred a great honor on the inhabitants of Ninevah by sending the prophet to them, a distinction never before granted to the "nations of the world." Asshur, the ancestor of these people, had left his native country, and founded Nineveh in honor of God (he did not wish to remain among the sinful adherents of the wicked Nimrod; compare with p. 176, bottom). As he honored God, even so were his descendants honored by God. Jonah's refusal to go to Nineveh was due to his love for Israel. He knew that the Ninevites would repent of their evil doings, and this would cause the wrath of God against His people, who notwithstanding the numerous admonitions by many prophets, continued to sin. By fleeing from the Holy Land, Jonah hoped to prevent the disgrace of Israel, since the Shekinah does not reveal itself outside the Holy Land, and being removed from the place of revelation, he could no longer receive communications from God to go to Nineveh. Mekilta Bo (פְּתִיחָתָא), 1b–2a; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 11, 30b; Jerome on Jonah 1.2 and 4.1; Tertullian, De Pudicitia 10 and ps.-Tertullian, De Jona 20, seq. On the view that no revelations were made to prophets outside the Holy Land, see also Mo'ed Katan 25a; Mekilta RS 5–6; Zohar I, 85a, and II, 170b; John 8.52; unknown Midrash quoted by Kara, Josh. 22; 57. According to the sources mentioned at the beginning of this note, Jonah's purpose in fleeing from the dry land was to evade a further divine revelation which would send him to Nineveh. He believed that God's glory (manifestation of the Shekinah) shows itself in heaven and on dry land, but not on water.

28. PRE 10; Tan. Wa-Yikra 8; Midrash Jonah 96–97; Nedarim 38a. In the last passage it is stated that "God causes the Shekinah to dwell only upon those who are physically strong, rich, wise, and humble. Jonah's wealth is quoted as a proof that the prophets were rich. As to the midrashic basis for the statement that Jonah paid for the entire cargo, see Jerome on Jonah with reference to the masoretic reading of שְׂכָרָה in Jonah 1.3, in contrast to Septuagint which reads שְׂכָרוֹ. On Tarshish, see Jerome, ad loc., and Rahmer, Die Commentarii zu den 12 kleinen Propheten, Jonah, 15–16.

29. PRE 10; Tan. Wa-Yikra 8; Midrash Jonah 97. On the violence of this storm, see BR 24.4, and footnote 29 on p. 995. On the attempts made by the crew of the ship to save Jonah's life, see also Zohar I, 121a, and II, 230b–231a.

30. PRE 10; Tan. Wa-Yikra 8; Midrash Jonah 97; Zohar II, 230b. Jonah had boarded the ship in the hope that he would lose his life on the voyage and would thus be spared the pain of seeing the heathen repent (see note 27); Mekilta Bo (פְּתִיחָתָא), 2a; Jerome on Jonah 1.6. According to the Halakah, the prophet, who like Jonah, suppresses the prophecy revealed to him, will be put to death by heaven (בִּיּוֹד שָׁמַיִם מִיתָה); Tosefta Sanhedrin 14.15; Yerushalmi 11, 30b; Babli 89b.

JONAH IN THE WHALE

At the creation of the world, God made a fish intended to harbor Jonah. He was so large that the prophet was as comfortable inside of him as in a spacious synagogue. The eyes of the fish served Jonah as windows, and, besides, there was a diamond, which shone as brilliantly as the sun at midday, so that Jonah could see all things in the sea down to its very bottom.

It is a law that when their time has come, all the fish of the sea must betake themselves to leviathan, and let the monster devour them. The life term of Jonah's fish was about to expire, and the fish warned Jonah of what was to happen. When he, with Jonah in his belly, came to leviathan, the prophet said to the monster: "For thy sake I came hither. It was meet that I should know thine abode, for it is my appointed task to capture thee in the life to come and slaughter thee for the table of the just and pious." When leviathan observed the sign of the covenant on Jonah's body, he fled affrighted, and Jonah and the fish were saved. To show his gratitude, the fish carried Jonah whithersoever there was a sight to be seen. He showed him the river from which the ocean flows, showed him the spot at which the Israelites crossed the Red Sea, showed him Gehenna and Sheol, and many other mysterious and wonderful places.

Three days Jonah had spent in the belly of the fish, and he still felt so comfortable that he did not think of imploring God to change his condition. But God sent a female fish big with three hundred and sixty-five thousand little fish to Jonah's host, to demand the surrender of the prophet, else she would swallow both him and the guest he harbored. The message was received with incredulity, and leviathan had to come and corroborate it; he himself had heard God dispatch the female fish on her errand. So it came about that Jonah was transferred to another abode. His new quarters, which he had to share with all the little fish, were far from comfortable, and from the bottom of his heart a prayer for deliverance arose to God on high.<sup>31</sup> The last words of his long petition were, "I shall redeem my vow,"<sup>32</sup> whereupon God commanded the fish to spew Jonah out. At a distance of nine hundred and sixty-five parasangs from the fish he alighted on dry land. These miracles induced the ship's crew to abandon idolatry, and they all became pious proselytes in Jerusalem.<sup>33</sup>

---

31. Midrash Jonah (only this source contains the episode with the female fish); PRE 10; Tan. Wa-Yikra 8. As to the statements made concerning Leviathan, see text on pp. 28 and 29. The statement that Jonah will capture the Leviathan in the days to come is perhaps connected with the Messianic part ascribed to this prophet; see note 38. All changes in nature which took place in the course of history were foreseen at the creation of the world (see text on pp. 47–48), and hence it is said here that at the creation of the world God made a fish intended to harbor Jonah. The Haggadah explains סִי (Jonah 2.8) as סִי יָם, and hence the statement that Jonah was shown the Red Sea. Comp. also Targum and Jerome, ad loc.

32. Midrash Jonah 98–99. This prayer of Jonah has the regular form of the Selihah. PRE 10, Tan. Wa-Yikra 8 and 2 Midrash Jonah 33 have a short prayer only. They add that the fish remained still while the prophet prayed. Jonah's soul left him when he was thrown into the sea, and ascended to God to be judged. The heavenly court decided that Jonah's soul should be returned to him; in possession of his soul he was swallowed up by the fish. No sooner, however, had the fish swallowed him than it died, but it came back to life when Jonah revived. See Zohar I, 121a. It is not quite certain whether the translation of the last sentence is correct. Jonah was near losing his life, because he did not fulfil the vow he had taken upon himself (did not go to Nineveh, as he had vowed to do?), and was saved from death only after he spoke the word: "I shall redeem my vow." See Yelammedenu in Yalkut I, 784, on Num. 30. On the prayer of Jonah, see Shu'aib, 122b, and Kad ha-Kemah, Kippurim, 116, seq.

33. Midrash Jonah 99. On the conversion of the ship's crew, see also PRE 10; Tan. Wa-Yikra 8. For a different explanation of Jonah 1.16, see Targum and Jerome, ad loc., as well as the Midrashim just cited. All these authorities presuppose that the crew did not bring their sacrifices to God while still on board.

THE REPENTANCE OF NINEVEH

Jonah went straightway to Nineveh, the monster city covering forty square parasangs and containing a million and a half of human beings. He lost no time in proclaiming their destruction to the inhabitants. The voice of the prophet was so sonorous that it reached to every corner of the great city, and all who heard his words resolved to turn aside from their ungodly ways. At the head of the penitents was King Osnappar of Assyria.<sup>34</sup> He descended from his throne, removed his crown, strewed ashes on his head instead, took off his purple garments, and rolled about in the dust of the highways. In all the streets royal heralds proclaimed the king's decree bidding the inhabitants fast three days, wear sackcloth, and supplicate God with tears and prayers to avert the threatened doom. The people of Nineveh fairly compelled God's mercy to descend upon them. They held their infants heavenward, and amid streaming tears they cried: "For the sake of these innocent babes, hear our prayers." The young of their stalled cattle they separated from the mother beasts, the young were left within the stable, the old were put without. So parted from one another, the young and the old began to bellow aloud. Then the Ninevites cried: "If Thou wilt not have mercy upon us, we will not have mercy upon these beasts."

The penance of the Ninevites did not stop at fasting and praying. Their deeds showed that they had determined to lead a better life. If a man had usurped another's property, he sought to make amends for his iniquity; some went so far as to destroy their palaces in order to be able to give back a single brick to the rightful owner. Of their own accord others appeared before the courts of justice, and confessed their secret crimes and sins, known to none beside themselves, and declared themselves ready to submit to well-merited punishment, though it be death that was decreed against them.

One incident that happened at the time will illustrate the contrition of the Ninevites. A man found a treasure in the building lot he had acquired from his neighbor. Both buyer and seller refused to assume possession of the treasure. The seller insisted that the sale of the lot carried with it the sale of all it contained. The buyer held that he had bought the ground, not the treasure hidden therein. Neither rested satisfied until the judge succeeded in finding out who had hidden the treasure and who were his heirs, and the joy of the two was great when they could deliver the treasure up to its legitimate owners.<sup>35</sup>

Seeing that the Ninevites had undergone a real change of heart, God took mercy upon them, and pardoned them. Thereupon Jonah likewise felt encouraged to plead for himself with God, that He forgive him for his flight. God spoke to him: "Thou wast mindful of Mine honor,"—the prophet had not wanted to appear a liar, so that men's trust in God might not be shaken—"and for this reason thou didst take to the sea. Therefore did I deal mercifully with thee, and rescue thee from the bowels of Sheol."

His sojourn in the inside of the fish the prophet could not easily dismiss from his mind, nor did it remain without visible consequences. The intense heat in the belly of the fish had consumed his garments, and made his hair fall out,<sup>36</sup> and he was sore plagued by swarms of insects. To afford Jonah protection, God caused the kikayon to grow up. When he opened his eyes one morning, he saw a plant with two hundred and seventy-five leaves, each leaf measuring more than a span, so that it afforded relief from the heat of the sun. But the sun smote the gourd that it withered, and Jonah was again annoyed by the insects. He began to weep and wish for death to release him from his troubles. But when God led him to the plant, and showed him what lesson he might derive from it,—how, though he had not labored for the plant, he had pity on it,—he realized his wrong in desiring God to be relentless toward Nineveh, the great city, with its many inhabitants, rather than have his reputation as a prophet suffer taint. He prostrated himself and said: “O God, guide the world according to Thy goodness.”

God was gracious to the people of Nineveh so long as they continued worthy of His loving-kindness. But at the end of forty days they departed from the path of piety, and they became more sinful than ever. Then the punishment threatened by Jonah overtook them, and they were swallowed up by the earth.<sup>37</sup>

Jonah’s suffering in the watery abyss had been so severe that by way of compensation God exempted him from death: living he was permitted to enter Paradise.<sup>38</sup> Like Jonah, his wife was known far and wide for her piety. She had gained fame particularly through her pilgrimage to Jerusalem, a duty which, by reason of her sex, she was not obliged to fulfil.<sup>39</sup> On one of these pilgrimages it was that the prophetic spirit first descended upon Jonah.<sup>40</sup>

---

34. Midrash Jonah 99–100; second version 25–26. According to these Midrashim the number of the population of Nineveh was twelve times as large as that given in Jonah 4.11. The “six score thousand persons” refers to the population of one of the twelve districts into which the city was divided. PRE 43 and Tosefta-Targum on Jonah 3.6 make Pharaoh king of Nineveh. Compare with p. 412; text on p. 560.

35. Mishnah Ta’anit 2.1; Babli 16a; Yerushalmi 2, 65b; PK 25, 161a–161b; Midrash Jonah 100–102; PRE 43; ShR 45.1. It is noteworthy that in the Yerushalmi and PK the separation of the young animals from their mothers is described as an Arab custom. The description of the penance of the Ninevites by Tabari II, 45, is dependent on Jewish sources. Jerome on Jonah 3.10 agrees almost literally with the Mishnah Ta’anit. On the penance, see also Shu’aib, Jonah, 122a. The narrative about the treasure is a variation of an Alexander legend, which has a great vogue in Jewish literature. Comp. Yerushalmi Baba Mezi’a 2, 8c; BR 33.1, and parallel passages cited by Theodor. See also footnote 27 on p. 950.

36. As to the falling out of the hair, see Ibn Ezra on Jonah 4.6.

37. Midrash Jonah 102; the second version of this Midrash 34–35 gives a long prayer by Jonah in which he beseeches God to pardon his sins. The destruction of Nineveh forty years later (Yalkut II, 550, on Jonah 3, reads forty days, and hence the text on p. 1035; but the correct reading is years) is found only in PRE 43. Comp. also Tobit 4.4; Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 10.2, and IX, 11.3.

38. Tehillim 26, 220, where reference is also made to the widespread view that Jonah was the son of the widow of Zarephath resuscitated by Elijah; see footnote 9 on p. 994. Since the son of the widow is said to be the “Messiah of the tribe of Joseph” (ER 18, 97–98), the statement that Jonah was permitted to enter paradise alive is very likely to be understood in the sense that he awaits there the end of times to start on his Messianic mission. The “Messiah, the son of David” likewise entered paradise alive, and awaits there “his time”. See Derek Erez Z. 1 (end), and parallel passages cited by Tawrogi. It is, however, possible that the Messianic part attributed to Jonah (=the son of the widow of Zarephath) is a Jewish adaptation of the Christian view which considers him a prototype of Jesus; see Matth. 12.39; Luke 11.29. The statement in 3 Macc. 6.8 that Jonah returned from Nineveh to his people is not known in rabbinic writings. The assertion that the “Book of Jonah” is a book by itself, and not a part of the Book of the Twelve תרי עשר (BaR 18.21) wishes very likely to call attention to the fact that this biblical book has a character of its own, its contents dealing exclusively with the story of a heathen city. See a similar remark with regard to the “section treating of Balaam” in footnote 784 on p. 776. On the time during which Jonah was active, see notes 1 and 25. Comp. also Clemens Alexandrinus, Stromata, 1.21, who considers Jonah to have been the contemporary of Isaiah, Hosea, and Daniel.

39. ‘Erubin 96a; Mekilta Bo 17, 21a (below).

40. Yerushalmi Sukkah 5, 55a.

XX

THE LATER KINGS OF JUDAH

JOASH

When the prophet Jonah, doing the behest of his master Elisha, anointed Jehu king over Israel,<sup>1</sup> he poured the oil out of a pitcher, not out of a horn, to indicate that the dynasty of Jehu would not occupy the throne long.<sup>2</sup> At first Jehu, though a somewhat foolish<sup>3</sup> king, was at least pious, but he abandoned his God-fearing ways from the moment he saw the document bearing the signature of the prophet Ahijah of Shilo, which bound the signers to pay implicit obedience to Jeroboam. The king took this as evidence that the prophet had approved the worship of the golden calves. So it came to pass that Jehu, the destroyer of Baal worship, did nothing to oppose the idolatrous service established by Jeroboam at Beth-el.<sup>4</sup> The successors of Jehu were no better; on the contrary, they were worse, and therefore in the fifth generation<sup>5</sup> an end was put to the dynasty of Jehu by the hand of the assassin.

The kings of Judah differed in no essential particular from their colleagues in the north. Ahaziah, whom Jehu killed, was a shameless sinner; he had the Name of God expurged from every passage in which it occurred in the Holy Scriptures, and the names of idols inserted in its place.<sup>6</sup>

Upon the death of Ahaziah followed the reign of terror under the queen Athaliah, when God exacted payment from the house of David for his trespass in connection with the extermination of the priests at Nob. As Abiathar had been the only male descendant of Abimelech to survive the persecution of Saul, so the sole representative of the house of David to remain after the sword of Athaliah had raged<sup>7</sup> was Joash, the child kept in hiding, in the Holy of Holies in the Temple, by the high priest Jehoiada and his wife Jehosheba.<sup>8</sup> Later Jehoiada vindicated the right of Joash upon the throne, and installed him as king of Judah. The very crown worn by the rulers of the house of David testified to the legitimacy of the young prince, for it possessed the peculiarity of fitting none but the rightful successors to David.<sup>9</sup>

At the instigation of Jehoiada King Joash undertook the restoration of the Temple. The work was completed so expeditiously that one living at the time the Temple was erected by Solomon was permitted to see the new structure shortly before his death.<sup>10</sup> This good fortune befell Jehoiada<sup>11</sup> himself, the son of Benaiah, commander-in-chief of the army under Solomon. So long as Joash continued under the tutelage of Jehoiada, he was a pious king. When Jehoiada departed this life, the courtiers came to Joash and flattered him: "If thou wert not a god, thou hadst not been able to abide for six years in the Holy of Holies, a spot which even the high priest is permitted to enter but once a year." The king lent ear to their blandishments, and permitted the people to pay him Divine homage.<sup>12</sup> But when the folly of the king went to the extreme of prompting him to set up an idol in the Temple, Zechariah, the son of Jehoiada, placed himself at the entrance, and barring the way said: "Thou shalt not do it so long as I live."<sup>13</sup> High priest, prophet, and judge though Zechariah was, and son-in-law of Joash to boot, the king still did not shrink from having him killed for his presumptuous words, nor was he deterred by the fact that it happened on a Day of Atonement which fell on the Sabbath.<sup>14</sup> The innocent blood crimsoning the hall of the priests did not remain unavenged. For two hundred and fifty-two years it did not leave off seething and pulsating, until, finally, Nebuzaradan, captain of Nebuchadnezzar's guard, ordered a great carnage among the Judeans, to avenge the death of Zechariah.<sup>15</sup>

Joash himself, the murderer of Zechariah, met with an evil end. He fell into the hands of the Syrians, and they abused him in their barbarous, immoral way. Before he could recover from the suffering inflicted upon him, his servants slew him.<sup>16</sup>

Amaziah, the son and successor of Joash, in many respects resembled his father. At the beginning of his reign he was God-fearing, but when, through the aid of God, he had gained a brilliant victory over the Edomites, he knew no better way of manifesting his gratitude than to establish in Jerusalem the cult of the idol worshipped by his conquered enemies. To compass his chastisement, God inspired Amaziah with the idea of provoking a war with Joash, the ruler of the northern kingdom. Amaziah demanded that Joash should either recognize the suzerainty of the southern realm voluntarily, or let the fate of battle decide the question.<sup>17</sup> At first Joash sought to turn Amaziah aside from his purpose by a parable reminding him of the fate of Shechem, which the sons of Jacob had visited upon him for having done violence to their sister Dinah.<sup>18</sup> Amaziah refused to be warned. He persisted in his challenge, and a war ensued. The fortune of battle decided against Amaziah. He suffered defeat, and later he was tortured to death by his own subjects.<sup>19</sup>

---

1. Seder 'Olam 18; compare footnote 23 on p. 1031.

2. Megillah 14a; Horayyot 12a; Keritot 6a. Compare also footnote 22 on p. 927, with regard to the pitcher out of which Samuel took the oil to anoint Saul. As to the "holy oil" being used for the anointing of kings, see text on p. 657. Against this, see Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 6.1.

3. Alphabet of Ben Sira 10b. Compare footnote 23 on p. 1031.

4. Sanhedrin 102b (top). Compare with p. 982. Great is peace; although one performs many good deeds, he achieves nothing if he does not promote peace. This may be inferred from the life of Jehu: he abolished idolatry from among Israel, he caused the downfall of Ahab's dynasty, and killed Jezebel; but all his good deeds counted for nought because he did not promote peace. See Midrash Gadol 129–130. On the worship of the golden calves even by the pious in Israel, see text on p. 995. According to EZ 7, 184, Jehu at first was a very pious man, and did not worship the golden calves, but when he became king, he deteriorated, and followed in the footsteps of his predecessors.

5. EZ 7, 184; ER 18, 88. A boon conferred by God upon one as a reward for a good deed remains not only with the person that merited it, but also with his descendants unto the fourth generation, whether they are good or wicked. God granted the kingdom to Jehu for his good deeds (see 2 Kings 10.30), and notwithstanding his own and his descendants' sinfulness, his dynasty lasted for five generations. See EZ, loc. cit. Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 8.5–6, describes Jehoahaz (the son of Jehu) as a repentant sinner, and his son Joash as a pious man, whereas EZ, loc. cit., puts Jehu and all his descendants among the sinners.

6. Sanhedrin 102b. According to one opinion, the Judean kings Ahaz and Ahaziah, as well as all the kings of the northern kingdom concerning whom Scripture uses the expression "and they did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord”, have no share in the world to come, but are spared the tortures of hell; Sanhedrin 103a; compare footnote 107 on p. 932, and footnote 59 on p. 966.

7. Sanhedrin, 95b.

8. Tan. B. II, 31; Tan. Wa-Era 9; Seder ‘Olam 18 (comp. Ratner, note 7); Tehillim 18, 151; Shir 1.16; Targum 2 Chron. 22.11; ShR 8.2. In the three last-named Midrashim a different opinion is given, according to which Joash was kept during the summer in the upper chamber, above the holy of holies, and during the winter in one of the cells (חַתָּן) of the Temple.

9. ‘Abodah Zarah 44a; Targum 2 Chron. 23.11, and 1 Chron. 20.2; compare with p. 941. This crown, it is said, was so heavy, that it could not be placed on a person’s head. David, however, engraved the “Name” on it, and this had the effect that he and his rightful successors did not feel the heavy weight thereof. According to others, the crown was suspended over the heads of the Davidic kings by means of a magnet. The child saved by Jehoash was called Joash because of the despair (שָׁאָה “he despaired”) of the people of having a descendant of David occupy the throne once more. See Rimze Haftarot, Shekalim; comp. the similar etymology of the name Josiah in Haserot 17a.

10. Seder ‘Olam 18.

11. Ps.-Sa’adya on 2 Chron., p. 54. Comp. Ratner, Seder ‘Olam 19, note 14; footnote 95 on p. 978 and Index, s. v. “Benaiah”, Opinions differ as to whether 2 Chron. 24.3 refers to Jehoiaha marrying two wives or to his making Joash marry them. Maimonides, Yad ha-Hasakah, Issure Biah, 17.13, and Kele ha-Mikdash, 5.10, maintains that according to the Halakah (comp. Yoma 13a) the high priest is forbidden to have two wives, and therefore the biblical verse under discussion does not speak of the two wives of the high priest Jehoiaha. RABD on Issure Biah, loc. cit., on the other hand, follows Rashi on 2 Chron., 24.3, and takes 17 in this verse to refer to Jehoiaha in agreement with Septuagint; but Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 7.5, and Vulgate understand it in the same way as Maimonides.

12. Tan. B. II, 23 and 31; Tan. Wa-Era 9; Seder ‘Olam 18; ShR 8.2; Makiri on Ps. 9(end), citing Tan.; ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 21.17.

13. Midrash Shir 3, 27a.

14. Yerushalmi Ta’anit 4, 69a; Ekah, introduction, 20–21; Koheleth 3.16 and 10.4.

15. Gittin 57b; Yerushalmi Ta’anit 4, 69a; Ekah, introduction, 20–21; Koheleth 3.16 and 10.4. Compare with p. 1075.

16. Mekilta Amalek 1, 53a (as to the meaning of שְׁפוּטִים, see Ginzberg, Compte Rendu, 7 = R.E.J. LXVI, 303); Tan. B. II, 23–24; Tan. Wa-Era 9; ShR 8.2; Yerushalmi Kiddushin 1, 61a; Makiri on Ps. 9(end); ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 24.27. The Midrashim cited remark, four kings claimed to be gods: Hiram, Nebuchadnezzar, Pharaoh, and Joash; they ended by being treated like women (“coitu foemineo commixantur”). Joash was ungrateful to his benefactor Jehoiaha (he killed the latter’s son), and he was killed by men who were descended from the Moabites and Ammonites (see 2 Chron. 24.26), the two ungrateful nations. See Mekilta, loc. cit. On the characterization of these two nations as ungrateful, see text on p. 214, and text on p. 772.

17. Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 9.3. Comp. also Seder ‘Olam 19. Amaziah’s violent death was the punishment for his cruelty against the Edomites; Ekah, introduction, 14.

18. BR 80.3; Tan. B. I, 171; Tan. Wa-Yishlah 7; Baraita of 32 Middot, No. 26.

19. Seder ‘Olam 19. This passage also states that Amaziah did not rule the last fifteen years of his life, his kingdom having been administered by his son Uzziah, who later, in his turn, had to leave the administration of the kingdom to his son Jotham for twenty years, from the time he was afflicted with leprosy unto his death. By means of these assumptions the Midrashim and the Talmud are able to explain several chronological difficulties offered by the data found in Scripture with regard to the lives of these kings; comp. the references in Ratner, notes 24, 26. Amaziah’s general is said to have ended his days in Morviedero, Spain. See Ibn Habib, Darke Noam, 6b and Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, I, 487.

THREE GREAT PROPHETS

The reign of Uzziah, who for a little while occupied the throne during his father Amaziah’s lifetime, is notable particularly because it marks the beginning of the activity of three of the prophets, Hosea, Amos, and Isaiah. The oldest of the three was Hosea,<sup>20</sup> the son of the prophet and prince Beerli, the Beerli who later was carried away captive by Tiglath-pileser, the king of Assyria.<sup>21</sup> Of Beerli’s prophecies we have but two verses, preserved for us by Isaiah.<sup>22</sup>

The peculiar marriage contracted by Hosea at the command of God Himself was not without a good reason. When God spoke to the prophet about the sins of Israel, expecting him to defend or excuse his people, Hosea said severely: “O Lord of the world! Thine is the universe. In place of Israel choose another as Thy peculiar people from among the nations of the earth." To make the true relation between God and Israel known to the prophet, he was commanded to take to wife a woman with a dubious past. After she had borne him several children, God suddenly put the question to him: "Why followest thou not the example of thy teacher Moses, who denied himself the joys of family life after his call to prophecy?" Hosea replied: "I can neither send my wife away nor divorce her, for she has borne me children." "If, now," said God to him, "thou who hast a wife of whose honesty thou art so uncertain that thou canst not even be sure that her children are thine, and yet thou canst not separate from her, how, then, can I separate Myself from Israel, from My children, the children of My elect, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob!" Hosea entreated God to pardon him. But God said: "Better were it that thou shouldst pray for the welfare of Israel, for thou art the cause that I issued three fateful decrees against them." Hosea prayed as he was bidden, and his prayer averted the impending threefold doom.<sup>23</sup>

Hosea died at Babylon at a time in which a journey thence to Palestine was beset with many perils. Desirous of having his earthly remains rest in sacred ground, he requested before his death that his bier be loaded upon a camel, and the animal permitted to make its way as it would. Wherever it stopped, there his body was to be buried. As he commanded, so it was done. Without a single mishap the camel arrived at Safed. In the Jewish cemetery of the town it stood still, and there Hosea was buried in the presence of a large concourse.<sup>24</sup>

The prophetic activity of Amos commenced after Hosea's had closed, and before Isaiah's began. Though he had an impediment in his speech,<sup>25</sup> he obeyed the call of God, and betook himself to Beth-el to proclaim to the sinful inhabitants thereof the Divine message with which he had been charged. The denunciation of the priest Amaziah, of Beth-el, who informed against the prophet before King Jeroboam of Israel, did him no harm, for the king, idolater though he was, entertained profound respect for Amos. He said to himself: "God forbid I should think the prophet guilty of cherishing traitorous plans, and if he were, it would surely be at the bidding of God."<sup>26</sup> For this pious disposition Jeroboam was rewarded; never had the northern kingdom attained to such power as under him.<sup>27</sup>

However, the fearlessness of Amos finally caused his death. King Uzziah inflicted a mortal blow upon his forehead with a red-hot iron.<sup>28</sup>

Two years after Amos ceased to prophesy, Isaiah was favored with his first Divine communication. It was the day on which King Uzziah, blinded by success and prosperity, arrogated to himself the privileges of the priesthood. He tried to offer sacrifices upon the altar, and when the high priest Azariah<sup>29</sup> ventured to restrain him, he threatened to slay him and any priest sympathizing with him unless they kept silent. Suddenly the earth quaked so violently that a great breach was torn in the Temple, through which a brilliant ray of sunlight pierced, falling upon the forehead of the king and causing leprosy to break forth upon him. Nor was that all the damage done by the earthquake. On the west side of Jerusalem, half of the mountain was split off and hurled to the east, into a road, at a distance of four stadia.<sup>30</sup> And not heaven and earth alone were outraged by Uzziah's atrocity and sought to annihilate him; even the angels of fire, the seraphim, were on the point of descending and consuming him, when a voice from on high proclaimed, that the punishment appointed for Uzziah was unlike that meted out to Korah and his company despite the similarity of their crimes.<sup>31</sup>

When Isaiah beheld the august throne of God on this memorable day,<sup>32</sup> he was sorely affrighted, for he reproached himself with not having tried to turn the king away from his impious desire.<sup>33</sup> Enthralled he hearkened to the hymns of praise sung by the angels, and lost in admiration he failed to join his voice with theirs. “Woe is me,” he cried out, “that I was silent! Woe is me that I did not join the chorus of the angels praising God! Had I done it, I, too, like the angels, would have become immortal, seeing I was permitted to look upon sights to behold which had brought death to other men.”<sup>34</sup> Then he began to excuse himself: “I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips.” At once resounded the voice of God in rebuke: “Of thyself thou art the master, and of thyself thou mayest say what thou chooseth, but who gave thee the right to calumniate My children of Israel and call them ‘a people of unclean lips?’” And Isaiah heard God bid one of the seraphim touch his lips with a live coal as a punishment for having slandered Israel. Though the coal was so hot that the seraph needed tongs to hold the tongs with which he had taken the coal from the altar, the prophet yet escaped unscathed, but he learned the lesson, that it was his duty to defend Israel, not traduce him. Thenceforth the championship of his people was the mainspring of the prophet’s activity, and he was rewarded by having more revelations concerning Israel and the other nations vouchsafed him than any other prophet before or after him. Moreover God designated Isaiah to be “the prophet of consolation”. Thus it happened that the very Isaiah whose early prophecies foretold the exile and the destruction of the Temple,<sup>35</sup> later described and proclaimed, in plainer terms than any other prophet,<sup>36</sup> the brilliant destiny in store for Israel.

20. Seder ‘Olam 20; Pesahim 87b; Baba Batra 14b; PR 33, 153b (this passage reads: Hosea prophesied for ninety years); EZ 9, 86. These sources speak of the four contemporary prophets, Hosea, Amos, Isaiah, and Micah.

The last-named prophet, however, was a younger contemporary of the other three, as is explicitly stated in Seder ‘Olam, loc. cit. PR 33, 150b, seems to identify the prophet Micah with Micaiah the son of Imlah who prophesied in the time of Jehoshaphat (1 Kings 22.8). Comp. PK 16.135b; Ibn Ezra on Micah 1.2; Ratner, note 6 on Seder ‘Olam, loc. cit. Obadiah is also said to have been active as a prophet during the time of Jehoshaphat; Baraita of 32 Middot, as quoted by ps.-Rashi on BR 83.3. Comp. Ratner, loc. cit., note 7, and Grünhut, Likkutim, II, 11b, note 3. This would agree with the widespread view that the prophet Obadiah is none else than Obadiah, the official of Ahab’s court. Compare with pp. 1025–1026. Our texts of Seder ‘Olam, loc. cit., state that Obadiah prophesied during the time of Amaziah, “when Edom fell never to rise again”. Yalkut II, Obadiah, and ps.-Rashi, loc. cit., read, however, Jehoshaphat instead of Amaziah. Grünhut, loc. cit., though quoting ps.-Rashi, did not notice that this author had the same reading in Seder ‘Olam as Yalkut. Clemens Alexandrinus, Stromata, 1.20, makes Isaiah, Hosea, Micah and Joel contemporaries, and Jerome (comp. his remarks on Hosea 1.1; Joel 1.1) partly depends upon this Christian author and partly upon Jewish tradition; hence his statement that Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, and Isaiah were σύγχρονοι (=בפרק אחד of the rabbinical sources), contemporaries. Jerome and Clement find in the order of the biblical books a hint as to the times of the respective authors. Now as Micah (and Amos) were younger contemporaries of Hosea, it follows that Joel, Obadiah, and Jonah, whose books are placed between those bearing the names of Hosea and Micah, lived during the same period as the latter. As to the Jewish view concerning the time of Joel, see footnote 56 on p. 991 and Index, s. v. On Micah, see also footnote 1 on p. 1025.

21. PK 25, 159b, which reads: Beeri died in Exile, that the Godless exiles might rise with him at the time of resurrection. For a similar statement concerning the death of Moses in the wilderness, see footnote 615 on p. 734.

22. WR 6.6 and 15.2. Beeri’s prophecy consisted of two verses, which were later inserted in the Book of Isaiah, 8.19–20.

23. Pesahim 87a–87b (here it is also stated that the name Gomer of Diblaim, as Hosea’s wife is called in Scripture, was not her real name, but indicates her disreputable mode of life); EZ 9, 186–187; Targum as quoted in Kad ha-Kamah, I אהבה, 6b–7a; We-Hizhir I, 86. As to the interpretation by the Haggadah of the prophecies given in Hosea 1 and 2, see BaR 2.12–14. The view that Hosea’s marriage spoken of in Scripture is to be understood as a prophetic vision is unknown in the old sources. Ibn Ezra, ad loc., and Maimonides (Guide of the Perplexed, II, 46) are perhaps the earliest authors maintaining such a rationalistic view. On the haggadic interpretation of the name Go-mer of Diblaim, see also Jerome and Targum, ad loc. As to the celibacy of Moses, see text on p. 736.

24. Shalshelet ha-Kabbalah, 19a.

25. PK 16, 125b; PR 33, 150b; WR 10.2. The activity of Amos as a prophet preceded that of Isaiah by two years; the latter began to prophesy on the "day of the earthquake", the former two years before the earthquake. Comp. Seder 'Olam 20, and the references given in note 29. In Greek transliteration the names Amos (עמוס) and Amoz (אמוץ) sound alike, and hence the statement found in many Christian writers, who were ignorant of Hebrew, that Isaiah was the son of the prophet Amos; see, e. g., Clement, Stromata, 1.20; ps.-Epiphanius, De Vitis Prophetarum, s. v. "Isaiah". In the original of Ascension of Isaiah 1.1 the text very likely read: ישעיהו בן אמוץ הנביא, which should be translated "the prophet Isaiah, the son of Amoz," and not as the Greek translator has it, "Isaiah the son of Amoz the prophet". Yahya, Shalshelet ha-Kabbalah, 99b, follows Christian authors (though he does not say so) in identifying Amoz the father of Isaiah with Amos the prophet. It is, however, an old Jewish tradition that Isaiah's father was also a prophet, living in the reign of Amaziah, whose brother he was. It was at his advice that the king dismissed the army he had gathered from among the Ephraimites (2 Chron. 25.7–10). Seder 'Olam 20; Megillah 10b; Sotah 10b. Comp. also Megillah 15a; WR 6.6 (which read: Wherever the names of the prophet and his father are given it is sure that he was a prophet the son of a prophet); Aggadat Bereshit 14, 32. In WR a different opinion is quoted, according to which all prophets mentioned in Scripture were the sons of prophets. With regard to the native places of the prophets, Megillah, loc. cit., states that all those whose birthplaces are not given in Scripture were Jerusalemites. PK 16, 128b considers Amos to have been a post-exilic prophet. Compare note 20 and footnote 56 on p. 991.

26. Pesahim 87b; ER 17, 88; EZ 7, 184.

27. Yerushalmi Hallah 2, 58c. Comp. also EZ 7, 184.

28. Yahya, Shalshelet ha-Kabbalah, 97, undoubtedly based on a Christian source; comp. note 25. According to ps.-Epiphanius, De Vitis Prophetarum, s. v. "Amos", this prophet met his death through a blow on his temples dealt him with a stick by the son of the false prophet Amaziah. Comp. Index, s. v. "Amaziah, Priest of Beth-el".

29. Azariah the "chief priest" in 2 Chron. 26.20, is identified with Azariah the high priest, in 1 Chron. 5.36. Comp. Sifre Z., 112, and Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 10.4. The Rabbis maintain that chapter 6 of Isaiah is the beginning of this prophetic book, and contains the first vision granted to the prophet on the day on which the impious king Uzziah attempted to sacrifice on the altar and was stricken with leprosy. As a "leper is like dead" (compare footnote 177 on p. 286), מות in Is. 6.1 does not mean death but leprosy. See Targum, ad loc.; ShR 1.34; Tan. Zaw 13. Comp. also Seder 'Olam 20; Mekilta Shirah 6 (beginning); Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 404 on Is. 6; Aphraates, 362 (read ארעא instead of עמא); Jerome on Is. 7.3, seq.; ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 26.22.

30. Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 10.4. Tan. Noah 13 is not contented with a breach in the Temple; it says that the hall of the Temple (היכל) was rent in two parts, separated from each other by a cleft of twelve miles (a favorite number; see Index) in width, and the Midrash transfers to the Temple itself that which Josephus tells of the Temple mount. Comp. also Targum Is. 28.21, as well as the references given at the end of the preceding note; add ARN 9, 42. On leprosy as a punishment for arrogance see ARN, loc. cit., and text on p. 675. According to Tan. Noah 13, the passion with which Uzziah devoted himself to the cultivation of the soil (comp. 2 Chron. 26.10) caused him to neglect the study of the Torah. The evil consequence thereof was that he became arrogant, saying: "God is king, and so am I, and it behooves the terrestrial king to do the service in the Temple of the celestial king." As the "love of husbandry" caused the downfall of Uzziah, even so was it the cause of that of Cain and Noah. Comp. also Yelammedenu, No. 43 (here Cain, Job, and Uzziah are given); BR 22.3; Mekilta RS, 92 (where Cain, Noah, Lot, and Uzziah are described as the four men who were "greedy for husbandry", and came thereby to grief).—The statement of Josephus that a ray of sunlight caused Uzziah's leprosy is evidently based on a haggadic interpretation of וְהַצִּרְעָתָה in 2 Chron. 26.19, the usual meaning of זרע being "shone" in regard to the sun. See, however, also text on p. 728, and note 197 on p. 600 (top) in connection with death by celestial fire as a punishment for the laity usurping the priesthood.

31. Tan. Zaw 13; compare with p. 728. As to the earthquake taking place on the day on which Uzziah attempted his sacrifice, see references cited in the two preceding notes; and Jerome on Amos 1.3.

32. On Isaiah's receiving the "call" on that day, see note 29. He was in his study when he heard a heavenly voice proclaim: "Whom shall I send? I sent Amos, and they (Israel) said: God found no better messenger than this stammerer (compare with p. 1040, and Koheleth 1.1). I sent Micah, and they smote him on the cheek (I Kings 22.24; comp. note 20). Whom shall I now send, and who will go for us?" Isaiah replied: "Here am I, send me." Thereupon God said to him: "My children are rebellious and troublesome; art thou prepared to stand their abuses and blows?" But Isaiah, far from being intimidated, said: "I am willing to give my back to the smiters and my cheek to them that pluck off the hair (Is. 50.6), but am not worthy to serve as Thy messenger to Thy children." As a reward for his trust in Israel, whom he hoped to bring back to the path of righteousness by his prophecies, Isaiah was distinguished above all the other prophets in two ways. All the other prophets received their spirit of prophecy from their masters (the spirit of Elijah came over to Elisha; the spirit of Moses was put upon the seventy elders), but Isaiah prophesied from the mouth of the Almighty." He was further distinguished by repeating the introductory words of his prophecy (comp., e. g., 40.1; 51.9, 12, 16), indicating thereby that their fulfilment was certain. See PK 16, 125b; WR 10.2. Comp. also ER 16, 82, and notes 35, 36.

33. Jewish tradition in Jerome on Is. 6.6. This interpretation throws light on the obscure words חַיִּיב לְאוֹכְלָא in Targum on this passage.

34. As to the conception that the sight of the divine causes death to mortals, see text on p. 631.

35. On Isaiah the "comforter of the mourners for Zion", see Ecclus. 48.21–25. This shows that Isaiah's authorship of the entire book now bearing his name was known at as early a time as that of Ben Sira. Comp. ER 16.82–83; Jerome, Ad Damasum 1.375.

36. PR 33, 150b–151a. About the Seraphim which Isaiah saw, see the quotation from an unknown Midrash in BHM, V, 162, according to which the Seraph has six wings to praise God each work-day of the week with one of them, whereas on the Sabbath the Seraphim are silent, and God is praised by the terrestrials, i. e. Israel. Comp. also Orehot Hayyim, I, 18b. As to the supposition that Israel recites the Kedushah only on the Sabbath, see Ginzberg, Geonica, II, 48. According to PK 9, 75b, and parallel passages cited by Buber, the Seraphim praise God with two wings, they cover their faces with two wings, that they look not at the Shekinah, and with two wings they cover their feet, that the Shekinah be not reminded by them of the sin committed by Israel in worshipping the golden calf, since the "sole of their feet is like the sole of the calf's foot"; comp. Ezek. 1.7. The two prophets Isaiah and Ezekiel saw the same heavenly vision; the latter gave a fuller description thereof, than the former. "Ezekiel is to be likened to a villager, who saw the king, and Isaiah to the inhabitant of the capital city." The former, not accustomed to the sight of the divine glory, gave a detailed description of what he saw, whereas the latter, being used to it, did not care to describe it. The "wings" spoken of by Isaiah are identical with the "faces" referred to by Ezekiel. It is true that the Seraphim which Isaiah saw had six wings, whereas the heavenly beings described by Ezekiel had only four faces. This discrepancy is to be explained by the fact that at the time of the destruction of the Temple the two wings (= faces) used by these heavenly beings to praise God with were taken from them, and hence Ezekiel, living at that time, saw "four faces" only. See Hagigah 13b. The Seraph that touched Isaiah with a live coal was Michael; Berakot 4b. On the day of judgment Isaiah will plead for the sinners that they may be permitted to look at the blissful joys of the righteous. His pleading in their behalf will not be granted, as "the congregation of Israel" (כְּנֶסֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל) will oppose it, insisting that the sinners are not entitled to such consideration. See Alphabet of R. Akiba (כ'), 33–34. In BHM, V, 50, an allusion is found to the view, according to which Isaiah at this memorable vision was shown the punishment of the sinners in hell.

THE TWO KINGDOMS CHASTISED

Afflicted with leprosy, Uzziah was unfit to reign as king, and Jotham administered the affairs of Judah for twenty-five years before the death of his father.<sup>37</sup> Jotham possessed so much piety that his virtues added to those of two other very pious men suffice to atone for all the sins of the whole of mankind committed from the hour of creation until the end of all time.<sup>38</sup>

Ahaz, the son of Jotham, was very unlike him. "From first to last he was a sinner."<sup>39</sup> He abolished the true worship of God, forbade the study of the Torah, set up an idol in the upper room of the Temple, and disregarded the Jewish laws of marriage.<sup>40</sup> His transgressions are the less pardonable, because he sinned against God knowing His grandeur and power, as appears from his reply to the prophet. Isaiah said to him: "Ask a sign of God, as, for instance, that the dead should arise, Korah come up from Sheol, or Elijah descend from heaven." The king's answer was: "I know thou hast the power to do any of these, but I do not wish the Name of God to be glorified through me."<sup>41</sup>

The only good quality possessed by Ahaz was respect for Isaiah.<sup>42</sup> To avoid his reproaches, Ahaz would disguise himself when he went abroad, so that the prophet might not recognize him.<sup>43</sup> Only to this circumstance, joined to the fact that he was the father of a pious son and the son of an equally pious father, is it to be ascribed that, in spite of his wickedness, Ahaz is not one of those who have forfeited their portion in the world to come. But he did not escape punishment; on the contrary, his chastisement was severe, not only as king but also as man. In the ill-starred war against Pekah, the king of the northern kingdom, he lost his first-born son, a great hero.<sup>44</sup>

Pekah, however, was not permitted to enjoy the fruits of his victory, for the king of Assyria invaded his empire, captured the golden calf at Dan, and led the tribes on the east side of Jordan away into exile. The dismemberment of the Israelitish kingdom went on apace for some years. Then the Assyrians, in the reign of Hoshea, carried off the second golden calf together with the tribes of Asher, Issachar, Zebulon, and Naphthali, leaving but one-eighth of the Israelites in their own land. The larger portion of the exiles was taken to Damascus. After that Israel's doom overtook it with giant strides, and the last ruler of Israel actually hastened the end of his kingdom by a pious deed. After the golden calves were removed by the Assyrians, Hoshea, the king of the north, abolished the institution of stationing guards on the frontier between Judah and Israel to prevent pilgrimages to Jerusalem. But the people made no use of the liberty granted them. They persisted in their idolatrous cult, and this quickened their punishment. So long as their kings had put obstacles in their path, they could excuse themselves before God for not worshipping Him in the true way. The action taken by their king Hoshea left them no defense. When the Assyrians made their third incursion into Israel, the kingdom of the north was destroyed forever, and the people, one and all, were carried away into exile.<sup>45</sup>

The heathen nations settled in Samaria by the Assyrians instead of the deported Ten Tribes were forced by God to accept the true religion of the Jews. Nevertheless they continued to worship their olden idols: the Babylonians paid devotion to a hen, the people of Cuthah to a cock, those of Hamath to a ram, the dog and the ass were the gods of the Avvites, and the mule and the horse the gods of the Sepharvites.<sup>46</sup>

---

37. Seder 'Olam 19, and the parallel passages cited by Ratner.

38. Sukkah 45b. Jotham's piety is also referred to in BR 63.1 and by Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 11.2. Compare further with p. 98.

39. Megillah 11a; BR 27.1; Esther R. 1.1; Tehillim 105, 449. In these sources an old tradition is given, according to which Scripture indicated with regard to five men that they were pious from "first to last", and with regard to other five that they were wicked from "first to last". The five pious men are: Abraham, Moses, Aaron, Hezekiah and Ezra; the five wicked ones are: Nimrod, Esau, the brothers Dathan and Abiram (counted as one), Ahaz, and Ahasuerus. Ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 23.9 quotes this Haggadah with regard to Ahaz.

40. Sanhedrin 103b. Here, as in many other places (comp. EZ 9, 187–188; BR 42.3 and parallel passages cited by Theodor), Ahaz is said to have issued an edict against the study of the Torah. Comp. note 112.

41. Tan. B. I, 153; Aggadat Bereshit 48, 98–99; Jerome on Is. 7.12.

42. On the view that Isaiah was a blood-relative of the king, see note 25.

43. Sanhedrin 104a; Yerushalmi 10, 27d; WR 26.3. Rimze Haftarot, Yitro, quotes the statement of the "wise" (אמרו חכמינו ז"ל) according to which Ahaz, when passing women who were engaged in washing, closed his eyes to avoid looking at the bare parts of their bodies. It seems fairly certain that the author confused the statement in Sanhedrin, loc. cit. (דכבשינו לאפיה) with Makkot 24a (מסתכל וגו' זה שאינו), and attributed the virtue of modesty to the wicked king, in direct contrast to the view of the Haggadah which maintains that Ahaz abolished the laws against incest; comp. Sanhedrin 103b.

44. Sannhedrin 103b; Yerushalmi 10, 27d; WR 36.3. There are, however, also others who maintain that this wicked king forfeited his share in the world to come; compare footnote 100 on p. 980, and p. 508, footnote 118.

45. Seder 'Olam 22; Ta'anit 30b; Yerushalmi 4, 69c; Baba Batra 121a; Gittin 88a; Ekah, introduction, 33; EZ 9, 188; 'Eser Galuyyot 2–4; Aggadat Shir 1, 28; Jerome on Hos. 10.2. The last-named author gives, on Hos. 10.5, the following somewhat humorous Haggadah communicated to him by “the Hebrews”. The crafty and greedy priests at Beth-el and Dan had substituted gilded images of calves for those made of solid gold, which they appropriated for themselves. When the Assyrian kings captured the golden calves, the people mourned the loss, but the priests laughed inwardly at the trick played by them. This is the meaning of the words of the prophet (Hos. 10.5): The inhabitants of Samaria shall be in dread for the calves of Beth-aven; for the people thereof shall mourn over it, and the priests thereof shall “laugh” over it.

46. Sanhedrin 63b. Another interpretation of the names of the idols mentioned in 2 Kings 17.30–31 is given in Yerushalmi ‘Abodah Zarah 3, 42d, according to which the inhabitants of Samaria fashioned the images of Jacob and Joseph to whom they paid divine honors. This is the answer of the Jews to the Samaritans’ claim to be the only legitimate descendants of Joseph. Tosefta-Targum on Kings, loc. cit., contains, with slight modification, the views of Babli, as well as Yerushalmi, concerning these idols. Comp. also R. Hananel, as quoted by R. Bahya, Exod. 32.8.

HEZEKIAH

While the northern kingdom was rapidly descending into the pit of destruction, a mighty upward impulse was given to Judah, both spiritually and materially, by its king Hezekiah. In his infancy the king had been destined as a sacrifice to Moloch. His mother had saved him from death only by rubbing him with the blood of a salamander, which made him fire-proof.<sup>47</sup> In every respect he was the opposite of his father. As the latter is counted among the worst of sinners, so Hezekiah is counted among the most pious of Israel. His first act as king is evidence that he held the honor of God to be his chief concern, important beyond all else. He refused to accord his father regal obsequies; his remains were buried as though he had been poor and of plebeian rank. Impious as he was, Ahaz deserved nothing more dignified.<sup>48</sup> God had Himself made it known to Hezekiah, by a sign, that his father was to have no consideration paid him. On the day of the dead king’s funeral daylight lasted but two hours, and his body had to be interred when the earth was enveloped in darkness.<sup>49</sup>

Throughout his reign, Hezekiah devoted himself mainly to the task of dispelling the ignorance of the Torah which his father had caused. While Ahaz had forbidden the study of the law, Hezekiah’s orders read: “Who does not occupy himself with the Torah, renders himself subject to the death penalty.” The academies closed under Ahaz were kept open day and night under Hezekiah. The king himself supplied the oil needed for illuminating purposes. Gradually, under this system, a generation grew up so well trained that one could search the land from Dan even to Beer-sheba and not find a single ignoramus. The very women and the children, both boys and girls, knew the laws of “clean and unclean.”<sup>50</sup> By way of rewarding his piety, God granted Hezekiah a brilliant victory over Sennacherib.

This Assyrian king, who had conquered the whole world,<sup>51</sup> equipped an army against Hezekiah like unto which there is none, unless it be the army of the four kings whom Abraham routed, or the army to be raised by Gog and Magog in the Messianic time. Sennacherib’s army consisted of more than two millions and a half of horsemen, among them forty-five thousand princes sitting in chariots and surrounded by their paramours, by eighty thousand armor-clad soldiers, and sixty thousand swordsmen. The camp extended over a space of four hundred parasangs, and the saddle-beasts standing neck to neck formed a line forty parasangs long. The host was divided into four divisions. After the first of them had passed the Jordan, it was well nigh dry, for the soldiers had all slaked their thirst with the water of the river. The second division found nothing to quench their thirst except the water gathered under the hoofs of the horses. The third division was forced to dig wells, and when the fourth division crossed the Jordan, they kicked up great clouds of dust.<sup>52</sup>

With this vast army Sennacherib hastened onward, in accordance with the disclosures of the astrologers, who warned him that he would fail in his object of capturing Jerusalem, if he arrived there later than the day set by them. His journey having lasted but one day instead of ten, as he had expected, he rested at Nob. A raised platform was there erected for Sennacherib, whence he could view Jerusalem. On first beholding the Judean capital, the Assyrian king exclaimed: "What! Is this Jerusalem, the city for whose sake I gathered together my whole army, for whose sake I first conquered all other lands? Is it not smaller and weaker than all the cities of the nations I subdued with my strong hand?" He stretched himself and shook his head, and waved his hand contemptuously toward the Temple mount and the sanctuary crowning it. When his warriors urged him to make his attack upon Jerusalem, he bade them take their ease for one night, and be prepared to storm the city the next day. It seemed no great undertaking. Each warrior would but have to pick up as much mortar from the wall as is needed to seal a letter and the whole city would disappear. But Sennacherib made the mistake of not proceeding directly to the attack upon the city. If he had made the assault at once, it would have been successful, for the sin of Saul against the priests at Nob had not yet been wholly expiated; on that very day it was fully atoned for.<sup>53</sup> In the following night, which was the Passover night, when Hezekiah and the people began to sing the Hallel Psalms,<sup>54</sup> the giant host was annihilated. The archangel Gabriel,<sup>55</sup> sent by God to ripen the fruits of the field, was charged to address himself to the task of making away with the Assyrians, and he fulfilled his mission so well that of all the millions of the army, Sennacherib alone was saved with his two sons, his son-in-law<sup>56</sup> Nebuchadnezzar, and Ne-buzaradan.<sup>57</sup> The death of the Assyrians happened when the angel permitted them to hear the "song of the celestials."<sup>58</sup> Their souls were burnt, though their garments remained intact.<sup>59</sup> Such an end was too good for Sennacherib. To him a disgraceful death was apportioned. On his flight away from Jerusalem, he met a Divine apparition in the guise of an old man. He questioned Sennacherib as to what he would say to the kings allied with him, in reply to their inquiry about the fate of their sons at Jerusalem. Sennacherib confessed his dread of a meeting with those kings. The old man advised him to have his hair cut off, which would change his appearance beyond recognition. Sennacherib assented, and his adviser sent him to a house in the vicinity to fetch a pair of shears. Here he found some people—angels in disguise—busying themselves with a hand-mill. They promised to give him the shears, provided he ground a measure of grain for them. So it grew late and dark by the time Sennacherib returned to the old man, and he had to procure a light before his hair could be cut. As he fanned the fire into a flame, a spark flew into his beard and singed it, and he had to sacrifice his beard as well as his hair. On his return to Assyria, Sennacherib found a plank, which he worshipped as an idol, because it was part of the ark which had saved Noah from the deluge. He vowed that he would sacrifice his sons to this idol if he prospered in his next ventures. But his sons heard his vows, and they killed their father,<sup>60</sup> and fled to Ẕardu, where they released the Jewish captives confined there in great numbers. With these they marched to Jerusalem, and became proselytes there. The famous scholars Shemaiah and Abtalion were the descendants of these two sons of Sennacherib.<sup>61</sup>

---

47. Sanhedrin 63b; Targum on 2 Chron. 23.3; Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 16.3. In the last-named source it is asserted that Hezekiah was saved from death by fire through the merits of his descendants, the three youths who willingly offered themselves to be thrown into the fiery furnace for the glory of God. On Salamander, see text on p. 34, and notes 156–158 appertaining thereto; comp. also Bacher, Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft XXVII, 15.

48. Sanhedrin 47a; Makkot 24a; Tehillim 15, 118.

49. Sanhedrin 96a.

50. Sanhedrin 94b; Sifre D., 34; Sifra 9.22; 45b; ER 17, 88; Shir 1.3; Koheleth 9.18. Compare with p. 1049.

51. Megillah 11b; BaR (end). The policy of Sennacherib was after conquering a country, to transfer the inhabitants thereof to another country, and thus it came about that to-day no land is inhabited by its original settlers; Yadayim 4.4; Tosefta 2.17; Sotah 46b; Yebamot 76a; Tosefta Kiddushin 5.4; Seder 'Olam 23 (comp. Ratner, note 8); Berakot 28a; BaR (end); Midrash Tannaim 146. Compare footnote 82 on p. 161. On Sennacherib as "cosmocrator", see also Mekilta Beshallah 1, 26b; Sotah 9a (comp. Tosafot, caption מנימין); Tan. B. III, 37 and 38; WR 18.2; Mahzor Vitry 169; Makiri, Isa 9.11, quoting an unknown source. On other "cosmocrators", see Index, s. v.

52. Sanhedrin 93b, and, with variations, Tosefta-Targum Is. 10.31. Comp. also Mekilta Shirah 2, 36a; Apocalypse of Baruch 63.7; Seder 'Olam 23; Tosefta Sotah 3.18; ShR 18.5; Tehillim 79, 358–359; Tan. B. III, 38; ER 7, 44–45.

53. Sanhedrin 93b; Panim Aherim 73; comp. also WR 5.3, where it is stated that on the very same day God decreed Uziah's punishment (compare with p. 1040), the delivery of the ten tribes into the hands of Sennacherib, and the latter's defeat by Hezekiah. The meaning of this Haggadah is very likely that God revealed these three things to Isaiah; compare with p. 1040.

54. ShR 18.5; Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 19.35–37; Shir 1.12; Seder 'Olam 23 (comp. Ratner, note 38); Yerushalmi Pesahim 9, 36d. On the first night of Passover as the "night of miracles", see footnote 76 on p. 190. Panim Aherim 93 = Yalkut II, 241 reads: When Rab-shakeh heard the singing of the Hallel he counselled Sennacherib to withdraw from Jerusalem, as on this night—the first night of Passover—many miracles were wrought for Israel. Sennacherib however did not accept the wise counsel given him. Here it is very likely assumed that Rab-shakeh was an "apostate"; comp. note 94.

55. Sanhedrin 95b; Tosefta-Targum Is. 10.32; Aggadat Shir 5.39 and 8.45; Jerome on Is. 30.2. On the other hand, ShR 18.5, Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 19.35, and Aphraates, 58, maintain that it was Michael who destroyed the host of the Assyrians. Targum 2 Chron. 32.21 assigns this distinction to both of the archangels. On the preference given to Gabriel over Michael in the Babylonian Haggadah, whereas the favorite of the Palestinian Haggadah is Michael, comp. Index, s. v. "Michael" and "Gabriel". Very obscure is the following remark of Aggadat Shir 8.45; At the time Gabriel received the power to annihilate the host of the Assyrians, Leviathan was empowered to "destroy the rivers". From the connection in which this passage is given it becomes evident that the "rivers of fire flowing from before the Shekinah" are meant. According to Apocalypse of Baruch 63.6, it is the angel Rameel who destroyed the Assyrians. The co-operation of Gabriel and Michael in the destruction of Babylon is maintained in Tosefta-Targum Is. 21.5, and very likely also Aggadat Shir 5.39, where השומרים is to be explained in accordance with ShR. loc. cit. Hezekiah and Isaiah were in the Temple when the host of the Assyrians approached Jerusalem; a fire arose from amidst them, which burned Sennacherib and consumed his host. See Tehillim 22, 180. The burning of Sennacherib is not to be taken literally. See, however, text on p. 1046.

56. Sanhedrin 95b; Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 19.35 and Is. 10.32 (only Targum makes Nebuchadnezzar the son-in-law of Sennacherib). Compare with p. 1073.

57. Sanhedrin 95b; Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 19.35 does not mention Nebuzaradan. Sanhedrin gives different views which set the number of survivors at ten or fourteen. Jerome on Is. 10.13 has ten; 'Eser Galuyyot 7 shares the view given in the text.

58. Sanhedrin 95b, and similarly Jerome on Is. 10.3. The latter states that Jewish tradition considers Hamon, "noise" (comp. Is. 33.3), to be the name of the angel Gabriel. This is corroborated by Aggadat Shir 5, 39. According to Sanhedrin, the angel clapped together his wings, and the noise caused by it was so terrific that the Assyrians gave up their ghosts. Another view given in Sanhedrin is that the angel blew out the breath of the Assyrians. This means that he took their souls without injuring their bodies. Comp. the following note. Here it is also stated: God asked Gabriel, "Is thy scythe sharpened?" The angel replied, "It is sharpened and ready since the six days of creation." The use of the scythe by Gabriel is very likely connected with the view that he is charged with the ripening of the products of the fields; compare with the text on p. 1046. The rabbinical sources know nothing of the mice which caused the defeat of Sennacherib by gnawing to pieces in one night the bows and the rest of the armor of the Assyrians. Comp. Josephus, Antiqui., X, 1.4, who quotes Herodotus as his authority.

59. Shabbat 113b; Sanhedrin 94a; Jerome Is. 10.16; Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 19.35; Targum 2 Chron. 32.21. Comp. the preceding note. According to another view the bodies of the Assyrians were burned but not their garments, and this was the reward for the pious deed of their ancestor Shem who covered the nakedness of his father with a garment. See Apocalypse of Baruch 63.8; Tan. B. I, 50, and III, 13–14; Tan. Noah 15 and Zaw 2; Tehillim 11, 100; Shabbat and Sanhedrin, loc. cit. Comp. also Targum Yerushalmi Num. 11.26; footnote 482 on p. 698, and footnote 382 on p. 662.

60. Sanhedrin 95b–96a; Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 19.35–37; ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 32.21. Sennacherib brought severe punishment upon himself by committing eight grievous sins. These were: Neglecting justice, idolatry, unchastity, bloodshed, desecration of the “Name”, employment of obscene language, pride, and slander. These eight sins caused the doom of the generation of the flood, of the generation of the builders of the tower, of the inhabitants of the sinful cities, of Pharaoh, and of Nebuchadnezzar. See ER 15, 74. Arrogance is punished with “death by fire”, as may be seen from what befell the generation of the flood (compare with pp. 138, 144), Pharaoh (comp. Exod. 5.2 and 9.23–24), Sisera (compare with text on p. 868), Sennacherib (on his arrogance, see Is. 10.8, seq.); Nebuchadnezzar (comp. Dan. 3.15 and 22). The same punishment will be inflicted upon the “wicked kingdom” in the days to come. See WR 7.6; Tan. B. III, 13; Tan. Zaw 2; Tehillim 11, 100; Aggadat Bereshit 1.1–2. Comp. also Sanhedrin 94a–94b, which reads: Sennacherib, who instructed his messenger (Rab-shakeh) to utter blasphemies against God, was punished through a messenger of God (the angel); Pharaoh who uttered blasphemies himself was punished by God Himself. Sennacherib represents here his people who were slain by the angel. Comp. also note 55 (end).

61. Tosefta-Targum 2 Kings 19.35–37, where ומינהון must be read instead of והינהון. On the pious descendants of Sennacherib’s sons, see also Gittin 57a; Sanhedrin 96b; Tan. Wa-Yakhel 8. Compare further with p. 158, footnote 72. Shemaiah and Abtalion are said to have been kings of Baalbek, and this seems to be connected with the legend about their descent from Sennacherib; comp. ps.-Hippolytus 705; comp. note 103. On the graves of Sennacherib’s sons, see Ozar Tob, 38.

MIRACLES WROUGHT FOR HEZEKIAH

The destruction of the Assyrian host delivered Hezekiah from an inner as well as an outer enemy, for he had opponents in Jerusalem, among them the high priest Shebnah.<sup>62</sup> Shebnah had a more numerous following in the city than the king himself,<sup>63</sup> and they and their leader had favored peace with Sennacherib. Supported by Joah, another influential personage, Shebnah had fastened a letter to a dart, and shot the dart into the Assyrian camp. The contents of the letter were: “We and the whole people of Israel wish to conclude peace with thee, but Hezekiah and Isaiah will not permit it.”<sup>64</sup> Shebnah’s influence was so powerful that Hezekiah began to show signs of yielding. Had it not been for the prophet Isaiah, the king would have submitted to Sennacherib’s demands.

Shebnah’s treachery and his other sins did not go unpunished. When he and his band of adherents left Jerusalem to join the Assyrians, the angel Gabriel closed the gate as soon as Shebnah had passed beyond it, and so he was separated from his followers. To the inquiry of Sennacherib about the many sympathizers he had written of, he could give no reply but that they had changed their mind. The Assyrian king thought Shebnah had made sport of him. He, therefore, ordered his attendants to bore a hole through his heels, tie him to the tail of a horse by them, and spur the horse on to run until Shebnah was dragged to death.<sup>65</sup>

The unexpected victory won by Hezekiah over the Assyrians, to whom the kingdom of Samaria had fallen a prey but a short time before, showed how wrong they had been who had mocked at Hezekiah for his frugal ways. A king whose meal consisted of a handful of vegetables could hardly be called a dignified ruler, they had said. These critics would gladly have seen his kingdom pass into the hands of Pekah, the king of Samaria, whose dessert, to speak of nothing else, consisted of forty seim of young pigeons.<sup>66</sup>

In view of all the wonders God had done for him, it was unpardonable that Hezekiah did not feel himself prompted at least to sing a song of praise to God. Indeed, when the prophet Isaiah urged him to it, he refused, saying that the study of the Torah, to which he devoted himself with assiduous zeal, was a substitute for direct expressions of gratitude. Besides, he thought God's miracles would become known to the world without action on his part,<sup>67</sup> in such ways as these: After the destruction of the Assyrian army, when the Jews searched the abandoned camps, they found Pharaoh the king of Egypt and the Ethiopian king Tirhakah. These kings had hastened to the aid of Hezekiah, and the Assyrians had taken them captive and clapped them in irons, in which they were languishing when the Jews came upon them. Liberated by Hezekiah, the two rulers returned to their respective realms, spreading the report of the greatness of God everywhere. And again, all the vassal troops in Sennacherib's army, set free by Hezekiah, accepted the Jewish faith, and on their way home they proclaimed the kingdom of God in Egypt and in many other lands.<sup>68</sup>

By failing in gratitude Hezekiah lost a great opportunity. The Divine plan had been to make Hezekiah the Messiah, and Sennacherib was to be Gog and Magog. Justice opposed this plan, addressing God thus: "O Lord of the world! David, king of Israel, who sang so many songs and hymns of praise to Thee, him Thou didst not make the Messiah, and now Thou wouldst confer the distinction upon Hezekiah, who has no word of praise for Thee in spite of the manifold wonders Thou hast wrought for him?" Then the earth appeared before God, and said: "Lord of the world! I will sing Thee a song in place of this righteous man; make him to be the Messiah," and the earth forthwith intoned a song of praise. Likewise spake the Prince of the World:<sup>69</sup> "Lord of the world! Do the will of this righteous man." But a voice from heaven announced: "This is my secret, this is my secret." And again, when the prophet exclaimed sorrowfully, "Woe is me! How long, O Lord, how long!" the voice replied: "The time of the Messiah will arrive when the 'treacherous dealers and the treacherous dealers' shall have come."<sup>70</sup>

The sin committed by Hezekiah asleep, he had to atone for awake. If he refused to devote a song of praise to God for his escape from the Assyrian peril, he could not refrain from doing it after his recovery from the dangerous sickness that befell him.<sup>71</sup> This sickness was a punishment for another sin beside ingratitude. He had "peeled off" the gold from the Temple, and sent it to the king of the Assyrians; therefore the disease that afflicted him caused his skin to "peel off".<sup>72</sup> Moreover, this malady of Hezekiah's was brought upon him by God, to afford an opportunity for the king and the prophet Isaiah to come close to each other. The two had had a dispute on a point of etiquette.<sup>73</sup> The king adduced as a precedent the action of Elijah, who "went to show himself unto Ahab", and demanded that Isaiah, too, should appear before him. The prophet, on the other hand, modelled his conduct after Elisha's, who permitted the kings of Israel, and Judah, and Edom, to come to him. But God settled the dispute by afflicting Hezekiah with sickness, and then He bade Isaiah go to the king and pay the visit due to the sick. The prophet did the bidding of God. When he appeared in the presence of the ailing king, he said: "Set thine house in order, for thou wilt die in this world and not live in the next"—a fate which Hezekiah incurred because he had failed to take unto himself a wife and bring forth posterity. The king's defense, that he had preferred a celibate's life because he had seen in the holy spirit that he was destined to have impious children, the prophet did not consider valid. He rebutted it with the words: "Why dost thou concern thyself with the secrets of the All-Merciful? Thou hast but to do thy duty. God will do whatsoever it pleases Him." Thereupon Hezekiah asked the daughter of the prophet in marriage, saying: "Perchance my merits joined to thine will cause my children to be virtuous." But Isaiah rejected the proposal of marriage, because he knew that the decree of God ordaining the king's death was unalterable. Whereupon the king: "Thou son of Amoz, bring thy prophecy to an end, and go hence! For thus has it been transmitted to me from the house of my ancestor:<sup>74</sup> Even if a sharp sword rests at the very throat of a man, he may yet not refrain from uttering a prayer for mercy."<sup>75</sup>

And the king was right. Though death had been decreed against him, his prayer averted it. In his prayer he supplicated God to keep him alive for the sake of the merits of his ancestors, who had built the Temple and brought many proselytes into the Jewish fold, and for the sake of his own merits, for, he said, "I searched out all the two hundred and forty-eight members of my body which Thou didst give me, and I found none which I had used in a manner contrary to Thy will."<sup>76</sup>

His prayer was heard. God added fifteen years to his life, but He made him understand very clearly, that he owed the mercy solely to the merits of David, not at all to his own, as Hezekiah fondly believed.<sup>77</sup> Before Isaiah left the court of the palace, God instructed him to return to the king, and announce his recovery to him. Isaiah feared lest Hezekiah should place little trust in his words, as he had but a short while before predicted his swiftly approaching end. But God reassured the prophet. In his modesty and piety, the king would harbor no doubt derogatory to the prophet's trustworthiness.<sup>78</sup> The remedy employed by Isaiah, a cake of figs applied to the boil, increased the wonder of Hezekiah's recovery, for it was apt to aggravate the malady rather than alleviate it.<sup>79</sup>

A number of miracles besides were connected with the recovery of Hezekiah. In itself it was remarkable, as being the first case of a recovery on record. Previously illness had been inevitably followed by death. Before he had fallen sick, Hezekiah himself had implored God to change this order of nature. He held that sickness followed by restoration to health would induce men to do penance. God had replied: "Thou art right, and the new order shall be begun with thee."<sup>80</sup> Furthermore, the day of Hezekiah's recovery was marked by the great miracle that the sun shone ten hours longer than its wonted time. The remotest lands were amazed thereat, and Baladan, the ruler of Babylon, was prompted by it to send an embassy to Hezekiah, which was to carry his felicitations to the Jewish king upon his recovery. Baladan, it should be said by the way, was not the real king of Babylon. The throne was occupied by his father, whose face had changed into that of a dog. Therefore the son had to administer the affairs of state, and he was known by his father's name as well as his own.<sup>81</sup> This Baladan was in the habit of dining at noon, and then he took a nap until three o'clock of the afternoon. On the day of Hezekiah's recovery, when he awoke from his sleep, and saw the sun overhead, he was on the point of having his guards executed, because he thought they had permitted him to sleep a whole afternoon and the night following it. He desisted only when he was informed of Hezekiah's miraculous recovery, and realized that the God of Hezekiah was greater than his own god, the sun.<sup>82</sup> He at once set about sending greetings to the Jewish king. His letter read as follows: "Peace be with Hezekiah, peace with his great God, and peace with Jerusalem." After the letter was dispatched, it occurred to Baladan that it had not been composed properly. Mention of Hezekiah had been made before mention of God. He had the messengers called back, and ordered another letter to be written, in which the oversight was made good. As a reward for his punctiliousness, three of his descendants, Nebuchadnezzar, Evil-merodach, and Belshazzar, were appointed by God to be world monarchs. God said: "Thou didst arise from thy throne, and didst take three steps to do Me honor, by having thy letter rewritten, therefore will I grant thee three descendants who shall be known from one end of the world to the other."<sup>83</sup>

The embassy sent by the Babylonian monarch was an act of homage to God for his miracle-working power. Hezekiah, however, took it to be an act of homage toward himself, and it had the effect of making him arrogant. Not only did he eat and drink with the heathen who made up the embassy, but also, in his haughtiness of mind, he displayed before them all the treasures which he had captured from Sennacherib, and many other curiosities besides, among them magnetic iron, a peculiar sort of ivory, and honey as solid as stone.

What was worse, he had his wife partake of the meal in honor of the embassy, and, most heinous crime of all,<sup>84</sup> he opened the holy Ark, and pointing to the tables of the law within it, said to the heathen: "With the help of these we undertake wars and win victories."<sup>85</sup> God sent Isaiah to reproach Hezekiah for these acts. The king, instead of confessing his wrong at once, answered the prophet haughtily.<sup>86</sup> Then Isaiah announced to him that the treasures taken from Sennacherib<sup>87</sup> would revert to Babylon some time in the future, and his descendants, Daniel and the three companions of Daniel, would serve the Babylonian ruler as eunuchs.<sup>88</sup>

Despite his pride in this case, Hezekiah was one of the most pious kings of Judah. Especially he is deserving of praise for his efforts to have Hebrew literature put into writing, for it was Hezekiah who had copies made of the books of Isaiah, Ecclesiastes, Song of Songs, and Proverbs.<sup>89</sup> On the other hand, he had concealed the books containing medical remedies.<sup>90</sup>

Great was the mourning over him at his death. No less than thirty-six thousand men with bared shoulders marched before his bier, and, rarer distinction still, a scroll of the law was laid upon his bier, for it was said: "He who rests in this bier, has fulfilled all ordained in this book."<sup>91</sup> He was buried next to David and Solomon.<sup>92</sup>

---

62. WR 5.5, which gives also the different view that Shebnah was only an Amarkol (high Temple official). The Jewish teachers of Eusebius and Jerome shared the view given in the text. Comp. the commentaries of these Church Fathers on Is. 22.15.

63. Sanhedrin 26a; Jerome on Is. 22.15. The latter maintains that Shebnah delivered into the hands of Sennacherib the entire city of Jerusalem with the exception of Mount Zion.

64. Sanhedrin 26a–26b; WR 5.5 and 17.3; Tehillim 11, 98–99; Zohar III, 199b. In Sanhedrin it is also said that Shebnah was the most prominent scholar of his time, being superior even to Hezekiah in his learning; but he was of a very lascivious character, and for his evil deeds he was punished with leprosy.

65. Sanhedrin 26a–26b. On being dragged to death by horses, see also Ekah 5, 115. A different view concerning the course of this campaign is given in Seder 'Olam 23. Eight years after the capture of Samaria, Sennacherib undertook his campaign against Judea, being convinced that the punishment of Israel predicted by the prophets was meant for the entire nation including Judea. On his march to Judea he conquered the Moabites, Ammonites and Arabs, his former allies in the war against Samaria, and his general Rab-shakeh succeeded in persuading the party led by Shebnah to surrender to him voluntarily and to follow him to Babylon. Sennacherib was forced to stop his campaign against Hezekiah for a short time, as he had to move hurriedly against Ethiopia. Having conquered this "pearl of all countries", he returned to Judea. But before attacking Hezekiah, he sent his generals Tartan and Rab-saris to make him surrender voluntarily. Comp. also Ratner, notes 7–24. Opinions differ as to whether Sennacherib was a wise or a foolish king. See Sanhedrin 94a; Sifre D., 37; 2 ARN 20.43.

66. Sanhedrin 94b; PK 6, 59b–60a; PR 16, 82a; Mishle 13,74. According to Tosefta-Targum on Is. 7, 6, the "son of Tabeel" mentioned there is no other than Pekah; but according to Yerushalmi 'Abodah Zarah 1. 39a Tabeel means "idol". The haggadic interpretation of וְנָחַל in Tosefta-Targum Is. 8.6 is taken from PK, loc. cit.

67. Shir 4.8; Aggadat Shir 8, 45; Ekah, introduction, 30, and the parallel passages cited by Buber. On Hezekiah's refusal to sing a song of praise to God, see text on p. 1049 and text on p. 1080; on his great devotion to the study of the Torah, see Sanhedrin 20a; Mishle 28, 97; both versions of ARN 1, 2–3. Comp. further the references in note 59. The Midrashim attempt to explain in detail the nature of Hezekiah's activity referred to in Prov. 28.1. Comp. note 89. When Rabban Johanan b. Zakkai saw his end drawing nigh, he said: "Prepare a chair for Hezekiah, king of Judah." See Yerushalmi Sotah 9, 24c; 'Abodah Zarah 3, 42c. This great Rabbi, whose life was devoted to the study of the Torah and to the spreading of the knowledge thereof among the people, expected to be met at his death by the pious king, whose life was devoted to the same ideals as his.

68. Seder 'Olam 23; Menahot 109b; Shir 4.8. In the last passage it is stated that Hezekiah thought that the miracle of the standstill of the sun (compare with p. 1050) would proclaim the omnipotence of God Almighty more than he could do by words of praise and song.

69. According to the later mystics, the "prince of the world" is identical with Metatron. Comp. Index, s. v.

70. Sanhedrin 94a; Shir 4.8. The Church Fathers Justin Martyr (Dialogue, 33) and Tertullian (Adversus Marcionem, 5.9) maintain that the Jews interpret Ps. 110 as referring to Hezekiah. As to the haggadic explanation of the "closed" מ in לְמַרְבֵּה (Is. 6.6), see also the quotation from an unknown Midrash in Kimhi, ad loc., according to which this "closed" מ in the middle of the word, and the open one at the end of הַמ (Nehem. 2.14) contain an allusion to the time of the advent of the Messiah. It is worthy of note in this connection that the old sources knew nothing of the explanation of Is. 9.5 as given by the medieval commentators, according to whom "the child" mentioned here (i. e., Hezekiah) was called "prince of peace" by the wonderful Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father. The Talmud and Midrash explicitly state that the names in this verse are those of the child to whom the "names of God were given", though the authorities differ as to whether Hezekiah or the Messiah is meant by this "child". See Sanhedrin 94a; PRK (Schönblum's edition, 39a; Grünhut's edition 82. Here the child is identified with the Messiah); Ma'aseh Torah 100 (Child = the Messiah; the text is not quite correct); PR 46, 188a; Ruth R. 3.15; Makiri Is. ad loc., where the text of PR reads somewhat differently. As to the names of God borne by men, see Baba Batra 75b; Sifre D., 355 (אֵין כֹּהֵל); BR 79 (end); footnote 282 on p. 305. It is not quite sure whether מֶן קִדְּם in Targum on Is., loc. cit., is not a later "emendation" prompted by anti-Christian tendency. Comp. Aptowitzer, Ha-Zofeh, I, 81–82.

71. Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 243 (end) on 2 Kings 20; Eusebius and Jerome on Is. 39.1; Ephraem I, 560. Seder 'Olam 23, on the other hand, maintains that the downfall of Sennacherib took place on the very same day on which Hezekiah became ill. Comp. also Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 424 on Is. 38 (end).

72. Aggadat Shir 1, 12; Pereq R. Yoshiyyahu, 133.

73. As to the point of etiquette, see Tosefta Horayyot 2.9, and Yerushalmi 3, 48b. Compare also with p. 876, with regard to the relation between Phinehas and Jephthah.

74. The allusion is to Jehoshaphat; compare with p. 987 and note 30 appertaining thereto.

75. Berakot 10a; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28b (top); Hezekiah quotes his "grandfather" David as authority for the view that prayer, alms, and repentance ward off evil decreed against one, even after it had been announced to him in a vision or dream; Koheleth 5.9; Baraita di-Yeshu'a 45a; Zohar I, 13a and 66a; ER 8, 46. In the last source Hezekiah's illness is said to have been the punishment for unseemly language used by him in his prayer of deliverance from the hands of Sennacherib. It is difficult to tell to what words in Hezekiah's prayer (as given in 2 Kings 19.15–19) the Haggadah objected.

76. Yerushalmi Berakot 4, 8b; Babli 10b; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28b–28c; Koheleth 5.6. This prayer of Hezekiah was considered a model as far as its formal aspect is concerned; comp. ER 8, 46 (as to the correct reading, see Rokeah, 325, and רִאשִׁי"ה 79; Aptowitzer's edition, 53); Berakot 27b. On the idea that the members of the human body were created to perform the divine commandments, see PK 12, 101a; footnote 210 on p. 603. Comp. Midrash Tannaim 15.

77. Berakot 10b. Comp. also Koheleth 1.1. As to the question whether one's good deeds could prolong one's life beyond the space of time set for him, see Yebamot 49b–50a; Koheleth 3.2; Tosefta Horayyot 1.15.

78. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28b; Koheleth 5.6. The last passage contains the additional remark of the king addressed to the prophet, which reads: "Did I not tell thee from the beginning that I would not be guided by thy advice but by the advice of my grandfather?" Comp. note 74.

79. Mekilta Wa-Yassa' 1, 45b, and Beshallah 5, 32a; Mekilta RS 73; Jerome on Is. 39.1. Compare with pp. 566–567. The Rabbis find some difficulty in explaining the demand of the king for a sign (Is. 38.22), as it is forbidden to ask signs of a prophet; comp. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 11, 30c. During the king's illness Isaiah made the scholars study at the entrance of the royal palace to prevent the angel of death from entering it; 'Erubin 26a, and compare with p. 938.

80. BR 65.9; PRE 52 (which reads: "this was the last of the seven great miracles"; compare with p. 400, and text on p. 1030).

81. Sanhedrin 96a; Yerushalmi Yebamot 2, 4a; ER 8, 47; Zohar I, 6b; PRE 52 (with some modifications). At the funeral of Ahaz the sun set ten hours before its time (compare with p. 1045), and at Hezekiah's recovery from his illness the sun recovered the lost hours. See Sanhedrin, loc. cit., and somewhat different in PRE, loc. cit. Comp. also Hippolytus, In Isaiam 630–631; Brüll in Bet ha-Midrash (Hebrew periodical) II, 148.

82. This is a reminiscence of Merodach as sun god. Baladan's dog-face is very likely a Jewish "explanation" of the dogs seen on the Assyrian-Babylonian monuments in the company of Merodach. Comp. Roscher's Lexicon der Mythologie, II, 2371.

83. PK 2, 13a–14a; Shir 3.4; Esther R. 1.9; Tan. Ki-Tissa 5; ER 20, 115. Another version of this legend is given in text on p. 1072, according to which Nebuchadnezzar was the secretary to Merodach-Baladan, not his son. Jerome on Is. 39.1 agrees with the Palestinian Midrashim in making Nebuchadnezzar the son of Merodach.

84. Sanhedrin 104a; Shir 3.4 (on the text, see Sachs, in introduction to Sefer Tagin 15, seq.); ER 8, 47. Comp. also Aggadat Shir 1, 26.

85. PRE 52; Targum 2 Chron. 32.31. As to the tables compare with p. 794.

86. BR 19.11; BaR 20.6; Zohar III, 200a. The proper answer for the king to give to Isaiah would have been: "O prophet of God, thou surely knowest who the men are and what they want." Hezekiah like Adam (Gen. 3.9–10), Cain (ibid. 4.9), and Balaam (Num. 22.9), on similar occasions, was tested and found wanting. Compare with p. 763 and text on p. 1162, bottom.

87. As to the origin of these treasures, see text on p. 397.

88. Sanhedrin 93b; Origen, Matth. 15.5; Jerome on Is. 39.7.

89. Baba Batra 15a; both versions of ARN 1, 2–3; Mishle 25, 96–97. In the last two sources it is stated that the "men of Hezekiah" (Prov. 25.1) were very careful before they decided a point of law, and as a reward long life was granted to them. The Haggadah very likely identifies the "men of Hezekiah" with the members of the Great Assembly (compare with p. 1126), and hence the statement concerning their long life. Opinions in the above sources differ as to the exact nature of the work done by the "men of Hezekiah". According to some, they "wrote down" the book of Isaiah and the three books of Solomon, whereas others maintain that they withdrew from public use the books of Solomon, because they were of the opinion that these books were not of a holy nature, and they remained "hidden" until the time of the Great Assembly. The third opinion is that these men explained the words of Solomon (ARN 1, 2: לא שהעתיקו אלא שפירשו), and owing to their explanation these books were admitted into the Canon. Hezekiah undertook six reforms; three were approved by the scholars of his time, and three were rejected. He "hid" the "books of medicine", broke in pieces the brazen serpent which Moses had made, and buried his father as though he had been a pauper (compare with p. 1045). All this he did with the approval of the scholars. On the other hand, they did not approve of his stopping the upper spring of the waters of Gihon, of his scraping off the gold from the Temple (compare with p. 1049), and of his declaring a leap year by adding a second month of Nisan. See Berakot 10b; Pesahim 56a (in the editions it is given wrongly as Mishnah); Yerushalmi 9, 36c–36d; Nedarim 6, 40a; Sanhedrin 12a–12b; Tosefta 2, 10–11; Yerushalmi 1, 18d (different opinions are given here as to the nature of the error committed by Hezekiah in the intercalation of the year mentioned in 2 Chron. 30.2); ARN 1, 11–12; PRE 9. Comp. also 'Arakin 10b; Tosefta 2.6; Yerushalmi Sukkah 5, 55d. On the breaking in pieces of the brazen serpent, see also Hullin 6b; Yerushalmi Dammai 2, 22c; see also the following note. On the "books of medicine", see the following note.

90. Berakot 10b; Pesahim 56a; Yerushalmi 9, 36c–36d (here: "tablets of medical remedies"); Nedarim 6, 40a; Sanhedrin 1, 18d. Comp. references at the end of preceding note. It is not explicitly stated in the rabbinical writings that these books had Solomon as their author, or that the people ascribed them to him. The Rabbis were very likely silent on this fact to avoid the impression of an implied unfavorable criticism on the wise king. See Josephus, Antiqui., VIII, 5; Maimonides, Mishnah Commentary on Pesahim 4 (end); Schürer, Geschichte, III, 413, 418–419; Chajes, Marcus Studien, 37; Grünbaum, Gesammelte Aufsätze 25; Azulai in his commentary on ARN 2. The last-named authority quotes from a MS. of R. Eleazar of Worms the statement that until the days of Hezekiah a list of the healing springs was circulated among the people. In case of illness they did not pray to God for help, but made use of the healing springs. For this reason Hezekiah hid this list, which had been transmitted from generation to generation from the time of Noah. An attempt is obviously made here to connect the "stopping of the spring of Gihon" (comp. 2 Chron. 32.30, and the preceding note) with the hiding of the medical remedies. The breaking in pieces of the brazen altar by Hezekiah was due to the same reason as the hiding of the medical books. The "hissing of the brazen serpent" used to heal all sick people of Jerusalem, and the cure was so certain that in case of illness they never prayed to God for help. Hezekiah therefore broke the brazen serpent in pieces. Until his time this serpent was attached to Solomon's throne. See Kisse we-Ippodromon, 35. Compare also footnote 74 on p. 157.

91. Baba Kamma 17a; Ekah, introduction, 25. Compare with p. 988.

92. Baba Kamma 16b; ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 32.33. This pious king bore the name Hezekiah because he had been made strong by God (חזק "was strong"), and because he brought Israel nigh unto God. He had eight other names (comp. note 70), and his great adversary Sennacherib (i. e., he who uttered blasphemous words against God; comp. note 60) also had eight other names; these are: Tiglath-pileser, Palnesser, Shalmanesser, Pul, Sargon, Os-nappar, Rabba-yakkira ("the great and honored"). See Sanhedrin 94a; Jerome on Is. 20.1 and 36.1. On Sennacherib's eight names, see Einhorn in the supplement to his commentary on Ruth R.

MANASSEH

Hezekiah had finally yielded to the admonitions of Isaiah, and had taken a wife unto himself;<sup>93</sup> the daughter of the prophet. But he entered upon marriage with a heavy heart. His prophetic spirit foretold to him that the impiousness of the sons he would beget would make their death to be preferable to their life. These fears were confirmed all too soon. His two sons, Rabshakeh and Manasseh, showed their complete unlikeness to their parents in early childhood. Once, when Hezekiah was carrying his two little ones on his shoulders to the Bet ha-Midrash, he overheard their conversation. The one said: "Our father's bald head might do for frying fish." The other rejoined: "It would do well for offering sacrifices to idols." Enraged by these words, Hezekiah let his sons slip from his shoulders. Rabshakeh was killed by the fall, but Manasseh escaped unhurt.<sup>94</sup> Better had it been if Manasseh had shared his brother's untimely fate. He was spared for naught but murder, idolatry, and other abominable atrocities.<sup>95</sup>

After Hezekiah had departed this life, Manasseh ceased to serve the God of his father. He did whatever his evil imagination prompted. The altar was destroyed, and in the inner space of the Temple he set up an idol<sup>96</sup> with four faces, copied from the four figures on the throne of God. It was so placed that from whatever direction one entered the Temple, a face of the idol confronted him.<sup>97</sup>

As Manasseh was sacrilegious toward God, he was malevolent toward his fellows. He had fashioned an image so large that it required a thousand men to carry it. Daily a new force was employed on this task, because Manasseh had each set of porters killed off at the end of the day's work. All his acts were calculated to cast contempt upon Judaism and its tenets. It did not satisfy his evil desire to obliterate the name of God from the Holy Scriptures;<sup>98</sup> he went so far as to deliver public lectures whose burden was to ridicule the Torah.<sup>99</sup> Isaiah and the other prophets, Micah, Joel, and Habakkuk,<sup>100</sup> left Jerusalem and repaired to a mountain in the desert, that they might be spared the sight of the abominations practiced by the king. Their abiding-place was disclosed to the king. A Samaritan, a descendant of the false prophet Zedekiah, had taken refuge in Jerusalem after the destruction of the Temple. But he did not remain there long; charges were made against him before the pious king Hezekiah, and he withdrew to Bethlehem, where he gathered hangers-on about him. This Samaritan it was who traced the prophets to their retreat, and lodged accusations against them before Manasseh.<sup>101</sup> The impious king sat in judgment on Isaiah, and condemned him to death. The indictment against him was that his prophecies contained teachings in contradiction with the law of Moses. God said unto Moses: "Thou canst not see My face; for man shall not see Me and live"; while Isaiah said: "I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up." Again, Isaiah compared the princes of Israel and the people with the impious inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah, and he prophesied the downfall of Jerusalem and the destruction of the Temple.<sup>102</sup> The prophet offered no explanation. He was convinced of the uselessness of defending himself, and he preferred Manasseh should act from ignorance rather than from wickedness. However, he fled for safety. When he heard the royal bailiffs in pursuit of him, he pronounced the Name of God, and a cedar-tree swallowed him up. The king ordered the tree to be sawn in pieces. When the saw was applied to the portion of the bark under which the mouth of Isaiah lay concealed, he died. His mouth was the only vulnerable part of his body, because at the time when he was called to his prophetic mission,<sup>103</sup> it had made use of the contemptuous words “a people of unclean lips”, regarding Israel. Isaiah died at the age of one hundred and twenty years,<sup>104</sup> by the hands of his own grandchild.<sup>105</sup>

God is long-suffering, but in the end Manasseh received the deserved punishment for his sins and crimes. In the twenty-second year of his rulership, the Assyrians came and carried him off to Babylon in fetters, him together with the old Danite idol, Micah's image.<sup>106</sup> In Babylonia, the king was put into an oven which was heated from below. Finding himself in this extremity, Manasseh began to call upon god after god to help him out of his straits. As this proved inefficacious, he resorted to other means. “I remember,” he said, “my father taught me the verse: ‘When thou art in tribulation, if in the latter days thou shalt return to the Lord thy God, and hearken unto His voice, He will not fail thee.’ Now I cry to God. If he inclines His ear unto me, well and good; if not, then all kinds of gods are alike.” The angels stopped up the windows of heaven, that the prayer of Manasseh might not ascend to God, and they said: “Lord of the world! Art Thou willing to give gracious hearing to one who has paid worship to idols, and set up an idol in the Temple?” “If I did not accept the penance of this man,” replied God, “I should be closing the door in the face of all repentant sinners.” God made a small opening under the Throne of His Glory, and received the prayer of Manasseh through it. Suddenly a wind arose, and carried Manasseh back to Jerusalem.<sup>107</sup> His return to God not only helped him in his distress, but also brought him pardon for all his sins, so that not even his share in the future world was withdrawn from him.<sup>108</sup>

The people of this time were attracted to idolatry with so irresistible a force that the vast learning of Manasseh, who knew fifty-two different interpretations of the Book of Leviticus,<sup>109</sup> did not give him enough moral strength to withstand its influence. Rab Ashi, the famous compiler of the Talmud, once announced a lecture on Manasseh with the words: “To-morrow I shall speak about our colleague Manasseh.” At night the king appeared to Ashi in a dream, and put a ritual question to him, which the Rabbi could not answer. Manasseh told him the solution, and Ashi, in amazement at the king's scholarship, asked why one so erudite had served idols. Manasseh's reply was: “Hadst thou lived at my time, thou wouldst have caught hold of the hem of my garment and run after me.”<sup>110</sup>

Amon, the son of Manasseh, surpassed his father in wickedness. He was in the habit of saying: “My father was a sinner from early childhood, and in his old age he did penance. I shall do the same. First I shall satisfy the desires of my heart, and afterward I shall return to God.”<sup>111</sup> Indeed, he was guilty of more grievous sins than his predecessor; he burned the Torah; under him the place of the altar was covered with spiderwebs; and, as though of purpose to set at naught the Jewish religion, he committed the worst sort of incest, a degree more heinous than his father's crime of a similar nature.<sup>112</sup> Thus he executed the first half of his maxim literally. For repentance, however, he was given no time; death cut him off in the fulness of his sinful ways.

93. On Hezekiah's original decision to remain unmarried, compare with p. 1049.

94. Berakot 10a; but not in our editions; the passage is supplied by Rabinovitz, Variae Lectiones, from the Munich MS. and old sources; comp. also Gaster, Exempla, 234. Jerome on Is. quotes the Jewish tradition, according to which Isaiah was the father-in-law of Manasseh. This is very likely a slip for the father-in-law of Hezekiah and grandfather of Manasseh, for not only Babli, but also Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28c, declares that Manasseh was the grandson of the prophet. As for Rab-shakeh, it is only said of him, in Sanhedrin 60a, that he was an "apostate". This view is shared by Ephraem, while Jerome on Is. 36.1, following a Jewish tradition, makes him a son of Isaiah. Jerome was possibly inaccurate in reporting the tradition; he may have meant to say a grandson instead of a son. In this case his tradition would tally with that in Berakot, loc. cit. It is, however, hard to understand the statement of the Talmud that Rab-shakeh died in his childhood, without attempting to reconcile this view with the biblical account. It would not do to assume that Rab-shakeh, the son of Hezekiah mentioned in the Talmud, is not identical with the bearer of this name in the Bible, for Targum on Eccles. 10.9, following the Talmud, explicitly states that the Rab-shakeh mentioned in the Bible was the brother of Manasseh. The emphasis laid in the Ascension of Isaiah 1.1 upon the fact that shortly before his death Hezekiah had one son only is perhaps an allusion to the rabbinic legend that his other son (Rab-shakeh) died as a child; comp. also note 54 (end). Quite obvious is the connection between this pseudepigraphic work and the Talmud with regard to Hezekiah's intention to kill Manasseh when he was informed by Isaiah of the wicked deeds his son would commit one day. He was, however, prevented by the prophet from carrying out his intention; for the latter said: "Sammael's plan concerning Manasseh is determined upon, and words will not avail thee." These words of Isaiah remind one of the talmudic passage cited above, Berakot 10a, where the prophet is said to have refused to give his daughter in marriage to the king, remarking: "The decree is decided upon" (that Manasseh would be wicked); compare with p. 1049. The text of Ascension of Isaiah, as given by (Ps-) Chrysostomus, Opus Imperfectum in Mattheum, homily I, shows still closer resemblance between the Manasseh legend as given in this pseudepigraphic work and in the Talmud.

95. Ascension of Isaiah 2.5 and Apocalypse of Baruch 64.3, as well as the rabbinic sources (comp. the references given in the following four notes), contain detailed descriptions of the wicked deeds of this king. His name Manasseh is derived, in Ascension of Isaiah 2, 1, as well as in Sanhedrin 12b, from nasha "he forgot": he forgot his God and his pious father. On the act of incest committed by him, see note 112.

96. Sanhedrin 103b. This idol was made by his grandfather Ahaz, who did not dare to set it up in the inner space of the Temple, but kept it in the upper chamber over the holy of holies. When on the seventeenth of Tammuz the idol was set up by Manasseh (Ta'anit 28b; Yerushalmi 4, 68d, top), the prophet Isaiah addressed the people as follows: "Thus saith the Lord: The heaven is My throne, and the earth is My footstool; why then do ye glory in the Temple built by you? On account of four sins I no longer take pleasure in this house, and have decreed to have it destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, and ye shall go into captivity." These were the last words of Isaiah (the last chapter of his book begins: "The heaven is My throne, etc."), as he was forthwith killed by Manasseh, who became enraged at hearing about the destruction of the Temple and Israel's captivity predicted by Isaiah. See Tosefta-Targum on Is. 66.1; PR 4, 14a. Comp. Zunz, Gottesdienstliche Vorträge, 78; Bacher, Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, XXVIII, 16–17; Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia I, 81. The text of this Tosefta-Targum was printed from a MS., and privately distributed by Christian D. Ginsburg on the occasion of the International Congress of Orientalists held in Rome, 1898. That the last chapter of Is. contains the words of the prophet uttered at the time when Manasseh set up the idol in the Temple is also stated in EZ 9, 188. On the view that Isaiah met his death at the hands of Manasseh, see note 103.

97. DR 2.20; Sanhedrin 103b; EZ 9, 188; Peshitta 2 Chron. 33.7. Comp. also Apocalypse of Baruch 64.3, which reads: And he (Manasseh) made an image with five faces, four of which looked to the four winds, and the fifth was on the top of the image, as an adversary to the zeal of the Mighty One. Similarly it is stated in Sanhedrin, loc. cit.: Manasseh at first fashioned one face for it; then four (four additional ones, or three additional ones?), that the Shekinah might see and be provoked. The Talmud, as well as the Apocalypse of Baruch, connects סמל in 2 Chron. 23.7 with סמל הקנאה "image of jealousy" in Ezek. 8.5. A very obscure statement concerning the image set up by Manasseh is found in Ta'anit 28b–29a, and reads as follows: Manasseh set up two images in the Temple; but one fell down, and broke the arm of the other in its falling. On the latter this inscription was found: "Thou desirest to bring about the destruction of this house (the Temple) and I am ready to give thee my assistance." The setting up of the image in the Temple by Manasseh was the cause of Israel's captivity into Babylon. See Gittin 7a; Apocalypse of Baruch 64.4.

98. Sanhedrin 103b. Apocalypse of Baruch 64.2–3 describes Manasseh's sins as follows: He slew the righteous, and wrested judgement, shed the blood of the innocent, and wedded women he violently polluted (this accusation is made in rabbinic sources against Jehoiaqim; compare with p. 985), he overturned the altars, destroyed their offerings and drove forth their priests, lest they should minister in the sanctuary. And to such a degree did Manasseh's impiety increase, that he removed the praise of the Most High from the sanctuary. The last statement wishes to convey that on account of Manasseh's sins the Shekinah left the sanctuary long before the destruction of the Temple. This agrees with the view of the Rabbis, according to which the Shekinah after leaving the sanctuary had stopped at various stations, until, after the capture of the city, it finally ascended to heaven, its original abode. Comp. the different versions of the Haggadah concerning the "ten stations of the Shekinah" in Rosh ha-Shanah 31a; PK 13, 114b–115a; ARN 34, 102; Ekah, introduction, 25; Aggadat Shir 5, 39; Makiri on Ps. 115, 200. The last passage agrees with Apocalypse of Baruch that the "first journey of the Shekinah" took place in Isaiah's time, when Manasseh set up the image in the Temple. Comp. also note 96. In Ascension of Isaiah 2.4–5 it is said of Manasseh: And he (Satan) made him (Manasseh) strong in apostatizing Israel and in the lawlessness which was spread abroad in Jerusalem. And witchcraft and magic increased, and divination and auguration, and fornication, and adultery, and the persecution of the righteous.

99. Sanhedrin 99b. On Manasseh's great mastery of the knowledge of the Torah, see the references cited in notes 109, 110.

100. According to Seder 'Olam 20, the prophets Joel, Nahum and Habakkuk lived in Manasseh's days. Here it is also stated that Micah was a younger contemporary of Isaiah. For other views concerning the times of the prophets, see Index, under the corresponding names. Josephus, Antiqui., IX, 11.3, makes Nahum a contemporary of king Jotham.

101. Ascension of Isaiah 2–3. This Samaritan is called Belchira or Belachora, which is very likely an opprobrious appellation formed of בעל "master" and חרי or rather חרע, "excrement"; comp. 'Abodah Z. 46b and Beelzebub (perhaps = בעל זבול). Tobiah the Canaanite and John of Anathoth are mentioned as the adherents of Belchira. In view of the fact that in Nehem. 3.35, seq., and 6.12. Tobiah the Ammonite appears not only as a great adversary of the Jews, but also as the supporter of a false prophet, it is very likely that we should read Ammonite instead of Canaanite in the pseudepigraphic work. The faulty reading was caused by the "Canaanite" Zedekiah mentioned a few lines below. John of Anathoth looks like a reminiscence of Jer. 28.1, where the false prophet Hananiah (= John) is mentioned. It is true that this one is described as hailing from Gibeon and not from Anathoth, but as he appears as the adversary of Jeremiah, who was a native of Anathoth, it was quite natural for the legend to make him a native of that city. Without much violence to the text, מגבעון in Jer., loc. cit., might be explained to refer to the father of Hananiah and not to Hananiah himself.

102. The first charge against Isaiah occurs in Ascension of Isaiah 3 (here it is Belchira who appears as the accuser against Isaiah and the other prophets); Yebamot 49b; Origen, In Jesajam, homily 1.5; Jerome on Is. 1.10; Paralipomena Jeremiae (near the end); ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 33.10. The second charge is found only in Ascension of Isaiah, loc. cit.; ps.-Jerome, loc. cit.; Jerome, loc. cit. The last-named gives as his authority the oral information communicated to him by Jews. Comp. also Tosefta-Targum on Is. 66.1, and particularly the version thereof published by David Ginsburg (see note 96). Yebamot, loc. cit., has the following two further contradictions between Moses and Isaiah. The former said: "For what great nation is there that hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is whenever we call upon Him?" (Deut. 4.7), while the latter said: "Call ye upon Him while He is near" (Is. 55.6). Moses further said: "The number of thy days I will fulfil" (Exod. 23.24), whereas Isaiah said to Hezekiah: "I will add unto thy days fifteen years." Comp. also Tosefta-Targum on Is. 16.1, and Jerome, Ad Damasum, I, 369. As to the "adding of years", see note 77.

103. Yebamot 49b; Sanhedrin 103b; Tosefta-Targum on 2 Kings 21.16, and Is. 66.1; PR 4.14; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28c. The three last-named Palestinian sources record the legend that Isaiah was swallowed up by a tree (in PR and Targum it is a carob-tree, in Yerushalmi it is a cedar-tree), which had to be sawed in pieces before Isaiah could be killed; but there is no trace in these sources of the legend in Babli that the prophet's mouth was the only vulnerable part of his body. According to Yerushalmi, Isaiah's hiding-place was discovered through the fringes of his garment which were not swallowed by the tree. It seems that the form of the legend as given in this source is not complete. It may be suggested that this legend had a statement that the prophet had once neglected to fulfil the commandment of Zizit, and as a punishment his hiding-place was betrayed by the "fringes" of his garment. Compare with p. 905, note 81. Isaiah's martyrdom is described in Ascension of Isaiah as follows: And he (Manasseh) sent and seized Isaiah. And he sawed him in sunder with a wood-saw. And when Isaiah was being sawn in sunder, Belchira (comp. note 101) stood up, accusing him, and all the false prophets stood up, laughing and rejoicing because of Isaiah.... And Belchira said to Isaiah: "Say: I have lied in all that I have spoken, and likewise the ways of Manasseh are good and right. And the ways also of Belchira and of his associates are good." And this he said to him when he began to be sawn in sunder. But the prophet refused to listen to the words of Belchira (comp. Yebamot, loc. cit. for the reason of Isaiah's refusal to defend himself against the accusation hurled at him), and while being sawn in sunder he neither cried aloud, nor wept, but his lips spoke with the Holy Spirit, until he was sawn in twain. That Isaiah, at the time of his martyrdom, conversed with the Holy Spirit is based on the haggadic interpretation of 2 Kings 17.9;

comp. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin, loc. cit., and PR, loc. cit. To the prophets who were with him before he was put to death he said: "Go ye to the region of Tyre and Zidon; as for me only has God mingled the cup."—The legend of Isaiah's martyrdom was very likely known to so early an authority as Josephus; comp. Antiqui., X, 3.1. It is generally assumed that in Hebrews 11.37 (ἐπρίσθησαν) allusion is made to the specific mode (being sawn in sunder) of Isaiah's martyrdom. In patristic literature there are many references to Isaiah's having been sawn in sunder; but as this legend was current among the Jews for centuries (comp. the sources quoted at the beginning of note as well as in previous note), it is not always certain whether the Church Fathers made use of the pseudepigraphic work Ascension of Isaiah (more correctly, the Martyrdom of Isaiah), or drew upon the oral traditions of the Jews. See Justin Martyr, Dialogue, 120; Tertullian, De Patientia, 14; Visio Pauli, 49; ps.-Hippolytus 705. The last-named author also states that Manasseh restored the city of Baalbek which Solomon had built. Comp. Pesahim 117a, where בכי very likely stands for בעל בכי "Baalbek". It is true Pesahim speaks of the "image fashioned by Micah" של מיכה פסלו as being located at Baalbek, but we find the wicked king mentioned in connection with this image. See Seder 'Olam 24, which reads: Manasseh was exiled to Babylon, and with him the image of Micah. Compare footnote 61 and p. 20, footnote 72. The Jewish sources contain nothing about the ascension of Isaiah, and accordingly the Jewish part of the Ascension of Isaiah is very likely limited to Isaiah's martyrdom, the rest being of Christian origin.

104. Aggadat Bereshit 14, 32. Here it is also stated that Isaiah, the greatest of the prophets (or one of the most prominent of the prophets), and Obadiah, the most insignificant of them, did not prophesy before they received permission from the Great Synedrin. They both prophesied in seventy-one tongues; compare with p. 1027, note 6. Isaiah was as great a prophet as Moses; PR 4, 14a. Compare with p. 612, note 242, and see also Baraita di-Yeshu'ah 45; Aggadat Bereshit, loc. cit.; footnote 242 on p. 611. According to a Jewish tradition found in ps.-Jerome, 1 Chron. 33.19, the prophet Hozai mentioned there is none else but Isaiah. The book of Amos, the father of Isaiah, is referred to in Ascension of Isaiah 4.22. Comp. note 25.

105. On the kinship between Isaiah and Manasseh, see note 94.

106. Seder 'Olam 24. Comp. Ratner, ad loc., and note 103.

107. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 28c; Babli 103a; PK 25, 162a–162b; MHG I, 113–114; DR 2.20; Ruth R. 2.14; Targum and ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 33.13; PRE 43; Abba Gorion 36. The "Prayer of Manasseh" offered while he was a prisoner in Babylon forms part of the Canon of the Greek Bible. On the oven, see the articles by Krauss and Nestle in Zeitschrift für die alttestamentliche Wissenschaft, XXII, 309, seq.; XXIII 326, seq. and 337 as well as Bacher, R. E. J., XLV, 291, seq.

108. Sanhedrin Mishnah 10 (11).1; ARN 35, 108; EZ 9, 189 (it is said here that Manasseh's repentance was accepted for the sake of the pious destined to be born of him); Aggadat Bereshit 9, 23. The apocryphal works the Prayer of Manasseh and Tobit 14.10 share this view favorable to Manasseh. On the other hand, the prevalent opinion in rabbinic literature is that Manasseh is one of the few Jews who lost their portion in the world to come; comp. Sanhedrin, loc. cit., and the references given in footnote 100 on p. 900, as well as Tan. B. III, 43; Tan. Mezora' 1; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 27a and 29b; Babli 102b–103a. Apocalypse of Baruch 64 agrees with this view, and maintains that Manasseh, though he prayed, did not really repent. Aggadat Bereshit, loc. cit., likewise speaks of Manasseh's prayer and words of repentance which were uttered "with lips of deceit". Comp. Sanhedrin 101b.

109. Sanhedrin 102b, Ahab and Jeroboam (the two other Jewish kings who, like Manasseh, lost their share in the world to come; comp. the references cited in preceding note) excelled Manasseh in learning; the former was able to interpret the Book of Leviticus in eighty-five ways, and the latter in one hundred and three. The "greater the scholar the stronger his evil inclination" is a favorite saying with the Rabbis; see Sukkah 52a (bottom). Compare also p. 988, footnote 34.

110. Sanhedrin 102b.

111. Constitutiones Apostolicae, II, 23, which is very likely based on a Jewish legend; comp. Yoma 8 (end), which reads: He who says: "I shall sin and then repent", no opportunity is given him for repentance. Compare footnote 27 on p. 891.

112. Sanhedrin 103a. The statement about the burning of the Torah by Amon is taken from Seder 'Olam 24, but here בער very likely means "swept away". He committed incest with his mother (not out of passion, but to defy God and the Torah). This is very likely due to a play on the word אִמּוֹן with אִם "mother". Of his father Manasseh it is said that he committed incest with his sister, and of Ahaz that he set aside the Jewish laws of marriage. Manasseh is further accused of having cut out the divine Name from the Scriptures. Comp. notes 40 and 95.

JOSIAH AND HIS SUCCESSORS

That the full measure of punishment was not meted out to Amon—his evil deeds were such that he should have forfeited his share in the world to come—was due to the circumstance that he had a pious and righteous son.<sup>113</sup> Josiah offers a shining model of true, sincere repentance.<sup>114</sup> Though at first he followed in the footsteps of his father Amon, he soon gave up the ways of wickedness, and became one of the most pious kings of Israel, whose chief undertaking was the effort to bring the whole people back to the true faith. It dates from the time when a copy of the Torah was found in the Temple, a copy that had escaped the holocaust kindled by his father and predecessor Amon for the purpose of exterminating the Holy Scriptures.<sup>115</sup> When he opened the Scriptures, the first verse to strike his eye was the one in Deuteronomy: “The Lord shall bring thee and thy king into exile, unto a nation which thou hast not known.” Josiah feared this doom of exile was impending, and he sought to conciliate God through the reform of his people.<sup>116</sup>

His first step was to enlist the intercession of the prophets in his behalf. He addressed his request, not to Jeremiah, but to the prophetess Huldah, knowing that women are more easily moved to compassion. As Jeremiah was a kinsman of the prophetess—their common ancestors were Joshua and Rahab—the king felt no apprehension that the prophet take his preference for Huldah amiss. The proud, dignified answer of the prophetess was, that the misfortune could not be averted from Israel, but the destruction of the Temple, she continued consolingly, would not happen until after the death of Josiah.<sup>117</sup> In view of the imminent destruction of the Temple, Josiah hid the holy Ark and all its appurtenances, in order to guard them against desecration at the hands of the enemy.<sup>118</sup>

The efforts of the king in behalf of God and His law found no echo with the great majority of the people. Though the king was successful in preventing the worship of idols in public, his subjects knew how to deceive him. Josiah sent out his pious sympathizers to inspect the houses of the people, and he was satisfied with their report, that they had found no idols, not suspecting that the recreant people had fastened half an image on each wing of the doors, so that the inmates faced their household idols as they closed the door upon Josiah’s inspectors.

This godless generation contemporaneous with Josiah was to blame for his death. When King Pharaoh, in his campaign against the Assyrians, wanted to travel through Palestine, Jeremiah advised the king not to deny the Egyptians the passage through his land. He cited a prophecy by his teacher Isaiah, who had foreseen the war between Assyria and Egypt. But Josiah retorted: “Moses, thy teacher’s teacher, spake: ‘I will give peace in the land, and no sword shall go through your land,’ not even the sword that is not raised against Israel with hostile intent.” The king, innocent of the deception practiced by the people, knew not that they were idol worshippers, to whom the promises of the Torah have no application. In the engagement that ensued between the Jews and the Egyptians, no less than three hundred darts struck the king. In his death agony he uttered no word of complaint; he only said: “The Lord is righteous, for I have rebelled against His commandment,” thus admitting his guilt in not having heeded the advice of the prophet.<sup>119</sup>

So ended the days of this just king after a brilliant career, the only king since Solomon to rule over both Judah and Israel, for Jeremiah had brought back to Palestine the ten exiled tribes of the north, and made them subject to Josiah.<sup>120</sup> The mourning for him was profound.<sup>121</sup> Even Jeremiah perpetuated his memory in his Lamentations.<sup>122</sup>

Pharaoh of Egypt was not permitted to enjoy the results of his victory to the full, for it was soon after this that, in attempting to ascend the wondrous throne of Solomon, he was struck down by the lions and rendered lame by the blow.<sup>123</sup>

The people put Jehoahaz on the throne of Judah to succeed Josiah, though his brother Jehoiakim was the older by two years. To silence the legitimate claims of Jehoiakim, the new king underwent the ceremony of anointing.<sup>124</sup> But his reign was very brief. At the end of three months Pharaoh carried him off into exile in Egypt, and Jehoiakim ruled in his stead.

Jehoiakim was another of the sinful monarchs of the Jews, uncharitable toward men and disobedient to God and the laws of God. His garments were of two kinds of stuff mingled together, his body was tattooed with the names of idols, and in order that he might appear as a non-Jew, he performed the operation of an epipost upon himself. Various forms of incest were committed by him, and, besides, he was in the habit of putting men to death that he might violate their wives, and confiscate their possessions.<sup>125</sup> Blasphemous as he was, he spoke: "My predecessors did not know how to provoke the wrath of God. As for me, I say frankly, we have no need whatsoever of Him; the very light He gives us we can dispense with, for the gold of Parvaim can well replace it."<sup>126</sup>

Seeing such abominations, God desired to resolve the world into its original chaos. If He desisted from His purpose, it was only because the people led a God-fearing life during the time of Jehoiakim.<sup>127</sup> After he had reigned eleven years, Nebuchadnezzar put an end to his dominion. Advancing with his army, the Babylonian king halted at Daphne, a suburb of Antioch. Here he was met by the Sanhedrin of Jerusalem, who desired to know whether he was coming with the purpose of destroying the Temple. Nebuchadnezzar assured them, that all he wanted was the surrender of Jehoiakim, who had rebelled against his authority. Returned to Jerusalem, the Sanhedrin informed Jehoiakim of Nebuchadnezzar's intention. The king asked the elders, whether it was ethical to purchase their lives by sacrificing his. For answer they referred him to the story of the way Joab dealt with the city of Abel of Beth-maacah, which had saved itself by surrendering the rebel Sheba, the son of Bichri. The king's objections did not deter the Sanhedrin from following the example of Joab acting under the direction of David. They made Jehoiakim glide down from the city walls of Jerusalem by a chain. Below, the Babylonians stood ready to receive him. Nebuchadnezzar took Jehoiakim in fetters to all the cities of Judah, then he slew him, and, his rage still unabated, threw his corpse to the dogs after having stuck it into the carcass of an ass.<sup>128</sup> The dogs left nothing of Jehoiakim's body over except his skull, on which were written the words: "This and something besides." Many centuries later it was found by a Rabbi near the gates of Jerusalem. He tried in vain to give it burial; the earth refused to retain it, and the Rabbi concluded therefrom that it belonged to the corpse of Jehoiakim. He wrapped the skull in a cloth, and laid it in a closet. One day the wife of the Rabbi discovered it there, and she burnt it, thinking the skull belonged to a former wife of her husband, so dear to him even after her death that he could not separate himself from this relic.<sup>129</sup>

When Nebuchadnezzar returned to Babylonia from his Palestinian expedition, the people received him with great pomp and solemnity. He announced to them that in place of Jehoiakim, whom he had slain, he had installed Mattaniah, the rebel's son, called Jehoiachin, as king over Judah, and the people uttered the warning: "One cannot educate a well-behaved puppy whose dam was ill-conditioned; let alone an ill-conditioned puppy whose dam was ill-conditioned."

Nebuchadnezzar returned to Daphne, and informed the Sanhedrin, who hastened from Jerusalem to meet him, that he desired the surrender of Jehoiachin. If they refused to satisfy his demand, he would destroy the Temple. When the Jewish king was told the threat of his Babylonian adversary, he mounted upon the roof of the Temple, and, holding all the keys of its chambers in his hand, he spoke thus to God: "Until now Thou didst consider us worthy of confidence, and Thou didst entrust Thy keys to us. Since Thou no longer dost esteem us trustworthy, here, take back Thy keys." He was held to his word: a hand was stretched forth from heaven, and it received the keys.<sup>130</sup>

Jehoiachin, good and pious, did not desire the city of Jerusalem to be exposed to peril for his sake. So he delivered himself to the Babylonian leaders, after they swore that neither city nor people should suffer harm. But the Babylonians did not keep their oath. A short while thereafter they carried into exile, not only the king, but also his mother, and ten thousand<sup>131</sup> of the Jewish nobility and of the great scholars.<sup>132</sup> This was the second attempt made by Nebuchadnezzar to deport the Jews. On taking the former king Jehoiakim captive, he had exiled three hundred of the noblest of the people, among them the prophet Ezekiel.<sup>133</sup>

The king Jehoiachin was incarcerated for life, a solitary prisoner, separated from his wife and his family. The Sanhedrin, who were among those deported with the king, feared that the house of David die out. They therefore besought Nebuchadnezzar not to separate Jehoiachin from his wife. They succeeded in enlisting the sympathy of the queen's hairdresser, and through her of the queen herself, Semiramis, the wife of Nebuchadnezzar, who in turn prevailed upon the king to accord mild treatment to the unfortunate prince exiled from Judea. Suffering had completely changed the once sinful king, so that, in spite of his great joy over his reunion with his wife, he still paid regard to the prescriptions of the Jewish law regulating conjugal life. He was prepared to deny himself every indulgence, when the purchase price was an infringement of the word of God. Such steadfastness pleaded with God to pardon the king for his sins, and the heavenly Sanhedrin absolved God from His oath, to crush Jehoiachin and deprive his house of sovereignty.<sup>134</sup> By way of reward for his continence he was blessed with distinguished posterity. Not only was Zerubbabel, the first governor of Palestine after the destruction of the Temple, a grandson of Jehoiachin's,<sup>135</sup> but also the Messiah himself will be a descendant of his.<sup>136</sup>

113. Sanhedrin 104a. Compare with p. 507 (below).

114. Shabbat 57b; Seder 'Olam 24. Another view (Shabbat, loc. cit.) is that Josiah was pious from his infancy. His repentance mentioned in 2 Kings 23.25 refers to the fact that when he reached the age of majority (at eighteen; comp. Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 64–65) he annulled all the verdicts pronounced by him before that time, and from his own pocket he re-imbursed all those who suffered loss by this annulment.

115. Sanhedrin 103, which is an attempt to explain the "finding" of the Torah. Comp. also Kimhi on 2 Kings 22.8, and note 112.

116. Yoma 52b (on the correct reading, comp. Rabinovitch, ad loc.); Yerushalmi Shekalim 6, 59c and Kimhi on 2 Kings 22.11. Many medieval authors (comp. the references cited by Friedmann in Ha-Goren VII, 10–13, and Shu'aib, 10d; Lekah on Exod. 16.32) quote Shekalim, loc. cit., differently from our text. According to their reading the book "found" was the book of Deuteronomy, and the same statement is made by Jerome in Ezek. 1.1 (comp. Nestle, Zeitschrift f. alt. Wissenschaft XXII, 170–171) undoubtedly on the authority of his Jewish teachers. The "finding" of the Torah was of such importance for the life of the Jews, that they began to date a new era from that event, and it is this era which Ezekiel used. The high priest Hilkiah found the Torah under the threshold (read אלתא instead of אורלמא; comp. Targum on Josh. 24.26) of the Temple hall at midnight after the setting of the moon. See Targum on Ezek. 1.1 and Tosefta-Targum in Wertheimer, Ozar Midrashim II, 53.

117. Megillah 14b. Here also it is remarked: Eminence is not for women; two eminent women are mentioned in the Bible, Deborah and Huldah, and both proved to be of a proud disposition. Deborah was haughty towards Barak (compare with p. 868, and note 75 pertaining thereto) and the prophetess Huldah spoke of Josiah as the “man” (comp. 2 Kings 22.15), without giving him the title of king. This “unpleasant” feature of their character is indicated by their “ugly” names, the former was called Deborah “bee”, and the latter Huldah “weasel”. On the kinship between Huldah and Jeremiah, see text on p. 843, and on her husband, see text on p. 1030. The prophetess had an academy in Jerusalem; Targum on 2 Kings 22.14 and on 2 Chron. 24.22.

118. Yoma 52b; Horayyot 12a; Keritot 5b; Shekalim 6, 59c; Tosefta Yoma 3 (2).7 and Sotah 13.1. In all these sources it is stated that besides the holy ark, the king also hid the following holy objects: the holy oil, the vessel with the manna, the rod of Aaron with its almonds and blossoms, as well as the coffer with the offering of the Philistines. In other sources different holy objects are mentioned as having been hidden; comp. ARN 41, 135; PRK 32a; ER 25, 129. Compare with pp. 572–573, 657, 730; text on p. 1091, as well as Kimhi on 1 Kings 6.19 and on 2 Chron. 35.3. The last-named author quotes a Midrash not found in the extant midrashic literature, according to which Solomon, at the erection of the Temple, provided a secret place to be used later for “hiding” holy objects. Ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron., loc. cit., quotes the Jewish tradition, according to which Ahaz had removed the holy ark from the Temple, which remained in the house of Shallum, the husband of the prophetess Huldah, until the days of Josiah. Yoma Mishnah 5.3 seems to presuppose that there was a holy ark in the second Temple. This, however, does not contradict the story of the hiding of the ark by Josiah, as it is quite probable that at the erection of the second Temple they fashioned another ark. The Talmud 52b explains the Mishnah differently. On the “hiding” of the altar of Moses by Solomon, see Mekilta Bahodesh 11, 73a, which reads: On the day upon which the one (altar) was built (that of Solomon), the other (that of Moses) was hidden.

119. Ekah 1, 91–92 (comp. also ibid., introduction, 22, where it is stated that at first they worshipped idols secretly, then publicly); Ta’anit 22a–22b; Tosefta 2.10; PK 27, 168a; Yerushalmi Kiddushin 1, 61a; Shemuel 25, 62. Zohar III, 114a; ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 35.22–25. In the version of Ekah made use of by R. Solomon ha-Yatom, 119 the reading was הוֹרוּ בַּמִּשְׁחָה in agreement with Yerushalmi, loc. cit. Comp. also Tan. B. IV, 167; Tan. Mass’e 12. On Pharaoh the “lame”, see note 123.

120. Megillah 14b.

121. Megillah 3a; Mo’ed Katan 28b; Targum on Zech. 12.11.

122. Seder ‘Olam 24; Ta’anit 22b; Ekah 1, 92; Yerushalmi Kiddushin 1, 61a; Josephus, Antiqui., X, 5.1. The Rabbis, as well as Josephus, understand 2 Chron. 35.25 to refer to the Book of Lamentations, in which Jeremiah la-ments the fate of the “anointed of the Lord” (4.20), by which Josiah is meant. Comp. also Targum on 2 Chron., loc. cit., and the references cited in note 119.

123. PK 27, 168a; WR 20.1; Tan. B. V, 7; Abba Gorion 3; Koheleth 9.2. In the last-named source it is said that this Pharaoh seized the throne in behalf of his widowed daughter who claimed her dowry from the estate of Solomon. According to this view, Pharaoh the “lame” is identical with Shishak, Solomon’s father-in-law; compare with p. 983. The interpretation of Neco, the name of the Egyptian king, as though it were נֶכֶח “lame” is often found in Jewish and Christian writings; comp. Megillah 3a; Mo’ed Katan 28b; Targum Zech. 12.11, and 2 Chron. 35.20; Peshitta on 2 Kings 23.29; Aphraates, 471 (top).

124. Horayyot 11b; Keritot 5b; Shekalim 7, 49c–49d. On the basis of 1 Chron. 3.15, the Rabbis maintain that Josiah had three sons: Jehoiaquim, Johanan, (to whom the name Jehoahaz was given on his accession to the throne), and Zedekiah (also called Shallum and Mattaniah); compare footnote 1 on p. 1065; Targum on 2 Chron., loc. cit.; WR 10.8; Seder ‘Olam 24. Ratner, note 26, finds a contradiction between Seder ‘Olam and the other sources with regard to the question of who was the first-born son of Josiah. It is very strange that, though quoting Horayyot, he did not notice that the difficulty raised by him was raised and disposed of in the Talmud.

125. WR 10.6; Tan. Lek 20; Aggadat Bereshit 48, 99; Sanhedrin 103b (according to one opinion, he tattooed his “membrum” with the Name of God); Baraita di-Yeshua’h 45; ps.-Jerome on 2 Chron. 36.8. Comp. note 112.

126. Sanhedrin 103b. To the reply made to him that God said: “Mine is the silver, and Mine is the gold”, he rejoined: “Did He not say: The heavens are the heavens of the Lord, but the earth hath He given to the children of men?”

127. Sanhedrin 103a; ‘Arakin 17a. The reverse was the case in the time of Zedekiah. God would then have reduced the world to its original chaos on account of the sinfulness of that generation, were it not for the piety of the king. On Zedekiah’s piety, see footnote 1 on p. 1065. The view that the Jews went into captivity during the reign of a pious king, when the people had no excuse for their sinfulness, is also found in Apocalypse of Baruch. 1.3; text on p. 1037.

128. BR 94 (end; is חוֹץ לְפִילִיָּה to be read instead of וּפִילִיָּה?); WR 19.6; Shekalim 6, 50a; Seder ‘Olam 25; Josephus, Antiqui., X, 6.3. The Haggadah concerning Jehoiaquim’s peculiar death is an attempt to reconcile the contradiction between 2 Kings 24.6 and 2 Chron. 36.6. Comp. also Jerome on Jer. 22.12, and Hippolytus, In Daniele, 641, where the story of Jehoiaquim is confused with that of Zedekiah.

129. Sanhedrin 82a and 104a.
130. WR 19.6; Shekalim 6, 50a; 2 'Eser Galuyyot 114; Seder 'Olam 25. On the legend concerning the keys, compare footnote 24 on p. 1073.
131. Josephus, Antiqui., X, 7.1; comp. the following note.
132. Seder 'Olam 25; Sifre D., 321; Tan. Noah 3; Gittin 88a; Sanhedrin 38a, and Yerushalmi 1, 19a (comp. also ibid., 18b–18c, concerning the scholars exiled to Babylon with Zedekiah); Nedarim 7, 40a; WR 11.7; BaR 11.3; Esther R., introduction; Hallel 97; Shir 8.11 and 12; 'Eser Galuyyot 10. With the exception of the first and last-named sources, all the others identify the “exile of the scholars” with the exile of Jehoiachin. The hegemony of Babylonian Jewry over the rest of the Jews is thus explained; comp. Tan. loc. cit. The “exile of the scholars” during the reign of Jehoiakim, as given in Seder 'Olam and 'Eser Galuyyot, loc. cit., must not be emended to agree with the other sources (comp. Ratner, note 9), since Josephus, Antiqui., X, 6.3, likewise maintains that the exile of the nobility took place during the reign of Jehoiakim; the nobility of Josephus and the flower of scholarship of the Rabbis are identical. Compare with p. 1140.
133. Josephus, Antiqui., X, 6.3; comp. the preceding note.
134. WR 19.6 (Nebuchadnezzar's wife is called שמירמית, שמירמעם and שמירמעם; the last form of the name is explained: “because she was born in thunder”) and 10; PK 25, 162b–163b; Shir 8.6; Sanhedrin 37b. See also Josephus, Antiqui., X, 7.1, whose favorable opinion of Jehoiachin flatly contradicts the words of Scripture in 2 Kings 24.9 and 2 Chron. 36.9. It is quite likely that he drew upon the Haggadah which maintains that sorrow and suffering changed the wicked and Godless king into a saint. With Jehoiachin the holy ark came to Babylon (Seder 'Olam 25; Tosefta Shekalim 2.18; Yerushalmi 6, 49c; Yoma 53b; against this view see the references cited in note 118), and it was in this land, in the city of Nehardea, that he erected a synagogue using as building material the stones and bricks brought with him from the Holy Land. The holiness of this synagogue was evidenced by the Shekinah which used it from time to time as its abode, see Megillah 29a; comp. the geonic interpretation of this passage in Aruk, s. v. שף 1; Rashi, ad loc.; Sha'are Teshubah 71; Iggeret R. Sherira 26; Epstein in Schwarz-Festschrift, 326. The life history of this king illustrates the truth of the wise adage, “Never despair”. For thirty-seven years he languished in prison, yet at the end of this time he not only gained his liberty but received great honors. When Nebuchadnezzar who had kept him prisoner died (as to the contradiction between the date given in 2 Kings 25.27 and that in Jer. 52.31, see Seder 'Olam 28), the new king Evil-Merodach immediately set him free, and spoke to him comfortingly as follows: “Do not feel grieved at having been a prisoner this long time; forget not that thy captor was a king like thee, and not an ordinary man; to avenge the injustice done by him to thee, I dishonored his dead body” (compare with p. 1108). Evil-merodach gave Jehoiachin royal garments, and settled an allowance upon him. See 2 ARN 17, 38.

135. PK 25, 163b; WR 10.56; Shir 8.6; Sanhedrin 37b–38a. In all these sources it is said that Zerubbabel was a son of Jehoiachin, but they differ as to how to harmonize this view with 2 Chron. 3.17, seq., which seems to contradict it. According to the Talmud, this scriptural passage contains a number of attributes of Zerubbabel, whereas the Midrash maintains that these attributes are assigned to Jehoiachin. The Talmud is also of the opinion that Zerubbabel is identical with Nehemiah.

136. Tan. B. I, 140; Tan. Toledot 14; Aggadat Bereshit 44, 89; Targum on 2 Chron. 3.24. Anani mentioned in 2 Chron., loc. cit., is said in these sources to be the name of the Messiah (= “the one from the clouds”; comp. Sanhedrin 98a in reference to Dan. 7.13: עַם עֲנִי שְׁמִיא אֲרוֹ, and 96b בֶּר נָפְלִי “son of the cloud”, as a designation of the Messiah), and שְׁבַעַה following this name describes the Messiah, “the one endowed with seven (שְׁבַעַה) divine gifts”. Comp. Is. 11.2, and p. 866, footnote 61.

XXI

THE EXILE

ZEDEKIAH

The execution of one king and the deportation of another were but preludes to the great national catastrophe in the time of Zedekiah, the destruction of the Temple and the exile of the whole people. After Nebuchadnezzar had led Jehoiachin and a portion of the people into banishment, his commiseration was aroused for the Jews, and he inquired, whether any other sons of Josiah were still living. Only Mattaniah was left.<sup>1</sup> He was re-named Zedekiah, in the hope that he would be the father of pious sons. In reality the name became the omen of the disasters to happen in the time of this king.

Nebuchadnezzar, who invested Zedekiah with the royal office, demanded that he swear fealty to him. Zedekiah was about to swear by his own soul, but the Babylonian king, not satisfied, brought a scroll of the law, and made his Jewish vassal take the oath upon that.<sup>2</sup> Nevertheless he did not keep faith with Nebuchadnezzar for long. Nor was this his only treachery toward his suzerain. He had once surprised Nebuchadnezzar in the act of cutting a piece from a living hare and eating it, as is the habit of barbarians. Nebuchadnezzar was painfully embarrassed, and he begged the Jewish king to promise under oath not to mention what he had seen. Though Nebuchadnezzar treated him with great friendliness, even making him sovereign lord over five vassal kings, he did not justify the trust reposed in him. To flatter Zedekiah, the five kings once said: "If all were as it should be, thou wouldst occupy the throne of Nebuchadnezzar." Zedekiah could not refrain from exclaiming: "O yes, Nebuchadnezzar, whom I once saw eating a live hare!"

The five kings at once repaired to Nebuchadnezzar, and reported what Zedekiah had said. Thereupon the king of Babylonia marched to Daphne, near Antioch, with the purpose of chastising Zedekiah. At Daphne he found the Sanhedrin of Jerusalem, who had hastened thither to receive him. Nebuchadnezzar met the Sanhedrin courteously, ordered his attendants to bring state chairs for all the members, and requested them to read the Torah to him and explain it. When they reached the passage in the Book of Numbers dealing with the remission of vows, the king put the question: "If a man desires to be released from a vow, what steps must he take?" The Sanhedrin replied: "He must repair to a scholar, and he will absolve him from his vow." Whereupon Nebuchadnezzar exclaimed: "I verily believe it was you who released Zedekiah from the vow he took concerning me.” And he ordered the members of the Sanhedrin to leave their state chairs and sit on the ground.<sup>3</sup> They were forced to admit, that they had not acted in accordance with the law, for Zedekiah’s vow affected another beside himself, and without the acquiescence of the other party, namely, Nebuchadnezzar, the Sanhedrin had no authority to annul the vow.<sup>4</sup>

Zedekiah was duly punished for the grievous crime of perjury. When Jerusalem was captured, he tried to escape through a cave extending from his house to Jericho. God sent a deer into the camp of the Chaldeans, and in their pursuit of this game, the Babylonian soldiers reached the farther opening of the cave at the very moment when Zedekiah was leaving it.<sup>5</sup> The Jewish king together with his ten sons was brought before Nebuchadnezzar, who addressed Zedekiah thus: “Were I to judge thee according to the law of thy God, thou wouldst deserve the death penalty, for thou didst swear a false oath by the Name of God; no less wouldst thou deserve death, if I were to judge thee according to the law of the state, for thou didst fail in thy sworn duty to thy overlord.”

Zedekiah requested the grace that his execution take place before his children’s, and he be spared the sight of their blood. His children, on the other hand, besought Nebuchadnezzar to slay them before he slew their father, that they might be spared the disgrace of seeing their father executed. In his heartlessness Nebuchadnezzar had resolved worse things than Zedekiah anticipated. In the sight of their father, the children of Zedekiah were killed, and then Zedekiah himself was deprived of sight; his eyes were blinded.<sup>6</sup> He had been endowed with eyes of superhuman strength,—they were the eyes of Adam,—and the iron lances forced into them were powerless to destroy his sight. Vision left him only because of the tears he shed over the fate of his children.<sup>7</sup> Now he realized how true Jeremiah had spoken when he had prophesied his exile to Babylonia. Though he should live there until his death, he would never behold the land with his eyes. On account of its seeming contradictoriness, Zedekiah had thought the prophecy untrue. For this reason he had not heeded Jeremiah’s advice to make peace with Nebuchadnezzar. Now it had all been verified; he was carried to Babylonia a captive, yet, blind as he was, he did not see the land of his exile.<sup>8</sup>

---

1. PR 26, 129b. Shallum (1 Chron. 3.15) is taken to be another name for Zedekiah. This name was given to him either because he was “perfect” (shalem) in his conduct (comp. note 119), or because in his days the Davidic dynasty came to an end (shalem). See Horayyot 11b; Yerushalmi Shekalim 6, 49b; Jerome on Jer. 22.11. It is curious that this Church Father gives the identification of Shallum with Zedekiah as his own view, and states that Jewish tradition considers Shallum to have been some other son of Josiah. On the respective ages of Josiah’s sons, see Tosefta Sanhedrin 4.11, and references given in footnote 124 on p. 1060.

2. PR 26, 129b. On the correct reading of the text comp. Ginzberg, Compte Rendu, 32=R.E.J., LXVII, 145–146. According to others, he made him take the oath of allegiance by the “horns of the altar”, or, as some maintain, by the Abrahamic covenant. See PK 27, 168b; Ekah 2, 15; Koheleth 9.2; Esther R. 1.8. On the taking of an oath by the Torah, see Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 132–133. On the swearing by the Abrahamic covenant, see footnote 284 on p. 238.

3. Ekah 2, 114–115; Nedarim 56a; Tan. B. II, 33, and V, 8. The first passage maintains that Nebuchadnezzar killed the members of the Synedrin in a very cruel manner. The word יָרָא in the passage cited from Tan. means “raw”, and this seems to be the original form of the legend. Nebuchadnezzar lacked refinement, and was in the habit of eating raw meat. Subsequently יָרָא was taken in its ordinary sense, and hence the statement in Ekah that he was caught eating a piece of flesh from a live hare.

4. Nedarim 65a. On the halakic principle underlying this Haggadah, see Or Zaru’a Shebu’ot, 6–7.

5. A quotation from an unknown Midrash by Rashi and Kimhi on 2 Kings 25.4; Jer. 39.4; Ezek. 12.13; Kad ha-Kemah, Shebu’ah, II, 75. On the enormous length of this cave, see ‘Erubin 61b; Tan. B. IV, 9; PR 26, 131a, and parallel passages cited by Buber on Tan., loc. cit. and by Friedmann on PR, loc. cit.

6. PR 26, 131a. Read ונתנו בכלוב “and he put him in a cage” (this the Babylonians actually did with their prisoners) instead of ונתנם בתנור which makes no sense, though the legend records elsewhere that the Babylonians put the captive Manasseh in an oven (compare with p. 1055). On the “old” Halakah presupposed here that perjury is punishable with death, comp. Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 136. In Esther R. 1.8 Nebuchadnezzar’s words are made to harmonize with the later view of the Halakah which maintains that perjury is not a capital crime.

7. Tan. B. V, 8. This is the source of Yalkut II, 257 (end of 2 Kings). Compare with footnote 23 on p. 59. Jeremiah’s prophecy that the king would lose his mind (comp. Jer. 4.9; לב is taken to mean “mind” and not “courage”, compare footnote 189, p. 42) was thus fulfilled on this occasion. Had Zedekiah retained his right sense, he would rather have committed suicide than witness the execution of his children. See Ekah 1, 87.

8. PR 26, 131a–131b, where יחזקאל should probably be read instead of ירמיה. Comp. Josephus, Antiqui., X, 8.2, which reads: And these things happened to him, as Jeremiah (34.3) and Ezekiel (12.13) had predicted to him that he should be caught and brought before the king of Babylon, and should speak face to face with him, and should see his eyes with his own eyes; and thus far did Jeremiah prophesy, but he was also made blind and brought to Babylon but did not see it, according to the prediction of Ezekiel. As to Zedekiah’s fate in captivity, see 2 Targum Esther 1.2 (end) where it is said that Pelatiah the son of Benaiyah (comp. Ezek. 11.13, and accordingly either יהודיע of Targum is a faulty reading for בניהו or we must read בניהו בן יהודיע; see 1 Kings 2.29) remonstrated with Nebuchadnezzar on account of his cruelty to the Jews. He said to him: “When one delivers his flock to a shepherd, and a bear comes and snatches away a sheep, of whom will it be required?” The king answered: “From the shepherd will it be required.” Whereupon Pelatiah rejoined: “Let thine ears hear what thy mouth has uttered.” The king then ordered to bring Zedekiah before him, and he removed the iron and brass chains from him, and changed his prison garments for others. The similarity between the words of Pelatiah in Targum and those of Paltiel, “the prince of the people” (comp. Ezek. 11.1), in 4 Ezra 5.16–18 is obvious, though in this pseudepigraphic writing it is Ezra who is the shepherd and not Nebuchadnezzar, as in Targum. On Pelatiah, see also note 21. The imprisonment of Zedekiah and his final release are referred to in Targum on Ps. 107.10, seq., whereas Josephus, Antiqui., X, 8.7, maintains that Nebuchadnezzar kept Zedekiah in prison until he died, and buried him magnificently (comp. notes 117–118), but he freed the high priest from his bonds. In Tehillim 90, 389 יהויכין is very likely to be read instead of צדקיה. In explanation of Hab. 2.15 it is said that the biblical verse refers to the indignities inflicted by Nebuchadnezzar on Zedekiah whom he gave to eat and drink things causing diarrhoea, thus exposing him to derision. See Tan. B. II, 33; Esther R. 1.8; Jerome on Hab., loc. cit. (who quotes as his authority quemdam de Hebraeis, qui sapiens apud illos = חכם, et δευτερωτής = משנה, vocabatur). The coarse form of this legend in Jerome is very likely to be ascribed to his own account, and not to the learned Hebrew. Comp. note 107.

JEREMIAH

Though Zedekiah besmirched his career by perjury, he was nevertheless so good and just a king that for his sake God relinquished his purpose of returning the world to its original chaos, as a punishment for the evil-doing of a wicked generation.<sup>9</sup> In this depraved time, it was first and foremost Jeremiah to whom was delegated the task of proclaiming the word of God. He was a descendant of Joshua and Rahab, and his father was the prophet<sup>10</sup> Hilkiyah. He was born while his father was fleeing<sup>11</sup> from the persecution of Jezebel, the murderess of prophets. At his very birth he showed signs that he was destined to play a great part. He was born circumcised,<sup>12</sup> and scarcely had he left his mother’s womb when he broke into wailing, and his voice was the voice, not of a babe, but of a youth. He cried: “My bowels, my bowels tremble, the walls of my heart they are disquieted, my limbs quake, destruction upon destruction I bring upon earth.” In this strain he continued to moan and groan, complaining of the faithlessness of his mother, and when she expressed her amazement at the unseemly speech of her new-born son, Jeremiah said: “Not thee do I mean, my mother, not to thee doth my prophecy refer; I speak of Zion, and against Jerusalem are my words directed. She adorns her daughters, arrays them in purple, and puts golden crowns upon their heads. Robbers will come and strip them of their ornaments."

As a lad he received the call to be a prophet. But he refused to obey, saying: "O Lord, I cannot go as a prophet to Israel, for when lived there a prophet whom Israel did not desire to kill? Moses and Aaron they sought to stone with stones; Elijah the Tishbite they mocked at because his hair was grown long; and they called after Elisha, 'Go up, thou bald head'—no, I cannot go to Israel, for I am still naught but a lad." God replied: "I love youth, for it is innocent. When I carried Israel out of Egypt, I called him a lad, and when I think of Israel lovingly, I speak of him as a lad. Say not, therefore, thou art only a lad, but thou shalt go on whatsoever errand I shall send thee. Now, then," God continued, "take the 'cup of wrath', and let the nations drink of it." Jeremiah put the question, which land was to drink first from the "cup of wrath", and the answer of God was: "First Jerusalem is to drink, the head of all earthly nations, and then the cities of Judah." When the prophet heard this, he began to curse the day of his birth. "I am like the high priest," he said, "who has to administer the 'water of bitterness' to a woman who is held under the suspicion of adultery, and when he approaches the woman with the cup, lo, he beholds his own mother. And I, O Mother Zion, thought, when I was called to prophesy, that I was appointed to proclaim prosperity and salvation to thee, but now I see that my message forebodes thee evil."

Jeremiah's first appearance in public was during the reign of Josiah, when he announced to the people in the streets: "If ye will give up your wicked doings, God will raise you above all nations; if not, He will deliver His house into the hands of the enemies, and they will deal with it as seemeth best to them."

The prophets contemporary with Jeremiah in his early years were Zechariah and Huldah.

The province of the latter was among women, while Zechariah was active in the synagogue.<sup>13</sup> Later, under Jehoiakim, Jeremiah was supported by the prophecies of his relative Uriah of Kirjath-jearim, a friend of the prophet Isaiah.<sup>14</sup> But Uriah was put to death by the ungodly king, the same who had the first chapter of Lamentations burnt after obliterating the Name of God wherever it occurs in the whole book. But Jeremiah added four chapters.<sup>15</sup>

The prophet fell upon evil times under Zedekiah. He had both the people and the court against him. Nor was that surprising in a day when not even the high priests in the Temple bore the sign of the covenant upon their bodies.<sup>16</sup> Jeremiah had called forth general hostility by condemning the alliance with Egypt against Babylonia, and favoring peace with Nebuchadnezzar; and this though to all appearances the help of the Egyptians would prove of good effect for the Jews. The hosts of Pharaoh Necho had actually set forth from Egypt to join the Jews against Babylon. But when they were on the high seas, God commanded the waters to cover themselves with corpses. Astonished, the Egyptians asked each other, whence the dead bodies. Presently the answer occurred to them: they were the bodies of their ancestors drowned in the Red Sea on account of the Jews, who had shaken off Egyptian rule. "What," said the Egyptians thereupon, "shall we bring help to those who drowned our fathers?" So they returned to their own country, justifying the warning of Jeremiah, that no dependence could be put upon Egyptian promises.<sup>17</sup>

A little while after this occurrence, when Jeremiah wanted to leave Jerusalem to go to Anathoth and partake of his priestly portion there, the watchman at the gate accused him of desiring to desert to the enemy. He was delivered to his adversaries at court, and they confined him in prison. The watchman knew full well that it was a trumped up charge he was bringing against Jeremiah, and the intention attributed to him was as far as possible from the mind of the prophet, but he took this opportunity to vent an old family grudge. For this gateman was a grandson of the false prophet Hananiah, the enemy of Jeremiah, the one who had prophesied complete victory over Nebuchadnezzar within two years. It were proper to say, he calculated the victory rather than prophesied it. He reasoned: "If unto Elam, which is a mere ally of the Babylonians against the Jews, destruction has been appointed by God through Jeremiah, so much the more will the extreme penalty fall upon the Babylonians themselves, who have inflicted vast evil upon the Jews."<sup>18</sup> Jeremiah's prophecy had been the reverse: so far from holding forth any hope that a victory would be won over Nebuchadnezzar, the Jewish state, he said, would suffer annihilation. Hananiah demanded a sign betokening the truth of Jeremiah's prophecy. But Jeremiah contended there could be no sign for such a prophecy as his, since the Divine determination to do evil can be annulled. On the other hand, it was the duty of Hananiah to give a sign, for he was prophesying pleasant things, and the Divine resolution for good is executed without fail.<sup>19</sup> Finally, Jeremiah advanced the clinching argument: "I, a priest, may be well content with the prophecy; it is to my interest that the Temple should continue to stand. As for thee, thou art a Gibeonite, thou wilt have to do a slave's service in it so long as there is a Temple. But instead of troubling thy mind with the future in store for others, thou shouldst rather have thought of thine own future, for this very year thou wilt die." Hananiah, in very truth, died on the last day of the year set as his term of life, but before his death he ordered that it should be kept secret for two days, so to give the lie to Jeremiah's prophecy. With his last words, addressed to his son Shelemiah, he charged him to seek every possible way of taking revenge upon Jeremiah, to whose curse his death was to be ascribed. Shelemiah had no opportunity of fulfilling his father's last behest, but it did not pass from his mind, and when he, in turn, lay upon his death-bed, he impressed the duty of revenge upon his son Jeriah. It was this grandson of Hananiah who, when he saw Jeremiah leaving the city, hastened to take the opportunity of accusing the prophet of treason. His purpose prospered. The aristocratic enemies of Jeremiah, enraged against him, welcomed the chance to put him behind prison bars, and gave him in charge of a jailer, Jonathan, who had been a friend of the false prophet Hananiah. Jonathan pleased himself by mocking at his prisoner: "See," he would say, "see what honor thy friend does thee, to put thee in so fine a prison as this; verily, it is a royal palace."

Despite his suffering, Jeremiah did not hold back the truth. When the king inquired of him, whether he had a revelation from God, he replied: "Yes, the king of Babylonia will carry thee off into exile." To avoid irritating the king, he went into no further detail. He only prayed the king to liberate him from prison, saying: "Even wicked men—like Hananiah and his descendants—at least cast about for a pretext when they desire to take revenge, and their example ought not to be lost upon thee who art called Zedekiah, 'just man'." The king granted his petition, but Jeremiah did not enjoy liberty for long. Hardly out of prison, he again advised the people to surrender, and the nobility seized him and cast him into a lime pit filled with water, where they hoped he would drown. But a miracle happened. The water sank to the bottom, and the mud rose to the surface, and supported the prophet above the water. Help came to him from Ebed-melech, a "white raven", the only pious man at court. Ebed-melech hastened to the king and spoke: "Know, if Jeremiah perishes in the lime pit, Jerusalem will surely be captured.” With the permission of the king, Ebed-melech went to the pit, and cried out aloud several times, “O my lord Jeremiah,” but no answer came. Jeremiah feared the words were spoken by his former jailer Jonathan, who had not given up his practice of mocking at the prophet. He would come to the edge of the pit and call down jeeringly: “Do but rest thy head on the mud, and take a little sleep, Jeremiah.” To such sneers Jeremiah made no reply, and hence it was that Ebed-melech was left unanswered. Thinking the prophet dead, he began to lament and tear his clothes. Then Jeremiah, realizing that it was a friend, and not Jonathan, asked: “Who is it that is calling my name and weeps therewith?” and he received the assurance that Ebed-melech had come to rescue him from his perilous position.<sup>20</sup>

9. Sanhedrin 103a. Comp. note 119 and footnote 127 on p. 1060.

10. Sifre N., 78; Sifre Z., 75; PK 13, 115b, where it is said that the people spoke scornfully of Jeremiah as “that descendant of a proselyte”. On Rahab, the ancestress of prophets and priests, see text on p. 843. On the scornful reference to his descent, compare with pp. 782–783, the similar remark about Phinehas. That Hilkiah the father of Jeremiah is identical with the high priest bearing this name in the time of Josiah is maintained by the Church Fathers Clemens Alexandrinus, Stromata, 1.21, and Hippolytus on Susannah 1.1, who considers Jeremiah to have been the brother of Susannah (this is how the passage is to be understood), the daughter of the high priest Hilkiah. In Jewish sources, Kimhi on Jer. 1.1 is perhaps the first who explicitly declares that Jeremiah’s father was the high priest Hilkiah; but Targum Jer. 1.1 probably presupposes this view.

11. BR 64.4, where מנשה is very likely to be read, instead of איזבל, in accordance with Rashi on Ezek. 20.14. This correct reading is more in harmony with history, for it makes Jeremiah’s father flee from the wicked king Manasseh, not from the wicked queen Jezebel. Comp., however, Ascension of Isaiah 2.12, with regard to the false prophet Belchira (living at the time of Manasseh), who is said to have been a nephew of the false prophet Zedekiah, who flourished in the reigns of Ahab and Jezebel. Jeremiah was born on the ninth of Ab (the day on which the Temple was burned), and his birth was announced to his father by the wicked Pashhur. Hence the prophet curses not only the day of his birth, but also the man who brought the “tidings” to his father, saying: “A man-child was born unto thee” (Jer. 20. 14–15). See Kimhi on Jer., loc. cit., and Seder ha-Dorot, 3298.

12. ARN 2, 12; Tehillim 9, 84. Compare footnote 318 on p. 248. While still in his mother’s womb, he cried: “I shall not leave it before I receive my name.” His father said: “I shall call thee Abraham.” But the unborn babe replied: “This is not my name.” The father continued to suggest many other names, but the unborn babe insisted that none of the proposed names would fit him. Finally Elijah the prophet appeared and proposed the name Jeremiah, because in the days of this child God will raise up (יָרִם “raise up” and יְהוָה “God”) an enemy against Jerusalem, who will lift up his hand against it. “This”, assented the unborn babe, “is my name.” I shall be called Jeremiah (the full form of Jeremiah יֵרֵמְיָהוּ יֵרֵמְיָהוּ Jeremiah), adding in this way the last part of thy name (=אֱלִיָּהוּ) to my own. See 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 17b. For other etymologies of the name Jeremiah (among which there is one deriving it from the Greek ἐρημῖα “desert”), see PK 13, 115a; Ekah Z. 76; Koheleth 1.1.

13. PR 26, 129a–129b, and, in a shortened form, Ekah Z., 62 (here it is correctly written כְּהֵן and not כְּגִדּוֹל, since the “water of bitterness” might be administered by an ordinary priest), and 134. Zion the mother of Israel is a favorite metaphor with the pseudepigraphic writers and the New Testament; see Apocalypse of Baruch 3.1, and the parallels cited by Charles. The Haggadah maintains that Jeremiah was meant in the promise made by God to Moses that He will raise up a prophet “like unto thee” (Deut. 18.18), and although there “hath not arisen a prophet in Israel like Moses” (Deut. 34.10), the lives of these two prophets show so many striking resemblances, that the description of Jeremiah as “a prophet like unto Moses” is well justified. Moses prophesied for forty years, so did Jeremiah; Moses prophesied concerning Judah and Israel, so did Jeremiah; Moses was attacked by members of his own tribe (i. e., the Levite Korah), so was Jeremiah (comp. Jer. 20.1); Moses was thrown into the water, and Jeremiah into a pit; Moses was saved from death by a bondswoman (Exod. 2.5), and Jeremiah by a slave (comp. Jer. 38.9; the name Ebed-melech is explained as “slave of the king”; comp. note 66); Moses addressed words of exhortation to the people, so did Jeremiah. See PK 13, 112a; Ekah Z., 75; Midrash Tannaim 111; a quotation from an unknown Pesikta in Midrash Aggadah, 160, on Num. 30.11, where many more parallels are drawn between the life of Moses and that of Jeremiah. Comp. also Kaneh (caption אֵשׁ תַּמִּיד), who seems to have made use of the same source as Midrash Aggadah. Moses was the first in the long row of prophets and Jeremiah the last; the prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, who lived after his time, retained only a trace of the old prophetic power. See PK 13, 116a, where the text is to be corrected in accordance with Midrash Aggada, 160, on Num. 30.11. As to the meaning of פְּקִידָה which is rendered by “trace”, see Nega’im 5.3. In his modesty and humility Jeremiah declined the honor to be compared with Moses. When God told him to take the place once occupied by Moses and to become the leader and guide of the people, he rejoined: “Who am I to take the place of Moses? May it be granted to me to be like his pupil.” See Midrash quoted by Shu’aib, Mattot, 91d. As to Jeremiah’s being equal to Moses, see Matth. 16.14, and the Christian tradition concerning the “two witnesses” (Rev. 11.3), according to which the one is Moses and the other Jeremiah; see Bousset, Antichrist, 208, and see also text on p. 1022, footnote 112. Jeremiah, Isaiah, Jacob, and Adam are the four men who are described in the Bible as “the creatures of God”. See PR 26, 129a, and comp. also ibid. 27, 133b, as well as Mekilta Bo 16, 19a, with regard to the statement that Jeremiah was consecrated to the prophetic calling while still in his mother’s womb. Jeremiah, however, was not the only prophet sent to the wicked generation. For ninety years before the exile two prophets admonished Israel twice daily to repent and mend their ways, if they did not want to be banished into captivity. See PK 16, 124b; PR 33, 153; Ekah 2, 117. But the Israelites said to Jeremiah: “After all the sins we have committed we are ashamed to return to God.” To this God replied by the mouth of Jeremiah: “If ye come back to Me, ye return to your father, and children are never ashamed to come back to their father.” See DR 2.24; PK 25, 165a. Jeremiah’s teacher was the prophet Zephaniah, a great-grandson of king Hezekiah (comp. Ibn Ezra and Kimhi on Zeph. 1.1; Maimonides in his introduction to his Yad), and when the disciple began to prophesy, he limited his activity to speaking in the streets, whereas Zephaniah preached in the synagogue. See PR 26, 129b. In the text on p. 1068, lines 6 and 7, read Zephaniah instead of Zechariah.

14. PK 13, 115b, which reads: As Jeremiah was scornfully spoken of by the people as “that descendant of the harlot Rahab” (comp. the references given in note 10, to which should be added PK 13, 11b–12a; Ekah Z., 74, 75; unknown Pesikta quoted in Midrash Aggada, 160, on Num. 30.11), so was Uriah referred to by the people as the “Gibeonite”, because he came from Kiriath-Jearim (Jer. 26.20), a city which originally belonged to the Gibeonites (comp. Josh. 9.17), and therefore the Bible takes pains to emphasize the fact that this prophet was of noble descent, a priest, comp. Is. 8.2. The identity of Uriah killed by Jehoiakim with the priest Uriah in Is., loc. cit., is presupposed in many old sources; comp. Sifre D., 43; Ekah 5, 159; Makkot (end); Targum on Is., loc. cit. These sources, however, understand the passage in Is. to mean: God spoke to Isaiah: the good tidings foretold by the prophet Zechariah will be fulfilled, as the evil predicted by Uriah (his prophecy consisted of Micah 3.12) was fulfilled. According to this view, Isaiah had no personal relations with Zechariah or Uriah. Clemens Alexandrinus, Stromata, 1.21, asserts that the prophet Habakkuk was a contemporary of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, but in the same passage it is stated that Jonah and Habakkuk were contemporaries of Daniel. Comp. Index under the respective names of these prophets.

15. Mo’ed Katan 26a; Ekah, introduction, 27, and 1, 43. The old rabbinical sources know of no other writings of Jeremiah than the book bearing his name, the Book of Lamentations, which is said to be the “scroll” mentioned in Jer. 36.2, seq., and the Book of Kings. See Baba Batra 15a, and comp. the sources cited at the beginning of this note. The statement of Baba Batra, with regard to the Book of Kings, is to be understood that the prophet was the editor thereof. This becomes evident when we consider the similar statements made there concerning other biblical books, as, e. g., the following ones: Hezekiah and his associates wrote the books of Isaiah, Proverbs, Song of Songs, and Ecclesiastes; the men of the Great Assembly wrote the books of Ezekiel, the twelve Minor Prophets, Daniel, and the Scroll of Esther. Comp. further details concerning this use of כָּתַב in footnote 89 on p. 1051. The apocryphal and pseudepigraphic literature knows at least of three additional writings by Jeremiah. They are: 1) Epistle of Jeremiah, a letter written by the prophet to the Jews who were about to be led as captives to Babylon, in which he warns them against idolatry. It is a Midrash on Jer. 10.11, and is a canonical book in the Greek Bible. 2) The Paralipomena of Jeremiah, also known under the title, the Rest of the Words of Baruch, an originally Jewish work, but with considerable Christian additions and interpolations. Though ascribed to Jeremiah, the chief interest of this work centres around Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, the friend of the prophet; comp. note 58. On a third pseudepigraphic writing ascribed to Jeremiah, see Schürer, Geschichte (4th edition), III, 393. Eupolemus (?), 454b–454c, narrates how the wicked king Jehoiakim attempted to burn Jeremiah on account of his prophecies predicting the destruction of the Temple and the captivity of the people. It is not likely that this writer had made use of an apocryphal writing of Jeremiah. In all probability this statement of Eupolemus is based on a (fanciful) combination of Jer. 36.23 with 26.8, seq. The biblical narrative about the burning of Jeremiah’s writings was changed to an attempt at burning the author. In the very late compilation known as the Ma’aseh-Buch (comp. No 163, 49b) we meet for the first time in rabbinic sources with a reference to non-canonical writings of Jeremiah, which are said to have consisted of lamentations. Zephaniah, the teacher of Jeremiah (comp. note 14), is also credited with an additional work, and fragments of the Apocalypse of Zephaniah are still extant. See Schürer, op. cit., 367–368.

16. Ekah 1, 71; Tan. Lek 20; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29c. Opinions differ as to the nature of the sins which caused the destruction of the Temple and the captivity. See Shabbat 119a, 139a; Yoma 9b; Yerushalmi 1, 38c; Ta'anit 5a–5b; Nedarim 81a; Baba Mezi'a 30b (which reads: Jerusalem was destroyed because the people dispensed justice according to the “strict law”); Yerushalmi Hagigah 1, 76b; 2 ARN 5, 18; ER 14, 71 (comp. Yoma, loc. cit.), and 18, 96; EZ 1, 168; Ekah, introduction, 1 and 27 (on the seven cardinal sins which they are said to have committed, see Sifre 26.21 and Mishle 6, 56; compare also footnote 60 on p. 1046) as well as 1, 41, 56–57, 62, 69–70, 92–93; Ekah Z., 59, 75, 77; PK 13, 112b; 15, 120b–121a; PR 25, 125b; 27, 132b–133a; BaR 9.7; Koheleth 1.13; Baraita di-Yeshua' 45b. It is noteworthy that the Rabbis did not consider idolatry as the sin which caused the severe punishment of Israel. They even maintain that the Israelites were merely to give expression to their dissatisfaction with the law, the burden of which was too heavy for them, especially the injunctions regulating sexual life. See Sanhedrin 63b. Neglect of the study of the Torah is most frequently mentioned as the main cause for Israel's severe punishment, and besides this a number of other sins, transgressions as well as moral wrongs, are mentioned as having contributed to make God wroth with His people. In Yerushalmi Rosh ha-Shanah 5, 58d (towards the end), and Ekah, 1, 62, it is stated that because they did not release their Hebrew slaves (comp. Jer. 34.8, seq.), they themselves were given over to slavery. The same view is shared by ps.-Tertullian De Carmine adv. Marcionem, 3, 235. The view that their evil treatment of Jeremiah caused the exile is found in Ecclus. 49.7 and EZ 9, 188. That the destruction of Jerusalem and the exile of Judah were mainly due to the sins of the “ten tribes” is maintained in Assumption of Moses 3.5; comp. also Baruch 2.26; Apocalypse of Baruch 77.10. See, on the other hand, 1.3 of the last-named work, where it is said that the sins of Judah were greater than those of Israel. Eupolemus (?), 454b, following closely the words of Scripture, asserts that Jeremiah was sent by God, and found the Jews sacrificing to a golden image, the name of which was Baal.

17. Ekah 4, 152; an unknown Midrash quoted in Sefer ha-Musar, 18, 129b–130a. The text in Ekah is not quite clear, as one fails to see the connection between the friendly relations of the ten tribes with the Egyptians and the assistance of the latter offered to Judah.

18. Sanhedrin 89b; Yerushalmi 11, 30b. This Haniah was originally a true prophet; see Sifre D., 84; Sanhedrin 90b; Yerushalmi, loc. cit.; Midrash Shir 10a; Hallel 103 (towards the bottom). In the last-named source חנניה עזול חנניה מישאל ועזריה בן עזור is corrupted to חנניה בן עזור. In Midrash Shir 12a (bottom), the text is not to be emended with the editor to חנניה, it refers to 1 Kings 13.18 and 22.11.

19. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 11, 30b; Midrash Tannaim 63–64; Tan. Wa-Yera 13. As to the conception that God always fulfils His word if it is a promise to bestow “good” upon man, whereas He sometimes changes His word if it contains a threat to do harm to man, see BR 53.4, and the numerous parallel passages cited by Theodor.

20. PR 26, 129a–129b; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 11, 30b; Midrash Tannaim 64. On Jonathan, see also Hallel 103 (towards the bottom); on the pious Ebed-melech see text on pp. 1090, seq. Jeremiah, on hearing Hananiah's false prophecy, said: “Amen! the Lord do so.” His punishment for having “flattered” the wicked was that he almost lost his life at the hands of the grandson of the man whom he had flattered; Sotah 41b–42a with reference to Jerem. 28.6 and 36.13.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR

The suffering to which Jeremiah was exposed was finally ended by the capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. This Babylonian king was a son of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.<sup>21</sup> His first contact with the Jews happened in the time of his father-in-law Sennacherib, whom he accompanied on his campaign against Hezekiah. The destruction of the Assyrian army before the walls of Jerusalem, the great catastrophe from which only Nebuchadnezzar and four others escaped with their life, inspired him with fear of God.<sup>22</sup> Later, in his capacity as secretary to the Babylonian king Merodach-baldan, it was he who called his master's notice to the mention of the Jewish king's name before the Name of God. “Thou callest Him ‘the great God’, yet thou dost name Him after the king,” he said. Nebuchadnezzar himself hastened after the messenger to bring back the letter and have it changed. He had advanced scarce three steps when he was restrained by the angel Gabriel, for even the few paces he had walked for the glory of God earned him his great power over Israel. A further step would have extended his ability to inflict harm immeasurably.<sup>23</sup>

For eighteen years daily a heavenly voice resounded in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar, saying: "O thou wicked slave, go and destroy the house of thy Lord, for His children hearken not unto Him." But Nebuchadnezzar was beset with fears lest God prepare a fate for him similar to that of his ancestor Sennacherib. He practiced belomancy and consulted other auguries, to assure himself that the war against Jerusalem would result favorably. When he shook up the arrows, and questioned whether he was to go to Rome or Alexandria, not one arrow sprang up, but when he questioned about Jerusalem, one sprang up. He sowed seeds and set out plants; for Rome or Alexandria nothing came up; for Jerusalem everything sprouted and grew. He lighted candles and lanterns; for Rome or Alexandria they refused to burn, for Jerusalem they shed their light. He floated vessels on the Euphrates; for Rome or Alexandria they did not move, for Jerusalem they swam.<sup>24</sup>

Still the fears of Nebuchadnezzar were not allayed. His determination to attack the Holy City ripened only after God Himself had shown him how He had bound the hands of the archangel Michael, the patron of the Jews, behind his back, in order to render him powerless to bring aid to his wards. So the campaign against Jerusalem was undertaken.<sup>25</sup>

---

21. 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 21b; R. Joseph Kimhi on 1 Kings 10.1 (comp. Dukes, Rabbinische Blumenlese, 267), with the addition: And she (the queen of Sheba) descended from Abraham through his children with the concubines. This is based on the identification of שְׁבָא in 1 Kings, loc. cit., with שְׁבָא in Gen. 25.3; comp. MHG I, 379, and footnote 311 on p. 243. The legend about Solomon's marriage with the queen of Sheba is perhaps of Arabic origin, as it is not found in old Jewish sources antedating the Mohammedan period. The name Bilkis, however, given in Arabic sources to the queen of Sheba seems to be the Hebrew פִּלְגִּשׁ "concubine", and this would point to the Jewish origin of the legend. Compare footnote 41 on p. 959. Later Kabbalists changed "mother" to "ancestress", maintaining that Nebuchadnezzar was not the son but the descendant of the queen of Sheba. Nebuchadnezzar's wife was Semiramis; comp. note 106 and footnote 134 on p. 1061. A son-in-law of Nebuchadnezzar was the viceroy of Mesene, and at his request Jewish captives were sent to his dominion, but only slaves, while the freemen among the Jews remained in Babylon. This was done at the suggestion of Pelatiah (comp. note 8), who remarked to Nebuchadnezzar: "We (freemen) ought to remain near thee, and the slaves may be sent away." See Kiddushin 72b. Nebuchadnezzar, being the king of Babylon, is also described as the "grandson of Nimrod", the first king of that country; see Pesahim 94b. This, however, is probably not to be taken in a genealogical sense.

22. Sanhedrin 95b (but here nothing is said about Nebuchadnezzar being related to Sennacherib); Tosefta-Targum on Is. 32; Ekah, introduction, 30, where Sennacherib is said to have been the grandfather of Nebuchadnezzar. Comp. also Ekah, introduction, 23; 2 Targum on Esther 1.2, 11, and 4.1; text on p. 1049 and note 59 pertaining thereto.

23. Sanhedrin 96a; for another version of this legend, see text on p. 1050.

24. Ekah, introduction, 23; Tehillim 79, 359–360; Koheleth 12.7; 2 Targum Esther 1.2, 11, and 4.1; PK 5, 50b–51a; PR 15, 74a; Shir 2.13. The Rabbis seem to have taken קִלְקַל (Ezek. 21.25) to mean "shooting"; the divination employed by Nebuchadnezzar, accordingly, did not consist in the "shaking of arrows", but in "throwing" them. Comp. Cassel, Esther, 287. The three last-named sources cited above maintain that the seventy years of the Babylonian exile are to be counted from the time when the heavenly voice began to be heard in Nebuchadnezzar's palace, while the actual period of the exile lasted only fifty-two years. Compare, however, text on p. 1129. During these fifty-two years the land of Judah was entirely deserted by "all that lives"; neither man, nor beast, nor fowl, nor fish was to be found there (comp. Jer. 9.9), and for seven years the soil thereof was "brimstone and salt, and a burning, that it is not sown", so that the attempts made by the Samaritans to till the soil were in vain. Seven hundred species of "clean" fish, eight hundred of "clean" beasts and numberless species of fowl left the Holy Land at the time of the exile, and settled in Babylon (the fish travelled through the abyss) and, with the exception of the turbot, they all returned with the restoration of the captivity. See Seder 'Olam 27; Shabbat 145b; Yoma 54a; Yerushalmi Ta'anit 4, 69b;

Kil'ayim 9, 32c; Ketubot 12, 25b; PK 13, 113b–114; PR 1, 3a; Ekah, introduction, 34. The cedar-tree likewise came at the time of the exile to Babylon, where it was brought by Nebuchadnezzar, who had spoiled all the cedar groves of Palestine to enrich his own country. It is to this that the prophet refers saying: "Yea, the cypresses rejoice at thee, and the cedars of Lebanon; since thou art laid down, no feller is come up against us" (Is. 14.8); Ekah 1, 64. The palm was brought to Babylon forty years prior to the exile so that Israel, accustomed to the fruit of the palm (sweet fruit is the proper food for the students of the Torah), should not lack it. See PK 13, 114a; Yerushalmi Ta'anit 4, 69b. The Jews were the first to introduce the use of the "mill" in Babylon, their young men having been forced by Nebuchadnezzar to take the handmills with them from Palestine to the land of their captivity. See Ekah 5, 159. Several of the above statements of the Haggadah and many others concerning the exile (comp., e. g., note 16) reflect the views of the Rabbis about the catastrophe in the year 70, C. E., notwithstanding the references made to the biblical passages dealing with the "first exile". Comp. also Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29c, which reads: Israel was not exiled until he had become divided into twenty-four sects, as it is written: "I send thee to the children of Israel, to the rebellious nation" (Ezek. 2.3). It is quite obvious that the sectarianism at the end of the second commonwealth is meant. Another statement (ibid.) reads: Israel was not exiled until he had neglected the law of circumcision and other divine commands. It is not impossible, though not very likely, that this wishes to convey the idea that Pauline Christianity is responsible for the destruction of the second Temple. Comp. note 16 (beginning) and note 29 (towards end of page).

25. Ekah Z., 63, 70, 134; comp. note 27. Michael, the guardian angel of Israel, had to be found first before "his" people could be conquered. Comp. the same view with regard to the guardian angels of Egypt, text on p. 557. As to the conception that the "right hand" of God is bound as long as Israel is in exile, see Ekah, 2, 110–111, and footnote 4 on p. 433.

THE CAPTURE OF JERUSALEM

If the Babylonians thought that the conquest of Jerusalem was an easy task, they were greatly mistaken. For three years God endued the inhabitants with strength to withstand the onslaughts of the enemy, in the hope that the Jews would amend their evil ways and abandon their godless conduct, so that the threatened punishment might be annulled.

Among the many heroes in the beleaguered city that was bidding defiance to the Babylonians, one by the name of Akiba was particularly distinguished. The stones hurled at the walls of the city from the catapults wielded by the enemy without, he was wont to catch on his feet, and throw them back upon the besiegers. Once it happened that a stone was so cast as to drop, not upon the wall, but in front of it. In his swift race toward it, Akiba was precipitated into the space between the inner and the outer wall. He quickly reassured his friends in the city, that his fall had in no wise harmed him. He was only a little shaken up and weak; as soon as he had his accustomed daily meal, a roasted ox, he would be able to scale the wall and resume the struggle with the Babylonians. But human strength and artifice avail naught against God. A gust of wind arose, and Akiba was thrown from the wall, and he died. Thereupon the Chaldeans made a breach in the wall, and penetrated into the city.<sup>26</sup>

Equally fruitless were the endeavors of Hanamel, the uncle of Jeremiah, to save the city. He conjured the angels up, armed them, and had them occupy the walls. The Chaldeans retreated in terror at the sight of the heavenly host. But God changed the names of the angels, and brought them back to heaven. Hanamel's exorcisms availed naught. When he called the Angel of the Water, for instance, the response would come from the Angel of Fire, who bore the former name of his companion. Then Hanamel resorted to the extreme measure of summoning the Prince of the World, who raised Jerusalem high up in the air. But God thrust the city down again, and the enemy entered unhindered.<sup>27</sup>

Nevertheless, the capture of the city could not have been accomplished if Jeremiah had been present. His deeds were as a firm pillar for the city, and his prayers as a stony wall. Therefore God sent the prophet<sup>28</sup> on an errand out of the city. He was made to go to his native place, Anathoth, to take possession of a field, his by right of inheritance. Jeremiah rejoiced; he took this as a sign that God would be gracious to Judah, else He would not have commanded him to take possession of a piece of land. Scarcely had the prophet left Jerusalem when an angel descended upon the wall of the city and caused a breach to appear, at the same time crying out: "Let the enemy come and enter the house, for the Master of the house is no longer therein. The enemy has leave to despoil it and destroy it. Go ye into the vineyard and snap the vines asunder, for the Watchman hath gone away and abandoned it. But let no man boast and say, he and his have vanquished the city. Nay, a conquered city have ye conquered, a dead people have ye killed."

The enemy rushed in and ascended the Temple mount, and on the spot whereon King Solomon had been in the habit of sitting when he took counsel with the elders, the Chaldeans plotted how to reduce the Temple to ashes. During their sinister deliberations, they beheld four angels, each with a flaming torch in his hand, descending and setting fire to the four corners of the Temple. The high priest, seeing the flames shoot up, cast the keys of the Temple heavenward, saying: "Here are the keys of Thy house; it seems I am an untrustworthy custodian," and, as he turned, he was seized by the enemy and slaughtered in the very place on which he had been wont to offer the daily sacrifice. With him perished his daughter, her blood mingling with her father's. The priests and the Levites threw themselves into the flames with their harps and trumpets, and, to escape the violence feared from the licentious Chaldeans,<sup>29</sup> the virgins who wove the curtains for the sanctuary followed their example. Still more horrible was the carnage caused among the people by Nebu-zaradan, spurred on as he was by the sight of the blood of the murdered prophet Zechariah seething on the floor of the Temple. At first the Jews sought to conceal the true story connected with the blood. At length they had to confess, that it was the blood of a prophet who had prophesied the destruction of the Temple, and for his candor had been slain by the people. Nebuzaradan, to appease the prophet, ordered the scholars of the kingdom to be executed first on the bloody spot, then the school children, and at last the young priests, more than a million souls in all. But the blood of the prophet went on seething and reeking, until Nebuzaradan exclaimed: "Zechariah, Zechariah, the good in Israel I have slaughtered. Dost thou desire the destruction of the whole people?" Then the blood ceased to seethe.

Nebuzaradan was startled by the thought, if the Jews, who had a single life upon their conscience, were made to atone so cruelly, what would be his own fate! He left Nebuchadnezzar and became a proselyte.<sup>30</sup>

---

26. Ekah Z., 61; PR 29, 139b–140a. On Abika (not Akiba as in the text, which is a printer's error), see Güdemann, Monatsschrift, XXIX, 132, who identifies him with Chagiras of Adiabene, whose heroic exploits during the wars with the Romans in 70 C. E. are described by Josephus, Bell., V, 11.5. That Abika is said to have fought against the Babylonians is not necessarily an anachronism; comp. the end of the note 24. When Gabriel (it is he who is spoken of in Ezek. 10.2 as the "man clothed in linen") received the command "to fill both his hands with coals of fire from between the Cherubim and dash them against the city" (of Jerusalem), he had to ask one of the Cherubim to be kind enough and fetch the coals for him (the celestials need lovingkindness like the terrestrials) for he would have been burned immediately if he had approached the place of the Cherubim. For three years Gabriel kept the almost extinguished coals in his hands, hoping that Israel would repent and Jerusalem would thus be saved. When he realized, however, that his hope was doomed to disappointment, he was ready to dash the coals with fury; but at that moment God called to him: "Gently, gently! There are men in Israel who are kind to their fellow-men. Had Gabriel carried out his intention, Israel would have been annihilated, and thus its survival is due to the lovingkindness shown by some of them, on account of whose merits Gabriel was admonished by God not to act too furiously in his work of destruction. See WR 26.8; Tan. B. III, 41 and 84; Tan. Emor 3; Shemuel 24, 121; Ekah 1, 75–76; Mishhale 1, 47–48; Yoma 77a. On the part played by Gabriel in the destruction of the Temple, see Ekah 2, 97–99, where many haggadic embellishments are found about the narratives (visions?) given in Ezek. 9 and 10. As to the mark set by the angel upon the foreheads of the pious (Ezek. 9.4–6; see footnote 122 on p. 1159), comp. Shabbat 55a; Tan. B. III, 41; Tan. Mishpatim 6. It is stated in these passages that the pious were marked by the angel with ink, the wicked with blood, the ink-mark warded off the angels of destruction, the blood mark incited them. The "justice" of God insisted that the pious be also punished for not having guided the wicked back to the path of righteousness. The demand of justice was granted, and the pious were even the first upon whom the punishment was visited. Comp. Ezek. 9.6.

27. Yalkut II, 1001, without giving its source but very likely quoting Ekah Z. The view that the destruction of the Temple was never achieved by the hand of man, but that the angels (or the heavenly fire) burned it is often met with in the talmudic and midrashic literature. Michael and Gabriel are mentioned as the angels who carried out the work of destruction. Comp. Sanhedrin 96b; Ekah 1, 76; 2, 109–110; DR 1.17; Tehillim 36, 252; Ekah Z., 61; Aggadat Shir 5, 39; Midrash Shir 30b. Comp. note 25. Most of the Midrashim just cited speak of the angels as keeping guard over the Temple, which accordingly was indestructible as long as they watched over it. A somewhat different version of this Haggadah reads: As long as the Shekinah dwelled in it, the Temple could not be destroyed; but the Shekinah gradually withdrew from its place between the Cherubim to its original abode in heaven, and this left the Temple and the holy city unprotected. Ekah, introduction, 25; Rosh ha-Shanah 31a; PK 13, 114b; ARN 34, 102; Aggadat Shir 5, 39; compare footnote 98 on p. 1054 with regard to the "ten stations" travelled by the Shekinah. Noteworthy is the statement found in Pesikta and Ekah that for thirteen and a half years the Shekinah, after withdrawing from the Temple, dwelled on the Mount of Olives, from where it proclaimed, three times daily, to the people: "I will go and return to My place, till they acknowledge their guilt and seek My face." Comp. Hosea 5.15. In contrast to the view that finally the Shekinah returned to heaven, there are also authorities who maintain that "the Shekinah, never left the western wall"; Tan. B. II, 5–6; Shir 2.9; Tehillim 11, 98–99; ShR 2.3. The western wall is the only remnant of the former Temple building.

28. Comp. the "sending away" of Samuel from the calamitous battle in footnote 42 on p. 895. See also Apocalypse of Baruch 2, according to which Jeremiah, Baruch, and the other pious men were commanded by God to leave the city one day before the enemy was to enter it, in order that their presence might not render it impregnable. Compare with p. 1092.

29. PR 26, 131a; 2 Targum Esther 1.2, 11; PK 13, 115b–116a; Koheleth 3.16 and 10.6; WR 4.10; Sanhedrin 103a. On the view that the angel destroyed the Temple, see, besides the references given in note 27, also Apocalypse of Baruch 7–8 and 80. This apocryphal work is also acquainted with the legend about the keys of the Temple; the rabbinical sources dealing with it are given in footnote 130 on p. 1061; comp. also the references at the beginning of this note, as well as Ta'anit 29a; ARN 4, 24; 2 Targum Esther 1.3, 12. The last high priest was Seraiah (comp. 2 Kings 25.18), a brother of Baruch; see Sifre N., 78, and the parallel passages cited by Friedmann, as well as Ekah 2, 113. Comp. also Shitah Mekubbezet on 'Arakin 16a. As long as Israel brought the daily offering (besides circumcision, this was the only divine command observed by them; comp., however, note 24 end, and note 16 beginning) Jerusalem was impregnable. The enemy succeeded in entering the city only after the services of the Temple had ceased owing to the lack of sacrifices. For a time the enemy supplied the Jews with the necessary animals but finally they sent them up a swine instead of a sheep. See Apocalypse of Daniel (towards the beginning), which undoubtedly follows Baba Kamma 82b (comp. Josephus, Antiqui., XIV, 2.2), where the episode with the swine is said to have taken place at the time of the war between Aristobulus and Hyrcanus. Another version of the legend about the swine reads as follows: When the enemy approached the Temple, the gate shut of itself, and would by no means open. It was of no avail to the enemy that he brought three hundred and sixty camels laden with iron axes and tried to force the gate open, as it "swallowed up" all the rams (comp. the statement concerning the "magnetic iron" in the text on p. 1051). Finally פֶּרְנוֹט (according to Perles, Schwartz-Festschrift, 305, Haterius Fronto, mentioned by Josephus, Bell., VI, 4.3 and 9.2; but perhaps פֶּטְרוֹט, Paternus, is to be read; comp. Schürer, Geschichte, 4th edition, I, 649) brought a swine, slew it, and sprinkled its blood upon the Temple, defiling it thereby. Whereupon the gate opened, and the enemy entered the Temple. When, however, Nebuchadnezzar wanted to enter the holy of holies, the doors closed and would not open, until a heavenly voice called out: "Open thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars" (Zech 11.1). Whereupon they opened. See 2 Targum 1.2, 11–12, which in the main follows Sanhedrin 96b and Targum Lam. 2.9. On the defilement of the Temple by the enemy and on the blasphemies uttered by them against God, see Ekah 2, 113, and ER 1, 5. The Temple was taken on the seventh of Ab, and the work of destruction began immediately; on the ninth towards evening the enemy set fire to it, and on the tenth it was burned down completely; Seder 'Olam 27; Ta'anit 29a; Yerushalmi 4, 69c (top), and Megillah 1, 70c. It was the first year of the Sabbatical cycle, and on the first day of the week, the ninth of Ab, when the enemy seized the Temple just at the moment when the Levites chanted the song: "And He hath brought upon them their own iniquity and will cut them off in their own evil" (Ps. 94.23). See Seder 'Olam 30; Tosefta Ta'anit 5 (3). 9; Babli 29a; Yerushalmi 4, 68d; Arakin 11b–12a; Soferim 18. These sources state that the destruction of the second Temple took place exactly on the same day of the week and of the month and in the same year of the Sabbatical cycle as the first. (70 A.D. = 5th year on this basis, but is second year using modern basis.) Comp. also Josephus, Bell., VI, 4.5–8, and Antiqui., X, 8.3; Schürer, Geschichte (4th edition) I, 631. The statements of the latter are far from being correct. מוצאי שבת is not Sabbath night but Sunday, as the context shows, since there was no service in the Temple at night; ערב is not found in correct texts, and is certainly a scribal error.—God in His mercy ordained that the destruction of the Temple, as a result of which the people went into captivity, should take place in the warm days of the summer, otherwise the exiles would have suffered greatly from the cold on their way to Babylon. See Tan. B. III, 41.—Just as the destruction of the Temple would never have been accomplished by the Babylonians, if they had not been assisted by God in a miraculous way (comp. above), even so was the conquest of Jerusalem brought about directly by God. For two and a half years Nebuchadnezzar besieged the holy city without making the slightest progress. He finally decided to raise the siege and return to Babylon. When he was about to carry out his intention, the thought occurred to him (thus did God ordain) to measure the height of the city walls, and after taking the measurements in two days he found out to his great joy that the walls sank daily two and a half hand-breadths. He remained outside the walls till they had disappeared entirely, and he entered the city. See Ekah, introduction, 30. On the view that the gates of the Temple opened of themselves, see Yoma 39b and Josephus, Bell., VI, 5.3, who reports this miracle to have taken place shortly before the destruction of the second Temple. Comp. note 24 (end). The designation of the Temple as Lebanon (Yoma, loc. cit., Gittin 56b, and 2 Targum Esther 1.2, 12), is also known to Jerome; comp. his commentary on Jerem. 22.20. Azulai, Midbar Kedemot, s. v. ירמיה, quotes from a Midrash on Lam. the following legend: Jeremiah and Nebuchadnezzar were intimate friends in their childhood. The future ruler of the world once said to his Jewish friend: "If I become king, I shall burn the Temple of Jerusalem, destroy the city, and drive its people into exile."

Jeremiah, who knew by the Holy Spirit that Nebuchadnezzar was destined to do great things, began to plead with him for the Jews, but without much success. The only request he granted him was that he (Jeremiah) should be permitted to save as many as would be able to leave Jerusalem in the few hours from noon until sunset. When the fatal day of the destruction of the Temple arrived, Jeremiah was absent from the city (compare with p. 1075), returning to it about sunset, and thus was unable to save a person. Comp. also Horowitz, Bet Eked, I, 37, whose reference to the source of this legend is misleading, as there can be no doubt that he copied it from Azulai. Bernstein, König Nebuchadnezzar, 27, note 1, gives a somewhat different version of this legend, alleged to be taken from "cabbalistic works"; but the correctness of the statement may be doubted. Bernstein, ibid., quotes from "cabbalistic works" the legend that Nebuchadnezzar, greatly moved by the tears and lamentations of his friend Jeremiah, ordered to have the Temple rebuilt and the people return from the exile. It is quite certain that Jewish sources contain nothing of the kind, and it seems that Bernstein must have confused Jewish with Arabic sources. Comp. Mas'udi, Muruj al-Dhahab, I, 100.

30. Gittin 57b; Sanhedrin 96b; Ekah 4, 148–149, and introduction, 23; Yerushalmi Ta'anit 4, 69b; PK 15, 122a–122b; Koheleth 3.16 and 10.4; 2 Targum Esther 1.2, 12. In the last-named source Nebuchadnezzar and not Nebuzaradan is the avenger of the prophet Zechariah. In Sanhedrin, loc. cit. (comp. also ShR 46.4), it is explicitly stated that the king was not present at the conquest of Jerusalem, which was entirely the work of Nebuzaradan. It is true that the Bible speaks of the campaign against Jerusalem as the work of Nebuchadnezzar; but this is due to the fact that the general was so overawed by the king that whatever he did he considered it as the work of his master, whose likeness he had attached to his chariot, so that he might always be reminded of him. Apocalypse of Daniel (beginning) follows in the main Sanhedrin, but has one new point to the effect that it was Gedaliah the son of Ahikam who told Nebuzaradan the real cause of the seething blood. This explains why he was appointed governor over Judah by the Babylonian general. On the virgins who wove the curtains for the sanctuary, see also Apocalypse of Baruch 10. 18–19. Midrash Aggada on Num. 30.15 (158) maintains that the blood of the murdered Zechariah bespattered the walls of the sanctuary, and in consequence thereof the Shekinah left the Temple and did not return until the time of Isaiah. Comp. the references in note 27 on the "stations of the Shekinah". Ratner, note 17 on Seder 'Olam 27, justly suggests that the Zechariah legend was known to this tannaitic work. In the Christian Apocryphon Protevangelium of James 24, Zechariah, the father of John the Baptist, is substituted for his namesake Zechariah, the prophet and high priest in the time of King Joash.

Compare with p. 1038. In Matth. 22.35 (but not in the parallel passage Luke 11.51) the father of the murdered prophet is called Berechiah, owing to a confusion of the pre-exilic prophet Zechariah (the son of Jehoiada) with the post-exilic prophet, the author of the biblical book Zechariah, whose father's name was Berechiah. Comp. also Josephus, Bell., IV, 5.4; Moore, Journal of Oriental Society, XVI, 317, seq. Midrash Aggadah, loc. cit., counts the following martyred prophets: Hur (comp. Index, s. v.); Shemai-ah, who was killed by Basha, king of the ten tribes; Ahiah of Shiloh (compare footnote 5 on p. 981); Zechariah, who was killed by king Joash; Isaiah who was sawn asunder by Manasseh (comp. Index, s. v.); Jeremiah, who was stoned by the Egyptian Jews. Comp. note 42. For the miracle of the never-congealing blood, comp. also the quotation from an unknown Midrash in J.Q.R., N. S. VII, 133, with regard to the blood of the goat slaughtered by the brethren of Joseph (comp. Gen. 37.31), which, it is said, will remain uncongealed until the advent of the Messiah. As to the large number of priests killed by Nebuzaradan, see also Ekah 2, 108. As to the latter's conversion to Judaism, compare with p. 1082, where it is assumed that he remained in the service of Nebuchadnezzar even after the destruction of the Temple, and accordingly he did not become a proselyte. In Sanhedrin, loc. cit., it is stated that God intended to have Nebuchadnezzar's descendants become proselytes, but the angels objected, for they did not want the wicked king who destroyed God's house to be granted such a distinction. With regard to the army which participated in the destruction of the Temple, the view is expressed that it will not rise on the day of resurrection, but at the same time it will be spared the torments of hell. See Yerushalmi Shebi'it 4, 35c; Ruth R. 1, 17. Comp. also Tosefta Sanhedrin 13.5 and Seder 'Olam 3 (end).

THE GREAT LAMENT

On his return from Anathoth, Jeremiah saw, at a distance, smoke curling upward from the Temple mount, and his spirit was joyful. He thought the Jews had repented of their sins, and were bringing incense offerings. Once within the city walls, he knew the truth, that the Temple had fallen a prey to the incendiary. Overwhelmed by grief, he cried out: "O Lord, Thou didst entice me, and I permitted myself to be enticed; Thou didst send me forth out of Thy house that Thou mightest destroy it."<sup>31</sup>

God Himself was deeply moved by the destruction of the Temple, which He had abandoned that the enemy might enter and destroy it. Accompanied by the angels, He visited the ruins, and gave vent to His sorrow: "Woe is Me on account of My house. Where are My children, where My priests, where My beloved? But what could I do for you? Did I not warn you? Yet you would not mend your ways." "To-day", God said to Jeremiah, "I am like a man who has an only son. He prepares the marriage canopy for him, and his only beloved dies under it. Thou dost seem to feel but little sympathy with Me and with My children. Go, summon Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Moses from their graves. They know how to mourn." "Lord of the world," replied Jeremiah, "I know not where Moses is buried." "Stand on the banks of the Jordan," said God, "and cry: 'Thou son of Amram, son of Amram, arise, see how wolves have devoured thy sheep.'"

Jeremiah repaired to the Double Cave, and spake to the Patriarchs: "Arise, ye are summoned to appear before God." When they asked him the reason of the summons, he feigned ignorance, for he feared to tell them the true reason; they might have cast reproaches upon him that so great a disaster had overtaken Israel in his time. Then Jeremiah journeyed on to the banks of the Jordan, and there he called as he had been bidden: "Thou son of Amram, son of Amram, arise, thou art cited to appear before God." "What has happened this day, that God calls me unto Him?" asked Moses. "I know not," replied Jeremiah again. Moses thereupon went to the angels, and from them he learned that the Temple had been destroyed, and Israel banished from his land. Weeping and mourning, Moses joined the Patriarchs, and together, rending their garments and wringing their hands, they betook themselves to the ruins of the Temple. Here their wailing was augmented by the loud lamentations of the angels:<sup>32</sup> “How desolate are the highways to Jerusalem, the highways destined for travel without end! How deserted are the streets that once were thronged at the seasons of the pilgrimages! O Lord of the world, with Abraham the father of Thy people, who taught the world to know Thee as the ruler of the universe, Thou didst make a covenant, that through him and his descendants the earth should be filled with people, and now Thou hast dissolved Thy covenant with him. O Lord of the world! Thou hast scorned Zion and Jerusalem, once Thy chosen habitation. Thou hast dealt more hardly with Israel than with the generation of Enosh, the first idolaters.”

God thereupon said to the angels: “Why do ye array yourselves against Me with your complaints?” “Lord of the world,” they replied, “on account of Abraham, Thy beloved, who has come into Thy house wailing and weeping, yet Thou payest no heed unto him.” Thereupon God: “Since My beloved ended his earthly career, he has not been in My house. ‘What hath My beloved to do in My house?’”<sup>33</sup>

Now Abraham entered into the conversation: “Why, O Lord of the world, hast Thou exiled my children, delivered them into the hands of the nations, who torture them with all tortures, and who have rendered desolate the sanctuary, where I was ready to bring Thee my son Isaac as a sacrifice?” “Thy children have sinned,” said God, “they have transgressed the whole Torah, they have offended against every letter of it.” Abraham: “Who is there that will testify against Israel, that he has transgressed the Torah?” God: “Let the Torah herself appear and testify.” The Torah came, and Abraham addressed her: “O my daughter, dost thou indeed come to testify against Israel, to say that he violated thy commandments? Dost thou feel no shame? Remember the day on which God offered thee to all the peoples, all the nations of the earth, and they all rejected thee with disdain.<sup>34</sup> Then my children came to Sinai, they accepted thee, and they honored thee. And now, on the day of their distress, thou standest up against them?” Hearing this, the Torah stepped aside, and did not testify. “Let the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet in which the Torah is written come and testify against Israel,” said God. They appeared without delay, and Alef, the first letter, was about to testify against Israel, when Abraham interrupted it with the words: “Thou chief of all letters, thou comest to testify against Israel in the time of his distress? Be mindful of the day on which God revealed Himself on Mount Sinai, beginning His words with thee: ‘Anoki the Lord thy God.’ No people, no nation accepted thee, only my children, and now thou comest to testify against them!” Alef stepped aside and was silent. The same happened with the second letter Bet,<sup>35</sup> and with the third, Gimel, and with all the rest—all of them retired abashed, and opened not their mouth. Now Abraham turned to God and said: “O Lord of the world! When I was a hundred years old, Thou didst give me a son, and when he was in the flower of his age, thirty-seven years old, Thou didst command me to sacrifice him to Thee, and I, like a monster, without compassion, I bound him upon the altar with mine own hands. Let that plead with Thee, and have Thou pity on my children.”

Then Isaac raised his voice and spake: “O Lord of the world, when my father told me, ‘God will provide Himself the lamb for a burnt offering, my son,’ I did not resist Thy word. Willingly I let myself be tied to the altar, my throat was raised to meet the knife. Let that plead with Thee, and have Thou pity on my children.”

Then Jacob raised his voice and spake: “O Lord of the world, for twenty years I dwelt in the house of Laban, and when I left it, I met with Esau, who sought to murder my children, and I risked my life for theirs. And now they are delivered into the hands of their enemies, like sheep led to the shambles, after I coddled them like fledglings breaking forth from their shells, after I suffered anguish for their sake all the days of my life. Let that plead with Thee, and have Thou pity on my children.”

And at last Moses raised his voice and spake: “O Lord of the world, was I not a faithful shepherd unto Israel for forty long years? Like a steed I ran ahead of him in the desert, and when the time came for him to enter the Promised Land, Thou didst command: ‘Here in the desert shall thy bones drop!’ And now that the children of Israel are exiled, Thou hast sent for me to mourn and lament over them. That is what the people mean when they say: The good fortune of the master is none for the slave, but the master’s woe is his woe.” And turning to Jeremiah, he continued: “Walk before me, I will lead them back; let us see who will venture to raise a hand against them.” Jeremiah replied: “The roads cannot be passed, they are blocked with corpses.” But Moses was not to be deterred, and the two, Moses following Jeremiah, reached the rivers of Babylon. When the Jews saw Moses, they said: “The son of Amram has ascended from his grave to redeem us from our enemies.”<sup>36</sup> At that moment a heavenly voice was heard to cry out: “It is decreed!” And Moses said: “O my children, I cannot redeem you, the decree is unalterable—may God redeem you speedily,” and he departed from them.

The children of Israel raised their voices in sore lamentation, and the sound of their grief pierced to the very heavens. Meantime Moses returned to the Fathers, and reported to them to what dire suffering the exiled Jews were exposed, and they all broke out into woe-begone plaints.<sup>37</sup> In his bitter grief, Moses exclaimed: “Be cursed, O sun, why was not thy light extinguished in the hour in which the enemy invaded the sanctuary?” The sun replied: “O faithful shepherd, I swear by thy life, I could not grow dark. The heavenly powers would not permit it. Sixty fiery scourges they dealt me, and they said, ‘Go and let thy light shine forth.’”<sup>38</sup> Another last complaint Moses uttered: “O Lord of the world, Thou hast written it in Thy Torah: ‘And whether it be cow or ewe, ye shall not kill it and her young both in one day.’ How many mothers have they slaughtered with their children—and Thou art silent!”

Then, with the suddenness of a flash, Rachel, our mother, stood before the Holy One, blessed be He: “Lord of the world,” she said, “Thou knowest how overwhelming was Jacob’s love for me, and when I observed that my father thought to put Leah in my place, I gave Jacob secret signs, that the plan of my father might be set at naught. But then I repented me of what I had done, and to spare my sister mortification, I disclosed the signs to her. More than this, I myself was in the bridal chamber, and when Jacob spake with Leah, I made reply, lest her voice betray her. I, a woman, a creature of flesh and blood, of dust and ashes, was not jealous of my rival. Thou, O God, everlasting King, Thou eternal and merciful Father, why wast Thou jealous of the idols, empty vanities? Why hast Thou driven out my children, slain them with the sword, left them at the mercy of their enemies?” Then the compassion of the Supreme God was awakened, and He said: “For thy sake, O Rachel, I will lead the children of Israel back to their land.”<sup>39</sup>

31. PR 26, 131. Compare with p. 1075.

32. On the weeping of the angels (=Is. 33.8), see also text on p. 229. On this occasion as well as on those of the flood and of the drowning of the Egyptians God silenced the song of the angels; Ekah, introduction, 24,24. Compare pp. 564–565, note 60, and pp. 836–837, note 958.

The weeping of the angels at the destruction of the Temple is also found in Apocalypse of Baruch 77.2.

33. On the designation of Abraham as the “friend” and “beloved” of God, see text on p. 168, note 4.

34. On the rejection of the Torah by the “other nations”, see text on p. 593.

35. In the Midrash the words of Abraham addressed to the first three letters only of the alphabet are given.

36. On the part of Moses in the Messianic work of redemption, see text on pp. 500, 541; text on pp. 734, 838. For the designation of “faithful shepherd”, see text on p. 500.

37. The complaints of Moses and the people are later insertions in the old legend about the great lament, as may be seen from the language, which is Aramaic, whereas the rest is Hebrew. Similarly the Rachel episode did not originally form part of this legend.

38. For a similar case where the sun is forced to do his work, see text on pp. 671–672. On the “sixty fiery scourges”, see p. 810, footnote 896 and p. 1013, footnote 84.

39. Ekah, introduction, 24, Ekah Z., 63, 66–67, 71–73, 138–140, 142–144. See also Menahot 53b, which reads: In the hour when the Temple was destroyed God found Abraham there praying. God said to him: “What doth My beloved in My house?” “I came on account of my children,” replied Abraham. “Thy children”, said God, “have committed sins, and have been banished.” “Perhaps”, rejoined Abraham, “without intention, through ignorance.” “No,” said God, “they did it presumptuously.” “May be”, pleaded Abraham, “only a small portion of them sinned.” “No,” remonstrated God, “many of them are guilty.” “Had it been Thy will,” rejoined Abraham, “they would have repented.” “Nay,” said God, “their wickedness waxeth when they prosper.” Abraham then began to weep and mourn, saying: “God forbid that there should be no salvation for them.” A heavenly voice then proclaimed: “The Lord called thy (Israel’s) name ‘A green olive-tree’ (Jer. 11.16); Israel is like an olive-tree: its product comes after pressure and crushing; even so will Israel’s salvation come after its suffering.” This account is a haggadic paraphrase of Jer. 11.15–16. In BHM V, 63–64, it is Jacob who leads in the great lament, and makes the angels, as well as the souls of the pious (in line 2 from below וְנִשְׁמָתָן is to be read), weep for Israel. He was consoled only after he had received assurance from God that Israel’s sufferings at the hands of his oppressors would save him from torments of hell. Compare with pp. 198–199. For another version of the lament, see 2 Targum Esther 1.2 (towards the end); ARN 4, 24, 165; second version 7, 21; ER 28, 148–150; Ekah 1, 42, 56, and 59; PR 28, 135; PK 22, 148b (אֲחֵרֶת פִּסְקָא). In Pesikta the whole of nature mourns for Israel. It is very likely presupposed here that with the destruction of the Temple nature deteriorated, and will not regain its former excellence until the advent of the Messiah. Comp. Sotah Mishnah 9.2; Tosefta 15.1–2; Babli 48b–49a; Yerushalmi 9, 24b. See also Pesahim 42b; Baba Batra 25b; Tan. Tezawweh 13. For further references to the great lament, see Berakot 3a; 7a (top), 59a; Hagigah 5b; an unknown Midrash quoted by Makiri on Is. 52, 195 and 196 (the paragraph כְּנָגֵדָם אָמַר דָּוִד on p. 196 is quoted as Pesikta in Makiri on Ps. 31, 204); Zohar III, 172a. The Zohar legend about the “tears of God”, shed for the suffering of Israel, turning into pearls is probably based on Berakot 59a. On Rachel’s intercession for her children, see text on pp. 284, 318; footnote 202 on p. 288; text on p. 403; ER 28, 148; ps.-Rashi on Abot 3.12. Although the destruction of the Temple was a great loss, it was nevertheless fortunate that God poured out His wrath upon “stones and wood” and not upon Israel. The destruction of the Temple saved Israel from annihilation. See Kiddushin 31b (comp. Rashi caption מִלְתָּא אִיסְתַּעֲיִיא מִלְתָּא); Tehillim 79, 360, and 92, 408 (which reads: Songs and music at the erection of the Temple, and songs and music at the destruction of the Temple); Ekah 4, 148; ER 28, 150–151. In the exile God made Israel swear five oaths: not to attempt to reconquer the Holy Land by force of arms; not to rebel against the nations ruling over them; not to divulge the appointed time of the redemption; not to despair of the final redemption (this, it seems, is the meaning of יִרְחֹק שְׁלֹא; differently Rashi); not to divulge the “secret” (of the calendar) to the other nations. At the same time God made the nations swear not to oppress Israel too hard. See Ketubot 111a; Shir 2.7. Comp. also Tan. B. I, 38–39, and the parallel passages cited by Buber in note 134. God assured Israel that He would redeem them in the time to come, not as the nations, and even Israel, thought that the destruction of the Temple amounted to the repudiation of Israel. See ShR 31.10; PR 31, 143b, 146b; Berakot 32b.

JEREMIAH’S JOURNEY TO BABYLON

When Nebuchadnezzar dispatched his general Nebuzaradan to the capture of Jerusalem, he gave him three instructions regarding the mild treatment of Jeremiah: “Take him, and look well to him, and do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.” At the same time he enjoined him to use pitiless cruelty toward the rest of the people. But the prophet desired to share the fate of his suffering brethren, and when he saw a company of youths in the pillory, he put his own head into it. Nebuzaradan would always withdraw him again. Thereafter if Jeremiah saw a company of old men clapped in chains, he would join them and share their ignominy, until Nebuzaradan released him. Finally, Nebuzaradan said to Jeremiah: "Lo, thou art one of three things; either thou art a prophet of false things, or thou art a despiser of suffering, or thou art a shedder of blood. A prophet of false things—for since many a year hast thou been prophesying the downfall of this city, and now, when thy prophecy has come true, thou sorrowest and mournest. Or a despiser of suffering—for I seek to do thee naught harmful, and thou thyself pursuest what is harmful to thee, as though to say, 'I am indifferent to pain.' Or a shedder of blood—for the king has charged me to have a care of thee, and let no harm come upon thee, but as thou insistest upon seeking evil for thyself, it must be that the king may hear of thy misfortune, and put me to death."<sup>40</sup>

At first Jeremiah refused Nebuzaradan's offer to let him remain in Palestine. He joined the march of the captives going to Babylon, along the highways streaming with blood and strewn with corpses. When they arrived at the borders of the Holy Land, they all, prophet and people, broke out into loud wails, and Jeremiah said: "Yes, brethren and countrymen, all this hath befallen you, because ye did not hearken unto the words of my prophecy."<sup>41</sup> Jeremiah journeyed with them until they came to the banks of the Euphrates. Then God spoke to the prophet: "Jeremiah, if thou remainest here, I shall go with them, and if thou goest with them, I shall remain here." Jeremiah replied: "Lord of the world, if I go with them, what doth it avail them? Only if their King, their Creator accompanies them, will it bestead them."<sup>42</sup>

When the captives saw Jeremiah make preparations to return to Palestine, they began to weep and cry: "O Father Jeremiah, wilt thou, too, abandon us?" "I call heaven and earth to witness," said the prophet, "had you wept but once in Zion, ye had not been driven out."<sup>43</sup>

Beset with terrors was the return journey for the prophet. Corpses lay everywhere, and Jeremiah gathered up all the fingers that lay about; he strained them to his heart, fondled them, kissed them, and wrapped them in his mantle, saying sadly: "Did I not tell you, my children, did I not say to you, 'Give glory to the Lord your God, before He cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains?'"<sup>44</sup>

Dejected, oppressed by his grief, Jeremiah saw the fulfilment of his prophecy against the coquettish maidens of Jerusalem, who had pursued but the pleasures and enjoyments of the world. How often had the prophet admonished them to do penance and lead a God-fearing life! In vain; whenever he threatened them with the destruction of Jerusalem, they said: "Why should we concern ourselves about it?" "A prince will take me unto wife," said one; the other, "A perfect will marry me." And at first it seemed the expectations of Jerusalem's fair daughters would be realized, for the most aristocratic of the victorious Chaldeans were charmed by the beauty of the women of Jerusalem, and offered them their hand and their rank. But God sent disfiguring and repulsive diseases upon the women, and the Babylonians cast them off, threw them violently out of their chariots, and ruthlessly drove them over the prostrate bodies.<sup>45</sup>

---

40. Ekah, introduction, 34; PK 13, 113a–113b; PR 29, 137a.

41. PR 27, 131b. Comp. the references given in the preceding note.

42. Ekah, introduction, 34; PK 13, 113b. On the idea that God accompanied Israel in exile, see also PR 31, 144b, and footnote 4 on p. 433. Opinions differ as to the fate of Jeremiah (and Baruch) after he had been carried off to Egypt. According to our text of Seder 'Olam 26, when Nebuchadnezzar conquered Egypt, Jeremiah and Baruch were “exiled by him to Babylon”, whereas Rashi, on Jer. 44.14, has Palestine instead of Babylon. Comp. also Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 1, 19a (top), and the parallel passages on margin, where it is stated that Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Baruch fixed the calendar outside the Holy Land; as the context shows, this can only refer to Babylon. With regard to Baruch, Megillah 16b explicitly states that he lived (and died) in Babylon. This is in agreement with Baruch 1.1. Comp. also Ratner note 50 on Seder ‘Olam 26, and Ha-Misderonah I, 37. In Apocalypse of Baruch 10 and 33 it is said that Jeremiah was told by God to go to Babylon to console the exiles, whereas Baruch remained in the Holy Land with the rest of the people. According to The Rest of Words 4.5, Jeremiah was carried off captive to Babylon. The different versions about Jeremiah’s martyrdom reflect the difference of opinion as to the country in which the prophet finally settled. The legend about the prophet’s martyrdom is very likely of Jewish origin, although the rabbinic literature contains only one reference to it. But Heb. 11.37 seems to allude to it. An unknown Midrash quoted in Midrash Aggada, Num. 30.15, reads as follows: The Jews in Egypt stoned Jeremiah, but his body was buried by the Egyptians who loved him, because through his prayers the crocodiles (on התמנו חיים, see Löw in Judaica, 341) disappeared from the Nile, and ceased to ravage the country. Later Alexander disinterred the body, and buried it in Alexandria. On Jeremiah as a helper against the crocodiles, see also the extract from an Armenian pseudepigraphic work in Apocrypha Anecdota, II, 164. The legend about the prophet’s martyrdom in ps.-Epiphanius, De Vitis Prophetarum, s. v. “Jeremiah”, agrees in the main with Midrash Aggada. On the other hand, the Rest of Words, 9, maintains that Jeremiah suffered his martyrdom not in Egypt (=Tapheneh in ps.-Epiphanius), but in Jerusalem, and a popular tradition still current points to a spot in the north of the holy city as the prophet’s grave. Jeremiah’s martyrdom is also mentioned in Visio Pauli 49, and by Hippolytus, Susanna 1.1. Other Christian writers (comp. Victorinus of Peteau, Apocalypse of John, 11.1; ps.-Tertullian, Carmen Adversus Marcionitas 3, 245 and 257) count Jeremiah among those who never “tasted death”. This view must have been widespread, as it left its traces in Arabic sources (comp. Friedlaender, Chadhirlegende, 269–270). Still it is very doubtful whether it is of Jewish origin. It is more likely that Christian legend transferred to Jeremiah certain features which originally belonged to his disciple Baruch (on a similar confusion between master and disciple, see note 66, end), who, according to Jewish tradition was one of those who “entered paradise alive”; compare with p. 1093. See also the remarks in notes 13 and 66 on Jeremiah as one of the “two witnesses”. In ‘Aktan IV (end; Carmoly’s edition) it is said that Jeremiah prayed for death, as he could no longer endure to see Israel suffer. Whereupon a heavenly voice was heard saying: “Wait until thou seest the destruction of Babylon, and then I will grant thee peace (אניחך), until I build My house for ever.” God then “hid” him. This undoubtedly presupposes that the prophet did not die, but it may be doubted whether this passage is genuine, as it seems to be a fabrication of Carmoly’s. Jeremiah is not among the “ten pious men”, who, according to ‘Aktan 1, “entered paradise alive”. The statement in Shalsholet 99b–100a, 101a about the martyrdom of Jeremiah and about his meeting with Plato in Egypt (who first ridiculed the prophet, but later admired him) is taken from Christian sources. Comp. also Abravanel on Jer. 5.1.—The Ben Sira legend is so closely interwoven with the life of Jeremiah that it may be worth while to give here its main feature in connection with the Jeremiah legends. This prophet surprised once, in a public bath, wicked men of the tribe of Ephraim, and found them committing onanism; he reproached them for their sin. Far from repenting, they forced the prophet to follow their example, threatening that if he refused, they would commit sodomy, using him as the object of their lust. Shortly after the prophet’s virgin daughter came to bathe in the same place, and conceived by absorbing the sperm released by her father. Nine months later she gave birth to a son, who, immediately after he left his mother’s womb (comp. note 12), began to speak, saying to her: “Do not be ashamed though the people may accuse thee of having led an immoral life, tell them that I am Ben Sira, that is, ‘the son of Jeremiah’ ” (the numerical value of סירה is 271, the same as that of ירמיהו). After a long conversation with his mother, in which he told her, among other things, that his father Jeremiah likewise spoke immediately after his birth (compare with p. 1067), he requested her to provide him with a good meal consisting of bread, meat, and wine, as he was not like other infants who are nourished by the breasts of their mothers. At the age of one year he was sent to school, where his display of wisdom and learning caused masters and pupils to marvel. No sooner did the teacher begin to instruct him in the Hebrew alphabet than Ben Sira composed proverbs in accordance with the order of the letters. The teacher exclaimed: “In truth, nature changed its order.” Ben Sira, however, remarked: “This is nothing new, as Baruch did it before me, when he composed the alphabetic lamentations (Book of Lamentations) at the command of Jeremiah, who recited to him the letters of the alphabet, while he immediately formed the verses.” Ben Sira spent seven years at school; when he left it, there was nothing “big or small” which he did not know. He could tell, for instance, by looking at it how many grains a measure (= seah) of wheat contains. The fame of his wisdom spread all over the world, and hence the wise men of Nebuchadnezzar became envious of him, and by means of slander and all kinds of wild accusations attempted to have Nebuchadnezzar kill him, but all his machinations against him were of no avail. Nebuchadnezzar was even ready to abdicate his throne in his favor, but Ben Sira refused to become king, as he was not a descendant of David. Nebuchadnezzar then wanted him to marry his daughter, but, of course, he refused to marry a Gentile woman. For this affront the king was about to kill him, but Ben Sira's great wisdom saved him. See 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira. This curious little book, containing fables, legends, and tales, in all of which Ben Sira is the central figure, is not of a homogeneous character. The unusual (not miraculous) birth, the marvellous precociousness, and other features of the Ben Sira legend are decidedly anti-Christian in character. Jesus, the son of Sira (= Ben Sira) is contrasted with Jesus, the son of Mary, and the former appears in a more favorable light. See Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, II, 680, where it is shown that the gnostic work Evangel of the Childhood of Jesus was the model after which the Ben Sira legend was fashioned. Comp. also Ginzberg, Zeitschrift für Hebräische Bibliographie, XI, 125–126, and BHM V, 37. The Arabic sources tell a great deal about the relation between Nebuchadnezzar and Joseph, and the part played in these sources by Joseph (i. e., Aesop) is practically the same as that ascribed to Ben Sira in the Jewish legend. Comp. Hochfeld, Beiträge zur Syrischen Fabel-literatur. When Ben Sira was about to begin to study the Book of Yezirah, a heavenly voice was heard saying: "Thou canst not do it alone." He went to his father and they studied it together. At the end of three years a man was created by them (i. e., following the instructions of the book, they succeeded in doing so; comp. Sanhedrin 65b and 76b), on whose forehead was written Emet (אמת), "truth" (comp. Yoma 69b, which reads: Emet is the seal of God), as on Adam's forehead. The man thus created said to them: "God created Adam, and when He decided that he should die, He erased one letter from the word Emet, and Adam was dead (מת "dead" = אמת without the first letter). I greatly desire that ye do the same to me, and that ye never again create a man, that the world go not astray through him like the generation of Enosh" (compare with p. 117). The man they created further said to them: "Transpose the order of the letters (by means of which he was created), and erase the Alef from the word Emet on my forehead." They did so, and he immediately turned into dust. See Sefer ha-Gematria quoted from MS. by Epstein, Mikkadmoniyot, 122–123. A somewhat different version of this legend is found in Kaneh 36a, and hence in Yalkut Reubeni on Gen. 1.26, 9d, where פליאה is given as source. The complete title of Kaneh is והוא ספר הקנה והוא ס' הפליאה. Ben Sira imparted his secret lore to his son Uz-ziah and his grandson Joseph. When he had done so, the Holy Spirit called out: "Who is it that revealed My secrets to mankind?" Ben Sira (the numerical value of ירמיה בר is 469, and hence עצט"ש = בר ירמיה, i. e., Ben Sira) arose and said: "I, Buzi the son of Buzi." The Holy Spirit said to him: "Enough!" Immediately Joseph (his grandson) sat down and wrote the words dictated to him by Ben Sira in five books. See quotation from a MS. (Paris Codex 762) by Barges, Tagin, 10. On the son and grandson of Ben Sira, see Epstein, Ha-Hoker II, 41, and Mordell, J.Q.R., N.S., III, 529–534. On Buzi = Jeremiah, see note 93. The identification of Ben Sira with the high priest Joshua the son of Jehozadak, found on the title page of some editions of Alphabet of Ben Sira, is of Christian origin; comp. Nestle in Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible, IV, 542, who gives references to the Latin MSS. of Eccclus. where the author is described as the son of Jehozadak. See also Shebet Yehudah 2, which reads: The second persecution of the Jews took place in the time of Ben Sira; it was a very severe persecution, but I do not know the cause thereof. I found it written that on this occasion thirty thousand souls apostatized from the religion of Moses, and those who remained steadfast were burned as martyrs. This Ben Sira is Joshua ben Sira, the grandson of Joshua the son of Jehozadak, the high priest, known among the Christians as Josephus Sirach. He composed the book of Ecclesiasticus in use among Christians, who consider it as a biblical book, on account of its great wisdom and value.

43. Pr. 26, 131b. This is followed by the description of the "mourning woman". The prophet met a woman in mourning, who informed him that she was mourning and weeping for her husband who "went far away from her", and for her seven sons, who in the absence of their father, were killed by a house falling upon them (comp. Job 1.19; Friedmann's text is to be corrected in accordance with the Parma MS; see Halper, Post-Biblical Hebrew Literature, Hebrew volume, 16 and 210). Jeremiah attempted to console her, saying to her: "Thou art not better than my mother Zion, and yet she became pasture for the beasts of the field." The woman answered: "I am thy mother Zion, I am the mother who lost her seven children" (comp. Jer. 15.9). Jeremiah then consoled her, pointing out that her fate was similar to that of Job, and like him she would at the end be compensated for all her suffering. He closed his consoling address with the message of God: "A mortal of flesh and blood built thee, a mortal of flesh and blood laid thee waste; but in the future I shall build thee." A similar vision is also found in 4 Ezra 9.38–10.28; yet it is inconceivable that there is direct dependence of the Midrash upon Ezra. Comp. Lévi, R.E.J. XXIV, 281–285. A poetical rendering of this vision is Kalir's dirge אז במלאת קינות according to the Ashkenazic ritual.

44. Ekah, introduction, 34; PK 13, 113b. Not only did they not heed the warnings and admonitions of the prophets, but they even mocked at him and his prophecies; Mishle 1, 48. Yea, they went so far in their wickedness, that they spread a rumor that Jeremiah was leading an immoral life. These false accusations raised against him embittered him greatly, and he prayed to God to make “his enemies stumble” (comp. Jer. 18.23). By this he meant that even when they performed charitable deeds, the recipients thereof should be unworthy and undeserving. See Baba Kamma 16b.

45. PK 17, 132a–133b; PR 31, 145b; WR 16.1; Ekah 4, 150–151; Ekah Z., 71 and 142; Yoma 9b; Tan. B. III, 42; Shabbat 62b–63b. In the last-named passage the statement is found that the wood growing in Jerusalem had the pleasant flavor of cinnamon (and could be used as perfume by the women). But at the time of the destruction this kind of wood was “hidden” (= disappeared), with the exception of a very small piece which was preserved and is to be found in the treasure of queen Zamzamai (=Zenobia, queen of Palmyra). On cinnamon in Palestine see the references given by Löw, Aramäische Pflanzennamen, 292. There was so much cinnamon there that it was used as fodder for goats. Comp. Yerushalmi Peah 7, 20a (bottom). When the holy city was conquered, Nebuchadnezzar issued an order to his armies to refrain from any immoral acts with married women, because the “God of the Jews hates unchastity”. All the single women in Jerusalem got quickly married, to protect themselves against any attack by the Babylonian soldiers, with the exception of three widows who remained unprovided with husbands, and they were the only women who were ravished. See Ekah 5, 157 and Aggadat Shir 5, 38. Against this view comp. Yebamot 16b, which, explicitly speaks of the licentiousness displayed by the Babylonian troops on this occasion. See further Ekah 1, 46 (bottom); 5, 157 (the explanation of טוֹחַן as a euphemism for בעֵל, “had sexual intercourse”, is known also to Jerome on Is. 47, 2, who, in agreement with Sotah 10a, takes טוֹחַן in Jud. 16.21 to have this meaning; compare note 121 on p. 880); Esther R. 2.3; Targum on Lam. 5.13. As to the beauty of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, see also Kiddushin 49b (which reads: Of ten measures of beauty Jerusalem has nine and the rest of the world one); ARN 28.85. Comp. further Gittin 58a; Targum on Lam. 4.2; text on p. 1101, with regard to the great charms of the young men of Jerusalem.

TRANSPORTATION OF THE CAPTIVES

Nebuchadnezzar's orders were to hurry the captives along the road to Babylon without stop or stay. He feared the Jews might else find opportunity to supplicate the mercy of God, and He, compassionate as He is, would release them instantly they did penance.<sup>46</sup> Accordingly, there was no pause in the forward march, until the Euphrates was reached. There they were within the borders of the empire of Nebuchadnezzar, and he thought he had nothing more to fear.

Many of the Jews died as soon as they drank of the Euphrates. In their native land they had been accustomed to the water drawn from springs and wells. Mourning over their dead and over the others that had fallen by the way, they sat on the banks of the river, while Nebuchadnezzar and his princes on their vessels celebrated their victory amid song and music. The king noticed that the princes of Judah, though they were in chains, bore no load upon their shoulders, and he called to his servants: “Have you no load for these?” They took the parchment scrolls of the law, tore them in pieces, made sacks of them, and filled them with sand; these they loaded upon the backs of the Jewish princes. At sight of this disgrace, all Israel broke out into loud weeping. The voice of their sorrow pierced the very heavens, and God determined to turn the world once more into chaos, for He told Himself, that after all the world was created but for the sake of Israel. The angels hastened thither, and they spake before God: “O Lord of the world, the universe is Thine. Is it not enough that Thou hast dismembered thy earthly house, the Temple? Wilt Thou destroy Thy heavenly house, too?” God restraining them said: “Do ye think I am a creature of flesh and blood, and stand in need of consolation? Do I not know beginning and end of all things? Go rather and remove their burdens from the princes of Judah.” Aided by God the angels descended, and they carried the loads put upon the Jewish captives until they reached Babylon.

On their way, they passed the city of Bari.<sup>47</sup> The inhabitants thereof were not a little astonished at the cruelty of Nebuchadnezzar, who made the captives march naked. The people of Bari stripped their slaves of their clothes, and presented the slaves to Nebuchadnezzar. When the king expressed his astonishment thereat, they said: "We thought thou wert particularly pleased with naked men." The king at once ordered the Jews to be arrayed in their garments. The reward accorded the Bariites was that God endowed them forever with beauty and irresistible grace.<sup>48</sup>

The compassionate Bariites did not find many imitators. The very opposite quality was displayed by the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, and Arabs. Despite their close kinship with Israel, their conduct toward the Jews was dictated by cruelty. The two first-mentioned, the Ammonites and the Moabites, when they heard the prophet foretell the destruction of Jerusalem, hastened without a moment's delay to report it to Nebuchadnezzar, and urge him to attack Jerusalem. The scruples of the Babylonian king, who feared God, and all the reasons he advanced against a combat with Israel, they refuted, and finally they induced him to act as they wished.<sup>49</sup> At the capture of the city, while all the strange nations were seeking booty, the Ammonites and the Moabites threw themselves into the Temple to seize the scroll of the law, because it contained the clause against their entering into the "assembly of the Lord even to the tenth generation."<sup>50</sup> To disgrace the faith of Israel, they plucked the Cherubim from the Holy of Holies and dragged them through the streets of Jerusalem, crying aloud at the same time: "Behold these sacred things that belong to the Israelites, who say ever they have no idols."

The Edomites were still more hostile<sup>51</sup> in the hour of Israel's need. They went to Jerusalem with Nebuchadnezzar, but they kept themselves at a distance from the city, there to await the outcome of the battle between the Jews and the Babylonians. If the Jews had been victorious, they would have pretended they had come to bring them aid. When Nebuchadnezzar's victory became known, they showed their true feelings. Those who escaped the sword of the Babylonians, were hewn down by the hand of the Edomites.<sup>52</sup>

But in fiendish cunning these nations were surpassed by the Ishmaelites. Eighty thousand young priests, each with a golden shield upon his breast, succeeded in making their way through the ranks of Nebuchadnezzar and in reaching the Ishmaelites. They asked for water to drink. The reply of the Ishmaelites was: "First eat, and then you may drink," at the same time handing them salt food. Their thirst was increased, and the Ishmaelites gave them leather bags filled with nothing but air instead of water. When they raised them to their mouths, the air entered their bodies, and they fell dead.

Other Arabic tribes showed their hostility openly; as the Palmyrenes, who put eighty thousand archers at the disposal of Nebuchadnezzar in his war against Israel.<sup>53</sup>

---

46. PR 28, 135a, and 31, 144a; Ekah 5, 155–156 (this command Nebuchadnezzar gave to Nebuzaradan who is called Arioch, in Dan. 2.14, who took charge of the transport of the exiles); Tehillim 137, 522; ER 28, 150.

47. PR 28, 135a–135b; Tehillim 137, 522–523; Targum on Lam. 5.5 (which reads: The holy books were torn in pieces, and the parchment was used for bags which, filled with water from the Euphrates, were carried by the princes of Judah); ER 28, 154; 2 Targum Esther 1.2 (towards the end). In the last passage it is asserted that Jeremiah said to Nebuchadnezzar and his army: "Go not to your idols to praise them; know that ye have taken captive and killed a people which was already captured and slain (i. e. it was God who made the victory over Jerusalem possible; compare with p. 1075, and Sanhedrin 96b, which reads: Thou killest a slain people, thou burnest a burned palace, thou grindest ground flour), and ye have no reason for vainglory." Jeremiah marched along with the captives beyond Bari (comp. the following note), until they reached a certain country, where he bitterly wept and sobbed. Two tears fell from his eyes, and they became two fountains which exist to this day. In the Christian legend (Acts of Andrew and Matthew towards the end) the flesh and hair torn from a martyr changed into trees. In the Midrashim quoted above, and especially in ER 28, 154, God's wrath against Israel changed into love for them, when the people at the banks of the Euphrates experienced in their hearts feelings of remorse and repentance of their sins. It was then that God broke out in a great lament (compare with pp. 1075, seq.) for the suffering of the people.

48. PR 28, 135b–136a; Tehillim 137, 523; 2 Targum Esther 1.2 (towards the end; בית בורי or rather בית כורו); Aggadat Bereshit 63, 128. On Bari (in Italy?), see Bacher, Monatsschrift, XLI, 604 and in R.E.J., XXXIII, 40–44; Lévi, R.E.J. XXXIII, 278–282 and XXXV, 224.

49. Sanhedrin 96b; Midrash Tannaim 145. As to Nebuchadnezzar's reluctance to undertake the campaign against Jerusalem, see text on pp. 1074–1075.

50. Yebamot 16b; Ekah 1, 74.

51. PK 19, 137–138a; Ekah, introduction, 9.

52. Yelammedenu in Yalkut on Obadiah; comp. also PK 19, 138a–138b; Midrash Shir 39a. On the Edomites as the destroyers of the Temple, see also PK 3, 25b, 26a–26b. On Edom = Rome, see Index, s. v. "Edom". Compare with p. 745. In Esther R. 1.2 it is said that the ואגוסטיאני דיקומני counselled Nebuchadnezzar to undertake the war against Jerusalem and to destroy the Jews. They were punished for their evil counsel, and they themselves were destroyed. The יכולנו וברקוליאני then took their place. As to the meaning and correct reading of the Hebrew words just quoted, see Sachs, Beiträge, I, 113; Cassel, An Explanatory Commentary on Esther, 17–19. דקוריני is very likely to be read instead of דיקומני and כלוני ופרטוריאני instead of יכולנו וברקוליאני. The Midrash remarks that the Decuriones and Augustiani (comp. Tacitus, Annales, XIV, 15.2, which reads: Equites Romani cognomento Augustianorum aetate ac robore conspicui) advised the destruction of the people, and as a punishment the power was taken away from them (the Senate) and given to the Calones and Praetoriani. R. Benjamin of Tudela, in his Itinerary 8, likewise reports that Titus undertook the campaign against Jerusalem at the special order of the Senate, the Decuriones and Augustiani of the Midrash. That Nebuchadnezzar stands here for Titus and that the account refers to the destruction of the second Temple is quite obvious. Comp. the following note and note 24 (end).

53. Yerushalmi Ta'anit 4, 69b; Ekah 2, 108; BR 53, 14; ShR 3.2 and 27.1; Tan. Yitro 5; Tehillim 5, 54–55. On the part played by the Palmyrenes in the destruction of the Temple, see also Yebamot 16b, and note 45. The tradition about the Palmyrene archers who took part in the campaign against Jerusalem is historically sound; comp. Cagnat, L'Armée Romaine au Siège de Jerusalem, in the supplement to R.E.J., XXII, 39. The legend, however, which is ever fond of drawing parallels, speaks not only of the participation of the Palmyrenes in the war against Jerusalem under Titus, but also of the assistance they rendered Nebuchadnezzar. The parallels are often carried so far that one is not quite sure whether the legend, in speaking of the destruction of the Temple, refers to that of the first or the second. The legend, for instance, about the birth of the Messiah on the day of the destruction of the Temple is often mentioned (Yerushalmi Berakot 2, 5a; Ekah 1, 89–90; Ekah Z., 133; Panim Aherim, 78; Aggadat Bereshit 67, 133; a quotation from an unknown Midrash by Grünhut in his edition of Makiri on Prov., 103b); but there is no way of telling whether the destruction of the first or the second Temple is meant. Comp. also the preceding note and note 24 (end). As to the sufferings of the exiles, see also Ekah, introduction, 6 (which reads: "their bodies burned"; from thirst?); 1, 61; ER 28, 154. In the last-named passage מיתת קרח means "a death like that of Korah", and not a "death by frost". On the death of Korah, see Sanhedrin 52a, and text on p. 725, according to which Korah and his congregation died by heavenly fire which consumed their souls, but left their bodies intact. In the same manner, remarks the Midrash, was the death of many of the exiles, whom God granted a sudden death, which did not distort or disfigure their bodies.—The death of the pious is as great a calamity as the destruction of the Temple, and hence the day on which the pious Gedaliah was killed (on the third of Tishri, fifty-two days after the destruction of the Temple; comp. Seder 'Olam 26, and note 39 by Ratner) was declared a fast-day for all time. See Rosh ha-Shanah 18b; Sifre D., 31; Tosefta Sotah 6.10. The pious Gedaliah acted in accordance with the law, and refused to be guided by the "evil talk" against Ishmael the son of Nethaniah (comp. Jer. 40.14–41.1, 2), and received him kindly. Yet it was careless on his part not to take precautions against the possibility of Ishmael's attack. The rule of conduct is: Do not believe evil talk, but disregard it not entirely. The murderous act of this Ishmael illustrates the truth of the saying: "Trust not a proselyte even in the twenty-fourth generation." Ishmael was the descendant, twenty-four generations removed, of Jerahmeel by a marriage with the non-Jewish princess Atarah (1 Chron. 2, 26), whom he had married for the sake of glory. See Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 2, 20b, and Horayyot 3, 48 (towards the bottom); Ruth Z., 48; PR 22, 111b.—On the view that the prominent inhabitants of Jerusalem were exiled to Spain, and especially to Toledo, see Shalshelet 101a.

THE SONS OF MOSES

If Nebuchadnezzar thought, that once he had the Jews in the regions of the Euphrates they were in his power forever, he was greatly mistaken. It was on the very banks of the great river that he suffered the loss of a number of his captives. When the first stop was made by the Euphrates, the Jews could no longer contain their grief, and they broke out into tears and bitter lamentations. Nebuchadnezzar bade them be silent, and as though to render obedience to his orders the harder, he called upon the Levites, the minstrels of the Temple, to sing the songs of Zion for the entertainment of his guests at the banquet he had arranged. The Levites consulted with one another. "Not enough that the Temple lies in ashes because of our sins, should we add to our transgressions by coaxing music from the strings of our holy harps in honor of these 'dwarfs'?"<sup>54</sup> they said, and they determined to offer resistance. The murderous Babylonians mowed them down in heaps, yet they met death with high courage, for it saved their sacred instruments from the desecration of being used before idols and for the sake of idolaters.

The Levites who survived the carnage—the Sons of Moses they were—bit their own fingers off, and when they were asked to play, they showed their tyrants mutilated hands, with which it was impossible to manipulate their harps.<sup>55</sup> At the fall of night a cloud descended and enveloped the Sons of Moses and all who belonged to them. They were hidden from their enemies, while their own way was illuminated by a pillar of fire. The cloud and the pillar vanished at break of day, and before the Sons of Moses lay a tract of land bordered by the sea on three sides. For their complete protection God made the river Sambation to flow on the fourth side. This river is full of sand and stones, and on the six working days of the week, they tumble over each other with such vehemence that the crash and the roar are heard far and wide. But on the Sabbath<sup>56</sup> the tumultuous river subsides into quiet. As a guard against trespassers on that day, a column of cloud stretches along the whole length of the river, and none can approach the Sambation within three miles. Hedged in as they are, the Sons of Moses yet communicate with their brethren of the tribes of Naphtali, Gad, and Asher, who dwell near the banks of the Sambation. Carrier pigeons bear letters hither and thither.

In the land of the Sons of Moses there are none but clean animals, and in every respect the inhabitants lead a holy and pure life, worthy of their ancestor Moses. They never use an oath, and, if perchance an oath escapes the lips of one of them, he is at once reminded of the Divine punishment connected with his act—his children will die at a tender age.

The Sons of Moses live peaceably and enjoy prosperity as equals through their common Jewish faith. They have need of neither prince nor judge, for they know not strife and litigation. Each works for the welfare of the community, and each takes from the common store only what will satisfy his needs. Their houses are built of equal height, that no one may deem himself above his neighbor, and that the fresh air may not be hindered from playing freely about all alike. Even at night their doors stand wide open, for they have naught to fear from thieves, nor are wild animals known in their land. They all attain a good old age. The son never dies before the father. When a death occurs, there is rejoicing, because the departed is known to have entered into life everlasting in loyalty to his faith. The birth of a child, on the other hand, calls forth mourning, for who can tell whether the being ushered into the world will be pious and faithful? The dead are buried near the doors of their own houses, in order that their survivors, in all their comings and goings, may be reminded of their own end. Disease is unknown among them, for they never sin, and sickness is sent only to purify from sins.<sup>57</sup>

54. PR 31, 144 (as to the “dwarf” Nebuchadnezzar, see note 96), and in a shortened form 28, 136a; ER 28, 149; Tehillim 137, 524; 2 Targum Esther 1.2 (towards the end); Eldad and the sources depending on it (comp. Epstein, 5 and 42–43, as well as BHM VI, 15); Targum on Ps. 137.4; ‘Eser Galuyyot 14; second version 115; Aktan 24.

55. PK 31, 144a, and the other sources cited in the preceding note. On the “sons of Moses” who number more than six hundred thousand (this was the number of Israel at the time of the exile), see Berakot 7a; Targum Yerushalmi Exod. 34.10; footnote 540 on p. 714.

56. Pliny, Hist. Nat., 31.2, agrees with the Rabbis (Sanhedrin 65a, in an alleged conversation between R. Akiba and the Roman general Tineius Rufus; BR 11.5; Tan. Ki-Tissa 33; PR 23, 119b) that this river rests on the Sabbath, whereas Josephus, Bell., VII, 5.1., maintains just the opposite, that it rests on week-days and flows on the Sabbath. The anonymous author of the Itinerarium a Burdigala Hierusalem usque maintains that the pool of Solomon dries up completely on the Sabbath. Josephus and the Rabbis differ also as to the location of this river. The former maintains that it is situated in Syria, between Acra and Raphanea, whereas the latter implicitly assume that it is somewhere in a country very far from Palestine. Comp. the rabbinical legends concerning the ten tribes referred to below. For the references to the river Sambation in Christian, Mohammedan, and Samaritan writings see Nöldeke, Beiträge zur Geschichte des Alexanderromans, 48; Epstein, Eldad, 13–16; Grünbaum in Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, XXII, 627; Kazwini, Cosmography, II, 17; Mas‘udi, Muruj al-Dhahab, I, 161; Kobez ‘al Yad, IV, 13. Comp. also the following note. The view that the ten tribes, or at least some of the tribes, dwell beyond the “river Sambation” is widespread, and is found not only in the talmudic-midrashic literature, but also in many medieval writings. Comp. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 10, 29c, which reads: One part of Israel (i. e., the northern tribes) was exiled beyond the river Sambation, one part to Daphne near Antiochia, and the third part was carried off (literally, “covered”) by a cloud. When the time of redemption will come, all the exiles from the three diasporas will return. See BR 73.6 (which says: The ten tribes are beyond the river Sambation); PR 31, 146a–147a; Tan. B. I, 203, and IV, 79; BaR 16, 25 (here it is said the “mountains of darkness” is the place to which the third part was carried off); comp. also Targum Yerushalmi Exod. 24.10; Kobez ‘al Yad, IV, 42; Neubauer, J. Q. R., I, 14, seq. “Where are the ten tribes”; Lewin, Wo wären die zehn Stämme zu suchen, 17–25. Comp. also Ginzberg, Haggadot Ketu‘ot 43–45. This clearly shows that the hope for the return of the ten tribes and the salvation of “all Israel” is not limited to the circles in which the apocalyptic literature originated (comp., e. g., Tobit, Testament of 12 Patriarchs and 4 Ezra), as has been maintained by many modern scholars. As far as can be ascertained, R. Akiba is the only one among the old Rabbis who taught that the “ten tribes were repudiated by God for ever” (Mishnah Sanhedrin 10.3), and he was strongly censured for this view by the Talmud, Sanhedrin 110b. There can be no doubt that R. Akiba, as an active propagandist for the Bar Kokeba revolt, attempted to fire the enthusiasm of Palestinian Jewry by telling them that the future of Judaism depended entirely upon them, the descendants of Judah and Benjamin. That the ten tribes were transported in a miraculous way beyond a river, where they lived undisturbed as pious Jews, is presupposed in 4 Ezra 13.41–50. Comp. also Josephus, Antiqu., XI, 5.3. The holiness of the Sabbath is “attested” by the river Sambation, and also by a certain fish which spends the Sabbath resting on the banks of the river, and by a mountain from which silver is taken every day in the week with the exception of the Sabbath when no silver can be found there. See Sode Raza in Yalkut Reubeni on Gen. 2.2. The Palestinian (Syrian?) place called שבת to which reference is made in an Egyptian inscription (comp. Müller, J. Q. R., N.S., IV, 652) was probably situated on the river of the same name mentioned by Josephus, Bell., VII, 5.1. Kaufmann (R.E.J., XXII, 285) suggests that the legend about Sambation is due to the confusion of חול “sand” with חל “week-day”; the river that throws up sand became the river that “works” on week-days only. This suggestion, though rather ingenious, is for more than one reason quite untenable. For further details concerning the Sambation legend, see Shebet Musar, 11, 38b; Kobez ‘al Yad, IV, 40. For the vast literature on this subject, comp. Krauss, Lehnwörter, s. v.

57. Eldad and the sources that are based on it; comp. Epstein, Eldad 5, 14, 17, 27–29, 40–41, 43–44, 57–58, 64–65, who calls attention to the Arabic versions of this legend about the “Land of the Blessed”. It escaped him, as it did many of the other scholars dealing with this legend, that in the Narrative of Zosimos we have this Jewish legend with very slight Christian additions. Instead of the “sons of Moses”, we have here the “sons of Rechab” who were carried by a cloud to the “Land of the Blessed”, the entrance to which is made inaccessible by an impassable river. On the sons of Rechab, compare with p. 776; PR 31, 147a (where it is said that the Land of Sinim is their dwelling-place); Midrash Aggada on Num. 24.22 (which reads: The sons of Jonadab the Rechabite were not exiled, but God sent them to the “mountains of darkness” (comp. the preceding note); 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira 28, which reads: The descendants of Jonadab (= the Rechabite; comp. 29a) live in paradise where they entered alive. In the Narrative of Zosimos the land inhabited by the sons of Rechab is described as the paradise on earth, and the life of its inhabitants as that of angels. The only difference between 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira and the Christian pseudepigraphic work is that the latter explicitly states that the Rechabites, though living many hundred years, die in the end, whereas according to the Jewish source, they do not "taste death". The substitution of the "sons of Rechab" for the "sons of Moses" is very likely not due to a Christian hand, but is a "Jewish variant". See also R. Benjamin of Tudela's Itinerary, ed. Asher 70, where the sons of Rechab appear as "free" Jews, not subjected to other nations. Shibhe Israel, 218, quotes the following from the Yalkut on Obadiah: In the future the Messiah, accompanied by the sons of Moses, will betake himself to mount Seir to judge the sons of Esau. This passage is not found there, nor, as far as can be ascertained, in any other place of the Yalkut.

EBED-MELECH

The Sons of Moses were not the only ones to escape from under the heavy hand of Nebuchadnezzar. Still more miraculous was the deliverance of the pious Ethiopian Ebed-melech from the hands of the Babylonians. He was saved as a reward for rescuing Jeremiah when the prophet's life was jeopardized. On the day before the destruction of the Temple, shortly before the enemy forced his way into the city, the Ethiopian was sent, by the prophet Jeremiah acting under Divine instruction, to a certain place in front of the gates of the city, to dole out refreshments to the poor from a little basket of figs he was to carry with him. Ebed-melech reached the spot, but the heat was so intense that he fell asleep under a tree, and there he slept for sixty-six years. When he woke up, the figs were still fresh and juicy, but all the surroundings had so changed, he could not make out where he was. His confusion increased when he entered the city to seek Jeremiah, and found nothing as it had been. He accosted an old man, and asked him the name of the place. When he was told it was Jerusalem, Ebed-melech cried out in amazement: "Where is Jeremiah, where is Baruch, and where are all the people?" The old man was not a little astonished at these questions. How was it possible that one who had known Jeremiah and Jerusalem should be ignorant of the events that had passed sixty years before? In brief words he told Ebed-melech of the destruction of the Temple and of the captivity of the people, but what he said found no credence with his auditor. Finally Ebed-melech realized that God had performed a great miracle for him, so that he had been spared the sight of Israel's misfortune.

While he was pouring out his heart in gratitude to God, an eagle descended and led him to Baruch, who lived not far from the city. Thereupon Baruch received the command from God to write to Jeremiah that the people should remove the strangers from the midst of them, and then God would lead them back to Jerusalem. The letter written by Baruch and some of the figs that had retained their freshness for sixty-six years were carried to Babylonia by an eagle, who had told Baruch that he had been sent to serve him as a messenger. The eagle set out on his journey. His first halting-place was a dreary waste spot to which he knew Jeremiah and the people would come—it was the burial-place of the Jews which Nebuchadnezzar had given the prophet at his solicitation. When the eagle saw Jeremiah and the people approach with a funeral train, he cried out: "I have a message for thee, Jeremiah. Let all the people draw nigh to receive the good tidings." As a sign that his mission was true, the eagle touched the corpse, and it came to life. Amidst tears all the people cried unto Jeremiah: "Save us! What must we do to return to our land?"

The eagle brought Jeremiah's answer to Baruch, and after the prophet had sent the Babylonian women away, he returned to Jerusalem with the people. Those who would not submit to the orders of Jeremiah relative to the heathen women, were not permitted by the prophet to enter the holy city, and as they likewise were not permitted to return to Babylonia, they founded the city of Samaria near Jerusalem.<sup>58</sup>

---

58. Rest of the Words of Baruch 1–8. For the numerous variants of the legend about the “sleepers” in Christian and Mohammedan sources, see Heller in R.E.J., XLIX, 190, seq. Closely related to the Ebed-melech legend is the one given by the Talmudim concerning Honi (= Onias) ha-Me’aggel, who is said to have slept seventy years, from the destruction of the Temple until the end of the Babylonian exile. Comp. Ta’anit 22b, and Yerushalmi 3, 66d. It seems that the Legend about the stoning of Jeremiah found at the end of the Rest of the Words (comp. note 42) is in some way connected with the stoning of Onias (=Honi) narrated by Josephus, Antiqui., XIV, 2.1. According to Ta’anit 22b, Onias, however, was not stoned, but died shortly after he awoke from his long sleep. For further details concerning Ebed-melech, see note 66.

THE TEMPLE VESSELS

The task laid upon Jeremiah had been two-fold. Besides giving him charge over the people in the land of their exile, God had entrusted to him the care of the sanctuary and all it contained.<sup>59</sup> The holy Ark, the altar of incense, and the holy tent were carried by an angel to the mount whence Moses before his death had viewed the land divinely assigned to Israel. There Jeremiah found a spacious cave, in which he concealed these sacred utensils. Some of his companions had gone with him to note the way to the cave, but yet they could not find it.<sup>60</sup> When Jeremiah heard of their purpose, he censured them, for it was the wish of God that the place of hiding should remain a secret until the redemption, and then God Himself will make the hidden things visible.<sup>61</sup>

Even the Temple vessels not concealed by Jeremiah were prevented from falling into the hands of the enemy; the gates of the Temple sank into the earth,<sup>62</sup> and other parts and utensils were hidden in a tower at Bagdad by the Levite Shimur<sup>63</sup> and his friends. Among these utensils was the seven-branched candlestick of pure gold, every branch set with twenty-six pearls, and beside the pearls two hundred stones of inestimable worth. Furthermore, the tower at Bagdad was the hiding-place for seventy-seven golden tables, and for the gold with which the walls of the Temple had been clothed within and without. The tables had been taken from Paradise by Solomon, and in brilliance they outshone the sun and the moon, while the gold from the walls excelled in amount and worth all the gold that had existed from the creation of the world until the destruction of the Temple. The jewels, pearls, gold, and silver, and precious gems, which David and Solomon had intended for the Temple were discovered by the scribe Hilkiyah, and he delivered them to the angel Shamshiel, who in turn deposited the treasure in Borsippa. The sacred musical instruments were taken charge of and hidden by Baruch and Zedekiah until the advent of the Messiah, who will reveal all treasures. In his time a stream will break forth from under the place of the Holy of Holies, and flow through the lands to the Euphrates, and, as it flows, it will uncover all the treasures buried in the earth.<sup>64</sup>

---

59. Rest of the Words of Baruch 1–3.

60. Comp. the similar story about the vain attempt of the Roman government to locate the grave of Moses; Sifre D., 357; Midrash Tannaim 226; ‘Aktan 6. In the last-named source it is Hadrian who attempted in vain to find the grave of Moses. In that passage this wicked ruler is said to have travelled throughout the Holy Land to visit the graves of the kings and prophets. His attempt, however, to find the grave of Moses was fruitless.

61. 2 Maccabees 2.4–8; Josippon 3. The legend about the hiding of the holy vessels, recorded in the Rest of the Words of Baruch 3, is based on 2 Maccabees, whereas in Apocalypse of Baruch 6.7–10, Baruch sees an angel descend into the holy of holies and take from there the veil, the holy ark, the mercy seat, the two tables, the holy raiment of the priests (the high priest?), the altar of incense, the forty-eight precious stones wherewith the priest (= high priest) was adorned (the Hebrew original read: [ארבע]ה, which was misread as ארבעים ושמונה אבן, and all the holy vessels of the tabernacle. The angel then said to the earth: “Earth hear the word of God, and receive what I commit to thy care to guard until the last times” ... And the earth opened its mouth, and swallowed them up. For the similar view of the Rabbis about the fate of the holy vessels, see text on pp. 572, 645; text on pp. 856, 1021, 1059, 1117, 1120. Comp. also the references in notes 62–64, and Friedmann in Ha-Shiloah, XIII, 54, seq.

62. Ekah 2, 114, which reads: The gates were thus rewarded for the honor they paid to the holy ark (compare with p. 966); Tan. IV, 51, which reads: All the holy vessels were brought to Babylon, with the exception of the gates. See also Sotah 9a (here it is said that the enemy had no power over the gates, because they were made by David); BaR 15.13; Tan. Beha'aloteka 9. Comp. also 4 Ezra 10.22; Assumption of Moses 3.2; text on p. 726.

63. Read: Shomer (“the guardian”). Bar Hebraeus, Tarih Muhrasar, 70, speaks of the priest Simeon (שמעון) as the one who hid the holy vessels. There cannot be any doubt that he is dependent upon Jewish tradition, and it is probable that he confused שמור or rather שמעון with שומר.

64. Masseket Kelim 88–91. On Bursif (=Borsippa; according to Shabbat 36a, it is identical with Biblical בבל), see also Sanhedrin 109a and BR 28.11, where it is said that those dwelling in this place suffer from a weak memory.—According to some Kabbalists, the destruction of the Temple was not a reality, but it appeared to the people as though it had actually taken place (docetism); the Temple disappeared from the sight of man, and will become visible again in messianic times. Comp. Zohar II, 240b, and Yalkut Hadash, s. v. חרבן, Nos. 7 and 18.

BARUCH

At the time of the destruction of the Temple, one of the prominent figures was Baruch, the faithful attendant<sup>65</sup> of Jeremiah. God commanded him to leave the city one day before the enemy was to enter it, in order that his presence might not render it impregnable. On the following day, he and all other pious men having abandoned Jerusalem, he saw from a distance how the angels descended, set fire to the city walls, and concealed the sacred vessels of the Temple. At first his mourning over the misfortunes of Jerusalem and the people knew no bounds. But he was in a measure consoled at the end of a seven days' fast, when God made known to him that the day of reckoning would come for the heathen, too. Other Divine visions were vouchsafed him. The whole future of mankind was unrolled before his eyes, especially the history of Israel, and he learned that the coming of the Messiah would put an end to all sorrow and misery, and usher in the reign of peace and joy among men. As for him, he would be removed from the earth, he was told, but not through death, and only in order to be kept safe against the coming of the end of all time.<sup>66</sup>

Thus consoled, Baruch addressed an admonition to the people left in Palestine, and wrote two letters of the same tenor to the exiles, one to the nine tribes and a half, the other to the two tribes and a half. The letter to the nine tribes and a half of the captivity was carried to them by an eagle.<sup>67</sup>

Five years after the great catastrophe, he composed a book in Babylonia,<sup>68</sup> which contained penitential prayers and hymns of consolation, exhorting Israel and urging the people to return to God and His law. This book Baruch read to King Jeconiah and the whole people on a day of prayer and penitence. On the same occasion a collection was taken up among the people, and the funds thus secured, together with the silver Temple vessels made by order of Zedekiah after Jeconiah had been carried away captive, were sent to Jerusalem, with the request that the high priest Joakim and the people should apply the money to the sacrificial service and to prayers for the life of King Nebuchadnezzar and his son Belshazzar. Thus they might ensure peace and happiness under Babylonian rule. Above all, they were to supplicate God to turn away His wrath from His people.

Baruch sent his book also to the residents of Jerusalem, and they read it in the Temple on distinguished days, and recited the prayers it contains.<sup>69</sup>

Baruch is one of the few mortals who have been privileged to visit Paradise and know its secrets. An angel of the Lord appeared to him while he was lamenting over the destruction of Jerusalem and took him to the seven heavens, to the place of judgment where the doom of the godless is pronounced, and to the abodes of the blessed.<sup>70</sup>

He was still among the living at the time in which Cyrus permitted the Jews to return to Palestine, but on account of his advanced age he could not avail himself of the permission. So long as he was alive, his disciple Ezra remained with him in Babylonia, for "the study of the law is more important than the building of the Temple." It was only after the death of Baruch that he decided to gather together the exiles who desired to return to the Holy Land and rebuild the Temple in Jerusalem.<sup>71</sup>

---

65. The old authorities differ as to whether Baruch was a prophet or not. Mekilta Bo (פתיחתא), end, reads: Baruch was greatly distressed because he did not receive the prophetic spirit, whereas the disciples of the former prophets (Joshua the disciple of Moses, Elisha the disciple of Elijah and many others) succeeded their masters as prophets. To console him, God told Jeremiah to speak to Baruch as follows: "Baruch, there is no need of a fence, if there is no vineyard; of what use is the shepherd, if there is no flock?" Comp. also ibid., 1b, where it is stated that prophecy is a prerogative of the Holy Land, and though it is true that Ezekiel and Jeremiah prophesied in other countries, their career was begun in the Holy Land. On the other hand, Seder 'Olam 20, Sifre Z., 75, Megillah 14b, and Sifre N., 78, count not only Baruch, but also his father and grandfather and uncle (comp. Jer. 51.59) among the prophets. Those sources also state that he was related to Jeremiah, both having been descendants of Rahab the harlot. She was accordingly the ancestress of eight priests, who were prophets at the same time; these are: Jeremiah, his father Hilkiah, his uncle Shallum, and the latter's son Hanamel (comp. Jerem. 32.7), Baruch, his father Neriah, his grandfather Mahseiah, and his uncle Seraiah. According to some, the priest and prophet Ezekiel, as well as his father Buzi, who was also a prophet, likewise belong to Rahab's descendants. Comp. Yalkut II, 1074 (end) on 1 Chron. 4.23; footnote 12 on p. 843. In the apocalyptic and pseudepigraphic literature Baruch is presupposed to have been a prophet, and is said to have been the author of three prophetic works: 1) Baruch; 2) Apocalypse of Baruch (Syriac); 3) Apocalypse of Baruch (Greek). On the relationship between Jeremiah and Ezekiel, see notes 42 and 93.

66. Apocalypse of Baruch 1–77. As for Baruch and the pious men having been "sent away" by God from Jerusalem before the day of the destruction of the Temple, see text on p. 1075, and note 28. On the hiding of the holy vessels, see notes 60, 61. That Baruch was one of the distinguished and pious men who never "tasted death" is also the view of the Rabbis. Comp. Sifre N., 99; Mo'ed Katan 16b; PRE 53 (comp. Luria ad loc. and Tehillim 7, 72); 2 ARN 43, 122; PR 26, 130b, where he is identified with Ebed-melech the Ethiopian (comp. Jer. 38.7; he is called the Ethiopian, i. e., the "black", antiphrastically, because he was the only "white", i. e., pious, man at the court of king Zedekiah), and of this man it is explicitly stated that he entered paradise alive. See Derek Erez Z., 1 (end), and the parallel passages cited by Tawrogi, to which should be added PRK (Grünhut's edition, 83); 'Aktan 12. In the last-named source, however, Ebed-melech is said to have been a proselyte and accordingly he is not identified with the priest Baruch (comp. the preceding note). He is further described there as one of the ten rulers who became proselytes; they are: The king Hiram, Ebed (i. e., Ebed-melech; מלך "king" is taken as the title of Ebed); Antoninus, Talmi (Ptolemy of Egypt, at whose command the Septuagint was prepared), Monobaz (king of Adiabene), Tobai (?), Bolan (king of the Khazars); the queens Bithiah (the foster-mother of Moses), Helena (queen of Adiabene), and Beruria (Valeria; Comp. Gerim 2.4; Mekilta Bo 15, 18a; Yebamot 46a). In the Christian legend it is Jeremiah, and not his disciple Baruch, who is one of the immortals. Comp. notes 13 and 42. Comp., however, also II Macc. 2.1 seq. and 15.15.

67. Apocalypse of Baruch 78–87. Compare also with p. 1090.

68. As to the view that Baruch and Jeremiah were exiled to Babylon, see note 42, and compare with p. 1091.

69. Book of Baruch.

70. The Greek Apocalypse of Baruch is a description of this ascension.

71. Megillah 16b; Shir 5.5. On the view that Baruch entered paradise alive, see note 66.

THE TOMBS OF BARUCH AND EZEKIEL

The piety of Baruch and the great favor he enjoyed with God were made known to later generations many years after his death, through the marvellous occurrences connected with his tomb. Once a Babylonian prince commanded a Jew, Rabbi Solomon by name, to show him the grave of Ezekiel, concerning which he had heard many remarkable tales. The Jew advised the prince first to enter the tomb of Baruch, which adjoined that of Ezekiel. Having succeeded in this, he might attempt the same with the tomb of Ezekiel, the teacher of Baruch.<sup>72</sup> In the presence of his grandees and his people the prince tried to open the grave of Baruch, but his efforts were fruitless. Whosoever touched it, was at once stricken dead. An old Arab advised the prince to call upon the Jews to gain entrance for him, seeing that Baruch had been a Jew, and his books were still being studied by Jews. The Jews prepared themselves by fasts, prayers, penitence, and almsgiving, and they succeeded in opening the grave without a mishap. Baruch was found lying on a marble bier, and the appearance of the corpse was as though he had only then passed away.<sup>73</sup> The prince ordered the bier to be brought to the city, and the body to be entombed there. He thought it was not seemly that Ezekiel and Baruch should rest in the same grave. But the bearers found it impossible to remove the bier more than two thousand ells from the original grave; not even with the help of numerous draught-animals could it be urged a single step further. Following the advice of Rabbi Solomon, the prince resolved to inter the bier on the spot they had reached, and also to erect an academy there. These miraculous happenings induced the prince to go to Mecca. There he became convinced of the falseness of Moham-medanism, of which he had hitherto been an adherent, and he converted to Judaism, he and his whole court.

Near the grave of Baruch there grows a species of grass whose leaves are covered with gold dust. As the sheen of the gold is not readily noticeable by day, the people seek out the place at night, mark the very spot on which the grass grows, and return by day and gather it.<sup>74</sup>

Not less famous is the tomb of Ezekiel, at a distance of two thousand ells from Baruch's. It is overarched by a beautiful mausoleum erected by King Jeconiah after Evil-merodach had released him from captivity. The mausoleum existed down to the middle ages, and it bore on its walls the names of the thirty-five thousand Jews who assisted Jeconiah in erecting the monument. It was the scene of many miracles. When great crowds of people journeyed thither to pay reverence to the memory of the prophet, the little low gate in the wall surrounding the grave enlarged in width and height to admit all who desired to enter. Once a prince vowed to give a colt to the grave of the prophet, if but his mare which had been sterile would bear one. When his wish was fulfilled, however, he did not keep his promise. But the filly ran a distance equal to a four days' journey to the tomb, and his owner could not recover it until he deposited his value in silver upon the grave. When people went on long journeys, they were in the habit of carrying their treasures to the grave of the prophet, and beseeching him to let none but the rightful heirs remove them thence. The prophet always granted their petition. Once when an attempt was made to take some books from the grave of Ezekiel, the ravager suddenly became sick and blind. For a time a pillar of fire, visible at a great distance, rose above the grave of the prophet, but it disappeared in consequence of the unseemly conduct of the pilgrims who resorted thither.

Not far from the grave of Ezekiel was the grave of Barozak, who once appeared to a rich Jew in a dream. He spoke: "I am Barozak, one of the princes who were led into captivity with Jeremiah. I am one of the just. If thou wilt erect a handsome mausoleum for me, thou wilt be blessed with progeny." The Jew did as he had been bidden, and he who had been childless, shortly after became a father.<sup>75</sup>

---

72. That Baruch was a disciple of Ezekiel is not mentioned elsewhere. It is very likely that "teacher" is not to be taken literally. Compare footnote 3 on p. 993.

73. Not only Moses' body shows no signs of decay (compare with p. 832), but also those of other pious men; comp. Shabbat 152b; Baba Mezi'a 84b. When Hadrian opened the tomb of David (comp. note 60), he was amazed at the high color of the face; he pressed the flesh with his finger, and the blood began to circulate. Admiringly the wicked king called out: "This man deserved to be the ruler of the entire world, since even after his death he is like the living." See 'Aktan 23.

74. Gelilot Erez Israel 101a; a somewhat different version of this legend is given by R. Pethahiah of Ratisbon 4b–5a. On gold dust, see also text on p. 1117.

75. R. Pethahiah of Ratisbon 5a–5b; comp. also the remarks of R. Benjamin of Tudela (I, 67; II, 141–143) about the tomb of the prophet Ezekiel. A geonic responsum in Schechter's Saadyana, 123, mentions the "synagogue of Ezekiel", Daniel, Ezra, Baruch, and the masters of the Talmud. This very likely means the synagogue erected by Ezekiel (in the place where later his mausoleum was built?), and frequented by Daniel, Ezra, Baruch, and other great men. A "Daniel synagogue" in the neighborhood of ברנשא (Birnos, on the road from Bagdad to Hilla?) is mentioned in the Talmud by authorities living in the third century. Comp. 'Erubin 21a, and Berliner, Beiträge zur Geographie, 28.

DANIEL

The most distinguished member of the Babylonian Diaspora was Daniel. Though not a prophet,<sup>76</sup> he was surpassed by none in wisdom, piety, and good deeds. His firm adherence to Judaism he displayed from his early youth, when, a page at the royal court, he refused to partake of the bread, wine, and oil of the heathen, even though the enjoyment of them was not prohibited by the law.<sup>77</sup> In general, his prominent position at the court was maintained at the cost of many a hardship, for he and his companions, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, were envied their distinction by numerous enemies, who sought to compass their ruin.

Once they were accused before King Nebuchadnezzar of leading an unchaste life. The king resolved to order their execution. But Daniel and his friends mutilated certain parts of their bodies, and so demonstrated how unfounded were the charges against them.<sup>78</sup>

As a youth Daniel gave evidence of his wisdom, when he convicted two old sinners of having testified falsely against Susanna, as beautiful as she was good. Misled by the perjured witnesses, the court had condemned Susanna to death. Then Daniel, impelled by a higher power, appeared among the people, proclaimed that wrong had been done, and demanded that the case be re-opened. And so it was. Daniel himself cross-questioned the witnesses one after the other. The same questions were addressed to both, and as the replies did not agree with each other, the false witnesses stood condemned, and they were made to suffer the penalty they would have had the court inflict upon their victim.<sup>79</sup>

Daniel's high position in the state dates from the time when he interpreted Nebuchadnezzar's dream. The king said to the astrologers and magicians: "I know my dream, but I do not want to tell you what it was, else you will invent anything at all, and pretend it is the interpretation of the dream. But if you tell me the dream, then I shall have confidence in your interpretation of it.”

After much talk between Nebuchadnezzar and his wise men, they confessed that the king’s wish might have been fulfilled, if but the Temple had still existed. The high priest at Jerusalem might have revealed the secret by consulting the Urim and Thummim. At this point the king became wrathful against his wise men, who had advised him to destroy the Temple, though they must have known how useful it might become to the king and the state. He ordered them all to execution. Their life was saved by Daniel, who recited the king’s dream, and gave its interpretation.<sup>80</sup> The king was so filled with admiration of Daniel’s wisdom that he paid him Divine honors. Daniel, however, refused such extravagant treatment—he did not desire to be the object of idolatrous veneration.<sup>81</sup> He left Nebuchadnezzar in order to escape the marks of honor thrust upon him, and repaired to Tiberias, where he built a canal. Besides, he was charged by the king with commissions, to bring fodder for cattle to Babylonia and also swine from Alexandria.<sup>82</sup>

---

76. Megillah 3a and Sanhedrin 94a (top), where in reference to Dan. 10.7 it is remarked that the men who were with him were the prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi; yet it was he, though not a prophet, who was found worthy to behold the vision. Palestinian sources, however, tannaitic as well as amoraic, count Daniel among the prophets. Comp. Mekilta 1b; PK 4, 36b; PR 14, 61 (where the anthropomorphism of the “prophets” refers to certain anthropomorphic expressions used in Dan.); Seder ‘Olam 20; Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.4 and 7; Matth. 14.25. See also Sanhedrin, where Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah are designated as prophets, and it would be very strange if their great friend (Daniel) were not of that rank. It seems that the old authorities spoke of the “Book of Daniel” as belonging to the Hagiographa and not to the prophetic part of the Canon. Later, however, the “Book of Daniel” was confused with its author, and hence the statement that he was not a prophet. But the writing of a prophet is not necessarily a prophetic book, as may be seen from the Book of Psalms, which belongs to the Hagiographa, though David was a prophet. Comp. Seder ‘Olam 20; Mekilta Bo (פתיחתא), 2a; Yerushalmi Sotah 9, 24b. See also note 108 and footnote 18 on p. 1115. For the views of the later authorities concerning Daniel, see Fischer, Daniel, 100–102. For the attribute “man greatly beloved” given to Daniel (Dan. 10.11), see the explanation in Koheleth 9.7 and Tan. B. I, 88. He is said to have been also called Memuchan and Hathach (compare with pp. 1106 and 1161), as well as Sheshbazzar (comp. Ezra 1.8). The last name signifies: “He was in distress six times”, as Daniel was the eye-witness of three exiles (the first under Jehoiakim, the second under Jehoiachin, and the third under Zedekiah); he was at the point of losing his life with the rest of the wise men of Babylon (Dan. 2.13), of being devoured by the lions, and finally he witnessed the throwing of his three companions, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, into the fiery furnace. See PR 6, 23b. As a reward for the faithfulness with which he served his “earthly king” (Nebuchadnezzar), he was chosen to serve his heavenly King, and thus Daniel (=Sheshbazzar) was the first to lay the “foundation” of the house of God” (Ezra 6.16); PR, loc. cit. Combining Dan. 1.3 and 6 with Is. 39.7, the Hagadah maintains that Daniel and his three companions were descendants of the kings of Judah; some authorities, however, are of the opinion that his companions did not belong to the tribe of Judah. See Josephus, Antiqui., X, 10.1; Sanhedrin 93b; PRE 53; “Hebrew tradition” in Jerome on Is., loc. cit. Comp. Fischer, Daniel, 33–39. That Daniel was the son of Jeconiah (= Jehoiachin) is asserted only by Bar Hebraeus, Chronicon Syriacum, 27, and Ma’aseh Daniel (beginning). The latter source also narrates that during the carnage which took place at the conquest of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar (compare with p. 1075) a soldier entered the house of study in which Daniel and his three companions were sitting. He first intended to kill them, but God “gave them favor in the sight” of the soldier. He did not kill them, but took them captive to Babylon.

77. ‘Abodah Zarah 55b; Yerushalmi 2, 41d; Yoma 76b. In Tan. B. I, 110–111 the story of the refusal of Daniel and his three companions to partake of the food is told in a circumstantial manner, whereas Josephus, Antiqui., X, 10.2, rationalizes the biblical narrative of Dan. 1.8, seq. Zohar II, 125b, gives the menu of Nebuchadnezzar’s table, and adds that Daniel was saved from the lions as a reward for his having refrained from eating the forbidden food offered to him at the table of Nebuchadnezzar. But Daniel’s piety did not consist exclusively in his strict observance of the dietary laws; lovingkindness, charity, and praying were his chief merits. See ARN 4, 21. It is therefore not surprising that according to one view, Daniel is the promised Messiah; comp. Sanhedrin 98b. Nevertheless the miracles wrought for Daniel, as well as God's granting of his request were not due to his own merits, but to those of Abraham. See Tan. B. I, 111; Berakot 7b. Against this view comp. ARN, loc. cit.

78. Midrash Megillah 176. Compare with p. 1051, and note 76, with regard to those men as the "eunuchs" (סריסים) of whom Isaiah spoke. On the other hand, it is maintained in Sanhedrin 93b that they were perfect in body and intellect, but that they were called סריסים, "eunuchs", because they "emasculated the worship of idols from among their generation". Compare with p. 1099 (towards the end). In Yerushalmi Shabbat 4, 8d, it is said that although they were made eunuchs, they regained their former state in the fiery furnace. Comp. also Jerome on Is. 56.4–5, and ER 26, 131. "The eunuchs that keep My sabbaths", of whom the prophet speaks, is said to refer to Daniel's three companions.

79. The apocryphal Book of Susannah in its Greek version, as well as in the Hebrew translation thereof in BHM VI, 126–128, and in Yerahmeel 65. A similar motive to the one in the Susanna story is found in the rabbinic legend about the false prophets (= text on p. 1106). Comp. Frankel, Monatsschrift, XVII, 447, and Brüll, Jahrbücher, II, 8, seq. These two scholars also call attention to the story told in Sanhedrin 5.2 about the careful examination of witnesses by a certain Ben Zakkai (according to the Talmud, 40a–40b, it was the famous Rabban Johanan ben Zakkai but this is doubtful), which reminds one of the part played by Daniel in Susanna. Comp. note 108.

80. Tan. B. I, 90. For the interpretation of the stone which was "cut out without hands" (Dan. 2.34) as referring to the Messiah, comp. Tan. B. II, 91–92, and Tan. Terumah 7. Josephus, Antiqui., X, 1.4, in affected mysteriousness, wants to convey the same statement as the Midrashim. According to the very late compilation Ma'aseh Daniel 19, Daniel cured Nebuchadnezzar by prayer from the injury he received while attempting to ascend the throne of Solomon. The injury (a broken leg) of Nebuchadnezzar is mentioned also in Panim Aherim 57–58; Abba Gorion 4 (he attempted to ascend the throne in Riblah, while he sat in judgment over Zedekiah); 2 Targum Esther 1.2; compare with p. 969 and note 13 on pp. 1131–1132.

81. BR 96.5; Tan. B. I, 213 (here Daniel is contrasted with the heathen rulers who asked for divine honors). Comp. also PK 9, 76a; WR 27.4; Tan. B. III, 91; Midrash Shir 43a; text on p. 399.

82. Sanhedrin 93a, in explaining Daniel's absence from Babylon during the incident of the three men in the furnace; comp. the following note. With regard to the export of swine from Alexandria, comp. Menahot 4.4, which reads: No cow or sow is permitted to leave Alexandria without having its womb cut out, that it should not be able to conceive.

THE THREE MEN IN THE FURNACE

During Daniel's absence Nebuchadnezzar set up an idol, and its worship was exacted from all his subjects under penalty of death by fire. The image could not stand on account of the disproportion between its height and its thickness. The whole of the gold and silver captured by the Babylonians in Jerusalem was needed to give it steadiness.<sup>83</sup>

All the nations owning the rule of Nebuchadnezzar, including even Israel, obeyed the royal command to worship the image. Only the three pious companions of Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, resisted the order. In vain Nebuchadnezzar urged upon them, as an argument in favor of idolatry, that the Jews had been so devoted to heathen practices before the destruction of Jerusalem that they had gone to Babylonia for the purpose of imitating the idols there and bringing the copies they made to Jerusalem. The three saints would not hearken to these seductions of the king, nor when he referred them to such authorities as Moses and Jeremiah, in order to prove to them that they were under obligation to do the royal bidding. They said to him: "Thou art our king in all that concerns service, taxes, poll-money, and tribute, but with respect to thy present command thou art only Nebuchadnezzar. Therein thou and the dog are alike unto us. Bark like a dog, inflate thyself like a water-bottle, and chirp like a cricket."<sup>84</sup>

Now Nebuchadnezzar's wrath transcended all bounds, and he ordered the three to be cast into a red hot furnace, so hot that the flames of its fire darted to the height of forty-nine ells

beyond the oven, and consumed the heathen standing about it. No less than four nations were thus exterminated.<sup>85</sup> While the three saints were being thrust into the furnace, they addressed a fervent prayer to God, supplicating His grace toward them, and entreating Him to put their adversaries to shame. The angels desired to descend and rescue the three men in the furnace. But God forbade it: "Did the three men act thus for your sakes? Nay, they did it for Me; and I will save them with Mine own hands."<sup>86</sup> God also rejected the good offices of Yurkami, the angel of hail, who offered to extinguish the fire in the furnace. The angel Gabriel justly pointed out that such a miracle would not be sufficiently striking to arrest attention. His own proposition was accepted. He, the angel of fire, was deputed to snatch the three men from the red hot furnace. He executed his mission by cooling off the fire inside of the oven, while on the outside the heat continued to increase to such a degree that the heathen standing around the furnace were consumed.<sup>87</sup> The three youths thereupon raised their voices together in a hymn of praise to God, thanking Him for His miraculous help.<sup>88</sup> The Chaldeans observed the three men pacing up and down quietly in the furnace, followed by a fourth—the angel Gabriel—as by an attendant. Nebuchadnezzar, who hastened thither to see the wonder, was stunned with fright, for he recognized Gabriel to be the angel who in the guise of a column of fire had blasted the army of Sennacherib.<sup>89</sup> Six other miracles happened, all of them driving terror to the heart of the king: the fiery furnace which had been sunk in the ground raised itself into the air; it was broken; the bottom dropped out; the image erected by Nebuchadnezzar fell prostrate; four nations were wasted by fire; and Ezekiel revived the dead in the valley of Dura.

Of the last, Nebuchadnezzar was apprised in a peculiar way. He had a drinking vessel made of the bones of a slain Jew. When he was about to use it, life began to stir in the bones, and a blow was planted in the king's face, while a voice announced: "A friend of this man is at this moment reviving the dead!" Nebuchadnezzar now offered praise to God for the miracles performed, and if an angel had not quickly struck him a blow on his mouth, and forced him into silence, his psalms of praise would have excelled the Psalter of David.

The deliverance of the three pious young men was a brilliant vindication of their ways, but at the same time it caused great mortification to the masses of the Jewish people, who had complied with the orders of Nebuchadnezzar to worship his idol.<sup>90</sup> Accordingly, when the three men left the furnace—which they did not do until Nebuchadnezzar invited them to leave<sup>91</sup>—the heathen struck all the Jews they met in the face, deriding them at the same time: "You who have so marvellous a God pay homage to an idol!" The three men thereupon left Babylonia and went to Palestine, where they joined their friend, the high priest Joshua.<sup>92</sup>

Their readiness to sacrifice their lives for the honor of God had been all the more admirable as they had been advised by the prophet Ezekiel that no miracle would be done for their sakes: When the king's command to bow down before the idol was published, and the three men were appointed to act as the representatives of the people, Hananiah and his companions resorted to Daniel for his advice. He referred them to the prophet Ezekiel, who counselled flight, citing his teacher Isaiah as his authority. The three men rejected his advice, and declared themselves ready to suffer the death of martyrs. Ezekiel bade them tarry until he inquired of God, whether a miracle would be done for them. The words of God were: "I shall not manifest Myself as their savior. They caused My house to be destroyed, My palace to be burnt, My children to be dispersed among the heathen, and now they appeal for My help. As I live, I will not be found of them.”

Instead of discouraging the three men, this answer but infused new spirit and resolution in them, and they declared with more decided emphasis than before, that they were ready to meet death. God consoled the weeping prophet by revealing to him, that He would save the three saintly heroes. He had sought to restrain them from martyrdom only to let their piety and steadfastness appear the brighter.

On account of their piety it became customary to swear by the Name of Him who supports the world on three pillars, the pillars being the saints Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. Their deliverance from death by fire worked a great effect upon the disposition of the heathen. They were convinced of the uselessness of their idols, and with their own hands they destroyed them.<sup>93</sup>

83. Ekah, introduction, 23 (comp. 5, end); Koheleth 12.5. As to Daniel's absence, comp. also the preceding note. Against this view, see Shir 7.8. Here it is stated that the three men whose lot it was to represent their nation at the worship of the image (according to some, the entire Jewish representation consisted of twenty-three men, twenty of whom obeyed the command of Nebuchadnezzar; superior courts are composed of twenty-three members; comp. Sanhedrin 1.4) asked Daniel for advice, but he referred them to Ezekiel, saying to them: "There is a prophet (Daniel himself was not a prophet; comp. note 76) before you; go to him." In Ma'aseh Daniel, 119, it is said that Daniel, like his companions, was commanded by Nebuchadnezzar to worship the image, and like them he refused to obey. The king, however, decreed to put the three men to death but not Daniel. Comp. also Hippolytus on Dan. 3.16, who remarks: Daniel, though he stood at a distance and kept silence, encouraged them to be of good cheer, as he smiled at them. Josephus, Antiqui., X, 10.5, speak of the three men as Daniel's kinsmen (comp. note 76), who, like himself, were made rulers by Nebuchadnezzar over his whole kingdom.

84. WR 33.6; BaR 15.14; Shir 2.14; Tan. B. I, 38–39, and IV, 52; Tan. Noah 10 and Beha'aloteka 9; Yelammedenu in Aruk, s. v. אָרָא 2; Aggadat Bereshit 7, 15–16;

Tehillim 18, 229; Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 3, 21b. On the etymology of the name Nebuchadnezzar (נְבוּכַדְנֶצְצַר = נִבְחָ "barked"; כֵּד "a pitcher of water"; נֶצֶר "chirped"), see also BR 90.3, where it is said that this wicked king was also called טַפְסָר (comp. Jerem. 51, 27) because he was a fool (= טַפֵּשׁ), though old in years (שֶׁר בְּשָׁנִים), whereas Joseph was called אַבְרָם because he was wise (אֵב בחכמה), though young (רַךְ בְּשָׁנִים).

85. Sanhedrin 92b (מַלְכֵיּוֹת is here the same as אֲמוֹנוֹת in Tan., differently Rashi); Tan. III, 14; Tan. Noah 10 and Zaw 2; Tehillim 22, 188; Shir 7.9, where the names of the offices (?) given in Dan. 3.2 and 27 are explained in detail. The death of those who threw the pious men into the furnace is mentioned in the Bible (Dan. 3.22), and in the Additions to Daniel found in the Septuagint this verse reads: And the king's servants, that put them in, ceased not to make the furnace hot with naphtha, pitch, tow, and small wood; so that the flame streamed forth above the furnace forty-nine cubits. And it spread, and burned those Chaldeans whom it found about the furnace. The "forty-nine cubits" is a haggadic explanation of חַד שְׁבַעָה (Dan. 3.19), and is found also in Tehillim 28, 229, though in a somewhat different form. In the Midrashim quoted, as well as in Sanhedrin, loc. cit. (read הַיִּמְקִירוֹס instead of הַיִּמְקִירוֹ), it is said that Nebuchadnezzar himself was half burned on this occasion, see note 90. Compare footnote 76 on p. 160.

86. Tan. B. I, 40–41; Tan. Noah 10; Aggadat Bereshit 7.17. Against this view, comp. the references given in the next note, according to which it was an angel (Gabriel), and not God Himself, who saved the three men from death. Compare also footnote 33 on p. 176, with regard to the rescue of Abraham from the fiery furnace. For the prayer of the three men, see the following note.

87. Pesahim 118a–118b (יִרְקָמִי, the name of the angel of hail, is composed of יָהּ = יְהוָה "God", and רָקַם = רָקַם; comp. Syriac כְּאִפְּא רִגְמוּתָא, "hail stones"; hence Yorkami is the correct transliteration; the various etymologies of this name given by the lexicographers are not to be taken seriously); Abba Gorion 34; Ma'aseh Abraham (Horowitz' edition 45–46; here it is Michael who attempted to get ahead of Gabriel and rescue the three men); ShR 18.5; PRE 33; Tan. Tezawweh 12 (here the competition between Michael and Gabriel relates to the rescuing of Abraham); Tehillim 117, 480; PR 35, 160b; Midrash Esther 66. In the apocryphal Prayer of Azariah 26–27 it is said: But the angel of the Lord came down into the furnace together with Azariah and his fellows, and he drove the flame of the fire out of the furnace, as it had been a moist whistling wind, so that the fire touched them not at all, neither hurt nor troubled them. Comp. also 4 Maccabees 6.6, which reads: "Thou, when the three friends in Babylon freely gave their lives to the flames..., didst make as dew the fiery furnace, and deliver them unharmed ... turning the flame upon their adversaries.” The Midrashim go still further, and state that the furnace turned into a pleasure-ground. Comp. PR, loc. cit.; Shir 7.8 (end; the text is obscure; טלנוס must not be emended to פלניס, as it explains אור and not כבשן; אורקי is still more puzzling); Tan. B. III, 14; Tan. Zaw 2. The Haggadah (Sanhedrin 92b, below, and Shir 7.9, beginning) calls attention to the fact that the three men appeared robed in their best garments to be thrown into the furnace, because “even when one’s life is in danger one ought to be mindful of the duties laid upon one by his position.” Of a strange nature is the following statement of the Talmud (Ketubot 33b): Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah would have paid homage to the image if they had been flogged. Comp. Tosafot, ad loc. The idea conveyed by this statement is that even martyrs can not always endure the tortures of a slow death.

88. The apocryphal Prayer of Azariah and the Song of the Three Children in the Additions to Daniel in the Septuagint and in Theodotion. Reminiscences of this or a similar prayer and song by the three men are found in many passages of rabbinic literature; comp. Pesahim 118a (the Hallel is said here to have been composed by these men); Tan. B. I, 40; Noah 10; ShR 20.1 and 18.5 (here it is said that Gabriel collaborated in the composition of Hallel; on Gabriel see preceding note); Tehillim 117, 480; Aggadat Bereshit 7.17; Aggadat Shir 2.29; Zohar III, 57a. Comp. also Mahzor Vitry 320–322 and 337–338.

89. PR 35, 160b, with the additional remark: Gabriel attended upon the three men as does a disciple upon his master, because “the righteous are greater than the angels” (comp. Index, s. v. “Angels”, and see further Yerushalmi Shabbat 6, end, which reads: The three men made it possible for the angel to withstand the fire of the furnace, and not the reverse); DR 1.12. On Gabriel, see note 87, and footnote 55 on p. 1046.

90. Sanhedrin 92b–93a (as to the correct text, comp. note 83, according to which, one of the miracles was that Nebuchadnezzar was half consumed by the fire of the furnace and not that the bottom dropped out); Shir 7.9; Tan. B. I, 41, and III, 14; Tan. Noah 10 and Zaw 2; Aggadat Bereshit 7, 14. On the drinking cups made of the skulls of slain enemies, see Herodotus, IV, 65; Frazer, Golden Bough III, 372. Compare further footnote 345 on p. 400. The Karaites (comp., e. g., Hadassi, Eshkol, 45b below and 134a) accuse the Rabbis of ascribing this barbarous practice to the prophet Ezekiel. It is difficult to tell whether this accusation is due to ignorance or malice; the text of the Talmud (Sanhedrin, loc. cit.) makes it absolutely clear that it is Nebuchadnezzar, not Ezekiel, who is said to have committed this barbarous act. God does not wish to be praised by the wicked, who call on Him in time of distress, but forget Him in time of happiness; that is why the angel prevented Nebuchadnezzar from continuing his prayer of God. See WR 16.4; Tan. B. II, 37; Tan. Wa-Era (end). The words of praise to God uttered by Nebuchadnezzar: “For all His works are truth, and His ways justice” (Dan. 4.34), contain all the praises of God found in the Psalms of David. See WR 13 (end); Tehillim 5, 55–56; comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., X, 10.6. Yet Nebuchadnezzar had a poor conception of God’s true essence, as may be seen from his description of the angel as one whose appearance is like a son of God (Dan. 3.25). An angel struck him on his mouth, saying: “Correct thyself! Has God any sons?” Nebuchadnezzar profited by this lesson, and the next time he spoke of the angel of God (Dan. 3.28), and not of His son. See Yerushalmi Shabbat 6 (end); ShR 20.10 (here it is also stated that Nebuchadnezzar’s words, “and none can stay His hand”, Dan. 4.32, are blasphemous, conveying the idea that God in His omnipotence does not refrain from doing injustice; comp. Baba Kamma 38a); Shir 7.9; Shemuel 5, 60 (read משולח instead of משלו); Aggadat Bereshit 27, 55. This anti-Christian Haggadah (the last-named source reads: The Babylonians maintain God has a son; on Babylon = Rome, see Index, s. v.) is the Jewish reply to the argument of the Church Fathers that in Dan., loc. cit., the expression “son of God” refers to Jesus. Comp. e. g., Hippolytus, ad loc.

91. Tan. B. I, 41; Tan. Noah 10 (read: למלאך instead of למלך; the angel bade them leave the furnace, but they did not obey until they received permission from the king); Aggadat Bereshit 7, 17; Shir 7.9.

92. Sanhedrin 93a (they got married in Palestine, and begot children; comp. note 78); Midrash Shir 32a–32b; PK 11, 99a; Tan. B. V, 25–26; Tan. Ki-Tissa 14 and Re’eh 16; BR 56.19. As to the fate of the three men, two other opinions are mentioned. According to one, they died immediately after they were saved from the fire of the furnace. Their death was caused by the “evil eye” with which people looked at them because of the miracle wrought for them. The other view maintains that they died in a very peculiar manner. Enormously large multitudes of heathens assembled to see them leave the furnace, and these multitudes were so exasperated at the Israelites for having forsaken their God (the three men were the only Israelites steadfast in their religion; see note 83), that they spat at them; the three men fell into the spittle and were drowned. The last view is extremely bizarre, and it is possible that the correct reading is בקר “by cold” instead of ברק “in spittle”. Comp. Yerushalmi Shabbat 14, 14c, and Baba Mezi’a 107b, where two views are given as to the most frequent causes of death: 1) Most people die from cold (קר = צנה); 2) the “evil eye” is responsible for most deaths. Accordingly the two views concerning the death of the three men (“evil eye”; cold) only wish to convey the idea that they died in the same way as most people. In Baba Mezi’a the word used for cold is רוח “draft”, and רוק is phonetically and graphically similar to it. In the Tauhumas, and PK, loc. cit., the expression גוש של רוק “mass of spittle” is used with reference to the rest of the Israelites (the heathens spat at them, that they became a “mass of spittle”), and not with regard to the three men. At all events, the expression גוש של רוק in these sources supports the reading of רק in Babli, and the suggested emendations are rather doubtful.

93. Shir 7.8 (according to another opinion, the three pillars are the three patriarchs; compare footnote 590 on p. 728); Tehillim 1, 5; compare with p. 527. As to the conversion of the heathen on this occasion, see also Shir 1.3 and 4.1; ‘Aseret ha-Dibrot 70. Delegations of the people waiting on Ezekiel are also mentioned on other occasions. Before the destruction of the Temple people came to argue with him about his prophecies foretelling the imminent captivity of Israel. They said to him: “If Abraham received the Holy Land as a reward for having fulfilled one commandment (circumcision?), how much more can we expect to remain in possession of this land when we fulfil many commandments?” Ezekiel replied: “Ye eat with the blood, cutting off parts from a live animal to consume them; ye lift your eyes unto your idols to worship them; ye shed blood, and stand upon your sword, delaying the execution of justice; ye work abominations, and commit sodomy; ye defile every one his neighbor’s wife. Ye do not even fulfil the Noachian commandments (compare with p. 69), and yet ye say: The land is given to us for inheritance.” See Tosefta Sotah 6.9, which is a paraphrase of Ezek. 33.24–26. The same passage contains the two other paraphrases of these verses. After the destruction of the Temple the elders came to the prophet and said to him: “When the master sells his slave, does he not thereby renounce his claim to him? Now God sold us to the nations of the world, and accordingly we are no longer under His jurisdiction.” The prophet replied: “Does the master renounce his claim to his slave if he gave him for a time to another master, with the understanding that he would take the slave back after the expiration of that period?” See Sifre N., 115; Tan. B. V, 50; Tan. Nizzabim 3 (this is the source of Yalkut II, 359, where Wa-Yikra Rabbah is erroneously given as source); 2 AKN 11, 28. When the elders came to Ezekiel to hear from him the word of God, the prophet was told by God that He “would not be inquired of” by them (comp. Ezek. 20.1–3). The prophet pleaded for them with God, saying: “Wouldst Thou forsake them, and not ‘be inquired of’ by them even for the sake of the Torah?” Thereupon God changed His decision, saying unto Ezekiel: “I will yet for this (the sake of the Torah) be inquired of by the house of Israel.” See Yelammedenu in Yalkut II, 358, on Ezek. 20.3. When Ezekiel received from God the revelation concerning the future Temple, he said: “We are in exile in the land of our enemies, and Thou commandest me to reveal to Israel the plan for the Temple!” God, however, informed him that the study of the Temple laws by Israel is as acceptable to Him as the erection of the Temple. See Tan. Zaw 14; Yelammedenu in ‘Aruk, s. v. צר 3; WR 7.3. Compare also with p. 198. The purpose of revealing to Ezekiel the vision of the heavenly throne (Ezek. 1.1, seq.) was to demonstrate to him that God is not in need of the services performed in the Temple, since innumerable hosts of angels minister to Him in heaven; hence it is for Israel’s sake that the Temple will be rebuilt. See WR 2.8; ER 6, 34. Ezekiel, like his father Jeremiah (comp. Tosefta-Targum quoted by Kimhi on Ezek. 1.3, and see also the quotation from a MS. given in note 42, where Buzi is said to be the name of Jeremiah, on the strength of the assertion that he is identical with Buzi the father of Ezekiel), lived in a time of terrible depravity and sinfulness, to atone for which God inflicted great suffering upon him. See Sanhedrin 29a with reference to Ezek. 4.4 and similar passages. On the sins of Israel, see the passage cited above from Tosefta. One of the most wicked acts of this generation was the fashioning of the “image of jealousy” (Ezek. 8.5), which was an abomination in the eyes of the Lord. By means of witchcraft they had fashioned out of stone two figures, a male and a female, embracing one another like husband and wife. See Hasidim 46. A similar reminiscence of the Virgil legend is found in the Armilus legend; see Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, II, s. v. “Armilus”. A very strange statement occurs in the Jewish Peter legend (second version of Aggadta de-Shimon Kefa. 9) that Peter (= Kefa “stone”) was so called because he occupied as his seat the stone on the river Kebar, from which Ezekiel used to deliver his prophecies. The sentence קול לו מהאבן ויהיה יוצא not quite clear. Does it perhaps mean: And he (Peter) became famous on account of this stone?

EZEKIEL REVIVES THE DEAD

Among the dead whom Ezekiel restored to life at the same time when the three men were redeemed from the fiery furnace were different classes of persons. Some were the Ephraimites that had perished in the attempt to escape from Egypt before Moses led the whole nation out of the land of bondage. Some were the godless among the Jews that had polluted the Temple at Jerusalem with heathen rites, and those still more godless who in life had not believed in the resurrection of the dead. Others of those revived by Ezekiel were the youths among the Jews carried away captive to Babylonia by Nebuchadnezzar whose beauty was so radiant that it darkened the very splendor of the sun. The Babylonian women were seized with a great passion for them, and at the solicitation of their husbands, Nebuchadnezzar ordered a bloody massacre of the handsome youths. But the Babylonian women were not yet cured of their unlawful passion; the beauty of the young Hebrews haunted them until their corpses lay crushed before them, their graceful bodies mutilated. These were the youths recalled to life by the prophet Ezekiel. Lastly, he revived some that had perished only a short time before. When Hananiah, Mishaël, and Azariah were saved from death, Nebuchadnezzar thus addressed the other Jews, those who had yielded obedience to his command concerning the worship of the idol: "You know that your God can help and save, nevertheless you paid worship to an idol which is incapable of doing anything. This proves that, as you have destroyed your own land by your wicked deeds, so you are now trying to destroy my land with your iniquity." Forthwith he commanded that they all be executed, sixty thousand in number. Twenty years passed, and Ezekiel was vouchsafed the vision in which God bade him repair to the Valley of Dura, where Nebuchadnezzar had set up his idol, and had massacred the host of the Jews. Here God showed him the dry bones of the slain with the question: "Can I revive these bones?" Ezekiel's answer was evasive, and as a punishment for his little faith, he had to end his days in Babylon, and was not granted even burial in the soil of Palestine. God then dropped the dew of heaven upon the dry bones, and "sinews were upon them, and flesh came up, and skin covered them above." At the same time God sent forth winds to the four corners of the earth, which unlocked the treasure houses of souls, and brought its own soul to each body. All came to life except one man, who, as God explained to the prophet, was excluded from the resurrection because he was a usurer.

In spite of the marvellous miracle performed for them, the men thus restored to life wept, because they feared they would have no share at the end of time in the resurrection of the whole of Israel. But the prophet assured them, in the name of God, that their portion in all that had been promised Israel should in no wise be diminished.<sup>95</sup>

---

94. Sanhedrin 92a (this passage also gives the different view that the quickening of the dead is to be understood as an allegory; but in opposition to this opinion, a Tanna remarks: I am a descendant of one of the men quickened by Ezekiel, and here are the phylacteries which came down to me from him); PRE 33; ER 5, 23–24 (Ezekiel was rewarded for his great love for his people, and was found meritorious to perform this great miracle); Targum Yerushalmi on Exod. 13.17 (compare with p. 547); Tan. B. II, 84; ShR 31.5. On the view that usurers are excluded from the resurrection, see the references given by Luria, note 130 on PRE, loc. cit. On the beauty of the Jewish youths, see the references in note 45. In contrast to the view that Ezekiel, on this occasion, showed lack of trust in God's omnipotence, it is maintained in BR 19.11 (this is the source of Zohar III, 200a), that the prophet was the only one of five (the others are: Adam, Cain, Balaam, and Hezekiah; compare footnote 730 on p. 763 as well as p. 1053, note 86) who gave the expected answer to the questions put to them by God. Ezekiel is praised for the strictness with which he observed the law, especially the dietary regulations; comp. Hullin 37b. But the dietary laws given by Ezekiel in his book, which on the surface seem to contradict the laws of the Torah, nearly caused his work to be excluded from the Canon and be "hidden"; Shabbat 13a, and the parallel passages on the margin. The legend that Ezekiel was the teacher of Pythagoras, mentioned for the first time by Clemens Alexandrinus, Stromata, 1.15, is probably of Jewish origin, but the story of his martyrdom (a detailed description of this is found in Visio Pauli 49) is certainly Christian, it was nevertheless copied by Yahya, Shalshelet, 100a, top.

95. PRE 33. Luria, ad loc., understands the Midrash to say that the people wept because not all the dead came to life again. Comp. also ER 5, 24, and Sanhedrin 92b. This great miracle was wrought by God, that the belief in the resurrection of the dead might become well-established among Israel. It may be stated as a general principle that all the miracles which are to take place in the “time to come” have been performed “in miniature” during the present order of the world. See Tan. B. III, 90–91, and the parallel passages cited by Buber. Comp. also Midrash Shir 43a. Ezekiel is not the only man who made the dead come to life again; in the world to come the righteous will perform the miracle of the resurrection of the dead. See Pesahim 68a; BHM VI, 64. The dead quickened by Ezekiel chanted a song of praise to God as soon as they came to life; Sanhedrin 92b.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR A BEAST

Nebuchadnezzar, the ruler of the whole world,<sup>96</sup> to whom even the wild animals paid obedience,—his pet was a lion with a snake coiled about its neck<sup>97</sup>—did not escape punishment for his sins. He was chastised as none before him. He whom fear of God had at first held back from a war against Jerusalem, and who had to be dragged forcibly, as he sat on his horse, to the Holy of Holies<sup>98</sup> by the archangel Michael, he later became so arrogant that he thought himself a god,<sup>99</sup> and cherished the plan of enveloping himself in a cloud, so that he might live apart from men.<sup>100</sup> A heavenly voice resounded: “O thou wicked man, son of a wicked man, and descendant of Nimrod the wicked, who incited the world to rebel against God! Behold, the days of the years of a man are threescore years and ten, or perhaps by reason of strength fourscore years. It takes five hundred years to traverse the distance of the earth from the first heaven, and as long a time to penetrate from the bottom to the top of the first heaven, and not less are the distances from one of the seven heavens to the next. How, then, canst thou speak of ascending like unto the Most High ‘above the heights of the clouds?’”<sup>101</sup> For this transgression of deeming himself more than a man, he was punished by being made to live for some time as a beast among beasts, treated by them as though he were one of them.<sup>102</sup> For forty days<sup>103</sup> he led this life. As far down as his navel he had the appearance of an ox, and the lower part of his body resembled that of a lion. Like an ox he ate grass, and like a lion he attacked and killed many wicked men. The wonder attracted a curious crowd, but Daniel spent his time in prayer, entreating that the seven years of this brutish life allotted to Nebuchadnezzar might be reduced to seven months. His prayer was granted. At the end of forty days reason returned to the king, the next forty days he passed in weeping bitterly over his sins, and in the interval that remained to complete the seven months he again lived the life of a beast.<sup>104</sup>

96. Megillah 11a; PRE 11; ‘Aseret Melakim 39; Maamar ‘Aseret Melakim 54; Aggadat Esther 8; ‘Aktan 12; 2 Targum Esther 1.1 (beginning and end); compare footnote 82 on p. 161, and Index, s. v. “Cosmocrator”. Though he was the ruler of the entire world, Nebuchadnezzar did not enjoy his life for a moment; a glance at his dwarfish figure (on this point, see BR 16.4; ER 31, 158; PK 13, 112a, below; PR 31, 144a) sufficed to mar his pleasure in life. See Tan. B. II, 90; Tan. Terumah 4.

97. Shabbat 150a (top; perhaps it means with a snake coiled about his neck); PRE 11 (which reads: Not a bird opened its beak without the permission of Nebuchadnezzar); Midrash ‘Aseret Melakim 42–43. Comp. also Judith 11.7.

98. Tan. B. I, 185. As to Nebuchadnezzar’s reluctance to undertake the campaign against Jerusalem, see text on p. 1074.

99. Nebuchadnezzar’s claim to be a god and his ignominious end are often referred to in the Haggadah. Comp. the references given in the following three notes and Judith 11.2. The deification of the Roman Caesars was well known to the Jews, and occupied their imagination to a great extent.

100. Mekilta Shirah 2, 36a; 6, 39b; 8, 41b; Mekilta RS 58 and 66; Tosefta Sotah 3.10. Comp. also Koheleth 5.2 and Hullin 89a. In the last passage Nimrod (text on p. 161), Pharaoh (text on p. 526), Sennacherib, Hiram (text on p. 1104), and Nebuchadnezzar are contrasted with the great men in Israel who were modest and humble, whereas the heathen rulers claimed to be gods. Mekilta, 41b, and Mekilta RS, 66, do not count Nimrod among those that claimed divinity. See Tan. B. II, 23 and 31; ShR 8.2; Tan. Wa-Era 9; Tan. in Makiri on Ps. 9, 59 (not in our Tanhumas). These sources speak of Pharaoh, Hiram, Nebuchadnezzar, and Joash (compare with p. 1038) as the four kings who pretended to be gods and ended ignominiously by being abused in "modo foeminarum". Compare footnote 16 on p. 1038. See also BR 11.5, which reads: Adam and his descendants would have enjoyed eternal life, were it not for the fact that God foresaw that Hiram and Nebuchadnezzar would claim to be gods; Hallel 94a–94b (partly based on Baba Batra 75a); BaR 9.24. Comp. further notes 102, 105, and 107.

101. Pesahim 94a–94b; Hagigah 13a. On the distance between the heaven and the earth, see text on p. 6.

102. Tan. B. II, 23 (while in the state of a beast he was misused by the other beasts, and this was his punishment for considering himself more than human; according to ibid., 33, this was his punishment for his attempted abuse of Zedekiah; comp. notes 100 and 107); Tan. Wa-Era 9; ShR 8.2; Tan. in Makiri on Ps. 9, 59. Comp. also Mekilta Shirah 6, 39b, which is to be explained in accordance with Tan. B. II, 33.

103. Yerahmeel 66, 205–206. The old authorities speak of seven years (= שבעה עדין in Dan. 4. 22) which he lived as a beast; comp., e. g., Josephus, Antiqui., X, 10.6; WR 182. Comp. the following note.

104. Yerahmeel 46, 205–206, which in the main agrees with Chronicon Paschale 1, 299. It is very likely that these authors like many others (comp. Gaster, ad loc.) had before them an apocryphal (of Jewish origin?) history of Daniel. Compare footnote 18 on p. 1115. With the exception of Yerahmeel, the rabbinic literature knows nothing of this legend. In reference to the advice given by Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar (Dan. 4.22), the Rabbis remark that the king heeded it for one year. As long as he was charitable and kind to the poor, the heavenly decree against him was not carried out. His doom overtook him only after he had ceased to give alms. See Aggadat Shir 1, 25 and 64. Opinions differ as to whether Daniel acted rightly in attempting to prevent the punishment of the wicked king. According to the Midrash just quoted, he did it in the interest of the needy exiles, whose suffering he hoped to ameliorate thereby, and hence no blame is attached to him. Others, however, maintain that Daniel committed a sin in attempting to save Nebuchadnezzar, and he was punished for it as, shortly after, he lost the high position he had held at court. Some authorities even assert that in consequence of this sin he was thrown into the den of the lions. See Baba Batra 4a; ShR 30.24; Shir 3.4 (end); Tan. Mishpatim 4 (this is the source for the quotation from Midrash Haggadol given by Schechter, Aggadat Shir, 69); Zohar I, 13b. In the last-named source the following statement is quoted from the "Book of King Solomon". As long as one shows compassion to the poor, his face retains "Adam's features", with the result that animals fear him (compare footnote 113 on p. 91). Hence as long as Nebuchadnezzar was kind to the poor, he retained his human form; but when he ceased to give alms (comp. above), he became a beast. Nebuchadnezzar's guardian angel (his name was Kal; comp. the Babylonian locality called Kalnebo, Sannhedrin 63b) was first "thrown down", before the doom overtook the king. See ShR 21.5; compare also with p. 557. According to Esther R. I. 8, Nebuchadnezzar did not change bodily, but only mentally, so that when the two highest officers of the state (= Cyrus and Darius; comp. Shir 3.4) saw him act as an animal, they drove him from the palace, after having taken off all his garments, so that he almost remained naked. As to the sins committed by Nebuchadnezzar, which were the cause of his severe punishment, see ER 15, 74, and Index, s. v. "Sins, Eight Cardinal". As late as the second century C. E. the house of Nebuchadnezzar, the den of the lions into which Daniel was thrown, and the furnace where the great miracle was wrought for his three companions were pointed out by the Jews of Babylon. See Berakot 57b and compare footnote 54 on p. 1126.

HIRAM

Hiram II, the king of Tyre, was a contemporary of Nebuchadnezzar, and in many respects resembled him. He, too, esteemed himself a god, and sought to make men believe in his divinity by the artificial heavens he fashioned for himself. In the sea he erected four iron pillars, on which he built up seven heavens, each five hundred ells larger than the one below. The first was a plate of glass of five hundred square ells, and the second a plate of iron of a thousand square ells. The third, of lead, and separated from the second by canals, contained huge round boulders, which produced the sound of thunder on the iron. The fourth heaven was of brass, the fifth of copper, the sixth of silver, and the seventh of gold, all separated from each other by canals. In the seventh, thirty-five hundred ells in extent, he had diamonds and pearls, which he manipulated so as to produce the effect of flashes and sheets of lightning, while the stones below imitated the growling of the thunder.

As Hiram was thus floating above the earth, in his vain imagination deeming himself superior to the rest of men, he suddenly perceived the prophet Ezekiel next to himself. He had been waved thither by a wind. Frightened and amazed, Hiram asked the prophet how he had risen to his heights. The answer was: "God brought me here, and He bade me ask thee why thou art so proud, thou born of woman?" The king of Tyre replied defiantly: "I am not one born of woman; I live forever, and as God resides on the sea, so my abode is on the sea, and as He inhabits seven heavens, so do I. See how many kings I have survived! Twenty-one of the House of David, and as many of the Kingdom of the Ten Tribes, and no less than fifty prophets and ten high priests have I buried." Thereupon God said: "I will destroy My house, that henceforth Hiram may have no reason for self-glorification, because all his pride comes only from the circumstance that he furnished the cedar-trees for the building of the Temple." The end of this proud king was that he was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, deprived of his throne, and made to suffer a cruel death. Though the Babylonian king was the step-son of Hiram, he had no mercy with him. Daily he cut off a bit of the flesh of his body, and forced the Tyrian king to eat it, until he finally perished. Hiram's palace was swallowed up by the earth, and in the bowels of the earth it will remain until it shall emerge in the future world as the habitation of the pious.<sup>105</sup>

105. Midrash in Yalkut II, 367, on Ezek. 28 (read: בדיל "lead" for ברזל "iron" in the description of the third heaven). For other descriptions of the "heavens" fashioned by Hiram, see MHG II, 57–58 (the beginning, "four kings claimed to be gods, etc."), agrees literally with Tan. as quoted in Makiri on Ps. 9, 59; see the quotation in note 100; accordingly Tan. is the source of MHG); Bet 'Eked, II, 20–21 and 28–31; Ma'asiyyot (Gaster's edition, 6–7); BHM V, 111–112 (comp. Jellinek, introduction, 33); Tan. Bereshit 7 (which reads: Hiram erected his palace by means of machines "between the Ocean—Atlantic—and the Adriatic"). Compare also pp. 161–162 and footnote 36 on p. 955. As to the seven kinds of metal out of which Hiram fashioned the seven heavens, see Enoch 52.2; Origen, Con. Cel. 6.22. Comp. further Jeremias, Babylonisches im neuem Testamente, 24, seq. Tan., loc. cit., as well as Bet 'Eked, II, 19, points out that the four kings who claimed to be gods (Pharaoh, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, and Hiram; comp. note 100) built their palaces "over the water". Herodotus, I, 181, mentions a famous building at Babylon which had eight towers, and it is quite possible that the legend about Hiram's palace contains some reminiscence thereof. As to Hiram's claim to divinity, see Mekilta Shirah 8, 48b = Mekilta RS, 66 (the Mekiltas are the oldest sources which identify the "prince of Tyre" mentioned in Ezek. 28.1 with Hiram); 9.5 and 96.5; Baba Batra 75a; Hullin 89a; Tan. B. I, 213, and II, 23–25, 30; Tan. Wa-Era 9; ShR 8.2; Hallel 91. Comp. further the references in note 100. The Haggadah maintains that this Hiram is identical with Hiram the friend of Judah (Gen. 38.11), who continued to be a friend of the latter's descendants, and assisted Solomon in the building of the Temple. He received his reward for this by being granted a very long life, surviving all the kings of the house of David and those of the ten tribes. See BR 84.8; Tan. B. I, 184. The Church Fathers are likewise acquainted with this Haggadah; comp. Aphraates, 84–85; Ephraem, II, 189F; Jerome on Ezek. 28.11; Book of Adam 125–126. See Ginzberg, Haggada bei den Kirchenv., II, 126–128. For the Arabic version of the Hiram legend, see Steinschneider, Arabische Literatur der Juden, 12. According to 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira, 28b, 29a, 37a, Hiram, as a reward for his assisting Solomon to build the Temple, entered paradise alive, and remained there for a thousand years. But when he became proud and claimed to be a god, he was driven out of paradise and made to enter hell. In many sources where the men who entered paradise alive are enumerated (comp. Derek Erez Z. 1, end, and Index, s. v. "Paradise, Entered Alive"), Hiram king of Tyre is given as one of them. In footnote 62 on p. 966 it is suggested to accept the emendation חירם מצור "Hiram of Tyre" (the architect of Solomon's Temple) instead of חירם מלך צור; but in view of 2 Alphabet of Ben Sira, this emendation is not tenable. For several etymologies of the name Hiram (also spelt חורם), see Rimze Haftarot, Terumah. That Hiram was Nebuchadnezzar's step father is found only in WR 18.2 (but not in the parallel passage in Tan. B. III, 38), and one is tempted to emend the text and read, in accordance with Yalkut, loc. cit., נבוכדנצר בעל אמו instead of נבוכדנצר של בעל אמו. But the context clearly shows that the Midrash lays emphasis on the fact that Hiram was killed by Nebuchadnezzar who was closely related to him. An obscure statement is the one of Yelammedenu in 'Aruk, s. v. מל 6, that Jeremiah's prophecy against "all that have the corners of their hair polled" (Jer. 9.25) is directed against Hiram. See also Bernstein, König Nebucadnezar 24, seq.

THE FALSE PROPHETS

Not only among the heathen, but also among the Jews there were very sinful people in those days. The most notorious Jewish sinners were the two false prophets Ahab and Zedekiah. Ahab came to the daughter of Nebuchadnezzar and said: "Yield thyself to Zedekiah," telling her this in the form of a Divine message. The same was done by Zedekiah, who only varied the message by substituting the name of Ahab. The princess could not accept such messages as Divine, and she told her father what had occurred.<sup>106</sup> Though Nebuchadnezzar was so addicted to immoral practices that he was in the habit of making his captive kings drunk, and then satisfying his unnatural lusts upon them, and a miracle had to interpose to shield the pious king of Judah against this disgrace,<sup>107</sup> yet he well knew that the God of the Jews hates immorality. He therefore questioned Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah about it, and they emphatically denied the possibility that such a message could have come from God. The prophets of lies refused to recall their statements, and Nebuchadnezzar decided to subject them to the same fiery test as he had decreed for the three pious companions of Daniel. To be fair toward them, the king permitted them to choose a third fellow-sufferer, some pious man to share their lot. Seeing no escape, Ahab and Zedekiah asked for Joshua, later the high priest, as their companion in the furnace, in the hope that his distinguished merits would suffice to save all three of them. They were mistaken. Joshua emerged unhurt, only his garments were seared, but the false prophets were consumed. Joshua explained the singeing of his garments by the fact that he was directly exposed to the full fury of the flames. But the truth was that he had to expiate the sins of his sons, who had contracted marriages unworthy of their dignity and descent. Therefore their father escaped death only after the fire had burnt his garments.<sup>108</sup>

106. Sanhedrin 93a; Tan. B. III, 7 (here it is stated that it was Semiramis, Nebuchadnezzar's wife, and not his daughter, whom the false prophets tempted to sin); Tan. Wa-Yikra 6; Midrash Aggadah, Lev. 51 (very elaborate); PRE 33; PK 24, 164–165; Mekilta RS, III (comp. also ibid. 86, with regard to the orthography אהב = אחאב); Makiri, Prov. 19, 5a–6b; We-Hizhir I, 97; Ma'asiyyot (Gaster's edition 20–21). On the relation of this legend to the story of Susanna, comp. note 79. The Church Fathers Origen (Epistola ad Africanum) and Jerome on Jer. 29 give this legend as they heard it from their Jewish teachers. According to their version, the false prophets used to assure the women that they were destined to become the mothers of the Messiah if they yielded to their wishes. This is hardly connected with the legend that the Messiah would be born and brought up in Rome (= Babylonia). Comp. Sanhedrin 98a (the correct reading is אפיתחא דרומא; comp. Rabinowicz, ad loc.) and Tan. Tazri'a 8. In some editions of Tan. this passage is missing undoubtedly on account of the objections raised by the censors. Comp. Buber, note 65 on Tan. B. III, 38.

107. Shabbat 149b. Comp. also Tan. B. II, 33, where בוקלון מבזה אותו means sodomy, as is often the case in the midrashic-talmudic literature, and hence the corresponding punishment of Nebuchadnezzar. See notes 100 and 102. The statement in Tan. dispels all doubt about the meaning of אותו צדיק in Shabbat, loc. cit. It refers to Zedekiah, and not to Jehoiachin. As to Zedekiah being described as "that righteousman", see notes 8, 119.

108. Sanhedrin 93a; PK 25, 165a; Tan. B. III, 7; Tan. Wa-Yera 6; PRE 33 (which reads: The angel Michael saved Joshua = Jehoshua from death by fire; the garments of the latter were seared because he was very near the false prophets); Mekilta RS, 111; Midrash Aggadah on Lev. 5.1. According to Justin Martyr, Dialogue, 116, Joshua himself had contracted a marriage unworthy of him. The same author remarks that Joshua was called by the prophet “a brand plucked out of the fire” (Zech. 3.2) διὰ τὸ ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν εἰληφέναι, which shows that he was not acquainted with, or did not accept, the rabbinic tradition that the high priest was thrown into the fiery furnace by Nebuchadnezzar. Another legend (comp. Yerushalmi, Ta’anit 4, 69b) has it that at the time of the destruction of the Temple eighty thousand young priests (compare also to p. 1086) were burned at the stake, Joshua being the only young priest who escaped this frightful death. Hence the designation applied to him by Zechariah. As to Jehoshua’s friends mentioned in Zech. 3.8, see Horayot 13a, where they are said to have been prophets (= Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; see Sanhedrin, loc. cit.; BR 56, end; note 76); 2 ARN 28. The Church Fathers (comp., e. g., Tertulian, Adversus Judaeos, 14; Lactantius, IV, 14) explain the story of Joshua allegorically as referring to Jesus (= Joshua). This is perhaps the reason why the Haggadah finds fault with Joshua, for the Rabbis desired to combat the Christian allegory.

DANIEL’S PIETY

No greater contrast to Hiram and the false prophets Ahab and Zedekiah can be imagined than is presented by the character of the pious Daniel. When Nebuchadnezzar offered him Divine honors,<sup>109</sup> he refused what Hiram sought to obtain by every means in his power. The Babylonian king felt so ardent an admiration for Daniel that he sent him from the country when the time arrived to worship the idol he had erected in Dura, for he knew very well that Daniel would prefer death in the flames to disregard of the commands of God, and he could not well have cast the man into the fire to whom he had paid Divine homage. Moreover, it was the wish of God that Daniel should not pass through the fiery ordeal at the same time as his three friends, in order that their deliverance might not be ascribed to him.<sup>110</sup>

In spite of all this, Nebuchadnezzar endeavored to persuade Daniel by gentle means to worship an idol. He had the golden diadem of the high priest inserted in the mouth of an idol, and by reason of the wondrous power that resides in the Holy Name inscribed on the diadem, the idol gained the ability to speak, and it said the words: “I am thy God.” Thus were many seduced to worship the image. But Daniel could not be misled so easily. He secured permission from the king to kiss the idol. Laying his mouth upon the idol’s, he adjured the diadem in the following words: “I am but flesh and blood, yet at the same time a messenger of God. I therefore admonish thee, take heed that the Name of the Holy One, blessed be He, may not be desecrated, and I order thee to follow me.” So it happened. When the heathen came with music and song to give honor to the idol, it emitted no sound, but a storm broke loose and overturned it.<sup>111</sup>

On still another occasion Nebuchadnezzar tried to persuade Daniel to worship an idol, this time a dragon that devoured all who approached it, and therefore was adored as a god by the Babylonians. Daniel had straw mixed with nails fed to him, and the dragon ate and perished almost immediately.<sup>112</sup>

All this did not prevent Daniel from keeping the welfare of the king in mind continually. Hence it was that when Nebuchadnezzar was engaged in setting his house in order, he desired to mention Daniel in his will as one of his heirs. But the Jew refused with the words: “Far be it from me to leave the inheritance of my fathers for that of the uncircumcised.”<sup>113</sup>

Nebuchadnezzar died after having reigned forty years, as long as King David.<sup>114</sup> The death of the tyrant brought hope and joy to many a heart, for his severity had been such that during his lifetime none dared laugh, and when he descended to Sheol, its inhabitants trembled, fearing he had come to reign over them, too. However, a heavenly voice called to him: "Go down, and be thou laid down with the uncircumcised."<sup>115</sup>

The interment of this great king was anything but what one might have expected, and for this reason: During the seven years spent by Nebuchadnezzar among the beasts, his son Evil-merodach ruled in his stead. Nebuchadnezzar reappeared after his period of penance, and incarcerated his son for life. When the death of Nebuchadnezzar actually did occur, Evil-merodach refused to accept the homage the nobles brought him as the new king, because he feared that his father was not dead, but had only disappeared as once before, and would return again. To convince him of the groundlessness of his apprehension, the corpse of Nebuchadnezzar, badly mutilated by his enemies, was dragged through the streets.<sup>116</sup>

Shortly afterward occurred the death of Zedekiah, the dethroned king of Judah. His burial took place amid great demonstrations of sympathy and mourning. The elegy over him ran thus: "Alas that King Zedekiah had to die, he who quaffed the lees which all the generations before him had accumulated."<sup>117</sup>

Zedekiah reached a good old age,<sup>118</sup> for though it was in his reign that the destruction of Jerusalem took place, yet it was the guilt of the nation, not of the king, that had brought about the catastrophe.<sup>119</sup>

109. BR 96.6; Tan. B. I, 213. Comp. note 81.

110. Sanhedrin 93a. On Daniel's leaving Babylon, see vol. IV, p. 328.

111. Shir 7.9; Zohar II, 175a. Compare also to p. 1029.

112. BR 67. This is closely related to, but not directly dependent on, the apocryphal story of Bel and the Dragon, placed in the Septuagint and Theodotion among the additions to the book of Daniel. This apocryphal work consists of two separate stories. In the first, Daniel by a clever device exposed the trickery of the priests of Bel, who made it appear that the idol consumed the food and drink set before it. In the second, Daniel slays the dragon god, by putting into its mouth cakes made of pitch, fat, and hair, after eating which it burst asunder. Directly based on the Greek Apocrypha is the story of the dragon as given in Yerahmeel (comp. Gaster, The Unknown Aramaic Original of Theodotion's Additions, 75–94), in Bereshit Rabba di-Rabba (comp. Neubauer, Book of Tobit, 39–43, and Epstein in Magazin, XV, 78–79), and in Shalsholet, 99b. Compare also to p. 1113.

113. Yerahmeel 66, 206, and the medieval Christian chronicles. Comp. Gaster, ad loc., and note 104.

114. Seder 'Olam 28 (comp. Ratner, ad loc.); PK 27, 168b; WR 20.1; Tan. B. III, 54, and V, 8; Tan. Ahare 1; Megillah 11a (it is said here that he reigned forty-five years); Koheleth 9.2; Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.1. Compare also to pp. 1111–1112.

115. Shabbat 149a.

116. Tan. B. III, 38; Tan. Tazri'a 8; WR 18.2; Bet 'Eked II, 20. According to the version of this legend in 2 Targum Esther 1.1 (beginning) and Jerome on Is. 14.19 (he describes it as a "fable told by the Hebrews"), it was not Evil-merodach who feared to ascend the throne of his father, but the magnates of the state, fearing the reappearance of Nebuchadnezzar, would not let him do it. Yerahmeel 66, 206–207, seems to have been acquainted with the version of the legend as given by Jerome, and hence he states that Evil-merodach was imprisoned together with Jehoiachin. The rabbinical sources do not know of this incident, but it is given by Jerome. The second statement of Yerahmeel, that it was Jehoiachin who advised Evil-merodach to take out his father's corpse from the grave, is not found elsewhere, either in Jewish or in Christian sources. Kimhi on 2 Kings 25.27 quotes the reading of the Midrash (WR loc. cit., is very likely meant), according to which, during the time that Nebuchadnezzar lived among the beasts one of his sons ruled in his stead. This son was killed by his father when he returned. It was the fear of being overtaken by a similar fate that made Evil-merodach cautious before he ascended the throne of the kingdom. An entirely different reason for taking out Nebuchadnezzar's corpse from the grave is given in 2 ARN 17, 37. According to this source, after the death of Nebuchadnezzar, his son Evil-merodach wished to set Jehoiachin free, as he was not a rebel and was kept in prison without any valid reason (comp. the similar statement by Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.2), but the magnates of the state objected to it, saying to him: "A king cannot revoke the edicts of his dead predecessor, unless he drags the corpse of the dead king out of the grave". Evil-merodach did not refrain from acting in conformity with their words in order to be able to set king Jehoiachin free. There can be no doubt that 2 ARN is based on a fuller text of Seder 'Olam 28, where the words as they stand at present (גוררו בשביל לבטל גזרותיו) are hardly intelligible. Compare also footnote 134 on p. 1061, and Bernstein, König Nebucadnezar, 64–69.

117. Seder 'Olam 18; Mo'ed Katan 28b. According to Josephus, Antiqui., X, 8.7, Zedekiah died during Nebuchadnezzar's life-time, who buried him with great honors. There is also a Haggadah maintaining that Zedekiah was killed by Nebuchadnezzar. Comp. PRE 53, according to the reading in Batte Midrashot, III, 32. See further the quotation from an unknown Midrash in Hasidim 107 concerning the eight kings, descendants of David, who died by the sword. In footnote 107 on p. 932 an attempt was made to explain this passage by assuming that Athaliah is one of the שמונה מלכים; but this is hardly acceptable, as the text speaks of kings who were descended from David, whereas Athaliah was not of Jewish descent at all. It is therefore more likely that this Midrash is likewise of the opinion that Zedekiah was killed by Nebuchadnezzar. Comp. also note 8.

118. 2 ARN 43, 122.

119. 'Arakin 17a; Sanhedrin 103a. Comp. also Shabbat 149a, where Zedekiah is described as אורנו צדיק, "that righteous man" (on this passage see note 107); see also Mo'ed Katan 17b; Tehillim 7, 72. Against this favorable view of Zedekiah, see 2 ARN 43, 122. The kindness shown by Evil-merodach to Jehoiachin (comp. 2 Kings, end) is declared by the Haggadah to have been due to the intercession of Daniel in behalf of the imprisoned Jewish king. Daniel admonished the Babylonian king to be mindful of the punishment which overtook his father Nebuchadnezzar for the cruel treatment he meted out to captive kings, whom he imprisoned for life. Evil-merodach heeded Daniel's counsel, and released not only Jehoiachin but also all the other kings who had been imprisoned by his father. See Targum Esther 1.1. Comp. also 2 ARN 17, 37. As to Nebuchadnezzar's cruelty, who never released a prisoner, see also WR 18.2; Tan. B. III, 38; Tan. Tazri'a 8. As long as Nebuchadnezzar lived, no mouth smiled, so that at his death the entire world burst forth in jubilation. See Shabbat 149b. Comp. note 96.

XXII

THE RETURN OF THE CAPTIVITY

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST

When God resolved to take revenge upon Babylon for all the sufferings it had inflicted on Israel, He chose Darius and Cyrus as the agents of vengeance. Cyrus, the king of Persia, and his father-in-law Darius, the king of Media, together went up against Belshazzar, the ruler of the Chaldeans. The war lasted a considerable time, and fortune favored first one side, then the other, until finally the Chaldeans won a decisive victory. To celebrate the event, Belshazzar arranged a great banquet, which was served from the vessels taken out of the Temple at Jerusalem by his father. While the king and his guests were feasting, the angel sent by God put the "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin" on the wall, Aramaic words in Hebrew characters,<sup>1</sup> written with red ink. The angel was seen by none but the king. His grandees and the princes of the realm who were present at the orgy perceived nothing. The king himself did not see the form of the angel, only his awesome fingers as they traced the words were visible to him.

The interpretation given to the enigmatical words by Daniel put an end to the merry-making of the feasters. They scattered in dread and fear, leaving none behind except the king and his attendants. In the same night the king was murdered by an old servant, who knew Daniel from the time of Nebuchadnezzar, and doubted not that his sinister prophecy would be fulfilled. With the head of King Belshazzar he betook himself to Darius and Cyrus, and told them how his master had desecrated the sacred vessels, told them of the wonderful writing on the wall, and of the way it had been interpreted by Daniel. The two kings were moved by his recital to vow solemnly that they would permit the Jews to return to Palestine, and would grant them the use of the Temple vessels.

They resumed the war against Babylonia with more energy, and God vouchsafed them victory. They conquered the whole of Belshazzar's realm, and took possession of the city of Babylon, whose inhabitants, young and old, were made to suffer death. The subjugated lands were divided between Cyrus and Darius, the latter receiving Babylon and Media, the former Chaldea, Persia, and Assyria.<sup>2</sup>

But this is not the whole story of the fall of Babylon. The wicked king Belshazzar arranged the banquet at which the holy vessels were desecrated in the fifth year of his reign, because he thought it wholly certain then that all danger was past of the realization of Jeremiah's prophecy, foretelling the return of the Jews to Palestine at the end of seventy years of Babylonian rule over them. Nebuchadnezzar had governed twenty-five years, and Evil-merodach twenty-three, leaving five years in the reign of Belshazzar for the fulfilment of the appointed time.<sup>3</sup> Not enough that the king scoffed at God by using the Temple vessels, he needs must have the pastry for the banquet, which was given on the second day of the Passover festival, made of wheaten flour finer than that used on this day for the 'Omer in the Temple.

Punishment followed hard upon the heels of the atrocity. Cyrus and Darius served as door-keepers of the royal palace on the evening of the banquet. They had received orders from Belshazzar to admit none, though he should say he was the king himself. Belshazzar was forced to leave his apartments for a short time, and he went out unnoticed by the two door-keepers. On his return, when he asked to be admitted, they felled him dead, even while he was asseverating that he was the king.<sup>4</sup>

1. Sanhedrin 22a and Shir 3.4. These sources give different views as to the way the ominous words were written.

2. Josippon 6c–7b; it was borrowed and elaborated by Yerahmeel 67, 207–212. The old rabbinic sources did not know of a war of the Chaldeans against the Medo-Persian empire. Josippon is very likely indirectly dependent upon Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.2. The statement of Koheleth 4.8 that Belshazzar was born on the day upon which Gabina (גבינא) the son of Harsum died is very obscure. That Harsum (חרסום) is identical with Croesus is very unlikely, though Gabina and his father are described as having been exceedingly rich. Comp. Perles, Beiträge, 18, and the literature on חרסום by Krauss, Lehnwörter, s. v. The rabbinic sources consider Nebuchadnezzar as the father of Evil-merodach, and the latter as the father of Belshazzar. See Seder 'Olam 28; BR 44. 15; PK 2, 14a; Shir 3.4; Esther R. 1.8. Compare also the references in footnote 116 on p. 1108. Merodach the father of Nebuchadnezzar (Jerome on Is. 39.1 quotes this as a Jewish tradition; although this view is not explicitly stated in any part of rabbinic literature, it is presupposed in the last three Midrashim just cited; compare also p. 1050, bottom) was a king, but his three descendants were “cosmocrators”. Tan. Ki-Tissa 5; PK, Shir, Esther R., loc. cit. The list of Babylonian kings in Midrash 'Aseret Melakim, 43, is confused, and this is partly due to the corrupt state of the text. Yerahmeel, 67, 6, gives the names of Evil-merodach's three sons as Regosar (ריגוסר), Lebuzar Duk (דוך לבוזר), and Nabar (נבאר), who was Belshazzar. The names are taken from Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11. 2, but badly mutilated. According to this historian the name of Evil-merodach's son was Niglissar, who was the father of Labosordacus, who in turn was the father of Nabonidus = Belshazzar.

3. Megillah 11b, where the error of Belshazzar's calculations is demonstrated. In the text p. 344 line 6 from below, read forty-three instead of twenty-five, and in the following line, four instead of five. Compare pp. 1105 and 1106, footnote 19, and footnote 24 on p. 1073.

4. Shir 3.4. Here it is also stated that Belshazzar did not die of his wounds immediately, but was in death agony for a night (according to some authorities, for a night and a day). On the desecration of the holy vessels by Belshazzar, see Nedarim 62a; 'Abodah Zarah 52b. The queen, at whose advice Daniel was called in to read the mysterious writing on the wall, was Belshazzar's mother, according to Ma'aseh Daniel, 120; but according to Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.2, his grandmother. The “fall of Babel” was the work of the angels Michael and Gabriel; BR 63 (end); Tosefta-Targum Is. 21.5. The peculiar way in which Belshazzar met his death proved to him that the precautions taken by him to protect his life were not only in vain but the direct cause of his death; Shir, loc. cit. Comp. also Tehillim 75, 338, which contains a reminiscence of the wars preceding the death of Belshazzar; see note 2. According to Panim Aherim, 60, Belshazzar was killed by a candelabrum falling on his head; but according to another reading (comp. Buber, ad loc.), the rebels, under the command of Cyrus and Darius, crushed his skull with a candelabrum. This is based on the haggadic interpretation of צפית (Is. 21.5), which is supposed to mean “candelabrum”; comp. Tosefta-Targum, ad loc., and the passages of BR and Shir referred to above. When a successor to Belshazzar had to be elected, the two candidates were Darius and Cyrus, the leaders of the revolt. The former insisted that Cyrus ought to be made king because Daniel, on the authority of Isaiah (comp. Is. 45), used to salute him as the future king while still in the service (אפיקון = officium) of Nebuchadnezzar. Cyrus, however, declined the honor, pointing to the writing on the wall, which, according to the interpretation of Daniel, read: Thy kingdom is . . . given to the Medes and Persians; hence Darius the “Mede” (on his paternal side; his mother was a Persian woman) was to be the immediate successor of Nebuchadnezzar. See Panim Aherim and Shir, loc. cit. On the night when Belshazzar was to be killed all Israel came to Daniel and said to him: "All the sufferings predicted by Jeremiah for Israel were fulfilled; but the one prophecy of good tidings, that at the end of seventy years Babylon would be destroyed, has not been fulfilled as yet." Daniel consoled them, assuring them that it entirely depended upon them whether the "kingdoms" should have dominion over them or not; if they obeyed God, no foreign monster would rule over them; Shir, loc. cit. Comp. also WR 13.5; ARN 34, 100; Tehillim 70, 363. In the text, see also pp. 1112–1113, wheaten is a printer's error for barley.

DANIEL UNDER THE PERSIAN KINGS

Daniel left Belshazzar and fled to Shushtar, where he was kindly received by Cyrus, who promised him to have the Temple vessels taken back to Jerusalem, provided Daniel would pray to God to grant him success in his war with the king of Mosul. God gave Daniel's prayer a favorable hearing, and Cyrus was true to his promise.

Daniel now received the Divine charge to urge Cyrus to rebuild the Temple. To this end he was to introduce Ezra and Zerubbabel to the king. Ezra then went from place to place and called upon the people to return to Palestine. Sad to say, only a tribe and a half obeyed his summons. Indeed, the majority of the people were so wroth against Ezra that they sought to slay him. He escaped the peril to his life only by a Divine miracle.<sup>5</sup>

Daniel, too, was exposed to much suffering at this time. King Cyrus cast him into a den of lions, because he refused to bow down before the idol of the king. For seven days Daniel lay among the wild beasts, and not a hair of his head was touched. When the king at the end of the week found Daniel alive, he could not but acknowledge the sovereign grandeur of God. Cyrus released Daniel, and instead had his calumniators thrown to the lions. In an instant they were rent in pieces.<sup>6</sup>

In general Cyrus fell far short of coming up to the expectations set in him for piety and justice. Though he granted permission to the Jews to rebuild the Temple, they were to use no material but wood, so that it might easily be destroyed if the Jews should take it into their heads to rebel against him. Even in point of morals, the Persian king was not above reproach.<sup>7</sup>

Another time Cyrus pressingly urged Daniel to pay homage to the idol Bel. As proof of the divinity of the idol the king advanced the fact that it ate the dishes set before it, a report spread by the priests of Bel, who entered the Temple of the idol at night, through subterranean passages, themselves ate up the dishes, and then attributed their disappearance to the appetite of the god. But Daniel was too shrewd to be misled by a fabricated story. He had ashes strewn upon the floor of the Temple, and the foot-prints visible the next morning convinced the king of the deceit practiced by the priests.<sup>8</sup>

Pleasant relations did not continue to subsist forever between Cyrus and Darius. A war broke out between them, in which Cyrus lost life and lands. Fearing Darius, Daniel fled to Persia. But an angel of God appeared to him with the message: "Fear not the king, not unto him will I surrender thee." Shortly afterward he received a letter from Darius reading as follows: "Come to me, Daniel! Fear naught, I shall be even kinder to thee than Cyrus was." Accordingly Daniel returned to Shushtar, and was received with great consideration by Darius.

One day the king chanced to remember the sacred garments brought by Nebuchadnezzar out of the Temple at Jerusalem to Babylon. They had vanished, and no trace of them could be discovered. The king suspected Daniel of having had something to do with their disappearance. It bootied little that he protested his innocence, he was cast into prison. God sent an angel who was to blind Darius, telling him at the same time that he was deprived of the light of his eyes because he was keeping the pious Daniel in darkness, and sight would be restored to him only if Daniel interceded for him. The king at once released Daniel, and the two together journeyed to Jerusalem to pray on the holy place for the restoration of the king. An angel appeared to Daniel, and announced to him that his prayer had been heard. The king had but to wash his eyes, and vision would return to them. So it happened. Darius gave thanks to God, and in his gratitude assigned the tithe of his grain to the priests and the Levites. Besides, he testified his appreciation to Daniel by loading him down with gifts, and both returned to Shushtar. The recovery of the king convinced many of his subjects of the omnipotence of God, and they converted to Judaism.<sup>9</sup>

Following the advice of Daniel, Darius<sup>10</sup> appointed a triumvirate to take charge of the administration of his realm, and Daniel was made the chief of the council of three. His high dignity—he was second to none but the king himself—exposed him to envy and hostility on all sides. His enemies plotted his ruin. With cunning they induced the king to sign an order attaching the penalty of death to prayers addressed to any god or any man other than Darius.<sup>11</sup> Though the order did not require Daniel to commit a sin, he preferred to give his life for the honor of the one God rather than omit his devotions to Him. When his jealous enemies surprised him during his prayers, he did not interrupt himself. He was dragged before the king, who refused to give credence to the charge against Daniel. Meanwhile the hour for the afternoon prayer arrived, and in the presence of the king and his princes Daniel began to perform his devotions. This naturally rendered unavailing all efforts made by the king to save his friend from death. Daniel was cast into a pit full of lions. The entrance to the pit was closed up with a rock, which had all of its own accord rolled from Palestine to protect him against any harm contemplated by his enemies.<sup>12</sup> The ferocious beasts welcomed the pious Daniel like dogs fawning upon their master on his return home, licking his hands and wagging their tails.

While this was passing in Babylon, an angel appeared to the prophet Habakkuk in Judea. He ordered the prophet to bring Daniel the food he was about to carry to his laborers in the field. Astonished, Habakkuk asked the angel how he could carry it to so great a distance, whereupon he was seized by his hair, and in a moment set down before Daniel. They dined together, and then the angel transported Habakkuk back to his place in Palestine. Early in the morning Darius<sup>13</sup> went to the pit of the lions to discover the fate of Daniel. The king called his name, but he received no answer, because Daniel was reciting the Shema' at that moment,<sup>14</sup> after having spent the night in giving praise and adoration to God.<sup>15</sup> Seeing that he was still alive, the king summoned the enemies of Daniel to the pit. It was their opinion that the lions had not been hungry, and therefore Daniel was still unhurt. The king commanded them to put the beasts to the test with their own persons. The result was that the hundred and twenty-two enemies of Daniel, together with their wives and children numbering two hundred and forty-four persons, were torn in shreds by fourteen hundred and sixty-four lions.<sup>16</sup>

The miraculous escape of Daniel brought him more distinguished consideration and greater honors than before. The king published the wonders done by God in all parts of his land, and called upon the people to betake themselves to Jerusalem and help in the erection of the Temple.

Daniel entreated the king to relieve him of the duties of his position, for the performance of which he no longer felt himself fit, on account of his advanced age. The king consented on condition that Daniel designate a successor worthy of him. His choice fell upon Zerubbabel. Loaded with rich presents and amid public demonstrations designed to honor him, Daniel retired from public life. He settled in the city of Shushan, where he abode until his end.<sup>17</sup> Though he was no prophet, God vouchsafed to him a knowledge of the “end of time” not granted his friends, the prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi,<sup>18</sup> but even he, in the fulness of his years, lost all memory of the revelation with which he had been favored.<sup>19</sup>

---

5. Ma'aseh Daniel 120–121; the king of Mosul (=Babylon) is, of course, none other than Belshazzar, against whom Cyrus was engaged in war; comp. notes 2 and 4. The Yemenite Jews tell the following story: Their forefathers had settled in that country forty-two years prior to the destruction of the first Temple. When Ezra, on the return of the exiles from Babylon, called upon them to do likewise and to return to the Holy Land, they refused because they knew that the second Temple would also be destroyed and that Israel would once again be sent into captivity. Ezra cursed them for their refusal, that they should for ever live in poverty. That is why the Yemenite Jews are poor till this day. They, on their part, cursed Ezra that he should not find his last rest in the Holy Land; this also was fulfilled. See R. Solomon Adeni, in the introduction to his commentary on the Mishnah (beginning); Safir Eben Sappir, I, 99a. It is therefore very strange that Mohammed accused the Jews of north Arabia, the neighbors of the Yemenite Jews, of believing that Ezra was the “son of God”; comp. Koran 9.30. Did he confuse the “messenger of God” with the “son of God”? An old Jewish tradition identifies the prophet Malachi (“My messenger” or “messenger of God”) with Ezra; comp. Megillah 15a; Targum and Jerome on Mal. 1.1. Megillah, loc. cit., however, also gives the different view that Malachi was identical with Mordecai, who as the “next one to the king” (Comp. Esther, end) was called Malachi, “the kingly one”. Comp. Seder 'Olam 20, where Mordecai and Malachi are counted as two prophets. See also notes 33, 38 and 50.

6. Bereshit Rabbete of R. Moses ha-Darshan, quoted from a MS. by Epstein, Magazin, XV, 78–79, and by Raymond Martinus, Pugio Fidei, 956. There can, of course, be no doubt that this legend is based upon the apocryphal writing Bel and the Dragon (but it is not directly taken from it), where the following story is told: The mob was so infuriated against Daniel for having exposed the tricks played by the priests of Bel and for having destroyed the dragon (compare footnote 112 on p. 1107) that they threatened to destroy the king (Theodotion alone gives his name as Cyrus) if he would not deliver Daniel unto them. The king was compelled to comply with their demand, and cast him into the lions' den, from which, however, he was saved in a miraculous way. In Septuagint this apocryphal work is described as having been taken from the prophecy of Habakkuk the son of Jesus (= Joshua) of the tribe of Levi. This prophet is said to have been sent by God to Daniel while he was in the lions' den; comp. note 13. As to the rabbinical view concerning the father and descent of Habakkuk see Index, s. v. In contrast to the Rabbis, who are unanimous on the point of Daniel's royal descent (compare footnote 76 on p. 1095), this apocryphal work declares him to have been a priest, and his father's name is given as Abal. Comp. note 56 (middle).

7. Rosh ha-Shanah 3b–4a (as to the statement that the name of the king was Darius, whereas Cyrus was an attribute describing him as “the worthy one”, כרש being identical with כָּשָׁר, and that besides these names, he was, like all other Persian kings, also called Artaxerxes, ארתחששתא, see Seder 'Olam 30, and Ratner, note 11); Megillah 12a; which reads: God said to the Messiah: “I must complain against Cyrus (a haggadic interpretation of Is. 45.1). I wanted him to rebuild the Temple and to take the exiles back to the Holy Land; but all he did was to proclaim through his kingdom: Whatsoever there is among you of all His people let him go up” (2 Chron. end). Cyrus disappointed still more the hopes set upon him. When he noticed that the Babylonian cities became desolate because the Jews emigrated from there to the Holy Land, he forbade them to leave the country. See Shir 5.5 and 6.8–10; Koheleth 10.12; Esther R., introduction, 8; Midrash 'Aseret Melakim 44. The degeneration of Cyrus is quite amazing. At the destruction of the Temple he wept bitterly, and as a reward for his tears the Medes (= Persians) received the dominion over the world; he became not only a “cosmocrator”, but he was also found worthy to sit on the throne of Solomon (with the exception of Nebuchadnezzar, he was the only Gentile ruler who was thus distinguished). See ER 20, 114; Esther R. 1.2, 13; PRE 11; Midrash 'Aseret Melakim 44; 1 and 2 Targum Esther 1.2 (end); Aggadat Esther 8. Comp. Index, s. v. “Cosmocrators” and “Solomon, Throne of”. On the proclamation of Cyrus to the Jews to return to the Holy Land and to rebuild the Temple, see 3 Ezra 2.1–14. As to the views concerning Cyrus expressed by the Rabbis, it should be noticed that the Palestinian authorities are rather favorable to him, whereas the Babylonians censure him severely. The Roman yoke which weighed heavily upon the Palestinian Jews made them look at the Persians as the friends of the Jews. Their favorable opinion of Cyrus expresses their sympathy for the Persians. The Babylonian Jews, on the other hand, suffered terribly at the hands of the Mazdic priests who were very powerful in the Sassanide empire, and they considered the Romans as "the lesser evil", and the "destroyers of the Temple" were preferred to the "builders of the Temple" (= the Persians under Cyrus), so that Cyrus and the Persians came in for a great deal of blame. See Berakot 8b and 46b; Yoma 10a; Megillah 11a; Ketubot 48a; Gittin 17a (top); Kiddushin 49b and 72a; Baba Kamma 117a; Baba Mezi'a 28b; Sanhedrin 98b (top); BR 74.2; PK 4, 33b–34a and 40a, and parallel passages cited by Buber on the last passage. The dominion of the Persians over Israel was the consequence of the victory of Dobiel (comp. Dan. 7.5), the guardian angel of the former, over Gabriel, who was punished for having delayed the execution of the punishment decreed by God against Israel (compare footnote 26 on p. 1074). Gabriel was deposed from the high office, which was given over to Dobiel for twenty one days. During this time Dobiel subjected to the Persians twenty-one kingdoms, besides the Island of Pearls (on the Persian Gulf). He also obtained for the Persians the grant to levy taxes upon the Jews. However, not satisfied with this, he demanded for the Persians the privilege to levy taxes also upon the Jewish scholars, and he received a written promise to that effect. At the moment when the heavenly seal was to be put on this writ granted to Dobiel, a voice was heard exclaiming: "O Master of the world, if all the sages of the world were in one scale of the balance and Daniel in the other, would he not outweigh them all?" It was the voice of Gabriel exclaiming these words from "behind the curtain" (on the curtain, see Index, s. v.), as he had been expelled from the presence of the Lord and was not permitted to enter the place occupied by the "heavenly family" within the curtain. Hearing Gabriel's words, God spoke: "Who is it that pleads for My children?" On being informed that it was Gabriel, He permitted him to enter within the curtain. As soon as he was inside, Gabriel noticed the writ in the hands of Dobiel, and attempted to snatch it away from him. Whereupon the latter swallowed it and thus caused it to be blurred. This is the reason why the levy of taxes upon the scholars in the Persian empire is not carried out strictly. However, when the guardian angel of Javan (Greece) received the dominion over Israel, all the pleadings of Gabriel to mitigate the hardships of the Greek yoke over the Jews were of no avail. See Yoma 79a (on the correct text see Rabbinovicz).

8. The apocryphal writing Bel and the Dragon in the Greek Additions to Daniel. See notes 6, 13 and 18, as well as footnote 112 on p. 1107. A Hebrew translation of this Greek work is found in Yerahmeel 72, 220–221, and Josippon 3, 4b–5a. In these sources it is the king Darius who urged Daniel to pay homage to Bel.

9. Ma'aseh Daniel 121–122. According to Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.4, Darius sent for Daniel to come to him to Media, and he conferred great honors upon him.

10. The old sources (Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.4; Seder 'Olam 28–29; Shir 3.3), in agreement with the statement of the Bible and the historical facts, make Darius succeed Cyrus (Cambyses, the son and direct successor of Cyrus, is not mentioned in rabbinic sources), whereas the late compilation Ma'aseh Daniel, 120–121, reverses the order. According to Josippon 3, 3a Darius and Cyrus divided among themselves the empire of Belshazzar, the former taking the city of Babel and its surroundings, and the latter the rest.

11. Josippon 3, 7b–7d, where the edict of Darius appointing Daniel as viceroy is given in full. In this edict the nations are called upon not only to acknowledge Daniel as their master, but also to pay homage to his God.

12. Tehillim 64, 311, and 24, 208 (here it is stated that an angel assumed the form of a rock to close the den and thus protect Daniel against his enemies); Shir 1.1; PR 6, 25a–25b; BaR 14.3. According to Josippon 3, 2b, a little girl playing in front of Daniel's house betrayed him to his enemies. According to the Halakah, one must sacrifice one's life in God's honor if one is ordered to commit a sinful act, but not for the sake of performing a divine commandment. Hence Daniel did more than was required by the law when he risked his life for the sake of prayer. Comp. note 14. BaR 13.4 remarks: Had Daniel been thrown into the fire by Darius, he would have perished, because divine homage was paid to him by Nebuchadnezzar, and the law reads: The images of their gods shall ye burn with fire. Comp. Sanhedrin 93a, Josippon 3, 3b and refer also to pp. 1106–1108.

13. Josippon 3, 8b–8c, which is an adaptation of the story given in the apocryphal writing Bel and the Dragon (compare footnote 112 on p. 1107; notes 6 and 8) in conformity with the biblical narrative about Daniel in the lions' den. Daniel's life was saved by the prayers of his three companions Hananel, Mishael, and Azariah; Tehillim 55, 292. A Christian adaptation of this story is found in ps.-Matthew 35. On the whole, legends about saints being spared by ferocious beasts are very common in Christian literature, but extremely rare with the Jews. Sanhedrin 39a; Ahimaaz, 112, and the legend concerning R. Samuel ben Kalonymos in Ma'aseh-buch, No. 161. On the view that Darius rose in the early morning, see Leket Midrashim, 23a.

14. Tehillim 64, 311. According to the Halakah, Daniel (and Jacob, see vol. II, loc. cit.) was permitted to interrupt this recitation to greet the king (comp. Berakot

2.2), but he did not avail himself of the leniency of the law; comp. note 12.

15. Josippon 3, 8c; comp. Bel and the Dragon in the version of Theodotus, 38.

16. Tehillim 64, 312, which reads: There were four lions for each person. But Josippon 3, 8c, knows only of ten lions, and in Bel and the Dragon the number is seven. The explanation given by the enemies of Daniel for his not having been devoured by the beasts is also found in Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.6; comp. Sanhedrin 39a.

17. Josippon 3, 9b–10a (the edict concerning the Temple is partly based on 3 Ezra 15, seq.); Yerahmeel 74, 223–244, where, strangely enough, Shushan is said to have been the birthplace of Daniel. Compare also footnote 76 on p. 1095.

18. Megillah 3a. As to the question whether Daniel and his three companions were prophets or not, see references given in footnotes 76 and 108 on pp. 1095 and 1106 respectively. Comp. also Sanhedrin 93a, where, according to one reading (see Rabbinovicz, note 50), the Talmud maintains that the three companions of Daniel were not prophets. It is true that this statement is put into the mouths of the false prophets Ahab and Zedekiah. Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.7, not only speaks eloquently of the prophet Daniel, but states also that he wrote “several books ... and one is still read by us till this time.” The rabbinic literature knows only of one book by Daniel, if we except the very late work Ma’aseh Daniel. Josephus seems to have known, besides the biblical Book of Daniel, several others ascribed to him. Or did he consider the Greek additions to the book of Daniel as separate works by Daniel? On the Apocalypse of Daniel, known still to some writers of the Middle Ages, refer also to footnote 104 on p. 1103. Based on an old Apocalypse of Daniel is perhaps the statement of Johannes Malala, Chronographia 97.257, that Cyrus (comp. note 6) threw Daniel into the lions’ den because he refused to reveal to him whether he would be victorious in the war against Croesus or not. After Daniel’s marvellous escape from death, Cyrus realized that he had done an injustice to the man of God, and asked his forgiveness. Daniel not only forgave him, but also announced to him that he would gain a complete victory over Croesus. Daniel also showed him the prophecies in the book of Isaiah relating to him. The last statement is also found in Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 1.2, and Shir. 3.4. Comp. also James, Last Apocrypha 20.

19. BR 98.2; Tehillim 31, 239–240. Comp. also Megillah 12a. Daniel erred in the calculation of the end of time. The curse pronounced against those who “reckoned the end of time” (Sanhedrin 97b) is to be explained accordingly. If Daniel himself failed in fixing the time accurately, it would be futile for any other mortal to attempt this task. Notwithstanding this anathema, there are many treatises by medieval authors dealing with the “end of time” revealed to Daniel. If we disregard the pseudo-epigraphical writers, Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.7 (towards the end), is one of the earliest interpreters of the vision of Daniel, but after giving his view thereof (in his opinion, Daniel also wrote concerning the Roman government), he adds: “But if anyone is inclined to another opinion about them, let him enjoy his different sentiments without any blame from me.” The “other opinion” very likely saw in Daniel’s visions a prophecy bearing upon the contemporary history of the prophet.

THE GRAVE OF DANIEL

Daniel was buried in Shushan, on account of which a sore quarrel was enkindled among the inhabitants of the city. Shushan is divided in two parts by a river. The side containing the grave of Daniel was occupied by the wealthy inhabitants, and the poor citizens lived on the other side of the river. The latter maintained that they, too, would be rich if the grave of Daniel were in their quarter. The frequent disputes and conflicts were finally adjusted by a compromise; one year the bier of Daniel reposed on one side of the river, the next year on the other. When the Persian king Sanjar came to Shushan, he put a stop to the practice of dragging the bier hither and thither. He resorted to another device for guarding the peace of the city. He had the bier suspended from chains precisely in the middle of the bridge spanning the river. In the same spot he erected a house of prayer for all confessions, and out of respect to Daniel he prohibited fishing in the river for a distance of a mile on either side of the memorial building.<sup>20</sup> The sacredness of the spot appeared when the godless tried to pass by. They were drowned, while the pious remained unscathed. Furthermore, the fish that swam near it had heads glittering like gold.<sup>21</sup>

Beside the house of Daniel lay a stone, under which he had concealed the holy Temple vessels. Once an attempt was made to roll the stone from its place, but whoever ventured to touch it, fell dead. The same fate overtook all who later tried to make excavations near the spot; a storm broke out and mowed them down.<sup>22</sup>

---

20. R. Benjamin of Tudela 74–76; R. Pethahiah 7b. Chronicon Paschale 92.396, also mentions the magnificent mausoleum of Daniel, who is said to have been buried among the kings (of Babylon). All these legends very likely have their origin in the statement of Josephus, Antiqui., X, 11.7, that when “Daniel became famous, on account of the opinion men had that he was beloved of God, he built a tower at Ecbatana in Media.” Josephus then adds that it was a most elegant building and wonderfully made, and that it is still remaining and preserved to this day, and to such as see it, it appears to have been lately built, and to have been no older than the very day when any one looks upon it; it is so fresh, flourishing, and beautiful, and in no way grown old in so long a time . . . Now they bury the kings of Media, of Persia, and Parthia in this tower to this day; and he who was entrusted with the care of it was a Jewish priest, which thing is also observed to this day. According to old rabbinic sources, Daniel left Babylon for the Holy Land, availing himself of the permission granted by Cyrus to the exiles, and became the governor of his native country; Shir 5.5 and Sanhedrin 93b. Josippon 3, 5b agrees in the main with Josephus, and makes Daniel settle in Shushan. There can be no doubt that the old rabbinic sources quoted were of the opinion that Daniel died in the Holy Land, where he spent the remainder of his life. Comp. notes 17 and 23.

21. R. Pethahiah 9a.

22. Gelilot Erez Israel, 101c.

ZERUBBABEL

The successor to Daniel in the service of the king, Zerubbabel, enjoyed equally as much royal consideration and affection. He occupied a higher position than all the other servants and officials, and he and two others constituted the body-guard of the king.<sup>23</sup> Once when the king lay wrapped in deep slumber, his guards resolved to write down what each of them considered the mightiest thing in the world, and he who wrote the sagest saying should be given rich presents and rewards by the king. What they wrote they laid under the pillow on which the head of the king rested, that he might not delay to make a decision after he awoke. The first one wrote: “Wine is the mightiest thing there is”; the second wrote: “The king is the mightiest on earth”, and the third, Zerubbabel, wrote: “Women are the mightiest in the world, but truth prevails over all else.” When the king awoke, and had perused the document, he summoned the grandees of his realm and the three youths as well. Each of the three was called upon to justify his saying. In eloquent words the first described the potency of wine. When it takes possession of the senses of a man, he forgets grief and sorrow. Still more beautiful and convincing were the words of the second speaker, when his turn came to establish the truth of his saying, that the king was the mightiest on earth. Finally Zerubbabel depicted in glowing words the power of woman, who rules even over kings. “But”, he continued, “truth is supreme over all; the whole earth asks for truth, the heavens sing the praises of truth, all creation quakes and trembles before truth, naught of wrong can be found in truth. Unto truth belongeth the might, the dominion, the power, and the glory of all times. Blessed be the God of truth.” When Zerubbabel ceased from speaking, the assembly broke out into the words: “Great is truth, it is mightier than all else!” The king was so charmed with the wisdom of Zerubbabel that he said to him: “Ask for aught thou wishest, it shall be granted thee.” Zerubbabel required nothing for himself, he only sought permission of the king to restore Jerusalem, rebuild the sanctuary, and return the holy Temple vessels to the place whence they had been carried off. Not only did Darius grant what Zerubbabel wished for, not only did he give him letters of safe-conduct, but he also conferred numerous privileges upon the Jews who accompanied Zerubbabel to Palestine, and he sent abundant presents to the Temple and its officers.<sup>24</sup>

As unto his predecessor Daniel, so unto Zerubbabel, God vouchsafed a knowledge of the secrets of the future. Especially the archangel Metatron dealt kindly with him. Besides revealing to him the time at which the Messiah would appear, he brought about an interview between the Messiah and Zerubbabel.<sup>25</sup>

In reality, Zerubbabel was none other than Nehemiah, who was given this second name because he was born in Babylon.<sup>26</sup> Richly endowed as Zerubbabel-Nehemiah was with admirable qualities, he yet did not lack faults. He was excessively self-complacent, and he did not hesitate to fasten a stigma publicly upon his predecessors in the office of governor in the land of Judah, among whom was so excellent a man as Daniel. To punish him for these transgressions, the Book of Ezra does not bear the name of its real author Nehemiah.<sup>27</sup>

When Darius felt his end approach,<sup>28</sup> he appointed his son-in-law Cyrus,<sup>29</sup> who had hitherto reigned only over Persia, to be the ruler over his kingdom as well. His wish was honored by the princes of Media and Persia. After Darius had departed this life, Cyrus was proclaimed king.

In the very first year of his reign, Cyrus summoned the most distinguished of the Jews to appear before him, and he gave them permission to return to Palestine and rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem. More than this, he pledged himself to contribute to the Temple service in proportion to his means, and pay honor to the God who had invested him with strength to subdue the Chaldeans. These actions of Cyrus partly flowed from his own pious inclinations, and partly were due to his desire to accomplish the dying behests of Darius, who had admonished him to give the Jews the opportunity of rebuilding the Temple.

When the first sacrifice was to be brought by the company of Jews who returned to Jerusalem under the leadership of Ezra, and set about restoring the Temple, they missed the celestial fire which had dropped from heaven on the altar in the time of Moses, and had not been extinguished so long as the Temple stood. They turned in supplication to God to be instructed by Him. The celestial fire had been hidden by Jeremiah at the time of the destruction of the Holy City, and the law did not permit them to bring "strange fire" upon the altar of God. An old man suddenly remembered the spot in which Jeremiah had buried the holy fire, and he led the elders thither. They rolled away the stone covering the spot, and from under it appeared a spring flowing not with water, but with a sort of oil. Ezra ordered this fluid to be sprinkled upon the altar, and forthwith an all-consuming flame shot up. The priests themselves scattered in fright. But after the Temple and its vessels were purified by the flame, it confined itself to the altar never more to leave it, for the priests guarded it so that it might not be extinguished.<sup>30</sup>

Among the band of returned exiles were the prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi. Each one of them had a place of the greatest importance to fill in the rebuilding of the Temple. By the first the people were shown the plan of the altar, which was larger than the one that had stood in Solomon's Temple. The second informed them of the exact location of the altar, and the third taught them that sacrifices might be brought on the holy place even before the completion of the Temple. On the authority of one of the prophets, the Jews, on their return from Babylonia, gave up their original Hebrew characters, and re-wrote the Torah in the "Assyrian" characters still in use at this day.<sup>31</sup>

While the Temple work was in progress, the builders found the skull of Araunah, the owner of the Temple site in the time of David. The priests, unlearned as they were, could not decide to what extent the corpse lying there had defiled the holy place. It was for this that Haggai poured out his reproaches upon them.<sup>32</sup>

23. Josippon 3, 5b. In 3 Ezra, which is the source of Josippon (comp. the following note), Zerubbabel is one of the three body-guards of the king and not a high official. Josephus maintains that Zerubbabel was appointed head of the Jews by Cyrus, and this is very likely based on the identification of Sheshbazzar, the “prince of the Jews” under Cyrus, with Zerubbabel (Ezra 1.8); comp. Ibn Ezra, ad loc. PR 6, 23b, and Sanhedrin 93b (here it is supposed that Daniel preceded Nehemiah in the office of governor, hence his identity with Zerubbabel is assumed) on the other hand, identify Sheshbazzar with Daniel; compare also to footnote 76 on p. 1095. When the Samaritans, Josephus continues, attempted to prevent the building of the Temple, Zerubbabel was sent by the Jews to Media to plead their cause before king Darius, the son of Hystaspes; Antiqui., XI, 4.9. Comp. note 26.

24. 3 Ezra 1–57; Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 3.3–9 (with slight variants); Josippon 3, 10a–11a. Comp. also Baba Batra 10a, which has the statement concerning the ten “mighty things existing in the world”, wine being one of them.

25. Zerubbabel. As to the part to be played by Zerubbabel in the Messianic times, see Alphabet R. Akiba, 27–28, where it is said that he will recite the Kaddish after the lecture to be delivered by God on the new Torah which He is to reveal through the Messiah. All men, including the wicked in hell and the Gentiles, hearing the Kaddish, will respond: Amen. This will cause God to extend His compassion to all His creatures, even to the sinners, and He will send Michael and Gabriel to open the gates of hell that its dwellers should be set free. Together with Elijah (compare also with pp. 1019–1021) Zerubbabel, in the time to come, will explain all the obscure passages of the Torah, and reveal all its mysteries; quotation from Midrash in Halakot Gedolot (Hildesheimer’s edition, 223, top). See also Pirke Mashiah, 75, and BHM VI, 63, as well as Kalir in his lamentation הָרֵם הָרֵם (at the end of Lamentations, according to Roman rite), where Zerubbabel is described as the “Messianic herald”, at whose call Michael and Gabriel will undertake the war of annihilation against the pagan world. There is some connection between this legend and the one about Zerubbabel’s “superhuman” voice, compare also pp. 56–58. Not quite clear is the part attributed to Zerubbabel in Ma’aseh Daniel, 128, where it is stated that the Messiah will ascend the Mount of Olives with Elijah and Zerubbabel, whereupon Elijah, at the bidding of the Messiah, will blow the trumpet (compare also with p. 1021). There can be no doubt that the text is incomplete; there must have been something said about the part to be played by Zerubbabel on this occasion. It is rather strange that the Rabbis never thought of declaring Zerubbabel to be the promised Messiah. The only one of biblical times who was considered by them as the possible candidate for the Messianic office is Daniel. See Sanhedrin 98b (towards the end). Is this view connected with the supposed identity of Daniel with Zerubbabel? Comp. note 23.

26. Sanhedrin 38a (top). Compare also to footnote 76 on p. 1095 and notes 23, 25. Nehemiah was also called הַתְּרַשָּׁתָא (Neh. 8.9), because the authorities of that time “absolved” him (= הָתֵר) from observing the injunction (decreed by Daniel and his three companions; ‘Abodah Zarah 36b) against using the wine touched by a heathen, and permitted him to “drink” (= שָׁתָא) wine with the king, whose cup-bearer he was. See Yerushalmi Kid-dushin 4, 65b; Midrash ‘Aseret Melakim 44. Nehemiah and his “company” are the authors of the strict law that no vessel or utensil is to be handled on the Sabbath. The people at that time were very lax in the observance of the Sabbath, and hence the strictness introduced by Nehemiah. When the observance of the Sabbath became well established, the rigidity of Nehemiah’s law was relaxed. See Shabbat 123b, and comp. Josephus, Bell., II, 8.9.

27. Sanhedrin 93b. The books of Ezra and Nehemiah are spoken of by the Rabbis as the Book of Ezra. Comp., e. g., Baba Batra 15a. In this passage it is stated that Ezra “wrote” (composed or compiled? compare footnote 89 on p. 1011) also the books of Chronicles up to 2 Chron. 21.1, and the rest of Nehemiah. Comp. the explanation of the talmudic passage in the geonic responsum published by Ginzberg, Geonica, II, 16–17. The unpopularity of Nehemiah shows that there is no rule without an exception. There is a maxim which says: He who is disliked by his fellow-men is also disliked by heaven. Nehemiah and David are exceptions to this rule: both were loved by God, but hated by many of their fellow-men. See Sanhedrin 103b, and comp. Blau, Masoretische Untersuchungen, 56, and Ginzberg, Ha-Zofeh, III, 121–122.

28. Darius was born on the day when Nebuchadnezzar, after his victory over Jehoiachin, entered the Temple; he reigned for one year only, and was succeeded by Cyrus who reigned three, or, according to one reading, four years. See Seder ‘Olam 28 and 29; Megillah 11b (bottom). Comp. notes 10 and 30.

29. The legends about the youth of Cyrus in the classical writers is given by Abravanel in his commentary on Is. 45, whence it was borrowed by many later rabbinical authors.

30. Josippon 3, 11d–12a. Rashi on Dan. 6.29 quotes from Josippon the statement that Darius reigned only one year, when he fell in battle and was succeeded by his son-in-law Cyrus. Our text of Josippon (comp. loc. cit.) has an entirely different reading. It is worth noticing that, according to Josippon, the main factor in the return of the exiles was Darius, who called upon Cyrus to participate in this undertaking, and while the return of the exiles under Ezra, Nehemiah, Mordecai, Joshua, and Zerubbabel took place under Cyrus, the credit for it was due to Darius. Comp. also Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 3.1, who remarks concerning Darius: Now, while he was still a private man, he had made a vow to God that if he came to be king, he would send all the vessels of God that were in Babylon to the Temple at Jerusalem. This vow he faithfully fulfilled as king after he was reminded of it by his great favorite Zerubbabel who had come to him from Jerusalem in behalf of the Jews. Comp. notes 7 and 10. The legend about the celestial fire, as given in Josippon, is, of course, closely related to that found in 2 Macc. 1.19–2.12, but is not directly based on it. Notice especially that 2 Macc. ascribes an important part to Nehemiah in discovering the fire, whereas Josippon ignores him entirely. Comp. note 36; footnote 60, found on p. 1091; pp. 659–660.

31. Zebahim 62a. The prophet knew the exact site of the altar, because he saw the angel Michael sacrifice there. The word “there” very likely refers to the place in heaven exactly corresponding to the terrestrial altar; comp. Mekilta Shirah 10, 43b, and Index, s. v. “Sanctuary, Heavenly”. A number of Halakot are referred to the authority of these prophets, especially to that of Haggai, and as late as the second century C. E., the “seat” of Haggai (in Jerusalem) was shown; comp. Tosefta Kelim, Baba Batra 2.3; Rosh ha-Shanah 19b; Megillah 3a (Jonathan ben Uziel composed his Targum of the Prophets under the guidance of Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi); Yebamot 16a; Yerushalmi 1, 3a; Kiddushin 43a; Nazir 53a; Hullin 137a; Bekorot 58a. Comp. the very interesting remarks on this point by R. Sherira Gaon in Teshubot Geone Mizrah u-Ma'arib No., 140. See also Bacher, Monatsschrift 52, 708–709. The hypothesis (see Frankel, Dark. Ham. 40) that חגי הנביא in many places of the Talmud is an erroneous reading for חגי הנ' (i. e. Onia; compare also to footnote 58 found on p. 1091), is not tenable. On the change of the Hebrew Alphabet, see note 44.

32. Yerushalmi Sotah 5, 20b; Pesahim 9, 36c (here it is said that the skull of Araunah was found in the time of Hezekiah, who in consequence thereof ordered the purification of the Temple); Yerushalmi Nedarim 6, 39d–40a; Sanhedrin 1, 18d. Comp. also Aggadat Shir 3, 33. On the Halakot involved in the controversy between the priests, see also Pesahim 17a. This passage quotes a view that the priests gave a correct answer to the question of law put to them. In view of the widespread legend that Adam was buried in Jerusalem in the place upon which the altar was subsequently erected, one is inclined to explain ארנן היבוסי in the Yerushalmi passages as an erroneous reading of the abbreviation (א"ר = ארונה היבוסי), which in turn was a scribal error for אה"ר = אדם הראשון. Compare to footnote 137 on p. 97. The proselytes known as the “house of Nebalata” (i. e., from Nebalat; comp. Neh. 11.34), who were quite prominent at the end of the second Jewish commonwealth, are said to have been descendants of Araunah; comp. Tosefta Peah 4.11; Yerushalmi 8, 21a; Sifre D., 110. On burial-places in Jerusalem, see Tosefta Nega'im 6.2; Yerushalmi Nazir 9, 57d; Semahot 14; Baba Kamma 82b. According to these sources, the corpses, by a later ordinance, were removed from all the burial places in Jerusalem, only the graves of the kings and that of the prophetess Huldah were left there.

EZRA

The complete resettlement of Palestine took place under the direction of Ezra, or, as the Scriptures sometimes call him, Malachi.<sup>33</sup> He had not been present at the earlier attempts<sup>34</sup> to restore the sanctuary, because he could not leave his old teacher Baruch, who was too advanced in years to venture upon the difficult journey to the Holy Land.<sup>35</sup>

In spite of Ezra's persuasive efforts, it was but a comparatively small portion of the people that joined the procession winding its way westward to Palestine. For this reason the prophetic spirit did not show itself during the existence of the Second Temple. Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi were the last representatives of prophecy.<sup>36</sup> Nothing was more surprising than the apathy of the Levites. They manifested no desire to return to Palestine. Their punishment was the loss of the tithes, which were later given to the priests, though the Levites had the first claim upon them.<sup>37</sup>

In restoring the Jewish state in Palestine, Ezra cherished two hopes, to preserve the purity of the Jewish race, and to spread the study of the Torah until it should become the common property of the people at large. To help on his first purpose, he inveighed against marriages between the Jews and the nations round about.<sup>38</sup> He himself had carefully worked out his own pedigree before he consented to leave Babylonia,<sup>39</sup> and in order to perpetuate the purity of the families and groups remaining in the East, he took all the "unfit"<sup>40</sup> with him to Palestine.

In the realization of his second hope, the spread of the Torah, Ezra was so zealous and efficient that it was justly said of him: "If Moses had not anticipated him, Ezra would have received the Torah."<sup>41</sup> In a sense he was, indeed, a second Moses. The Torah had fallen into neglect and oblivion in his day, and he restored and re-established it in the minds of his people.<sup>42</sup> It is due to him chiefly that it was divided up into portions, to be read annually, Sabbath after Sabbath, in the synagogues,<sup>43</sup> and he it was, likewise, who originated the idea of re-writing the Pentateuch in "Assyrian" characters.<sup>44</sup> To further his purpose still more, he ordered additional schools for children to be established everywhere, though the old ones sufficed to satisfy the demand. He thought the rivalry between the old and the new institutions would redound to the benefit of the pupils.<sup>45</sup>

Ezra is the originator of institutions known as "the ten regulations of Ezra". They are the following: 1. Readings from the Torah on Sabbath afternoons. 2. Readings from the Torah on Mondays and Thursdays. 3. Sessions of the court on Mondays and Thursdays. 4. To do laundry work on Thursdays, not Fridays. 5. To eat garlic on Friday on account of its salutary action.<sup>46</sup> 6. To bake bread early in the morning that it may be ready for the poor whenever they ask for some. 7. Women are to cover the lower parts of their bodies with a garment called Sinar.<sup>47</sup> 8. Before taking a ritual bath, the hair is to be combed. 9. The ritual bath prescribed for the unclean is to cover the case of one who desires to offer prayer or study the law.<sup>48</sup> 10. Permission to peddlers to sell cosmetics to women in the towns.<sup>49</sup>

Ezra was not only a great teacher of his people and their wise leader, he was also their advocate with the celestials, to whom his relation was of a peculiarly intimate character. Once he addressed a prayer to God, in which he complained of the misfortune of Israel and the prosperity of the heathen nations. Thereupon the angel Uriel appeared to him, and instructed him how that the evil has its appointed time in which to run its course, as the dead have their appointed time to sojourn in the nether world. Ezra could not rest satisfied with this explanation, and in response to his further question, seven prophetic visions were vouchsafed him, and interpreted by the angel for him. They typified the whole course of history up to his day, and disclosed the future to his eyes. In the seventh vision he heard a voice from a thorn-bush, like Moses aforesaid, and it admonished him to guard in his heart the secrets revealed to him. The same voice had given Moses a similar injunction: "These words shalt thou publish, those shalt thou keep secret." Then his early translation from earth was announced to him. He besought God to let the holy spirit descend upon him before he died, so that he might record all that had happened since the creation of the world as it was set down in the Torah, and guide men upon the path that leads to God.

Hereupon God bade him take the five experienced scribes, Sarga, Dabria, Seleucia, Ethan, and Azriel, with him into retirement, and dictate to them for forty days. After one day spent with these writers in isolation, remote from the city and from men, a voice admonished him: "Ezra, open thy mouth, and drink whereof I give thee to drink." He opened his mouth, and a chalice was handed to him filled to the brim with a liquid that flowed like water, but in color resembled fire. His mouth opened to drink, and for forty days it was not closed. During all that time, the five scribes put down, “in signs they did not understand,”—they were the newly adopted Hebrew characters,—all that Ezra dictated to them, and it made ninety-four books. At the end of the forty days’ period, God spoke to Ezra thus: “The twenty-four books of the Holy Scriptures thou shalt publish, for the worthy and the unworthy alike to read; but the last seventy books thou shalt withhold from the populace, for the perusal of the wise of thy people.” On account of his literary activity, he is called “the Scribe of the science of the Supreme Being unto all eternity.”<sup>50</sup>

Having finished his task, Ezra was removed from this mundane world, and he entered the life everlasting. But his death did not occur in the Holy Land. It overtook him at Khuzistan, in Persia, on his journey to King Artachshashta.<sup>51</sup>

At Raccia, in Mesopotamia, there stood, as late as the twelfth century, the synagogue founded by Ezra when he was journeying from Babylon to Palestine.<sup>52</sup>

At his grave, over which columns of fire are often seen to hover at night,<sup>53</sup> a miracle once happened. A shepherd fell asleep by the side of it. Ezra appeared to him and bade him tell the Jews that they were to transport his bier to another spot. If the master of the new place refused assent, he was to be warned to yield permission, else all the inhabitants of his place would perish. At first the master refused to allow the necessary excavations to be made. Only after a large number of the non-Jewish inhabitants of the place had been stricken down suddenly, he consented to have the corpse transported thither. As soon as the grave was opened, the plague ceased.

Shortly before the death of Ezra, the city of Babylon was totally destroyed by the Persians. There remained but a portion of the wall which was impregnable by human strength.<sup>54</sup> All the prophecies hurled against the city by the prophets were accomplished. To this day there is a spot on its site which no animal can pass unless some of the earth of the place is strewn upon it.<sup>55</sup>

33. Megillah 15a; Targum Mal. 1.1, and Jerome in his introduction to his commentary on Malachi. Comp. notes 5 and 38.

34. As to the “several returns” of the exiles, see Seder ‘Olam 28–30, and the sources referred to by Ratner in his notes. The majority of the returning exiles belonged to the tribes of Judah and Benjamin; yet some refer to those of all the other tribes; Seder ‘Olam 29; Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 5.2. Comp. also ‘Arakin 32b–33a (see Tosafot on Gittin 36a, caption בִּזְמָן), and footnote 56 on p. 1088.

35. Megillah 16b; Shir 5.5; comp. Kaftor wa-Ferah 10. 231. In Shir it is said that God commanded Ezra to remain in Babylon as long as Joshua the son of Jehozadak was alive. This high priest belonged to a family that occupied the office of the high priest for generations. If Ezra had come to the Holy Land during the lifetime of the latter, he would, on account of his superior merit, have had a better claim to that office. But God dislikes to see the “chain of nobility snap” (i. e., to take away honors from the family and give them to another). He therefore told Ezra to remain in Babylon, so that Joshua should continue as high priest like his ancestors. But after the death of Joshua, Ezra returned to the Holy Land, where he occupied the office of high priest. Comp. Maimonides in the introduction to his Code. On Ezra as high priest, see also Parah 3.5, where it is stated that he “burned a red heifer”, and this presupposes that he was a high priest. Ezra was the man for his time, and he would have been high priest even if Aaron were then alive; Koheleth 1.4.

36. Yoma 9b–10a; Berakot 4a, which reads: Miracles would have been wrought for Israel on the second entrance to the Holy Land, like those performed at the first entrance, were it not for the sins of the returning exiles. Had all the Israelites returned, the second Temple would never have been destroyed; but because the greater part of the nation remained in foreign lands, the Temple built by the returning exiles was not only destroyed afterwards, but even during its existence it lacked many things which lent glory to the first Temple. The following five things were in the first Temple only: The heavenly fire (compare against this view on pp. 1119 and 1120), the holy oil of anointing, the ark, the Holy Spirit (revealing itself to the prophets in the Temple; comp. Yerushalmi Sukkah 5, 55a), and the Urim and Tummim. See Shir 8.10; Yoma 21b; PRK (Grünhut's edition, 71); Aruk, s. v. כִּבְד; comp. also Josephus, Bell., V, 5.5, which reads: The holy of holies contained nothing. See also Index under the five subjects just mentioned. As to the refusal of the Jews of Yemen to return to the Holy Land, see note 5; on a similar legend concerning the Jews of Germany (who paid dearly for this sin during the Middle Ages), see Ma'aseh Nissim I and hence She'erit Israel 3; Brüll, Jahrbücher, IV, 39–40. Shalshet, 33a, maintains the same with regard to the Jews of Spain. With the death of the three last prophets (as to the use of the expression נְבִיאִים אַחֲרֵינִים see footnote 24 on p. 913), the Holy Spirit departed from Israel. From time to time, however, a “heavenly voice” used to be heard that revealed to Israel things hidden from human knowledge. See Tosefta Sotah 13.2–6; Babli 46b; Yerushalmi 9, 24b (here Jeremiah and Baruch are described as the “former prophets”, in contrast to the three “later prophets”); Yoma 9b; Sanhedrin 11a. At the destruction of the Temple (first?) the prophetic gift was taken away from the prophets and given to children and fools; Baba Batra 12b; comp. also Matth. 21.16. Baba Batra 12a reads: Although the gift of prophecy was taken away from the prophets, it remained with the wise; hence it may be inferred that the wise are greater than the prophets.

37. Yebamot 86b. As to the statement made here that Ezra abolished the custom of having only Levites as officers of the court, see Kati in Hoffmann-Festschrift, 109, seq. and Ginzberg, Unbekannte Sekte, 69.

38. Megillah 15a. It was in connection with this activity for the purity of the Jewish race, that Ezra-Malachi (on the identity of the “scribe” with the “prophet”, see note 33) addressed his words of reprimand against those who married “foreign women”, found in Mal. 2.10. The Jews of his time revolted against the severe marriage laws of the Torah (compare with pp. 693–694), and especially against the prohibition to intermarry with the Gentiles. They declared this law as unjust, saying: “Has not the same God who created Israel also created the other nations?” (comp. Mal. 2.10). See Sifra 18.2. The women who returned to the Holy Land lost their beauty, and aged before their time, because of the suffering to which they were exposed, and many an inconsiderate husband divorced his wife to marry a foreign woman. Ezra-Malachi (see above) opposed not only the mixed marriages but also the evil of divorce, for even “the altar of the Lord sheds tears for the woman who is divorced by a man who married her as his ‘first love.’” (comp. Mal. 2.13); Yerushalmi Kiddushin 1, 58b; BR 18.5; Gittin 90b.

39. Baba Batra 15a. On the meaning of the words לֹא יָבֹא in this passage, see Rashi and Tosafot, ad loc., as well as the geonic responsum in Ginzberg's Geonica II, 16–17. Comp. note 27.

40. Kiddushin 69b–71a and 71b. Ezra excluded the Gibeonites from entering into the “assembly of the Lord”; Yerushalmi Kiddushin 4, 65c; Shemuel 28, 134; BaR 8.4; compare to pp. 846–849. According to Yerushalmi, an attempt was made at the time of R. Eliezer (or Eleazar) ben Azariah (about 100 C. E.), who was a descendant of Ezra in the tenth generation, to change the statute in order to admit the Gibeonites to complete union with Israel; but it failed. On Ezra's descendants, see Berakot 27b; Yerushalmi Yebamot 1, 3d (top).

41. Tosefta Sanhedrin 4.7; Babli 21b; Yerushalmi Megillah 1, 21b; Tertullian De Cultu Fem. 3., Jerome, Adversus Helvidium 7. Comp. note 50, and the following note.

42. Sifre D., 48; Midrash Tannaim 43; Sukkah 20a. In the last passage it is pointed out that at three different periods in the history of Israel the Torah was nearly forgotten, and in each case the knowledge thereof was revived by a Babylonian: first by Ezra, then by the Babylonian Hillel, and later by the Babylonian R. Hiyya, who was assisted in his work by his two sons Hezekiah and Judah.

43. Megillah 31b. Comp. the first of the ten “regulations of Ezra” in the text below.

44. Tosefta Sanhedrin 4.7–8; Babli 21b–22a; Yerushalmi Megillah 1, 21b–21c. Comp. also Sifre D., 160; Midrash Tannaim 145, as well as pp. 1119–1121 and 1122–1123. A thorough discussion of these and similar passages of the rabbinical literature, bearing upon the “changing of the script” by Ezra, is given by Blau, Zur Einleitung in die Heilige Schrift, 48, seq. Besides the view given in the text, there are two others. According to one, the Assyrian characters (i. e., the square characters) were used by Moses in writing the Torah; but in course of time they were discarded by the Jews, and Ezra re-introduced them again; the other view maintains that “just as the Torah was not changed, even so is the script in which it was written unchanged”: the characters used at present came down from Moses, and were in continuous use by the Jews. Owing to the fact that the square writing was introduced in the time of Ezra, none of Belshazzar's wise men was able to read the writing on the wall which was in the new Aramaic (i. e., square) letters. See Tosefta, loc. cit., where אֲוֹתוֹ הָיִים is very likely not to be taken literally. As Ezra is the author of the script used for writing the Torah, he was the one to introduce the dots over a number of biblical words, the genuineness of which was dubious. Ezra said: When Elijah comes (compare with p. 1020) and asks me: “Why didst thou write these spurious words”, I will answer: “Did I not place dots over them, to indicate that they are to be cancelled?” Should he, on the other hand, say: “Thou didst well in writing these words”, I shall remove the dots. See BaR 3.13; ARN 34, 101 (second version 37, 98). On the dotted words see Blau, Masoretische Untersuchungen, 6–40. In the tannaitic literature numerous references are found to ספר עזרא, the Book of Ezra, i. e., the copy of the Torah written by Ezra. The correct reading, however, seems to be ס' עזרה or rather ס' העזרה “the copy of the Bible kept in the sanctuary.” But even if the reading עזרא is correct, it might be explained as the Aramaic form of עֶזְרָה, comp. Kelim 15.6; Tosefta Kelim, Baba Mezi'a 5.8; Yerushalmi Shekalim 2, 47a; Mo'ed Katan 3.4. The alleged writing of Maimonides on the “Codex Ezra”, given by Di Rossi, Meor 'Enayim, 9, 150–151, bears the mark of forgery. On the other legends concerning this codex, see Sambari, 118–119, and Gelilot Erez Israel, 99b.

45. Baba Batra 21b (bottom). The rabbinical law in other cases is very strict with regard to competition.

46. Popular physiology attributes generative power to garlic, and hence the ordinance to partake thereof on Friday, for according to the Rabbis, the night of Sabbath is to be devoted to conjugal pleasures (in opposition to the Samaritans and other sects who prohibit sexual intercourse on this “holy day”); comp. Ketubot 5.6; Babli 62b; Nedarim 3.10; see the references cited in note 59.

47. The meaning of the word סינר is not quite certain, but it is very likely a different spelling for זונר, the Aramaic transliteration of the Greek ζωνάριον, “belt”. It was mainly worn by women, and covered most of the lower part of the body; see Krauss, Archäologie, I, 174, and note 631.

48. This ordinance is said to have had for its purpose the restraint of conjugal relations. Comp. Berakot 21b–22b, and Yerushalmi 3, 6c. Many attempts have been made in talmudic, as well as in post-talmudic times, to abolish this law, but they were not entirely successful, at least not in the East. Comp. Ginzberg, Geonica, II, 24.

49. Baba Kamma 82a–82b; Ketubot 5a; Baba Batra 22a. Somewhat different are the “regulations of Ezra” in Yerushalmi Megillah 4, 75a. There 1 and 2 are counted as one, and to make up the number ten, Ezra is credited with a regulation which is elsewhere ascribed to R. Jose, a Tanna who flourished about the middle of the second century C. E. (comp. Sanhedrin 19a). The sixth ordinance is explained by Yerushalmi to refer to Friday and had for its purpose to provide the poor with new bread for the Sabbath. A third version of the ten regulations is found in PRK (Schönblum's edition, 40b). This is essentially identical with Yerushalmi Megillah, but it omits number 4, and the number ten is made up by the addition of a new ordinance not found in any other source. A full discussion of the ten regulations of Ezra is given by Bloch, Sha'are Torat ha-Takkanot, I, 107–138; comp. also the critical study by Zeitlin, Takkanot Ezra in J.Q.R., New Series, VIII, 761, seq. Bloch, op. cit., 137–138, attributes the liturgical formula given in Berakot 9.5 to Ezra on the authority of Rashi, ad loc. It is very likely that by the expression וסייעתו עזרא “Ezra and his company”, Rashi means the Men of the Great Synagogue. Comp. Yoma 69b. On the origin of this liturgical formula, see Ginzberg, in Geiger's Kebuzzat Maamarim (Poznanski's edition, 402–403). It is also stated that Ezra pronounced the Tetragrammaton “as it is written”; comp. Tosefta Berakot 7.23; Yerushalmi 9, 14a; Tehillim 36, 251; comp. also Yoma 69b and Yerushalmi Berakot 4.11c. See the discussion of these passages in footnote 53 on p. 863. In the year of Ezra's return to the Holy Land the month of Elul was a “full one”, consisting of thirty days, which has never happened since, for this month is always defective. See Bezah 6a.

50. 4 Ezra 3–14. The names of the scribes are transmitted in different readings. The correct one is very likely: Seraiah (שרייה), Neriah (נרייה) which was corrupted to Dab-riah) the father of Baruch, Shelemiah (שלמיה), Ethan (איתן), and Azriel (עזיאל). On the characters which the scribes could not read, see note 44. In contrast to the view of this apocryphal work, shared also by many of the Church Fathers (comp., e. g., Irenaeus, III, 21.2; Clemens Alexandrinus, Stromata, 1.22; Tertullian, De Cultu Femin. 1.3; ps.-Tertullian, Adversus Marcionitas 280–281; other references are given by Fabricius, Codex Pseudepigraphicus, I, 1156–1160, and Schürer, Geschichte, III, 329), that at the destruction of the Temple the holy Bible was burned, so that Ezra was charged by God to write it down anew, the Rabbis maintain that even “Ezra the Scribe” was not permitted to write one letter of the Torah from memory; he transcribed, word by word, letter by letter, from the copy of the Torah before him. See Yerushalmi Megillah 4, 74d; BR 36 (end). On the seventy books which Ezra was commanded to withhold from the populace see Ginzberg, in Journal of Jewish Philosophy and Lore, I, 34–37, where it is suggested that it refers to the old halakic literature, which consisted of fifty-eight mishnaic treatises, the nine mid-rashic books on Leviticus, and the Midrashim on Exodus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. Ginzberg, op. cit., 37, calls attention to Maseket Kelim 88, where it is said that Ezra and five of his companions (they are the three prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, as well as the Levites Shimur and Hezekiah; on Shimur, see footnote 63 on p. 1091, but he is perhaps identical with Shelemiah in 4 Ezra mentioned above) wrote down the Mishnah. In rabbinic literature the Mishnah is often described as the great “secret” (μυστήριον) which God revealed to Israel (and to Israel only), whereas the Bible was given to all mankind. Comp., e. g., Yerushalmi Peah 2, 17a; PR 5, 14b; Tan. B. I, 88, and II, 116–117; Tan. Wa-Yera 5, and Ki-Tissa 34; ShR 47.1; BaR 14.10. In rabbinic literature Ezra is not one of those who “entered paradise alive” (comp. Index, s. v. “Paradise, Entering Alive”), whereas 4 Ezra (end) states: And then was Ezra caught away and taken up into the Place (i. e., paradise), of such as were like him. The office of “heavenly scribe” is otherwise given to Enoch or Elijah (comp. Index). It is perhaps this glorification of Ezra which gave rise to the accusation made by Mohammed against the Jews that they consider Ezra as the son of God. Comp. note 5. The much discussed Ezra-Salathiel problem is easily solved, if we assume that the Hebrew original of 4 Ezra had at its opening the words אני שלח אל עזרא. A slight curving of the letter ח made of אל שלח אל “the messenger of God” שלתיאל Salathiel. The identification of Ezra with Malachi (comp. notes 5, 33 and 38) may also have its origin in these opening words of 4 Ezra, as מלאכי אל and אל שלח אל mean both “the messenger of God”.

51. R. Benjamin of Tudela, 73. According to Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 5.5, Ezra died in old age at Jerusalem; comp. note 5. Ezra and Nehemiah died on the second of Tebeth, which day was therefore observed as a fast-day; Megillat Ta’anit (addition) 24.

52. R. Benjamin of Tudela, 51; comp. also with footnote 75 on p. 1142. On an Ezra synagogue in the neighborhood of Mount Ararat, and another in Nisibis, see Gelilot Erez Israel, 100a.

53. On this miracle, see also vol. IV, p. 326.

54. Gelilot Erez Israel, 101a–101b. On the destruction of the city of Babylon, see also Shalshelet, 101b, quoting an alleged old manuscript. According to the medieval Chronicle, published by Neubauer, II, 185, Darius and Cyrus razed the city to the ground. Compare also footnote 104 on p. 1149.

55. Berakot 67b (towards the end); comp. Rashi, ad loc., and also footnote 46 on p. 1137.

THE MEN OF THE GREAT ASSEMBLY

At the same time with Ezra, or, to speak more accurately, under his direction, the Great Assembly carried on its beneficent activities, which laid the foundations of Rabbinical Judaism, and constituted the binding link between the Jewish Prophet and the Jewish Sage.<sup>56</sup> The great men who belonged to this august assembly once succeeded, through the efficacy of their prayers, in laying hands upon the seducers unto sin, and confining them, to prevent them from doing more mischief. Thus they banished from the world “the desire unto idolatry”. They tried to do the same to “the desire unto lustfulness”. This evil adversary warned them against making away with him, for the world would cease to exist without him. For three days they kept him a prisoner, but then they had to dismiss him and let him go free. They found that not even an egg was to be had, for sexual appetite had vanished from the world. However, he did not escape altogether unscathed. They plastered up his eyes, and from that time on he gave up inflaming the passions of men against their blood relations.<sup>57</sup>

Among the decrees and ordinances of the Great Assembly, the most prominent is the fixation of the prayer of the Eighteen Benedictions. The several benedictions composing this prayer date back to remote ancient times. The Patriarchs were their authors, and the work of the Great Assembly was to put them together in the order in which we now have them. We know how each of the benedictions originated: 1. When Abraham was saved from the furnace, the angels spoke: “Blessed art Thou, O Lord, the Shield of Abraham,” which is the essence of the first of the Eighteen. 2. When Isaac lay stunned by fright on Mount Moriah, God sent His dew to revive him, whereupon the angels spoke: “Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who quickenest the dead.” 3. When Jacob arrived at the gates of heaven and proclaimed the holiness of God, the angels spoke: “Blessed art Thou, O Lord, Thou holy God.” 4. When Pharaoh was about to make Joseph the ruler over Egypt, and it appeared that he was unacquainted with the seventy tongues which an Egyptian sovereign must know, the angel Gabriel came and taught him those languages, whereupon the angels spoke: “Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who graciously bestowest knowledge.” 5. When Reuben committed the trespass against his father, sentence of death was pronounced upon him in the heavens. But when he repented, he was permitted to continue to live, and the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who hast delight in repentance." 6. When Judah had committed a trespass against Tamar, and confessing his guilt obtained forgiveness, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who pardonest greatly." 7. When Israel was sore oppressed by Mizraim, and God proclaimed his redemption, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who redeemest Israel." 8. When the angel Raphael came to Abraham to soothe the pain of his circumcision, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who healest the sick." 9. When Israel's sowing in the land of the Philistines bore an abundant harvest, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who blessest the years." 10. When Jacob was reunited with Joseph and Simon in Egypt, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who gatherest the dispersed of Thy people Israel." 11. When the Torah was revealed and God communicated the code of laws to Moses, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who lovest righteousness and justice." 12. When the Egyptians were drowned in the Red Sea, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who shatterest the enemy and humiliatest the presumptuous." 13. When Joseph laid his hands on the eyes of his father Jacob, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who art the stay and the support of the pious." 14. When Solomon built the Temple, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who buildest Jerusalem." 15. When the children of Israel singing hymns of praise unto God passed through the Red Sea, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who causest the hour of salvation to sprout forth." 16. When God lent a gracious ear to the prayer of the suffering Israelites in Egypt, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who hearest our prayer." 17. When the Shekinah descended between the Cherubim in the Tabernacle, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who wilt restore Thy Divine Presence to Jerusalem." 18. When Solomon dedicated his Temple, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, whose Name is worthy of praise." 19. When Israel entered the Holy Land, the angels spoke: "Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who establishest peace."<sup>58</sup>

---

56. Abot 1.1, which reads: Moses received the Torah from Sinai, and delivered it to Joshua, and Joshua to the elders (Josh. 24.31), and the elders to the prophets, and the prophets delivered it to the men of the Great Synagogue. The Great Synagogue was so called because it restored the attribute of "greatness" to God in addressing Him, as did Moses, as the "great God, the mighty, and the awful" (Deut. 10.7). Jeremiah spoke of the "great and mighty God" (Jer. 32.18), omitting the attribute "awful", because "God is awful out of the holy place" (Ps. 68.36), and in his days the holy place (the Temple) was destroyed. Daniel (Dan. 9.4) described God as great and awful, but not as mighty, saying: His children are in chains, and where then is His might manifested? The men of the Great Synagogue, on the other hand, restored all the attributes of God (comp. Nehem. 9.32 and the beginning of the 'Amidah), maintaining that the awfulness and might of God are manifested in His permitting the wicked nations to do what they like. See Yerushalmi Berakot 7, 11c; Megillah 3, 74c; Yoma 69b; Tehillim 18, 164. Comp. also Berakot 33b. Thus the men of the Great Synagogue, though not all of them were prophets (opinions differ as to the number of the prophets who were among these one hundred and twenty men; comp. Yerushalmi Megillah 1, 70d; Berakot 2, 4d; Ruth R. 2.4; Megillah 17b; comp. also ARN, both versions 1, 2; Tosefta 'Erubin 11.22), saw much deeper than Jeremiah and Daniel. See the quotation from an unknown Midrash in Midrash Talpiyyot, whence it is also incorporated in Toledot Adam 1, 26b. Among the members of the Great Synagogue were, besides Ezra and Mordecai (the latter lived more than four hundred years; comp. Seder ha-Dorot, 3404), Zerubbabel, Nehemiah, the high priest, Joshua, as well as Daniel's three companions, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. Comp. the geonic Seder Tannaim in Mahzor Vitry 481 and 463, as well as Maimonides, in his introduction to Mishneh Torah. The latter quite correctly understands the talmudic-midrashic view about the Great Synagogue to be based on the narrative in Neh. 8–10. This passage, combined with Ezra 2.2, lends scriptural authority to the view of the Rabbis. Maimonides undoubtedly identified Mishael (Neh. 8.4), Azariah (10.3), and Hananiah (10.22) with Daniel's three companions. The view that Daniel was a priest (comp. note 6) is likewise based upon the identification of the priest Daniel (Neh. 10.7) with the famous Daniel. Maimonides, loc. cit., gives the "chain of tradition" from Moses to R. Ashi, the compiler of the Babylonian Talmud, extending over forty generations. Ezra and the men of the Great Synagogue form the middle of the chain, since Baruch, the teacher of Ezra (compare also p. 355), is the twentieth from Moses. Later authorities extend the chain of tradition until the last of the Geonim; comp. 2 Seder 'Olam, 163–165; Seder 'Olam Zuta, 176, as well as Seder ha-Kabbalah by R. Abraham ibn Daud. As to the activities of the Great Synagogue, the following are the most notable ones. They edited or declared as canonical the books of Ezekiel, Daniel, Esther, and the Minor Prophets. See Baba Batra 15a (as to the word "write", see footnote 89 on p. 1061); comp. also 2 Seder 'Olam, 174, where it is said that Ezra "wrote" the Book of Judges. Very interesting is the statement found in this chronicle, p. 162, to the effect that Moses made use, for the Pentateuch, of the writings which came down from former generations. Josephus, Contra Apionem, 1.8, and Seder 'Olam R. 30, maintain that at the end of the Persian period the prophetic spirit departed from among Israel, and this necessitated the final canonization of the holy writings. These authorities very likely also have in mind the activity of the Great Synagogue in connection with the Canon; comp. Tan. Beshallah 16. The men of the Great Synagogue introduced the tripartite division of the oral law, classifying it into Midrash, Halakah, and Haggada; Yerushalmi Shekalim 5 (beginning). Hence the Mishnah contains statements going directly back to these great men; comp. Abot 1.1; Sanhedrin 109b, with reference to the Mishnah 10.1 (see, however, Tan. B. III, 43, where חכמי המשנה can hardly mean the men of the Great Synagogue); Megillah 10b, where a haggadic rule is ascribed to them. They introduced the Feast of Purim, and determined the days when it should be celebrated. See Megillah 2a; Yerushalmi 1, 70d; compare footnote 193 on p. 1179. On the view that they built up the entire ritual, see note 58. They also ordained that the tithes and the Terumah should be given, though according to the biblical law these obligations ceased when the Jews were exiled. They drew up a document to the effect that they had taken anew upon themselves these duties, and left it in the Temple over night. In the morning they found the heavenly seal placed under the names attached to the document. See Ruth R. 2.4. Very remarkable is the statement of ER 27, 138 according to which the Great Synagogue was acting in Babylonia at the time of Ezekiel. Comp. Jewish Encyclopedia, s. v. "The Great Synagogue".

57. Yoma 69b. In Shir 7.8 two views are given. According to one, the "desire for idolatry" was eradicated from among Israel in the days of Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah (they belonged to the Great Synagogue; comp. preceding note); but the other view maintains that this happened in the time of Mordecai and Esther; comp. also 'Arakin 32b. In the Babylonian myth about Ishtar's descent into hell it is also said that during her absence from the earth all creatures lost their desire and appetite for any enjoyment. At present Satan is blind, and thus his power is weakened; but in the time to come the evil inclination will entirely disappear from among men, who will be like angels. See BR 48.11.

58. Aggadat Tefillat Shemoneh Esreh 54–55, and, in a somewhat different form, Eshkol, I, 19. On the legends presupposed in this midrashic writing, see also pp. 6, 204, 229–230, 260; also pp. 339, 345, 366. "The men of the Great Synagogue formulated the benedictions and the prayers, as well as the benedictions for Kiddush and Habbalah." On the other hand, the view is given that the three patriarchs instituted the three daily prayers: Abraham the morning prayer, Isaac the afternoon prayer, and Jacob the evening prayer. Comp. Berakot 26b and 33b; Yerushalmi 4, 6d; Yoma 28b; Tan. B. I, 195–196, and V, 45 (here it is said that Moses established the daily prayers); Tan. Hayye Sarah 5 and Ki-Tissa 23; Tehillim 19, 164 (the text of Yerushalmi Berakot 7, 11c, is here changed, and instead of מטבע תפלה we have סדר תפלה, thus making Moses the author of the 'Amidah), and 55, 291–292; Mishle 22, 93; BR 60.14 and 68.9; BaR 2.1. Besides Moses and the patriarchs, the following prophets and kings are said to have contributed to the prayer-book. Joshua composed 'Alenu on his entering into the Holy Land, and 'Al Ken Nekawweh Leka at the time when Achan confessed his theft. See Seder ha-Yom ע'לינו; Mahkim, 125; Sha'are Teshubah 20a–21a (Hazan's edition; R. Hai Gaon's responsum dealing with the authorship of Joshua is certainly a forgery); Zunz, Synagogale Poesie, 4. Solomon is the author of Yishtabbah (Orehot Hayyim, 1, 6d; Zunz, loc. cit.), while another king, Hezekiah, composed Adonai Elohe Israel; Seder ha-Yom, ad loc., and Zunz, loc. cit. Shoken 'Ad is a composition of Isaac's, and is an acrostic containing not only his own name, but also that of his wife Rebekah; Mahzor Vitry 152. On Hashkibenu, see refer also to p. 537. On the view that grace after meals was composed by Moses, see also pp. 573–575. Joshua added one benediction to the grace after meals, and later on David and Solomon added another. See Berakot 48b.

XXIII ESTHER

THE FEAST FOR THE GRANDEES

The Book of Esther is the last of the Scriptural writings. The subsequent history of Israel and all his suffering we know only through oral tradition. For this reason the heroine of the last canonical book was named Esther, that is, Venus, the morning-star, which sheds its light after all the other stars have ceased to shine, and while the sun still delays to rise. Thus the deeds of Queen Esther cast a ray of light forward into Israel's history at its darkest.<sup>1</sup>

The Jews at the time of Ahasuerus were like the dove about to enter her nest wherein a snake lies coiled. Yet she cannot withdraw, because a falcon bides without to swoop down upon her. In Shushan the Jews were in the clutches of Haman, and in other lands they were at the mercy of many murderous enemies to their race, ready to do the bidding of Haman—to destroy and to slay them, and cause them to perish.<sup>2</sup>

But the rescue of the Jews from the hand of their adversaries is only a part of this wonderful chapter in the history of Israel. No less important is the exalted station to which they rose in the realm of Ahasuerus after the fall of Haman, especially the power and dignity to which Esther herself attained. On this account the magnificent feast prepared by Ahasuerus for his subjects belongs to the history of Esther. The splendor of his feast is the gauge whereby to measure the wealth and power she later enjoyed.<sup>3</sup>

Ahasuerus was not the king of Persia by right of birth. He owed his position to his vast wealth, with which he purchased dominion over the whole world.<sup>4</sup>

He had various reasons for giving a gorgeous feast. The third year of his reign was the seventieth since the beginning of Nebuchadnezzar's rule, and Ahasuerus thought it quite certain that the time had passed for the fulfilment of the prophecy of Jeremiah foretelling the return of Israel to the Holy Land. The Temple was still in ruins, and Ahasuerus was convinced that the Jewish kingdom would never again be restored. Needless to say, it was not Jeremiah who erred. Not with the accession of King Nebuchadnezzar had the prophet's term of years begun, but with the destruction of Jerusalem. Reckoned in this way, the seventy years of desolation were at an end exactly at the time when Darius, the son of Ahasuerus, permitted the rebuilding of the Temple.<sup>5</sup>

Beside this mistaken cause for a celebration, there were reasons personal to Ahasuerus why he desired to give expression to joy. A short time before, he had crushed a rebellion against himself, and this victory he wanted to celebrate with pomp and ceremony.<sup>6</sup> The first part of the celebration was given over to the hundred and twenty-seven rulers of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of his empire. His purpose was to win the devotion of those of them with whom otherwise he did not come in direct contact. But can it be said with certainty that this was a good policy? If he had not first made sure of the loyalty of his capital, was it not dangerous to have these rulers near him in case of an insurrection?

For six whole months he celebrated the feast for the grandees—the nobles and the high officials, the latter of whom, according to the constitution, were all required to be Medians under the Persian king Ahasuerus, as they would have had to be Persians under a Median king.<sup>7</sup>

This was the program of the feast: In the first month Ahasuerus showed his treasures to his guests; in the second, the delegates of the king's royal vassals saw them; in the third the presents were exposed to view; in the fourth the guests were invited to admire his literary possessions, among them the sacred scroll; in the fifth his pearl and diamond-studded ornaments of gold were put on exhibition; and in the sixth he displayed the treasures which had been given him as tribute.<sup>8</sup> All this vast wealth, however, appertained to the crown, it was not his personal property. When Nebuchadnezzar felt his end draw nigh, he resolved to sink his immense treasures in the Euphrates rather than let them descend to his son Evil-merodach, so great was his miserliness. But, again, when Cyrus gave the Jews permission to build the Temple, his divinely appointed reward was that he discovered the spot in the river at which the treasures were sunk, and he was permitted to take possession of them. These were the treasures of which Ahasuerus availed himself to glorify his feast. So prodigious were they that during the six months of the feast he unlocked six treasure-chambers daily to display their contents to his guests.<sup>9</sup>

When Ahasuerus boasted of his wealth, which he had no right to do, as his treasures had come from the Temple, God said: "Verily, has the creature of flesh and blood any possessions of his own? I alone possess treasures, for 'the silver is mine, and the gold is mine.'"<sup>10</sup>

Among the treasures displayed were the Temple vessels, which Ahasuerus had desecrated in his drinking bouts. When the noble Jews who had been invited to the capital saw these, they began to weep, and they refused to take further part in the festivities. Thereupon the king commanded that a separate place be assigned to the Jews, so that their eyes might be spared the painful sight.<sup>11</sup>

This was not the only incident that aroused poignant memories in them, for Ahasuerus arrayed himself in the robes of state once belonging to the high priests at Jerusalem, and this, too, made the Jews smart uncomfortably.<sup>12</sup> The Persian king had wanted to mount the throne of Solomon besides, but herein he was thwarted, because its ingenious construction was an enigma to him. Egyptian artificers tried to fashion a throne after the model of Solomon's, but in vain. After two years' work they managed to produce a weak imitation of it, and upon this Ahasuerus sat during his splendid feast.<sup>13</sup>

---

1. Yoma 29a; Megillah 13a (here several other etymologies of the name Esther are given; comp. also note 67); Tehillim 22, 185. On the meaning of the name Esther, comp. also 1 and 2 Targum Esther 2.7; Hullin 139b; see pp. 1141–1142. The description of Mordecai in 2 Targum Esther (end) as "Venus that glitters among the stars and is like the dawn of the morning" is taken from the old piyyut מראה כהן (compare footnote 42 on p. 959), and has nothing to do with the etymology of his name. He who dreams of the Book of Esther will live to see miracles performed for him. See Berakot 57b.

2. 2 Panim Aherim 55; 2 Targum Esther 1.1 (towards the end).

3. Esther R. 1, 9.9; Abba Gorion 12; Midrash Tan-naim 37.

4. Megillah 11a, which gives also the different view that Ahasuerus owed his throne to his valor and other merits. In contrast to these views, which assume that Ahasuerus did not inherit the throne from his father, 2 Targum Esther 1. 1, 2, describes him as the son of Cyrus the Persian, who was the son of Darius the Mede. Alkabez, 20b, quotes from a Targum on Esther the statement that Ahasuerus was the son of "Cyrus from the empire of Asia". Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.1, in agreement with the Septuagint, calls the king Artaxerxes, and adds that he was known by this name "to the Greeks, whereas his real name was Cyrus." On the view that Artaxerxes was the name of all Persian kings, see Seder 'Olam 30, and footnote 7 on p. 1113. Abba Gorion 4 states that Darius was the father of Ahasuerus. The Rabbis give several etymologies of the name Ahasuerus, which is said to contain a hint as to the sad plight of Israel in the days of the bearer of this name. Comp. Megillah 11a; Esther R. 1, 1.1 and 3. On the vast wealth of Ahasuerus see p. 1130, left column.

5. Megillah 11a–11b; Seder 'Olam 28. The Talmud points out that even Daniel erred in computing the seventy years of the exile fixed by Jeremiah; compare with pp. 1114–1115 (end). See also Letter of Jeremiah 7, and the full discussion of this chronological problem in Lekah on Esther (beginning), as well as Kad ha-Kemah, Purim II, 43b and compare further footnote 24 on p. 1073. According to Esther R. 1, 3.15, Ahasuerus gave his feast after the work of the Temple had been stopped for three years. On Darius ("the last"), the son of Ahasuerus and Esther, see WR 13.3; Kallah 1, 6a; Esther R. 1.1. Compare with pp. 1111–1112 in connection with the cause of Belshazzar's feast.

6. Abba Gorion 8, which gives also the different view that the personal reason for the feast was the king's birthday; 2 Panim Aherim 58; 1 and 2 Targum Esther 1.3; Esther R. 1, 3.15, which reads: Ahasuerus prepared a feast to celebrate the completion of his magnificent throne; comp. note 13. The statement found in Septuagint Esther 1.4 that Ahasuerus celebrated with a feast his marriage to Vashti was also known to the Rabbis; see Abba Gorion 12–13 (read מְזוּגָת לְהַדִּין שָׁחֹר and comp. Yalkut quoted by Buber; נִשְׂאָת is a more common word than מְזוּגָת); Panim Aherim 59; 2 Targum Esther 1.9, where the text is corrupt, but MS. K with its לְהוֹן גְּבָרָא suggests the correct reading לְהַדִּין גְּבָרָא. As to the wars of Ahasuerus, who at first was a small potentate ruling over seven provinces, and finally, by wars of conquest, became the ruler of one hundred and twenty-seven provinces, see Megillah 11a; Esther R. 1, 1.7.

7. Megillah 12a; Esther R. 1, 3.18. Opinions differ as to the guests described in Esther 1.3 as princes; according to one, they were the "crowned heads" of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces subject to Ahasuerus; but another view maintains that they were the sons of the "crowned heads". Comp. 2 Targum Esther 1.3; Abba Gorion 8; Panim Aherim 58. By the "nobles" (פִּרְתָּמִים) are meant the Decumani and Augustiani, who were the guests of honor; Esther R. 1, 3.19. Compare footnote 52 in text on p. 1086. As to Ahasuerus' lack of common sense, see note 49.

8. Aggadat Esther 10–11.

9. Abba Gorion 8–9; Panim Aherim 58; Esther R. 1.4; ShR 9.7; 1 and 2 Targum Esther 1.4 (in 1 Targum שִׁית is to be struck out, as the hundred and eighty kings correspond to the number of days mentioned in Esther 1.4). Comp. also PRE 49.

10. Panim Aherim 58; 2 Targum Esther 1.4.

11. Abba Gorion 9; Panim Aherim 58; 2 Targum Esther 1.4. Comp. also Esther R. 1, 4.2, according to the reading given in Mattenot Kehunnah, ad loc. Septuagint on Esther 1.7 speaks of the precious cup used by the king at the feast; comp. 2 Targum Esther 1.11.

12. Megillah 12a; ShR 9.7; Esther R. 1.4; Panim Aherim 58.

13. Abba Gorion 2–8; Targum Esther 1.2. Comp. also 2 Targum 1.2, 4, and 7–8; Aggadat Esther 8–9; Esther R. 1.2, 12 and 1.3, 15. As to the fate of Solomon's throne, refer also to p. 969, and the vast literature on the subject given by Salzberger, Salomos Tempelbau, 60–74. The sources differ greatly as to the history of the throne. The strangest form of this legend is found in 2 Targum Esther, loc. cit., which reads: When Nebuchadnezzar attempted to ascend and to sit upon Solomon's throne, in possession of which he came at the conquest of Jerusalem, he did not know its mechanism. When he put his foot on the first steps, a golden lion stretched out its right paw, and struck him on his left foot, so that he became lame for the rest of his life. After the conquest of Babylon by Alexander the Macedonian, Solomon's throne was brought by him to Egypt. Shishak the king of Egypt attempted to ascend the throne, as did Nebuchadnezzar before him, and the result of his presumptuousness was the same: his leg was broken by the golden lion, and he was therefore called the "lame Pharaoh" unto the day of his death. When Epiphanes the son of Antiochus (or perhaps Alofernes; the texts have אֲנִיפּוֹרְנִיס and אֲנִיפּוֹנִיס) destroyed Egypt, he took the throne with him, and put it on a ship (to be sent to Greece). While being moved about, a leg of the throne was loosened from the golden chain holding it (read מִשִּׁשְׁלֵתָא instead of כְּשִׁשְׁלֵתָא). All the artists and goldsmiths of the world were brought to repair the damage, but none until this day succeeded. When Cyrus arose after Epiphanes, he was found worthy to be permitted to ascend and sit on Solomon's throne, because he assisted in the building of the Temple. Leaving the question of chronology out of consideration (it is hardly conceivable that Targum believed that Shishak lived after Nebuchadnezzar, and Cyrus after Epiphanes), one does not understand why the "pious" Cyrus is made to sit on a broken throne. It seems therefore certain that the text is corrupt, and that the order of the kings was: Shishak (compare with pp. 969 and 985), Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus (the only one who was found worthy to sit on it), Alexander the Macedonian, who in his great wisdom did not make any attempt to ascend the throne, and Epiphanes, in whose time the throne was damaged, so that no further attempts were made to ascend it. The statement in Esther R. 1.2, 12, that the "fragments" of the throne "could still be seen at Rome" as late as the second century C. E., is very likely connected with the above legend about its having been damaged in the time of Epiphanes. That it was finally brought to Rome is the natural inference from the preceding statement given in Esther R., to the effect that it came from Jerusalem to Babylon, from there to Media, from there to Greece, and finally from Greece to Rome. The "four kingdoms" were each in its time in possession of Solomon's throne, the symbol of "Cosmocratia". Comp. ibid., which reads: Nebuchadnezzar sat on this throne; Cyrus sat on it; and when Ahasuerus became king, he too wished to ascend it, but was prevented (by the grandees of his realm) from doing so, as he was not a "Cosmocrator", like the other two. Compare with footnote 80 on p. 1096.

THE FESTIVITIES IN SHUSHAN

At the expiration of the hundred and eighty days allotted to the feast for the nobles, Ahasuerus arranged a great celebration for the residents of Shushan, the capital city of Elam. From the creation of the world until after the deluge the unwritten law had been in force, that the first-born son of the patriarchs was to be the ruler of the world. Thus, Seth was the successor to Adam, and he was followed in turn by Enosh, and so the succession went on, from first-born son to first-born son, down to Noah and his oldest son Shem. Now, the first-born son of Shem was Elam, and, according to custom, he should have been given the universal dominion which was his heritage. Shem, being a prophet, knew that Abraham and his posterity, the Israelites, would not spring from the family of Elam, but from that of Arpachshad. Therefore he named Arpachshad as his successor, and through him rulership descended to Abraham, and so to Isaac, Jacob, and Judah, and to David and his posterity, down to the last Judean king Zedekiah, who was deprived of his sovereignty by Nebuchadnezzar.

Then it was that God spake thus: "So long as the government rested in the hands of My children, I was prepared to exercise patience. The misdeeds of the one were made good by the other. If one of them was wicked, the other was pious. But now that the dominion has been wrested from My children, it shall at least revert to its original possessors. Elam was the first-born son of Shem, and his seed shall be given the rule." So it happened that Shushan, the capital city of Elam, became the seat of government.<sup>14</sup>

That there were any celebrations in Shushan was due to Haman, who even in those early days was devising intrigues against the Jews. He appeared before Ahasuerus, and said: "O king, this people is a peculiar people. May it please thee to destroy it." Ahasuerus replied: "I fear the God of this people; He is very mighty, and I bear in mind what befell Pharaoh for his wicked treatment of the Israelites." "Their God", said Haman, "hates an unchaste life. Do thou, therefore, prepare feasts for them, and order them to take part in the merry-makings. Have them eat and drink and act as their heart desireth, so that their God may become wrathful against them."

When Mordecai heard of the feasts that were planned, he advised the Jews not to join in them.<sup>15</sup> All the prominent men of his people and many of the lower classes took his advice to heart. They fled from Shushan, to avoid being compelled to take part in the festivities.<sup>16</sup> The rest remained in the city and yielded to force; they participated in the celebrations, and even permitted themselves to eat of food prepared by the heathen, though the king had taken care not to offend the religious conscience of the Jews in such details.<sup>17</sup> He had been so punctilious that there was no need for them to drink wine touched by the hand of an idolater, let alone eat forbidden food. The arrangements for the feast were entirely in the charge of Haman and Mordecai, so that neither Jew nor Gentile might absent himself for religious reasons.<sup>18</sup>

It was the aim of the king to let every guest follow the inclination of his heart. When Ahasuerus issued the order, that the officers of his house were to “do according to every man’s pleasure”, God became wroth with him. “Thou villain,” He said, “canst thou do every man’s pleasure? Suppose two men love the same woman, can both marry her? Two vessels sail forth together from a port, the one desires a south wind, the other a north wind. Canst thou produce a wind to satisfy the two? On the morrow Haman and Mordecai will appear before thee. Wilt thou be able to side with both?”<sup>19</sup>

The scene of the festivities was in the royal gardens. The upper branches of the high trees were made to interlace with each other, so as to form vaulted arches, and the smaller trees with aromatic foliage were taken up out of the ground, and placed in artfully constructed tents. From tree to tree stretched curtains of byssus, white and sapphire blue, and vivid green and royal purple, fastened to their supports by ropes depending from round silver beams, these in turn resting on pillars of red, green, yellow, white, and glittering blue marble. The couches were made of delicate draperies, their frames stood on silver feet, and the rods attached to them were of gold. The floor was tiled with crystal and marble, outlined with precious stones, whose brilliance illuminated the scene far and wide.<sup>20</sup>

The wine and the other beverages were drunk only from golden vessels, yet Ahasuerus was so rich that no drinking cup was used more than a single time.<sup>21</sup> But magnificent as these utensils of his were, when the holy vessels of the Temple were brought in, the golden splendor of the others was dimmed; it turned dull as lead. The wine was in each case older than its drinker. To prevent intoxication from unaccustomed drinks, every guest was served with the wine indigenous to his native place. In general, Ahasuerus followed the Jewish rather than the Persian manner. It was a banquet rather than a drinking bout.<sup>22</sup> In Persia a custom prevailed that every participant in a banquet of wine had to drain a huge beaker far exceeding the drinking capacity of any human being, and do it he must, though he lost reason and life. The office of butler accordingly was very lucrative, because the guests at such wassails were in the habit of bribing him to purchase the liberty of drinking as little as they pleased or dared. This Persian habit of compelling excess in drinking was ignored at Ahasuerus’s banquet; every guest did as he chose.<sup>23</sup>

The royal bounty did not show itself in food and drink alone. The king’s guests could also indulge in the pleasures of the dance if they were so minded. Dancers were provided, who charmed the company with their artistic figures displayed upon the purple-covered floor.<sup>24</sup> That the enjoyment of the participants might in no wise be marred, as by separation from their families, all were permitted to bring their households with them,<sup>25</sup> and merchants were released from the taxes imposed upon them.<sup>26</sup>

So sure was Ahasuerus of his success as a host that he dared say to his Jewish guests: “Will your God be able to match this banquet in the future world?” Whereunto the Jews replied: “The banquet God will prepare for the righteous in the world to come is that of which it is written, ‘No eye hath seen it but God’s; He will accomplish it for them that wait upon Him.’ If God were to offer us a banquet like unto thine, O king, we should say, Such as this we ate at the table of Ahasuerus.”<sup>27</sup>

14. 2 Panim Aherim 56–57; 2 Targum Esther 1.2, 3; comp. Rashi on Micah 1.15. On Elam, comp. also Sanhedrin 24a.

15. Abba Gorion 32; Esther R. 3.9, 19. According to the first source, Ahasuerus did not force the Jews to take part in the festivities arranged by him. On God's hatred of unchastity, refer to p. 139; p. 778; and footnote 45 on p. 1085.

16. Abba Gorion 9; Esther R. 1.5.

17. Abba Gorion 32–33; Esther R. 3.9, 19; Shir 7.8; Megillah 12a; Aggadat Esther 11 (an alleged quotation from the Talmud). Compare both p. 1140 and p. 1159. Opinions in these sources differ as to whether Israel, because of their participation in the festivities, deserved punishment or not. According to Megillah and Shir, the trouble which overwhelmed Israel shortly after the feast was the punishment for their worshipping the idol erected by Nebuchadnezzar, a sin committed by the entire nation, with the exception of the three men who were thrown into the fiery furnace for refusing to obey the king's command. Compare footnote 83 on p. 109.

18. Megillah 12a; PRE 49. As to the desire of Ahasuerus not to offend the religious feelings of his guests, see also Abba Gorion 13, and Esther R. 1.8, which has a statement with regard to the Samaritans, who consider it unlawful to keep wine in leather casks. Comp. Geiger, Kebuzzat Maamarim, 73–74, and Ginzberg, Notes 389.

19. Abba Gorion 12; Esther R. 1.8.

20. 1 and 2 Targum Esther 1.5–6; Megillah 12a; Abba Gorion 12; Panim Aherim 58–59; PRE 49; Esther R. 1.5–6. In the last source the sumptuous use of expensive marble is pointed out.

21. Abba Gorion 10; Panim Aherim 59; 2 Targum Esther 1.7. According to one view given in Esther R. 1.7, the cups were of glass that glittered like gold.

22. Abba Gorion 10–11; Panim Aherim 59; PRE 39; Esther R. 1.7; Megillah 12a; 1 and 2 Targum Esther 1.7.

23. Abba Gorion 11; Panim Aherim 59; 2 Targum Esther 1.8; comp. also Esther R. 1.7, 13, where בפתקא is to be read instead of בפקתא. Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.1, also points out that Ahasuerus abolished the Persian custom of compulsory drinking at this feast. The words of Septuagint on Esther 1.8 οὐ κατὰ προκείμενον νόμον express the same view.

24. Abba Gorion 10; Panim Aherim 59.

25. Esther R. 1.7, 13.

26. Megillah 12a. According to Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.1, Ahasuerus commanded all his subjects to stop their work for some time and to attend his feast.

27. Abba Gorion 10; Esther R. 1.5; comp. also 1.4.

VASHTI'S BANQUET

The banquet given by Queen Vashti to the women differed but slightly from Ahasuerus's. She sought to emulate her husband's example even in the point of exhibiting treasures. Six store-chambers she displayed daily to the women she had bidden as guests; aye, she did not even shrink from arraying herself in the high-priestly garments. The meats and dishes, as at Ahasuerus's table, were Palestinian, only instead of wine, liqueurs were served, and sweets.

As the weak sex is subject to sudden attacks of indisposition, the banquet was given in the halls of the palace, so that the guests might at need withdraw to the adjoining chambers. The gorgeously ornamented apartments of the palace, besides, were more attractive to the feminine taste than the natural beauties of the royal gardens, "for a woman would rather reside in beautiful chambers and possess beautiful clothes than eat fatted calves."<sup>28</sup> Nothing interested the women more than to become acquainted with the arrangement of the interior of the palace, "for women are curious to know all things." Vashti gratified their desire. She showed them all there was to be seen, describing every place as she came to it: This is the dining-hall, this the wine-room, this the bed-chamber.<sup>29</sup>

Vashti, too, was actuated by a political motive when she determined to give her banquet. By inviting the wives of the nobles entertained by her spouse, she could hold them as hostages in case the men rose in insurrection against the king.<sup>30</sup> For Vashti knew the ways of statecraft. She not only was the wife of a king, but also the daughter of a king, of Belshazzar. The night of Belshazzar's murder in his own palace, Vashti, alarmed by the confusion that ensued, and not knowing of the death of her father, fled to the apartments in which he was in the habit of sitting. The Median Darius had already ascended the throne of Belshazzar, and so it happened that Vashti, instead of finding the hoped-for refuge with her father, ran straight into the hands of his successor. But he had compassion with her, and gave her to his son Ahasuerus for wife.

---

28. Abba Gorion 13; Panim Aherim 59–60 (here it is stated that the women refused to participate in the desecration of the holy vessels in which the wine was served to the men; they had therefore to be entertained separately); Esther R. 1.9, 9–10. On the reading יין שחור “black wine”, comp. note 6, where it is shown that הדין שחור “this noble man” is to be read instead. Comp. also Buber’s note 45 on Panim Aherim 59.

29. Panim Aherim 60; 1 and 2 Targum Esther 1.9.

30. Esther R. 1.9, 10.

THE FATE OF VASHTI

Though Ahasuerus had taken every precaution to prevent intemperate indulgence in wine, his banquet revealed the essential difference between Jewish and pagan festivities. When Jews are gathered about a festal board, they discuss a Halakah, or a Haggadah, or, at the least, a simple verse from the Scriptures. Ahasuerus and his boon companions rounded out the banquet with prurient talk. The Persians lauded the charms of the women of their people, while the Medians admitted none superior to the Median women. Then “the fool” Ahasuerus up and spake: “My wife is neither a Persian nor a Median, but a Chaldean, yet she excels all in beauty. Would you convince yourselves of the truth of my words?” “Yes,” shouted the company, who were deep in their cups, “but that we may properly judge of her natural charms, let her appear before us unadorned, yea, without any apparel whatsoever,” and Ahasuerus agreed to the shameless condition.<sup>31</sup>

The thing was from God, that so insensate a demand should be made of Vashti by the king. A whole week Mordecai had spent in fasting and praying, supplicating God to mete out punishment to Ahasuerus for his desecration of the Temple utensils. On the seventh day of the week, on the Sabbath, when Mordecai after his long fast took food, because fasting is forbidden on the Sabbath day, God heard his prayer and the prayer of the Sanhedrin.<sup>32</sup> He sent down seven Angels of Confusion to put an end to Ahasuerus’s pleasure. They were named: Mehuman, Confusion; Biztha, Destruction of the House; Harbonah, Annihilation; Bigtha and Abagtha, the Pressers of the Winepress, for God had resolved to crush the court of Ahasuerus as one presses the juice from grapes in a press; Zethar, Observer of Immorality; and Carcas, Knocker.<sup>33</sup>

There was a particular reason why this interruption of the feast took place on the Sabbath. Vashti was in the habit of forcing Jewish maidens to spin and weave on the Sabbath day, and to add to her cruelty, she would deprive them of all their clothes. It was on the Sabbath, therefore, that her punishment overtook her, and for the same reason it was put into the king’s heart to have her appear in public stripped of all clothing.<sup>34</sup>

Vashti recoiled from the king’s revolting order. But it must not be supposed that she shrank from carrying it out because it offended her moral sense. She was not a whit better than her husband. She fairly revelled in the opportunity his command gave her to indulge in carnal pleasures once again, for it was exactly a week since she had been delivered of a child. But God sent the angel Gabriel to her to disfigure her countenance. Suddenly signs of leprosy appeared on her forehead, and the marks of other diseases on her person.<sup>35</sup> In this state it was impossible for her to show herself to the king. She made a virtue of necessity, and worded her refusal to appear before him arrogantly: "Say to Ahasuerus: 'O thou fool and madman! Hast thou lost thy reason by too much drinking? I am Vashti, the daughter of Belshazzar, who was a son of Nebuchadnezzar, the Nebuchadnezzar who scoffed at kings and unto whom princes were a derision, and even thou wouldst not have been deemed worthy to run before my father's chariot as a courier. Had he lived, I should never have been given unto thee for wife. Not even those who suffered the death penalty during the reign of my forefather Nebuchadnezzar were stripped bare of their clothing, and thou demandest that I appear naked in public! Why, it is for thine own sake that I refuse to heed thy order. Either the people will decide that I do not come up to thy description of me, and will proclaim thee a liar, or, bewitched by my beauty, they will kill thee in order to gain possession of me, saying, Shall this fool be the master of so much beauty?' "<sup>36</sup>

The first lady of the Persian aristocracy encouraged Vashti to adhere to her resolution. "Better," her adviser said, when Ahasuerus's second summons was delivered to Vashti, together with his threat to kill her unless she obeyed, "better the king should kill thee and annihilate thy beauty, than that thy person should be admired by other eyes than thy husband's, and thus thy name be disgraced, and the name of thy ancestors."<sup>37</sup>

When Vashti refused to obey the repeated command to appear before the king and the hundred and twenty-seven crowned princes of the realm, Ahasuerus turned to the Jewish sages, and requested them to pass sentence upon his queen. Their thoughts ran in this wise: If we condemn the queen to death, we shall suffer for it as soon as Ahasuerus becomes sober, and hears it was at our advice that she was executed. But if we admonish him unto clemency now, while he is intoxicated, he will accuse us of not paying due deference to the majesty of the king. They therefore resolved upon neutrality. "Since the destruction of the Temple," they said to the king, "since we have not dwelt in our land, we have lost the power to give sage advice, particularly in matters of life and death. Better seek counsel with the wise men of Ammon and Moab, who have ever dwelt at ease in their land, like wine that hath settled on its lees, and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel."<sup>38</sup>

Thereupon Ahasuerus put his charge against Vashti before the seven princes of Persia, Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, who came from Africa, India, Edom, Tarsus, Mursa, Resen, and Jerusalem, respectively.<sup>39</sup> The names of these seven officials, each representing his country, were indicative of their office. Carshena had the care of the animals, Shethar of the wine, Admatha of the land, Tarshish of the palace, Meres of the poultry, Marsena of the bakery, and Memucan provided for the needs of all in the palace, his wife acting as housekeeper.<sup>40</sup>

This Memucan, a native of Jerusalem, was none other than Daniel, called Memucan, "the appointed one", because he was designated by God to perform miracles and bring about the death of Vashti.<sup>41</sup>

When the king applied for advice to these seven nobles, Memucan was the first to speak up, though in rank he was inferior to the other six, as appears from the place his name occupies in the list. However, it is customary, as well among Persians as among Jews, in passing death sentence, to begin taking the vote with the youngest of the judges on the bench, to prevent the juniors and the less prominent from being overawed by the opinion of the more influential.<sup>42</sup>

It was Memucan's advice to the king to make an example of Vashti, so that in future no woman should dare refuse obedience to her husband. Daniel-Memucan had had unpleasant experiences in his conjugal life. He had married a wealthy Persian lady, who insisted upon speaking to him in her own language exclusively.<sup>43</sup> Besides, personal antipathy existed between Daniel and Vashti. He had in a measure been the cause of her refusal to appear before the king and his princes. Vashti hated Daniel, because it was he who had prophesied his death to her father, and the extinction of his dynasty. She could not endure his sight, wherefore she would not show herself to the court in his presence.<sup>44</sup> Also, it was Daniel who, by pronouncing the Name of God, had caused the beauty of Vashti to vanish, and her face to be marred.<sup>45</sup> In consequence of all this, Daniel advised, not only that Vashti should be cast off, but that she should be made harmless forever by the hangman's hand. His advice was endorsed by his colleagues, and approved by the king. That the king might not delay the execution of the death sentence, and Daniel himself thus incur danger to his own life, he made Ahasuerus swear the most solemn oath known to the Persians, that it would be carried out forthwith. At the same time a royal edict was promulgated, making it the duty of wives to obey their husbands. With special reference to Daniel's domestic difficulties, it was specified that the wife must speak the language of her lord and master.<sup>46</sup>

The execution of Vashti brought most disastrous consequences in its train. His whole empire, which is tantamount to saying the whole world, rose against Ahasuerus. The widespread rebellion was put down only after his marriage with Esther, but not before it had inflicted upon him the loss of one hundred and twenty-seven provinces, the half of his kingdom. Such was his punishment for refusing permission to rebuild the Temple. It was only after the fall of Haman, when Mordecai had been made the chancellor of the empire, that Ahasuerus succeeded in reducing the revolted provinces to submission.<sup>47</sup>

The death of Vashti was not undeserved punishment, for it had been she who had prevented the king from giving his consent to the rebuilding of the Temple. "Wilt thou rebuild the Temple," said she, reproachfully, "which my ancestors destroyed?"<sup>48</sup>

---

31. Abba Gorion 13, 14–15; Panim Aherim 60–61; Esther R. introduction (end) and 1.9, 9, as well as 1.11–12; Tehillim 10, 96, and 17, 133; Megillah 12b; 1 and 2 Targum Esther 1.10 and 12 (in 1 Targum Esther Vashti is said to have been the daughter of Evil-merodach). As to the father of Ahasuerus, see note 4. The legend about Vashti's refusal to appear naked reminds one of the story told by Herodotus, I, 8, about Candaules and Gyges.

32. 1 Targum Esther 1.10. On the desecration of the holy vessels, refer also to footnote 28 on p. 1134.

33. Abba Gorion 14; Esther R., Targum, and Lekah on 1.10.

34. Megillah 12b; Targum and Esther R. on 1.10; Aggadat Esther 13 (bottom). Comp., on the other hand, 2 Targum Esther 2.2, which reads: She did not deserve capital punishment, but it was so decreed against her in heaven, in order that the offspring of Nebuchadnezzar should perish. A similar view is found in Panim Aherim 61; compare also p. 1137. Compare also footnote 56 on p. 1088.

35. Megillah 12b (בִּירוּשָׁלַיִם), in Rashi and Tosafot, ad loc., is an erroneous reading of the abbreviation ב"ש, i. e., בגזרה שוה; comp. ר"אב, No. 451, and Ginzberg's remarks on it in the Additions to Raschkes' edition of ר"אב; see also Rabinovicz on Megillah, loc. cit.; Astruc, 215, and Buber, Yerushalayim ha-Benuyah No. 51; Midrash Tan-naim 174; quotation from an unknown Midrash by Alkabez, 37a, and 42 (bottom). According to PRE 49, Ahasuerus followed the custom of the kings of Media, who had dancers appear before them at their carousals to entertain them. According to Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.1, Vashti refused to obey the king because the Persian law prohibited married women showing their faces to any man but their husband. On the favorable comments by the Rabbis on Vashti's refusal, refer to pp. 1135–1136, and p. 1167. The statement: "Venit Gabriel et fecit et membrum virile", is missing in many editions of Megillah, loc. cit.

36. Abba Gorion 15–16 (read, as in Panim Aherim, מוֹמִסִּים "mimus", an allusion to מִשְׁחָק); Panim Aherim 60–61; Esther R.; 1 and 2 Targum on 1.12; Megillah 12b. Comp. PRE 49. The statement that Nebuchadnezzar did not strip the convicts naked before their execution is based on Dan. 3.21.

37. 2 Targum Esther 1.12. Comp. note 35.

38. Megillah 12b; Esther R. 1.13. The Jewish sages before whom Ahasuerus put the case of Vashti belonged to the tribe of Issachar; Esther R., loc. cit., as well as Abba Gorion 15 and Targum Esther 1.13. Comp. also Megillah, loc. cit. (שידועין לעבר שנים), and Index, s. v. "Issachar, Tribe of".

39. Abba Gorion 16–17; 2 Panim Aherim 61; 2 Targum Esther 1.14. The text of none of these sources is quite correct; but it is certain that this Haggadah considers the seven men as representing the seven countries enumerated there. The names, however, of the fifth and sixth countries are corrupt.

40. Esther R. 1.14. Here as well as in Megillah 12b and Targum 1.14 the seven names of the king's counsellors are explained allegorically. Comp. the allegorical interpretations of the names mentioned in Esther 1.10 as given in text on pp. 1135–1136.

41. PRE 49; 2 Panim Aherim 61; 2 Targum Esther 1.16. Against the identification of Memucan with Daniel, refer also to text on pp. 1137–1139, and p. 1147, where the former is identified with Haman.

42. Yerushalmi Sanhedrin 4, 22b; Esther R. 1.16. These two sources also give another view, according to which, "among the nations" the taking of the vote begins with the most prominent member of the court. On the text of Esther R., see commentaries, ad loc., and Alkabez, 49b (bottom). The seven princes who sentenced Vashti to death were prominent in the affairs of state as early as the time of Belshazzar. They escaped the doom which overtook this king because they refused to participate in the desecration of the holy vessels; Esther R. 1.14. It is the unanimous opinion of the Haggadah that Vashti was killed; comp. Megillah 12b according to the correct reading in Aggadat Esther 13 (bottom); PRE 49; 2 Panim Aherim 61; Esther R., introduction (towards the end), and 1.21; Targum Esther 1.1 and 19; 2 Targum 2.1–2. Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.2, maintains that she did not lose her life.

43. 2 Targum Esther 1.16.

44. Midrash Teman 174.

45. Aggadat Esther 15 (bottom). Abba Gorion 17 and Esther R. 1.16 give other reasons for Memucan's hatred of Vashti. Compare also footnote 97 on p. 1147.

46. 2 Targum Esther 1.18–21.

47. Tehillim 22, 194. Compare also text on pp. 1176–1178. Ahasuerus is regarded as a "cosmocrator" not only in the Talmud (Megillah 11a, which says that the one hundred and twenty-seven provinces represent the entire world) and several Midrashim (as, e. g., Panim Aherim 56; 2 Targum Esther 1.1, 3; Aggadat Esther 8), but also in Septuagint Esther 3.13. Other Midrashim, however, maintain that he ruled only over half of the world. Comp. PRE 11; ShR 9.7; Esther R. 1.1, 5, and 2.13. In all these Midrashim it is stated that the diminution of Ahasuerus' power was his punishment for stopping the work of the Temple. According to 2 Targum Esther 4.1 (beginning; the text is obscure and very likely corrupt; read דאיתבניא instead of תבניא דא), the work of the Temple was stopped after its seventy-two towers had been completed. On the "cosmocrators", see note 13 (end); vol. I, pp. 177–178, and Index, s. v. The Haggadah draws attention to the correspondence between the number of the provinces over which Ahasuerus ruled and that of the years of Sarah, who lived one hundred and twenty-seven years. The reward for Sarah's pious deeds performed during these years was that her pious descendant Esther ruled over this number of provinces. See BR 58.3; Esther R. 1.1 (end); Tehillim and Panim Aherim, loc. cit.

48. Abba Gorion 17; 2 Panim Aherim 60; Esther R. 2.1; Targum Esther 1.1. Comp. note 34.

THE FOLLIES OF AHASUERUS

Ahasuerus is the prototype of the unstable, foolish ruler. He sacrificed his wife Vashti to his friend Haman-Memucan, and later on again his friend Haman to his wife Esther.<sup>49</sup> Folly possessed him, too, when he arranged extravagant festivities for guests from afar, before he had won, by means of kindly treatment, the friendship of his surroundings, of the inhabitants of his capital.<sup>50</sup> Ridiculous is the word that describes his edict bidding wives obey their husbands. Every one who read it exclaimed: "To be sure, a man is master in his own house!" However, the silly decree served its purpose. It revealed his true character to the subjects of Ahasuerus, and thenceforward they attached little importance to his edicts. This was the reason why the decree of annihilation directed against the Jews failed of the effect expected by Haman and Ahasuerus. The people regarded it as but another of the king's foolish pranks, and therefore were ready to acquiesce in the revocation of the edict when it came.<sup>51</sup>

The king's true character appeared when he grew sober after the episode with Vashti. Learning that he had had her executed, he burst out furiously against his seven counsellors, and in turn ordered them to death.<sup>52</sup>

Foolish, too, is the only word to describe the manner in which he set about discovering the most beautiful woman in his dominion. King David on a similar occasion wisely sent out messengers who were to bring to him the most beautiful maiden in the land, and there was none who was not eager to enjoy the honor of giving a daughter of his to the king. Ahasuerus's method was to have his servants gather together a multitude of beautiful maidens and women from all parts, and among them he proposed to make choice. The result of this system was that the women concealed themselves to avoid being taken into the harem of the king, when it was not certain that they would be found worthy of becoming his queen.<sup>53</sup>

With his stupidity Ahasuerus combined wantonness. He ordered force to be used in taking the maidens from their parents and the wives from their husbands, and then he confined them in his harem.<sup>54</sup> On the other hand, the moral sense of the heathen was so degraded that many maidens displayed their charms to public view, so that they might be sure to attract the admiring attention of the royal emissaries.

As for Esther, for four years Mordecai kept her concealed in a chamber, so that the king's scouts could not discover her. But her beauty had long been known to fame, and when they returned to Shushan, they had to confess to the king, that the most superbly beautiful woman in the land eluded their search. Thereupon Ahasuerus issued a decree ordaining the death penalty for the woman who should secrete herself before his emissaries. There was nothing left for Mordecai to do but fetch Esther from her hiding-place, and immediately she was espied and carried to the palace of the king.<sup>55</sup>

---

49. Abba Gorion 1; Esther R., introduction, 9. The identification of Memucan with Haman is also found in Megillah 12b and Targum Esther 1.16. Against this identification, comp. note 41. As to the characterization of Ahasuerus as a "fool", see also Esther R. 1.22; see pp. 1164–1165; notes 7 and 52.

50. Megillah 12a. This passage also gives another view to the effect that Ahasuerus thereby displayed political wisdom.

51. Megillah 12b.

52. Abba Gorion 17–18 (this was their punishment for having advised the king to stop the building of the Temple; comp. note 47); 2 Panim Aherim 61; Targum Esther 2.1. In these sources Memucan is identified neither with Daniel (see also pp. 1136–1137), nor with Haman (379). Septuagint has "Man" instead of Memucan.

53. Megillah 12b. The Persians despised the Jewish women, who had lost their beauty on account of their great sufferings (compare footnote 38 on p. 1135), and God therefore brought it about that among the multitudes of the Persian women not one was found worthy to become queen, and a despised Jewess was chosen by the king as his wife.

54. Panim Aherim 65. Comp. also Megillah 13a (towards the end).

55. 2 Panim Aherim 63–64; Aggadat Esther 20–21; 2 Targum Esther 2.8. As to the question why Esther did not suffer martyrdom rather than transgress the law that prohibits marriage with a Gentile, comp. Sanhedrin 74a; Aggadat Esther 11.9; 2 Targum Esther 2.8; note 80.

MORDECAI

The descent of Mordecai and of his niece Esther is disposed of in a few words in the Scripture. But he could trace it all the way back to the Patriarch Jacob, from whom he was forty-five degrees removed.<sup>56</sup> Beside the father of Mordecai, the only ancestor of his who is mentioned by name is Shimei, and he is mentioned for a specific reason. This Shimei is none other than the notorious son of Gera, the rebel who had so scoffed and mocked at David fleeing before Absalom that he would have been killed by Abishai, if David had not generously interfered in his favor. David's prophetic eye discerned in Shimei the ancestor of Israel's savior in the time of Ahasuerus. For this reason he dealt leniently with him, and on his death-bed he bade his son Solomon reserve vengeance until Shimei should have reached old age and could beget no more children. Thus Mordecai deserves both appellations, the Benjamite and the Judean, for he owed his existence not only to his actual Benjamite forebears on his father's side, but also to the Judean David, who kept his ancestor Shimei alive.<sup>57</sup>

Shimei's distinction as the ancestor of Israel's redeemer was due to the merits of his wife. When Jonathan and Ahimaaz, David's spies in his war against his son, fled before the myrmidons of Absalom, they found the gate of Shimei's house open. Entering, they concealed themselves in the well. That they escaped detection was due to the ruse of Shimei's pious wife. She quickly transformed the well into a lady's chamber. When Absalom's men came and looked about, they desisted from searching the place, because they reasoned, that men as saintly as Jonathan and Ahimaaz would not have taken refuge in the private apartment of a woman. God determined, that for having rescued two pious men He would reward her with two pious descendants, who should in turn avert the ruin of Israel.<sup>58</sup>

On his mother's side, Mordecai was, in very deed, a member of the tribe of Judah.<sup>59</sup> In any event, he was a son of Judah in the true sense of the word; he publicly acknowledged himself a Jew, and he refused to touch of the forbidden food which Ahasuerus set before his guests at his banquet.<sup>60</sup>

His other appellatives likewise point to his piety and his excellencies. His name Mordecai, for instance, consists of Mor, meaning "myrrh", and Decai, "pure", for he was as refined and noble as pure myrrh. Again, he is called Ben Jair, because he "illuminated the eyes of Israel"; and Ben Kish, because when he knocked at the gates of the Divine mercy, they were opened unto him, which is likewise the origin of his name Ben Shimei, for he was heard by God when he offered up prayer.<sup>61</sup> Still another of Mordecai's epithets was Bilshan, "master of languages". Being a member of the great Sanhedrin he understood all the seventy languages spoken in the world.<sup>62</sup> More than that, he knew the language of the deaf mutes. It once happened that no new grain could be obtained at Passover time. A deaf mute came and pointed with one hand to the roof and with the other to the cottage. Mordecai understood that these signs meant a locality by the name of Gagot-Zerifim, Cottage-Roofs, and, lo, new grain was found there for the 'Omer offering. On another occasion a deaf mute pointed with one hand to his eye and with the other to the staple of the bolt on the door. Mordecai understood that he meant a place called En-Soker, "dry well", for eye and spring are the same word, En, in Aramaic, and Sikra also has a double meaning, staple and exhaustion.<sup>63</sup>

Mordecai belonged to the highest aristocracy of Jerusalem,—he was of royal blood,—and he was deported to Babylonia together with King Jeconiah, by Nebuchadnezzar, who at that time exiled only the great of the land.<sup>64</sup> Later he returned to Palestine, but remained only for a time. He preferred to live in the Diaspora, and watch over the education of Esther. When Cyrus and Darius captured Babylon, Mordecai, Daniel, and the Jewish community of the conquered city accompanied King Cyrus to Shushan, where Mordecai established his academy.<sup>65</sup>

56. The genealogy of Mordecai up to Jacob is found in 2 Panim Aherim 62–63; Aggadat Esther 19; Targum Esther 7.1 and 2 Targum 2.5.

57. Megillah 13a (top); 2 Panim Aherim 62 and 63; Tosefta-Targum 1 Kings 2.36; 2 Targum Esther 2.5.

58. 2 Panim Aherim 82; Shemuel (end).

59. Megillah 12b (below).

60. PRE 50; Panim Aherim 62. Compare with pp. 1132 and p. 1159. On the other hand, Shir 7.8 is of the opinion that “most of the men of this generation” were pious. With regard to the designation of Mordecai as “Jew” (יהודי literally the “Judean”) in Esther 2.5, though he was a Benjamite, 2 Panim Aherim 82 and Esther R. 2.5 remark that this word characterizes one “as confessing one God” (יהודי = יְהוּדִי from יָהוּד “confessed the unity of God”); a similar explanation of the name “Jew” is also found in Constitutiones Apostolicae, 2.60. The Midrashim just cited say that Mordecai was like Abraham and Moses; like the former he was willing to suffer martyrdom for God, and like the latter he was ready to “stand before God in the breach” (Ps. 106.23) to save Israel.

61. Megillah 12b; 2 Panim Aherim 62; PRE 50; 1 and 2 Targum Esther 2.5.

62. 2 Panim Aherim 62; Menahot 65a. In Ezra 2.2, Bilshan is taken as an adjective (“master of tongues”, a contraction of בעל “master” and לשון “tongue” or “language”) of the preceding name Mordecai; another name of his was Pethahiah. As to Mordecai’s mastery of languages, see text on p. 1145.

63. Menahot 64b.

64. PRE 50. As a descendant of King Saul (comp. the sources cited in note 56) he is said to have been of royal blood. On the view that the aristocracy was exiled together with king Jeconiah, see also to pp. 1060–1061.

65. Megillah 13a; 2 Panim Aherim 63; 2 Targum Esther 2, 6 and 7; 1 Targum 1.6. According to Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.2, Mordecai moved to Shushan after Esther’s marriage to king Ahasuerus. The first passage of 2 Targum referred to above seems to be corrupt. It reads; Mordecai and Esther were deported into exile with Jeconiah. Mordecai returned with those who volunteered to go up and build the Temple anew, and Nebuchadnezzar deported him again. The source for this statement is 2 Panim Aherim, loc. cit. But there nothing is said about Mordecai’s going up to Jerusalem for the building of the Temple, as it had not been destroyed yet. The “two exiles” of Mordecai refer to his exile with Jeconiah and his second with Zedekiah. It seems fairly certain that the sentence ... וחזר תינינות is to be read after תרתין.

ESTHER’S BEAUTY AND PIETY

The birth of Esther caused the death of her mother. Her father had died a little while before, so she was entirely orphaned. Mordecai and his wife interested themselves in the poor babe. His wife became her nurse, and he himself did not hesitate, when there was need for it, to do services for the child that are usually performed only by women.<sup>66</sup>

Both her names, Esther as well as Hadasah, are descriptive of her virtues. Hadassah, or Myrtle, she is called, because her good deeds spread her fame abroad, as the sweet fragrance of the myrtle pervades the air in which it grows. In general, the myrtle is symbolic of the pious, because, as the myrtle is ever green, summer and winter alike, so the saints never suffer dishonor, either in this world or in the world to come. In another way Esther resembled the myrtle, which, in spite of its pleasant scent, has a bitter taste. Esther was pleasant to the Jews, but bitterness itself to Haman and all who belonged to him.

The name Esther is equally significant. In Hebrew it means “she who conceals”, a fitting name for the niece of Mordecai, the woman who well knew how to guard a secret, and long hid her descent and faith from the king and the court. She herself had been kept concealed for years in the house of her uncle, withdrawn from the searching eyes of the king’s spies. Above all she was the hidden light that suddenly shone upon Israel in his rayless darkness.

In build, Esther was neither tall nor short, she was exactly of average height, another reason for calling her Myrtle, a plant which likewise is neither large nor small. In point of fact, Esther was not a beauty in the real sense of the word. The beholder was bewitched by her grace and her charm, and that in spite of her somewhat sallow, myrtlelike complexion.<sup>67</sup> More than this, her enchanting grace was not the grace of youth, for she was seventy-five years old when she came to court, and captivated the hearts of all who saw her, from king to eunuch. This was in fulfilment of the prophecy which God made to Abraham when he was leaving the home of his father: "Thou art leaving the house of thy father at the age of seventy-five. As thou livest, the deliverer of thy children in Media also shall be seventy-five years old."

Another historical event pointed forward to Esther's achievement. When the Jews, after the destruction of Jerusalem, broke out into the wail, "We are orphans and fatherless," God said: "In very sooth, the redeemer whom I shall send unto you in Media shall also be an orphan, fatherless and motherless."<sup>68</sup>

Ahasuerus put Esther between two groups of beauties, Median beauties to right of her, and Persian beauties to left of her. Yet Esther's comeliness outshone them all.<sup>69</sup> Not even Joseph could vie with the Jewish queen in grace. Grace was suspended above him, but Esther was fairly laden down with it.<sup>70</sup> Whoever saw her, pronounced her the ideal of beauty of his nation. The general exclamation was: "This one is worthy of being queen."<sup>71</sup> In vain Ahasuerus had sought a wife for four years, in vain fathers had spent time and money bringing their daughters to him, in the hope that one or the other would appeal to his fancy. None among the maidens, none among the women, pleased Ahasuerus. But scarcely had he set eyes upon Esther when he thrilled with the feeling, that he had at last found what he had long yearned for.<sup>72</sup>

All these years the portrait of Vashti had hung in his chamber. He had not forgotten his rejected queen. But once he beheld Esther, Vashti's picture was replaced by hers.<sup>73</sup> Maiden grace and womanly charm were in her united.<sup>74</sup>

The change in her worldly position wrought no change in Esther's ways and manners. As she retained her beauty until old age, so the queen remained as pure in mind and soul as ever the simple maiden had been. All the other women who entered the gates of the royal palace made exaggerated demands, Esther's demeanor continued modest and unassuming. The others insisted that the seven girl pages assigned to them should have certain peculiar qualities, as, that they should not differ, each from her mistress, in complexion and height. Esther uttered no wish whatsoever.

But her unpretending ways were far from pleasing to Hegai, chief of the eunuchs of the harem. He feared lest the king discover that Esther did nothing to preserve her beauty, and would put the blame for it upon him, an accusation that might bring him to the gallows. To avoid such a fate, he loaded Esther down with resplendent jewels, distinguishing her beyond all the other women gathered in the palace, as Joseph, by means of costly gifts lavished upon him, had singled out her ancestor Benjamin from among his brethren.

Hegai paid particular attention to what Esther ate. For her he brought dishes from the royal table, which, however, she refused obstinately to touch. Only such things passed her lips as were permitted to Jews. She lived entirely on vegetable food, as Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah had aforetimes done at the court of Nebuchadnezzar.<sup>75</sup> The forbidden tidbits she passed over to the non-Jewish servants.<sup>76</sup> Her personal attendants were seven Jewish maidens as consistently pious as herself, whose devotion to the ritual law Esther could depend upon.

Otherwise Esther was cut off from all intercourse with Jews, and she was in danger of forgetting when the Sabbath came around. She therefore adopted the device of giving her seven attendants peculiar names, to keep her in mind of the passage of time. The first one was called Hulta, "Workaday", and she was in attendance upon Esther on Sundays. On Mondays, she was served by Rok'ita, to remind her of Rek'ia, "the Firmament", which was created on the second day of the world. Tuesday's maid was called Genunita, "Garden", the third day of creation having produced the world of plants. On Wednesday, she was reminded by Nehorita's name, "the Luminous", that it was the day on which God had made the great luminaries, to shed their light in the sky; on Thursday by Ruḥshita, "Movement", for on the fifth day the first animated beings were created; on Friday, the day on which the beasts came into being, by Ḥurfita, "little Ewelamb"; and on the Sabbath her bidding was done by Rego'ita, "Rest". Thus she was sure to remember the Sabbath day week after week.<sup>77</sup>

Mordecai's daily visits to the gate of the palace had a similar purpose. Thus Esther was afforded the opportunity of obtaining instruction from him on all ritual doubts that might assail her.<sup>78</sup> This lively interest displayed by Mordecai in Esther's physical and spiritual welfare is not wholly attributable to an uncle's and guardian's solicitude in behalf of an orphaned niece. A much closer bond, the bond between husband and wife, united them, for when Esther had grown to maidenhood, Mordecai had espoused her.<sup>79</sup> Naturally, Esther would have been ready to defend her conjugal honor with her life. She would gladly have suffered death at the hands of the king's bailiffs rather than yield herself to a man not her husband. Luckily, there was no need for this sacrifice, for her marriage with Ahasuerus was but a feigned union. God had sent down a female spirit in the guise of Esther to take her place with the king. Esther herself never lived with Ahasuerus as his wife.<sup>80</sup>

At the advice of her uncle, Esther kept her descent and her faith a secret. Mordecai's injunction was dictated by several motives. First of all it was his modesty that suggested secrecy. He thought the king, if he heard from Esther that she had been raised by him, might offer to install him in some high office. In point of fact, Mordecai was right in his conjecture; Ahasuerus had pledged himself to make lords, princes, and kings of Esther's friends and kinspeople, if she would but name them.

Another reason for keeping Esther's Jewish affiliations a secret was Mordecai's apprehension, that the fate of Vashti overtake Esther, too. If such were in store for her, he desired at least to guard against the Jews' becoming her fellow-sufferers. Besides, Mordecai knew only too well the inimical feelings entertained by the heathen toward the Jews, ever since their exile from the Holy Land, and he feared that the Jew-haters, to gratify their hostility against the Jews, might bring about the ruin of Esther and her house.<sup>81</sup>

Mindful of the perils to which Esther was exposed, Mordecai allowed no day to pass without assuring himself of her well-being. His compensation therefore came from God: "Thou makest the well-being of a single soul thy intimate concern. As thou livest, the well-being and good of thy whole nation Israel shall be entrusted to thee as thy task."<sup>82</sup> And to reward him for his modesty, God said: "Thou withdrawest thyself from greatness; as thou livest, I will honor thee more than all men on earth."<sup>83</sup>

Vain were the efforts made by Ahasuerus to draw her secret from Esther. He arranged great festivities for the purpose, but she guarded it well. She had an answer ready for his most insistent questions: "I know neither my people nor my family, for I lost my parents in my earliest infancy." But as the king desired greatly to show himself gracious to the nation to which the queen belonged, he released all the peoples under his dominion from the payment of taxes and imposts. In this way, he thought, her nation was bound to be benefited.<sup>84</sup>

When the king saw that kindness and generosity left her untouched, he sought to wrest the secret from her by threats. Once when she parried his inquiries in the customary way, saying, "I am an orphan, and God, the Father of the fatherless, in His mercy, has brought me up,” he retorted: “I shall gather virgins together the second time.” His purpose was to provoke the jealousy of Esther, “for a woman is jealous of nothing so much as of a rival.”

When Mordecai noticed that women were being brought to court anew, he was overcome by anxiety for his niece. Thinking that the fate of Vashti might have befallen her, he was impelled to make inquiries about her.<sup>85</sup>

As for Esther herself, she was but following the example of her race. She could keep silent in all modesty, as Rachel, the mother of Benjamin, had kept a modest silence when her father gave her sister Leah to Jacob for wife instead of herself, and as Saul the Benjamite was modestly reserved when, questioned by his uncle, he told about the finding of his she-asses, but nothing about his elevation to the kingship. Rachel and Saul were recompensed for their self-abnegation by being given a descendant like Esther.<sup>86</sup>

---

66. Tehillim 22, 192–193; Megillah 13a; Targum Esther and Esther R. 2.7. A miracle was performed for him, and his breasts supplied milk for the babe Esther. On the milk found in the breast of men, see Preuss, Biblisch-talmudische Medizin, 476.

67. Megillah 13a; Panim Aherim 63; Esther R., 1 and 2 Targum on 2.7; Tehillim 22, 181. Opinions differ as to whether Esther was her real name and Hadassah her attribute, or vice versa; comp. note 1.

68. Megillah 13a; BR 39.13 (here also two other views are given concerning her age; forty years, as well as eighty, are mentioned); Abba Gorion 18; Panim Aherim 63; Ekah 5, 155; Esther R. 2.7. As a punishment because Saul took away Michal from David by violence, his descendant Esther was taken by force to Ahasuerus and as a reward for his pious act toward his father Noah, Japheth's descendant, Ahasuerus (the Persians are descended from Japheth) was found worthy to marry the virtuous Esther, the descendant of Shem. See Hasidim 397.

69. Abba Gorion 18; Esther R. 2.9 and 15; Aggadat Esther 23.

70. Megillah 13a; Abba Gorion 18; 2 Panim Aherim 64. The last passage adds: All the ladies of the court vied with one another in offering their services to Esther, as they knew that she would be queen. Comp. also Esther R. 2.15, which reads: The celestials as well as the terrestrials loved her.

71. Megillah 7a and 13a; Aggadat Esther 23.

72. Aggadat Esther 21. Compare with pp. 1138–1139.

73. Abba Gorion 19; Panim Aherim 65; Esther R. 2.17.

74. Megillah 13a; comp. also Yoma 29a, which reads: Ahasuerus continued to love Esther all her life as much as on the day he married her.

75. 2 Panim Aherim 63 and 64; 2 Targum Esther 2.7. That Esther did not partake of forbidden food is stated also in the Additions to Esther (Prayer of Esther); Megillah 13a and PRE 50.

76. 2 Targum Esther 2.9. Some authorities, however, are of the opinion that the maidens waiting upon Esther were Jewesses. Comp. the quotation from an unknown Midrash by Alkabez, 72a, and the following note.

77. Targum Esther 2.9. Genunita, “garden”, is perhaps an allusion to paradise, which was fashioned on the third day of creation; compare with p. 18. According to Alkabez, 71b, Hurfita is to be translated by “haste” (from חרף “he sped”), and is an allusion to Friday, because on that day the people hasten to prepare for the Sabbath; comp. Baba Kamma 32a. See also Megillah 13a.

78. Esther R. 2.11; PRE 51. Comp. also Septuagint 2.20. According to some authorities the purpose of Mordecai's daily visits was to prevent witchcraft from being used against her; Esther R., loc. cit., and comp. Tehillim 22, 194, which reads: By means of witchcraft her enemies caused her to become ugly, but a miracle happened and she regained her former beauty. This is said to have happened when Esther sought to see the king in behalf of the Jews. Compare also with p. 1167.

79. Megillah 13a; Septuagint Esther 2.7.

80. Zohar III, 275b–276b; Tikkune Zohar 20. The old sources do not know of this docetism, and maintain that the last Darius was the offspring of Ahasuerus' marriage with Esther. Comp. Sanhedrin 74a (Zohar, loc. cit., obviously polemizes against this statement of the Talmud); WR 5.13. Comp. notes 5 and 55.

81. 2 Panim Aherim 64; 2 Targum Esther 2.10.

82. Esther R. 2.11.

83. 2 Panim Aherim 64.

84. 2 Targum Esther 2.18. Comp. also Megillah 13a and Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.2.

85. 2 Panim Aherim 65; 2 Targum Esther 2.19. Against this, see Megillah 13a (towards the end), where it is said that it was Mordecai who advised the king to “gather virgins together for a second time,” so that Esther might be provoked to jealousy.

86. Megillah 13a–13b; Esther R. 2.20. Compare with pp. 283–284, with p. 1080.

THE CONSPIRACY

Once the following conversation took place between Ahasuerus and Esther. The king asked Esther: "Whose daughter art thou?"

Esther: "And whose son art thou?"

Ahasuerus: "I am a king, and the son of a king."

Esther: "And I am a queen, the daughter of kings, a descendant of the royal family of Saul. If thou art, indeed, a real prince, how couldst thou put Vashti to death?"

Ahasuerus: "It was not to gratify my own wish, but at the advice of the great princes of Persia and Media."

Esther: "Thy predecessors took no advice from ordinary intelligences; they were guided by prophetic counsel. Arioch brought Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and Belshazzar, too, summoned Daniel before him."

Ahasuerus: "Is there aught left of those toothsome morsels? Are there still prophets abroad?"

Esther: "Seek and thou wilt find."<sup>87</sup>

The result was that Mordecai was given the position at court once occupied by the chamberlains Bigthan and Teresh. Indignant that a place once filled by senators should be given to a barbarian, the ousted officials resolved to be revenged upon the king and take his life. Their purpose was to administer poison, which seemed easy of accomplishment, as they were the royal butlers, and could find many occasions to drop poison into a cup of water before handing it to the king. The plan successfully carried out would have satisfied their vengeful feelings, not only as to the king, but as to Mordecai as well. It would have made it appear that the death of Ahasuerus was attributable to the circumstance, that he had entrusted his person to the care of the Jew, as his life had been secure under Bigthan and Teresh. They discussed their plans in the presence of Mordecai, acting upon the unwarranted assumption, that he would not understand the language they spoke, the Tarsian, their native tongue. They were ignorant of the fact, that Mordecai was a member of the Sanhedrin, and as such knew all the seventy languages of the world. Thus their own tongue betrayed them to ruin.

However, Mordecai had no need to make use of his great knowledge of languages; he obtained his information about the plot of the two chamberlains through prophetic channels. Accordingly, he appeared one night in the palace. By a miracle the guards at the gates had not seen him, and he could enter unrestrained. Thus he overheard the conversation between the two conspirators.

Mordecai had more than a single reason for preventing the death of Ahasuerus. In the first place, he desired to secure the king's friendship for the Jews, and more especially his permission for the rebuilding of the Temple. Then he feared, if the king were murdered immediately after his rise to a high place in the state, the heathen would assign as the cause of the disaster his connection with the Jews—his marriage with Esther and the appointment of Mordecai to office.

Esther's confidence in Mordecai's piety was so great that she unhesitatingly gave credence to the message she received from him concerning the mischievous plot hatched against the king. She believed that God would execute the wishes of Mordecai. Albeit Bigthan and Teresh had no plans of the sort attributed to them by her uncle, they would conceive them now in order to make Mordecai's words true. That Esther's confidence was justified appeared at once. The conspirators got wind of their betrayal to the king, and in good time they removed the poison they had already placed in Ahasuerus's cup. But that the lie might not be given to Mordecai, God caused poison to appear where none had been, and the conspirators were convicted of their crime.<sup>88</sup>

The king had the water analyzed which he was given to drink, and it was made manifest that it contained poison.<sup>89</sup> Other evidence besides existed against the two plotters. It was established that both had at the same time busied themselves about the person of the king, though the regulations of the palace assigned definite hours of service to the one different from those assigned to the other. This made it clear that they intended to perpetrate a dark deed in common.<sup>90</sup>

The two conspirators sought to escape the legitimate punishment for their dastardly deed by ending their own life. But their intention was frustrated, and they were nailed to the cross.<sup>91</sup>

---

87. Abba Gorion 19; Panim Aherim 65. On the descent of Mordecai and Esther from Saul, comp. notes 56 and 64. See also the following note.

88. 2 Panim Aherim 65–66; Abba Gorion 20; PRE 50; 1 and 2 Targum Esther 2.21; Megillah 13b (the duties of the chamberlains became more burdensome since the king married Esther; for sexual intercourse causes thirst, and the king's demand for drinks disturbed the chamberlains in their night's rest. That is why they attempted to get rid of the king. Comp. Rashi ad. loc., and Alkabez, 83a); Esther R. 2.21. See also Septuagint 2.21, which reads: And...the chiefs of the body-guard were grieved because Mordecai was promoted, and they sought to kill the king. On the miraculous "opening of locked doors" (which enabled Mordecai to surprise the conspirators), see Acts 5.19, 23. This kind of miracle is very often found in Christian legends. Comp. Günter, Christliche Legende, index, s. v. "Türe öffnet sich". It is also known to Jewish sources; comp. Kallah 1, 6a; Ginzberg, Geonica, I, 28; and also p. 518. According to Josephus, XI, 6.4, a Jewish servant of the conspirators, by the name of Barnabazus, betrayed his masters to Mordecai. Josippon 4 and later sources (as, e. g., Yerahmeel 79, 236) assume that the conspirators were relatives of Haman's (thus explaining the latter's hatred for Mordecai), and that the motive of the conspiracy was a political one. At that time Ahasuerus was engaged in a war with the king of Macedonia (or Greece), and the two conspirators attempted to come to the aid of the Greeks by assassinating the king of the Persians. Comp. the Additions to Esther, Addition A (end), which reads: And Haman sought to bring evil upon Mordecai...because of the two eunuchs of the king. In Addition E (Decree of Ahasuerus) Haman is described as a Macedonian, and hence the statement in Josippon that his kinsmen attempted to aid the Macedonians. The statement about the war between Greece and Persia is perhaps based upon an erroneous interpretation of the "two dragons" in the Dream of Mordecai. As to Mordecai's reasons for preventing the assassination of Ahasuerus, see also BR 39.12.

89. PRE 50. Sammael removed the poison from the cup, so that Mordecai's accusation should prove false, but Gabriel put it back where it was, and the conspiracy was exposed. See Alkabez, 88a, quoting from the Commentary on Esther (in MS.) by R. Eleazar of Worms. Comp. a similar legend about Sammael and Gabriel in Sotah 10b, and footnote 89 on p. 345. The midrashic basis in Sotah is מוֹצֵא (Gen. 28.28), and in Alkabez וִימָצֵא (Esther 2.23).

90. Megillah 13b. Rashi, ad. loc., takes מִשְׁמֶרֶת to mean "office", and accordingly the two conspirators are said to have held different offices.

91. 2 Panim Aherim 66, where לַחֲנוּקָה is to be read instead of לַחֲנוּקָה, as it is the unanimous opinion of the Haggadah that they attempted to poison Ahasuerus, and not to strangle him; comp. the references given in note 88.

HAMAN THE JEW-BAITER

The conspiracy of Bigthan and Teresh determined the king never again to have two chamberlains guard his person. Henceforward he would entrust his safety to a single individual, and he appointed Haman to the place. This was an act of ingratitude toward Mordecai, who, as the king's savior, had the most cogent claims upon the post.<sup>92</sup> But Haman possessed one important advantage, he was the owner of great wealth. With the exception of Korah he was the richest man that had ever lived, for he had appropriated to himself the treasures of the Judean kings and of the Temple.<sup>93</sup>

Ahasuerus had an additional reason for distinguishing Haman. He was well aware of Mordecai's ardent desire to see the Temple restored, and he instinctively felt he could not deny the wish of the man who had snatched him from untimely death. Yet he was not prepared to grant it. To escape from the dilemma he endeavored to make Haman act as a counterpoise against Mordecai, that “what the one built up, the other might pull down.”<sup>94</sup>

Ahasuerus had long been acquainted with Haman’s feeling against the Jews. When the quarrel about the rebuilding of the Temple broke out between the Jews and their heathen adversaries, and the sons of Haman denounced the Jews before Ahasuerus, the two parties at odds agreed to send each a representative to the king, to advocate his case. Mordecai was appointed the Jewish delegate, and no more rabid Jew-hater could be found than Haman, to plead the cause of the antagonists of the Temple builders.<sup>95</sup>

As for his character, that, too, King Ahasuerus had had occasion to see in its true light, because Haman is but another name for Memucan, the prince who is chargeable in the last resort with the death of Vashti. At the time of the king’s wrath against the queen, Memucan was still lowest in rank among the seven princes of Persia, yet, arrogant as he was, he was the first to speak up when the king put his question about the punishment due to Vashti—an illustration of the popular adage: “The common man rushes to the front.”<sup>96</sup> Haman’s hostility toward Vashti dated from her banquet, to which the queen had failed to bid his wife as guest. Moreover, she had once insulted him by striking him a blow in the face. Besides, Haman calculated, if only Vashti’s repudiation could be brought about, he might succeed in marrying his own daughter to the king.<sup>97</sup> He was not the only disappointed man at court. In part the conspiracy of Bigthan and Teresh was a measure of revenge against Ahasuerus for having made choice of Esther instead of a kinswoman of theirs.<sup>98</sup>

Esther once married to the king, however, Haman made the best of a bad bargain. He tried by every means in his power to win the friendship of the queen. Whether she was Jewess or heathen, he desired to claim kinship with her—as a Jewess through the fraternal bond between Esau and Jacob, as a heathen easily enough, “for all the heathen are akin to one another.”<sup>99</sup>

92. Aggadat Esther 26. The proverb found there, “Cursed are the wicked who never do a good deed completely”, is taken from BR 89.7. Compare with p. 364.

93. PRE 50; Panim Aherim 46; Esther R. 3.1. An unknown Midrash quoted by Alkabez, 153b, maintains that Haman found one of the treasures buried by Joseph; compare with p. 798. There are different versions of Haman’s genealogy, showing his descent from Amalek the son of Eliphaz by his concubine; comp. Targum Esther 5.1; 2 Targum 3.1; Aggadat Esther 26–27; Soferim 13.23. Only few of the names in Haman’s genealogy are found in the Bible, the majority are the names of the oppressors and enemies of the Jews in the Roman period. Pilatus (אפליטוס), Herod, Nero (נירן), are easily recognized, but it is difficult to restore all the names, as some of them are badly corrupted. With regard to Haman’s descendants it is stated that “some of them taught the Torah in Bene Berak”; comp. Gittin 57b; Sanhedrin 96b. It is well known that R. Akiba had his academy in Bene Berak (comp., e. g., Sanhedrin 32b), and as the legend which makes him a descendant of proselytes might perhaps have been known to the Talmud (comp. Ginzberg, Jewish Encyclopedia, I, 304), it is quite possible that Haman’s descendant teaching at Bene Berak is none other than this great Tanna. As the name Haman remained in use among the Persians as late as the third century (comp. ‘Erubin 63b; see Variae Lectiones, ad loc.), there is no reason to doubt the statement that one of R. Akiba’s ancestors was called Haman, though not necessarily identical with the bearer of this name in the Bible. Compare with p. 869, footnote 72. The description of Haman as the son of Hammedatha (Esther 3.1) is not to be taken literally, as Hammedatha is only used to describe him as the arch-enemy of the Jews. See Yerushalmi Yebamot 2, 4a; Aggadat Esther 26. It is, however, difficult to tell by what principle of exegesis the Rabbis make המדתא to convey this meaning. Did they think of הם “confounded” and דתא “religion”? The name of Haman’s mother was Emtelai, the same as that of Abraham’s (compare with p. 167), and his maternal grandfather was called Urbeti (עורבתי), i. e. “of the ravens”. On the view that Haman was a Macedonian, see note 88.

94. Abba Gorion 21. This passage also gives several reasons why “Haman was elevated before his fall”, one of which is that God made him very rich so that Mordecai might later make use of Haman’s treasures for the building of the Temple. Comp. the following note.

95. Aggadat Esther 55. Of Haman's sons, his assistants in his Jew-baiting, special mention is made of Shimshai, who occurs also in Ezra 4.8 as denouncing the Jews before the king; 2 Panim Aherim 55 and 66. On Shimshai, see also Megillah 16a and Esther R., introduction, 3. Comp. also note 168. On Haman as an opponent to the building of the Temple, see Abba Gorion 20; Esther R. 3.1; note 105. In the last-named passage it is said that God elevated Haman before his fall in order that people should know thereby how severe is the punishment of those who attempt to obstruct the building of the Temple. Comp. Ratner's note 20 on Seder 'Olam 29.

96. Megillah 12b; Targum Esther 1.16. Compare with p. 1138.

97. Abba Gorion 17; Esther R. 1.16. These sources do not state explicitly the identity of Memucan with Haman, but they seem to presuppose it. Comp., however, note 52.

98. Lekah 2.32 (very likely quoting an old source).

99. Abba Gorion 21; Esther R. 3.1.

MORDECAI'S PRIDE

When Ahasuerus raised Haman to his high office, he at the same time issued the order, that all who saw him were to prostrate themselves before him and pay him Divine honors. To make it manifest that the homage due to him had an idolatrous character, Haman had the image of an idol fastened to his clothes, so that whoever bowed down before him, worshipped an idol at the same time.<sup>100</sup> Mordecai alone of all at court refused to obey the royal order. The highest officials, even the most exalted judges, showed Haman the reverence bidden by the king. The Jews themselves entreated Mordecai not to call forth the fury of Haman, and cause the ruin of Israel thereby. Mordecai, however, remained steadfast; no persuasions could move him to pay to a mortal the tribute due to Divinity.<sup>101</sup>

Also the servants of the king who sat at the gate of the royal palace said to Mordecai: "Wherein art thou better than we, that we should pay reverence to Haman and prostrate ourselves, and thou doest naught of all commanded us in the matter?" Mordecai answered, saying: "O ye fools without understanding! Hear ye my words and make meet reply thereunto. Who is man that he should act proudly and arrogantly—man born of woman and few of days? At his birth there is weeping and travailing, in his youth pain and groans, all his days are 'full of trouble', and in the end he returns unto dust. Before such an one I should prostrate myself? I bend the knee before God alone, the only living One in heaven, He who is the fire consuming all other fires; who holds the earth in His arms; who stretches out the heavens in His might; who darkens the sun when it pleases Him, and illumines the darkness; who commanded the sand to set bounds unto the seas; who made the waters of the sea salt, and caused its waves to spread an aroma as of wine; who chained the sea as with manacles, and held it fast in the depths of the abyss that it might not overflow the land; it rages, yet it cannot pass its limits. With His word He created the firmament, which He stretched out like a cloud in the air; He cast it over the world like a dark vault, like a tent it is spread over the earth. In His strength He upholds all there is above and below. The sun, the moon, and the Pleiades run before Him, the stars and the planets are not idle for a single moment; they rest not, they speed before Him as His messengers, going to the right and to the left, to do the will of Him who created them. To Him praise is due, before Him we must prostrate ourselves."

The court officials spake and said: "Yet we know well that thy ancestor Jacob prostrated himself before Haman's ancestor Esau!"

Whereunto Mordecai made reply: "I am a descendant of Benjamin, who was not yet born when his father Jacob and his brothers cast themselves upon the earth before Esau. My ancestor never showed such honor to a mortal. Therefore was Benjamin's allotment of land in Palestine privileged to contain the Temple. The spot whereon Israel and all the peoples of the earth prostrated themselves before God belonged to him who had never prostrated himself before mortal man. Therefore I will not bend my knee before this sinner Haman, nor cast myself to earth before him.”<sup>102</sup>

Haman at first tried to propitiate Mordecai by a show of modesty. As though he had not noticed the behavior of Mordecai, he approached him, and saluted him with the words: “Peace be with thee, my lord!” But Mordecai bluntly replied: “There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked.”<sup>103</sup>

The hatred of Mordecai cherished by Haman was due to more than the hereditary enmity between the descendants of Saul and Agag.<sup>104</sup> Not even Mordecai’s public refusal to pay the homage due to Haman suffices to explain its virulence. Mordecai was aware of a certain incident in the past of Haman. If he had divulged it, the betrayal would have been most painful to the latter. This accounts for the intensity of his feeling.

It once happened that a city in India rebelled against Ahasuerus. In great haste troops were dispatched thither under the command of Mordecai and Haman. It was estimated that the campaign would require three years, and all preparations were made accordingly. By the end of the first year Haman had squandered the provisions laid in to supply the part of the army commanded by him, for the whole term of the campaign. Greatly embarrassed, he requested Mordecai to give him aid. Mordecai, however, refused him succor; they both had been granted the same amount of provisions for an equal number of men. Haman then offered to borrow from Mordecai and pay him interest. This, too, Mordecai refused to do, and for two reasons. If Mordecai had supplied Haman’s men with provisions, his own would have had to suffer, and as for interest, the law prohibits it, saying, “Unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury,” and Jacob and Esau, the respective ancestors of Mordecai and Haman, had been brothers.

When starvation stared them in the face, the troops commanded by Haman threatened him with death unless he gave them their rations. Haman again resorted to Mordecai, and promised to pay him as much as ten per cent interest. The Jewish general continued to refuse the offer. But he professed himself willing to help him out of his embarrassment on one condition, that Haman sell himself to Mordecai as his slave. Driven into a corner, he acquiesced, and the contract was written upon Mordecai’s knee-cap, because there was no paper to be found in the camp.

The bill of sale ran thus: “I, Haman, son of Hammedatha of the family of Agag, was sent out by King Ahasuerus to make war upon an Indian city, with an army of sixty thousand soldiers, furnished with the necessary provisions. Precisely the same commission was given by the king to Mordecai, the son of Shimei of the tribe of Benjamin. But I squandered the provisions entrusted to me by the king, so that I had no rations to give to my troops. I desired to borrow from Mordecai on interest, but, having regard to the fact that Jacob and Esau were brothers, he refused to lend me upon usury, and I was forced to sell myself as slave to him. If, now, I should at any time decline to serve him as a slave, or deny that I am his slave, or if my children and children’s children unto the end of all time should refuse to do him service, if only a single day of the week; or if I should act inimically toward him on account of this contract, as Esau did toward Jacob after selling him his birthright; in all these cases, a beam of wood is to be plucked out of the house of the recalcitrant, and he is to be hanged upon it. I, Haman, the son of Hammedatha of the family of Agag, being under no re- straint, do hereby consent with my own will, and bind myself to be slave in perpetuity to Mordecai, in accordance with the contents of this document."

Later, when Haman attained to high rank in the state, Mordecai, whenever he met him, was in the habit of stretching out his knee toward him, so that he might see the bill of sale. This so enraged him against Mordecai and against the Jews that he resolved to extirpate the Jewish people.<sup>105</sup>

---

100. PRE 50; Abba Gorion 22; Panim Aherim 46; Esther R. 2.5 and 3.1–2; Targum 3.2; Sanhedrin 61b (the king's command was to pay divine honors to Haman); Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.5 and 8; Additions to Esther (Prayer of Mordecai 7); comp. note 102.

101. 2 Panim Aherim 66

102. 2 Targum 3.4. This source obviously does not think that Haman asked for divine honors (comp. the references in the preceding note), and had not Mordecai been a Benjamite he might have paid homage to Haman. Comp., however, Abba Gorion 22; Panim Aherim 66; Esther R. 3.5 (where it is said that Mordecai cited the example of his ancestor Benjamin, though according to these sources Haman demanded divine honors, and the reference to Benjamin is therefore out of place, if we should not assume that it belonged to another source = Targum). On the reason why the Temple was built in the territory allotted to the tribe of Benjamin, see footnote 926 on p. 822.

103. 2 Panim Aherim 66–67; Abba Gorion 23; Aggadot Esther 29.

104. Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.5; Panim Aherim 46. In Targum Esther 3.6, the hereditary enmity is traced further back to that between Jacob the ancestor of Mordecai and Esau the ancestor of the Amalekite Haman. Comp. PRE 50.

105. Targum Esther as quoted by Alkabez, 155a–155b, and in abridged form in the MSS. of the Talmud, Megillah 15a–15b, where the printed texts are very abrupt. A somewhat different version of this legend is found in Aggadot Esther 55. According to this text, the incident of Haman's selling himself as a slave to Mordecai took place when they both journeyed from Jerusalem to Shushan to appear before the king in connection with the rebuilding of the Temple (compare with p. 1146). The bill of sale was written on Mordecai's sandal and not on his knee-cap. Compare with p. 1168.

CASTING THE LOTS

Haman's hatred, first directed against Mordecai alone, grew apace until it included Mordecai's colleagues, all the scholars, whom he sought to destroy, and not satisfied with even this, he plotted the annihilation of the whole of Mordecai's people, the Jews.<sup>106</sup>

Before beginning to lay out his plans, he desired to determine the most favorable moment for his undertaking, which he did by casting lots.

First of all he wanted to decide on the day of the week. The scribe Shimshai began to cast lots. Sunday appeared inappropriate, being the day on which God created heaven and earth, whose continuance depends on Israel's existence. Were it not for God's covenant with Israel, there would be neither day nor night, neither heaven nor earth. Monday showed itself equally unpropitious for Haman's devices, for it was the day on which God effected the separation between the celestial and the terrestrial waters, symbolic of the separation between Israel and the heathen. Tuesday, the day on which the vegetable world was created, refused to give its aid in bringing about the ruin of Israel, who worships God with branches of palm trees. Wednesday, too, protested against the annihilation of Israel, saying: "On me the celestial luminaries were created, and like unto them Israel is appointed to illumine the whole world. First destroy me, and then Thou mayest destroy Israel." Thursday said: "O Lord, on me the birds were created, which are used for sin offerings. When Israel shall be no more, who will bring offerings? First destroy me, and then Thou mayest destroy Israel." Friday was unfavorable to Haman's lots, because it was the day of the creation of man, and the Lord God said to Israel, "Ye are men." Least of all was the Sabbath day inclined to make itself subservient to Haman's wicked plans. It said: "The Sabbath is a sign between Israel and God. First destroy me, and then Thou mayest destroy Israel!"<sup>107</sup>

Baffled, Haman gave up all idea of settling upon a favorable day of the week. He applied himself to the task of searching out the suitable month for his sinister undertaking. As it appeared to him, Adar was the only one of the twelve owning naught that might be interpreted in favor of the Jews. The rest of them seemed to be enlisted on their side. In Nisan Israel was redeemed from Egypt; in Iyar Amalek was overcome; in Siwan the Ethiopian Zerah was smitten in the war with Asa; in Tammuz the Amorite kings were subjugated; in Ab the Jews won a victory over Arad, the Canaanite; in Elul Gideon overcame the Midianites and Amalekites; in Tishri the Jewish kingdom was firmly established by the dedication of Solomon's Temple, while in Heshwan the building of the Temple at Jerusalem was completed; Kislew and Tebet were the months during which Sihon and Og were conquered by the Israelites, and in Shebat occurred the sanguinary campaign of the eleven tribes against the godless children of Benjamin. Not alone was Adar a month without favorable significance in Jewish history, but actually a month of misfortune, the month in which Moses died. What Haman did not know was, that Adar was the month in which occurred also the birth of Moses.<sup>108</sup>

Then Haman investigated the twelve signs of the zodiac in relation to Israel, and again it appeared that Adar was the most unfavorable month for the Jews. The first constellation, the Ram, said to Haman, " 'Israel is a scattered sheep,' and how canst thou expect a father to offer his son for slaughter?"

The Bull said: "Israel's ancestor was 'the firstling bullock.' "

The Twins: "As we are twins, so Tamar bore twins to Judah."

The Crab: "As I am called Saratan, the scratcher, so it is said of Israel, 'All that oppress him, he shall scratch sorely.' "

The Lion: "God is called the lion, and is it likely the lion will permit the fox to bite his children?"

The Virgin: "As I am a virgin, so Israel is compared unto a virgin."

The Balance: "Israel obeys the law against unjust balances in the Torah, and must therefore be protected by the Balance."

The Scorpion: "Israel is like unto me, for he, too, is called scorpion."

The Archer: "The sons of Judah are masters of the bow, and the bows of mighty men directed against them will be broken."

The Goat: "It was a goat that brought blessing unto Jacob, the ancestor of Israel, and it stands to reason that the blessing of the ancestor cannot cause misfortune to the descendant."

The Water-bearer: "His dominion is likened unto a bucket, and therefore the Water-bearer cannot but bring him good."<sup>109</sup>

The Fishes were the only constellation which, at least according to Haman's interpretation, made unfavorable prognostications as to the fate of the Jews. It said that the Jews would be swallowed like fishes. God however spake: "O thou villain! Fishes are sometimes swallowed, but sometimes they swallow, and thou shalt be swallowed by the swallowers."<sup>110</sup> And when Haman began to cast lots, God said: "O thou villain, son of a villain! What thy lots have shown thee is thine own lot, that thou wilt be hanged."<sup>111</sup>

---

106. Megillah 13b.

107. Abba Gorion 24–25; Panim Aherim 46, and 2 Panim Aherim 67; Esther R. and 2 Targum 3.7 (but not in all manuscripts of Targum). An essentially different version of this Haggadah is found in Aggadat Esther 27–29. On the view that the existence of the entire world depend on the existence of Israel, see text on p. 1, and Index, s. v. "Israel". On the days of the week and Israel, see text on pp. 48.

108. Aggadat Esther 29, where it is also stated that Joshua made the sun stand still in the month of Tammuz; comp. Seder 'Olam 11. That Moses was born and died in Adar is an old tradition; comp. Megillah 13b, and the references given in footnote 44 on p. 476. For other versions of this Haggadah concerning the selection of Adar, see Abba Gorion 25–26; 2 Panim Aherim 67–68; 2 Targum (but not in MSS. made use of by David), Lekah and Esther R. 3.7. The following memorable dates of the different months, as given in these sources, should be noticed: The death of Sarah in Heshvan, the organization of the Great Synagogue in Shebat, and the wars against the (worshippers of the) image of Micah in the same month. Comp. Megillat Ta'anit (Addition). The source made use of by Ibn Yahya, quoted by Alkabez, 99a–99b, is very likely related to, if not identical with, Aggadat Esther, loc. cit. Haman was a great astrologer (comp. PRE 50) like his forebear Amalek, who hoped to conquer Israel by attacking them at the time when they were under the influence of unlucky stars, but he was defeated by Joshua, who surpassed him in the knowledge of astrology and magic. Joshua selected as his warriors against Amalek men who were born in the second Adar, against whom witchcraft has no power. See R. Bahya on Exod. 17.9; R. Eleazar of Worms quoted by Alkabez, 100a. Compare with p. 581.

109. Aggadat Esther 30. Another version found in Abba Gorion 25–26; 2 Panim Aherim 67–68; Esther R. 3.7. According to PRE 50, the day chosen by Haman for the annihilation of Israel was Tuesday, because its constellation is the Lion; comp. Luria, ad loc.

110. Abba Gorion 26; Panim Aherim 46 (here it is said: As fish are swelled, even so shall Haman and his sons be swelled up by the fire of hell "every year"); Esther R. 1.7. Yalkut II, 1054, on Esther 3.8, seems to have read a similar statement in Megillah 13b.

111. Esther R. 3.7 (beginning); comp. also 2 Targum Esther 3.7, which reads: When Haman cast lots in order to destroy the holy nation, a heavenly voice was heard saying: "Fear not, congregation of Israel. If thou turnest with repentance to God, the lot will fall upon Haman instead of upon thee." This passage is not found in the MSS. of this Targum made use of by David.

THE DENUNCIATION OF THE JEWS

His resolve to ruin the Jews taken, Haman appeared before Ahasuerus with his accusation against them. "There is a certain people," he said, "the Jews, scattered abroad and dispersed among the peoples in all the provinces of the kingdom. They are proud and presumptuous. In Tebet, in the depth of winter, they bathe in warm water, and they sit in cold water in summer. Their religion is diverse from the religion of every other people, and their laws from the laws of every other land. To our laws they pay no heed, our religion finds no favor with them, and the decrees of the king they do not execute. When their eye falls upon us, they spit out before us, and they consider us as unclean vessels. When we levy them for the king's service, they either jump upon the wall, and hide within the chambers, or they break through the walls and escape. If we hasten to arrest them, they turn upon us, glare at us with their eyes, grind their teeth, stamp their feet, and so intimidate us that we cannot hold them fast. They do not give us their daughters unto wives, nor do they take our daughters unto wives. If one of them has to do the king's service, he idles all the day long. If they want to buy aught of us, they say, 'This is a day for doing business.' But if we want to buy aught of them, they say, 'We may do no business to-day,' and thus we can buy nothing from them on their market-days.

"Their time they pass in this wise: The first hour of the day, they say, they need for reciting the Shema'; the second for praying; the third for eating; the fourth for saying grace, to give thanks to God for the food and drink He has granted them; the fifth hour they devote to their business affairs; in the sixth they already feel the need of rest; in the seventh their wives call for them, saying, 'Come home, ye weary ones, who are so exhausted by the king's service!'

"The seventh day they celebrate as their Sabbath; they go to the synagogues on that day, read out of their books, translate pieces from their Prophets, curse our king, and execrate our government, saying: 'This is the day whereon the great God rested; so may He grant us rest from the heathen.'

"The women pollute the waters with their ritual baths, which they take after the seven days of their defilement. On the eighth day after the birth of sons, they circumcise them mercilessly, saying, 'This shall distinguish us from all the other nations.' At the end of thirty days, and sometimes twenty-nine, they celebrate the beginning of the month. In the month of Nisan they observe eight days of Passover, beginning the celebration by kindling a fire of brushwood to burn up the leaven. They put all the leaven in their homes out of sight before they use the unleavened bread, saying, 'This is the day whereon our fathers were redeemed from Egypt.' Such is the festival they call Pesah. They go to their synagogues, read out of their books, and translate from the writings of the Prophets, saying: 'As the leaven has been removed out of our houses, so may this wicked dominion be removed from over us.'

"Again, in Siwan, they celebrate two days, an which they go to their synagogues, recite the Shema', and offer up prayers, read out of the Torah, and translate from the books of their Prophets, curse our king, and execrate our government. This is the holiday which they call Azarta, the closing festival. They ascend to the roofs of their synagogues, and throw down apples, which are picked up by those below, with the words, 'As these apples are gathered up, so may we be gathered together from our dispersion among the heathen.' They say they observe this festival, because on these days the Torah was revealed to their ancestors on Mount Sinai.

"On the first of Tishri they celebrate the New Year—again they go to their synagogues, read out of their books, translate pieces from the writings of their Prophets, curse our king, execrate our government, and blow the trumpets, saying: On this Day of Memorial may we be remembered unto good, and our enemies unto evil.'

"On the ninth day of the same month they slaughter cattle, geese, and poultry, they eat and drink and indulge in dainties, they and their wives, their sons and their daughters. But the tenth day of the same month they call the Great Fast, and all of them fast, they together with their wives, their sons, and their daughters, yea, they even torture their little children without mercy, forcing them to abstain from food. They say: 'On this day our sins are pardoned, and are added to the sum of the sins committed by our enemies.' They go to their synagogues, read from their books, translate from the writings of their Prophets, curse our king, and execrate our government, saying: 'May this empire be wiped off from the face of the earth like unto our sins.' They supplicate and pray that the king may die, and his rule be made to cease.

"On the fifteenth of the same month they celebrate the Feast of Tabernacles. They cover the roofs of their houses with foliage, they resort to our parks, where they cut down palm branches for their festal wreaths, pluck the fruit of the Etrog, and cause havoc among the willows of the brook, by breaking down the hedges in their quest after Hosha'not, saying: 'As does the king in the triumphal procession, so do we.' Then they repair to their synagogues to pray, and read out of their books, and make circuits with their Hosha'not, all the while jumping and skipping like goats, so that there is no telling whether they curse us or bless us. This is Sukkot, as they call it, and while it lasts, they do none of the king's service, for, they maintain, all work is forbidden them on these days.

"In this way they waste the whole year with tomfoolery and fiddle-faddle, only in order to avoid doing the king's service. At the expiration of every period of fifty years they have a jubilee year, and every seventh year is a year of release, during which the land lies fallow, for they neither sow nor reap therein, and sell us neither fruits nor other products of the field, so that those of us who live among them die of hunger. At the end of every period of twelve months, they observe the New Year, at the end of every thirty days the New Moon, and every seventh day is the Sabbath, the day on which, as they say, the Lord of the world rested.”<sup>112</sup>

After Haman had finished his arraignment of the Jews, God said: “Thou didst well enumerate the holidays of the Jews, yet thou didst omit the two—Purim and Shushan Purim—which the Jews will celebrate to commemorate thy fall.”

Clever though Haman’s charge was, the vindication of the Jews was no whit less clever. For they found a defender in the archangel Michael. While Haman was delivering his indictment, he spoke thus to God: “O Lord of the world! Thou knowest well that the Jews are not accused of idolatry, nor of immoral conduct, nor of shedding blood; they are accused only of observing Thy Torah.” God pacified him: “As thou livest, I have not abandoned them, I will not abandon them.”

Haman’s denunciations of the Jewish people found a ready echo in the heart of the king. He replied: “I, too, desire the annihilation of the Jews, but I fear their God, for He is mighty beyond compare, and He loves His people with a great love. Whoever rises up against them, He crushes under their feet. Just think of Pharaoh! Should his example not be a warning to us? He ruled the whole world, yet, because he oppressed the Jews, he was visited with frightful plagues. God delivered them from the Egyptians, and cleft the sea for them, a miracle never done for any other nation, and when Pharaoh pursued them with an army of six hundred thousand warriors, he and his host together were drowned in the sea. Thy ancestor Amalek, O Haman, attacked them with four hundred thousand heroes, and all of them God delivered into the hands of Joshua, who slew them. Sisera had forty thousand generals under him, each one commander of a hundred thousand men, yet they all were annihilated. The God of the Jews ordered the stars to consume the warriors of Sisera, and then He caused the great general to fall into the power of a woman, to become a by-word and a reproach forever. Many and valorous rulers have risen up against them, they all were cast down by their God and crushed unto their everlasting disgrace. Now, then, can we venture aught against them?”

Haman, however, persisted. Day after day he urged the king to consent to his plan. Ahasuerus thereupon called together a council of the wise men of all nations and tongues. To them he submitted the question, whether the Jews ought not to be destroyed, seeing they differed from all other peoples. The sage councillors inquired: “Who is it that desires to induce thee to take so fatal a step? If the Jewish nation is destroyed, the world itself will cease to be, for the world exists only for the sake of the Torah studied by Israel. Yea, the very sun and moon shed their light only for the sake of Israel, and were it not for him, there were neither day nor night, and neither dew nor rain would moisten the earth. More than this, all other nations beside Israel are designated as ‘strangers’ by God, but Israel He called in His love ‘a people near to Him’, and His ‘children’. If men do not suffer their children and kinsmen to be attacked with impunity, how much less will God sit by quiet when Israel is assailed—God the Ruler over all things, over the powers in heaven above and on earth beneath, over the spirits and the souls—God with whom it lies to exalt and to degrade, to slay and to revive.”

Haman was ready with a reply to these words of the wise: “The God who drowned Pharaoh in the sea, and who did all the wonders and signs ye have recounted, that God is now in His dotage, He can neither see nor protect. For did not Nebuchadnezzar destroy His house, burn His palace, and scatter His people to all corners of the earth, and He was not able to do one thing against it? If He had had power and strength, would He not have displayed them? This is the best proof that He has waxed old and feeble.”

When the heathen sages heard these arguments advanced by Haman, they agreed to his plan, and put their signature to an edict decreeing the persecution of the Jews.<sup>113</sup>

---

112. 2 Targum 3.8, which partly follows old sources; comp. Megillah 13b; Abba Gorion 26; 2 Panim Aherim 68; Aggadat Esther 30–31; Esther R. and Targum Esther 3.8. See also references in notes 114 and 115. It is noteworthy that 2 Targum made use of Palestinian, as well as non-Palestinian (very likely Babylonian) sources. Haman speaks of eight days of Passover and the two days of the Feast of Weeks, and this reflects Jewish life in the diaspora, since in Palestine the first festival consists of seven days and the second of one day. On the other hand, the reference to the Sabbatical and Jubilee year points to the Holy Land, for it is only in that country that the Jews abstain from tilling the soil in these years. The very late date of the final redaction of the 2 Targum is betrayed also by the reference to the reading of the Torah and the translating (into Aramaic) from the books of the Prophets. In pre-Arabic times the custom was to translate the weekly sections of the Torah into the vernacular, that is, into Aramaic. Only after Arabic supplanted Aramaic as the language of the Jews, was the use of Targum limited to the Haftarah. On the throwing down of apples, see Munk, ad loc. The explanation given of the custom of the procession with Hosha'anot is old; comp. PK 28, 180a–180b, and the parallel passages cited by Buber, ad loc. The statement that on the “Great Fast” (this designates the Day of Atonement only in Palestinian sources; comp., e. g., Yerushalmi Rosh ha-Shanah 1, 57b, and ‘Abodah Zarah 1, 39b) little children are made to fast is not to be taken literally. Comp. Mishnah and Talmud Yoma 82a.

113. Abba Gorion 26–29 (in the last line of 26 read מִנִּית instead of זִמִּית); Panim Aherim 68–69; Esther R. 3.8–9; Aggadat Esther 33–34. On Pharaoh as a “cosmocrator”, see pp. 161–162. As to the vast number of his hosts drowned in the Red Sea, compare with footnote 43 on p. 558. On Amalek, see text on p. 578. On Sisera, see text on p. 868. On the idea that the existence of the universe is dependent on Israel, see text on p. 1; p. 1150; Index, s. v. “Israel”.

THE DECREE OF ANNIHILATION

This is the text of the decree which Haman issued to the heads of all the nations regarding the annihilation of the Jews: “This herein is written by me, the great officer of the king, his second in rank, the first among the grandees, and one of the seven princes, and the most distinguished among the nobles of the realm. I, in agreement with the rulers of the provinces, the princes of the king, the chiefs and the lords, the Eastern kings and the satraps, all being of the same counsel and opinion, using the same expressions and the same language, write you at the order of King Ahasuerus this writing sealed with his signet, so that it may not be sent back, concerning the great eagle Israel. The great eagle had stretched out his pinions over the whole world; neither bird nor beast could withstand him. But there came the great lion Nebuchadnezzar, and dealt the great eagle a stinging blow. His pinions snapped, his feathers were plucked out, and his feet were hacked off. The whole world has enjoyed rest, cheer, and tranquillity since the moment the eagle was chased from his eyrie until this day. Now we notice that he is using all efforts to secure wings. He is permitting his feathers to grow, with the intention of covering us and the whole world, as he did unto our forefathers. At the instance of King Ahasuerus, all the magnates of the king of Media and Persia are assembled, and we are writing you our joint advice, as follows: ‘Set snares for the eagle, and capture him before he renews his strength, and soars back to his eyrie.’ We advise you to tear out his plumage, break his wings, give his flesh to the fowl of heaven, split the eggs lying in his nest, and crush his young, so that his memorial may vanish from the world. Our counsel is not like unto Pharaoh's; he sought to destroy only the men of Israel; to the women he did no harm. It is not like unto the plan of Esau, who wanted to slay his brother Jacob and keep his children as slaves. It is not like unto the tactics of Amalek, who pursued Israel and smote the hindmost and feeble, but left the strong unscathed. It is not like unto the policy of Nebuchadnezzar, who carried them away into exile, and settled them near his own throne. And it is not like unto the way of Sennacherib, who assigned a land unto the Jews as fair as their own had been. We, recognizing clearly what the situation is, have resolved to slay the Jews, annihilate them, young and old, so that their name and their memorial may be no more, and their posterity may be cut off forever."<sup>114</sup>

The edict issued by Ahasuerus against the Jews ran thus: "To all the peoples, nations, and races: Peace be with you! This is to acquaint you that one came to us who is not of our nation and of our land, an Amalekite, the son of great ancestors, and his name is Haman. He made a trifling request of me, saying: 'Among us there dwells a people, the most despicable of all, who are a stumbling-block in every time. They are exceeding presumptuous, and they know our weakness and our shortcomings. They curse the king in these words, which are constantly in their mouths: "God is the King of the world forever and ever: He will make the heathen to perish out of His land: He will execute vengeance and punishments upon the peoples." From the beginning of all time they have been ungrateful, as witness their behavior toward Pharaoh. With kindness he received them, their wives, and their children, at the time of a famine. He gave up to them the best of his land. He provided them with food and all they needed. Then Pharaoh desired to build a palace, and he requested the Jews to do it for him. They began the work grudgingly, amid murmurings, and it is not completed unto this day. In the midst of it, they approached Pharaoh with these words: "We wish to offer sacrifices to our God in a place that is a three days' journey from here, and we petition thee to lend us silver and gold vessels, and clothes, and apparel." So much did they borrow, that each one bore ninety ass-loads off with him, and Egypt was emptied out. When, the three days having elapsed, they did not return, Pharaoh pursued them in order to recover the stolen treasures. What did the Jews? They had among them a man by the name of Moses, the son of Amram, an arch-wizard, who had been bred in the house of Pharaoh. When they reached the sea, this man raised his staff, and cleft the waters, and led the Jews through them dryshod, while Pharaoh and his host were drowned.

"Their God helps them as long as they observe His law, so that none can prevail against them. Balaam, the only prophet we heathens ever had, they slew with the sword, as they did unto Sihon and Og, the powerful kings of Canaan, whose land they took after killing them. Likewise they brought ruin upon Amalek, the great and glorious ruler—they, and Saul their king, and Samuel their prophet. Later they had an unmerciful king, David by name, who smote the Philistines, the Ammonites, and the Moabites, and not one of them could discomfit him. Solomon, the son of this king, being wise and sagacious, built them a house of worship in Jerusalem, that they might not scatter to all parts of the world. But after they had been guilty of many crimes against their God, He delivered them into the hand of King Nebuchadnezzar, who deported them to Babylon.

"To this day they are among us, and though they are under our hand, we are of none account in their eyes. Their religion and their laws are different from the religion and the laws of all the other nations. Their sons do not marry with our daughters, our gods they do not worship, they have no regard for our honor, and they refuse to bend the knee before us. Calling themselves freemen, they will not do our service, and our commands they heed not.’

“Therefore the grandees, the princes, and the satraps have been assembled before us, we have taken counsel together, and we have resolved an irrevocable resolution, according to the laws of the Medes and Persians, to extirpate the Jews from among the inhabitants of the earth. We have sent the edict to the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of my empire, to slay them, their sons, their wives, and their little children, on the thirteenth day of the month of Adar—none is to escape. As they did to our forefathers, and desired to do unto us, so shall be done unto them, and their possessions are to be given over to the spoilers. Thus shall ye do, that ye may find grace before me. This is the writing of the letter which I send to you, Ahasuerus king of Media and Persia.”<sup>115</sup>

The price Haman offered the king for the Jews was ten thousand hundredweights of silver. He took the number of the Jews at their exodus from Egypt, six hundred thousand, as the basis of his calculation, and offered a half-shekel for every soul of them, the sum each Israelite had to pay yearly for the maintenance of the sanctuary. Though the sum was so vast that Haman could not find coin enough to pay it, but promised to deliver it in the form of silver bars, Ahasuerus refused the ransom. When Haman made the offer, he said: “Let us cast lots. If thou drawest Israel and I draw the money, then the sale stands as a valid transaction. If the reverse, it is not valid.” Because of the sins of the Jews, the sale was confirmed by the lots. But Haman was not too greatly pleased with his own success. He disliked to give up so large a sum of money. Observing his ill humor, Ahasuerus said: “Keep the money; I do not care either to make or to lose money on account of the Jews.”<sup>116</sup>

For the Jews it was fortunate that the king did not accept money for them, else his subjects would not have obeyed his second edict, the one favorable to the Jews. They would have been able to advance the argument, that the king, by accepting a sum of money for them, had resigned his rights over the Jews in favor of Haman, who, therefore, could deal with them as he pleased.<sup>117</sup>

The agreement between Ahasuerus and Haman was concluded at a carouse, by way of punishment for the crime of the sons of Jacob, who had unmercifully sold their brother Joseph into slavery to the Ishmaelites while eating and drinking.<sup>118</sup>

The joy of this Jew-hating couple—for Ahasuerus hated the Jews with no less fierce a hatred than Haman did<sup>119</sup>—was shared by none. The capital city of Shushan was in mourning and sorely perplexed. Scarcely had the edict of annihilation been promulgated against the Jews, when all sorts of misfortunes began to happen in the city. Women who were hanging up their wash to dry on the roofs of the houses dropped dead; men who went to draw water fell into the wells, and lost their lives. While Ahasuerus and Haman were making merry in the palace, the city was thrown into consternation and mourning.<sup>120</sup>

---

114. Panim Aherim 47; all the other sources (comp. the following note) state that Ahasuerus issued the decree of annihilation. The designation of Haman as “next unto the king” in Panim Aherim is no proof of its dependence on Septuagint (comp. the following note); both sources very likely gave Haman this title which, according to Esther 10.2, was borne by Mordecai.

115. Midrash Esther 68–69; Abba Gorion 29–32 (in Hebrew and Aramaic; the latter seems to be the original form, as the opening line of the Hebrew version is in Aramaic); Esther R. 3.8; Lekah 3.12; Aggadat Esther 36; Yerahmeel 81, 241–244 (the decree of Haman and the edict of Ahasuerus are here combined into one, to which are added many sentences, found in old sources, of the conversation between Haman and the king about the Jews); 2 Targum Esther 3.8 (towards the end) and 4.1. The text of the first passage of Targum contains several corruptions. The sentence ולית אנהא ידעין (p. 25, line 5, in David's edition) is a gloss to p. 24, line 22, as a variant to ולא ידעין; p. 25, line 10, reads: כל דזבנין בשויה זבנין. The accusation made against the Jews is that they buy at low prices and sell at great profits. In contrast to the Midrashim, Targum maintains that Haman's denunciation of the Jews was made in oral conversation with the king. Comp. Megillah 13b, and Yerahmeel, loc. cit. As to the statement in Targum that "some of them are dealers in wax", see footnote 87 on p. 930 and footnote 110 on p. 934. The Greek Additions to Esther (Addition B) contain a letter of the king to the princes of the provinces and the subordinate governors, in which, after calling attention to his "moderation and mildness", he informs them that at the advice of the wise Haman, who is exalted to "the second place in the kingdom" (comp. the preceding note), he decreed the annihilation of the Jewish people, the "nation that stands alone in opposition to all men continually." Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.6, used the apocryphal letter of the king, but allowed himself a great deal of liberty in reproducing its text. The rabbinical versions of the letter are, on the other hand, entirely independent of the Greek Additions. It is, however, to be noted that besides the letter of the king, Addition B knows also of the letters of Haman, just as the Midrashim have a decree by Haman and an edict by Ahasuerus. The Arabic version of Haman's decree (comp. Hirschfeld in Semitic Studies in memory of Kohut, 248, seq.) is an almost literal translation of 2 Targum Esther 4.1, and it is strange that this fact escaped Hirschfeld. Perreau published from a Parma MS. another letter of Haman which agrees with Aggadat Esther and Yerahmeel, in Hebräische Bibliographie, VII, 46, seq.

116. Abba Gorion 27–29; 2 Panim Aherim 69; Esther R. and 2 Targum 3.9; comp. Tosafoth on Megillah 16a (caption ידחי). According to ShR 33.5, Haman offered all his silver and gold as a price for the Jews. See Abba Gorion 29 and Esther R. 3.11. When Ahasuerus said to Haman: "The silver is given thee" (Esther 3.11), the Holy Spirit called out: "The gallows is given thee." This is a play on כסף "silver" and עץ "gallows", both of which words have the same numerical value. On the half-shekel as the basis for Haman's computing the price for the Jews, see Yerushalmi Megillah 1, 70d, and 3, 74a; Kad ha-Kemah, Purim, II, 47a.

117. Aggadat Esther 35.

118. Panim Aherim 51 and 2 Panim Aherim 69; Esther R. and 2 Targum 3.14–15. The last-named passage reads: Because Joseph's brethren sold him unto a foreign land, their descendants were sold unto a foreign land (= to a foreigner); but as Benjamin did not take part in this transaction, his descendants Mordecai and Esther became the redeemers of Israel. Compare with p. 335; Tehillim 10, 93.

119. Megillah 14a (top), and 11a; (here it is said that Ahasuerus hated the Jews more than Haman); Abba Gorion 29; Esther R. 23.10. Compare with p. 1154. The attacks of Ahasuerus and Haman on Israel are taken to have been aimed at God; compare with p. 1154; 2 Panim Aherim 69.

120. 2 Panim Aherim 69.

SATAN INDICTS THE JEWS

The position of the Jews after the royal edict became known beggars description. If a Jew ventured abroad on the street to make a purchase, he was almost throttled by the Persians, who taunted him with these words: "Never mind, to-morrow will soon be here, and then I shall kill thee, and take thy money away from thee." If a Jew offered to sell himself as a slave, he was rejected; not even the sacrifice of his liberty could protect him against the loss of his life.<sup>121</sup>

Mordecai, however, did not despair; he trusted in the Divine help. On his way from the court, after Haman and his ilk had informed him with malicious joy of the king's pleasure concerning the Jews, he met Jewish children coming from school. He asked the first child what verse from the Scriptures he had studied in school that day, and the reply was: "Be not afraid of sudden fear, neither of the desolation of the wicked when it cometh." The verse committed to memory by the second was: "Let them take counsel together, but it shall be brought to naught; let them speak the word, but it shall not stand; for God is with us." And the verse which the third had learnt was: "And even to old age I am He, and even to hoar hairs I will carry you: I have made and will bear; yea, I will carry and will deliver."

When Mordecai heard these verses, he broke out into jubilation, astonishing Haman not a little. Mordecai told him, "I rejoice at the good tidings announced to me by the school children." Haman thereupon fell into such a rage that he exclaimed: "In sooth, they shall be the first to feel the weight of my hand."

What gave Mordecai the greatest concern, was the certainty that the danger had been invited by the Jews themselves, through their sinful conduct in connection with the banquets given by Ahasuerus. Eighteen thousand five hundred Jews had taken part in them; they had eaten and drunk, intoxicated themselves and committed immoralities, as Haman had foreseen, the very reason, indeed, he had advised the king to hold the banquets.

Thereupon Satan had indicted the Jews. The accusations which he produced against them were of such a nature that God at once ordered writing materials to be brought to Him for the decree of annihilation, and it was written and sealed.

When the Torah heard that Satan's designs against the Jews had succeeded, she broke out into bitter weeping before God, and her lamentations awakened the angels, who likewise began to wail, saying: "If Israel is to be destroyed, of what avail is the whole world?"

The sun and the moon heard the lamentations of the angels, and they donned their mourning garb and also wept bitterly and wailed, saying: "Is Israel to be destroyed, Israel who wanders from town to town, and from land to land, only for the sake of the study of the Torah; who suffers grievously under the hand of the heathen, only because he observes the Torah and the sign of the covenant?"

In great haste the prophet Elijah ran to the Patriarchs and to the other prophets, and to the saints in Israel, and addressed these words to them: "O ye fathers of the world! Angels, and the sun and the moon, and heaven and earth, and all the celestial hosts are weeping bitterly. The whole world is seized with threes as of a woman in travail, by reason of your children, who have forfeited their life on account of their sins, and ye sit quiet and tranquil." Thereupon Moses said to Elijah: "Knowest thou any saints in the present generation of Israel?" Elijah named Mordecai, and Moses sent the prophet to him, with the charge that he, the "saint of the living generation", should unite his prayers with the prayers of the saints among the dead, and perhaps the doom might be averted from Israel. But Elijah hesitated. "O faithful shepherd," he said, "the edict of annihilation issued by God is written and sealed." Moses, however, did not desist; he urged the Patriarchs: "If the edict is sealed with wax, your prayers will be heard; if with blood, then all is in vain."

Elijah hastened to Mordecai, who, when first he heard what God had resolved upon, tore his garments and was possessed by a great fear, though before he had confidently hoped that help would come from God. He gathered together all the school children, and had them fast, so that their hunger should drive them to moan and groan. Then it was that Israel spoke to God: "O Lord of the world! When the heathen rage against me, they do not desire my silver and gold, they desire only that I should be exterminated from off the face of the earth. Such was the design of Nebuchadnezzar when he wanted to compel Israel to worship the idol. Had it not been for Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, I had disappeared from the world. Now it is Haman who desires to uproot the whole vine."<sup>122</sup>

Then Mordecai addressed all the people thus: "O people of Israel, that art so dear and precious in the sight of thy Heavenly Father! Knowest thou not what has happened? Hast thou not heard that the king and Haman have resolved to remove us off the face of the earth, to destroy us from beneath the sun? We have no king on whom we can depend, and no prophet to intercede for us with prayers. There is no place whither we can flee, no land wherein we can find safety. We are like sheep without a shepherd, like a ship upon the sea without a pilot. We are like an orphan born after the death of his father, and death robs him of his mother, too, when he has scarce begun to draw nourishment from her breast.”

After this address a great prayer-meeting was called outside of Shushan. The Ark containing the scroll of the law, covered with sackcloth and strewn with ashes, was brought thither. The scroll was unrolled, and the following verses read from it: “When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, in the latter days thou shalt return to the Lord thy God, and hearken unto His voice, for the Lord thy God is a merciful God: He will not fail thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which He swore unto them.”

Thereunto Mordecai added words of admonition: “O people of Israel, that art dear and precious to thy Father in heaven, let us follow the example of the inhabitants of Nineveh, doing as they did when the prophet Jonah came to them to announce the destruction of the city. The king arose from his throne, laid his crown from him, covered himself with sackcloth, and sat in ashes, and he made proclamation, and published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his nobles, saying, ‘Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste anything; let them not feed, nor drink water, but let them be covered with sackcloth, both man and beast, and let them cry mightily unto God; yea, let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the violence that is in their hands.’ Then God repented Him of the evil He had designed to bring upon them, and He did it not. Now, then, let us follow their example, let us hold a fast, mayhap God will have mercy upon us.”<sup>123</sup>

Furthermore spake Mordecai: “O Lord of the world! Didst Thou not swear unto our fathers to make us as many as the stars in the heavens? And now we are as sheep in the shambles. What has become of Thine oath?”<sup>124</sup> He cried aloud, though he knew God hears the softest whisper, for he said: “O Father of Israel, what hast Thou done unto me? One single cry of anguish uttered by Esau Thou didst repay with the blessing of his father Isaac, ‘By thy sword shalt thou live’. and now we ourselves are abandoned to the mercy of the sword.”<sup>125</sup> What Mordecai was not aware of, was that he, the descendant of Jacob, was brought unto weeping and wailing by Haman, the descendant of Esau, as a punishment, because Jacob himself had brought Esau unto weeping and wailing.<sup>126</sup>

121. Esther R. 3.15; 2 Targum 4.2. Comp. Esther R., introduction, 3.

122. Abba Gorion 32–35; BHM V, 55–56; Esther R. 3.4 (towards the end); Aggadat Esther 38–40. Panim Aherim 47 reads as follows: God sent for the patriarchs and said unto them: “Your children deserve to be destroyed.” “Why?” they asked. God replied: “Because they did not sanctify My name in the days of Nebuchadnezzar the wicked, and made it appear as though I had no power to save them.” The patriarchs rejoined: “Do Thou with them as Thou pleasest.” When God saw that the attribute of justice was about to prevail, He rose from the throne of justice, and seated Himself on the throne of mercy. The entire “heavenly family” pleaded for Israel, saying: “Didst Thou not create the universe for the sake of the Torah given to Israel, so that its existence depends upon the existence of Israel? If Thou destroyest this nation, what will become of us?” God replied: “Israel did not act as they should.” The “heavenly family” continued to plead: “It is known and revealed before Thee that what they did (in obeying Nebuchadnezzar’s command to worship the image erected by him) was out of fear.” On hearing this pleading God was filled with mercy for Israel. As to the question whether Israel in Mordecai’s days deserved to be destroyed on account of their sins, and on the nature of these sins, see PK 19, 140a; PR 33, 151b (their lack of trust in God nearly brought about their destruction, were it not for the fact that even Jacob, when in distress, despaired of God's help, and they followed the example of their ancestor; compare footnote 240 on p. 297); comp. further Ekah 3, 134, and the references cited in notes 16, 17. On the idea that the universe depended on the preservation of Israel, compare with p. 1; text on pp. 1150, 1154; Index, s. v. "Israel". Divination by passages from books (stichomancy), especially by passages from the Bible (Biblomancy) is found in the Talmud (comp., e. g., Hagigah 15a–15b; Hullin 95b), and hence it is quite natural for the legend to make Mordecai ask the children the scriptural verses they had studied. The three verses recited by the children were later inserted in the daily prayer; comp. Baer, Abodat Israel (end of 'Alenu). On the wandering of the scholars from town to town, see Baba Batra 8a; on the intercession of the saints among the dead, see text on p. 869. The designation of Moses as the faithful shepherd is of frequent occurrence; compare with p. 500; text on p. 1080. As to the sealing of the heavenly decree, see text on p. 800, and footnote 26 on p. 1074. According to 2 Targum Esther 4.1 (beginning; part of the text is very obscure), the Holy Spirit revealed to Mordecai the danger threatening Israel (comp. Alkabez, 125a), whereas Targum Esther 4.1 agrees with the Midrashim cited at the beginning of this note, that it was Elijah who gave him this information.

123. 2 Targum Esther 4.1. The passage from אתחייבו בלחודוי הוא וכד (p. 28. lines 4–9, in David's edition) does not belong to the end, but is a variant of line 1 (p. 11, line 12). On the covering of the ark with sackcloth, see Ta'anit 2.1; on the inhabitants of Nineveh, see ibid., and text on p. 1034. The verses of the Bible read by Mordecai (Deut. 4.30–31) are taken from the section read on the Fast of Ab (Tosefta Megillah 4.9 and Babli 31b), but it would seem from this passage of the Targum that it was read on all fast-days. The custom prevailing now to read Exod. 32.11–14 and 34.1–10 dates from the time of the Geonim; the Mishnah, Megillah (end), has Lev. 26 and Deut. 28 as the sections for fast-days. Compare also with p. 1055. The prayer of Mordecai in the Greek Addenda reads like an insertion in the first benediction of the 'Amidah, and accordingly it begins with the description of God in whose power is the entire world, and closes with the supplication to the God of Abraham to redeem His inheritance. This corresponds to ... מלך עוזר ומושיע ... קונה הכל in the first benediction of the 'Amidah. Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.8, follows Septuagint, though not verbatim.

124. PRE 50. This short prayer reminds one of the Prayer of Mordecai in the Septuagint. Comp. the preceding note. A Hebrew translation of the Prayer of Mordecai is found in Josippon 4 and hence in numerous later rab-binic works, as, e. g., in Esther R. 4.10, and Yerahmeel 89, 237. Comp. Schürer, Geschichte, III, 450–451.

125. 2 Panim Aherim 70, in explanation of Esther 4.1. A different explanation of this passage is given in Panim Aherim 51, which reads: He cried: Wrong will be done to the king who does wrong to the innocent. See also Septuagint, which reads: He cried with a loud voice: A nation which has done no wrong is going to be destroyed. On the correct reading of Panim Aherim, see Alkabez, 125a. Comp. also Megillah 15a with regard to the words used by Mordecai in his loud crying.

126. BR 67.4; Esther R. 4.1; Panim Aherim 51; compare with pp. 258 and 270.

THE DREAM OF MORDECAI FULFILLED

Esther, who knew naught of what was happening at court, was greatly alarmed when her attendants told her that Mordecai had appeared in the precincts of the palace clothed in sackcloth and ashes. She was so overcome by fright that she was deprived of the joys of motherhood to which she had been looking forward with happy expectancy.<sup>127</sup> She sent clothes to Mordecai, who, however, refused to lay aside his garb of mourning until God permitted miracles to come to pass for Israel, wherein he followed the example of such great men in Israel as Jacob, David, and Ahab, and of the Gentile inhabitants of Nineveh at the time of Jonah. By no means would he array himself in court attire so long as his people was exposed to sure suffering.<sup>128</sup> The queen sent for Daniel, called also Hathach in the Scriptures, and charged him to learn from Mordecai wherefore he was mourning.<sup>129</sup>

To escape all danger from spying ears, Hathach and Mordecai had their conversation in the open, like Jacob when he consulted with his wives Leah and Rachel about leaving their father Laban.<sup>130</sup> By Hathach Mordecai sent word to the queen, that Haman was an Amalekite, who like his ancestor sought to destroy Israel.<sup>131</sup> He requested her to appear before the king and plead for the Jews, reminding her at the same time of a dream he had once had and told her about.

Once, when Mordecai had spent a long time weeping and lamenting over the misery of the Jews in the Dispersion, and prayed fervently to God to redeem Israel and rebuild the Temple, he fell asleep, and in his sleep a dream visited him. He dreamed he was transported to a desert place he had never seen before. Many nations lived there jumbled together, only one small and despised nation kept apart at a short distance. Suddenly a snake shot up from the midst of the nations, rising higher and higher, and growing stronger and larger in proportion as it rose. It darted in the direction of the spot in which the tiny nation stood, and tried to project itself upon it. Impenetrable clouds and darkness enveloped the little nation, and when the snake was on the point of seizing it, a hurricane arose from the four corners of the world, covering the snake as clothes cover a man, and blew it to bits. The fragments scattered hither and thither like chaff before the wind, until not a speck of the monster was to be found anywhere. Then the cloud and the darkness vanished from above the little nation, the splendor of the sun again enveloped it.<sup>132</sup>

This dream Mordecai recorded in a book, and when the storm began to rage against the Jews, he thought of it, and demanded that Esther go to the king as the advocate of her people. At first she did not feel inclined to accede to the wishes of Mordecai. By her messenger she recalled to his mind, that he himself had insisted upon her keeping her Jewish descent a secret.<sup>133</sup> Besides, she had always tried to refrain from appearing before the king at her own initiative, in order that she might not be instrumental in bringing down sin upon her soul, for she well remembered Mordecai's teaching, that "a Jewish woman, captive among the heathen, who of her own accord goes to them, loses her portion in the Jewish nation." She had been rejoicing that her petitions had been granted, and the king had not come nigh unto her this last month. Was she now voluntarily to present herself before him?<sup>134</sup> Furthermore, she had her messenger inform Mordecai, that Haman had introduced a new palace regulation. Any one who appeared before the king without having been summoned by Haman, would suffer the death penalty. Therefore, she could not, if she would, go to the king to advocate the cause of the Jews.<sup>135</sup>

Esther urged her uncle to refrain from incensing Haman and furnishing him with a pretext for wreaking the hatred of Esau to Jacob upon Mordecai and his nation. Mordecai, however, was firmly convinced that Esther was destined by God to save Israel. How could her miraculous history be explained otherwise? At the very moment Esther was taken to court, he had thought: "Is it conceivable that God would force so pious a woman to wed with a heathen, were it not that she is appointed to save Israel from menacing dangers?"<sup>136</sup>

Firm as Mordecai was in his determination to make Esther take a hand in affairs, he yet did not find it a simple matter to communicate with her. For Hathach was killed by Haman as soon as it was discovered that he was acting as mediator between Mordecai and Esther.<sup>137</sup> There was none to replace him, until God dispatched the archangels Michael and Gabriel to carry messages from one to the other and back again.<sup>138</sup>

Mordecai sent word to her, if she let the opportunity to help Israel slip by, she would have to give account for the omission before the heavenly court.<sup>139</sup> To Israel in distress, however, help would come from other quarters. Never had God forsaken His people in time of need.

Moreover, he admonished her, that, as the descendant of Saul, it was her duty to make reparation for her ancestor's sin in not having put Agag to death. Hah he done as he was bidden, the Jews would now not have to fear the machinations of Haman, the offspring of Agag. He bade her supplicate her Heavenly Father to deal with the present enemies of Israel as He had dealt with his enemies in former ages. To give her encouragement, Mordecai continued: "Is Haman so surpassing great that his plan against the Jews must succeed? Dost thou mean to say that he is superior to his own ancestor Amalek, whom God crushed when he precipitated himself upon Israel? Is he mightier than the thirty-one kings who fought against Israel and whom Joshua slew 'with the word of God'? Is he stronger than Sisera, who went out against Israel with nine hundred iron chariots, and yet met his death at the hands of a mere woman, the punishment for having withdrawn the use of the water-springs from the Israelites and prevented their wives from taking the prescribed ritual baths and thus from fulfilling their conjugal duty? Is he more powerful than Goliath, who reviled the warriors of Israel, and was slain by David? Or is he more invincible than the sons of Orpah, who waged wars with Israel, and were killed by David and his men? Therefore, do not refrain thy mouth from prayer, and thy lips from supplication, for on account of the merits of our fathers, Israel has ever and ever been snatched out of the jaws of death. He who has at all times done wonders for Israel, will deliver the enemy into our hands now, for us to do with him as seemeth best to us."

What he endeavored to impress upon Esther particularly, was that God would bring help to Israel without her intermediation, but it was to her interest to use the opportunity, for which alone she had reached her exalted place, to make up for the transgressions committed by her house, Saul and his descendants.<sup>140</sup>

Yielding at last to the arguments of Mordecai, Esther was prepared to risk life in this world, in order to secure life in the world to come. She made only one request of her uncle. He was to have the Jews spend three days in prayer and fasting in her behalf, that she might find favor in the eyes of the king. At first Mordecai was opposed to the proclamation of a fast, because it was Passover time, and the law prohibits fasting on the holidays. But he finally assented to Esther's reasoning: "Of what avail are the holidays, if there is no Israel to celebrate them, and without Israel, there would not be even a Torah. Therefore it is advisable to transgress one law, that God may have mercy upon us."<sup>141</sup>

---

127. Abba Gorion 35; Panim Aherim 51 (this passage contains also another opinion to the effect that Esther took precautions to prevent pregnancy; comp., however, note 80); 2 Panim Aherim 70; Esther R. 4.9. Comp. also the different views about the effects of the queen's fright as stated in Megillah 15a and PRE 50.

128. 2 Panim Aherim 70; Aggadat Esther 42; Esther R. 4.1. Comp. also BR 84.20; Tehillim 10, 93; Panim Aherim 51; Aggadat Esther 40; text on p. 382.

129. Megillah 15b; Baba Batra 4a (according to some authorities, Daniel was called so, because he "decided" the most important affairs of state; according to others, because he was "cut off by Ahasuerus" from the important position he held under the former king; Hathach is derived from חתך "he cut off", "he decided"); Esther R. and Targum 4.5.

130. Aggadat Esther 43; compare with p. 291.

131. Abba Gorion 36; 2 Panim Aherim 70 (read ברמז instead of ברוח הקודש, which crept into the text from the next paragraph); Esther R. 4.7.

132. Esther R. 4.7; Midrash Esther 67; Aggadat Esther 43. The source upon which these Midrashim drew is very likely Josippon 4, where the Dream of Mordecai found in the Greek Additions to Esther is translated into Hebrew. BHM V, 1.16, contains a Hebrew as well as an Aramaic translation of this apocryphal piece. See Schürer, Geschichte, III, 450–451. Mekilta Amalek 2, 55a and 56a (= Esther R. 2.7), remarks: Mordecai took notice of the "hint" given him from above. This refers perhaps to the dream in which the future history of Esther was revealed to him. Compare, however, with p. 1162.

133. Aggadat Esther 43; 2 Panim Aherim 70.

134. 2 Targum Esther 4.1. Compare with pp. 1143 and 1166.

135. Targum Esther 4.11 Against this view, comp. Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.3.

136. Targum Esther 4.10; Mekilta Amalek 2, 56a; Esther R. 2.7. Comp. note 132.

137. Abba Gorion 36; 2 Panim Aherim 70; PRE 50; 1 and 2 Targum 4.11. According to Megillah 15a, Hathach did not want to be the harbinger of a painful message, and accordingly Esther was forced to find somebody else to act as an intermediary. Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.7, on the other hand, emphasizes the fact that the same person (Hathach) carried on the negotiations between Mordecai and Esther.

138. Targum Esther 4.12; according to 2 Targum, after the death of Hathach written messages were sent by the queen to Mordecai. A third view is that the Holy Spirit was the intermediary between the two. Comp. Abba Gorion 36 and 2 Panim Aherim 70. PRE 50 maintains that Esther communicated with Mordecai by word of mouth.

139. Esther R. 4.14. A somewhat different account is found in Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.7, which reads: There would certainly arise help from God some other way, but she and her father's house would be destroyed by those whom she now neglected. It seems that Josephus was acquainted with the haggadic interpretation according to which מָקוֹם (Esther 4.14) stand for God; comp. Tehillim 22, 182; Targum, Lekah, and Esther R., ad loc. See also Buber, note 50 on Aggadat Esther 44. The designation of God as מָקוֹם "Place" is found in as early an author as Philo; comp. De Somniis 1.11 and Index, s. v. "Place".

140. 2 Targum Esther 4.13–14. As to the view that Saul was responsible for the suffering of the Jews at the hands of Haman, comp. Esther R., introduction, 7, and text on p. 899. On the view that Joshua slew Amalek by the word of God (this is meant by בְּמִלַּת דְּשִׁמְיָא), compare with pp. 841–842. The passage beginning with וְכַד קָם (not found in all MSS.) at the end of verse 13 is certainly a later addition. It is also possible that the sentence לְתַקְלָא... אֵלָא אִידְכְּרִי, if genuine, should be put at the beginning of this verse where Saul's guilt is pointed out. The exhortation to prayer is also found in Septuagint 4.8, where הַמֶּלֶךְ is referred to God; comp. Esther R. 1.9 and Megillah 15a with reference to the use of מֶלֶךְ "King" in the book of Esther in the sense of the "Heavenly King". Comp. notes 161, 171, 177.

141. 2 Panim Aherim 70–71. The reason for this fast is to atone for the sin of the Jews who had partaken of forbidden food at the banquet of Ahasuerus; Tehillim 22, 182; pp. 1132–1133. Megillah 15a, Esther R. and 2 Targum 4.16 (the MSS. show that the sentence in Targum beginning with דְּעַד הַשְּׁתָּא is a later addition, based on the Talmud) maintain that the queen pointed out to Mordecai the great sacrifice she is bringing. By going voluntarily to Ahasuerus she was for ever cutting herself off from her legitimate husband (i. e. Mordecai; compare with p. 1143), as the law does not permit the reunion of husband and wife if the latter of her own free will, had relations with another man. Opinions differ as to how the three days' fast is to be understood. Yebamot 121a and PRE 50 are of the opinion that the fast lasted for seventy-two consecutive hours. On the other hand, Tehillim 22, 183, maintains that this would have been a physical impossibility; accordingly the fast lasted really only a little more than twenty-four hours. They began the fast shortly before night, and finished it shortly after the beginning of the following night. The Bible calls it a three days' fast because it began on one day and ended on the third. Comp. Yoma 81b; Torat ha-Adam, 29–81b; Alkabez, 136.

THE PRAYER OF ESTHER

Accordingly Mordecai made arrangements for a fast and a prayer-meeting. On the very day of the festival, he had himself ferried across the water to the other side of Shushan, where all the Jews of the city could observe the fast together.<sup>142</sup> It was important that the Jewish residents of Shushan beyond all other Jews should do penance and seek pardon from God, because they had committed the sin of partaking of Ahasuerus's banquet. Twelve thousand priests marched in the procession, trumpets in their right hands, and the holy scrolls of the law in their left, weeping and mourning, and exclaiming against God: "Here is the Torah Thou gavest us. Thy beloved people is about to be destroyed. When that comes to pass, who will be left to read the Torah and make mention of Thy name? The sun and the moon will refuse to shed their light abroad, for they were created only for the sake of Israel." Then they fell upon their faces, and said: "Answer us, our Father, answer us, our King." The whole people joined in their cry, and the celestials wept with them, and the Fathers came forth from their graves.

After a three days' fast, Esther arose from the earth and dust, and made preparations to betake herself to the king. She arrayed herself in a silken garment, embroidered with gold from Ophir and spangled with diamonds and pearls sent her from Africa; a golden crown was on her head, and on her feet shoes of gold.

After she had completed her attire, she pronounced the following prayer: "Thou art the great God, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the God of my father Benjamin. Not because I consider myself without blemish, do I dare appear before the foolish king, but that the people of Israel may not be cut off from the world. Is it not for the sake of Israel alone that the whole world was created, and if Israel should cease to exist, who will come and exclaim 'Holy, holy, holy' thrice daily before Thee? As Thou didst save Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah out of the burning furnace, and Daniel out of the den of lions, so save me out of the hand of this foolish king, and make me to appear charming and graceful in his eyes. I entreat Thee to give ear to my prayer in this time of exile and banishment from our land. By reason of our sins the threatening words of the Holy Scriptures are accomplished upon us: 'Ye shall sell yourselves unto your enemies for bondmen and for bond-women, and no man shall buy you.' The decree to kill us has been issued. We are delivered up unto the sword for destruction, root and branch. The children of Abraham covered themselves with sackcloth and ashes, but though the elders sinned, what wrongs have the children committed, and though the children committed wrongs, what have the sucklings done? The nobles of Jerusalem came forth from their graves, for their children were given up to the sword.

"How quickly have the days of our joy flown by! The wicked Haman has surrendered us to our enemies for slaughter.

"I will recount before Thee the deeds of Thy friends, and with Abraham will I begin. Thou didst try him with all temptations, yet didst Thou find him faithful. O that Thou wouldst support his beloved children for his sake, and aid them, so that Thou wouldst bear them as an unbreakable seal upon Thy right hand. Call Haman to account for the wrong he would do us, and be revenged upon the son of Hammedatha. Demand requital of Haman and not of Thy people, for he sought to annihilate us all at one stroke, he, the enemy and afflicter of Thy people, whom he endeavors to hem in on all sides.

"With an eternal bond Thou didst bind us unto Thee. O that Thou wouldst uphold us for the sake of Isaac, who was bound. Haman offered the king ten thousand talents of silver for us. Raise Thou our voice, and answer us, and bring us forth from out of the narrow place into enlargement. Thou who breakest the mightiest, crush Haman, so that he may never again rise from his fall. I am ready to appear before the king, to entreat grace for my inheritance. Send Thou an angel of compassion with me on mine errand, and let grace and favor be my companions. May the righteousness of Abraham go before me, the binding of Isaac raise me, the charm of Jacob be put into my mouth, and the grace of Joseph upon my tongue. Happy the man who putteth his trust in God; he is not confounded. He will lend me His right hand and His left hand, with which He created the whole world. Ye, all ye of Israel, pray for me as I pray in your behalf. For whatsoever a man may ask of God in the time of his distress, is granted unto him. Let us look upon the deeds of our fathers and do like unto them, and He will answer our supplications. The left hand of Abraham held Isaac by the throat, and his right hand grasped the knife. He willingly did Thy bidding, nor did he delay to execute Thy command. Heaven opened its windows to give space to the angels, who cried bitterly, and said: 'Woe to the world, if this thing should come to pass!' I also call upon Thee! O answer me, for Thou givest ear unto all who are afflicted and oppressed. Thou art called the Merciful and the Gracious; Thou art slow to anger and great in lovingkindness and truth. Hear our voice and answer us, and lead us out of distress into enlargement. For three days have I fasted in accordance with the number of days Abraham journeyed to bind his son upon the altar before Thee. Thou didst make a covenant with him, and didst promise him: 'Whenever thy children shall be in distress, I will remember the binding of Isaac favorably unto them, and deliver them out of their troubles.' Again, I fasted three days corresponding to the three classes of Israel, priests, Levites, and Israelites, who stood at the foot of Sinai, and said: 'All the Lord hath spoken will we do, and be obedient.' "

Esther concluded her prayer and said: "O God, Lord of hosts! Thou that searchest the heart and the reins, in this hour do Thou remember the merits of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, that my petition to Thee may not be turned aside, nor my request be left unfulfilled."<sup>143</sup>

---

142. Megillah 15a (comp. Rabinovitch, ad loc.) and Aggadat Esther 45; this is an explanation of ויעבר in 4.17, literally "and he passed over". Targum, ad loc., interprets the word to mean "and he transgressed the law", which forbids fasting on festivals; comp. references cited in the preceding note. According to Seder 'Olam 39, PRE 50, and Esther R. 3.17, the three fast-days were the thirteenth, the fourteenth, and fifteenth of Nisan, whereas according to Panim Aherim 71 (is this the source of Rashi on Megillah, loc. cit.?), they were the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth of that month. The latter view seems to have been shared by Koheleth 8.5, which reads: Whoso keepeth the commandment shall know no evil thing (Eccles. 8.5); this refers to Esther who was busy in carrying out the commandment of "searching for leaven" (this ceremony takes place at night from the thirteenth to the fourteenth of Nisan), and knew not of the evil decreed by Haman against the Jews. The statement, however, that Mordecai went on the first day of Passover to Shushan to arrange for the fast (one of the main features of the fast was the gathering of the people for public prayer) could only be explained if the fast-days were on the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth of Nisan. Comp. note 146, and Luria on PRE, loc. cit.

143. 2 Targum 4.16–5.1. The prayer Anenu taken from the ritual for fast-days is given in Hebrew. The second part of the prayer, beginning with a new alphabet (in the first alphabet read אה אנהא instead of וזה), is perhaps the oldest specimen of an 'Akedah. On the view that Israel and the Torah are necessary for the existence of the world, see text on p. 1, and Index, s. v. "Israel" and "Torah". Ahasuerus is called in Targum Esther "a foolish king"; see text on p. 1135, and notes 7, 49. In the days of this king the curse was fulfilled: "and there ye shall sell yourselves, etc." (Deut. 28.68); see Megillah 11a; Esther R., introduction, 3. The suffering of innocent children does not fail to arouse God's compassion; see text on p. 1034. God created the world with His left hand; see footnote 3 on p. 1. The angels wept when Abraham was about to sacrifice his son Isaac; text on p. 229. The prayer of Esther as found in the Greek Additions to Esther occurs in Josippon 4, whence it is borrowed by many other writers (comp., e. g., BHM V, 5–8 and 12–16, where the Hebrew and Aramaic translations from the Greek [Latin?] text are found), but Targum did not make use of it.

ESTHER INTERCEDES

After finishing her prayer, Esther betook herself to the king, accompanied by three attendants, one walking to the right of her, the second on the other side, and the third bearing her train, heavy with the precious stones with which it was studded.<sup>144</sup> Her chief adornment was the holy spirit that was poured out over her. But scarcely did she enter the chamber containing the idols, when the holy spirit departed from her, and she cried out in great distress: "Eli, Eli, lamah azabtani! Shall I be chastised for acts that I do against my will, and only in obedience to the promptings of sore need?"<sup>145</sup> Why should my fate be different from that of the Mother? When Pharaoh only attempted to approach Sarah, plagues came upon him and his house, but I have been compelled for years to live with this heathen, and Thou dost not deliver me out of his hand. O Lord of the world! Have I not paid scrupulous heed to the three commands Thou didst specially ordain for women?"

To reach the king, Esther had to pass through seven apartments, each measuring ten ells in length. The first three she traversed unhindered; they were too far off for the king to observe her progress through them. But barely had she crossed the threshold of the fourth chamber, when Ahasuerus caught sight of her, and, overcome by rage, he exclaimed: "O for the departed, their like is not found again on earth! How I urged and entreated Vashti to appear before me, but she refused, and I had her killed therefor. This Esther comes hither without invitation, like unto a public prostitute."

In consternation and despair Esther stood rooted to the centre of the fourth chamber. Having once allowed her to pass through the doors under their charge, the guards of the first four rooms had forfeited their authority over her; and to the guards in the other three rooms, she had not yet given cause for interfering with her. Yet the courtiers were so confident that Esther was about to suffer the death penalty, that the sons of Haman were already busy dividing her jewels among themselves, and casting lots for her royal purple. Esther herself was keenly aware of her dangerous position. In her need, she besought God: "Eli, Eli, lamah azabtani," and prayed to Him the words which have found their place in the Psalter composed by King David.<sup>146</sup> Because she put her confidence in God, He answered her petition, and sent her three angels to help her: the one enveloped her countenance with "the threads of grace", the second raised her head, and the third drew out the sceptre of Ahasuerus until it touched her.<sup>147</sup> The king turned his head round, to avoid seeing Esther, but the angels forced him to look her way, and be conquered by her seductive charm.<sup>148</sup>

By reason of her long fast, Esther was so weak that she was unable to extend her hand toward the sceptre of the king. The archangel Michael had to draw her near it. Ahasuerus then said: "I see, thou must have a most important request to prefer, else thou hadst not risked thy life deliberately.<sup>149</sup> I am ready to give it thee, even to the half of the kingdom. There is but one petition I cannot grant, and that is the restoration of the Temple. I gave my oath to Geshem the Arabian, Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the Ammonite, not to allow it to be rebuilt, from fear of the Jews, lest they rise up against me."<sup>150</sup>

For the moment, Esther refrained from uttering her petition. All she asked was, that the king and Haman would come to a banquet she proposed to give. She had good reasons for this peculiar course of conduct. She desired to disarm Haman's suspicions regarding her Jewish descent, and to lead her fellow-Jews to fix their hope upon God and not upon her. At the same time, it was her plan to arouse jealousy of Haman in both the king and the princes. She was quite ready to sacrifice her own life, if her stratagems would but involve the life of Haman, too.<sup>151</sup> At the banquet she therefore favored Haman in such manner that Ahasuerus could not but be jealous. She moved her chair close to Haman's, and when Ahasuerus handed her his wine-cup, to let her drink of it first, she passed it on to his minister.

After the banquet, the king repeated his question, and again made the asseveration, that he would fulfil all her wishes at whatever cost, barring only the restoration of the Temple. Esther, however, was not yet ready; she preferred to wait another day before taking up the conflict with Haman. She had before her eyes the example of Moses, who also craved a day's preparation before going out against Amalek, the ancestor of Haman.<sup>152</sup>

Deceived by the attention and distinction accorded him by Esther, Haman felt secure in his position, priding himself not only on the love of the king, but also on the respect of the queen. He felt himself to be the most privileged being in all the wide realm governed by Ahasuerus.<sup>153</sup>

Filled with arrogant self-sufficiency, he passed by Mordecai, who not only refused to give him the honors decreed in his behalf, but, besides, pointed to his knee, inscribed with the bill of sale whereby Haman had become the slave of Mordecai.<sup>154</sup> Doubly and triply enraged, he resolved to make an example of the Jew. But he was not satisfied with inflicting death by a simple kick.

On reaching his home he was disappointed not to find his wife Zeresh, the daughter of the Persian satrap Tattenai. As always when Haman was at court, she had gone to her paramours. He sent for her and his three hundred and sixty-five advisers, and with them he took counsel as to what was to be done to Mordecai.<sup>155</sup> Pointing to a representation of his treasure chamber, which he wore on his bosom,<sup>156</sup> he said: "And all this is worthless in my sight when I look upon Mordecai, the Jew. What I eat and drink loses its savor, if I but think of him."<sup>157</sup>

Among his advisers and sons, of whom there were two hundred and eight, none was so clever as Zeresh his wife. She spoke thus: "If the man thou tellest of is a Jew, thou wilt not be able to do aught to him except by sagacity. If thou castest him into the fire, it will have no effect upon him, for Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah escaped from the burning furnace unhurt; Joseph went free from prison; Manasseh prayed to God, and He heard him, and saved him from the iron furnace; to drive him out in the wilderness is useless, thou knowest the desert did no evil to the Israelites that passed through it; putting out his eyes avails naught, for Samson blind did more mischief than ever Samson seeing. Therefore hang him, for no Jew has ever escaped death by hanging."<sup>158</sup>

Haman was well pleased with the words of his wife. She fetched artificers in wood and iron, the former to erect the cross, the latter to make the nails. Their children danced around in high glee while Zeresh played upon the cithern, and Haman in his pleasurable excitement said: "To the wood workers I shall give abundant pay, and the iron workers I shall invite to a banquet."

When the cross was finished, Haman himself tested it, to see that all was in working order. A heavenly voice was heard: "It is good for Haman the villain, and for the son of Hammedatha it is fitting."<sup>159</sup>

---

144. Additions to Esther, Addition D; a Hebrew translation thereof is found in Josippon 4. Comp. also Yerahmeel 80, 240.

145. Megillah 15a-15b; 2 Panim Aherim 71. The Talmud further remarks that Esther thought she had committed a sin in describing Ahasuerus, in her prayer, as a dog. To make amends for her disrespect, she later, in her prayer, referred to him as a lion. This remark of the Talmud, as well as the other, that she cried out: "Eli Eli, Lammah 'azabtani", is based on the assumption that in Ps. 22 we have the prayer of Esther before she appeared before the king. Tehillim 22, 180-197, contains a paraphrase of this chapter, giving details of Esther's life alluded to therein. See also Yoma 29a. That in the apocryphal prayer of Esther Ahasuerus is called a lion by Esther, has very likely nothing to do with the rabbinical interpretation of this psalm as containing Esther's prayer. Simonsen, R.E.J., XXII, 283-285, explains the typological interpretation of this psalm by the authors of the New Testament (comp., e. g., Matth. 27.46; Mark 15.34), who refer it to the passion of Jesus, to be due to the fact that this Esther psalm was recited in the Temple and in the synagogue on the fourteenth of Nisan, the original fast of Esther, and it was quite natural for the early Christians to substitute, for the suffering of Esther, the passion of Jesus, which took place on the very same day. This hypothesis, however, cannot be accepted for two valid reasons. In the first place, it may be stated with certainty that the day on which the paschal lamb was sacrificed, far from being a fast-day, was a festival day (comp. Pesahim 4.1 and 5; Yerushalmi, beginning; Megillah Ta'anit 1; Judith 8.6). Then the old sources are of the opinion that Esther fasted not on the fourteenth of Nisan, but on the fifteenth; comp. note 142. It is true the Karaites observe the Fast of Esther on the three days preceding passover (comp. Bashyazi, Aderet Eliyahu, end of חג המצות), but this obviously does not prove anything. A short prayer of Esther is found in Targum Esther 5.1.

146. Tehillim 22, 188, 193, 194; comp. also 183 (where the words addressed by Esther to God read differently) and 184. On the twenty-second psalm, see the preceding note. On the comparison between Esther and Vashti, comp. note 35. The words used by Ahasuerus, "O for the departed, etc.", are a favorite phrase with the Rabbis; comp., e. g., text on p. 750, with regard to the superiority of the patriarchs to Moses. The Addenda to Esther (Addition D) contain a description of Esther's appearance before the king, which in many points reminds one of that of the Midrash. Note especially the statement in Septuagint that the king beholding Esther looked upon her with fierce wrath, so that she swooned; God then changed the spirit of the king into mildness and the king sprang up from his throne, and raised her in his arms until she came to herself again. Josippon 4 contains a Hebrew translation of this Addition to Esther. Comp. also Esther R. 5.1; BHM V, 13–14. Tehillim, loc. cit., is the source for Aggadat Esther 52–53, as well as for 2 Targum 5.1, where ובנוי דהמן is to be read instead of המן, in accordance with Tehillim 22, 193.

147. Megillah 15b; the three angels remind one of the attendants of Esther in the Addition to Esther; compare with p. 1166.

148. 2 Panim Aherim 71. Comp. also Tehillim 22, 194, which reads: An angel struck a blow upon the king's mouth (the text is incomplete, and hence obscure; something was very likely said about a remark made by Ahasuerus derogatory to Esther; comp. ibid., 193), and said to him: "Thy spouse stands waiting, and thou sittest on thy throne." The queen's charm captivated him against his will, and he arose to meet her.

149. 2 Panim Aherim 71. Here it is also stated that Ahasuerus was blind, but his eyes became bright as soon as he directed them towards Esther; whereupon he held out the golden sceptre to her. A miracle happened, and the sceptre extended to the place where Esther stood (the distance is variously described as twelve, sixteen, twenty-four, sixty, and two hundred cubits), so that she was able to touch it. Yea, a still greater miracle happened. Whenever Esther visited the king, the sceptre of its own accord would move towards her; Megillah 15b; Tehillim 22, 194–195.

150. Targum Esther 5.3; Megillah 15b; compare with p. 1146.

151. Megillah 15b, where several other reasons are given for this peculiar conduct; comp. also 2 Targum 5.8, and 2 Panim Aherim 71.

152. Panim Aherim 71. The somewhat obscure sentence היתה שומעת וגו' שלא means that up to this time Esther did not consent to gratify the king's desire; but now she promised that she would no longer withhold her conjugal duties. On the only wish of the queen that the king would not grant, see the references in the preceding note.

153. PRE 50; Esther R. 5.11 (end). The statement made in the latter source that God would not permit the pious to suffer more than three days, and that accordingly Haman's fall took place on the fifteenth of Nisan, three days after the issue of the decree of annihilation (on the date, see note 142) is based on an old Haggadah; comp. BR 91.7 and 56.1; Tehillim 22, 183.

154. Aggadat Esther 55. Compare with p. 1150.

155. Abba Gorion 36,2; Panim Aherim 72 (read with Aggadat Esther 55; יצא בעלך לקרורי פוק לשוק "if thy husband left for the country, it is time for thee to visit the market-place"); Esther R. 5.11.

156. Megillah 15b (top).

157. 2 Panim Aherim 72.

158. Abba Gorion 36–37 (on the מולא "furnace" from which Manasseh was saved, see text on p. 1055); 2 Panim Aherim 72; Esther R. 5.11; 2 Targum 5.11, where read תנורא "furnace" instead of תורא "ox". On the number of Haman's children, concerning which opinions vary greatly (it is given as thirty, one hundred, two hundred and eight), comp. Megillah 15b; Targum Esther 5.11; Tehillim 22, 181; text on p. 1176. On the view that the pious are saved from all kinds of death, see also text on p. 471.

159. 2 Targum 5.14; Abba Gorion 37; Panim Aherim 48 (here Gabriel takes the place of the heavenly voice); Esther R. 5.11; BHM VI, 56; Aggadat Esther 61; an unknown Midrash in Yalkut II, 1059, on Esther 7. In the last two sources the carpenter and smith employed by Haman to make the cross are mentioned by name. According to 2 Panim Aherim 72, Zeresh advised her husband not to engage in any evil designs against Mordecai, because the Jews are like a stone: if any one falls on it, he gets hurt; and if it falls on any one, he gets bruised. Haman, however, did not follow her counsel, but that given him by his friends. On the comparison between Israel and a stone, see also Abba Gorion 24 and Esther R. 3.6.

THE DISTURBED NIGHT

The night during which Haman erected the cross for Mordecai was the first night of Passover, the very night in which miracles without number had ever been done for the Fathers and for Israel. But this time the night of joy was changed into a night of mourning and a night of fears. Wherever there were Jews, they passed the night in weeping and lamenting. The greatest terrors it held for Mordecai, because his own people accused him of having provoked their misfortunes by his haughty behavior toward Haman.<sup>160</sup>

Excitement and consternation reigned in heaven as well as on earth.<sup>161</sup> When Haman had satisfied himself that the cross intended for his enemy was properly constructed, he repaired to the Bet ha-Midrash, where he found Mordecai and all the Jewish school children, twenty-two thousand in number, in tears and sorrow. He ordered them to be put in chains, saying: "First I shall kill off these, and then I shall hang Mordecai." The mothers hastened thither with bread and water, and coaxed their children to take something before they had to encounter death. The children, however, laid their hands upon their books, and said: "As our teacher Mordecai liveth, we will neither eat nor drink, but we will perish exhausted with fasting." They rolled up their sacred scrolls, and handed them to their teachers with the words: "For our devotion to the study of the Torah, we had hoped to be rewarded with long life, according to the promise held out in the Holy Scriptures. As we are not worthy thereof, remove the books!" The outcries of the children and of the teachers in the Bet ha-Midrash, and the weeping of the mothers without, united with the supplications of the Fathers, reached unto heaven in the third hour of the night, and God said: "I hear the voice of tender lambs and sheep!" Moses arose and addressed God thus: "Thou knowest well that the voices are not of lambs and sheep, but of the young of Israel, who for three days have been fasting and languishing in fetters, only to be slaughtered on the morrow to the delight of the arch-enemy."

Then God felt compassion with Israel, for the sake of his innocent little ones. He broke the seal with which the heavenly decree of annihilation had been fastened, and the decree itself he tore in pieces.<sup>162</sup> From this moment on Ahasuerus became restless, and sleep was made to flee his eyes, for the purpose that the redemption of Israel might be brought to pass. God sent down Michael, the leader of the hosts of Israel, who was to keep sleep from the king,<sup>163</sup> and the archangel Gabriel descended, and threw the king out of his bed on the floor, no less than three hundred and sixty-five times, continually whispering in his ear: "O thou ingrate, reward him who deserves to be rewarded."

To account for his sleeplessness, Ahasuerus thought he might have been poisoned, and he was about to order the execution of those charged with the preparation of his food. But they succeeded in convincing him of their innocence, by calling to his attention that Esther and Haman had shared his evening meal with him, yet they felt no unpleasant effects.<sup>164</sup> Then suspicions against his wife and his friend began to arise in his mind. He accused them inwardly of having conspired together to put him out of the way. He sought to banish this thought with the reflection, that if a conspiracy had existed against him, his friends would have warned him of it. But the reflection brought others in its train: Did he have any friends? Was it not possible that by leaving valuable services unrewarded, he had forfeited the friendly feelings toward him?<sup>165</sup> He therefore commanded that the chronicles of the kings of Persia be read to him. He would compare his own acts with what his predecessors had done, and try to find out whether he might count upon friends.<sup>166</sup>

What was read to him, did not restore his tranquillity of mind, for he saw a poor man before him—none other than the angel Michael—who called to him continually: "Haman wants to kill thee, and become king in thy stead. Let this serve thee as proof that I am telling thee the truth: Early in the morning he will appear before thee and request permission of thee to kill him who saved thy life. And when thou inquierest of him what honor should be done to him whom the king delighteth to honor, he will ask to be given the apparel, the crown, and the horse of the king as signs of distinction.”<sup>167</sup>

Ahasuerus's excitement was soothed only when the passage in the chronicles was reached describing the loyalty of Mordecai. Had the wishes of the reader been consulted, Ahasuerus had never heard this entry, for it was a son of Haman who was filling the office of reader, and he was desirous of passing the incident over in silence. But a miracle occurred—the words were heard though they were not uttered!

The names of Mordecai and Israel had a quieting influence upon the king, and he dropped asleep. He dreamed that Haman, sword in hand, was approaching him with evil intent, and when, early in the morning, Haman suddenly, without being announced, entered the antechamber and awakened the king, Ahasuerus was persuaded of the truth of his dream. The king was still further set against Haman by the reply he gave to the question, how honor was to be shown to the man whom the king delighteth to honor. Believing himself to be the object of the king's good-will, he advised Ahasuerus to have his favorite arrayed in the king's coronation garments, and the crown royal put upon his head. Before him one of the grandees of the kingdom was to run, doing herald's service, proclaiming that whosoever did not prostrate himself and bow down before him whom the king delighteth to honor, would have his head cut off, and his house given over to pillage.

Haman was quick to notice that he had made a mistake, for he saw the king's countenance change color at the mention of the word crown. He therefore took good care not to refer to it again. In spite of this precaution, Ahasuerus saw in the words of Haman a striking verification of his vision, and he was confident that Haman cherished designs against his life and his throne.<sup>168</sup>

---

160. 2 Targum Esther 6.1; Panim Aherim 73–74; comp. PK 5, 55b; PR 15, 78, as well as the references given in footnote 76 on p. 190, and text on p. 541, with regard to the first night of Passover as the night of miracles. According to some, however, the “disturbed night” was the second night of Passover. Comp. note 142.

161. Megillah 15b (on the interpretation of מלך “king”, Esther 6.12, as referring to the “King of the world”, i. e. God, see note 140); PRE 50; Panim Aherim 48; 2 Panim Aherim 73; Esther R. and Targumim 6.1.

162. Abba Gorion 37–38 (on the last sentence about the innocent babes, see Makiri on Ps. 8, 50); Esther R. 5.12; BHM VI, 56; 2 Targum Esther 6.1 (Munk's edition). Comp. also Ekah 1, 69–70.

163. 2 Targum 6.1. According to another reading, it was the “angel of insomnia” who kept the king awake. Comp. also the following note, and note 167.

164. Abba Gorion 38–39; Panim Aherim 48 (this passage has Michael instead of Gabriel); 2 Panim Aherim 74. The number of times Ahasuerus was thrown out of bed corresponds to the days of the solar year. This correspondence to the solar year is to be noticed also in the number of Haman's counsellors (compare with p. 1168). In Aggadat Esther “sixty-one” is to be corrected accordingly. Some maintain that Ahasuerus saw, in a dream, Haman assuming a threatening attitude, and this disturbed his sleep greatly. When shortly after that Haman in the presence of the king expressed his wish to be attired in the royal insignia, Ahasuerus saw in it the fulfilment of his dream; comp. PRE 50; Koheleth 5.2; Esther R. 6.1; BHM VI, 57; Yalkut II, 1057, on Esther 7 (derived from an unknown source); Panim Aherim 75; Targum 5.1.

165. Megillah 15b; Panim Aherim 48; 2 Panim Aherim 74.

166. Megillah 15b; Panim Aherim 48; 2 Panim Aherim 74; comp. Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6, 10.

167. 2 Targum Esther 6.1 (David's edition). Elsewhere it is Satan, the great adversary of man, who appears in the disguise of a beggar. Compare footnote 226 on p. 224.

168. PRE 50; BHM VI, 57; Abba Gorion 39; 2 Panim Aherim 74–75; Yalkut II, 1057 (towards the end); 2 Targum Esther 6.1 and 9. Comp. also Alkabez, 159b; Mid-rash Eliyyahu II, 161b; the references in note 164.

Shimshai the son of Haman (comp. note 95) was secretary to the king, and in order not to be made to read the passage about Mordecai, he struck it out; but Gabriel (or according to 2 Panim Aherim 75 and Yalkut, loc. cit., Elijah) wrote it down again as soon as it was struck out. See Megillah 15b; 2 Targum, loc. cit.; comp. also Kad ha-Kemah, Purim, 2, 47–48. In 2 Targum 6.1 read שְׁמֵי סָפְרָא instead of עַם שׁוֹפְרָא, which gives no sense.

THE FALL OF HAMAN

Haman was soon to find out that he had gone far afield in supposing himself to be the man whom the king delighted to honor. The king's command ran: "Hasten to the royal treasure chambers; fetch thence a cover of fine purple, a raiment of delicate silk, furnished forth with golden bells and pomegranates and bestrewn with diamonds and pearls, and the large golden crown which was brought me from Macedonia upon the day I ascended the throne. Furthermore, fetch thence the sword and the coat of mail sent me from Ethiopia, and the two veils embroidered with pearls which were Africa's gift. Then repair to the royal stables, and lead forth the black horse whereon I sat at my coronation. With all these insignia of honor, seek out Mordecai!"

Haman: "Which Mordecai?"

Ahasuerus: "Mordecai the Jew."

Haman: "There be many Jews named Mordecai."

Ahasuerus: "The Jew Mordecai who sits at the king's gate."

Haman: "There be many royal gates; I know not which thou meanest."

Ahasuerus: "The gate that leads from the harem to the palace."

Haman: "This man is my enemy and the enemy of my house. Rather would I give him ten thousand talents of silver than do him this honor."

Ahasuerus: "Ten thousand talents of silver shall be given him, and he shall be made lord over thy house, but these honors must thou show unto him."

Haman: "I have ten sons. I would rather have them run before his horse than do him this honor."

Ahasuerus: "Thou, thy sons, and thy wife shall be slaves to Mordecai, but these honors must thou show unto him."

Haman: "O my lord and king, Mordecai is a common man. Appoint him to be ruler over a city, or, if thou wilt, even over a district, rather than I should do him this honor."

Ahasuerus: "I will appoint him ruler over cities and districts. All the kings on land and on water shall pay him obedience, but these honors must thou show unto him."

Haman: "Rather have coins struck bearing thy name together with his, instead of mine as hitherto, than I should do him this honor."

Ahasuerus: "The man who saved the life of the king deserves to have his name put on the coin of the realm. Nevertheless, these honors must thou show unto him."

Haman: "Edicts and writings have been issued to all parts of the kingdom, commanding that the nation to which Mordecai belongs shall be destroyed. Recall them rather than I should do him this honor."

Ahasuerus: "The edicts and the writings shall be recalled, yet these honors must thou show unto Mordecai."

Seeing that all petitions and entreaties were ineffectual, and Ahasuerus insisted upon the execution of his order, Haman went to the royal treasure chambers, walking with his head bowed like a mourner's, his ears hanging down, his eyes dim, his mouth screwed up, his heart hardened, his bowels cut in pieces, his loins weakened, and his knees knocking against each other.<sup>169</sup> He gathered together the royal insignia, and took them to Mordecai, accompanied on his way by Harbonah and Abzur, who, at the order of the king, were to take heed whether Haman carried out his wishes to the letter.

When Mordecai saw his enemy approach, he thought his last moment had come. He urged his pupils to flee, that they might not “burn themselves with his coals.” But they refused, saying: “In life as in death we desire to be with thee.” The few moments left him, as he thought, Mordecai spent in devotion. With words of prayer on his lips he desired to pass away. Haman, therefore, had to address himself to the pupils of Mordecai: “What was the last subject taught you by your teacher Mordecai?” They told him they had been discussing the law of the ‘Omer, the sacrifice brought on that very day so long as the Temple had stood. At his request, they described some of the details of the ceremony in the Temple connected with the offering. He exclaimed: “Happy are you that your ten farthings, with which you bought the wheat for the ‘Omer, produced a better effect than my ten thousand talents of silver, which I offered unto the king for the destruction of the Jews.”

Meantime Mordecai had finished his prayer. Haman stepped up to him, and said: “Arise, thou pious son of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Thy sackcloth and ashes availed more than my ten thousand talents of silver, which I promised unto the king. They were not accepted, but thy prayers were accepted by thy Father in heaven.”

Mordecai, not yet disabused of the notion that Haman had come to take him to the cross, requested the grace of a few minutes for his last meal. Only Haman’s repeated protests reassured him. When Haman set about arraying him with the royal apparel, Mordecai refused to put it on until he had bathed, and had dressed his hair. Royal apparel agreed but ill with his condition after three days of sackcloth and ashes. As luck would have it, Esther had issued the command that the bathkeepers and barbers were not to ply their trades on that day, and there was nothing for Haman to do but perform the menial services Mordecai required. Haman tried to play upon the feelings of Mordecai. Fetching a deep sigh, he said: “The greatest in the king’s realm is now acting as bathkeeper and barber!” Mordecai, however, did not permit himself to be imposed upon. He knew Haman’s origin too well to be deceived; he remembered his father, who had been bathkeeper and barber in a village.

Haman’s humiliation was not yet complete. Mordecai, exhausted by his three days’ fast, was too weak to mount his horse unaided. Haman had to serve him as footstool, and Mordecai took the opportunity to give him a kick. Haman reminded him of the Scriptural verse: “Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he is overthrown.” Mordecai, however, refused to apply it to himself, for he was chastising, not a personal enemy, but the enemy of his people, and of such it is said in the Scriptures: “And thou shalt tread upon the high places of thine enemies.”<sup>170</sup>

Finally, Haman caused Mordecai to ride through the streets of the city, and proclaimed before him: “Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honor.” In front of them marched twenty-seven thousand youths detailed for this service from the court. In their right hands they bore golden cups, and golden beakers in their left hands, and they, too, proclaimed: “Thus shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honor.” The procession furthermore was swelled by the presence of Jews. They, however, made a proclamation of different tenor. “Thus shall be done”, they cried out, “unto the man whose honor is desired by the King that hath created heaven and earth.”<sup>171</sup>

As he rode along, Mordecai gave praise to God: “I will extol Thee, O Lord; for Thou hast raised me up, and hast not made my foes to rejoice over me. O Lord my God, I cried unto Thee, and Thou hast healed me. O Lord, Thou hast brought up my soul from Sheol; Thou hast kept me alive, that I should not go down to the pit." Whereupon his pupils joined in with: "Sing praise unto the Lord, O ye saints of His, and give thanks to His holy name. For His anger is but for a moment; in His favor is life; weeping may tarry for the night, but joy cometh in the morning." Haman added the verse thereto: "As for me, I said in my prosperity, I shall never be moved. Thou, Lord, of Thy favor hadst made my mountain to stand strong. Thou didst hide Thy face; I was troubled." Queen Esther continued: "I cried to Thee, O Lord; and unto the Lord I made supplication. What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit? Shall the dust praise Thee? Shall it declare Thy truth?" and the whole concourse of Jews present cried out: "Thou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing; Thou hast loosed my sackcloth, and girded me with gladness, to the end that my glory may sing praise to Thee, and not be silent. O Lord my God, I will give thanks unto Thee forever."<sup>172</sup>

When this procession passed the house of Haman, his daughter was looking out of the window. She took the man on the horse to be her father, and the leader of it, Mordecai. Raising a vessel filled with offal, she emptied it out over the leader—her own father. Scarce had the vessel left her hand, when she realized the truth, and she threw herself from the window, and lay crushed to death on the street below.<sup>173</sup>

In spite of the sudden change in his fortunes, Mordecai ended the eventful day as he had begun it, in prayer and fasting. No sooner was the procession over than he put off the royal robes, and, again covering himself with sackcloth, he prayed until night fell.

Haman was plunged in mourning, partly on account of the deep disgrace to which he had been subjected, partly on account of the death of his daughter.<sup>174</sup> Neither his wife nor his friends could advise him how to mend his sad fortunes. They could hold out only sorry consolation to him: "If this Mordecai is of the seed of the saints, thou wilt not be able to prevail against him. Thou wilt surely encounter the same fate as the kings in their battle with Abraham, and Abimelech in his quarrel with Isaac. As Jacob was victorious over the angel with whom he wrestled, and Moses and Aaron caused the drowning of Pharaoh and his host, so Mordecai will overcome thee in the end."<sup>175</sup>

While they were yet talking, the king's chamberlains came, and hastily carried Haman off to the banquet Esther had prepared, to prevent him and his influential sons from plotting against the king.<sup>176</sup> Ahasuerus repeated his promise, to give Esther whatever she desired, always excepting the restoration of the Temple. This time, casting her eyes heavenward, Esther replied: "If I have found favor in Thy sight, O Supreme King, and if it please Thee, O King of the world, let my life be given me, and let my people be rescued out of the hands of its enemy."<sup>177</sup> Ahasuerus, thinking these words were addressed to him, asked in irritation: "Who is he, and where is he, this presumptuous conspirator, who thought to do thus!" These were the first words the king had ever spoken to Esther herself. Hitherto he had always communicated with her through an interpreter. He had not been quite satisfied she was worthy enough to be addressed by the king. Now made cognizant of the fact that she was a Jewess, and of royal descent besides, he spoke to her directly, without the intervention of others.<sup>178</sup>

Esther stretched forth her hand to indicate the man who had sought to take her life, as he had actually taken Vashti's, but in the excitement of the moment, she pointed to the king. Fortunately the king did not observe her error, because an angel guided her hand instantaneously in the direction of Haman,<sup>179</sup> whom her words described: "This is the adversary and the enemy, he who desired to murder thee in thy sleeping-chamber during the night just passed; he who this very day desired to array himself in the royal apparel, ride upon thy horse, and wear the golden crown upon his head, to rise up against thee and deprive thee of thy sovereignty. But God set his undertaking at naught, and the honors he sought for himself, fell to the share of my uncle Mordecai, whom this oppressor and enemy thought to hang."<sup>180</sup>

The anger of the king already burnt so fiercely that he hinted to Esther, that whether Haman was the adversary she had in mind or not, she was to designate him as such. To infuriate him still more, God sent ten angels in the guise of Haman's ten sons, to fell down the trees in the royal park. When Ahasuerus turned his eyes toward the interior of the park, he saw the ruthless destruction of which they were guilty. In his rage he went out into the garden. This was the instant utilized by Haman to implore grace for himself from Esther. Gabriel intervened, and threw Haman upon the couch in a posture as though he were about to do violence to the queen. At that moment Ahasuerus reappeared. Enraged beyond description by what he saw, he cried out: "Haman attempts the honor of the queen in my very presence! Come, then, ye peoples, nations, and races, and pronounce judgment over him!"<sup>181</sup>

When Harbonah, originally a friend of Haman and an adversary of Mordecai, heard the king's angry exclamation, he said to him: "Nor is this the only crime committed by Haman against thee, for he was an accomplice of the conspirators Bigthan and Teresh, and his enmity to Mordecai dates back to the time when Mordecai uncovered their foul plots. Out of revenge therefor, he has erected a cross for him." Har-bonah's words illustrate the saying: "Once the ox has been cast to the ground, slaughtering knives can readily be found." Knowing that Haman had fallen from his high estate, Harbonah was intent upon winning the friendship of Mordecai.<sup>182</sup> Harbonah was altogether right, for Ahasuerus at once ordered Haman to be hanged. Mordecai was charged with the execution of the king's order, and Haman's tears and entreaties did not in the least move him. He insisted upon hanging him like the commonest of criminals, instead of executing him with the sword, the mode of punishment applied to men of rank guilty of serious misdemeanors.<sup>183</sup>

The cross which Haman, at the advice of his wife Zeresh and of his friends, had erected for Mordecai, was now used for himself. It was made of wood from a thorn-bush. God called all the trees together and inquired which one would permit the cross for Haman to be made of it. The fig-tree said: "I am ready to serve, for I am symbolic of Israel, and, also, my fruits were brought to the Temple as first fruits." The vine said: "I am ready to serve, for I am symbolic of Israel and, also, my wine is brought to the altar." The apple-tree said: "I am ready to serve, for I am symbolic of Israel." The nut-tree said: "I am ready to serve, for I am symbolic of Israel." The Etrog tree said: "I should have the privilege, for with my fruit Israel praises God on Sukkot." The willow of the brook said: "I desire to serve, for I am symbolic of Israel." The cedar-tree said: "I desire to serve, for I am symbolic of Israel." The palm-tree said: "I desire to serve, for I am symbolic of Israel." Finally the thorn-bush came and said: "I am fitted to do this service, for the ungodly are like pricking thorns." The offer of the thorn-bush was accepted, after God gave a blessing to each of the other trees for its willingness to serve.

A sufficiently long beam cut from a thorn-bush could be found only in the house of Haman, which had to be demolished in order to obtain it.<sup>184</sup> The cross was tall enough for Haman and his ten sons to be hanged upon it. It was planted three cubits deep in the ground, each of the victims required three cubits space in length, one cubit space was left vacant between the feet of the one above and the head of the one below, and the youngest son, Vaizatha, had his feet four cubits from the ground as he hung.<sup>185</sup>

Haman and his ten sons remained suspended a long time, to the vexation of those who considered it a violation of the Biblical prohibition in Deuteronomy, not to leave a human body hanging upon a tree overnight. Esther pointed to a precedent, the descendants of Saul, whom the Gibeonites left hanging half a year, whereby the name of God was sanctified, for whenever the pilgrims beheld them, they told the heathen, that the men had been hanged because their father Saul had laid hand on the Gibeonites. "How much more, then," continued Esther, "are we justified in permitting Haman and his family to hang, they who desired to destroy the house of Israel?"<sup>186</sup>

Beside these ten sons, who had been governors in various provinces, Haman had twenty others, ten of whom died, and the other ten of whom were reduced to beggary.<sup>187</sup> The vast fortune of which Haman died possessed was divided in three parts. The first part was given to Mordecai and Esther, the second to the students of the Torah, and the third was applied to the restoration of the Temple.<sup>188</sup> Mordecai thus became a wealthy man. He was also set up as king of the Jews. As such he had coins struck, which bore the figure of Esther on the obverse, and his own figure on the reverse.<sup>189</sup> However, in the measure in which Mordecai gained in worldly power and consideration, he lost spiritually, because the business connected with his high political station left him no time for the study of the Torah. Previously he had ranked sixth among the eminent scholars of Israel, he now dropped to the seventh place among them.<sup>190</sup> Ahasuerus, on the other hand, was the gainer by the change. As soon as Mordecai entered upon the office of grand chancellor, he succeeded in subjecting to his sway the provinces that had revolted on account of Vashti's execution.<sup>191</sup>

---

169. 2 Targum Esther 56.10 (the horse שִׁפְרָגָה is very likely identical with the famous horse Shabdaz of the Persian king Khorsau II; comp. Yalkut III, 250, seq., and accordingly the correct reading is שִׁפְרָגָה); Megillah 16a; PRE 50; BHM VI, 57; 2 Panim Aherim 75; Aggadat Esther 62–63. In the last-named source, as well as in Abba Gorion 39, a badly corrupted passage is given about the royal raiment. Comp. Ginzberg's remarks in Orientalistische Literaturzeitung XVIII, 180, top, where it is shown that the Midrash speaks here of Labrat-Lilat as having woven those garments. Comp. also Targum Esther 6.10.

170. Megillah 16a; PK 8, 71b–72b (on the village קְרִינוֹס where Haman or, according to others, his father, was a barber, comp. Schlatter, Verkanntes Griechisch, 65–66 and vol. V, pp. 385–386); PR 18, 93a–93b; WR 28.6; Abba Gorion 40–41; 2 Panim Aherim 75–76; BHM VI, 57; Esther R. 6.10; 2 Targum 6.11; Aggadat Esther 63–64. That Mordecai first thought Haman was mocking him is also stated by Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.10. On the view that Haman's fall took place on the day of the 'Omer, that is, on the sixteenth day of Nisan, see note 142.

171. 2 Targum 6.11; 2 Panim Aherim 76. According to the latter source and Abba Gorion 41, Mordecai was led in a torch procession; comp. the procession in honor of Joseph, vol. II, p. 74. On the interpretation of "king" in 6.11 as God, the King of the universe, see notes 140 and 161.

172. PK 8, 72b; PR 18, 93b; WR 28.6, Abba Gorion 41; BHM VI, 57; Esther R. and 2 Targum 6.11. The four first-named Midrashim give also the different view according to which Mordecai did not pay any attention to the honors shown to him. The reason was because the procession started early in the morning when he was reciting the Shema' (comp. Abba Gorion 39, which reads: Haman intended to hang Mordecai at the time of the reading of the Shema'), and he would not permit himself to interrupt his prayer. Comp. similar legends in p. 394, with regard to Jacob and also p. 1114, with regard to Daniel. According to 2 Panim Aherim 76, Mordecai expressed his thanks to God by reciting the Hodu psalm (i. e., Ps. 136), the so-called Great Hallel; comp. Pesachim 117a, where it is stated that Mordecai and Esther composed the Hallel at the time when Haman arose against them.

173. Megillah 16a, and somewhat differently in 2 Panim Aherim 76 and Esther R. 6.11, where it is said that Haman's daughter threw herself out of the window when she realized her father's disgrace. Comp. also Buber's note 38 on Abba Gorion 41. According to Targum Esther 5.1, this daughter of Haman was one of the maidens gathered together in Shushan from among whom a queen was to be selected in the place of Vashti. Her own hopes and her father's expectation were sorely disappointed when a repulsive disease attacked her. Comp. also 2 Targum (Munk's edition), note 291.

174. Megillah 16a; Abba Gorion 41; 2 Panim Aherim 76; Esther R. 6.12. The last-named three sources as well as 2 Targum Esther 6.12 point out that on this day Haman had to perform four kinds of menial services: he acted as barber, masseur, groom, and herald to Mordecai. Compare also to pp. 1173–1174. Alkabez, 167b, quotes from the commentary of R. Eleazar of Worms on Esther that Haman became a leper on that day. Comp. also ibid., 172b.

175. Targum Esther 6.13. According to Megillah 16a, Panim Aherim 48, 2 Panim Aherim 76, and Aggadat Esther 65–66, Zeresh told her husband that he might prevail against any other Israelite, but not against a descendant of the tribe of Judah (יהודים in Esther 6.13 is taken in its original meaning) or the Rachel tribes, who, especially the latter, are always chosen by God to gain victory for Israel. Compare text on p. 290; pp. 579–580 and 680. 2 Targum 6.6 makes Zeresh say to her husband that if his adversary is a descendant or a relative (read קרובי instead עבדיו) of Hananiah, Mishaël, and Azariah he would certainly not prevail against him.

176. Abba Gorion 41 (read כתובין "secretaries", instead of כדובין, corresponding to סופרי המלך in PRE 50; in Yalkut II, 1057, סקריטורין is very likely to be read instead of סקנדרין); 2 Panim Aherim 76; Megillah 16a. As to the positions held by the sons of Haman, see references cited in note 168 and Ratner's note 20 on Seder 'Olam 29.

177. Targum Esther 7.3. The first מלך in this verse is taken to refer to God, the second to Ahasuerus; comp. notes 140, 161 and 171. Ahasuerus was wroth with Esther because she continued to withhold from him the secret of her descent. See Panim Aherim 76; comp. the following note.

178. Megillah 16a; WR 26.8, which reads: The king hinted to her that she should appear as Haman's accuser even if he were not her enemy and that of her people. See Tan. B. III, 84; Tan. Emor 3; Ekah 1.13 (not in ed. Buber); 2 Targum Esther 7.5; Shemuel 24.121–122. Targum maintains that at that moment the king did not yet know of Esther's noble descent, and accordingly conversed with her through an interpreter. This is perhaps the view of the Midrashim cited above, but Megillah, loc. cit., explicitly states that on this occasion Esther told the king "who she was".

179. Megillah 16a; on the correct text of this passage, see Rabbinovicz ad loc. and Aggadat Esther 66. On Haman as the one who was responsible for Vashti's death, refer also to p. 1137.

180. Targum Esther 7.6; 2 Panim Aherim 76, which reads: He is the adversary of the celestial, the oppressor of the terrestrial, the enemy of the fathers (read לאבות instead of לאומות) and the oppressor of their children. Comp. also 2 Targum Esther 7.6, which reads: This is the one (הא מן=המן) who wished to stretch his hand against the Jewish people, the children of the "Lord of All".

181. Megillah 16a; PRE 50 (where it is said Michael, assuming the form of one of Haman's sons, felled down the trees); 2 Panim Aherim, 76–77; Targum Esther 7.7; an unknown Midrash quoted in the commentary on Esther by R. Judah ibn Shoshan, as cited by Alkabez, 172a. Comp. note 178. According to 2 Targum 7.7, Ahasuerus commanded to fell trees in the park, so that his anger should find an outlet, but he failed of his object.

182. Panim Aherim 77. The proverb about the ox reads here: Once the ox has been cast to the ground, many slaughterers are found. Comp., however, Ekah 1, 71; Shabbat 32a. See also Yalkut II, 1059, where הרבה is very likely to be read instead of הבא. As to the "wicked" Harbonah being originally a party to the plot against Mordecai, see also Megillah 16a, and 2 Targum Esther 7.9. On the identification of Harbonah with Elijah, refer also to p. 1000.

183. 2 Targum Esther 7.10, where Haman's entreaties are given in full.

184. Abba Gorion 41–42; Panim Aherim 47–48; Yalkut II, 1054; Aggadat Esther 60–61; Esther R. 5.11, where the description of the competition of the trees is given in a more elaborate form than in the other Midrashim. An entirely different version of this legend about the cross of Haman is found in 2 Panim Aherim 77 (here it is the cedar-tree which furnishes the cross) and Aggadat Esther 51–58, with which account 2 Targum 7.10 partly agrees. In these sources none of the trees was willing to furnish the cross, because it did not wish to be defiled by the "impure body" of Haman. There can be no doubt that originally those were two different legends: one about the refusal of the trees to furnish the cross for Mordecai, and another about the competition of the trees for the distinction to be used as the cross for Haman. The present form of the legends is rather confused owing to the fact that the cross used for Haman had originally been intended for Mordecai, and accordingly the different motives of the legends could no longer be kept apart. It is difficult to establish the relation of this legend to the Christian legend about the cross of Jesus, but there can be no doubt that there exists some connection between the two cross legends. In 2 Targum, loc. cit., read פנדירא דבר לאכסניא למסיק, Haman is said to have taken the same “lodging” as the son of Pandora, i. e., Jesus. As to the provenance of the cedar of which the cross was made for Haman, comp. the two views given in Abba Gorion 37. According to one, it was taken from the royal park (comp. Esther 7.8), while the other maintains that it was one of the cedar-trees used by Noah for the ark and was brought to Shushan by Haman’s son Parshandatha, who was governor of קרדוניה, where the ark “rested” (compare with footnote 48 on p. 150). He gave it to his father to be used for the cross upon which to hang Mordecai. Comp. also Yalkut I, 256 (end), and II, 1059, as well as 2 Panim Aherim 72–73. According to PRE 50, the cross was made of a beam taken from the holy of holies.

185. 2 Targum Esther 9.14; Aggadat Esther 73 and Lekah on 9.14, and somewhat differently 1 Targum, which contains also the additional remark that one hundred and eight children of Haman were killed in Shushan. Shimshai was decapitated, and seventy others, as well as Zeresh, fled and were reduced to beggary. That the cross was fifty cubits high and twelve wide is also stated by Abba Gorion 37, and Aggadat Esther 51. On the number of Haman’s sons, see notes 158, and 187.

186. 2 Targum Esther 9.24. Compare with p. 935.

187. Megillah 15b, which gives also the different view that seventy of Haman’s sons became beggars; comp. notes 158 and 185, as well as the following note.

188. Tehillim 21, 181. Comp. Megillah 10b (bottom). Esther received Haman’s house with all its treasures, and she appointed Mordecai as superintendent; Targum Esther 8.1–2; Aggadat Esther 70. Comp. also Sabba’, Ha’azinu, 162b, who quotes from the Targum of Jonathan ben Uzziel that those killed by the Jews in Shushan were the children of Haman, and those killed in other cities were all Amalekites. Our Targum of Esther 9.14–17 reads somewhat differently.

189. BR 39.11; PRE 50 (in Luria’s edition the text is abridged); Esther R. 8.15; 2 Targum 6.10 (towards the end). The sudden change in Mordecai’s life is dwelt upon in Tehillim 22, 184 and Tan. Mikkez 3, and a parallel is drawn between his history and that of his ancestor Joseph. Comp. BR 87.6; Abba Gorion 22; 2 Panim Aherim 66; Esther R. 3.4. A fantastic description of the five presents received by Mordecai from the king (Esther 8.15–16) is found in 2 Targum Esther (David’s edition, ad loc.); compare also with p. 389. On the phylacteries (=טפין), comp. Megillah 16a, which contains also the haggadic interpretation of Esther 3.16 found in Targum, ad loc. Another interpretation of this verse occurs in Haserot 35 and 31, whence in Aggadat Esther 71.

190. Megillah 16b. On the Jews as masters of the other nations, comp. 2 Targum Esther 10.1.

191. Tehillim 22, 194. Compare with p. 1137, and 2 Targum Esther (end). Those among the Gentiles who became converted and were circumcized (this is how Septuagint and Josephus, Antiqui., XI, 6.13, render מתידיים, Esther 8.17; in Judeo-German jüdischen means “circumcise”) were not considered as perfect Jews, because their motive for circumcision was not above suspicion; Yebamot 24b. The Amalekites were not admitted at all as proselytes, but were killed; compare with footnote 188 and p. 582.

THE EDICT OF THE KING

The edict issued against the Jews was revoked by Ahasuerus in the following terms:

“King Ahasuerus sends this letter to all the inhabitants of water and earth, to all the rulers of districts, and to generals of the army, who dwell in every country; may your peace be great! I write this to you to inform you, that although I rule over many nations, over the inhabitants of land and sea, yet I am not proud of my power, but will rather walk in lowliness and meekness of spirit all my days, in order to provide for you great peace. Unto all who dwell under my dominion, unto all who seek to carry on business on land or on sea, unto all who desire to export goods from one nation to the other, from one people to the other—unto them all, I am the same, from one end of the earth to the other, and none may seek to cause excitement on land or on sea, or enmities between one nation and another, between one people and another. I write this, because, in spite of our sincerity and honesty with which we love all the nations, revere all the rulers, and do good to all the potentates, there are nevertheless people who were near to the king, and into whose hand the government was entrusted, who by their intrigues and falsehoods misled the king, and wrote letters which are not right before heaven, which are evil before men, and harmful for the empire. This was the petition they requested from the king: that righteous men should be killed, and most innocent blood be shed, of those who have not done any evil, nor were guilty of death—such righteous people as Esther, celebrated for all virtues, and Mordecai, wise in every branch of wisdom, there is no blemish to be found in them nor in their nation. I thought that I was requested concerning another nation, and did not know it was concerning the Jews, who were called the Children of the Lord of All, who created heaven and earth, and who led them and their fathers through great and mighty empires. And now as he, Haman, the son of Hammedatha, from Judea, a descendant of Amalek, who came to us and enjoyed much kindness, praise, and dignity from us, whom we made great, and called ‘father of the king’, and seated him at the right of the king, did not know how to appreciate the dignity, and how to conduct the affairs of state, but harbored thoughts to kill the king and take away his kingdom, therefore we ordered the son of Hammedatha to be hanged, and all that he desired we have brought upon his head; and the Creator of heaven and earth brought his machinations upon his head.”<sup>192</sup>

As a memorial of the wonderful deliverance from the hands of Haman, the Jews of Shushan celebrated the day their arch-enemy had appointed for their extermination, and their example was followed by the Jews of the other cities of the Persian empire, and by those of other countries. Yet the sages, when besought by Esther, refused at first to make it a festival for all times, lest the hatred of the heathen be excited against the Jews. They yielded only after Esther had pointed out to them that the events on which the holiday was based, were perpetuated in the annals of the kings of Persia and Media, and thus the outside world would not be able to misinterpret the joy of the Jews.

Esther addressed another petition to the sages. She begged that the book containing her history should be incorporated in the Holy Scriptures. Because they shrank from adding anything to the triple Canon, consisting of the Torah, the Prophets, and the Hagiographa, they again refused, and again they had to yield to Esther’s argument. She quoted the words from Exodus, “Write this for a memorial in a book,” spoken by Moses to Joshua, after the battle at Rephidim with the Amalekites. They saw that it was the will of God to immortalize the warfare waged with the Amalekite Haman. Nor is the Book of Esther an ordinary history. Without the aid of the holy spirit, it could not have been composed, and therefore its canonization resolved upon “below” was endorsed “above”.<sup>193</sup> And as the Book of Esther became an integral and indestructible part of the Holy Scriptures, so the Feast of Purim will be celebrated forever, now and in the future world, and Esther herself by her pious deeds acquired a good name both in this world and in the world to come.<sup>194</sup>

---

192. 2 Targum 8.13. The dependence of this edict in favor of the Jews upon the “decree of Artaxerxes concerning the Jews” in the Additions to Esther (Addition E) cannot be doubted, though the divergence between the two edicts is very great. In accordance with Septuagint מהנדיא of Targum is to be emended to מקדוניה. The introductory sentences of the edict in Targum are copied from the “Letter of Artaxerxes” (Addition B), commanding the annihilation of the Jews. There is no trace in rabbinic literature of the last Addition in Septuagint, the Interpretation of the Dream of Mordecai. On the dream in rabbinic sources, see text on p. 1162 and footnote 132.

193. Megillah 71a (this passage contains also the controversy whether the book of Esther “defiles the hands”, that is, whether it is considered canonical); Makkot 23b; Yerushalmi Berakot 9, 14c; Megillah 1, 70d; Tan. B. I, 217; Tan. Wa-Yehi 8; Tehillim 57, 296; Ruth R. 2, 4; Shitah Hadashah (beginning); Aggadat Esther 77–78.

The last-named source (76) has the following statement: The Megillah (book of Esther) was composed in Shushan, and was forwarded (by Mordecai and Esther) to the Holy Land, that it should be copied into the Assyrian script. The Talmud is given as source for this statement, but neither the printed texts nor the MSS. of the Talmud, with the exception of one late MS. (comp. Price, Yemenite MS. of Megillah), contain this statement. On the regulations concerning the writing of the Megillah, see Megillah 16b, which reads: The scroll of Esther must be written in lines as though it were the Torah (Pentateuch) itself. For an explanation of this talmudic passage, see Sha'are Teshubah, No. 204, and Meiri, ad loc. That the name of God is not found in the book of Esther (yet it is hinted at; comp. notes 140, 161, 171) is due to the fact that God did not care to testify to the mixed marriage between Ahasuerus and Esther (comp. Malachi 2.13, and also p. 68). The only other book of the Bible which does not contain the name of God (though it is hinted at; compare with footnote 2 on p. 945) is Song of Songs. This book is devoted to the description of the beauty of man and woman; yet it is not beauty, but the propagation of the human race which is the ideal of marriage. See Hasidim 183, and comp. note 3 of the editor.

194. Yerushalmi Megillah 1, 70d, which reads: In the time to come all the other parts of the Hagiographa, nay, even the prophetic books, will lose their value, and only the Pentateuch and the book of Esther will retain their worth; Aggadat Esther 81; Lekah 9.28 and 31 (refers it to the time of the Messiah); Mishle 9, 61. In the last source a view is quoted to the effect that of all the festivals only Purim and the Day of Atonement will be celebrated in the time to come. Comp. Al Kabez, 208b–209b and footnotes 300, 301 on p. 632. Esther risked her life for her people, and as her reward a book of the Bible bears her name, and Scripture speaks of Israel as the people of Esther; ShR. 30.3; Makiri, Prov., end. The source of the latter is a version of Midrash Mishle different from ours, see MHG I, 339 and Aggadat Esther 23.

INDEXES

The original index of The Legends of the Jews was prepared by Rabbi Benjamin (Boaz) Cohen and published in 1938. Cohen's compilation included four indexes: subjects, passages, Hebrew and Aramaic words and phrases, and piyyutim. For this two-volume edition of The Legends of the Jews Cohen's latter three indexes are reproduced with the page and note numbers of this edition. The subject index is completely new.

INDEX OF SUBJECTS

Alphabetization. The entries in the subject index are alphabetized letter by letter, across spaces and hyphens, up to inverting commas. Entries encompassing both singular and plural items, e.g., angel(s), are alphabetized as singular forms. Subentries are alphabetized according to the first main word; that is, coordinating conjunctions and prepositions are not alphabetized, though the conjunction "that" and the preposition "to" with infinitives are alphabetized.

When enumerations constitute a distinct group within an entry, they appear in numerical order before other subentries. For example, under the name of a Hebrew month, significant dates appear before other descriptive subentries. Elsewhere numbers are alphabetized under the first letter of the number and interspersed among other entries.

Spelling of names and other terms. Spellings of personal names and place-names vary in the text and notes of The Legends of the Jews; usually the spelling that is most frequently used in the text is the one that appears in this index. Some names have been made to conform to modern usage (e.g., the names of the Hebrew letters and months) and to the system of transliteration used in this index (e.g., Yozer prayer is rendered as Yotzer). Exceptions are names that would begin with Y if transliterated from Hebrew. These names begin with J in the index, as they do in the text and notes of Legends. Hyphens and underdots have been eliminated in most cases.

Personal names are written in full at the first occurrence but are usually abbreviated to the first letter of the name in subentries, unless abbreviation would cause confusion.

Transliteration of Hebrew. Transliteration of Hebrew is according to general systems in use today, with the following equivalents: v = ם; z = ם; h = ן; t = ם and ן; k = ם and ן; kh = ם; s = ם and ם; tz = ם; sh = ם; aleph and ayin are not represented.

INDEXES OF PASSAGES, HEBREW AND ARAMAIC WORDS AND PHRASES, AND PIYYUTIM

These three indexes are Boaz Cohen's compilations, with the page and note numbers of this edition. In his preface, Cohen stated: "The Index of Passages lists all the passages unless otherwise indicated. It was found inadvisable to cite all the references to the Talmud and Midrash because of their great number, and accordingly only those passages which are explained in the notes are cited. In the Index of Hebrew and Aramaic phrases, the verbs are mostly arranged according to roots" (1938 ed., p. viii).

SUBJECTS

A

Aaron

- A. the Levite and Judean Hur, holding up Moses' arms during battle against Amalek, 581
- acquiring second crown, 672 n399 (see also crown[s])
- angel of death having no power over, 744

Aaron (cont.)

- blessing people, 659
- breastplate of, 652 (see also breastplate; high priest: breastplate of; precious stones)
- 12 precious stones in, 342
- burial of
  - bier of, floating in air, 742
  - on Mount Her, 736
- crusade of, against idolatrous Hebrews, 435 n6

Aaron (cont.)

- death of, 740-743, 815
  - A. becoming aware of imminence of death, 742 n636
  - on boundary of Edom, 736
  - clouds of glory vanishing at, 745
  - corpse not decaying, 411-412 (see also under corpse[s])
  - four months after death of Miriam, 737

Aaron (cont.)

death of (cont.)
 funeral ceremony for A., lasting 30 days, 743
 God decreeing that A. to die in desert, 821
 by kiss of God, 741, 743 n639, 744
 by kiss of Shekinah, 411
 last hour of, 742-743 n637
 in month of Av, 752 n666
 on Mount Nebo, 814
 mourning for, 743-744
   by angels, 743
   by men as well as women, 744 n643
   in Moserah, 746
 preparation for, 739-740
   by undressing, 743 n637
 descendants of priesthood belonging to, 48, 509 to bestow priestly blessing on Israel even after destruction of Temple, 678
 in Egypt, 435 n6, 515
 first to learn Torah from Moses, 634
 and golden calf
   A. building altar for golden calf, 621
   A.'s motives in fashioning golden calf, 650, 650 n351
   A. yielding to will of people in making golden calf, 620 in hall of gold in Paradise, 23 n97 (see also Paradise: divisions of) humility of, 743
 husband of Elisheba, 661
 as ideal of kindness and lover of peace, 743, 744 n643
 image of, on Solomon's throne, 968 intimidated by people, 622 n265
 kindness of, 740 n635
 as leader of people, 490 n79 at left hand of God, 535 (see also God: left hand of)
 and leprosy
   A. not punished with leprosy, 703 n495
   A.'s leprosy lasting only a moment, 702 marrying sister of Nahshon, prince of Judah, 883 n130
 merits of (see also merits)
   clouds of glory given on account of, 573, 574 n113
   two of sons saved on account of, 730 n599

Aaron (cont.)

and Miriam, slandering Moses, 700-702 (see also Aaron: and Moses and Miriam) modesty of, 684 n437
 and Moses
   A. accompanying M. on mission to redeem Israel from Egypt, 513
   A. afflicted with leprosy for slandering M., 702
   A. appointed high priest by M., 658
   A. guilty of joining M. in transgression, 735
   A. in ark with infant M., 478
   A. taught by M., 516
   complete equality of, 517 n152
   eating paschal meal in Egypt, 539
   extraordinary appearance of, 518
   first to recite Hallel, 539 (see also Hallel) meeting in wilderness, 515
   before Pharaoh, 517-520
     A. led by Gabriel into palace, 518 rejoicing at mission, 515-516
     resembling angels, 518
 and Moses and Miriam, as three shepherds, 737-739 name, meaning of ("woe unto this pregnancy"), 474, 475 n36 never receiving direct revelation, 674 n405 not included in census of Levites, 683 n429 (see also census[es] of Israel) not to be anointed in time to come, 658 n371
 one of eight whose corpse not touched by worms, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])
 one of five pious men for sake of whose merits Israel to be redeemed, 502 (see also under pious: men) one of five pious men pious from first to last, 1044 n39 (see also under pious: men)
 one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
 one of seven pious men of world, 968 (see also under pious: men)

Aaron (cont.)

one of 77 pious men in Israel, 629 n287 (see also under pious: men)
 one of ten just men in Israel, 628
 one of three deliverers sent by God to deliver Israel from Egypt, 648
 one of two redeemers, 430 n434 (see also Moses) and peace
   A. as lover of peace, 715 n543, 733 n605, 743, 744 n643
   A. attempting to establish peace, 740
   A.'s special task as peacemaker, 744
   A.'s special virtue being love of peace, 715 n543 people's love for, 743
 and plagues
   A. charged with three plagues proceeding from earth and water, 523 plagues of Egypt brought through A., 526-529
 and priesthood
   A. appointed high priest, 649-650
   A. as high priest in heavenly Temple, 816
   high priest to come from line of A., 48 Israel convinced of priesthood of A., 728-731 priesthood belonging to A., 509
   priestly activities of A.
     A. distinguished by lighting candles in sanctuary, 677-678
     A. observing certain ceremonies when entering sanctuary, 676
 priestly clothing of bells on robe atoning for slander, 650 breeches atoning for unchastity, 650 eight garments (coat, breeches, mitre, girdle, breastplate, ephod, robe, golden plate), 650 expiatory virtues of, 650
 as prophet, 814
 rewarded for kind, generous spirit by being allowed to bear Urim and Thummim on heart, 516

Aaron (cont.)

rewarded for pious deeds when people worshipped golden calf, 650 rod of almonds of, representing Third (Messianic) Temple, 731
 n600
 becoming serpent, 519
 blossoming of blossoms of almonds on rod representing Second Temple, 731 n600
 showing A.'s priesthood, 730 buds of almonds on rod representing First Temple,
 731 n600
 rod bringing forth blossoms
 on one side and almonds on other, 646, 731 n600 rod bringing forth sweet almonds on one side and bitter almonds on other,
 731 n600
 rod never losing blossoms and almonds, 730
 stories about, 731 n600 created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78 (see also under creation: sixth
 day) establishing David's claim to kingdom, 731 n600
 hidden by Josiah, 731 n600,
 1062 n118
 miraculously disappearing at destruction of Temple, 730
 same as rod David held against Goliath, 731 n600
 rod of Judah, 730 n600
 rod of Moses, 842 n6 rod with which A. performed
 miracles before Pharaoh,
 731 n600
 rod with which Jacob crossed Jordan, 730-731 n600 rod with which Moses divided Red Sea, 731 n600
 as serpent devouring rods of Pharaoh's magicians, 519 stretched out
 to cause frogs to come upon Egypt, 527-528
 over waters of Nile, 526-527 to be fetched by Elijah and handed over to Messiah, 730

Aaron (cont.)

rod of (cont.)
 used by Judean kings until destruction of Temple, 730
 second, Zadok as, 947 n10
 second child of Jochebed and Amram, 474
 sin of, not trying to prevent Moses' angry words, 735 n619
 and sons forbidden to drink wine or strong drink when going into Tabernacle, 676 receiving direct revelation from God, 676
 retiring for seven days after anointing, 657
 and sons and Zadok, as only anointed priests, 658 n371
 sons of anger of Moses at, 798 n862 stature of, shrinking with knowledge of impending death, 742 n636
 strength of
 A. lifting 22,000 Levites in ceremony of consecration, 674 extraordinary, 674
 teaching people how to pray, 740
 how to study Torah, 740
 Shema, 740
 to perform work of reconciliation, 650 welcoming Jethro with Moses, 584
 Ab (month). See Av Abaddon
 in fifth earth, 6
 one of seven divisions of hell, 13, 507
 Samael searching for Moses in, 835
See also earth(s): fifth; hell Abagtha (angel)
 one of seven angels of confusion
 sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's
 banquet, 1135
 presser of winepress, 1135
 Abal (father of Daniel), 1115 n6
 Abarim, Mount
 Moses looking at Holy Land from, 800, 814
See also Hor, Mount; Nebo, Mount; Pisgah, Mount
 Abbahu, Rabba bar
 as ideal of beauty, 60 n24
 questioning Elijah about Esther's intentions, 1010
 saved from poverty by Elijah, 1001-1002

Abba Kolon (Father of Colony)

making settlement of Rome possible, 948 n11
 teaching first settlers of Rome how to make mortar, 948 n11

Ab Bet Din. See Av Bet Din

Abdamon

baffling Solomon with riddle, 955

Abdon (successor of Jephthah)

protecting Israel against Moabites, 876 ruling during peaceful time, 877
 n110

Abel

appointed judge in heavenly court, 109 n31

birth of

in Adamah, second earth, 110
 of ignoble spirit, 102 n3
 when Adam was 77 years old, 103 n4

blood of, flowing into Cain's mouth, 103

burial of, 108, 109 n31

with Adam, 97

death of

in chastity, 106 n17
 childless, 41 n172
 manner of, 106, 106 n19, 108
 n20

as keeper of sheep, 103

life span of, 50 days, 105 n11

name, meaning of, 104 n8, 106
 n17

offering of accepted by God, 103

 as best of flocks, 103
 consumed by fire, 103
 as peace offering, 105 n12
 as whole offering, 105 n12
 one of seven pious men erecting altars, 771 (see also under pious: men)

soul of

as accuser of Cain, 109 n31
 returning in Jacob and Moses,
 109 n31
 to judge every soul, 100 n142
 as type of pious, 109 n31

Abezi-thibod

activities of ascribed to Mastema in Book of Jubilees, 965 n56

 ascribed to Sammael in rabbinic
 legend, 965 n56
 adversary of Moses and Israel in Egypt and at Red Sea, 965
 n56

Abezi-thibod (cont.)

- name, meaning of ("father who is devoid of counsel"), 965 n56
- powerful spirit, 965 n56
- Abiathar (Amora)
  - Elijah explaining to A. about Ephraimite and concubine, 1010
- Abiathar (high priest)
  - great-grandson of Eli's son Phinehas, last high priest of line of Ithamar, 891
  - only priest of Nob to escape massacre, 908 n104
  - priest of Anathoth, 908 n104
  - removed from high priesthood by David or Solomon, 947 n10
  - succeeded by Zadok as high priest, 893 n30
  - Urim and Thummim refusing to give answer to, 947 n10
- Abidan (son of Gideoni)
  - name, meaning of ("my father decreed"), 679
  - prince of tribe of Benjamin, 679
- Abiel (grandfather of Saul)
  - merits of, 898 (see also merits)
- Abigail
  - beauty, wisdom, and prophetic gifts of, 940
  - as ideal of beauty, 60 n24
  - as ideal of pious woman, 942 n136
  - and Nabal, 942 n137
  - one of four women of perfect beauty, 940, 941 n132
  - supervising fifth division of women's Paradise, 940
  - supervising one of seven classes of women, 23 n97
  - wife of David, 940
  - wife of Nabal, 940
- Abi Gedor
  - name of Moses given by grandfather Kohath, 480
- Abihu
  - elder from tribe of Asher, 696
  - image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
  - and Nadab, performing priestly service, 602 n205
  - son of Aaron, one of 77 pious men in Israel, 629 n287 (see also under pious: men)
  - welcoming Jethro with Moses, 584
  - See also* Nadab: and Abihu
- Abijah (son of Jeroboam and Ano), 982 n2, 985

Abijah (cont.)

- making pilgrimage to Jerusalem, 985
- pious, 982 n5
- to be Ephraimite Messiah, according to Kabbalah, 985 n17
- Abijah (son of Rehoboam), 984-985
  - crimes of, bringing about death, 984-985
  - gaining possession of Bethel, 985
  - idolatry of, 985
  - king in Jerusalem, 984-985
  - war of, against Jeroboam, 984
  - wicked, 982 n5
- Abijam
  - victory of, over Jeroboam, 985 n16
- Abika
  - as hero in Jerusalem at time of Babylonian campaign, 1074
  - identified with Chagiras of Adiabene, 1075 n26
- Abimelech
  - another name for Achish, king of Philistines, 918
  - as title of Philistine kings, 422 n429
  - See also* Abimelech (king of Philistines)
- Abimelech (high priest at Nob), 906
  - consulting Urim and Thummim for David, 906
- Abimelech (king of Gerar)
  - and Abraham, covenant between 920, 921 n51
  - contrasted with Abimelech son of Gideon, 874 n103
  - identified with Abimelech in time of Abraham, 263 n65
  - and Isaac, 260, 263 n65
    - A. stricken with leprosy on account of treatment of I., 260-261
    - renewing covenant, 261
    - using astrology, 262 n56
- Abimelech (king of Philistines)
  - at burial of Sarah, 235
  - at circumcision of Isaac, 218
  - covenant with, 222-224
  - curse of, on Sarah's children, causing blindness of Isaac, 267 n74
  - death of, 235
  - giving gifts to Abraham, 217
  - giving robe to Sarah, 217
  - God appearing to, 216
  - positive view of, 217 n192
  - recovery of, 218
  - taking Sarah as wife, 216
  - wife of, bearing child after being barren, 217-218

Abimelech (cont.)

- women at court of
  - becoming pregnant, 217 n202
  - being barren, 218 n202
- See also* Abimelech
- Abimelech (son of Gideon)
  - compared to thornbush, 872
  - greedy for riches, 874 n103
  - Jair as successor of, 872
  - meeting death through millstone, 872
  - murdering brothers, 872
  - reigning three years, 874 n103
  - by Shechemite concubine, 872
- Abimenes of Kittim
  - war of Hadar of Edom against, 421
- Abinadab (son of Saul)
  - also called Ishvi, 904 n77, 907
  - name, meaning of, 904 n77
- Abiram
  - elder from tribe of Joseph, 696
  - name, meaning of, 719
- abirim
  - "the mighty" (i.e., angels), and manna, 571 n98
- Abishag
  - Adonijah requesting to marry, 946 n3
  - as ideal of beauty, 60 n244
  - not married by David, 946 n3
  - Shunammite as sister of, 1028
- Abishai
  - and David
    - A. and miraculous deliverance of D., 934
    - slaying Ishbi, 934
  - death of, in plague following famine of David, 936
  - helping Joab kill Abner, 937 n123
  - killing Orpah, 934
- Abi Soco
  - name of Moses given by nurse, 480
- Abi Yisreel
  - one of seven men refusing to worship Baal, 872-873
- Abi Zanoah
  - name of Moses given by Aaron, 480
- ablution
  - before revelation on Sinai, 599 n192 (see also purification)
- Abner
  - accompanying Saul on visit to witch of En-dor, 903 n74
  - and Amasa, as two lions in Torah, 907 n91
  - David mourning for, 947 n6
  - general of Saul, 900, 916
  - as giant, 905, 907 n94

Abner (cont.)

as head of Sanhedrin, 907 n91
 killing Asahel in self-defense, 905 mortally wounded by Joab, 905
 name, meaning of, 907 n91
 refusing Saul's command to execute priests at Nob, 906
 sin of, 907 n94
 son of witch of En-dor, cousin of Saul, 900, 905-906

Abodah Zarah. See avodah zarah

abomination

one of five insulting names hurled at David by Shimei, 931 n96

Abraham

and Abimelech (see also Abimelech [king of Gerar]; Abimelech [king of Philistines])

Abraham paying visit of condolence at court of Abimelech, 235

covenant between, 920, 921 n51
 prayers of Abraham on behalf of Abimelech's wives, 219 n203

addressing letters of alphabet, 1079, 1081 n35

addressing Torah, 1079

and Akedah (see Abraham: and Isaac; sacrifice of) altars erected by

in Ai, 187

in Canaan, 187

in Hebron, 187

for sacrifice of Isaac, 229

and angels

A. given milk by Gabriel, 170

A. soothed by Raphael after circumcision, 1127

A. tended in prison by Gabriel, 175

angels appearing to A., 206 n132, 207 n143

angels eating while guests of A., 634, 635 n309

angels leaving A. for Sodom, 212

angels questioning God about A., 279 n134

appearing at death of Moses, 837

appearing in Hebron

in dream, 249

as tenth man for service on Day of Atonement, 249

birth of, 169, 170 n12, 181

A. deserted in cave, 170, 182
 place of, 172 n20

Abraham (cont.)birth of (cont.)

read in stars by Nimrod, 168 star appearing at, 107 n7, 181, 186

blessings by

A. blessing Jacob, 255-256

A. refraining from blessing Isaac, 244 n316

A. refraining from blessing sons of concubines, 244 n316

blessings of

age of, when blessed, 75 years, 266

by God, 237, 819

having daughter Bakkol ("with all things"), 238 n273 having no daughter, 238 n273

 three in number, 187

and Book of Razel, 90 n110 (see also Razel, Book of) bosom of, 248 n318

calling pet sheep, bellwether of flock, by name of Isaac, 232 n245 and Cave of Machpelah seeing Adam and Eve in, 234-235

speaking to Adam in, 235

wishing to be buried in, 236 n263

chastity of, superior to that of Job, 462 n36

chronology of, 202 n115

circumcision and receiving commandment of, in old age, 219 n205 circumcision of, 203 n122, 218

(see also Abraham: and covenant; Abraham: covenant of; circumcision; covenant[s]: of Abraham; covenant[s]: sign of)

A. commanded to put sign of covenant on him and male members of household, 202

A. consulting with three friends concerning, 202

A. soothed by Raphael, source of eighth of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127

in daylight, 815 n904

foreskin removed by bite of scorpion, 203 n126 necessary before begetting son, 218

performed by self, 203 n126

Abraham (cont.)circumcision of (cont.)

performed by Shem, 203 n126
 place of, 202, 232 n249

on 10 Tishri, Day of Atonement, 202 (see also date; Day of Atonement; Tishri) commanded not to rely on astrology, 198, 199 n108 commanded to go to Palestine, 188 n60

as composer of psalms, 823

contrasted with David, 189 n61

and covenant, 172 n13 (see also under Abraham: and God)
 of pieces at age of 70 years, 202 n115 covenant of (see also Abraham: circumcision of; circumcision; covenant[s]: sign of) despised by descendants of Esau, 254 n24

crowns of, three in number, inherited by Israel, 188 n57 and Death, conversation between, 247

death and burial of

A. buried next to Sarah, 237 n268

A. preparing for death, 256

A.'s corpse not decaying, 411-412, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])

A.'s refusal to die, 58 n20

A.'s soul removed by God as in dream, 247

A. wishing to be buried in Cave of Machpelah, 236 n263 death of A., 237, 244-246, 256 day of, Esau guilty of five crimes on, 257 disease beginning after, 257 n36

five years before allotted time, 257

by kiss of Shekinah, 411
 man's life span shortened after, 257 n36

funeral and mourning for A. 248 n317

deliverance of, from fire, 161 n76, 175-177, 186

as first of seven miracles visible to all, 219 n208

for sake of merits of Jacob, 255, 400 (see also Jacob: merits of; merits)

Abraham (cont.)

descendants of

- A. deserting, 263 n69
- commanded concerning fringes and phylacteries, 196 (see also phylacteries; tzitzit)
- descended not from Elam but from Arpachshad, 1132
- from Keturah as Japhethites, i.e., Greeks, 244 n314
- Lacedaemonians as, 244 n314
- Queen of Sheba as, 1073 n21
- Spartans as, 244 n314
- 30 nations, 165 n88, 251

dream of, 257 n36

and Egypt, 191 n78

- A. enriched by Pharaoh in, 190
- A. learning astronomy and astrology in, 190
- A. learning witchcraft in, 191 n80
- A. meeting with first Pharaoh in, 192
- A. praised for going to, 191 n66
- A. traveling to

- because of famine in Canaan, 189
- as sin, 191 n66 (see also Abraham: sins of)

length of stay in, 191 n78

and Eliezer (see also Eliezer)

- A. freeing E., 241

emigration from Palestine one of three sins of, 200 n110 (see also Abraham: sins of)

Ethan the Ezrahite identified with, 955 n19

and evil inclination

- A. turning evil inclination into good inclination, 939 n128
- evil inclination having no power over, 237, 412 (see also under evil inclination)

exemplar to all, 217

faith of, rewarded by redemption of Israel, 198

famine in time of, 189, 191 n64, 259

as father of proselytes, 203 n122

as father of 30 nations, 165 n88, 251

favored by older Haggadah (universalistic), 256 n35

first to

- declare God "possessor of heaven and earth," 197 n100

Abraham (cont.)first to (cont.)

- distribute possessions among children in lifetime, 238 n272
- lavish hospitality, 238 n272
- separate priests' portion from his fortune, 260
- show signs of old age, 238 n272
- suffer pain, 238 n272
- as fourth of seven pious men, 682 (see also under pious: men)
- fulfilling commandment not to take name of Lord in vain, 593

fulfilling rabbinical injunctions beforehand, 237

and furnace

- A. saved from, as source of first of Eighteen Benedictions, 1126
- A. willing to be burned in, to sanctify God's name, 232 n248

and generations

- 7 from A. to Moses, 224 n222
- 10 from Noah to A., 102 n1, 167
- 15 from A. to Solomon, 967 n57
- 30 from A. to Zedekiah, 967 n57

giving books on magic to children of concubines, 244 n313

and God

- A. calling creator God the true God, 184
- A. invited by God to make a request, 198 (see also God: actions of, inviting persons . . .)
- A. proclaiming God to Babylonians, 172
- to Nimrod, 173
- A. questioning God, one of three sins of, 200 n110 (see also Abraham: sins of)
- A. recognizing God of own accord, 183-184, 184 n49, 456 n13 (see also God: recognizing God of one's own accord)

conversation between

- concerning Isaac and his descendants, 230-231
- concerning sins of progeny, 261

- God revealing Self to A., 188 n59, 199 n107

Abraham (cont.)and God (cont.)

- God revealing to A. that seed would have to serve in Egypt, 578

- God's promise to A., 187 (see also Abraham: and covenant; covenant[s])
- concerning Holy Land, scorned by Esau, 258
- concerning offspring, 193-194, 198

- that they would go from Egypt with great substance, 398 n335

- not to tempt A. or Isaac in future, 232 n247

- good deeds of, rewarded by division of waters of Jordan River for Joshua, 844 n14

good qualities of, 237, 245

- three in number (good eye, loving soul, humble spirit), 765 n734

and Hagar

- A. building city in east for idolatrous sons of H., 243
- A. remarrying H. after Sarah's death, 203 n120
- conjugal relations of, 203 n120
- divorce of, 220

and Haran

- cast into furnace, 186
- having no compassion, 246
- as head of academy, 237, 239 n277 (see also Abraham: house of; academy; Bet ha-Midrash)

and heaven

- A. asking to be taken to heaven in body, 246
- A. in heavenly court, 211 n159
- A. taken to view heaven on chariot, 246

as hero of Akedah legends, 228 n229, 232 n242 (see also Akedah)

history of, recounted to Pharaoh by Balaam, 482

hospitality of, 204, 206 n130, 206 n138, 206 n140, 223, 224 n223, 584-585

- A. as first to lavish, 238 n272

- A. waiting on guests, 584
- to archangels, 205-206

- failure as reason for sacrifice of Isaac, 224

Abraham (cont.)

- house of, as place of instruction, 223 (see also Abraham: as head of academy; academy; Bet ha-Midrash)
- humility of, 236 n267
  - two commandments for Israel as reward for, 196, 198 n106
- as iconoclast, 184-186
- and idolatry
  - A. and idols of Terah, 182-184, 184 n49, 185
  - A. denigrating idols, 173-175
  - A. preaching to family about senselessness of worship of celestial bodies, 170, 183-184
  - senselessness of worship of elements, 172 n16, 183-184
  - wickedness of idols, 184 n49
  - A. said to have composed book of laws on, 191 n80
  - A. smashing idols, 174-175
  - A. as vendor of idols, 173-174, 186 n50
- image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
- as indulgent father, 434 n1
- interceding for sinners in world to come, 248
- and Isaac (see also Isaac: and Abraham)
  - A. building altar for sacrifice of, 229
  - A. concerned about wife for, 237-238
  - A. doubting announcement of I.'s birth, 205
  - A. investing I. with right of primogeniture, 244 n316
  - A. known as father of I., 251
  - A. leaving inheritance to I., 219-220
  - A. refraining from blessing I., 243, 244 n316, 819
  - A. reserving Torah for I., 244 n313
  - A.'s age at birth of I., 100 years, 1079
  - A.'s readiness to sacrifice I. manna as reward for, 569
  - I. indebted to merits of A., 261 (see also Abraham: merits of; merits)
  - I.'s reverence for A., 260

Abraham (cont.)

- and Isaac (cont.)
  - sacrifice of (see also Akedah; Isaac)
    - A. as hero of Akedah legends, 228 n229, 232 n242
  - bluntness of knife for, 231-232 n242
  - as last of temptations of A., 224 (see also Abraham: temptations of)
    - to take place three days after command, 233 n255
  - similarities between, 251, 259, 942 n140
- and Isaac and Jacob (see also Abraham: and patriarchs)
  - blood of paschal lamb on doorposts and lintel as reminder of, 535
  - living 180 years each, 62 n28
  - merits of
    - God's mercy on Israel for sake of, 510 (see also merits)
  - symbolizing three natures of God according to Philo, 319 n304
  - in third division of Paradise, 19 (see also Paradise: divisions of)
- and Ishmael
  - A. seeking I., 221-222
- Israel in wilderness compared to, 569
- and Jacob
  - A. instructing J. in ways of Lord, 256 n34
  - A.'s fondness for J., 255
  - A.'s merits one of five charms to protect J., 300 n247 (see also Abraham: merits of; merits)
  - A.'s resignation contrasted with J.'s impatience, 378 n228
  - J. bringing meal to A. on Pentecost, 255-256
  - parallels between, 319 n303
  - rivalry between, 508 n118
  - superiority of J. to A., 256 n35
  - and Jebusites, covenant between, 293
  - journeys of (see also Abraham: migration of)
    - to Canaan, 179, 187
    - to Gerar, 216
    - to Hebron, 222
    - leaving native country, 188 n53

Abraham (cont.)

- kindness and piety of
  - rewarded by heavenly gifts to Israel in wilderness, 570 n92
- as king of Damascus, 181 n46
- lack of trust in God of, 199 n110
- lamenting over Temple, 1079
- last years of, 243-244
- legends relating A. to sun, 197 n98
- life span of
  - A. giving David five years of, 912 n12
  - shortened because of Esau, 257
- like one of glorified beings, 200 n114
- and Lot
  - A. assisted by celestial powers in battle against kings who captured L., 195
  - kindness of A. toward L., 214 n171
  - prayers of A. for deliverance of L., 213-214
  - strife between, 196 n82
  - married to three daughters of sons of Noah, 244 n309
- and Melchizedek
  - A. taught priesthood and Torah by M., 196
- merits of (see also merits)
  - forgiveness of Israel's sins on account of, 232 n248
  - Isaac indebted to, 261
  - miracles wrought for Daniel on account of, 1097 n77
  - Moses receiving Torah on account of, 616 n248
  - one of five charms to protect Jacob, 300 n247
  - reason for Esau's dominion over world, 259 n51
  - world created for sake of, 167
- Messianic time made known to, 198
- and Methuselah's sword, 132 n63
- migration of, 179, 188 n54 (see also Abraham: journeys of)
- missionary activity of, 170-175, 177-179, 180 n45, 187-189, 189 n61, 204, 328 n1
- as father of proselytes, 203 n317
- Mordecai compared to, 1141 n60
- Moses compared to, 837
- name
  - meaning of, 203 n122
  - mentioned in blessings, 187

Abraham (cont.)

name (cont.)
 never called Abram in rabbinic literature, 256 n35
 numerical value of (= 248), 203 n122
 repetition of, by angel, 232 n242
 names and titles of (see also under individual titles)
 A. describing self as "servant of Lord," 805 n880 (see also servant of Lord) beloved of God, 168 n4, 1081 n33
 elect of God, 912 n1
 father of proselytes, 203 n122
 favorite of God, 223
 friend of God, 168 n4, 1081 n33
 God-fearing one, 397
 the Hebrew, 196 n90
 the merciful of the three fathers, 211 n160
 servant of God, 452 n2
 and Nimrod (see also Nimrod: and Abraham)
 A. before N., 186 n50
 A. commanded by Gabriel to follow N. to Babylon, 172
 A. imprisoned by N., 172 n20, 175, 177 n28, 186
 A. killing N., 259 n38
 A. proclaiming God to N., 173
 A.'s birth read in stars by N., 168
 A.'s superiority to N., 176
 N.'s attempts to kill A. with fire, 175-176 oath of, to live at peace with Philistines for certain time, 547 observing all sacrificial ceremonies, 232 n242 observing commandment against false witness, 594 observing commandment not to covet, 594 observing Noachian precepts, 239 n275 (see also Noachian commandments)
 observing Torah, 239 n275
 before it was revealed, 206 n140
 offspring of, blemished Ishmael as, 406
 sons of Keturah as, 406
 offspring of, true, 220 n214
 old age of, 237

Abraham (cont.)

one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
 one of five men pious from first to last, 1044 n39 (see also under pious: men)
 one of five pious men, for sake of whose merits Israel to be redeemed, 502 (see also under pious: men)
 one of four God-fearing men, 1026
 one of seven patriarchs of world, 968
 one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
 one of seven pious men erecting altars, 771 (see also under pious: men)
 one of shepherds who assist Messiah on the left, 100 n142
 one of six righteous men who drew Shekinah back from six heavens, 473
 one of ten just men in Israel, 628 in Paradise
 A. entering Paradise by narrow gate, 246-247
 A. unworthy to pronounce blessing over wine, 939
 and patriarchs (see also Abraham: and Isaac and Jacob)
 A. as favorite, 168 n2
 A. as first, 263 n69
 A. having highest rank, 256 n35
 and Pentecost, A. permitted to celebrate, 255-256
 among Philistines, 216-218, 222 piety of, redemption of Israel as reward for, 536 n201 planting vineyards in Beersheva, 223 pleading for sinners, 210-212
 prayers of
 A. instituting daily morning prayer, 1128 n58 (see also prayers, Jewish) on behalf of Abimelech's wives, 219 n203 for deliverance of Lot, 213-214 morning devotions, 213-214
 as prophet, 216
 punishment of, for lack of trust, 199 n110
 referred to by Psalm 110, 197 n95

Abraham (cont.)

refusal of to die, 58 n20
 to make bricks, 160
 to obey God's summons, 246
 to surrender soul, 247 resignation of, contrasted with Jacob's impatience, 378 n228 righteousness of, 238 n274
 at right hand of God, 197 n95, 450 (see also God: right hand of) and ritual purity, 205
 and Sabbath
 Bible not referring to observance of, by A., 307 n280 sacrifices brought by, 198, 199 n109
 and Sarah
 A. buried next to S., 237 n268
 A. calling S. his sister, 200 n110, 216
 A. concealing S. in casket, 189
 A. identified as S.'s brother, 216
 A. mourning for S., 234, 236 n259
 A. not acknowledging S. as wife, 191 n66
 A. observing beauty of S., 189
 A. paying for grave for S., 234, 522
 A.'s eulogy for S., 236 n259
 blessed with offspring in old age, 218 married for 75 years before birth of Isaac, 202 n116 return of, to Canaan, 190
 and Satan
 A. accused by S., 224-225
 A. rebuking S., 227
 seeing earthly and heavenly Temple, 817 n905
 and Shekinah
 A. bringing many under wings of Shekinah, 794 n845 sign of covenant and, 206 n130 (see also Abraham: circumcision of; circumcision; covenant[s]: sign of)
 sins of, 191 n66
 loving Ishmael, 599 n196
 questioning God, 200 n110
 three in number, 200 n110 (see also under Abraham: and Egypt) traveling to Egypt, 191 n66 son of Terah and Emtelai, 168

Abraham (cont.)

soul of, removed by God as in dream, 247 special virtue of, being zealous for observance of Abrahamic covenant, 715 n543
 stature of
   A. as giant, 195, 197 n97
   in battle with kings who captured Lot, 195
 story of
   A. praying in Temple at time of destruction, 1081 n39 parallels with other stories, 178 n34 superiority of A.
   to Asshur, 176
   to Eber, 176
   to Job, 455 n10
   to Nimrod, 176
   to Noah, 176
   to Shem, 176
 superiority of others to A.
   Jacob, 256 n35
   Moses, 837
 taking refuge with Noah and Shem, 179 taught by Shem, 172 n13
 teaching how to praise and thank God, 223 temptations of, 188 n52, 224
   A. resisting ten, 187, 453 n5
   and sufferings of, assigned to Job, 232 n247
   as ten tests, 628
 and Terah
   A., son of T. and Emtelai, 168
   A. leaving T. in Haran, 188 n54
   A. made priest by T., 186 n50
   A. sentenced by T. to death by fire, 175-176, 186 n50
 throne of greatest in Paradise, 507, 508 n118
 to be lord over Hebron, 234 troubled by spilling of innocent blood, 198 victory of, due to intervention of God, 197 n98 viewing earth and heaven, 246-249 vision of, 198-199, 200 n114 warfare of, 196 n91
   A. concerned about issue of war, 195-196
   A. giving spoils, 195
   with four kings, 202 n115
   legend about A. and battle of Ai, 847 n23

Abraham (cont.)

wells dug by, stopped up by Philistines, 260
 wisdom of, 237
   Solomon's wisdom greater than, 949-950
 and world to come
   A. having foretaste of future world in this world, 237
   A.'s reward in, 199 n107
 youth of, 170-171, 171 n13
 Zadkiel as teacher of, in Kabbalah, 505 n117
 Abraham ben David
   Elijah revealing mysteries to, 1018
 Abraham ben Isaac Av Bet Din
   Elijah revealing mysteries to, 1018
 Abrahamic covenant. See covenant(s):
   of Abraham; also Abraham:
   circumcision of; Abraham:
   covenant of; Abraham: and God, God's promise to Abraham; circumcision;
   covenant[s]: sign of Abram (son of Terah)
   name, 181
   changed to Abraham, 203 n122
   meaning of, 203 n122
   See also Abraham Absalom
   beauty of, 60 n24
   A. having beauty of body but not of soul, 905 n80
   four children of, preceding A. in death, 932
 as giant, 931
 hair of
   A. clipping hair occasionally,
   931, 932 n98
   A. possessing hair of Adam, 58
   caught in branches of oak tree, 58, 932
 having no portion in world to come, 932 (see also world to come: those having no share in)
 in hell
   extreme penalties averted from, 932 in second division, charged with control of ten heathen
   nations, 932
 miserable end of, 932, 933 n104
 as Nazirite, 931
   clipping hair occasionally, 931,
   932 n98
 rebellion of, 931-933
   against David, 922

Absalom (cont.)

similarity of, to Adonijah, 942
   n139
 and wicked kings of Israel having no share in world to come,
   908 n100
 abstinence, sexual on Noah's ark, 151
 Abtalion descendant of Sennacherib, 869
   n72, 1046
   descendant of Sisera, 869 n72
   See also Shemaiah: and Abtalion abyss
   created on first day, 82 n98
   Egyptians cast into, 559
   Samael searching for Moses in, 835
   separating second from first earth, 6
   over seventh earth, 6
   shard laid over, engraved with Ineffable Name, 605, 923
   stones in, producing water, 5 uniting itself with waters in heavens against Egyptians, 561
   n52
 Abyssinian legend of shamir, 975 n82
 academy
   Abraham as head of, 237, 239
   n277
   Ephraim as head of, 405
   heavenly, 1012 n79
   Asmodeus going to, for discussions, 973
   Elijah revealing secret lore from,
   1018
   R. Meir quoted in, 1011 to be established to govern 12
   tribes, 406
   See also Bet ha-Midrash; Shem: academy of; Shem: and Eber, Bet ha-Midrash of Accho
   allotted to Zebulun, 852
 Achan
   burial of, 848 n31
   confession of, 407, 846
   as occasion for Joshua composing Al Ken Nekavveh Lekha, 1128 n58 (see also prayers, Jewish) saving share in world to come,
   857 n4
   crimes of, 845, 847 n25
   stealing idol, 847 n26 descendant of Judah, 407
   execution of, 848 n31

Achan (cont.)

- name, meaning of, 848 n31
- one of three men losing this world and gaining world to come, 847-848 n31
- taking spoils of Jericho, causing defeat at Ai, 845

Acheron River

- Adam washing three times in, 96

Achish

- called Abimelech, after king of Gerar, 918

Achuzan

- etymology of, 128 n60
- as Jerusalem, 128 n60
- place of translation (ascension) of Enoch, 128 n60

acrostics

- Shokhen Ad as, 1128 n58 (see also prayers, Jewish)

Adah

- name
- changed from Basemath, 271
- meaning of, 271
- second wife of Esau, 271
- two sons of (Jabal and Jubal), 112
- wife of Lamech, 112

Adah-Basemath

- double name of one of Esau's wives, 274 n122 (see also Adah; Basemath)

Adam, 47-100

- abode of, 77
- accused by man after death, 99
- in Adamah, 110
- as Adne Sadeh ("man of the mountain"), 34
- adored by creatures, 64
- age of, 930 years, 91 (see also Adam: life span of)
- altars erected by
  - in Jerusalem, 89 n109
  - on Mount Moriah, 89 n109
- as androgynous, 67 n42 (see also Adam: Gnostic ideas about; Gnostic ideas)
- and angels
  - A. created by angels, 49 n3 (see also Gnostic ideas)
  - A. entertained by angels, in Paradise, 70 n57
  - A. envied by angels, 62
  - A. taken to third heaven by Michael, 96
  - A. taught smithcraft by angel, 62 n31
  - angels asking questions about A., 279 n134

Adam (cont.)and angels (cont.)

- angels bringing meat and wine to A., 69
- relation of, 63 n33
- and animals
  - A. as first to breed horse with ass, 324 n322
  - A. understanding language of, 70 n58
- cat taking up residence with A., 35-36
- dog taking up residence with A., 36
- male animals assigned to A., 92
- appearing at death of Moses, 837
- beginnings of culture traced to, 86 n104
- blessings bestowed on, 86 n105
- body of, formed out of earth and water, 54 n15
- book of, 90-91 n110, 641, 641 n324 (see also Raziel, Book of)
- recording all generations from creation to resurrection of dead, 641
- Book of Raziel returned to, after repentance, 90 n110
- burial of
  - with Abel, 97
  - A. as first to be buried in ground, 97 n136
  - by angels, 98 n138
  - in Cave of Machpelah, 98 n137, 234, 236 n263
  - in center of earth, 98 n137
  - by Enoch, 98 n137, 124 n59
  - in Hebron, 98 n137
  - place of, identical with place of crucifixion of Jesus, 98 n137
  - by Seth, 234
  - on site of altar in Jerusalem, 97-98 n137
- celibacy of, 114, 115 n46
- commanded to
  - eat only green things of the field, 69
  - study Torah in Paradise, 69
  - work, 70 n54
- commandments given to
  - concerning daily sacrifice, 70 n55
  - concerning observance of Sabbath, 70 n55
- as composer of psalms, 85 n103, 823

Adam (cont.)

- condemned by heavenly court, 211 n159
- covered with fig leaves, 88 n106
- creation of, 53-55
  - as androgynous, 67 n42
  - by angels, 49 n3 (see also Adam: Gnostic ideas about; Gnostic ideas)
- bearing sign of the covenant, 78 n78, 248 n318 (see also circumcision; covenant[s]: sign of)
- in center of earth, 98 n137
- from dust of earth, 54 n15, 117
- from earth and water, 54 n15
- at first without soul, 60 n22
- fully developed, 58
- by God with own hands, 128 n60
- on Jewish New Year, 81 n97
- on sixth day, 77, 82 n98
- soul of, 60 n22
- time of, 3 n8
- crowns of, five in number, 60 n21
- curses of, 76, 95 n127
- daughter of, named Azurah, 113 n42
- death of, 70 n54, 96-98
  - and burial of, 122-123
  - darkness of sun, moon, and stars at, 97 n133
  - day of, as festival, 99 n140
  - six days before death of Eve, 98 n138
- delivered from suffering of hell by Sabbath, 85 n103
- descendants of
  - Enoch as, 126
  - number and names of, 92 n115
- designating areas of settlement on earth, 60
- dust for
  - kneaded at holy place in Jerusalem, 55 n16
  - taken from place of altar in Jerusalem, 97 n137
- east and north assigned to, 92
- and Eve
  - A. blaming E., 75, 94
- burial of
  - in Cave of Machpelah, 98 n137
  - in same sepulchre with patriarchs, 88 n106
- created outside of Paradise, 81 n97
- eating lentils after murder of Abel, 257

Adam (cont.)and Eve (cont.)

- expelled from Paradise on 1 Tammuz, 77, 81 n97
- garments of, 30 n123, 76-77, 79-80 n93 (see also Adam: garment of; garment[s]; Leviathan)
- created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day)
- as light, 73 n69, 79-80 n93
- made of female Leviathan's hide, 30 n123, 80 n93, 162 n79
- made of linen, 80 n93
- made of wool, 80 n93
- worn by Nimrod, 162 n79, 405
- God's blessing of, remaining upon world until flood, 819
- hiding selves, 93
- married life of, preceding fall, 103 n4
- mourning and lamenting of, 86
- nakedness of, 72
- in Paradise, 68-71
  - 40 years and 7 days, 81 n97
  - for only few hours, 77
  - without sexual intercourse, 103 n4
- refusing to repent, 76-77
- searching for food, 86
- as spiritual beings before fall, 80 n93
- and story of Samael's son, 141-142
- superiority of, 60 n21
- wedding of, 66, 68 n47
- excellence of, Gnostic ideas about, 60 n21, 22 (see also Adam: Gnostic ideas about; Gnostic ideas)
- face of
  - A. originally having two faces, 65
  - one of seven gifts of A., 84
  - shining with heavenly splendor, 60 n21, 85 n104
- fall of
  - consequences of, 75
    - A. and Eve receiving bodies, 80 n93
  - fertility of earth diminishing, 21 n75
  - forfeit of image of God, 86 n105

Adam (cont.)fall of (cont.)

- consequences of (cont.)
  - forfeit of Paradise, 86 n105
  - forfeit of tall stature, 66 n37, 75, 86 n105
  - forfeit of tree of life, 86 n105
  - loss of knowledge, 91 n110
  - loss of wisdom, 89, 91 n110
  - due to wine, 153
  - fearing God after, 75
  - time of, 81 n97
- famine in time of, 189
- favorable view of, 100 n142
- fear of darkness of, 88 n107
- first of seven pious men, 682 (see also under pious: men)
- first wife of, 68 n46 (see also Adam: and Lilith)
- forgiveness of, by God, 88 n106, 98 n138
- as fugitive and wanderer after fall, 86 n105
- garment of (see also Adam: and Eve, garments of; garment[s]; Leviathan)
  - one of two gifts given to Joseph by Jacob, 405
- protecting Nimrod, 259 n38, 405
- received by Jacob from Esau, 405
- worn by Esau, 265
- generations from A. to Noah, ten in number, 101
- as giant, 58, 60 n22 (see also Adam: height of; Adam: size of)
- gifts of, seven in number, 84
- Gnostic ideas about, 49 n3, 60 n21, 60 n22, 67 n42
- and God
  - A. as dough God kneaded, 68 n45
  - A. at right hand of God, 450 n17 (see also God: right hand of)
  - A. fearing God after fall, 75
  - A. hiding from God, 74, 78 n75
  - A. promised resurrection by God, 98 n138
  - A. showed all future generations by God, 61 n27
  - A. slandering God, 75
  - A. tested by God, 763 n730
- grave of (see Adam: burial of)
- handsomeness of, 58-59, 60 n24
- as heave offering of world, 65

Adam (cont.)

- height of, as 100 cubits, 98 n137 (see also Adam: as giant; Adam: size of)
- as heretic, 78 n78
- as high priest, 60 n21
- history of mankind revealed to, 59
- hymn of praise of, 46 n194
- as ideal of beauty, 58-59, 60 n24
- image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
- as inventor
  - of all crafts, including writing, 60
  - of all 70 languages, 60
- Israelites compared to, 713
- in Jerusalem, 89 n109
- as king, 60 n21
- life span of (see also Adam: age of)
  - leaving 70 years to David, 59, 61-62 n28, 911
  - leaving 70 years to descendants, 59, 74
  - 930 years, 74
  - 1,000 years, 59
- and Lilith
  - begetting demons, 131
  - descendants of, 114-115
  - L. given as wife to A., 64
- loneliness of, 64
- made to sleep, 64
- Moses compared to, 837
- name
  - calling self Ish, 66
  - meaning of, 54 n15, 59, 60 n21
  - naming self, 59
- naming
  - creatures, 43 n190, 59, 62 n29, 62 n30
  - wife Ishah, 66
- not cursed, 79 n85
- one of five to give expected answer to God's questions, 1102 n94
- one of four men described in Bible as creatures of God, 1071 n13
- one of seven patriarchs of world, 968
- one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
- one of seven pious men erecting altars, 771 (see also under pious: men)
- one of seven pious men in pre-Abrahamic times, 116-117 n53 (see also under pious: men)

Adam (cont.)

one of seven with overlapping life terms, 982 n4
 one of shepherds who assist Messiah on the right, 100 n142
 and Paradise
   A. bringing spices from, 77, 81 n96
   A. commanded to study Torah in, 69
   A. departing before night, 85 n104
   A. entering when he was 40 days old, 81 n97
   A. entertained in, by angels, 70 n57
   A. expelled from, 103 n4
     on Jewish New Year, 81 n97
   A. not having to work land in, 69
   A.'s forfeit of, 86 n105
   A. taking seeds from, 81 n96
   A. with Eve in, 68-71
     for 40 years and 7 days, 81 n97
     for only a few hours, 77
     without sexual intercourse, 103 n4 perfection of
   in body, 58
   in soul, 59
 persons presented to, after their death, 99
 prayer of, 89
   house of, 89 n109
 as progenitor of all mankind, 66 n38
 as Prometheus, 85-86 n104
 as prophet, 60 n21, 62 n30
 punishments of, 79 n83, 79 n87, 91-92, 94 Razi'el as teacher of, in Kabbalah, 505 n117
 repentance of, 86-89, 87 n106
 rib of, restored through death of Eve, 97 (see also Eve: death of)
 and Sabbath
   A. delivered from suffering of hell by, 85 n103
   A. taking part in, 83 commandments given to A. concerning observance of, 70 n55 significance of Sabbath, 83-84
   song of praise for Sabbath, 83

Adam (cont.)

sexual instinct, conscious of, 66 n39
 sexual relations of with animals, 66 n39
   with female spirits, 114
     issuing in phantomlike beings, 109 sickness of, as punishment for his sin, 91-92
 sin of causing death of Moses, 806 n888
   disobedience, 37
   on first day of his creation, 81 n97
   persistence in, 78 n78
 size of, 58, 60 n22, 98 n137
   after fall, 75
   before fall, 74-75, 78 n73
   Gnostic ideas about, 60 n21, 22 (see also Adam: Gnostic ideas about; Gnostic ideas)
   one of seven gifts of A., 84
   1,000 cubits, 66 n37
   reduced by God, 66 n37
 soil of Babylon as material for trunk of, 54 n15 soil of Palestine as material for head of, 54 n15 song of praise of, for Sabbath day, 83 son of, as frog in story of R. Hanina, 115
 soul of
   A. created at first without soul, 60 n22
   breathed into his nostrils, 59 created with souls of all generations, 55
   sparks of, 57 n19
   taken to heaven in chariot of light, 96 taken to third heaven, 98 n137 spiritual qualities of, 59 splendor of, rationalistic explanation of, 85 n104 superiority of Moses to, 837
 and Torah
   A. to study in Paradise, 69
   A. transmitting knowledge of, to Seth, 152 n51
   Torah revealed to A., 60 n21, 77
 and 12 tribes
   A. would have been father of, had he not sinned, 343 n70

Adam (cont.)

unfavorable views of, 98 n138 washed three times in river Acheron, 96
 wickedness of, 78 n78
 wife of, named Ishah, 66
 wisdom of, 59, 62 n29
   lost at fall, 89, 91 n110
   Solomon's wisdom greater than, 949-950
See also creation; fall Adam (plant)
   deadly to anyone who comes near it, 289 n189 Adamah
   dust of earth, 59
   second earth, 109
   Cain born in, 109-110
   sixth earth, 6
 Adam Kadmon
   in Kabbalah, 49 n4
 Adan (sing.). See Adne (pl.) Sadeh
 Adar (month)
   1st of death of Moses, 839 n966
   7th of birth of Moses, 477 n44
     death of Moses, 477 n44, 737, 839 n966
     last day of life of Moses, 812-813
   13th of day decreed by Ahasuerus for extermination of Jews, 1157
   23rd of Moses consecrating Aaron and sons as priests, 657 birth of Moses in, 1151, 1152 n108 death of Moses in, 839 n966, 1151, 1152 n108 month of misfortune, 1151
   only month having nothing in favor of Jews, 1151 second Adar
     witchcraft having no power over men born in, 1152 n108
See also date
 Adares (king of Arabia)
   appealing to Solomon for assistance against demon, 964 Adarshan
   as ruler of world, 163 n82 (see also cosmocrator) Adataneses (city)
   founded by Japheth, 156
 Adataneses (wife of Japheth), 156

Adikam (king of Egypt) called Akuz by wise men, 498 increasing oppression on Israelites, 498-499 made king of Egypt, 498
 second son of Pharaoh, 498 Adinah (wife of Laban)
 barrenness of, 262
 bearing twin daughters, Leah and Rachel, 262 Adinah (wife of Levi) daughter of Jobab, 348 Admah
 treatment of stranger in, 209
 wickedness of inhabitants of, 209 Admatha (prince of Edom)
 having charge of land, 1136
 one of seven princes of Persia consulted by Ahasuerus about fate of Vashti, 1136
 Adne Sadeh (Adan; man of mountain), 34, 39 n147, 39 n148
See also man of mountain
 Adon (first wife of Asher), 348
 Adonai. See God: names and titles of Adonai Elohe Yisrael
 composed by Hezekiah, 1128 n58
See also prayers, Jewish Adoniah (queen of Ethiopia) proposing that her son Monarchos become king, 491 Adoni-bezek
 confessing sin, 861-862 n27
 conquered by Othniel, 860 Adonijah
 claiming throne, 946 n3
 crown of David not fitting, 941 execution of, ordered by Solomon, 946 n3 intending to lead rebellion, 945
 as pretender to throne, 940-941 requesting to marry Abishag, 946 n3 similarity of, to Absalom, 942 n139 son of David and Haggith, 940-941
 Adoniram (elder from tribe of Joseph), 696 Adora
 place where Esau died, 321 Adoram (Edomite)
 slain by Jacob, 320-321
 adulterer
 one of five insulting names hurled at David by Shimei, 931 n96

adultery considered peccadillo by Abimelech (king of Gerar), 263 n67 forbidden by Noah, 308 Seventh Commandment, 607
 fourfold, 609 n230
 punishment of, 246, 609 n230
 leprosy as, 931 n96
 plague as, 607
 viewed by Abraham from heaven, 246
 woman suspected of, 568 n82 Aesculapius
 killed by lightning, 157
 seeking tree of life, 157
 Af (angel)
 angel of death in charge of men other than children, young persons, and kings, 42 n187 angel of destruction, 505 n117
 struggling with Moses, 623 buried alive opposite grave of Moses, 624 n274
 and Hemah
 swallowing Moses down to feet, 515
 identified with Azza, 505 n117
 punishing Moses on road to Egypt, 515
 in seventh heaven, 504
See also angel(s), general: types, of death; angel(s), general: types, of destruction; angel(s), individual afflictions freedom from, one of six gifts as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572 (see also gifts; Sabbath: observance of) three great (suffering in times of Gog and Magog; travails of Messianic time; day of judgment), 572 Africa
 named after Ephraim, 243 African language used by Hamites, 158 n72
 Africans defeated by Kittim, 419
 Afrira and Kastimon
 monsters as rulers of abode of Cainites, 110 n34
 Agag
 ancestor of Haman, king of Amalekites, 899

Agag (cont.)
 child of A. (Edad), slaying Saul, 903 n66 conquered by Saul, 680 executed by Samuel, 899, 902 n65
 spared by Saul, 899, 1163
 as title of Amalekite kings, 422 n429
 age of majority
 18 years, 488 n76
 20 years, 263 n69, 488 n76, 715 n546
 Aggadah. See Haggadah
 Agnias (king of Africa)
 asking for Yaniah's hand in marriage, 417
 conscripting all males over age ten, 419
 death of, 420
 digging canal from land of Kittim to Africa, 418 making alliance with sons of Esau against sons of Jacob, 416 against sons of Seir, 416 Agogian language
 used by Hamites, 158 n72
 agonic period
 mystic literature of, 17 n70
 Agrat (daughter of Mahlat; demon), 27 n109
See also angel(s), fallen; demon(s); devil(s)
 agriculture inhabitants of Seir as experts in, 324-325 n322 Agrimus (demon)
 also called Angro-Mainyu and Ahriman, 132 n63
 firstborn of demons, 131
See also angel(s), fallen; demon(s); devil(s) Agur
 another name of Solomon, 946 n2
 Ahab, 986-989
 able to interpret Leviticus in 85 ways, 1058 n109
 as cosmocrator, 162 n82, 987, 988 n31 (see also cosmocrator)
 and Elijah (see also Elijah: and Ahab) generation of, not revealing hiding place of E. and 100 prophets, 989 n35
 good qualities of, 987
 great learning of, 988 n34

Ahab (cont.)

- having no portion in world to come, 908 n100, 988, 1058 n109 (see also world to come: those having no share in)
- inscription of
  - denying God of Israel, 987
- Jacob as example for, 342
- as king
  - A. as one of three kings not to have share in world to come, 908 n100
  - of Samaria, 987
  - over 252 kingdoms, 987
  - over 232 kingdoms, 988 n32
  - wicked, 988 n34
- led into idolatry by Jezebel, 987
- mourning for, 988
- and Naboth
  - A. claiming N.'s possessions, 989 n38
  - A. ordering execution of N., 987
- refusing to surrender Torah to Ben-hadad, 987
- reverence for Torah of, 987
- sins of, 987-988
- slain by Naaman, 988
- slain in Ramoth Gilead, 988, 989 n42
- son of, victorious against Mesha, 989 n35
- trial of, in heavenly court, 987-988, 989 n41
- warfare of
  - with Syrians, 987
  - victory over Syrians as reward for observance of Sabbath, 989 n35 (see also Sabbath: observance of)
- wealth of, 987, 988 n33
- wicked children of, 988 n33
- and Zedekiah
  - A. attempting to convince daughter of Nebuchadnezzar to yield to Z., 1106
  - false prophets, most notorious Jewish sinners, 1106
  - punished by fire, 1106

See also Jezebel

Ahasuerus

- blindness of, 1169 n149
- chronicles of kings of Persia read to, 1170
- conspiracy of Bigthan and Teresh against, 1145-1148
- counselors of, punished for advising king to stop rebuilding of Temple, 1139 n52

Ahasuerus (cont.)

- dream of, 1171, 1171 n164
- edict of
  - revoking edict of annihilation, 1178-1180
  - that Jews to be annihilated, 1138, 1156-1157, 1157 n114
  - that wife must obey husband, 1137
  - that wife must speak language of husband, 1137
  - torn in pieces by God, 1170
- and Esther
  - A. continuing to love E., 1144 n74
  - A. speaking with E. through interpreter, 1174, 1177 n178
  - Darius as son of, 1131 n5
- feast of, 1129
- dancing at, 1133
- drinking wine at, 1133
- 180 days allotted for nobles, 1132
- program of, for six months, 1130
- reason for, 1131 n6
- for residents of Shushan, 1132
- taking place after work of Temple stopped for three years, 1131 n5
- follies of, 1138-1139
- as fool, 1138-1139, 1139 n49
- as "foolish king," 1165, 1166 n143
- and Haman
  - A. ordering that divine honor be paid to H., 1148
  - A. ordering that H. be hanged, 1175
  - A. to sell Jews to H. over meal, 335
- kept awake by
  - angel of insomnia, 1171 n163
  - Michael, 1170
- marriage of
  - to Esther, 1137
  - to Vashti, 1131 n6
- miracle of scepter of, 1167, 1169 n149
- name, meaning of, 1131 n4
- not daring to sit on throne of Solomon, 969
- not forcing Jews to participate in festivities, 1134 n15
- not wanting to offend religious sensibilities of guests, 1133, 1134 n18

Ahasuerus (cont.)

- one of five men wicked from first to last, 1044 n39
- political wisdom of, 1139 n50
- punished by losing half of kingdom for refusing permission to rebuild Temple, 1137
- recounting history of Jews, 1156-1157
- reign of, 641 n323
- robes of, once belonging to high priests, 1130
- royal gardens of, description of, 1133
- as ruler of 127 provinces, 1130, 1131 n6
- as ruler of world, 162 n82, 1129, 1138 n47 (see also cosmocrator)
- searching for most beautiful woman in realm, 1139
- son of Cyrus; grandson of Darius, 1131 n4
- son of Darius, 1131 n4
- thrown out of bed 365 times by Gabriel, 1170
- treasures of, coming from Temple, 1130
- unable to mount Solomon's throne, 1130
- using replica of Solomon's throne, 970 n72
- and Vashti
  - A. bragging about V.'s beauty at banquet, 1135
  - A. consulting seven princes of Persia about fate of V., 1136
  - A. ordering execution of seven counselors who condemned V., 1138-1139
  - story of execution of V., 1135-1138
- Wars of, 1131 n6
- wealth of, 1130, 1131 n4

Ahaz

- abolishing laws against incest, 1044 n43
- death and burial of, 1045
- father of Hezekiah, 1045
- forbidding study of Torah, 1043, 1044 n40
- invited by God to make a request, 198 (see also God: actions of, inviting persons . . .)
- losing firstborn son as punishment for wickedness, 1043-1044

Ahaz (cont.)

modesty of, 1044 n43
 one of five men wicked from first to last, 1044 n39
 only good quality, respect for Isaiah, 1043 removing holy ark from Temple, 1062 n118
 sending wealth as tribute to Sennacherib, 397 setting aside Jewish laws of marriage, 1058 n112
 sins of, 1043
   A. counted among hopeless sinners, 908 n100, 1043 son of Jotham, 1043
 sun setting ten hours early at funeral of, 1052 n81 warfare of, against Pekah (of northern kingdom), 1044
 and world to come
   A. forfeiting share in, 967 n59, 1038-1039 n6, 1044 n44
   A. not forfeiting share in, 1044 Ahaziah (king)
 killed by Jehu, 1037
 not having share in world to come, 908 n100, 967 n59, 1038-1039 n6
 one of eight rulers of Davidic dynasty to die violent death, 933 n107 one of kings not to have share in world to come, 908 n100
 as shameless sinner, 1037
 substituting names of idols for Name of God in Scriptures, 1037 Ahiah son of Shemhazai, 137 n10
 Ahiah of Shiloh
   one of martyred prophets according to Josephus, 1078 n30
 Ahiezer
   elder from tribe of Dan, 696
   name, meaning of ("brother of help"), 679-680
   prince of tribe of Dan, 679-680 son of Ammishaddai ("My people's judge"), 679-680 Ahijah (brother of Joel)
   as unworthy judge, 897 n46 Ahijah (great-grandson of Eli) identified with Ahimelech (father of Abiathar), 893 n30 Ahijah (prophet of Shiloh)
   blindness of, 267 n74

Ahijah (cont.)

crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters transmitted to, by Ahitophel, 892 n24
 death of executed as martyr by Abijah, 982 n5 great age of, 981
 and Jeroboam
   A. discussing secret lore with J., 982
   A. responsible for elevation of J. to throne, 985 n16
   A. telling Jeroboam of his elevation to kingship, 981
   J. as disciple of A., 982
 one of seven with overlapping life terms, 982 n4
 piety of, 981
 reviled by Abijah (son of Rehoboam), 985 teacher of Elijah, 996 n3 teacher of R. Israel Baal Shem Tov in legends of Hasidim, 982 n5 transmitting crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters to Jehoiada, 892 n24 of tribe of Levi, 981 Ahijah (son of Shisha)
   one of Solomon's two scribes, 979 Ahikar
   and fable of trees and iron, 21 n74 Ahiman
   name, meaning of, 707
   one of three giants summoned by Sarah, 236 n259
   and Sheshai and Talmai pursuing Caleb, 710
   three giants in Palestine, 707 Ahimelech (father of Abiathar) identified with Ahijah (great-grandson of Eli), 893 n30 Ahinoam
   elder from tribe of Dan, 696
 Ahira
   name, meaning of ("desirable meadow"), 680
   prince of tribe of Naphtali, 680 son of Enan ("clouds"), 680
 Ahitophel, 922-924
   age at death, 33 years, 922
   author of fortune book, 923
   composing three prayers for each day, 924 n64 crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters transmitted by, to Ahijah, 892 n24

Ahitophel (cont.)

crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters transmitted to, by Paltiel, 892 n24
 and David
   A. as counselor to D., 922
   A. as D.'s best friend, 923 n61
   A. as master and teacher of D., 923 n61
   D. consulting A. about transporting ark to Jerusalem, 923
   D. fearing no one except A., 923 n61
   D. learning two things from A., 923 n62
   related by blood, 922
   story of shard and abyss, 923
   strained relations between, 923
 death of
   A. dying at same age as Doeg, 908 n97
   A. hanging self, 923
 destroyed by pride, 924 n64
 and Doeg as men of evil tongues, 908 n106 forfeiting share in world to come, 908 n100, 922 grandfather of Bathsheba, 922
 as head of Sanhedrin, 923 n60
 lacking in piety, 922
 misled by astrological signs, 922
 name, meaning of, 924 n64
 not to be resurrected nor given over to punishment, 908 n106
 one of ten adversaries of David, 922 n59
 one of two great sages of world who lost this world and world to come, 798 (see also under Balaam) scholarship of, 922 seeking admiration, 908 n99
 Socrates as disciple of, 923 taking part in Absalom's rebellion against David, 922 will of, containing three rules, 923
 wisdom of, 922, 923 n62
 Ahitrib
   elder from tribe of Benjamin, 696
 Ahriman. See Agrimus
 Ahumai
   one of five other names of Bezalel, 642 Ai (person)
   to slay Jair, 41 n175

- Ai (place)
 altar erected by Abraham at, 187
 battle of, 847 n23
 Joshua defeated at, 845
 legend about Abraham and battle of, 847 n23
- ain (letter). See ayin
- Aisha
 one of Ishmael's wives, 222 n218
 as wife of Muhammad, 222 n218
- Akedah, 225-233, 227 n229
 Abraham as hero of, 228 n229, 232 n242
 date of
   on Day of Atonement, 232 n248
   on New Year, 232 n248
   in Nisan, 232 n248
 explained as protest against child sacrifice, 233 n255
 Isaac glorified in, 228 n229
 Isaac's age at time of, 253 n3 liturgical reference to, 228 n229
 site of, same as site of Temple Mount, 232 n253
See also Abraham: and Isaac, sacrifice of; Isaac: and Akedah
- Akiba, R.
 basing Halakhot upon every dot of letters, 616 dying in prison, 1004
 explaining meaning of crowns upon letters, 514
 in first division of Paradise, 22 n85
 knowing things not revealed to Moses, 618 n250 legend about daughter of, 1017 n96 light shining over grave of, 236 n265
 as martyr victim of government, 19, 616
 possibly descendant of Haman, 1147 n93
 propagandist for Bar Kokhba revolt, 1089 n56 story of Elijah and, 1003
 two versions of Alphabet of R. Akiva, 5 n10, 5 n12
- Akiba (hero of Jerusalem). See Abika
- Akraziel (angel)
 celestial herald, 801
- Akuz
 name given to Adikam by wise men, 498
- Akuzit
 second daughter of Pharaoh, 498
- alef (letter)
 in Asenath, standing for On, where Potiphar was priest, 368
 creation of world through, 4
 first letter of God's revelation on Sinai, 1079 first letter of name of Abraham, on standard of tribe of Judah, 686 having first place in Ten Commandments, 4 Hebrew name of, 46 n194
 prosthetic, 970 n67
See also alphabet; letters of alphabet
- Alenu
 composed by Joshua, 853 n50, 1079, 1128 n58
See also prayers, Jewish
- Alexander legend(s), 32 n132, 956 n27 mountains of darkness mentioned in, 964 n51
 stream of life and, 70 n51 traces of, discernible in story of last years of Abraham, 244 n312 of treasure in Nineveh, 1035 n35
- Alexander the Great
 bringing Solomon's throne from Babylon to Egypt, 1131 n13 finding Solomon's books of wisdom in Jerusalem, 955 n18 giving Solomon's books of wisdom to Aristotle, 955 n18
 as ruler of world, 162 n82 (see also cosmocrator)
- Alfaranit (queen of Egypt), 482
 name, Arabic, 484 n65
- alien rule
 one of two visitations, 199
- Alinus, 298 n244
 set over one of Jacob's companies, 297 son of Eliezer, servant of Abraham, 297
- Alit
 marriage of Judah to, 347
- Al Ken Nekavveh Lekha
 composed by Joshua, 1128 n58
See also prayers, Jewish
- allegorical interpretation(s)
 of Balaam's ass speaking, 768 n745
 of Ezekiel's reviving dead, 1102 n94
 of Leviathan-Behemoth legends, 32 n127
 of names of seven Persian princes, 1136, 1138 n40
- allegorical interpretation(s) (cont.)
 of Song of Songs, 977 n93
 of story of Joshua as referring to Jesus, 1107 n108 of tree making bitter waters at Marah sweet, 568 n82
- allegory
 creation of Eve out of Adam's rib, 67 n42
- almond bone dissolved in flood, 149 n44
- almonds
 blooming from Aaron's rod, 730 (see also Aaron: rod of)
- alms
 and prayer and repentance, warding off evil, 1052 n75
- Al-Mutadhid, Calif
 Elijah appearing to, in dream, 1013 n93
- aloes
 strewn before Joseph by king's servants, 367
- alphabet, 3-5
 descended from crown of God, 3 Hebrew name of first letter of, 46 n194 letters of contained in Ten Commandments in Deuteronomy, 635 n308
   and creation, 3
   number of, divisible by three, 593 n179 pleading for God to create through them, 3-5
   22 in number, 3
 origin of, 3-5
 and parallels in Christian literature, 5 n10
See also creation; letters of alphabet; and under individual letters
- altar(s)
 of Abraham
   on site appointed for Temple, 231
   on site where Adam brought first sacrifice, 231 on site where Cain and Abel offered gifts to God, 231 on site where Noah built altar, 231 at Bethel, erected by Jacob, 317 n299 brazen, 968 n63
 built by Moses to glorify victory over Amalek, 582

altar(s) (cont.)

erected by Abraham, 187 (see also altar[s]: of Abraham)
 by Adam
   in Jerusalem, 89 n109
   on Mount Moriah, 89 n109
 by Moses on Mount Sinai, 598
 on Mount Ebal with stones from bed of Jordan, 843
 by Saul, Elijah sacrificing on,
   997 n113
 by seven pious men (Adam,
   Abel, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses), 771
 by Solomon for offerings, 646
 by 2½ tribes, 853 n52
 fire of, one of five sacred objects concealed by God at destruction of Temple, 645
 for golden calf, built by Aaron, 621 heavenly, terrestrial altar corresponding to, 1121 n31
 of incense, carried by angel to mount whence Moses viewed Holy Land, 1091
 in Mount Ebal, Torah written on it in 70 languages, 843
 of Noah destroyed by builders of Tower of Babel, 232 n251
   N. rebuilding altar destroyed by flood, 232 n251
   on site of Abraham's altar, 231
 of Tabernacle, 646-648
   of brass
     corresponding to human body, 646-647
     sacrifices offered on, 647
   of gold
     corresponding to human soul, 647
     spices and incense offered on, 647 height of, three cubits, corresponding to three sent by God to deliver Israel from Egypt (Moses, Aaron, Miriam), 648
   length and breadth of, five cubits, corresponding to five commandments on each of two tablets, 648
   of shittim wood, overlaid with brass, 646
   symbolic significance of, 648

altar(s) (cont.)

of Temple dust for Adam taken from, 97
   n137
   site of, as place of Abraham's
   circumcision, 202
   site of, at center of earth, 158
   n68
   on site of Abraham's altar, 231
 terrestrial, corresponding to heavenly altar, 1121 n31
 Alukah place in hell, 506
 Alush
   commandment concerning observance of Sabbath revealed
   at, 574 n109
   place where manna descended first time, 574 n109
 Amalek
   annihilation of, as one of three national duties, 897 n47
   army of, number of, 580 n140
   as counselor of Pharaoh, 471 n21
   descendants of, to be exterminated, 582 identified with Rome, 583 n147
   and Christianity in later sources,
   580 n141
   in early tannaitic sources, 580
   n141
   identified with Sammael and evil
   inclination in Kabbalah,
   580 n141
   luring Jews with kindly words of kinship, 578-579
   and magicians informing Pharaoh that Israelites not returning, 549-550
   name, meaning of, 578, 580
   n137
   and Nebuchadnezzar, 745
   slain by Joshua by word of God,
   1163, 1164 n140
   sneering at covenant of Abraham,
   580 n141
   son of Eliphaz, firstborn of Esau, 578 son of Timna, 323, 580 n138
   taking part in destruction of Jerusalem, 582
   to be exterminated in future world, 582
 and war
   A. as magician in war, 581, 582
   n144
   A. making war on Israel after death of Aaron, 745

Amalek (cont.)

and war (cont.)
   A. mutilating corpses of Israelites, 579
   defeat of A., 580-583 nations allied with A. against Israel, 578
   tribes of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin fighting against A., 680
   war against A., 842 n3
 war of against Israel, 577-580
   after death of Aaron, 745 taking place in Iyar, 580
   n149
See also Amalekites Amalekites becoming animals to escape attacks of enemies, 902 n61
   disguised as Ammonites, making war against Jehoshaphat, 747 n647
     Canaanites, 745
   identified with inhabitants of Seir,
   307 n278
   massacre of, by David, 307 n278
   not to be accepted as proselytes,
   582, 1178 n191
   as sorcerers, 902 n61
   spies reporting that Amalekites dwell in south, 710
See also Amalek
 Amaltheas
   name, meaning of ("horn"), 461
   playing cymbal, 461
   third daughter of Job, 461
See also Keren ha-Puch
 Amasa (adjutant of Saul), 900
 Amaziah (king of Judah) defeated by Joash (of northern kingdom), 1038
   as false prophet, 1042 n28
   God-fearing at beginning of reign, 1038 one of eight rulers of Davidic
   dynasty to die violent
   death, 933 n107
   setting up idolatry in Jerusalem, 1038 son and successor of Joash, 1038 tortured to death by own subjects, 1038 victory of, over Edomites, 1038 violent death of, as punishment for cruelty against Edomites,
   1039 n17

Amaziah (priest of Bethel) denounced by Amos, 1040 identified with "old prophet" of Bethel, 883 n131
 amethyst (color). See under color(s) Amidah, 127 n60
 beginning of, restored by men of Great Synagogue, 1127 n56
 first benediction of, 188 n56
 and prayer of Mordecai, 1161
 n123
 Hannah's second prayer as abridged form of, 891 n20
 Moses as author of, 1128 n58
 prayed aloud in Palestine, 889 n11 prayed in low voice, as Babylonian custom, 889 n11
See also prayers, Jewish; Eighteen Benedictions
 Amittai
 name, midrashic interpretation of,
 997 n9
 Ammiel
 name, meaning of, 705
 son of Gemalli, spy of tribe of Dan, 705
 Ammihud
 name, meaning of, 681 n424
 Ammon (place)
 part of, becoming possession of Og, 758
 to be spared because of Naomi, 758 Ammon (son of Lot)
 marrying Canaanite, 235
 name, meaning of ("son of my people"), 758
 Ammonites
 capturing wealth from Ben-hadad, 397 committing four acts of hostility
 against Israel, 214
 conquered by Sennacherib, 1051
 n65
 as descendants of Lot, 214
 males excluded from Jewish communion, 917
 and Moabites cruelty of, toward Israel when conquered by Babylon, 1086 not to enter assembly of Lord to tenth generation, 792 Torah commanding considerate treatment of, 983
 war of, with Jews under Jehoshaphat, 397

Amon
 burning Torah, 1055, 1058 n112
 committing incest with mother,
 1055, 1058 n112
 father of Josiah, 1058-1059
 one of eight rulers of Davidic
 dynasty to die violent
 death, 933 n107
 son of Manasseh, surpassing father in wickedness, 1055
 Amoraic period
 Tiberias as seat of Jewish learning
 in, 410 n391
 Amoraic sources
 use of Edom for Rome frequent in, 254 n19 (see also rabbinic literature)
 Amoraim
 on Abraham's observance of law,
 239 n275
 Amorites
 attacked by Kenaz, 858
 custom of, to delay burial of pious
 man, 706 n509
 emigrating to Africa, 848 n34
 as giants, 754, 756 n699
 as hardest people, 848 n34
 idols and precious stones of, destroyed by God, 856
 land provisionally granted to, 157
 licentiousness of, 210 n155
 as magicians and sorcerers, 848
 n34
 number of, like sand of seashore, 310 (see also dust: of earth;
 sand of seashore; star[s]: in heavens)
 punishment of, 215 n179
 Sihon as king of, 751-753
 spies reporting that Amorites dwell in mountains, 710
 story of Hadrian being shown Amorite corpses, 754
 stricken with blindness in battle,
 858, 860 n17
 surrendering to Jacob, 315
 warfare of, 311 n289, 314-316
 assembling for war at Hazor,
 317 n297
 attack thwarted by piety and prayers of Jacob, 311
 n289
 Israel advancing against Amorites, 716-717
 kings turning back from fighting
 against Jacob, 311
 planning to attack Israel in valley of Arnon, 749

Amorites (cont.)
 warfare of (cont.)
 seven kings of Amorites coming to fight against sons of Jacob, 310
 "ways of," meaning superstitious practices, 848 n34
See also Canaanites Amos
 denouncing priest Amaziah, 1040
 having impediment in speech, 1040 killed by Amaziah, 1042 n28
 King Uzziah, 1040
 one of eight postexilic prophets,
 991 n56
 one of princes who assist Messiah,
 100 n142
 one of those called "man of God"
 in Scripture, 838 n965 (see also man of God)
 one of three great prophets, 1039
 as postexilic prophet, 1042 n25
 prophetic activity of, 1040
 as shepherd, 501 n109
 time of activity of, 1041 n20, 1042
 n25
 Amoz
 book of, 1058 n104
 Tamar as ancestress of, 344
 Amram
 death of, in promised land, 548
 n10
 and divorce
 A. changing mind about, 475
 A. leading movement of divorce in response to Pharaoh's order, 473
 elder from tribe of Levi, 696
 as firstborn, 718
 image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
 and Jochebed Israel redeemed from Egypt on account of merits of, 474
 n30 (see also under Israel: in Egypt; merits)
 marriage of, 438, 474, 474 n33 making only one brick daily for Egyptians, 473
 one of four sons of Kohath, 718
 (see also under Kohath)
 one of four to lead sinless life, 473,
 912 n7
 one of seven pious men of world, 968 (see also under pious:
 men)

- Amram (cont.)
 one of seven with overlapping life terms, 982 n4
 one of six righteous men who drew Shekinah back from six heavens, 473
 piety of, 473, 474 n30
 receiving priesthood as reward for zeal in study of Torah, 928 n78
 several laws revealed to, 476 n37 son of, as derogatory name of Moses, 726 n581, 734 son of Izhar, 805
 from tribe of Levi, 473
 vision of, about Moses and Aaron, 475-476
 in war of Egypt against Canaan, 548 n10
 wisdom of, 473
- Amraphel
 etymologies of, 196 n85
 identified with Nimrod, 162 n82, 163 n87, 180 n45, 196 n85
 one of five kings to make war on Abraham, 194 identified with Ninus (grandson of Nimrod), 163 n87, 196 n85
- amulet
 to protect babies from Lilith, 65
- Amzara (wife of Noah), 146 n29
- Anah (descendant of Esau)
 first to breed horse and ass, 324 meeting demons in desert, 324 n321
 mother of, also mother of his father, Zibeon, 324 offspring of incestuous marriage, 324 shepherding asses when monsters came out of sea and rode away on asses, 323-324 trying to bring about unnatural unions among animals, 324
- Anak
 sons and daughters of, as giants, 707
- Anakim
 name, meaning of, 137
 offspring of fallen angels and Cainite women, 137
- analogy
 hermeneutic rule of, 884 n135
- anamnesia
 Platonic doctrine of, 58 n20
- Anan, R.
 story of, illustrating severity of Elijah, 1007
- Anani
 name
 meaning of, 1063 n136
 of Messiah, 1063 n136
- Anathoth
 field of, as inheritance of Jeremiah, 1075
- androgynous
 Adam as, 67 n42
 mythological conception of, 67 n42
- Aner
 advice of, to Abraham concerning circumcision, 202
 at burial of Sarah, 235
 as disciple of Abraham, 197 n92 partaking of Abraham's banquet, 205
- angel(s), fallen
 Arabic legend of Harut, 128 n60
 and astrology, 121 n57
 Azazel, 118 n56 (see also Azazel)
 Azza, 761 n723
 and Cainite women Anakim as offspring of, 137
 descendants of, 121 n57
 Ezekeel, 119
 Gadriel, 95 n131
 and idolatry, 121 n57
 Kawkabel, teaching men about astrology, 119 lured by women, 121 n57
 names of, 118 n56, 137 n10
 as originators of all evil, 121 n57
 punishment of, 119-120, 135-38, 137 n10
 Rephaim as offspring of fallen angels and Cainite women, 137 Samsaweel, teaching men signs of sun, 119
 in second heaven, 3 n9, 124
 seducing Eve (Gadriel), 95 n131
 Seriel, teaching men signs of moon, 119
 Shemḥazai, 118 n56
 teaching men
 augury from clouds (Ezekeel), 119
 how to make idols, 118 n54
 signs of earth (Arakiel), 119
 about spells (Armaros), 119 and witchcraft, 121 n57
 women who caused fall of, transformed into sirens, 41 n168
- angel(s), fallen (cont.)
 Yikon, ringleader of, 137 n9
 zamzummim as offspring of, with Cainite women, 137
See also angel(s), general; angel(s), individual; and under individual names)
- angel(s), general ability of, to see demons, 82 n98
 and Abraham
 angels appearing to A., 206 n132, 207 n143
 angels as accusers of A., 225 n228
 angels eating with A., 879 n111, 962 n45 angels interceding for Isaac's life, 233 n255
 angels leaving A. to go to Sodom, 212
 angels marveling at opinion of A., 211 n159 Jaol leading A. to highest heaven, 200 n114
 questions of angels concerning A., 279 n134 tears of angels falling on A.'s knife, 229
- accompanying humans
 Eliezer, 240
 Enoch (Anpiel), 129
 Jacob, 294, 328
 Joseph, 328
 leaving Abraham to go to Sodom, 212
- accusing humans of sin, 52 n12
- and Adam angels and creation of A., 49 n3 (see also Adam; creation) angels envious of A., 62, 142 angels grieved by sin of A., 76
 angels serving meat and wine to A., 69
 Hadarniel speaking to A., 90 n110
 relation of, 63 n33
- angel promised to Israelites to lead them identified with ark of covenant, 644 n330
- appearing as (see also angel[s], general: forms of; angel[s], general: incorporeality of) Arabs, 204, 206 n136
 Esau, 306 n273
 Moses, 488 n76
 Nabatean, 206 n136
 Saracen, 206 n136
 thousands of warriors, 297

angel(s), general (cont.)appearing as (cont.)

young man, 873 n97, 879 n111

appearing to Abimelech in dream, 216

Abraham, 206 n132, 207 n143,

879 n111

Asenath, 424

Hagar, 201, 203 n122

Joseph concerning brothers in Egypt, 372

Lot, like lightning, 214 n172

Manoah, taking no food, 879
n111

appointed over passion of love, 344
and Aramaic language

angels not understanding, 612
n242

attending to one task only, 207
n154

and Balaam

angel in B.'s throat preventing speech, 771

angel of mercy attempting to save B. from destruction,
767 n743

bearing inscription Hēsed

("grace"), 618-619 n254

becoming proud, 52 n12

blessing Asenath, 424

as bodyguards of Moses on tour of
heavens, 503

bringing food and drink, 177 n29

carrying burdens of Jewish captives on march to Babylon, 1085 carrying out punishment on serpent, 76

causing soul to forget everything, 58 n20

changed into wind, 13

chief of angels, 83

angels (Shemḥazai), 119

cherubim, 83 (see also cherubim)

each division of heavenly hosts, 83 holy ḥayyot, 83 (see also ḥayyot)

oath (Kasbiel), 137 n9

ofanim, 83 (see also ofanim)

and circumcision, 16 n62

certain classes created circumcised, 50 n6, 249 n318

concealing sacred vessels of

Temple, 1092

contest of, with monsters, 30 n127
creation of

day of, 15 n61

materials for, 16 n63

angel(s), general (cont.)creation of (cont.)

out of every word uttered by God, 16 n62

out of fire, 13, 15-16 n62

out of water and fire, 503 out of white fire, in third heaven, 503

rising from perspiration of ḥayyot, 17 n69

on second day, 12, 77

springing up daily, 16 n62

and creation of Adam, 49 n3 (see also Adam; creation) and creation of man, 51-53 (see also creation)

opposition to, 51-52, 52 n12, 52 n13, 118 n56, 614, 615
n247

punishment of angels for opposition to, 52 n13

and daughters of men

angels luring, 119

sexual intercourse of, 136-137

as degraded god, 256 n35

and demons (see also angel[s], fallen; demon[s]; devil[s])

ability of angels to see demons,
82 n98

inability of demons to see
angels, 82 n98

descent of, motive for, 137 n10

description of, in fourth heaven, 125 division of, into ten groups, 127 n60 (see also angel[s], general: ranks or degrees

among)

Dothan, as observer of law, 334
n29

doxologies of, 17 n70 (see also angel[s], general: praising God; angel[s], general:
song of; praise)

eating, 634, 635 n309

eating not necessary for, 245

and Enoch

E. having sexual intercourse with angels, 121 n58, 127
n60

E. transformed into angel, 130
n61

E. with angel watchers and holy ones, 119

Samuil bringing E. to heavens, 126

and Esther

three angels sent to assist E., 1167

angel(s), general (cont.)

evil inclination, not having, 49 n6 fall of, 119-122, 120-121 n57 (see also angel[s], fallen) and rebellion of Satan, 121 n57 feet of, like feet of calves, 622 n271

food for, 207 n143

forms of, 16 n63, 82 n98 (see also angel[s], general: appearances of; angel[s], general:
incorporeality of)

angels taking various forms, 1004 n47

fire, 16 n63

males, 13, 16 n63, 49 n6

wind, 16 n63

woman, angels never assuming form of, 1004 n47

God consulting with, 2 n3, 48, 51,
51 n10, 52 n12

as anti-Christian tendency, 2 n3 great numbers of, at revelation of Sinai, 601

grinding manna, 570, 619 n254
guarding books (Arukh, Parukh), 117 n53

Cave of Machpelah, 234

Enoch's book, 128 n60

having no joints, 305 n258

in heaven

first, chanting praise of Torah,
505 n117

second, chanting praise of Israel,
505 n117

third, chanting glory of Jerusalem, 505 n117

fourth, chanting glory of Messiah, 505 n117

fifth, announcing torture of wicked in Gehenna, 505
n117

sixth, announcing joy of righteous in Paradise, 505 n117

seventh, proclaiming power of repentance, 505 n117

seventh (Af, Ḥemah, Samael), 504

humility of, 701 n490

included or not in expression

"house of God," 701 n493

incorporeality of, 15-16 n62 (*see
also* angel[s], general:

appearing as; angel[s], general: forms of)

intercession of for Isaac's life, 233 n255

for man, 57 n20

for Moses, 477

angel(s), general (cont.)

and Israel

- angels consulting Israel about secrets, 775
- angels learning of redemption of Israel, 541
- Israel singing before angels, 562
- Israel's superiority over angels, 775 n774

and Jacob

- angels as messengers of J., 305 n266
- bringing J.'s sons for blessing, 406

and Jacob's ladder, 279 n134

- angels of Babylon, Edom, Greece, and Media on, 277

and Joseph

- angels bringing J. clothes from Paradise, 364

killing Er (son of Judah) on third day after wedding, 344

knowledge of, 207 n150

lament of

- for Aaron, 743
- over Temple and Jerusalem, 1079

and manna (see manna: and angels)

as members of God's court of justice, 2 n3

and Moses (see also angel[s], general: types, of death, and Moses)

- angel assuming form of M., 599 n195

- angel being angry at M., 631
- angels mourning for M., 834, 835 n955

- angels teaching M. response "Praised be the name . . .", 409 n383

- each angel bestowing on M. remedy and secret of Holy Names, 615

- Samael searching for M. among angels, 836

- superiority of M. to angels, 701-702 n493

on Mount Sinai, 604 n210

in mystical literature, 16 n63

names (see also under angel[s], individual)

- of classes of, 16 n64
- theophoric, 118 n56, 306 n273

not eternal, 16 n62

not perfect, 17 n70

number of, 16 n64, 83, 125, 127 n60

angel(s), general (cont.)number of (cont.)

- in heavenly court, 211 n159
- 184 myriads, snatching words of intercession from people, 809

in Paradise, 19

- one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)

perceived by animals, 766

- pious transformed into, after death, 122 n58

place of residence, 16 n63

- power of, vanishing in presence of God, 301 n248

power of speech and, 49 n6

praising God, 13-14, 83, 279 n134

- (see also angel[s], general: doxologies of; angel[s], general: song of; praise)
- in second, third, fourth, and fifth heavens, 503-504

preexistence of, 15 n61

prostrating before Metatron, 130

- ranks or degrees among, 13 (see also angel[s], general: division of . . .)

reading Torah in first heaven, 505 n117

remaining outside Holy of Holies, 453 n4

and revelation at Mount Sinai

- two angels sent to assist each Israelite at, 603

rising from perspiration of hayyot, 17 n69

and Sabbath

- angels remaining silent on, 84 n101

angels resting on, 84 n102

- seeking refuge in cities of refuge, 307 n275

sent to heal Israelites in wilderness, 675

setting fire to city walls, 1092

and sexual intercourse

- with Cainite women, 137
- with daughters of men, 120-121 n57, 136-137

with women, 121 n57

as shades, 16 n63

and Shekinah

- angels keeping faces toward Shekinah, 503

- angels subsisting on glory of Shekinah, 16 n62, 207 n143, 635 n309

angel(s), general (cont.)and Shekinah (cont.)

- distance between, 10 n30, 16 n64

- showing children of men blows of death (Gadriel), 94 n116
- of Simeon and Levi, to be reproved by angel of Esau, 579

sins of, 137

- eating forbidden food and meat with milk, 616 n248

song of (see also angel[s], general: doxologies of; angel[s], general: praising God)

- silenced at time of flood, at drowning of Egyptians, and at destruction of Temple, 1080 n32

stature of, 121 n57

- of fantastic proportions, in third and seventh heavens, 503, 504

superiority of

- angels to animal world, 52 n12
- angels to man, 17 n66
- Elijah to angels, 1004 n47
- Israel to angels, 775 n774
- man to angels, 50 n6
- Messiah to angels, 790 n836
- righteous to angels, 1100 n89

sword of, and death, 58 n20

taking objects from Temple, 1092 n61

- taking spirit of dead to proper place (Duma), 58 n20

teaching 70 languages to 70 families of Noah, 446

- tears of, falling upon Abraham's knife, 229 (see also angel[s], general: weeping of)

types, 16 n64, 17 n65

of abyss, 83

roaring of, 27 n107

of Arabot, 299

archangel(s)

- angel of deep (Tamiel), 120 n57

- angel of hidden things (Satarel), 120 n57

- angel of rain (Matarel), 120 n57

- angel of storms (Zakiel), 120 n57

- angel of thunder (Ramiel), 120 n57, 130

- in charge of Mercury (Michael), 131 n61

- in charge of world (Metatron), 21 n75

angel(s), general (cont.)types (cont.)archangel(s) (cont.)

chief of seraphim (Jaoel), 200 n114 commanding angels opposed to creation of man (Labbiel), 52 controlling heavenly bodies, 127 n60 holding male and female Leviathans in check (Jaoel), 31 n127
 in human form, 204
 leading Abraham to highest heaven (Jaoel), 200 n114 names of, 17 n65, 120 n57 (see also angel[s]: individual, archangels)
 number of, 16 n64, 120 n57
 12, connected with signs of Zodiac, 17 n65 position of, around Divine Throne, 687 n440 prostrating before Metatron, 120 n57, 130 protectors of Israel (Gabriel, Michael), 2 relation of, to planets, 17 n65
 in seventh heaven, 125
 of birds, 83
 cherubim, 80 n94 (see also cherubim) of clouds, in second heaven, 503 of confusion, seven in number, sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's banquet, 1135 of countenance (see angel[s], general: types, of face) of day (Shamshiel), 130
 passing guarding of Israel to angels of night, 775 of death (see also angel[s], general: types, of destruction) adventure of R. Joshua b. Levi with, 23 n97 appearing as beggar, 1016, 1017, 1017 n96
 appearing to Eve, 72
 in charge of animals (Meshabber), 42 n187
 in charge of children (Mashhit), 42 n187
 in charge of domestic animals (Heman), 42 n187
 in charge of kings (Kafziel), 42 n187
 in charge of other kinds of men (Af), 42 n187

angel(s), general (cont.)types (cont.)of death (cont.)

drawing sword at time of Sarah's death, 237 n270
 and Elijah, 1016-1018
 angel having no power over E., 999 n25
 angel struggling with E., 995-996 having no power over Aaron, 744
 Elijah, 999 n25
 one occupied with fulfilling commandments, 938
 one studying Torah, 1027 n2
 holding sway in this world, 563-564
 identified with Leviathan and Rahab, 20 n73 identified with Satan, 95 n130
 in Islamic legend (Sammael), 307 n275 Israelites granted power over, at revelation at Sinai, 612 n238 kept at bay by incense, 729
 and Moses (see also angel[s], general: and Moses) giving M. remedy against death, 615
 M. fearing sword of, 810
 M. not delivering soul to, 816-817 preventing M. from blessing Israel, 819
 number of, 42 n187
 people powerless against, 972
 power of, over animal world, 37-38
 prince of darkness (identified with Satan) as, 11 n41 relation of, to Gabriel, 42 n187 relation of, to Leviathan, 42 n187
 taking stand opposite Isaac, 233 n255
 Torah given to Israel as weapon against, 621 n262 traversing world with eight strokes, 1004 n46
 tricking David, 938
 words of, 58 n20
 of deserts, 83

angel(s), general (cont.)types (cont.)

of destruction (see also angel[s], general: types, of death) assigned place at far end of heavens, 2
 cherubim as, 80 n94 (see also cherubim) distance of, from God, 3 n9 dwelling at Sodom, 215 n184
 Egyptians handed over to, at Red Sea, 559 guarding souls of wicked in fifth earth, 6 having "joints" and moving slowly, 3 n9 incited by blood mark on wicked, 1075 n26 leader of (Kemuel), 214 n179, 613
 number of, 214 n179, 613
 and plague of slaying of first-born, 537
 and punishment of wicked, 3 n9, 55-56 Satan as, 538 n216
 supervising in hell, 13
 three divisions of, seizing wicked at death, 430 n444
 torturing men in hell, 506
 warded off by ink mark on pious, 1075 n26 of domestic animals, 83
 of dread, in seventh heaven, 505 n117
 of each heaven, 83
 of earth, 46 n194
 name of, 127-128 n60
 in fourth heaven, 504
 of earthquake (Suiel), 130
 of Edom
 fleeing to Bozrah, 304
 hair of, same as wool of goat, 307 n275
 on Jacob's ladder, 277
 of Egypt, assisting Egyptians in pursuing Israelites, 550 of embryos, 218
 making child look like father, 691 n448
 erelim
 over grass, trees, fruits, and grain, 503
 in third heaven, 503
 of Esau, 307 n275
 and angels of Jews, 579-580
 of face
 asked by Moses to intercede, 809

angel(s), general (cont.)types (cont.)of face (cont.)

formula of incantation used

by, 14 n50

Metatron as, 503

ordered to destroy world, 12 punishment of magicians by,

561-562 n53

of fear, in seventh heaven, 505
n117

of fire, shown to Elijah by God, 999 n30

of fishes, 83

of four kingdoms, 277

of Gehenna, 83 (see also Gehenna)

of grace, in seventh heaven, 505
n117

of Greece, on Jacob's ladder, 277

grigori, 125 (see also grigori)

guardian (Ariuk, Mariuk), 126

as companions of soul, 57
n20

as good and evil inclinations,
57 n20

hurled from heaven by God, 712 of individuals, 558 n41

meeting human at time of
death, 430 n444

of nations 558 n41

judgment on, 922 n54

of Nebuchadnezzar (Kal),
1104 n104

punished first, before nations,
558 n41

rationalistic explanation of,
57 n20

of Sihon and Og, put in chains by God, 751

testifying before God, 57
n20

of Hades, 306 n273

of hail (Yurkami), 1098

ḥashmal, 17 n70 (see also ḥashmal)

ḥayyot, 17 n70 (see also ḥayyot, holy) of healing (Raphael), 52 (see also Raphael)

of heaven, name of, 127 n60

of heavenly bodies, 131 n61

of constellations (Rahtiel), 130 of Jupiter (Zadkiel), 131 n61

of Mars (Sammael), 131 n61

angel(s), general (cont.)types (cont.)of heavenly bodies (cont.)

of moon, 83

in fourth heaven, 504

of Orion, 83

of Pleiades, 83

of solar system (Galgliel), 130 of stars, 130

in fourth heaven, 504

of sun, 83

in fourth heaven, 504

of Venus (Aniel), 131 n61

of wheel of moon (Ofaniel), 130

of herbs, 83

of hell (Nasargiel), 505-506

of hills, 83

of horror, 615

of hurricane (Zamiel), 130

of insomnia, keeping Ahasuerus awake, 1171 n163

irin ("watchers"), in sixth
heaven, 504

ishim, in fifth heaven, 504

of Joseph, not able to be repulsed by angel of Esau, 580 of Judah, to be repulsed by angel

of Esau, 579

of justice, favoring creation of man, 51

kadishim ("holy ones"), in sixth
heaven, 504

of lightning (Barkiel), 130

of locusts, 83

of love

favoring creation of man, 51
in seventh heaven, 505 n117

of mankind, 97 n132

of Media, on Jacob's ladder, 277

of mercy

attempting to save Balaam
from destruction, 767 n743

encircling Divine Throne, 2

going to destroy Sodom, 212

in seventh heaven, 505 n117

three divisions of, meeting righteous on entering other world, 430 n443

ministering, 13-14

with Aaron at time of death, 741 creation of, on second day, 13

at entrance of Paradise, 18

leaving Holy of Holies when high priest enters on Day of Atonement, 674

angel(s), general (cont.)types (cont.)ministering (cont.)

purification bath of, 13-14

surrounding Divine Throne
in seventh heaven, 6

of mountains, 83

of nations, 166 n91, 279 n134, 445-446

accusing Israel, 2

being terrified, 2

of night, 55, 57 n20, 120 n57,
130, 197 n98

and conception of human being, 55

fighting for Abraham, 195

passing guarding of Israel to angels of day, 775

prostrating before Metatron, 130 ofanim, 33 n139 (see also ofanim)

ordinary, having six wings, 40
n155

of Paradise, 83

of peace, 450

opposed to creation of man, 51 of praise, creation of, on second

day, 13

of prayer (Michael, Sandalfon),
53 n13

of quaking, 615

of rain, in second heaven, 503

of rain (Matarel), 120 n57

of rain (Matriel), 130

of reptiles, 83

of Reuben, to be rebuffed by angel of Esau, 579

of rivers, 83

ruler of world (Metatron), 21
n75 (see also Metatron) of Sabbath, 83

of sea, 18

to cast corpses of Egyptians out of Red Sea upon land, 868 of showers (Zafiel), 130

of snow (Shalgriel), 130

of storm, 130

shown to Elijah by God, 999
n30

of strength (Zeruel), 860 n17

of terror, as strongest and mightiest of angels, 614-615

of trees, 83

of trembling, 615

angel(s), general (cont.)types (cont.)

of truth

cast down from heaven to earth, 51

opposed to creation of man, 51 of war (Gabriel), 53 n13 (see also Gabriel)

of water, 83

of whirlwind (Rashiel), 130

of wild beasts, 83

of wind, 130

in second heaven, 503

shown to Elijah by God, 999
n30

venom from hand of, causing
death, 58 n20

as weavers of coverings in fifth division of Paradise, 20 weeping of, 231 n242 (see also angel[s], general: tears of)

over Temple and Jerusalem,
1079, 1080 n32

as wind, 16 n63

wings of, 63 n34

six in number, 40 n155, 84
n101

12 in number, 127 n60

women of Israel singing before, 563

and world to come angels to disappear before creation of new world, 885

n140

worshipping second Adam (i.e., Jesus), 63 n35

See also angel(s), fallen; angel(s),
individual; and under indi- vidual names

angel(s), individual (see individual names)

Abagtha

Af ("anger")

Akraziel

Aniel

Anpiel

Arakiel (fallen angel)

Ariel

Ariuk

Armaros (fallen angel)

Artakifa (archangel)

Aruk

Aruniel

Bardiel

Barkiel

Ben Nez

Bigtha

angel(s), individual (cont.)

Biztha

Carcas

Ceruihel

Dobiel

Dothan

Duma

Dumah

Ezekeel (fallen angel)

Gabriel (archangel)

Gadriel (fallen angel)

Galgliel

Gallizur

Gethel

Hadarniel

Hadriel

Harbonah

Haron

Ĥemah

Heman

Israel

Jaol (archangel)

Kafziel

Kal

Kasbiel

Katriel

Kawkabel (fallen angel)

Kazfiel

Kemuel

Kezef

Kokabiel

Labbiel (archangel)

Lahash

Lailah

Leliel

Mariuk

Marut (fallen angel)

Mashhit

Matarel (archangel)

Matriel

Mehuman

Meshabber

Metatron (archangel)

Michael (archangel)

Nasargiel

Nathaniel

Nuriel

Ofaniel

Oniel

Palit

Parukh

Peneme

Phadihel

Phanuel (archangel)

Posiel

Raguil

Rahab

Rahtiel

angel(s), individual (cont.)

Ramael

Ramiel (archangel)

Raphael (archangel)

Rashiel

Raziel

Rigyon

Ruĥiel

Salamiel

Samael

Sammael

Samsaweel (fallen angel)

Samuil

Sandalfon (archangel)

Sargiel

Satan

Satarel (archangel)

Semalion

Seriel (fallen angel)

Shalgriel

Shamiel

Shammiel

Shamshiel

Shemḥazai

Suiel

Suriel

Tamiel (archangel)

Uriel (archangel)

Uzza

Venus

Vretil

Yaasriel

Yefefiyah

Yikon

Yofiel

Yurkami

Zadkiel

Zafiel

Zagzagel

Zakiel (archangel)

Zakkiel

Zakun

Zamiel

Zeruel

Zethar

See also angel(s), fallen; angel(s), general

angelology

attitude of Synagogue toward, 16
n62

of Babylonian Talmud, 137 n10

anger

causing neglect of duty, 574 n110

having bad effect on Moses, 574
n110

maxim about, communicated by Elijah to R. Judah, 1010

Angias. See Agnias

Angro-Mainyu. See Agrimus

Anibal (younger brother of Asdrubal), making war on Latinus, 420

Aniel (angel)

of heavenly bodies, in charge of Venus, 131 n61

animal(s)

acquiring characteristics of, by eating, 42 n189

associated with inebriation, 153 becoming less ferocious, 2 clean, 32 n139, 283

number of, 144

suckling male children of

Hebrews, 565 n61

consumption of, as meat enticing man into, 146 n32

prohibition against, 69 corruption of, before flood, 146

n32

creation of, on fifth day, 50 n7

cruelty to

Joseph accusing brothers of, 328

in Sodom, 209

devoted to their young, 42 n181

different species of, in dedication offering, corresponding to different ranks of leaders of

Israel, 671

domestic, created on sixth day, 82
n98

dominion of Adam over, 69

dominion of man over, 135 n7

in time of Solomon, 92 n113,

152 n53

evil inclination of, 50 n6

fables and folklore of, 42 n190,

114-115, 115 n49

ape and crocodile, 42 n190

gazelle giving birth on top of rock, 452

hind having contracted womb,

452 lion and fox, 262 n55

story about language of, 42

n190

traveler and fox in Sodom, 207-208

wolf speaking to Jacob, 341,

343 n66

fear of first human couple, 69 fear of man of, after flood, 92

n113

female, assigned to Eve, 92 frightened by Behemoth, 2

God teaching us through, 43

animal(s) (cont.)

golden, on throne of Solomon making noises, 969

movements of, 969

horns of, received prior to hooves,

87, 88 n108

and human language

animals speaking, 45 n194

Arabic influence, 343 n66

in Christian legends, 45-46

n194

animals' understanding of, 69

immorality of, in time of Noah,

144 immortality of, 39 n150, 72, 517

n144

language of, 70 n58

Arabic legend about, 957 n34

Elijah understanding, 1004

Islamic legends about Solomon's

knowledge of, 958 n34

Solomon's knowledge of, 957

n34

Solomon's story of guest wanting to learn, 953-954

magic, 548 n3

male, assigned to Adam, 92

moral qualities of, 43-44

and Noah

found worthy to enter ark, 146

n32

immorality of, in time of Noah,

144

not having good inclination, 49 n6

noticing presence of Elijah, 1006

n61

participating in erection of Tabernacle, 655 n363

perceiving angels, 766

power over, lost by Adam, regained by Solomon, 961 n38

propagation of, 42 n190

refusal of, to serve impious masters, 305 n270

resurrection of, 232 n246, 248

n317

reviving of, by Abraham, 198, 200

n113

reward and punishment of, 128

n60

righteous people concerned about welfare of, 733 n606

ritual slaughtering of rules for, observed by brothers of Joseph, 328 (see also animal[s]: as sacrifices)

rule of, over celestial spheres, 71

animal(s) (cont.)

as sacrifices (see also animal[s]: ritual slaughtering of)

by Abraham, 198

by Noah, 150-151

to be bound at time of slaughter,

128 n60

Samael searching for Moses

among, 836

serving man, 43

spirit God to shed over, in time to come, 642 n328

spontaneous generation of, 42

n190

subservient to Solomon, 962 superiority of, over man, 45 n192

tame, 2

before the fall, 79 n87

to be again in Messianic times,

79 n87 (see also Messianic time[s])

unclean, 146 n33

number of, 144

swine as, 283

urine and excrement of, 41 n174

whining when angel of death is near, 1006 n61

wild, 2

created on sixth day, 82 n98

fearing and obeying saints, 92

n113

as fourth plague, 529-530

in wilderness, 550

See also under individual animals

annihilation, decree of. See under

Ahasuerus

Ano

bearing Abijah to Jeroboam, 982

n2

anointing

description of ceremony of, 658

n371

of kings (Saul, David, Solomon, Joash, Jehoahaz), 893 n30

of Messiah, 1022 n112

of priests

Aaron and sons, 893 n30

Zadok, 893 n30

See also oil

Anokhi

explanations of, 604 n209

as first word of God on Sinai, 602-603 in revelation to patriarchs, 604

n209

Anoko

identified with poet-philosopher

Ibicus, 180 n45

wise man advising Nimrod, 179

Anpiel (angel)
 guiding Enoch, 129
 antediluvian generations. See generation(s): before flood anthropomorphic expressions, 151 n50
 anthropomorphism
 of prophets, 1096 n76
 anti-Christ
 and Elijah, 131 n61
 in Christian legend, 1022 n113
 and Enoch, 131 n61
 to be from tribe of Dan, according to Christian legend, 580 n141 anti-Christian ideas, 7 n15
 in Balaam's prophecy about man born of woman, 777 n781 Esau's rejection of circumcision, 254-255 n24 flood disturbing Adam's remains, 149 n44
 four men not having share in world to come are Jesus and some of apostles, 908 n100
 God appearing in pillar of cloud to three prophets only, 612 n242 identification of spirit of God with spirit of Messiah, 56 n17 liturgical formula would mislead people into thinking there are three Gods, 998 n18 man created in image of angels, 50 n6
 Melchizedek deposed from priesthood, 197 n104
 Messiah will not be anointed in time to come, 658 n371 negative view of Bible in Greek, 633, 635 n308 not praying with raised hands longer than three hours, 583 n145 Pauline Christianity was responsible for destruction of Second Temple, 1074 n24 raising and lowering arms as symbol of cross, 583 n145
 Rome claiming relationship with Israel, 649 n350
 Shem-Melchizedek born with sign of Abrahamic covenant, 197 n102 unusual birth and precociousness of Ben Sira, 1084 n42
See also Christian ideas; Christian legends; Christian polemics anti-Jewish ideas

 Paul in Galatians 3:17, 616 n248
 Antiochus IV Epiphanes
 John Hyrcanus fighting against, 942
 Antoninus (emperor)
 discovering one of places where Joseph hid valuables, 397
 one of ten rulers who became proselytes, 1093 n66
 ants
 story of Solomon and, 972
 teaching regard for property of others, 43
 anus
 one of ten orifices of man, 960
 ape
 associated with wine, 153, 155 n58
 and crocodile, fable of, 42 n190 apocryphal-pseudepigraphic literature. See pseudepigraphic literature
 apple
 as forbidden fruit of Paradise, 73-74 n70 (see also fruit[s]: forbidden) apple tree
 symbolic of Israel, 1175
 willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175
See also tree(s)
 Aquarius (Water-bearer) (sign of Zodiac)
 answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151
 Aquila
 translating shaddai as "ikanos," 11 n43 Arab(s)
 angels appearing as, 204, 206 n136
 conquered by Sennacherib, 1051 n65
 Elijah appearing as, 1001
 identified with Ishmaelites, 206 n136 Arabian Nights
 and story of R. H̄anina, 115 n49 Arabic custom separation of young animals from mothers, 1035 n35 Arabic ideas
 different religions among genii, 975 n84
 Elijah identified with Khadir, 996 n3 Arabic influence on idea of Queen of Sheba as female demon, 458 n20

Arabic influence (cont.)
 on legends about Job, 463 n39
 legends with talking animals, 343 n66
 on story about fox Hedor, 210 n155 on title "servant of God," 452 n2 version of legend of Moses as child, 484 n65 Arabic language
 God proclaiming Torah in, 820
 (see also Aramaic language; Hebrew language; Roman language) Arabic legend
 about David condemning man to death on false testimony, 929 n78 about Elijah appearing to Calif Al-Mutadhid in dream, 1013 n93 about Elijah appearing to Sultan Sulaiman I in dream, 1013 n93 about Hiram of Tyre, 1105 n105
 about Khadhir, dependent on Elijah legends, 1016 n94 about "Land of the Blessed," 1089 n57
 about languages of animals, 957 n34 about marriage of Solomon and Queen of Sheba, 1073 n21 about Nebuchadnezzar and Joseph, 1084 n42
 about Queen of Sheba, 961 n40, 965 n55
 about Solomon's magic carpet, 973 n77 about statues in magnificent building, 973 n79 Arabot
 as seventh portal, 68-69
 Arad
 another name for Sihon, 752 n669
 (see also Kenaani) true name of Sihon, 751
 victory over, taking place in month of Av, 752 n669
 Arakiel (fallen angel)
 teaching men signs of earth, 119
 Aram (place)
 Laban, king of, slain by Jacob, 314 made habitable by kinsman of Abraham, 243 Aram (son of Kemuel)
 building city called Aram-naharaim, 243

- Aram (son of Shem), 346 n79
- Aram (son of Zoba)
building city called Aram-Zoba, 243
- Aramaic language
God proclaiming Torah in, 820
(see also Arabic language; Hebrew language; Roman language)
- laments of Moses and people over Temple in, 1081 n37
- not understood by angels, 612 n242
- older than Hebrew, 166 n91
- prophets receiving divine communications in, 612 n242
- Arameans
defeated by Joash as reward for king's refusal to listen to accusations against Amos by Amaziah, 1031 n22
- invading Palestine on day of burial of Elisha, 1030
- and Jacob, covenant between, 293
- knowledge of curative properties of grains and seeds, 157
- Arami ("the deceiver")
another name for Laban, 283
- Aram-naharaim (city)
built by Aram (son of Kemuel), 243
- identified with Petor, 243
- Aram-Zoba (city)
built by Aram (son of Zoba), 243
- Ararat, 151 n48 (see also ark [Noah's]; Noah; and ark)
- Arauna. See Achuzan
- Arauna the Jebusite, 128 n60
- descendants of, as "house of Nebalata," 1121 n32
- original possessor of site of Temple, 967 n57
- skull of found at time of Hezekiah, 1121 n32
- found during rebuilding of Temple, 1120
- Arbat (second wife of Benjamin), 348
- Arbel
conquered by sons of Jacob, 315
- archangel(s). See angel(s), general: types, archangels; angel(s), individual; and under names of individual angels
- Archer (sign of Zodiac). See Sagittarius
- Archonites
heresies of, 102 n3
- Ard (son of Benjamin)
name, meaning of, 380
- Aridah (wife of Issachar, daughter of Jobab), 348
- Ariel (angel)
of heavenly bodies, in charge of Venus, 131 n61
- Aries (Ram) (sign of Zodiac)
answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151
- Arioch (king of Ellasar)
Chedorlaomer forming alliance with, 194
- Nebuzaradan known as, 1086 n46
- Aristeas
oldest source to identify Job with Jobab, 456 n14
- Aristotle
drawing all knowledge from Solomon's books of wisdom, 955 n18
- legend of evil disposition of, 484 n68
- receiving wisdom from Jeremiah and other Jewish sages, 159 n75
- Ariuk (guardian angel), 126
- ark, holy. See ark (of covenant)
- ark (of Bezalel). See ark (of covenant)
- ark (of covenant)
accompanying Israel to camps, 891-892, 893 n31
- brought into prayer meeting in Shushan, 1160
- captured by Goliath, 898
- Philistines, 891-892
- carried by angel to mount whence Moses viewed Holy Land, 1091
- carried in desert for 40 years, 429
- with cherubim, 642-644
- circumcised males bowing before, 960
- coming to Babylon with Jehoiachin, 1063 n134
- consisting of three caskets (gold, wooden, gold), 643
- constructed by Bezalel, used also in Solomon's Temple, 643
- containing tablets of Ten Commandments, Ineffable Name, and all other epithets of God, 643
- covering of, with sackcloth, 1161 n123
- crossing Jordan River by itself, 843
- moving by itself, 844-845 n14
- ark (of covenant) (cont.)
description of, 643-644
- first thing constructed by Bezalel, 642
- hidden by Josiah, 1062 n118
- hidden under woodhouse when Temple destroyed, 643
- identified with angel of Lord, 684 n435
- identified with promised angel, 644 n330
- illuminated by precious stone, 147
- as image of Divine Throne, 643
- Levites walking backwards while carrying, 684 n435
- measurements of, 968 n65
- Moses copying Torah scroll for, on last day of life, 812
- not to be transported on wagon, 665
- one of five sacred objects concealed by God at destruction of Temple, 645
- one of five things in First Temple only, 1123-1124 n36
- only element of sanctuary whose measure given in fractions, 644 n330
- pattern of fire for, coming down from heaven to Moses, 645 n338
- placed in center of Holy of Holies, 7, 11 n39
- as receptacle for tablets, Torah scroll, and presents offered by Philistines, 644 n331
- resanctification of, after capture by Philistines, 894 n34
- scholar compared to, 644 n330
- spread over with blue cloth, 643
- staves of, stretched when Solomon set them in Holy of Holies, 644, 646
- taken into battle against Philistines, 893 n31
- by Phinehas, 794
- taking place of high priest's plate, 798 n861
- to be carried on shoulders of priests, 786, 923
- ark (of Moses). See under Moses: birth of
- ark (of Noah)
built from wood of gopher tree, 142
- construction of, 140 n19, 142 n21
- four stories of, 142 n21
- inmates of, 143-47

- ark (of Noah) (cont.)
 measure of, 142-143 n21
 plank from, worshiped by Sennacherib, 1046 plan of, 142 n21
 sexual abstinence on, 151
- ark (of tablets)
 second ark, containing tablets, 643
- Arka (fifth earth), 6
- Arka (third earth), Cain in, 110
- Arkites
 land provisionally granted to, 157
- Armaros (fallen angel)
 teaching men about spells, 119
- Armenians
 war of Israelites against, 850-851
- armies. See war/warfare
- armor
 worn by Jashub, king of Tappuah, 314
See also war/warfare; weapon(s)
- arms
 raising and lowering, significance of, 581, 583 n145
- Arnon
 Israelites at, 749-750
 valley of, God's favor shown to Israelites in, 749
- Arpachshad
 Abraham and posterity descended from, 1132
- arrogance
 accusations of, against Jews, 51 n8
 leprosy as punishment for, 1042 n30
 one of eight sins committed by Pharaoh, inhabitants of sinful cities, builders of Tower of Babel, Sennacherib, and Nebuchadnezzar, 562 n54
 one of seven tempter spirits, 435
 punished by death by fire, 1048 n60
- arrows
 divination by, 1073 n24
 shot toward heaven from Tower of Babel, 164, 165 n88
 used by Pharaoh against Israelites, 558-559
- Artakifa (archangel), 120 n57
- Artaxerxes I decree of, concerning Jews, 1179 n192 identified with Cyrus, 1131 n4 medical knowledge revived in time of, 157-158
- Artaxerxes I (cont.)
 as name of all Persian kings, 1131 n4
- Arukh (angel)
 guarding books, 117 n53
- Arum (plant)
 legend concerning, 842 n6
- Aruniel (angel), 874 n105
- Aruzan. See Achuzan
- Arvadites
 land provisionally granted to, 157
- Asa, 985-986
 afflicted with gout as punishment, 985
 conquering Zerah, king of Ethiopians, 985 doing away with worship of Priapus, 985 having little confidence in God, 985 idolatry of grandmother of, 986 n18 idolatry of mother of, 986 n18
 making scholars engage in war, 985, 986 n22
 marriage of, to daughter of prophet Hanani, 988 n28 prayer of, for God's help in war, 986 n21 regaining possession of Solomon's throne, 985 son of Abijah of Judah, as worthy and pious ruler, 985 suffering difficulty in walking on account of David's curse of Joab, 946
- Asaf book, 159 n74, 159 n75
- Asahel
 attacking Abner, 905
 pierced by Abner's spear, 58
 as swift runner, 58, 905
- Asaph ben Berechiah
 author of medical books, 973 n77
 carrying out orders of Solomon, 971
 composer of psalms, 823
 relationship of, to Korah, 728 n590
 and study of medicine, 158
 Tohu identified with, 888 n1
- Asdrubal (son of Agnias)
 death of, in battle, 420
 war of against Latinus, 420
 against Zepho, 419
- Asenath, 423-424
 abandoned under thornbush as baby, 348, 368
- Asenath (cont.)
 amulet of, 349 n97
 engraved by Jacob with story of her parentage and birth, 368
 and angels
 angel appearing to A., 424
 A. carried by angel to Egypt, 348
 A. transformed by angel, 425 bearing two sons, 368 blessed by angel, 424
 Jacob, 425
 Joseph, 424
 compared with Sarah, Rebekah, and Rachel, 423
 daughter of Dinah and Hamor, 368
 Dinah and Shechem, 348
 and right to city of Shechem, 405
 Potiphar, adopted, 348, 351 n101, 355 n108, 423
 description of, 423
 and Jacob
 A. as J.'s nurse in Egypt, 402
 A. mourning for J., 412
 A. visiting J., 425
 and Joseph
 A. as infant, defending J., 368
 A. as wife of J., 368
 A. blessed by J., 424
 A. meeting J., 423-424
 A. moved by beauty of J., 423
 legend of, 347-348, 349 n97
 bees bringing honey of Paradise to A., 427 n432
 name of changed to City of Refuge, 425
 meaning of, 427 n432
 meaning of letters of, 368
 prayer of, 427 n432
- Ashbel (son of Benjamin)
 descendants of, God-fearing, 434
 name, meaning of, 380
- Asher (second son of Zilpah), 286
 blessing of, by Jacob, 408
 death of, 449
 age at, 125 years, 448
 last words of A., 448-449
 excommunicated by brothers, 318, 393 n293 grandsons of, names of, 434 imparting mark of true redeemer of Israel to Serah, 516
 marriage of
 to Adon, daughter of Ephlal, 348

Asher (cont.)

- marriage of (cont.)
  - to Hadorah, daughter of Abimael, grandson of Shem, 348
- name, meaning of ("praise"), 286, 433
- one of weak among sons of Jacob, 396 n324
- tribe of
  - beauty of women of, 408
  - blessed by Moses, 823
  - blessed with land rich in olives, 823
  - blessed with many sons, 823
  - chrysolite as stone of, 652, 856
  - confessing that they hid seven golden idols called holy nymphs by Amorites, 856
  - daughters of, keeping beauty into old age, 823
  - distinguished by beauty of women, 680
  - elders from (Pashhur, Shelomi, Samuel, Shalom, Shecaniah, Abihu), 696
  - flag of, fire red with picture of olive tree, 688
  - prince of (Pagiel), 680
  - providing nourishment for Israel, 823
  - significance of dedication offering of, 670
  - spy representing (Sethur), 705

Ashera

- as moon, 874 n105

Ashi, R.

- compiler of Babylonian Talmud, 1055, 1128 n56

Ashkenazic ritual

- Day of Rejoicing of Law in, 481 n57

Ashmedai (Asmodeus), 973-975

- devil par excellence, offspring of Naamah and Shamdan, 114 n45, 136
- and family, as "Jewish demons," 975 n84
- going daily to heavenly academy for discussions, 973
- invisibility of, on earth, 973 (see also invisibility)
- king of demons, 925, 950
- legend of, in Talmud, 965 n56
- mountain abode of, 973
- name, Aramaic origin of, 975 n83
- and Solomon
  - A. before S., 974

Ashmedai (cont.)and Solomon (cont.)

- A. bringing case of two-headed Cainite before S., 950-951
- A. giving S. book, 977 n93
- A. passing self off as S., 974
- A. telling S. secret of shamir, 974
- strangling little children with Lilith, 114 n45
- thought to be raging through capital of Amalekites, 926
- as unclean spirit, 963
- well of, 973
  - filled with wine by Benaiah, 973-974
- See also* angel(s), fallen; demon(s); devil(s)

Ashur

- one of seven men refusing to worship Baal, 872-873

Ashweroth (son of Anam)

- king of Egypt, 192

Asmodeus (devil). See Ashmedai

ass

- Balaam's, 765-768
  - created on sixth day of creation, 766
  - dying when finished speaking, 767
  - as female, 766-767
  - gift from Jacob, 766
  - God opening mouth of, 766
  - mouth of, created in twilight between sixth day and first Sabbath, 767 n739 (see also under creation: sixth day)
  - perceiving angel, 766
  - reason for death of, 767
  - speaking, 766
    - in Hebrew language, 766
    - rationalist and allegorical explanations of, 768 n745
- bearing Abraham to Akedah, 515
- jawbone of, as weapon of Samson, 878, 880 n119
- bearing Messiah at end of days, same as ass bearing Moses back to Egypt, 515
- bearing Moses back to Egypt, same as ass bearing Abraham to Akedah, 515
- Egyptians compared to, 528 n175
- as immortal, 517 n144
- worshiped by Avvites, 1044
- See also* donkey

Asshur

- as ancestor of Ninevites, 1032 n27

Assyria

- conquering northern kingdom and taking tribes into exile, 1044

Assyria-Babylon

- one of four kingdoms, 196 n82 (see also four kingdoms)

Assyrian characters

- reintroduced by Ezra, 1124 n44
- square characters used by Moses in writing Torah, 1124 n44
- Torah rewritten in, after exile, 1119

Assyrian language

- used by Semites, 158 n72

Assyrians

- bodies burned but not garments, 1047 n59
- as descendants of Shem, 154
- destroyed by Michael, 1047 n55
- destroyed by Ramael, 1047 n55
- manner of destruction of, 1047 n58
- souls burned and garments intact, 1046

Asteho (concubine of Potiphar), 353

astrolabe of Joseph, 380

astrologers

- not seeing clearly in visions, 478-479, 479 n46
- and Pharaoh
  - telling P. day on which redeemer of Israel would be born, 471 n21
  - telling P. that threat had been averted, 478
- predicting that Potiphar's wife would have descendants through Joseph, 352

astrology

- Abraham commanded not to rely on, 198, 199 n108
- coming from fallen angels, 121 n57
- Egyptians as masters of, 955 n24
- healing powers of, 157
- history of, 26 n100
- misleading Ahitophel, 922
- signs of Zodiac defending Israel, 1151
- taught to Egyptians by Abraham, 190
- taught to men by Kawkabel, 119
- used by Abimelech, 262 n56
- See also* astronomy; constellations; Zodiac, signs of; and under individual signs of Zodiac

astronomy

- calendar and, 410 n391
- Enoch as father of, 123 n59
- before flood, 116 n53
- knowledge of, passed on from first ten generations, 102 n1
- taught to Egyptians by Abraham, 190
- See also* astrology; constellations; Zodiac, signs of; and under individual signs of Zodiac

Asui

- describing Esau, born fully developed, 253

asylum

- for criminals in sanctuary at Jerusalem, 947 n8

Ataroth (city)

- name, meaning of ("garlanded with fruits"), 799

Athaliah (queen)

- one of eight rulers of Davidic dynasty to die violent death, 933 n107
- one of two reigning queens in Jewish history, 990 (see also Jezebel)
- succeeding Ahaziah, 1037

atonement

- after destruction of Temple, 200 n111
- loving-kindness and, 200 n111
- sacrifice of, at dedication of Temple, kid as, 340
- sin offering of, on 10 Tishri, 341
- Temple service and, 1, 200 n111

Atro (firstborn son of Pharaoh), 498

Atzarta. See Pentecost

Aud

- Midianite priest using witchcraft to seduce Israel, 871

augury

- from clouds, taught to men by Ezekeel, 119
- See also* divination; lots; magic arts; sorcery; Urim and Thummim; witchcraft

Augustiani

- advising Nebuchadnezzar (i.e., Titus) to destroy Jews, 1087 n52

autumn

- color blue corresponding to, 971

autumnal equinox

- and great bird Ziz flapping his wings, 2
- time when Abraham stretched out hand to slay Isaac, 877 n109

Av (month)

- 7th of
  - Temple captured on, 1077 n29
- 8th of
  - Israelites preparing graves for punishment, 715
- 9th of
  - birth date of Jeremiah, 1070 n11
  - demons exercising power from 17 Tammuz to, 660
  - fire set to Temple, 1077 n29
  - Israelites lamenting in wilderness without cause, 712
  - Israelites punished by death, 715
  - Temple to be destroyed on, 712
- 10th of
  - mountains beginning to appear after flood, 148
  - Temple burning down completely, 1077 n29
- 15th of
  - Benjaminites readmitted to Israel, 884 n135
  - festival of bringing sacrifices to Temple, 985 n17
  - holy day to commemorate relief from punishment for rebellion, 715
  - origin of festival of, 715 n547
- 28th of
  - Moses remaining in heaven from 18 Tammuz to, 628
- 29th of
  - Moses remaining in heaven from, to 10 Tishri, 629 n286
- victory over Arad taking place in, 752 n669, 1151
- See also* date

avarice

- sin of Elimelech, 864 n40

Av Bet Din (Saul's son Jonathan), 907

Avesta

- sacred cock of, 32-33 n139

avodah zarah

- meaning of ("unusual work") or ("service of strange gods"), 881

Avvites

- worshiping dog and ass, 1044

ayin (letter)

- creation of world through, 4
- first letter of
  - anavah* ("humility"), 4
  - ervah* ("immorality"), 4
- numerical value of (70), standing for 70 elders, 253

ayin (letter) (cont.)

- second letter in name of Jacob, 253
- on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686
- in Zaphenath-paneah, standing for arum ("clever"), 368
- See also* alphabet; letters of alphabet

Azariah

- fiery furnace and, 527
- high priest, identified with Azariah, "chief priest," 1042 n29
- among members of Great Synagogue, 1127 n56
- one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
- one of six pious men endowed with spiritual gifts descended from Ruth, 866 n61 (see also under pious: men)
- riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
- trying to restrain Uzziah from offering sacrifices, 1040
- See also* Hananiah: and Mishaël and Azariah

Azazel (fallen angel), 118 n56

- asking to dwell among men, 135-136
- descending to earth, 138 n10
- devising ornaments for women, 136
- having 12 wings, 95 n131
- identified with Hemah, 505 n117
- identified with Satan, 200 n114 (see also Satan)
- punishment of, 135
- like serpent in appearance, 95 n131
- and smoking furnace, 200 n114
- succumbing to Naamah (daughter of Cainite Lamech), 138 n10
- teaching how to make weapons, 119
- teaching makeup and ornamentation, 119
- to be judged by Messiah, 306 n275
- See also* Azzazel

Azazel (scapegoat), 137-138 n10

- to bear sins of Israel, 136

Azriel

- one of five scribes going with Ezra, 1122, 1122 n50

Azkariel. See Akraziel

Azrial
 theophorous name, 113 n42
 Azrikam
 firstborn of Azael, identified with Doeg, 908 n98 Azurah (daughter of Adam), 113 n42
 azure. See under color(s) Azza (fallen angel)
 and Azzael
   chained in secret place, 962
   having intercourse with daughters of earth, 831-832 revealing heavenly secrets to Solomon, 962 with Azzazel and Balaam, trying to force Israel back to Egypt, 761 n723 Azzazel (fallen angel) with Azza and Balaam, trying to force Israel back to Egypt, 761 n723 identified with Af, 505 n117 identified with Azazel, 118 n56
   opposition of, to creation of man, 137 n10
   teaching magic arts, 117
See also Azazel

B

Baal
 and God
   conflict between, on Mount Carmel, 994
   golden image worshiped by Jews, 1072 n16
   human sacrifices offered to, 877 n109 idol in Priapean form, 874 n102
   as sun, 874 n105
   worship of, 995
 Baal Hamon
   successor of Saul as king of Edomites, 420 Baal-peor
   site of Israel's misfortune, 770
 Baal-Zebub
   Ahaziah sending inquiry to, 1031 n22
 Baal-zephon (god of Pharaoh), 532 Baaras (plant)
   name, explanation of, in Josephus, 289 n189
   See also mandrakes Baasha (king of Ten Tribes), 397
   attacking Asa of Judah, 985 killing Shemaiah, 1078 n30 Baasha (cont.)
   wicked king of Israel, 982 n5 Babel, Tower of. See Tower of Babel babies, speaking. See infants Babylon
   angel of, on Jacob's ladder, 277
   destroyed by Persians shortly before death of Ezra, 1123
   destruction of, 1126 n54
   dominion of, symbolized by heifer of three years, 198 identified with Rome, 948 n11, 1100 n90, 1106 n106 journey of Jeremiah to, 1081-1085 as kingdom of lion, conquered by Daniel of tribe of Judah, 409 myth about founding of, resembling story of founding of Rome, 948-949 n11 name associated in Bible with Tower of Babel, 165 n88 soil of, as material for Adam's trunk, 54 n15 Babylonian captivity. See Babylonian exile Babylonian customs praying Amidah in low voice, 889 n11 Babylonian exile
   captives marching to Euphrates River without stopping, 1085
   duration of 52 years, 1073 n24
     70 years, 1073 n24
   800 species of clean animals leaving Holy Land in, 1073 n24 evil treatment of Jeremiah as cause of, 1072 n16 journey of exiles in, 318
   one of things God repented of creating, 141 n20
   700 species of clean fish leaving Holy Land in, 1073 n24 sins as cause of, 1072 n16
   suffering of Israel in, 511 n127
   transportation of captives in, 1085-1087
 Babylonian Haggadah. See Haggadah Babylonian ideas
   division of cosmos into heaven, earth, and water, 53 n13
   God revealing all future generations to Adam, 61 n27
   Lilith as wind spirit, 67 n40
   man as microcosm, 49 n4 Babylonian ideas (cont.)
   stream of life, 70 n51 Babylonian myths, 31 n127
   of Apsu and Tiamat, 149 n39
   of creation, 30 n123
   about founding of Babylon, 948-949 n11 Nergal in, 53 n13
   of Tiamat and Kingu, 30 n118
 Babylonian Rome, 948 n11
 Babylonians
   assisted by God in destruction of Temple, 1077 n29 campaign of, against Jerusalem, lasting three years, 1074
   licentiousness of, 1085 n45
   ordered not to attack married women in Jerusalem, 1085 n45 taking Jehoiachin, nobility, and scholars into exile, 1061 worshipping hen, 1044
 badger
   skin of, one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see also under Tabernacle) baker, chief. See Potiphar: chief baker of Bakkol (daughter of Abraham), 238 n273 name, meaning of ("with all things"), 238 n273 Balaam (son of Beor)
   adept in magic, 417
   advising loosing lions on Moses and Aaron, 518 as alias for Jesus, 761 n722, 796 n855
   and angels
     angel in throat preventing B.'s speech, 771
   B. perceiving angel with sword in hand, 768
   B. trying to force Israel back to Egypt with fallen angels Azza and Azzazel, 761 n723
   conversation between, 768-769
   asked by nations about bringing sacrifices, 771 n759 ass of, 765-768 (see also Balaam: she-ass of)
     B. said to have committed sodomy with ass, 768 n747
     B.'s rage at ass, 766, 768 n745
   and Balak, 762-775 (see also Balak)
   Balaam accepting Balak's invitation, 764-765

Balaam (cont.)and Balak (cont.)

Balaam instructing Balak to erect seven altars, 770, 771

Balaam recounting history of Israel to Balak, 772-773

Balaam treated badly by Balak, 770

Balak greater soothsayer and magician than Balaam, 762

Balak's messengers to Balaam, 762-764

God compelling Balaam to return to Balak, 774 superiority of Balaam's magic to that of Balak, 770

and Beor

cursing Moab for Amorites, 758

blessing of heard by all inhabitants of earth, 776 that houses of teaching and prayer would always be in Israel, 776 turned to curses, 776

blind in one eye, 763 bones of snakes arising from B.'s rotting bones, 796 causing defeat of Moab, 759 n714

compared with Moses, 760, 771 corpse of, not buried, 796 counseling Moabites to seduce Israelites to unchastity, 778

cruelty of, 760-761

curse(s) of, 214

B. eager to curse Israel, 766, 767 n742

B. knowing how to curse at moment of God's anger, 770 bringing about defeat of Moabites by Sihon, 760

turned to blessings, 776-777

death of

at age 33 years, 761 n722

B. executed with four forms of execution (hanging, burning under gallows, decapitation, dropping into fire), 795

B. killed by Joshua, 796 n855

B. killed by Phinehas, 796 n855

B. killed with sword on which serpent engraved on both sides, 796

B. sentenced to death by Sanhedrin, 796 n853

Balaam (cont.)death of (cont.)

B. to find death through sword, 768

gruesome end of, 795-797 resembling death of Jesus, 796 n855

violence of, 773

destruction of, 768-769

driven from Africa to Kittim by defeat, 419

and Edom

B. as first king of Edomites, 324

B. called Bela as ruler of Edom, 324

Elihu identified with, 460 n32, 462 n33

and five kings of Midianites flying, 794-795

fleeing to Kikanos, king of Ethiopia, 485 flying, by means of Name, 795, 796 n853

and God

B. exalted by God, then humbled, 769

B. forbidden by God from cursing Israel, 764

B. misled by God, 765

B. put to test by God, 763

God appearing to B. at night, 763, 765

hope of, disappointed, 774-776

inciting Amalek against Israel, 761 n723

as interpreter of dreams, 760, 777 n784

and Israel

B. blessing Israel in loud voice, 776

B. envious of Israel, 762 n725, 763 n730, 764, 819

B. extolling Israel, 772-774

B. trying to escape Israel's power by sorcery, 759

B. trying to force Israel back to Egypt with fallen angels Azza and Azzazel, 761 n723

B. wishing to curse Israel, 768-769

Israel regretting having slain B., 795 n850

and Job and four friends as descendants of Nahor, 761, 762 n727

and Kemuel

B. belonging to family of K., 761 n722

Balaam (cont.)and Kemuel (cont.)

K. identified with B., 244 n315

and Laban

B. as L.'s grandson, 761 n722

B. as L.'s nephew, 761 n722

B. identified with Laban, 761 n722, 767 n739, 767 n744

relation between, 295 n229

lame in one foot, 763 magic of keeping Israelites from leaving Egypt, 761 n723

and Moses

B. not inferior to M., 761

name, meaning of ("devourer of nations"), 760

observing Danites from top of Peor, 776 n776

one of five to give expected answer to God's questions, 1102 n94

one of four men not to have share in world to come, 908 n100

one of two great sages of world who lost this world and world to come, 798 (see also Ahithophel)

and Onkelos

B. advising O. not to adopt Jewish religion, 796-797 n856

O. speaking with B. by means of necromancy, 796 n856 orations of, haggadic interpretations of, 773 n764

and Pharaoh

B. advising enslavement of Israel in Egypt, 468 n6

B. advising P. to force Israelites to make bricks, 766

B. as one of three advisors of P., 420, 471 n21, 497 (see also Jethro; Job)

B. interpreting dream of P., 470

B. recalling oracle to P., 482-483

B. recounting history of Hebrews to P., 482

prophecies of

B. announcing events at end of days, 776

B. announcing events of David's reign, 776

committed to writing by Moses, 777 n784 concerning battle between Zepho and Egyptians, 419

Balaam (cont.)
 prophecies of (cont.)
   concerning battle between Zepho and Joseph, 417 that Balak would wear royal crown, 760 that Israel would destroy Egypt, 470
 as prophet, 760
   B. boasting of gift of prophecy, 769
   as greatest prophet among heathens, 761
   as last prophet among nations, 761, 769-770, 776
   as only prophet Gentiles ever produced, 760-762, 762 n727
 prophetic spirit of, 776
   leaving B., 771
 punishment of, being boiled in scalding semen virile, 796 n856 sacrifice of, rejected by God, 770-772 she-ass of, created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78 (see also under creation: sixth day)
 and sons
   B. taking Jannes and Jambres on journey, 766 contest of, with Moses and Aaron, 519-520 escaping to Egypt, 491 left to guard capital of Ethiopia, 489 taking over Ethiopia, 489
 as sorcerer, 243, 760
   B. trying to escape Israel's power by sorcery, 759
 three bad traits of (jealous eye, haughty spirit, greedy soul), 764, 765 n734 contrasted with Abraham's three good traits, 765 n734 uncircumcised, 768
 voice of powerful, carrying 60 miles, 777 n781
 wall of, identical to that erected by Jacob and Laban, 767 n744 wicked counsel of, 778-779
 wisdom of, 419-420
 and world to come (see also under world to come)
   B. losing share in future world, 773, 774 n771, 908 n100

Balaam (cont.)
 and Zepho
   B. as one of shieldbearers in army of Z., 417
   B. escaping to Egypt after death of Z., 420
   B. welcomed by Z. because of wisdom, 419
 Baladan
   father's face changed into that of dog, 1050 ruler of Babylon, sending embassy to Hezekiah, 1050 Balak
   also known as son of Zipper, 759
   and Balaam (see also Balaam: and Balak) Balak as greater soothsayer and magician than Balaam, 762
   Balak asking Balaam to curse Israel, 762-764
   Balak taking Balaam to top of Peor, 775 messengers of Balak to Balaam, 762-764
   as grandson of Jethro, 759 n718 ignorant of God's command not to wage war against Moab, 759 n717
   king of Moab, 758-760
   formerly vassal of Sihon, 759
   as magician, 759, 762, 770, 771 n757 instrument of sorcery of, bird constructed of precious metals, 759
   name, meaning of, 760 n719
   reward of Ruth (great-great-great-granddaughter) becoming mother of Davidic dynasty, 864 n39
   as soothsayer, 762, 770
   as sorcerer, 760 n720, 774
   vassal of Sihon, known as Zur, 759 Balance (sign of Zodiac). See Libra balsam
   one of rivers in Paradise, 507
   root, as gift from Queen of Sheba to Solomon, 962 n47
   some kings anointed with, 658 n371 Bamot-baal
   another name for Peor, 776 n775
 ban
   not valid unless decreed in presence of ten persons, 342

ban (cont.)
   pronounced by sons of Jacob on any who would betray truth of what happened to Joseph, 342 baptism imposed on Israelites two days before revelation on Sinai, 598 Barak
   called Lappidoth ("flames"), 867
   as Deborah's son, 870 n73 husband of Deborah, 867
   as ignoramus, 867
   taking charge of Sisera's body, 869
   three names of (Barak, Lappidoth, Michael), 870 n73
   from tribe of Naphtali, 870 n73
 Barakel
   teaching men divination from stars, 119 Bardiel (angel)
   angel of hail, prostrating before Metatron, 130 Bari (city), 1087 n48
   inhabitants of astonished at cruelty of Nebuchadnezzar, 1085-1086 rewarded for mitigating cruelty of Nebuchadnezzar, 1085-1086 Barisat (one of Terah's gods), 183
 Barkiel (angel)
   angel of lightning, prostrating before Metatron, 130 Bar Kokhba revolt
   R. Akiba as propagandist for, 1089 n56 barley cake of, meaning of, 873 n100
 barnacle-goose
   consumption of, by Christians, during Lent, 39 n150 grown to a tree by its bill, 34
   legend of, 39 n150
 Baroka, R.
   Elijah showing B. that appearances can be deceiving, 1015 Barozak grave of, not far from grave of Ezekiel, 1095
 barrenness
   of Adinah, wife of Laban, 262
   causes of, 202 n116, 253 n8 God's trial of the fathers, 202 n116

barrenness (cont.)

- giving husband right to take second wife, 888 n6
  - of Hannah, 887
  - of Leah, not mentioned in old midrashim, 288 n170
  - of Michal, 940
  - miraculously removed from seven sterile women, 878 n111
  - of Potiphar's wife, 348
  - of Rachel, 289 n202
  - as reproach, 287-288
  - of Sarah, as punishment for impious life, according to Hagar, 289 n198
  - self-denial as remedy for, 888 n7
  - ten years of, as grounds for divorce, 888 n6
  - See also* childless; childlessness; women
- Barsan (king of Adullam) and Judah, 343-344
- Baruch, 1092-1094
- as author of three prophetic works (Baruch, Syriac Apocalypse of Baruch, Greek Apocalypse of Baruch), 1093 n65
  - book of, 1092
  - commanded by God to write to Jeremiah that people should remove strangers from their midst, 1090
  - commanded to leave Jerusalem, 1092
  - death and burial of
    - death of, 1093
    - tomb of, 1094-1095
    - adjoining that of Ezekiel, 1094
    - grass near, covered with gold dust, 1094
    - marvelous occurrences connected with, 1094
  - descendant of Rahab, 844 n12, 1093 n65
  - entering Paradise alive, 1083 n42, 1093 n66 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
  - Ezekiel as teacher of, 1094
  - identified with Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, 1093 n66
  - and Jeremiah
    - B. confused with J., 1083 n42
    - and other pious men commanded to leave Jerusalem, 1076 n28
  - and Jeremiah and Ezekiel fixing calendar outside Holy Land, 1083 n42

Baruch (cont.)

- letter of, carried by eagle, 1092
  - living and dying in Babylon, 1083 n42
  - mourning of, 1092
  - one of eight priests descended from Rahab, 1093 n65
  - one of few mortals to visit Paradise and learn its secrets, 1093
  - piety of, 1094
  - as prophet, 1093 n65
  - remaining in Holy Land during exile, 1083 n42
  - revelation to, 1092
  - teacher of Ezra, 1121
  - twentieth from Moses in chain of tradition, 1128 n56
- Bar Yokni, 32 n138, 139
- as food in Messianic times, 32 n139
  - identified with Ziz, 32 n139
- Barzillai
- friend of David during rebellion of Absalom, 932
  - proselyte who had led lascivious life, 933 n103
- Basemath
- daughter of Elon the Hittite, second wife of Esau, 271
  - identified with Mahalath, 274 n121, 274 n122
  - name, changed to Adah by Esau, 271
- Basha. See Baasha
- Bashan
- one of six names of Mount Horeb, 500 (see also Horeb, Mount)
- basin, golden
- on throne of Solomon, 968
- baskets
- symbolizing kingdoms, in dream of chief baker, 361
- bastards
- dying young, 691 n451
  - in mixed multitude of Exodus, 544 n246
  - not to be excluded from community of Israel in time to come, 1022 n118 (see also time to come; world to come)
  - sons of Egyptian women and Hebrew men, 544 n246
- Batarrel, 120 n57
- bath, ritual
- hair to be combed before, 1122

bath, ritual (cont.)

- to cover case of one who desires to offer prayer or study law, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122
- Bathsheba and David
- B. destined by God for D., 928, 931 n93
  - D.'s punishment for excessive self-consciousness, 928
  - D. swearing to B. that her second child would be his successor, 946 n3
- as divorced woman after death of Uriah, 928
- granddaughter of Ahitophel, 922
- name, meaning of, 931 n93
- one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
- one of 22 women of virtue praised in last chapter of Proverbs, 949 n13
- seeing through holy spirit that Solomon would be wisest of men, 949 n13
- Bath-shua
- Canaanite wife of Judah, 439
  - death of, 344
  - disliking Tamar because she was not Canaanite, 344
  - getting Canaanite wife for Shelah (third son of Judah), 344
- Batuel. See Bethuel
- bdellium
- on bier of Jacob, 413
  - See also* precious stones
- beadle
- as hero of legends about Hebron, 248-249
- bear(s)
- among animals of fourth plague, 530
  - devouring water traders cursed by Elisha, 1025
  - having no breasts, 41 n181
- Bear (constellation)
- two stars transferred from, to stop flood, 147
- beast, horned
- as kingdom of wickedness, to be conquered by Joseph before Messianic time, 409
- beasts
- of field
    - created on sixth day, 77
  - of prey
    - hymns of praise of, 45 (see also praise)

beauty
     ten measures of, Jerusalem having nine, 1085 n45
     of women (see women: beauty of) Becher (son of Benjamin)
     name, meaning of, 380
 Beelzebub
     Israelites worshiping, 872
     See also Beelzebul Beelzeboul. See Beelzebul
 Beelzebul
     name, meaning of, 965 n56
     prince of all demons, 963
     reigning over all in Tartarus, 963 similarity of, to Sammael, 965 n56 summoned by Solomon, 963 Beeri dying in exile, 1041 n21
     prophecies of
         two verses of, preserved in Isaiah, 1039, 1041 n22
 Beer-lahai-roi dwelling place of Hagar, 243
     name, meaning of, 243 n308
 Beer Shahat
     in fifth earth, 6 (see also earth[s])
     one of seven divisions of hell, 13 (see also hell: divisions of) Beer-sheba
     Abraham planting vineyard in, 223
     Jacob going there to learn will of
         God, 275-276
     name, meaning of, 223, 260, 263
         n67
     place of covenant between Abraham and Abimelech, 223
     well of dug by Abraham, 260
         found by Isaac, 260
         to supply water to Jerusalem in Messianic time, 260
 Beersheva. See Beer-sheba
 bees
     of Paradise
         honeycomb produced by, 424
         springing forth from remains of cattle, 42 n190
     See also honey
 beggar
     appearing in guise of beggar angel(s), 1017 n96, 1020 n104
         angel of death, 1016-1017,
             1017 n96
         Elijah, 1006, 1019
         Satan, 1171 n167
     legends about, 1017

Behemoth, 3 n7, 28
     abode of, in desert Dudain, 30
         n127
     creation of
         out of mountains, 38 n141
         from water, earth, and light, 38
             n140
     description of, 33
     as female monster, 38 n141
     food for, 39 n142
     as food for pious in end time, 33,
         39 n143
     habitation of, in proximity of Paradise, 31 n127
     as land monster, 32 n127
     and Leviathan
         B. as consort of L., 32 n127
         combat of, 29, 32 n139, 33
     as male and female pair, 30 n118
     as male monster, living on dry land, 31 n127
     needing enormous quantities of water, 30 n119
     roaring of, in Tammuz, 2
     size of, 33
     slaughtered, 32 n139
     strength of, 2
     See also Leviathan; monster(s)
 Bel
     and the Dragon (part of Additions to Book of Daniel), 1116
         n8
     legend of Daniel and Darius based on, 1115 n6
     story of, 1108 n112
     encounter of Daniel with B. shown to Jacob, 277
 Bela (city)
     city that devours inhabitants, 194
 Bela (son of Benjamin), 380
     death of
         in battle against Joseph, 416
     descendants of, God-fearing, 434
     as Edomite king, 325 n323, 416
     reigning 30 years, 416
     family of, having two subdivisions, Ardites and Naamites, 434
     name
         meaning of, 380
         as name of Balaam when ruler
             of Edom, 324
         as surname of Esau, 325 n324
 Belachora. See Belchira
 Belchira
     as accuser of Isaiah and other
         prophets, 1057 n102
     name, meaning of, 1057 n101
     nephew of false prophet Zedekiah,
         1070 n11

Belchira (cont.)
     Samaritan who betrayed prophets to Manasseh, 1057 n101 Belial
     sons of supporters of Jeroboam called by Abijah, 985 n16
     streams of, third archangel made from, 53 n13
     See also Beliar Beliar malice of, 450
     spirits of, 442, 443
     sword of mother of seven evils, 450
     as tempter spirit, 450
     unchastity abandons man to, 436-437
     See also Belial; Belior Belior
     to be blinded by Messiah, 306
         n275
     See also Belial; Beliar bells
     on robe of Aaron, atoning for slander, 650
 belomancy practiced by Nebuchadnezzar, 1073
 beloved of God
     Abraham as, 168 n4
     Israel as, 168 n4
     Jacob as, 168 n4
     Jerusalem as, 168 n4
     Solomon as, 168 n4
     See also favorite of God; friend of God
 Belshazzar
     as cosmocrator, 1050-1051, 1112
         n2 (see also cosmocrator)
     death of, 1112 n4
         B. killed by servant, 1111
     descendant of Baladan, 1050-1051
     desecrating holy vessels, 1112 n4
     feast of, 1111-1113
         angel writing inscription on wall
             at, 1111
         B. taking pastry given on second day of Passover for banquet, 1112
         B. using Temple vessels at banquet, 1111-1112
     one of three sons of Evil-merodach, 1112 n2
     punishment of, 214 n170
     ruler of Chaldeans, 1111 victorious over Darius and Cyrus, 1111

Ben

another name of Solomon, referring to building of Temple, 945

Benaiah

chancellor of Solomon, 978 charged with job of executing Joab, 946, 947 n10
 chief of Cherethites and Pelethites, 980 n95 commander-in-chief of Solomon's army, 980 n95 president of Great Sanhedrin, 980 n95 priest, 980 n95
 sent by Solomon to capture Asmodeus, 973 sent to meet Queen of Sheba, 959
 story of about cheating at chess, 978
   about king of Persia, illustrating superiority of tongue, 978

bench

three-legged, 623, 625 n275 (see also chair[s]: three-legged)

benediction(s)

David instituting recitation of 100 daily, 937 n123
 recited by man returning from sea voyage, 564 n58
See also blessings; Eighteen Benedictions

Ben-hadad (Aramean king)

attacking Asa of Judah, 297, 985
 contrasted with Ahaziah, 1031 n22 sending gift to Elisha, 1030 n22
 taking all possessions of Ahab, 987

Ben Jair

another name of Mordecai, 1140 (see also Mordecai: name)

Benjamin

age of

at death, 125 years, 449
 at marriage, 349 n98

attacking Edom to west, 321

birth of

announced to Jacob by God, 317
 at night, 319 n308
 in south, 319 n308
 with twin sisters, 319 n309

blessed by

Jacob, 409
 Joseph, 379

called wolf, 409

corpse of

brought out of Egypt in secret, 450

Benjamin (cont.)corpse of (cont.)

not decaying, 411-412 (see also under corpse[s])

descendants of Ehud as, 409

 Esther, as last ruler of Israel, 409
 Saul, as first ruler of Israel, 409 to include kings Saul and Ish-bosheth, 317

as friend of God, 168 n4

inheritance of, in Holy Land, 409
 and Joseph

B. extolling J., 449-450

B. held hostage by J., 384

B. receiving 300 shekels from J., 390 n288, 390 n289

B. recognizing J. in astrolabe, 380

B. taking oath before J., 388

Judah as surety for, 385

name

meaning of ("son of days"), 318, 433, 449, 679, 681 n424

meaning of ("son of the south"), 319 n308

one of eight whose corpse not touched by worms, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])

one of four to lead sinless life, 473, 912 n7

one of weak among sons of Jacob, 396 n324

only brother not taking part in selling Joseph, 825 n926

only son of Jacob born in Holy Land, 825 n926

and Rachel

B. as second son of R., 288

B. resembling R., 381 n244 receiving four portions at dinner, 380

receiving seven portions at dinner, 381 n249 saving Asenath from sons of Pharaoh and sons of Bilhah and Zilpah, 426

and Shekinah

B. as "host of Shekinah," 825 n926

Shekinah resting in territory of B., 825 n926

silver cup found in sack of, 382

sons of names of, 380

 ten in number, 288, 348

suckled by Bilhah, 449

Benjamin (cont.)

territory of Holy Place situated in, 409

 sanctuary to be in, 822
 Temple to be erected in, 411 n401 temporary sanctuaries in, 825 n926

tribe of

blessed by Moses, 822

chiefs of, 434

confessing desire to prove whether law emanated from God or Moses, 856

crime of, at Gibeah, 880-885 distinction conferred on, reasons for, 825 n926

elders from (Senaah, Kislion, Elidad, Ahitrib, Jediah, Mattaniah), 696 flag of, multicolored with picture of wolf, 688

gem of jasper, 652

onyx, 856

going to Shiloh on Passover, 884 n135 losing seven divisions in battle over returning to Egypt, 783

Moses' psalm of, 823

prince of (Abidan), 679

readmitted to Israel on 15 Av, 884 n135

rewarded

for being first to jump into Red Sea, 905 n80

with residence of Shekinah, 555

seduced by Micah to pay homage to idols, 881

significance of dedication offering of, 669

spy representing (Palti), 705

survivors

emigrating to Italy and Germany, 882

emigrating to Romania, 884 n135

to provide Israel with first and last ruler, 409 war with, beginning on 23

Shevat, 883 n134

willing to jump into waters of Red Sea, 555

twin sisters of, 288 n170, 318

Benjamin (cont.)

- wives of
  - Arbat, daughter of Zimran, son of Abraham by Keturah, 348
  - Mahlia, daughter of Aram, grandson of Terah, 348
- Benjamin b. Zerah, R. piyyut of, 26 n102
- Benjaminites. See Benjamin: tribe of
- Ben Kish
  - another name of Mordecai, 1140 (see also Mordecai: name)
- Benmelek (son of Abimelech, king of Philistines), 235
- Ben Nez (angel)
  - keeping south wind back, 7
  - the Winged, 7
- Ben Shimei
  - another name of Mordecai, 1140 (see also Mordecai: name)
- Ben Sira
  - author of Book of Ecclesiasticus, 1084 n42
  - and father
    - creating man according to instructions in Book of Yezirah, 1084 n42
  - identified with high priest Joshua son of Jehozadak, 1084 n42
  - known among Christians as Josephus Sirach, 1084 n42
  - legend
    - and Jeremiah legends, 1083 n42
    - modeled on Evangel of the Childhood of Jesus, 1084 n42
  - precociousness of, 1083 n42
  - son of Jeremiah, 1083 n42
  - speaking as infant, 1083 n42 (see also infants)
  - wisdom of, 1083-1084 n42
- Ben Zadua (demons), 529 n185
- Beor (father of Balaam)
  - Kemuel identified with, 244 n315
  - sorcery of, 243
- Bera (the villain, king of Sodom)
  - one of godless kings of Palestine, 194
- Berechiah
  - father of prophet Zechariah in Matthew 22:35, 1078 n30
- Beruria (Valeria)
  - one of ten rulers who became proselytes, 1093 n66
- beryl (color). See under color(s)

beryl (precious stone)

- on Solomon's throne, 968
- bet (letter)
  - creation of world through, 4, 23
  - fourth letter in name of Jacob, 253
  - on standard of tribe of Dan, 686
  - numerical value of (two), standing for two tablets of stone, 253
  - second letter of name of Abraham on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686
  - See also* alphabet; letters of alphabet
- Bet Gubrin
  - identified with Seir, 306 n275
  - in Isaac's blessing of Esau, 270
  - last place to be taken from Edom before Messiah appears, 304
- Bethac, 883 n134, 893 n26
- Bet ha-Midrash
  - erected by Judah in Goshen, 392
  - Joseph studying at, 328
  - of Shem and Eber, 256 n29
  - Jacob studying at, 255, 261
  - See also* academy; Shem: academy of; Shem: and Eber, Bet ha-Midrash of
- Bethel
  - false prophet of, 983 n8
  - golden calves at, 1029
  - vow of Jacob at, 316
- Bethuel (Batuel; Hannah's father), 888 n2
- Bethuel (nephew of Abraham)
  - Aramean father of Rebekah, 238, 251
  - eating own poison and dying, 240
  - name as wordplay on betulah ("virgin"), 241 n294
  - trying to kill Eliezer, 240
- Bezalel, 641-642
  - age of
    - at time of erection of Tabernacle, 13 years, 642 n325
  - builder of Tabernacle, 469, 641, 654
  - elder from tribe of Judah, 696
  - endowed with celestial wisdom, 469
  - fashioning ark with own hands, 644 n329
  - making candlestick for Tabernacle, 645
  - name
    - meaning of ("I, the Shadow of God"), 641, 642

Bezalel (cont.)

- name (cont.)
  - other names of (Reaiah, son of Shobal, Jahath, Ahumai, Lahad), 642
- and Oholiab
  - viewing heavenly sanctuary, 642 n326
- possessing wisdom, insight, and understanding, 641
- Solomon as descendant of, 641
- son of Hur, son of Caleb and Miriam, 641, 642 n325
- from tribe of Judah, 642
- well versed in secret lore, 641
- Bezer (city)
  - first of cities of refuge, 307 n275, 332
- Bible
  - books of
    - authorship of, 1071 n15
    - five books of Moses, eight prophets (Minor Prophets counted as one), eleven Hagiography (Ezra-Nehemiah as one), 956 n25
    - See also* canon; Scripture
- Biblomancy, 1159, 1161 n122
- Bigeon
  - sanctuary at, one of seven holy places destroyed by Esau, 264
- Bigtha (angel)
  - one of seven angels of confusion sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's banquet, 1135
  - presser of winepress, 1135
- Bigthan and Teresh
  - conspiracy of, thwarted by Mordecai, 1145-1146, 1175
  - nailed to cross as punishment, 1146
- Bigvai
  - counted among returning exiles even though in womb, 681
- Bildad
  - one of four friends of Job, 459-460 (see also Job: friends of)
  - prophet to heathens, 761
  - questioning Job, 459
- Bilhah
  - bearing son, 286
  - birth of, on same day as Rachel, 444
  - burial of, by tomb of Rachel, 430 n436

Bilhah (cont.)

couch of, brought to tent of Jacob after death of Rachel, 318

daughter of Laban and concubine, given to Jacob, 284

Rotheus, brother of Deborah, 444

death of caused by grief over Joseph, 340-341

in Palestine, 430 n436

name, meaning of, 444

not a bondwoman, 284 n167

sexual intercourse with Reuben, 435

son(s) of

called Dan by Rachel, 286

second son of, called Naphtali
by Rachel, 286

treated with contempt by brothers of Joseph, 328

suckling Benjamin, 449

surviving Jacob, 343 n65, 430
n436

as wife of Jacob

given by Rachel, 286

made principal wife after Leah's
death, 319 n312

and Zilpah

daughters of Rotheus, brother of Deborah (Rebekah's nurse),
284 n167

sons of, making alliance with sons of Pharaoh against Joseph and Pharaoh, 426

Bilkis

name given to Queen of Sheba in Arabic sources, 1073 n21

Bilshan

another name of Mordecai, 1140 (see also Mordecai: name)

name, meaning of, 1141 n62

bird(s)

appearance of wonderful bird at Elim, 568 n88

constructed of precious metals, as instrument of sorcery of Balak, 759 (see also Yadua)

created on fifth day, 29, 77, 82 n98

as guides to water, 569 n88 hymns of praise of, 44 (see also praise)

immortal, 39 n150, 72

kinds

hoopoe, 958, 961 n39

jackdaw, 109 n31

bird(s) (cont.)

kinds (cont.)

malham

immortality of, 72

not eating of fruit of tree, 72

moor-hen, 974

wild cock, as guardian bird of shamir, 975 n85

law to cover blood of, 242 n301

legend of bird speaking before

Solomon, 958 n34

made out of marshy ground, 29

not alighting on holy place, 501 of prey (see also eagle[s]; vulture[s])

among animals of fourth plague, 530

fearing to swoop down, 2

Samael searching for Moses

among, 836

watching over blood from

Rebekah's injury, 242 n301

See also Ziz; and under individual kinds of birds

bird's nest

name of secret chamber of Messiah
in Paradise, 23 n97

Birsha (the sinner, king of Gomorrah)

one of godless kings of Palestine, 194

birth

of female children

position of, feet first, 469, 470
n15

of male children

position of, head first, 469, 470
n15

through mouth, 43 n190

untimely, in Egypt, because of roaring of Judah, 387

window of

in first heaven, 503

birthday

significance of, in war, 582-583
n144

birthmark

of Esau, serpent, 253

birthright

appropriated by Joseph, 327

double share of inheritance with, 258

Esau's sale of, to Jacob, 268 n92, 327, 579

priestly service and, 258

scorn of, one of five crimes of Esau
on day of Abraham's death, 257

See also firstborn; inheritance;
primogeniture

birthstool, 365

Bithiah (daughter of Pharaoh; foster-mother of Moses), 498

accompanying Pharaoh to Moses to plead for end of plagues, 539 adopting Moses as son, 481 daughter of Pharaoh Shishak, 970

n71 dying before Moses fled from Egypt, 481 n61

entering Paradise alive, 73 n67,
132 n62, 481, 540 n226
(see also Paradise: entering alive)

foster-mother of Moses, according to rabbinic literature, 479
n48

marrying Caleb, 480

name, meaning of ("the daughter
of God"), 480

one of ten rulers who became pros-
elytes, 1093 n66

one of 22 women of valor, 238
n271

spared from plague of slaying of firstborn, 539

supervising one of seven classes of
women, 23 n97

Biztha (angel)

name, meaning of ("destruction of the house"), 1135

one of seven angels of confusion
sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's
banquet, 1135

black. See under color(s)

black art

taught by Abraham to idolatrous sons of Hagar, 243

See also augury; magic arts; sorcery; witchcraft

blains

as part of sixth plague, 530

blasphemer(s)

corpses hung on gallows, 780-781
n790

one of three men losing this world
and gaining world to come,
847-848 n31

punished by being eaten alive by worms, 884 n136

story of, 689-691

blasphemy

forbidden by commandments, 69

Herod punished for, by being eaten by worms, 717

n552

Jacob cautioning sons against, 411

blasphemy (cont.)

one of eight sins committed by Pharaoh, inhabitants of sinful cities, builders of Tower of Babel, Sennach-
erib, and Nebuchadnezzar,
562 n54

one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also under leprosy)

punishment for being eaten alive by worms, 908
n106

death by stoning, 690

“Blessed be the Lord . . .”

praise of angels during night, 617

See also praise

blessing

of Aaron on people, 659

of Abraham, 244 n316

by God, 237

by Melchizedek, 196

brought by pious to those they visit, 291 n207

cleanness required for, 406

of Ephraim and Manasseh, 402-406 by God before Abraham, 244 n316

of Isaac

given to I. by God, 243

withheld from I. by Abraham, 243

of Israel, by Moses at hour of death, 819

of Jacob

by Michael, 300

as prophecy of Israel's history,
268 n95

by Rebekah, 268 n97

tenfold, 266

of Jacob's sons by God, 394 n309

of Japheth by Noah, 154

of Levi

by God, 300

by Isaac, 438

of Noah and sons by God, 151

by righteous man like being blessed by Shekinah, 402

of Ruth by God, in ears of corn, 866 n54

in seventh heaven, 6

of Shem by Noah, 154

after sneeze, 401 n357

of 12 tribes by Jacob, 406-411

over wine in Paradise

Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses,

Joshua refusing to say, 939

See also blessings

blessings

Abraham's name mentioned in, 187 disappearing at destruction of Temple, 968 n64

pronounced on Mount Gerizim,
874 n103

12, recited by Levites facing Mount Gerizim, 843

upon world at erection of Temple,
968 n64

See also benediction(s); Eighteen Benedictions

blind

considered as dead, 517 n142 (see also leper[s])

made to see, 218

blindness

of Ahasuerus, 1169 n149

Amorites stricken with, in battle,
858, 860 n17

causes of, 267 n74

effects of, on eating, 264

of Eli, 893 n27

Jair's people stricken with, 873
of Satan, 1128 n57

blood

of Abel, 108 n21

absorbed by earth, 79 n90

atonement power of, as christological doctrine, 599 n195

coming from rock struck by Moses, 738

command to abstain from, 151 (see also food: forbidden)

effect of, on sword, 926 n77

having affinity with bone, 950

heavenly decree sealed with, 1159,
1161 n122

loosening sword from hand of,
Joab, 926

Kenaz, 858, 860 n18

of murder victim crying out, 609
n228

never congealing

and goat slaughtered by brothers of Joseph, 1078 n30

miracle of, 1078 n30

of Zechariah, 1078 n30

one of five parts of body received from mother, 606 (see also body, human)

rivers of Egypt turned into, 523-527 of salamander, making fireproof, 1045 seething, cause of, 1077 n30

blood (cont.)

shedding of (see also bloodshed) command against, as one of Noachian laws, 151

penalty for, 151

wicked marked with, by angel,
1075 n26

bloodguilt

of Cain, 111

blood relationship

importance of, 737 n622

bloodshed

causing guilt, 798 n859

as grave sin, 316

impurity of, to be removed from Israel in time to come, 677
n417

one of eight sins committed by Pharaoh, inhabitants of
sinful cities, builders of Tower of Babel, Sennach-
erib, and Nebuchadnezzar,
562 n54, 1048 n60

one of seven evils, 450

one of three cardinal sins, 278, 280
n147

shunned by Joseph, 579

See also blood: shedding of blood vengeance, 294 n220

blue. See under color(s)

boar, wild

springing forth from remains of mountain-mouse, 42 n190

swine, as emblem of Roman legion stationed in Palestine, 284
n162

board of intercalation

at time of Solomon, 937 n124

Boaz

ancestor of Davidic dynasty as reward for taking wife for sake of heaven, 867 n69

chastity of, 866 n60

death of

in bridal chamber, 867 n69

on day after wedding to Ruth, 864 giving Elimelech and sons proper

burial, 863

great-grandfather of David, 911 identified with Ibzan (judge), 864

n31, 879 n113, 911

identified with Judah (judge), 861
n26

introducing custom of pronouncing benedictions on bridal couple in presence of ten men, 866 n64

Boaz (cont.)

introducing greeting "The Lord be with you," 865 n53 ordaining that elders be appointed to supervise festive celebrations, 866 n64 praying and studying Torah, 866 n60
 and Ruth, 862-867
   age of B. at marriage to R., 80 years, 864
   B. admiring R., 863
   B. giving R. barley, 866 n61
   B. marrying R., 864
 slandered in Karaite sources, 866 n60
 thanking God for removing famine, 866 n60 vision of, concerning descendants of Ruth, 863
 body, human allegorical interpretation of, 47
   beginning to decay as result of idolatry, 117 composed of fire and water, 608 n224
     four elements (fire, water, air, earth), 608 n224
     seven substances, 54 n15
   correspondence between parts of, and parts of earth, 54 n15 duty of man to, 61 n26
   five parts of received from father (bones, veins, nails, brain, white of eye), 606 received from mother (skin, flesh, blood, hair, pupil of eye), 606 functions of parts of, 447 members of, created to perform divine commandments, 1052 n76
   as microcosm, 47
   number of veins of, 61 n26
   Tabernacle as symbolic representation of, 639 ten parts of, received from God (breath, soul, light of countenance, sight, hearing, speech, touch, sense, insight, understanding), 606 united with soul, 55
 Bohu, 8 n19
   consisting of stones in abyss, 5
   one of ten things produced on first day of creation, 5

Bohu (cont.)

separating second from first earth, 6
 over seventh earth, 6
See also earth(s); Tohu
 boils
   Egyptians afflicted with, at time of Moses' abandonment, 477
   Job afflicted with, 457
   as plague of Egypt, 524, 525
   snails as remedy for, 43
 Bolan (king of Khazars)
   one of ten rulers who became proselytes, 1093 n66
 bondage
   chronology of, 511 n126
   lasting 210 or 400 years, reckoning of, 510, 511 n124, 511 n126, 515
 bondsmen for Torah, heavens, earth, and mountains offered as, 599 n196
 bone(s)
   almond-shaped bone to form nucleus of new body in resurrection 401 n345 blood having affinity with, 950 one of five parts of body received from father, 606 (see also body, human) small bone to form nucleus of new body in resurrection, 401 n345 Book Concerning Laws of Kings, 533 n187 book of Adam, 62 n31
 book of covenant
   read to people on occasion of revelation at Sinai, 599 n195 Book of King Solomon, 1104 n104 book of knowledge. See Raziel, Book of Book of Magicians
   and golden calf and Apis cult, 622 n271 Book of Memorial
   four nights inscribed in, 541 Book of Raziel. See Raziel, Book of;
   also holy book
 book of song
   given to Joshua by Moses, 827, 828 n943 identical to Deut. 32:1-43, 828 n942 identified with Book of Yashar, 828 n943

book of the Law

Deuteronomy as, 842 n9
 Book of Wars of Sons of Jacob, 315 n292
 Book of Yashar referred to by Joshua, 850 n41
 Book of Yezirah
   Ben Sira and father studying together, 1084 n42 books
   of deeds, entrusted to cherubim, 100 n142
   of medicine, hidden by Hezekiah, 1053 n89 Borsippa
   Bursif, 1092 n64
   treasure in, 1091
 bow
   and arrow, as chief weapon of tribe of Judah, 821 of God set in clouds after flood, 151 (see also rainbow)
   See also weapon(s) bowl
   golden, on Solomon's throne, 968
 Bozrah
   angel of Edom fleeing to, 304, 307 n275
   as city of refuge, 304, 307 n275 producing Job, ruler of Edom, 324 brain
   one of five parts of body received from father, 606 (see also body, human) bramble Elimelech pictured as, 874 n103
 brass armor of Jashub, king of Tappuah, 314 (see also armor; weapon[s]) associated with Greece, 648
   fourth artificial heaven of Hiram made from, 1104 one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see also under Tabernacle)
   in Tabernacle
     of altar, 646-647
     symbolizing Greek empire, 640
 bread
   defilement of, by Sarah, 206 n142
   as part of blessing of Jacob, 266-267
   to be baked early in morning, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122 and wine offered to Abraham by Melchizedek, 196

breast-feeding time of, 24 months, 481 n64

breastplate
 of Aaron (see also Aaron: breastplate of; high priest: breastplate of) atoning for partial verdicts, 650 one of eight priestly garments, 650
 precious stones in, 650-653
 of high priest, 35, 356, 688 (see also high priest: breastplate of) breath

 one of ten parts of body received from God, 606 (see also body, human) one of three things contributed by God to formation of child, 608 n224

brick(s)
 babies used instead of, 498, 499 n104
 of sapphire, placed under Divine Throne, 543 n234
 for Tower of Babel, 163-164 worship of, by Hagar, 221 n216

bridegroom pardoned on wedding day for all past sins, 273, 902 n53

brokenhearted loved by God more than the angels, 16 n64

brother
 as fellow believer, unknown in rabbinic literature, 274 n123

Bul (month) identified with month of Marḥeshvan, i.e., Ḥeshvan, 966

bull(s)
 as burnt offering and peace offering, 598
 carved by Moses on piece of Joseph's cup, 429
 of dedication offering, corresponding to kings, 671 depicted on tribe of Ephraim's flag in wilderness, 688 engraved on silver leaf used to raise Joseph's coffin from Nile, 621 Joseph known as, 409
 magic, 548 n3
 miraculously rising out of fire to become golden calf, 621 one of four beings represented on Divine Throne, 621 (see also Throne, Divine)

bull(s) (cont.)
 and ram and lamb of dedication offering significance of, for Nahshon and for tribes of Asher, Benjamin, Dan, Ephraim, Gad, Issachar, Manasseh, Naphtali, Reuben, Simeon, and Zebulun, 666-671 symbolic significance of, in history of world, 671
See also animal(s); bullock; offering

Bull (sign of Zodiac). See Taurus

bullock
 as burnt offering of Levites on first day of dedication of Tabernacle, 674
 image of, on coins struck by Joshua, 853 n54 offered by Noah, 88 n108 (see also animal[s]: as sacrifices; Noah: sacrifice of)
See also animal(s); bull(s); offering

Bunah (second wife of Simeon), 309, 348, 348 n95

burial
 of Aaron, 736
 of Abel, 97, 108, 109 n39
 of Abraham, 237 n268
 Abraham paying for grave for Sarah, 234
 of Adam, 96-98, 124, 234, 236 n263
 of Bilhah, 430 n436
 of Dinah, 348
 of Esau, 322 n317, 414-415
 of Eve, 98 n137, 99, 234
 Michael's instructions to Seth, 99
See also coffins; and under individual names

burning bush
 Moses and, 501-502
 one of three outstanding moments in life of Moses, 815 n902
See also thornbush burnt offering. See offering: burnt butler, chief. See Potiphar: chief butler of Buz (brother of Job; nephew of Abraham; father of Shuah, Naamat, and Barachel, fathers of friends of Job), 459

Buzi (father of Ezekiel)
 as descendant of Rahab, 844 n12, 1093 n65

Buzi (prophet)
 as name of Jeremiah, 1084 n42, 1101 n93
 as prophet, 844 n12

C

Caesarea
 conquest of, by Maccabees, 315 n292 identified with Sartan, "tower of Straton," 315 n292

Caesars
 deification of, 528 n175, 1103 n99

Caifas
 high-priestly family of, coming from family of stick-gatherers, 691 n452

Cain and Abel
 born on day when their parents were created, 103 n4
 C. killing A., 106, 106 n19
 day of sacrifices of, 105 n11 fighting over sister, 106 n17 hostility of C. to A., 103-104, 105 n12 place of sacrifices of, 103 reason for enmity between, 106 n17
 as twin brothers, 104 n9
 twin sisters of, 104, 106 n17
See also Abel: and Cain arguments in heavenly court concerning, 108 n26

birth of, 101-103, 103 n4
 in Adamah, second earth, 109-110
 before fall, 103 n5
 without pain, 103 n5
 when Adam was 70 years of age, 103 n4
 as builder of cities, 111, 112 n40
 cunning of, 106 n19
 curse of, 108 n22
 death of, 113 n44
 in flood, 112 n37, 147
 descendants of, 111-114, 112 n40
 introducing idols, 118 n54
 wickedness of, 111, 115-116, 138
 evil inclination of, 106
 face of becoming black, 104, 105 n13
 luminous, 101, 103 n5
 family of, living in field of Damascus, 138

Cain (cont.)

first to introduce weights and measures, 111, 112 n41 forgiveness of, 88 n106, 107 and God
   C. forgiven by God, 88 n106
   C. put to test by God, 763 conversation of, 106-107
 horn as mark of, 111
 leprosy of, 109 n28, 675
 letter inscribed on forehead, 107 letter tet (value = 9) on arm, 108-109 n27
 life span of, 112 n37, 112 n40
 love of husbandry as cause of downfall of, 1042 n30
 marriage of
   to sister, 112 n42
   to Themach, 112 n40
 monuments of, 111
 name, meaning of, 102, 103 n6, 103 n7, 105-106 n17, 112 n41 offering of, 105 n11, 105 n12
   leftovers of grain, 103-104 rejected by God, 103, 105 n10
 as offspring of Eve and Satan, 101, 102 n3
 one of five to give expected answer to God's questions, 1102 n94
 punishment of, 106-109, 675
   in seventh generation, 111, 112 n37
 repentance of, 108 n26
 seven sins of, 112 n37
 sign of, 109 n27, 109 n28
 as son of Sammael, 965 n56
 as tiller of ground, 103
 wickedness of, 111, 112 n42

Cainites

Anakim as offspring of Cainite women and fallen angels, 137
 as dwarfs, 110 dwelling place of, 957 n28
   living underground, 950
 as giants, 110
 having two heads, 110, 110 n34
 nudity of, 136
 some having two heads, 950
 as species of genii, demons, and monsters, 110 n34

Calcol ("giver of food")

identified with Joseph, 955 n20 wisdom of, not as great as that of Solomon, 949-950

Caleb

connected with family of David, 911
 described by God as His servant, 805 n880 (see also servant of God)
 father of Kenaz, 857 n1
 marriage of
   to Bithiah, 480, 861 n25
   to Miriam, 861 n25
 marrying and begetting son at age of 10 years, 716
 and Moses
   C. praising M., 710
   C.'s vision at moment of M.'s death, 833 n952
   M. asking C. to intercede, 809
 one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
 one of 77 pious men in Israel, 629 n287 (see also under pious: men)
 one of ten just men in Israel, 628
 and Phinehas
   accompanied on spy mission by two demons, husbands of she-devils Lilith and Mahlah, 843 appearance of, transformed by demons, 843
   conquering Jazer, 752
   sent as spies to Jazer, 752
 pursued by three giants in Palestine, 710 Samael stopping prayer of C., 809 son of Hezron, 861 n25
 son of Kenaz, 861 n25 son of Jephunneh, spy of tribe of Judah, 706, 861 n25
 as spy
   age of, when sent as spy (40 years), 716
   C. attempting to contradict report of spies, 710
   C. chosen by Joshua to be spy, 843
 stepson of Kenaz, 861 n25
 strong voice of, 710, 812, 813 n901
See also Joshua: and Caleb calendar
   and astronomy, 410 n391
   Enoch as father of, 123 n59
   fixed outside Holy Land by Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Baruch, 1083 n42

calendar (cont.)

Israel swearing not to divulge secret of, to other nations, 1081 n39
 Jewish, introduced as protest against Egyptian calendar, 536 n203 leap year declared by Hezekiah, adding second month of Nisan, 1053 n89 and movements of moon, 534-535 received along with commandments to sacrifice paschal lamb and to circumcise sons, 534 scholars of, to be descendants of Issachar, 408, 410 n391 secret of, revealed to Moses, 536 n203
 solar year of, 9 n26
See also date; and under names of months
 calends, 88 n107
   heathen celebration of, 87
 calf, golden. See golden calf camel(s)
   Abraham riding on, 221
   carrying merchandise of Ishmaelites, 337 given to Esau by Jacob, 306 n274
   lost ears of, 42 n183
 camp(s)
   cattle outside of, 687
   cleansing of, 674-677
   cloud of glory separating dwelling places in, 687
   description of, 687
   divisions of, 667
   east of sanctuary
     abode of Moses, Aaron, and Aaron's sons, 687 north of sanctuary
     abode of sons of Merari, 687 prohibition against entering while unclean, 797 separation of tents in, 776, 777 n777
   size of, 834
   south of sanctuary
     abode of Levites and family of Kohath, 687 surrounded by rivers, 687
   west of sanctuary
     abode of sons of Gershon, 687
 in wilderness, 687-689
   divisions of, 636
   Moses moving tent one mile away from, 627

camp(s) (cont.)

See also Israel (nation; people)/ Israelites: in wilderness;
wilderness

Canaan (place)

famine in, 189
as land promised to Abraham, 187, 210

Canaan (son of Ham)

as builder of Tower of Babel, 164
n88
and castration of Noah, 155 n61
land provisionally granted to, 157, 188
last will and testament of, 154
made slave on account of evil deeds, 333
Noah's curse of Ham on, 154
one of seven sinners, 856, 857 n9
settled in land not assigned to him, 188 suffering for father's sin, 154

Canaanites

as accursed race, 238, 239 n282
claim of, to Palestine, 196 n82 destroying land before Israel could conquer, 718 n558
destroying land to make it uninhabitable for Israelites, 546
emigrating to Africa, 848 n34
fearing Israelites, 704, 846
having right of habitation, 193
as misers, 717
reward of, for honoring Abraham,
548 n8
spies reporting that they dwell by sea and along Jordan, 710
See also Amorites

Canaanite wives

of Ammon, 235
children of, not allowed to touch bier of Jacob, 414 n405
of Judah (Bath-shua), 439 of Moab, son of Lot, 235
of Reuben, 349 n98
of Shelah, third son of Judah, 344
of Simeon, 349 n98

Cancer (Crab) (sign of Zodiac)

answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151

candle(s)

Moses likened to, 697 n479
to be lighted to celebrate Sabbath, 677-678

candlestick

God making model of, out of red, green, white, and black fire, 678

candlestick (cont.)

golden, on Solomon's throne, 968
lighting of, 677-678
light of, symbolizing light of Shekinah, 645

and Moses

Gabriel teaching M. how to make, 645-646 n338
God showing M. pattern of,
four times, 678 n421
one of five sacred objects concealed by God at destruction of Temple, 645
pattern of fire of, coming down from heaven to Moses, 645
n338
seven-branched hidden by Shimur, 1091
precious stones in, 1091
seven branches of corresponding to seven planets, 639 representing seven planets, 646
n339

shaping itself out of fire, 678
as symbolic representation of Torah, 646 n340

for Tabernacle

difficulty of Moses in constructing, 645
later set in Temple of Solomon, 645 made by Bezalel, 645
wrought by miracle, 678
in Temple of Solomon ten in number, each having seven lamps, 645

cannibalism, 34

men gnawing own flesh during famine in Joram's time, 991
women consuming children during famine in Joram's time, 991

canon

of Scripture
and Great Synagogue, 1128 n56
See also Bible; Scripture

canopy(ies)

over heads of pious, made from hide of Leviathan, 30 n123
of Paradise, 19-20, 22 n83

cantillation

of books of Job, Proverbs, and Psalms, 463 n39

caper-spurge, 40 n165

capital punishment

for certain kinds of work on Sabbath, 653, 690
stoning as punishment for idolatry, 779

Cappadocian language, 158 n72

ascribed to Japhethite system of writing, 158 n72

Capricorn (Goat) (sign of Zodiac)

answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151

captivity

as one of seven evils, 450

captivity, Babylonian. See Babylonian exile

carbuncle

beaming like lightning, 651
on ephod of Pharaoh, 364
gates of heavenly Temple made from, 503
and gates of Paradise, 18
making one who wears it wise, 651 stone of Levi in breastplate of Aaron, 651
thrones in Paradise made from,
507

See also precious stones

Carcas (angel)

name, meaning of ("knocker"), 1135
one of seven angels of confusion
sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's
banquet, 1135

Carmel, Mount

conflict between God and Baal on, 994 miracles performed on, 994
one of four mountains on which heavenly Jerusalem will descend, 595 n184 (see also Jerusalem: heavenly)

Carmi (elder from tribe of Reuben), 696

carob

swallowing Isaiah, 1057 n103
and tree of knowledge, 74 n70
See also tree(s)

Carshena (prince of Africa)

having charge of animals, 1136
one of seven princes of Persia consulted by Ahasuerus about fate of Vashti, 1136

Carthage

founded by Phoenicians, 848 n34

cassia

strewn before Joseph, 367 casting lots. See lots: casting

cat(s)

and dogs, originally friends, 35 hymn of praise of, 45 (see also praise)
and mice
enmity between 35, 36, 41 n171
originally friends, 35

- cat(s) (cont.)
 taking up residence with Adam, 35-36
- catapults
 used by Babylonians against Jerusalem, 1074
- cattle
 created on sixth day, 77
 pulling ark to Judea, 894 n34, 894 n36 singing song of praise for ark, 892
- cave
 in which Moses and Elijah dwelt, created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78 (see also under creation: sixth day)
- Cave of Machpelah. See Machpelah, Cave of
- cedar(s)
 coming to Babylon at time of exile, 1074 n24
 of Lebanon
 created on third day, 18
 planted in Paradise, 21 n74
 at Magdala
 considered holy, 393 n308
 planted by patriarchs, 393 n308
 to be used for Tabernacle, 393 n308
 only species of shittim to be used, 647
 planted at head of Jacob's grave, 412
 sent to Solomon by Hiram of Tyre, becoming green again, 646 swallowing Israel, 1057 n103
 symbolic of Israel, 1175
 for Tabernacle
 planted in Egypt, 647
 praising God, 647
 for Temple, blossoming and bearing fruit, 647 n342
 tree for cross of Haman, 1177 n184
 cedar willing to serve as, 1175
 wainscoting of first and second divisions of Paradise made from, 19
See also tree(s)
- celestial beings
 defiled by contact with terrestrial beings, 17 n68 hymns of praise of, 46 n194 (see also doxologies; praise)
See also angels; cherubim; heavenly beings; seraphim
- celestial bodies. See heavenly bodies
- celestial garments. See garment(s): celestial
- celestial sanctuary. See sanctuary: heavenly
- Celsus
 accusations of, against Christians, 51 n8
- Cenec
 medieval Christian form of Kenaz, 857 n1
- censers
 on Solomon's throne, 968
- census(es) of Israel, 636-638
 age of men to be counted in, 681
 at Arbot-Moab, after plague of Shittim, 783 at arrangement into camp divisions, 636
 of David
 taken in defiance of law in Pentateuch, 936 taken without requiring half-shekel offering, 937 n119
 at distribution of promised land, 636
 before erection of Tabernacle, 678 of Ezra after return from exile, 637 of household of Jacob upon entering Egypt, 636
 of Levites, 681-684
 Moses instructed to take, 679
 nine in number, 637
 occasions on which Israelites were counted, 636-637
 one month after dedication of Tabernacle, 678-679 order of tribes in, 680
 purpose of
 to establish family purity, 783, 784
 in reign of David, 637-638 n314
 by Saul of army of S., 899
 during reign of S., 637 n314
 when setting out against Amalek, 637
 when setting out against Nahash, 637
 third, at time of dedication of Tabernacle, 680
 at time of Exodus, 636, 637 n314 after worship of golden calf, 636
- centaur
 killed by Zepho, 419-420 n425 (see also monster[s])
- Ceruihel (angel)
 angel of strength, giving David strength to slay Goliath, 918 n43
- Chagiras of Adiabene
 Abika identified with, 1075 n26
 hero during war with Romans, 1075 n26
- chains
 on throne of Solomon, 968
- chair(s)
 golden, on Solomon's throne for Sanhedrin, 968
 one-legged, 714
 three-legged, 714 (see also bench)
- Chaldea
 Persia identified with, 458 n22
- Chaldean language
 used by Semites, 158 n72
- Chaldeans
 custom of immersing babies in fire, 180 n40
 one of things God repented of creating, 141 n20
 regarding fire as god, 180 n40
See also Babylonians
- Chaldees
 identified with and named for Kasdim, 243
- chalkidri (serpents), 34
 on chariot of sun, 127 n60
 etymology of word, 40 n154
 in fourth heaven, 125
- chalkydri. See chalkidri
- Chamber of Gazit
 as Great Sanhedrin, 777 n783
- Chanethothos
 induced by Chenephres to kill Moses, 492 n80
- charger, silver
 and bowl of dedication offering significance of, for Nahshon and for tribes of Asher, Benjamin, Dan, Ephraim, Gad, Issachar, Manasseh, Naphtali, Reuben, Simeon, Zebulun, 665-671
 symbolizing Adam, who lived 930 years, 671
- chariot(s)
 of fire, angel ascending in, 425
 of God, drawn by cherubim, 93
 Joseph riding on, 367 of light, drawn by four shining eagles, at death of Adam, 96
 of Pharaoh, 550, 552 n17
 laden with treasure, 559
 of sun, 127 n60
 attended by phoenixes and chalkidri, 125

chastity

- of Boaz, 866 n60
- of dwellers of east, 284 n164
- of Joseph, 579, 866 n60
- of Palti, husband of Michal, 866 n60

Chedorlaomer (one of Nimrod's generals)

- forming alliance with Arioch, king of Ellasar, 194
- forming alliance with Tidal, king of several nations, 194
- setting self up as king of Elam, 194

Chemosh

- Moabite god, a blade stone in form of woman, 758

as Moabite Kabah, 759 n715

Chenephes (king of Memphis)

- husband of Merois, daughter of Pharaoh, 479 n48

Chenephres (husband of Moses' foster-mother)

- envious of Moses, 492 n80
- first person afflicted with elephantiasis, 499 n101
- inducing Chanethothes to kill Moses, 492 n80
- sending Moses to command force against Ethiopians, 492 n80

See also Chenephes

Cherethites

- Benaiah as chief of, 980 n95

cherub(im), 17 n70, 48

- above, corresponding to sanctuary of Israel, 648
- as angels, 80 n94
- of destruction, 80 n94
- on ark of covenant
- cherubim shading ark, 643
- description of, 643-644
- having faces of boys and wings, 643

- two in number, corresponding to tablets, 643

and chariot of God, 93, 246

created first, 15 n61

as "ever-turning sword of flames," 77

forms of

- as mare, 561 n44
- as steers, 80 n94

giving burning coals to Gabriel, 1075 n26

guarding entrance to Paradise, 68, 77 measuring 22 spans, corresponding to 22 letters of Hebrew alphabet, 643

cherub(im) (cont.)

- number of, in Temple same as number in Tabernacle, 644
- one of five sacred objects concealed by God at destruction of Temple, 645

plucked from Holy of Holies and dragged through streets by Ammonites and Moabites, 1086 praising God, 614 (see also praise) in seventh heaven, 125

and translation of Enoch, 129

wings of, 12 in number, 127 n60

See also angel(s), general; heavenly beings; seraphim

child(ren)

birth of, 56

male, 57 n20

of Gehazi

inheriting leprosy, 1029

having share in world to come, 1022 n118 (see also world to come: those having share in) sins of fathers to be visited upon, 618 n251, 1021, 1022 n118

slaughter of innocent, 169, 170 n8 suffering of arousing God's compassion, 1166 n143

taking after mother's brothers, 883 n130

three things contributed by God to formation of child (spirit, breath, soul), 608 n224

used as building material in Egypt, 558 n40, 880

wickedness of

causing blindness of parents, 267 n74

causing parents to age prematurely, 267 n74

childbearing

anguish of, as sentence on Eve, 94

childless

considered as dead, 517 n142 (see also poor; blind; lepers)

childlessness

cause of, 202 n117

as punishment, 201

See also barrenness; childless child sacrifice. See sacrifice: child

Chileab (son of David)

entering Paradise alive, 19, 941 (see also Paradise: entering alive)

Chileab (cont.)

excelling David and Mephibosheth in learning, 941

name, meaning of ("like the father"), 941

one of four to lead sinless life, 473 son of Abigail, 941

Chilion and Mahlon (sons of Elimelech), 862

death of, punishment for Elimelech's sin, 864 n40

marrying daughters of Eglon, king of Moab, 862

punished for intermarriage, 862

Chinese Wall

traces discernible in story of last years of Abraham, 244 n312

Christ. See Jesus (son of Mary)

Christian apologists

and proof for invisibility of God, 351 n102

Christian Church

accepting Messianic interpretation of blessing of Judah, 410 n388

Christian ideas

anti-Christ to be from tribe of Dan, 410 n392, 580 n141, 796 n854 atonement power of blood, 599 n195 brass serpent on pole symbolic of crucified Jesus, 748 n658

celibacy

of Noah, 146 n31

preferable to marriage, 103 n4

cooperation of Logos in creation, 52 n12

Egyptians identifying Joseph with Serapis, 622 n266

golden calf identified with Apis of the Egyptians, 622 n271 identification of Ben Sira with high priest Joshua son of Jehozadak, 1084 n42

justification by faith, 199 n109

man created by hand of God, 49 n3 marriage as consequence of original sin, 103 n4

Melchizedek

as descendant of Shem, 197 n102

identified with Shem, 197 n102

as type of Jesus, the everlasting priest, 197 n104

Christian ideas (cont.)

- Messianic prophecy of Numbers 24:17, 777 n782
- metaphor of Zion, mother of Israel, 1070 n13
- proverb about trouble being sufficient for the day, 510, 511 n127
- righteous have to pass through Gehenna before entering Paradise, 508 n118
- seven pillars of earth personified as seven saints, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
- that "son of God" in Daniel refers to Jesus, 1100 n90
- that story of Joshua refers to Jesus, 1107 n108
- tradition of "two witnesses" (Moses and Jeremiah), 1071 n13
- wolf as Saul, i.e., Paul, 411 n401
- Christian influence
  - on description of Paradise and hell, 509 n118
  - on doctrine of intercession, 508 n118
- Christian legends
  - about Aaron's rod, 731 n600
  - about cross of Jesus and legend of cross of Mordecai, 1177-1178 n184
  - about Elijah
    - and anti-Christ, 1022 n113
    - being sold as slave, 1005 n55
    - translation of, 999 n32
  - about Enoch and Elijah, 131 n61
  - about fall of Satan, 63 n34
  - about flesh and hair torn from martyr changed into trees, 1087 n47
  - flying as common feat of saints in, 536 n210, 796 n853
  - fragrance emanating from dead bodies of pious in, 548 n2
  - about Golgotha, 98 n137
  - about high priest's mitre determining guilt, 798 n861
  - infants speaking in, 359 n134
  - invisibility in, 844 n13
  - about Jebusites settling in Cyprus after being driven out of Palestine by David, 922 n53
  - about Jeremiah
    - meeting with Plato in Egypt, 1083 n42
    - never tasting death, 1083 n42, 1093 n66

Christian legends (cont.)

- about martyrdom of Ezekiel, 1102 n94
- nature standing still in, 605 n213
- about numerical value of name of Jesus, 197 n93
- about reviving dead animals, 200 n113
- saints being spared by ferocious beasts in, 1116 n13
- about shortening of road, 241 n287
- about Simon Magus, compared with legend of Balaam, 796 n853
- sinners being swallowed up by earth in, 726 n584
- sword of executioner unable to cut neck in, 488 n76
- water ordeal in, 626 n279
- about Zechariah, father of John the Baptist, substituted for prophet Zechariah, 1077 n30
- Christian literature
  - as source of Jewish legendary material, ix
- Christian polemics
  - concerning Israel after destruction of Temple, 200 n111
  - on inferiority of ceremonial laws, 70 n55
- Christians
  - appellations of Rome transferred to, 254 n19
  - as descendants of Esau, 259 n51
  - identified with Romans, 259 n51
- Christian Scripture
  - generation of wilderness receiving Torah in John 10:34-35, 715 n539
- Christian writings
  - Revelations of Esdras resembling story of angels being sent to fetch Moses' soul, 830 n946
- chrysolite
  - aiding digestion and making owner sturdy and fat, 652
  - stone of tribe of Asher in breastplate of Aaron, 652 (see also precious stones)
- church, early
  - and pseudepigrapha, ix-x
  - refusing oral law, 635 n308
- Church Fathers
  - attacks of, on circumcision, 248 n318

Church Fathers (cont.)

- believing that Jews interpret Ps. 110 as referring to Hezekiah, 1052 n70
- denying Solomon as ruler of all creation, 961 n40
- explaining desecration of Sabbath by Joshua, 846 n22
- favorable view of Abraham of, 199 n110
- on hospitality, 206 n134
- Israel identified with Christ by, 301 n253
- on Job, 456 n14
- on Job living in Karnaïm, 458 n21
- Michael identified with Holy Ghost by, 301 n248
- Michael identified with Jesus by, 301 n248
- on phoenix, 39 n150
- on salvation of Solomon, 967 n59
- as source of Jewish legendary material, x
- and tradition that Pharisees and Scribes were from tribes of Simeon and Levi, 410 n387
- and view of man as both good and evil, 50 n6
- and view that Adam sinned on first day of his creation, 81 n97
- cinnamon
  - as excrement of worm, 34
  - in Palestine, 1085 n45
  - wood growing in Jerusalem having pleasant flavor of, 1085 n45
- circumcision
  - abandoned by Egyptians after death of Joseph, 479 n51
  - of Abraham, 232 n249, 239 n275
  - Amalek sneering at, 580 n141
  - being born with (see covenant[s]: sign of)
  - boys not able to be circumcised during years of disfavor in wilderness, 716
  - called "covenant" in rabbinic literature, 248 n318
  - ceremony of, 249 n318
  - chair of Elijah at, 1020 n103
  - performed in synagogue, 1020 n102
  - child held on knees during, 422 n429
  - of children who die before eighth day, 1022 n118
  - Christian polemics concerning, 197 n102

circumcision (cont.)

commandment of, 534
 criticized by Haman, 1153
 as dust of Jacob, 774 n770
 and Egyptians, 369, 370 n196
 on eighth day, 248 n318
 Elijah and, 1020 n103
   E. zealous for observance of, 999 n25
 epispasm and, 254 n24
 of Gentile converts, 1178 n191
 of Gershom by Zipporah on way to Egypt, 515 given up by many in Egyptian bondage, 473 given up by people during time of Ahab, 995 of great-grandsons of Joseph, 422
 as improvement of natural state of body, 249 n318 inhabitants of Shechem and, 308-309
 Israelites submitting to, at first Passover, 535-536
 Joshua circumcising those born in desert at Gilgal, 843-844 law of, bestowed on Israel through Moses, 807 Noah not needing, 134
 practiced only by Hebrews, 479 n51
 reasons for, 249 n318
 Sabbath superseded by, 248 n318
 sacramental character of, 248 n318 Seth not needing, 115
 as sign of covenant (see covenant[s]: sign of) taught to Ethiopians by Moses, 492 n80 of those born in wilderness by Joshua, 845 n16 undoing by epipost, Jehoiakim and, 1060

circus

prejudice against attending, 39 n143

cithern, 454

played by Jemimah, 461
See also instruments, musical

cities

founded by Og having walls 60 miles high, 754
 of plain destroyed on 16 Nisan, 213 to be restored in Messianic time, 213

cities (cont.)

of refuge

Bezer as first of, 332
 Bozrah as, 304
 first in territory of Reuben, 407 founded by Moses in territory of 2½ tribes, 799
 as haven for those who killed unwittingly, 307 n275 Joshua introducing regulations for, 800 n869
 only for Jews, 307 n275
 sinful, 207-210
   destroyed by fire, 211-215, 214 n179
   doom of, caused by eight grievous sins, 1048 n60
   eight sins of inhabitants of (neglect of justice, idolatry, incest, bloodshed, blasphemy, arrogance, slander, obscenity), 562 n54 misery of inhabitants of, 209-210 n155
   punishment of, 215 n179
   restoration of, 215 n184
   riches of, 209-210 n155
   treatment of strangers in, 207-208
 Zoar as smallest of, 211

City of Refuge

Asenath's name changed to, 425

clean animals. See animal(s): clean

cloud(s)

celestial providing light in wilderness, 542

 Enoch carried on, 124
 giving signal for breaking camp in wilderness, 685-686

of glory

covering Aaron at time of death, 743 n637
 created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day) departing when Israel worshiped golden calf, 622 n270 disappearing from sinners, 779
 as garment at entrance of Paradise, 18 keeping garments of Israelites perfect for 40 years in wilderness, 544 n242 light provided by, 544 n243
 not departing when Israel worshiped golden calf, 622 n270 cloud(s) (cont.)of glory (cont.)

number of, 542, 543 n241
 one of three gifts received by Israel, given on account of merits of Aaron, 573, 574 n113 (see also Aaron: merits of; gifts; merits) protecting Moses and Aaron from rebellion, 712 purple in color, 688
 in rabbinic literature, 543 n241
 reappearing on account of merits of Moses, 573 (see also Moses: merits of; merits)
 Samael searching for Moses in, 836
 separating dwelling places in camp, 687
 seven in number, enveloping Israelites in Exodus, 542 vanishing with death of Aaron, 573, 745-746 walking in, one of five tokens granted to Israel after Exodus, 565 glory of God in, 227
 hiding Sons of Moses (Levites) from enemies, 1088 leveling mountains in front of Israel, 736 pillar of, 48
   over holy ark, 686
 protecting Israelites in camp, 579
 protecting Joshua from anger of people, 827 protecting only pure Israelites, 579 refusing to protect sinners and impure, 580 n141 upon sanctuary, meaning that demons hold sway, 673
 over Sarah's tent
   during her lifetime, 240
   reappearing when Rebekah came, 240 separating Abraham from enemies, 171, 178 n34

coat

of Aaron, atoning for murder, 650 one of eight priestly garments of Aaron, 650

cock

boldest among birds, 594 n181 comb of, becoming white during moment of God's anger, 770 and hen, story about, 43-44

cock (cont.)

- as herald of light, 46 n194
- in mystic literature, 46 n194
- only creature to hear cry of man
  - about death, 56
- seven hymns of praise of, 44 (see also praise)
- on Solomon's throne, 968
- teaching regard for decorous conduct, 43-44
- uniting with peafowl, 144
- worshiped by people of Cuthah, 1044

See also bird(s)

coffer

- with offering of Philistines, hidden by Josiah, 1062 n118

coffins

- sinking of
  - by Babylonians, 430 n438
  - of Joseph, 428-430

See also burial

coins

- bearing picture of Abraham and Sarah, 180
- given to Esau by Jacob in exchange for birthright, 258, 259 n46

struck by

- Abraham, 181 n46
- David, 181 n46, 927
- Joshua, 181 n46, 853 n54
- Mordecai, 181 n46
- Solomon, depicting S.'s name, David's name, and Jerusalem, 930 n85
- struck with figure of Mordecai on reverse and Esther on obverse, 1176

cold

- as cause of death, 1100 n92

color(s)

amethyst

- on standard of tribe Ephraim, 686

azure

- color of tribe of Judah's flag in wilderness, 688

beryl

- on standard of tribe of Dan, 686

black

- color of celestial fire, 501
- color of dust signifying bowels, 53
- color of fire of huge angels in seventh heaven, 504
- color of fire of model of candlestick for Tabernacle, 678

color(s) (cont.)black (cont.)

- color of fire with which Torah written, 1
- color of tribe of Ephraim's flag in wilderness, 688
- color of tribe of Issachar's flag in wilderness, 688
- color of tribe of Manasseh's flag in wilderness, 688
- face of Cain becoming, 104, 105 n13

blue

- color of cloth covering ark of covenant, 643
- corresponding to autumn, 971
- worn by king, scholars, priests, and Levites at hippodrome, 971

of chrysolite

- on standard of tribe of Dan, 686

corresponding to four seasons, 971

crimson

- color of garments of angels, 617

of diamond

- on standard of tribe of Ephraim, 686

of dust used for creation of man, 53

of emerald, on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686

God showing Moses, 617

green

- color of dust signifying pale skin, 53
- color of fire of model of candlestick for Tabernacle, 678
- color of fire of staves of heavenly Temple, 503
- color of shame on Judah's face when confessing crime with Tamar, 651
- color of tribe of Simeon's flag in wilderness, 688
- corresponding to spring, 971
- on standard of tribe of Judah, 685
- worn by heathen from afar at hippodrome, 971

multicolored

- color of tribe of Benjamin's flag in wilderness, 688

of panther-stone

- on standard of tribe of Dan, 686

purple

- cloud of glory, 688
- dye obtained from murex snail, 377

color(s) (cont.)purple (cont.)

- Israelites clothed in, at Exodus, 688
- royal, color of garments of angels, 617

red

- color of dust signifying blood, 53
- color of Esau when born, 253
- color of evening light of clouds of glory in wilderness, 544 n243
- color of fire of huge angels in seventh heaven, 504
- color of fire of model of candlestick for Tabernacle, 678
- color of fire of pillars of heavenly Temple, 503
- color of fire of staves of heavenly Temple, 503
- color of tribe of Naphtali's flag in wilderness, 688
- color of tribe of Reuben's flag in wilderness, 688
- corresponding to summer, 971
- dull
  - color of tribe of Naphtali's flag in wilderness, 688

- evening light of clouds of glory in wilderness, 544 n243
- eyes of descendants of Ham, through Canaan, 154

fiery

- color of tribe of Asher's flag in wilderness, 688
- on standard of tribe of Judah, 685
- on standard of tribe of Judah, 685
- worn by sightseers from surrounding area at hippodrome, 971

of sabhalom

- on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686

sapphire

- color of tribe of Dan's flag in wilderness, 688
- on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686

turquoise

- on standard of tribe of Ephraim, 686

violet

- color of garments of angels, 617
- white
  - color of dust signifying bones and veins, 53

- color(s) (cont.)
 white (cont.)
 color of fire of angels in third heaven, 503
 color of fire of model of candlestick for Tabernacle, 678 color of fire of thresholds of heavenly Temple, 503 color of fire on which Torah written, 1 color of garments Jacob made people put on, 305 n260
 color of garments of angels, 617
 color of tribe of Zebulun's flag in wilderness, 688 corresponding to winter, 971
 morning light of clouds of glory in wilderness, 544 n243 worn by Jerusalemites not wearing blue at hippodrome, 971
- Commandment. See Ten Commandments
- commandments
 Noachian (see Noachian commandments)
 six that every human is expected to heed, 69
 two in Egypt, sacrificing paschal lamb and circumcision, 534-536
- commerce
 carried on by lying and cheating, 1017 n97
- communication, divine received by Moses in Hebrew language, 612 n242 received by prophets in Aramaic language, 612 n242
- competition
 rabbinic law regarding, 1125 n45
- conception
 window of, in first heaven, 503
- conjugal relations abstaining from by elders of Israel, 700
 by Moses, 611, 700
 one of three things M. did on own authority, 626 n279
 during revelation on Sinai, 611 forbidden with women before they have brought purification offerings, 893 n26 restraint of, 1125 n48
- conquest. See Israel (land): conquest of
- consciousness
 Isaiah and Elijah retaining, during prophecy, 612 n242
- constellations
 ram, worshiped by Egyptians, 395
See also heavenly bodies; Zodiac: signs of; and under names of individual constellations
- continence, sexual. See abstinence, sexual
- copper
 fifth artificial heaven of Hiram made from, 1104 one of Nimrod's thrones made of, 162 throne of, in Paradise, for sinner who has pious son, 507
- coquetry, feminine weakness of, 940
- coriander, manna like, 433
- corn
 Ruth gleaned ears of, 863, 866 n54
- corona (of penis)
 uncovering of, first introduced by Joshua, 203 n126
- corpse(s)
 exposed on gallows, 780 n788
 of blasphemers and idolaters, 780-781 n790 found in field to be buried in same spot, 852 mistreatment of, by Jeroboam, 984-985 not decaying (Aaron, Abraham, Benjamin, Isaac, Jacob, Miriam, Moses), 411-412 not touched by worms (Aaron, Abraham, Benjamin, David, Isaac, Jacob, Miriam, Moses), 939 n128
- correction, duty of, 280 n150
- corruptness
 one of seven evils, 450
- cosmetics
 permitted to be sold to women in town, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122
- cosmocratia
 Solomon's throne as symbol of, 1132 n13
- cosmocrator
 Adarshan as, 163 n82
 Ahab as, 163 n82, 988 n31
 Ahasuerus as, 163 n82, 1129, 1138 n47
 Alexander as, 163 n82
 Belshazzar as, 1050-1051, 1112 n2
 Cyrus as, 162 n82, 970 n72, 1115 n7
- cosmocrator (cont.)
 Darius as, 162 n82
 David as, 162 n82
 Evil-merodach as, 1050-1051, 1112 n2
 Messiah as, 161
 Nebuchadnezzar as, 162 n82, 970 n72, 1050-1051, 1103, 1112 n2
 Nimrod as, 162 n82
 Pharaoh as, 163 n82, 552, 1155 n113
 Rome as, 162 n82
 Sennacherib as, 1047 n51
 Solomon as, 162 n82
 Vespasian as, 163 n82
- cosmogony, 9 n22
 Greek theories of, 8 n17
See also cosmology; firmament; heavenly bodies; and under individual heavenly bodies
- cosmology, 6-7, 1103
 of sun and moon, 24-25
See also cosmogony; firmament; heavenly bodies; and under individual heavenly bodies
- cosmos
 threefold division of, 53 n13
See also cosmogony; cosmology; firmament; heavenly bodies; and under individual heavenly bodies
- countenance
 light of, one of ten parts of body received from God, 606 (see also body, human)
- Counting of Omer. See omer
- court
 heavenly Ahab's trial in, 987-988, 989 n41
 of justice
 God's, 2 n3
 and punishment of sinful cities, 214 n179 sessions of, on Mondays and Thursdays, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122
- Court of the Dead
 Samael searching for Moses in, 836
- covenant(s)
 of Abraham, 187
 circumcision as, 248 n318 (see also Abraham: and circumcision; Abraham: covenant of; circumcision; covenant[s]: sign of) concerning land of Canaan, 210 covenant(s) (cont.)of Abraham (cont.)

- concerning progeny, 251
- concerning temptations, 232
  - n247
- despised by descendants of Esau, 254 n24
- fulfilled by Israel, 562
- preserved by Israel, 773
- referred to as "covenant of Levi," 674 n409
- sign of, 135 n6 (see also covenant[s]: sign of)
  - Shem-Melchizedek born with, 197 n102
- that descendants would go forth from Egypt with great substance, 398 n335
- to give Holy Land to his seed, scorned by Esau, 258
- between Abraham and
  - Abimelech, 222-224, 921 n51
  - inhabitants of Jebus, 235
  - Jebusites, 293
- circumcision as, 248 n318 (see also circumcision; covenant[s]: sign of)
- disregarded by David, 920-921
- with fathers, 434 n3
- between God and Israel
  - made second time in desert of Moab, 598
  - made third time by Joshua, 598
- and Rechabites
  - that their descendants would be members of Sanhedrin and teachers of Israel, 590
  - unconditional, 590
- and sons of Jacob, 433
- between Isaac
  - and Abimelech, 921
  - and Philistines, 293
- between Jacob
  - and Arameans, 293
  - and Laban, 293, 921
- with mothers, 434 n3
- of pieces, 198-201, 238, 331
  - Moses referring to, 510
- prophesied to Serug, 167
- sign of, 202, 554 (see also circumcision)
  - men born with (Adam, Balaam, David, Enoch, Gad, Isaiah, Jacob, Jeremiah, Joseph, Melchizedek, Moses, Noah, Obed, Samuel, Seth, covenant(s) (cont.)sign of (cont.)

- men born with (cont.)
  - Shem-Melchizedek, Terah, Zerubbabel), 197 n102,
  - 248 n318, 253, 255 n26,
  - 829, 867 n68, 914 n13,
  - 1067 (see also under individual names)
- oath by, 239 n284
- son of, Jew as, 248 n318
- with tribes, 434 n3
- unconditional
  - between God and Rechabites, 590
- covetousness
  - forbidden by Tenth Commandment, 607
  - leading to transgressing all of Ten Commandments, 607-608
  - as source of all evil, 609 n235
- Cozbi
  - name, meaning of, 782 n799
  - slain by Phinehas, 794
  - wife of Zimri, 781 n791
- Crab (sign of Zodiac). See Cancer
- created things
  - aspiring to be infinite, 11 n43
  - usefulness of, 45 n191
- creatio ex nihilo*, 2 n5, 48 n1
- view of Rabbis on, 7 n15
- creation, 1-46
  - first day, 5-11, 7 n15
    - angels reading Torah about, in first heaven, 505 n117
    - heaven and earth created, corresponding to tablets of ark, 639
    - Moses surpassing by seizing spiritual light (Torah), 838
    - and Tabernacle of Israel, 48
    - things created on, 5-6, 77, 82 n98
  - second day, 12-17
    - angels reading Torah about, in second heaven, 505 n117
    - creation of Miriam's well, 576
    - firmament created, corresponding to curtain in Tabernacle, 639
    - Moses surpassing by scaling firmament, 838
    - not called good, 14 n54, 735
    - and Tabernacle of Israel, 48
    - things created on, 12, 77, 82 n98
    - water created, 735

creation (cont.)

third day, 18-23

- angels reading Torah about, in third heaven, 505 n117
- and eating herbs on Passover, 48
- great sea created, corresponding to laver in sanctuary, 639
- Moses surpassing because sea retreating from him, 838
- things created on, 77, 82 n98
- fourth day, 23-27
  - angels reading Torah about, in fourth heaven, 505 n117
  - and golden candlestick, 48
  - Moses surpassing by asking God to provide light to Israel, 838
  - sun and moon created, corresponding to candlestick in Tabernacle, 639
  - things created on, 77, 82 n98
- fifth day, 28-33
  - angels reading Torah about, in fifth heaven, 505 n117
  - birds created, corresponding to cherubim, 639
  - and cherubim, 48
  - Moses surpassing by slaughtering animals for Israel's needs, 838
  - things created on, 77, 82 n98
- sixth day, 33-43
  - angels reading Torah about, in sixth heaven, 505 n117
  - Balaam's ass created, 766
  - and creation of Miriam's well, 220
  - and high priest, 48
  - hours of, 77 in number, 81 n96, 81 n97
  - man created, corresponding to high priest in Tabernacle, 639
  - as 1 Tishri, 77
  - things created in twilight
    - between sixth day and Sabbath, 78
    - cave in which Moses and Elijah dwelt, 78
    - clouds of glory, 82 n99
    - manna, 78, 570 n94
    - mouth of earth, 726 n581
    - opening of well at Midian, 494
    - pen for tablets of Sinai, 78
    - rainbow, 78
    - rod of Aaron, 494
    - she-ass of Balaam, 78 creation (cont.)sixth day (cont.)

things created on, 77, 82 n98

seventh day, 606

angels reading Torah about, in seventh heaven, 505 n117
and resurrection, 99

of Adam, 3 n8, 53-55

alphabet and, 3-5

date of, according to medieval authors, 81 n97

division of waters in, 12-13

each two days of, as witnesses
on singular sanctity of Sabbath,
82 n98

on uniqueness of Israel, 82
n98

on unity of God, 82 n98

elements of, 29 n114

ethical conception of, 50 n8

first things created, 1-3

generations existing prior to,
974 in number, 2 n5

God creating world with left hand,
1166 n143

through God's justice and kindness, 54 n15

God taking counsel with Torah concerning, 1, 2 n3

of man

angels and, 51-53

out of eternal chaos, 2 n5 out of nothing (see creatio ex nihilo)

and praise of Lord, 43-46

progressive order of, 71, 73 n62

for sake of man, 128 n60

seven days of names of Esther's attendants related to, 1143

and seven things created in the beginning, 1

in six days, corresponding to parts
of Tabernacle, 639

as struggle between light and darkness, 11 n41

ten acts of and ten sayings of, 47,
48 n1

things created in twilights of, 82 n99 (see also under creation:
sixth day)

12 tribes as part of plan of, 343
n70

value of, 43

and word of God, 3, 48 n1, 85
n102

of world

brought about through merits of 12 tribes, 434 n2 (see also merits; tribes: twelve) creation (cont.)of world (cont.)

date of, 81 n97

through scepter engraved with Ineffable Name, 807

creations

22 in number, 82 n98

creatures

of God

four men described in Bible as (Jeremiah, Isaiah, Jacob, Adam), 1071 n13

hymns of praise of, 44, 45 n194
(see also praise)

in Christian legends, 46 n194

each having own hymn of
praise, 44

creeping things

created on sixth day, 82 n98

criminals

regulations for burial of, 848 n31 sanctuary at Jerusalem as asylum for, 947 n8

crimson. See under color(s)

crocodiles

descended from frogs, 529 n179 disappearing from Nile through prayers of Jeremiah, 1083
n42

crop (gullet)

one of 12 guides of men, grinding
all food, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men)

cross

fashioned for Mordecai, used for Haman, 1175

of Haman, size of, 1175-1176,
1178 n185

of Jesus, and legend of cross of Mordecai, 1177-1178
n184

of Mordecai, and Christian legend of cross of Jesus, 1177-1178 n184

crow

and raven, proverb about, 283
See also bird(s)

crown(s)

first, acquired by Moses, 672 n399 second, acquired by Aaron, 672
n399

third, acquired by David, 672
n399

fourth, may be acquired by everyone, 672 n399

of David

fitting only rightful successors of David, 941, 1037

crown(s) (cont.)of David (cont.)

weight of, 1039 n9

day of ten (see day of ten crowns)
at entrance of Paradise, 18

every Israelite receiving, on day of revelation at Sinai, 600

of fire, for each Israelite, 601

four in number, 672 n399

given to tribe of Levi, 601 of God, and letters of alphabet, 3

of good name, as highest crown, 670

for head of Lord, made by Sandalfon, 613-614

of kingdom, one of three crowns
Israel received from God, 670

lost by Israelites in Jeremiah's time,
602 n203

as ornamentation of God on letters
of Torah, 616

of priesthood, one of three crowns
Israel received from God, 670 significance of, as ornamentation, 616

three in number that Israel received from God (kingdom, priesthood, Torah), 670

of Torah, one of three crowns Israel received from God, 670

of sun, 26 n101

cruelty

of Sodomites, 209

cruse

representing Saul's temporary rule, 915 n22

crying

heard in land of Philistines, 216
See also tears; weeping

crystal

giving owner courage in battle, 652 stone of tribe of Gad in breastplate
of Aaron, 652

cup(s)

drinking, made from skulls of slain enemies, 1100 n90
silver, reserved for king and viceroy
in Egypt, 383 n256

curse(s)

of Balaam, 214

Balaam's attempts at, 766-774

of Cain, 108 n22

of Canaan, 188

of earth after Adam's fall, 135 n6 of Esau for selling birthright, 258

curse(s) (cont.)

- of ground on account of Cain, 107
- of Ham by Noah, 154
- Noah first to utter against associates, 153
- of one who stole teraphim, 293
- against those who reckon end of time, 1117 n19
- 12 in number, recited by Levites facing Mount Ebal, 843
- unintentional, 294 n224

curtain

- Gabriel exclaiming from behind, 1116 n7

Cush (another name for Saul), 941 n134

- Cush (son of Ham; father of Nimrod), 161
- as builder of Tower of Babel, 164 n88

Cushan

- another name for Laban, 861
- Israel oppressed by, for eight years, 861, 862 n29

Cuthah, people of worshiping cock, 1044

cymbals, 367, 394

- in fourth heaven, 125
- played by Amaltheas, 461
- See also* instruments, musical

Cyrus (king of Persia), 1111
as agent of vengeance on Babylon, 1111

- allowing Jews to rebuild Temple, but only from wood, 1113, 1119

Artaxerxes as Greek name of, 1131 n4

- censured severely by Babylonian authorities, 1115 n7
- as cosmocrator, 162 n82, 970 n72, 1115 n7 (see also cosmocrator)

and Darius

- conquering Babylonia, 1111
- C. as son-in-law of D., 1111, 1119
- C. as son of D., 1131 n4
- war between, 1113

degeneration of, 1115 n7

as descendant of Japheth, 154

father of Ahasuerus, 1131 n4

favored by Palestinian authorities, 1115 n7

found worthy to sit on Solomon's throne, 1115 n7, 1131 n13

proclamation of, 1115 n7

Cyrus (cont.)

- receiving Chaldea, Persia, and Assyria, 1111
- reigning for three or four years, 1120 n28
- to be builder of second Temple, 154
- youth of, 1120 n29

D

Dabria

- one of five scribes going with Ezra, 1122

Dagon

- fallen down before ark, 894 n34
- god of Philistines, 892
- priests of, subjected to crucifixion, 894 n34

dalet (letter)

- creation of world through, 4
- standing for davar ("Divine Word"), 4
- din* ("justice"), 4
- See also* alphabet; letters of alphabet

Damascus

- founding of, 106 n19
- as home of Gehazi and Zadokite sect, 1030 n17
- Israelite exiles taken to, by Assyrians, 1044
- as place of Abel's slaying, 140 n14
- Damesek (son of Eliezer; servant of Abraham), 297, 298 n244
- set over one of companies of Jacob, 297

Dan (elder from tribe of Judah), 696

Dan (son of Jacob)

- and Asher and Naphtali
- colors of standard of tribes of, 686
- attacking Edom to east, 321
- in battle of Sartan, 315
- blessing of, by Jacob, 408
- referring to Samson, 879 n116
- bloodthirsty, 334 n34
- confession of, 443-444
- death of, 444
- enmity of, toward Joseph, 427 n432
- fighting against Ninevites, 313
- as firstborn of mother, 403
- and Gad and Naphtali and Asher
- planning to kidnap Asenath, 426

- having numerous children, 435 n6
- having only one son, 435 n6

Dan (cont.)

- marriage of
- to Elflalet, daughter of Moabite Hamudan, 348
- name, meaning of, 286, 433
- one of weak among sons of Jacob, 396 n324
- son of
- called "heath-rush" because of having many children, 435 n6
- son of Bilhah, named by Rachel, 286
- as standard-bearer, corresponding to Uriel, 685
- to make Mizraim like a desert, 386
- tribe of
- anti-Christ to be from, according to Christian legend, 580 n141
- blessed by Moses, 823
- blessed with strength and might, 823
- blessed with territory in Holy Land in two sections, 823
- confessing they taught children out of books of Amorites, 855
- elders from (Gedaliah, Jogli, Ahinoam, Ahiezer, Daniel, Seraiah), 696
- flag of, sapphire in color, with picture of serpent, 688
- four heroes of (Samson, Zaliah, Ira [David's friend], and Seraiah), 796 n854
- idolatry of, 579, 937 n119
- maternal ancestor of Messiah from, 410 n392
- migrating to Ethiopia, 983
- not covered by clouds of glory, 776 n776
- one of four standard-bearers, 685
- precious stone of
- ligure, 856
- topaz, 651
- prince of (Ahiezer), 679-680
- significance of dedication offering of, 669-670
- spy representing (Ammiel), 705
- standard of
- insignia of serpent on, 686, 689 n447
- inscription on, 686
- as warriors, 983
- dancing
- accompanying song at Red Sea, 564

dancing (cont.)

custom of kings of Media to have dancers appear at carousals, 1137 n35

at feast of Ahasuerus, 1133

danger

avoidance of, 276

Daniel (descendant of Judah), 285, 1095-1097

accompanied by prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, 1096 n76 appointing Zerubbabel as successor, 1115

born in Shushan, 1117 n17

burial of

grave of, 1117-1118

among kings of Babylon, 1118 n20

in Shushan, 1117

charged to bring fodder for cattle to Babylonia and swine from Alexandria, 1096

and Cyrus, 1113

C. urging D. to worship Bel, 1113

D. cast into lion's den by C., 1113

D. introducing Ezra and Zerubbabel to C., 1113

D. praying for C.'s success in war against king of Mosul, 1113

D. received kindly in Shushtar by C., 1113

D. receiving divine charge to urge C. to rebuild Temple, 1113

and Darius

Daniel as one of triumvirate administering realm of Darius, 1114

Daniel cast into lions' pit, 1114 (see also Daniel: and lions)

Daniel praying that Darius's sight be restored, 1114

Daniel received kindly by Darius, 1113

Darius accusing Daniel of taking sacred garments, 1113-1114

Darius putting Daniel in prison, 1113-1114

Darius sending for Daniel, 1116 n9

death of, in Holy Land, 1118 n20 described by God as His servant, 805 n880 (see also servant of God)

Daniel (cont.)

and dragon

D. causing dragon to perish, 1107 encounter of D. with Bel, shown to Jacob, 277

in story of Bel and Dragon, 1108 n112 (see also Bel)

error of

in calculation of end of time, 1117 n19

in computing 70 years of exile prophesied by Jeremiah, 1131 n5

as eunuch, 1097 n78

as eyewitness of three exiles (under Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, Zedekiah), 1096 n76

first to lay foundation of house of God, 1096 n76

giving thanks to God, 285

going to Tiberias and building canal, 1096

and Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah (see Daniel: and three companions) identified with Sheshbazzar, 1120 n23

interceding on behalf of Jehoiachin, 1109 n119

interpreting inscription on wall at Belshazzar's feast, 1111

that Darius would be successor of Nebuchadnezzar, 1112 n4

Jonah and Habakkuk as contemporaries of, 1071 n14

and lions, 1104 n104

D. cast into lions' pit, 1114

D. saved from lions, 1096 n76, 1096 n77

lion ordered not to harm D., 48 mausoleum of, 1118 n20

merits of, loving-kindness, charity, and prayer, 1096-1097 n77 miracles wrought for, due to merits of Abraham, 1097 n77 (see also Abraham: merits of; merits)

and Nebuchadnezzar

D. attempting to shorten N.'s punishment as beast, 1103, 1104 n104

D. having prominent position in royal court, 1095

D. interpreting N.'s dream, 1095-1096

Daniel (cont.)and Nebuchadnezzar (cont.)

D. refusing to obey N.'s command to worship idol, 1099 n83

not permitting self to be interrupted in prayer, 1176 n172

one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)

one of six pious men endowed with spiritual gifts descended from Ruth, 866 n61 (see also under pious: men)

one of three who lived to see new world, 462 n35

other names of Hathach, 1096 n76, 1161

Memuchan, 1096 n76 (see also Daniel-Memuchan)

Sheshbazzar, 1096 n76

under Persian kings, 1113-1117
piety of, 1107-1109

prayers of, 1114

as priest, 1115 n6, 1128 n56

as promised Messiah, 1097 n77

as prophet, 1096 n76, 1117 n18
refraining from eating forbidden

food, 1096 n77

refusing to worship idol, 1107 retiring in Shushan, 1115

royal descent of, 1115 n6

as son of Abal, 1115 n6

as son of Jeconiah (i.e., Jehoiachin), 1096 n76

in story of Bel and Dragon, 1108 n112 (see also Bel)

and three companions (Hananiah, Mishael, Azariah), 1095

as descendants of Hezekiah, to serve Babylonian rulers as eunuchs, 1051

as descendants of kings of Judah, 1096 n76

refusing to worship Nebuchadnezzar's idol, 1097

riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960

self-mutilation of, 1095

three companions thrown into furnace, 1096 n76

and Vashti, enmity between, 1136-1137, 1138 n45 wife of, speaking to him only in Persian, 1136-1137

Daniel (cont.)
 wisdom, piety, and good deeds of, 1095 writings by and about, 1117 n18
 Daniel (elder from tribe of Dan), 696
 Daniel (priest)
   identified with Daniel (descendant of Judah), 1128 n56 Daniel, Book of edited or declared canonical by Great Synagogue, 1128 n56
   men of Great Assembly as editors of, 1071 n15
   as part of Hagiographa, 1096 n76 Daniel and the Dragon legend as basis for, 568 n76
   See also Bel; Daniel: and dragon Daniel-Memucan
   having unpleasant experiences in conjugal life, 1136-1137 Danites. See Dan: tribe of Darda
   wisdom of, not as great as Solomon's, 949-950 Darius (to be identified variously as Darius I, Darius II, Darius III, or Darius the Mede)
   as agent of vengeance on Babylon, 1111
   angel sent from God to blind D., 1113-1114 appointing Cyrus as successor, 1119
   and Ahasuerus
     D. as grandfather of A., 1131 n4
     D. as son of A., 1129
     D. as son of A. and Esther, 1111, 1131 n5, 1144 n80
     D. giving Vashti to A. as wife, 1135
   born on day when Nebuchadnezzar entered Temple, 1120 n28
   as cosmocrator, 162 n82 (see also cosmocrator)
   and Cyrus
     D. as father-in-law of C., 1111
     D. as father of C., 1131 n4
     D. as successor to C., 1116 n10 dividing empire of Belshazzar, 1116 n10
   war between, 1113
   king of Media, 1111
   not daring to sit on throne of Solomon, 969

Darius (cont.)
   permitting rebuilding of Temple, 1129
   receiving Babylon and Media, 1111 reigning for one year, 1120 n28, 1121 n30
   to be credited with return of exiles, 1121 n30 darkness
   coming on Adam after fall, 110 n32
   created on first day, 82 n98
   density of, 532-533
   on earth in days of Enoch, 126-127
   over Egypt, 48
     causing death of many people in Egypt, 534 n198
     as ninth plague, 524-525, 532-533
     three days of, 784 n806
     to envelop Egypt when Joseph's bones removed, 437 evil deeds done in, 214 n170
   during flood, 147
   God judging Gentiles in, 773, 774 n769
   of hell, 532, 534 n198
   in Messianic time, 243
   one of ten things produced on first day of creation, 5
   and punishment of Azazel, 135
   punishment of evil deeds in, 214 n170
   at Red Sea, 532, 534 n198
   wicked in Israel dying during, 534 n198
 date
   of Abraham's circumcision, 203 n124
   of birth of Isaac, 218
   of birth of redeemer of Israel announced by astrologers, 471 n21
   Day of Atonement
     Zechariah son of Jehoiada killed, 1038
   Hanukkah
     sacrifices of Cain and Abel, 105 n11
   New Year
     Joseph leaving prison, 366 n169
     sacrifices of Cain and Abel, 105 n11
   Pentecost
     sacrifices of Cain and Abel, 105 n11

date (cont.)
   For specific dates, see under individual months: Adar, Av, Heshvan, Iyar, Kislev, Nisan, Shevat, Sivan, Tammuz, Tevet, Tishri Dathan
   and Abiram
     accosting Moses and Aaron about increased oppression, 521 betraying Moses to Pharaoh, 487
     as bitter enemies of Moses, 488 n75 breaking commandments concerning manna, 572 counted as one of five men wicked from first to last, 1044 n39 Israelites wanting D. and A. to be leaders, 712
     Moses recounting sins of, 724
     no longer threats to Moses when M. returned, 515 punishment of, with Korah, 725-726 remaining in Egypt while Pharaoh pursuing Israelites, 550, 552-553 n18
     ringleaders of rebellion of Korah, 488 n75 seeking to overthrow Moses, 718 sin of saving manna to next day betrayed by worms, 572, 574 n110 summoned by Moses, 722-723
     transgressing commandment concerning manna, 488 n75 complaining to Moses about Egyptian taskmaster, 486
   name, meaning of, 718
   and Shelomith, story of Moses and, 486 daughters of man
   and fallen angels, 82 n98 daughters of Zion haughty, 65
 David and Abishai praying for deliverance from Philistines, 934
     slaying Ishbi, 934
   and Abner
     D. mourning for A., 947 n6
     D. saved from A. by wasp, 919

David (cont.)

Abraham contrasted with, 189 n61
and Absalom

D. executing Ethiopian who informed him of A.'s death, 933 n107

D. interceding for A., 932

D. rewarding Ahimaaz, who attempted to keep A.'s death secret, 933 n107

D.'s despair over rebellion of A., 932

D.'s prayer bringing A. into Paradise, 933 n107

and Adam

A. giving D. 70 years of life, 911 adding benediction to Grace after Meals, 1128 n58 (see also prayers, Jewish) adversaries, ten in number (Saul, Doeg, Ahitophel, Sheba, Shimei, Shobach, Goliath, Goliath's three brothers), 922 n59

age at death

70 years, 943 n146

71 years, 912 n12

and Ahitophel

A. as D.'s best friend, 923 n61

A. as master and teacher of D., 923 n61

D. consulting A. about transporting ark to Jerusalem, 923

D. fearing no one except A., 923 n61

D. learning two things from A., 923 n62

related by blood, 922

story of shard and abyss, 923

strained relations between, 923

and angel

angel intervening with Saul, 919

D. tricked by angel of death, 938

anointed king, 912-915

by Samuel at age 28 years, 913, 914 n13

appearance of

beauty of, 917 n40

having reddish hair, 914 n13

having ruddy complexion, 914 n13 appointing pious men to administration, 923, 924 n68

and ark

D. erring in putting ark on wagon, 924 n68

David (cont.)

and ark (cont.)

D. forgetting instruction that ark must be carried on shoulders, 786

D. punished for attempting to transport ark on wagon, 665 atonement of, 933-934

and Bathsheba (see also Bathsheba: and David)

D. living like ascetic in penance for sin with B., 939 n128 birth and descent of, 911-912

born circumcised, 914 n13 (see also covenant[s]: sign of) censured for sins, 930 n92

census in reign of, 637

D. omitting Levites from census, 936

D. taking census in defiance of law in Pentateuch, 936

chief virtues of justice, 929 n78

loving-kindness, 929 n78

coins struck by depicting shepherds crook and pouch and Tower of David, 927

compared with Haman, 760

as composer of psalms, 927

fleeing from Absalom, 933 n100 to make evil spirit depart, 903 n67

composing "songs of thanks," 285, 288 n175

as cosmocrator, 162 n82, 961 n40 (see also cosmocrator)

crown(s) of always fitting legitimate king of house of David, 941

D. acquiring third crown, 672 n399

weight of, 1039 n9

curse of, on Joab transferred to Solomon's offspring, 946

and daily prayers

D. instituting practice of saying 100 benedictions, 937 n123

death of, 938

at age 70 years, on Sabbath, 938 corpse not touched by worms, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s]) legend concerning death of D. similar to legend of death of Moses, 833 n952

David (cont.)

death of (cont.)

on Pentecost, 938

on Sabbath, according to Kabbalah, 466 n3

as descendant

D. as great-grandson of Boaz, 911

D. as supposed son of slave, 912

of Judah, 285, 288 n175, 407, 916

of Miriam, 911

of Miriam and Caleb, 469, 470 n19 son of Natzbat and Jesse, 911

of Tamar, 344

devotion of, to Holy Land, 920 n50 disregarding covenants of patriarchs, 920-921

distinction for reserved for judgment day, 939

dreams of

D. always troubled by bad dreams, 930 n89

dynasty of eight rulers of, dying violent death (Joram, Ahaziah, Athaliah, Jehoash, Amaziah, Amon, Josiah, Jehoiakim), 933 n107 sovereignty of, one of six gifts as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572 (see also gifts)

eight sons of dying premature death, 933 n107

encountering reem, lion, and deer, 913

and evil inclination (see also evil inclination)

D. slaying evil inclination, 939 n128

evil inclination having no power over, 412, 928, 939 n128

excommunicated by Sanhedrin, 933 n101

family of, 940-942

famine in time of, 189, 901, 934-935

D. not providing for people from wealth during famine, 934-935

fate of

compared with fate of Job and Solomon, 463 n39

finding inscription about king

reigning 1,000 years, 973 n79

David (cont.)

five insulting names hurled at D.
     by Shimei (adulterer, Moabite, murderer, leper, abomination), 931 n96 forced to leave Holy Land, 920 n50 garment of made from fleece of sheep saved from wild beasts, 914 n15
 giving alms to poor daily, 929 n78
 and God
     conversation between, 918
     glorification of name of God by D., 824 n913
     God standing by D., 918
 and Goliath, 915-918
     D. afflicting G. with leprosy,
     916
     D. casting evil eye on G., 916
     D. given strength by angel
     Ceriuel, 918 n43
     D. meeting G. with five pebbles,
     916
     D. related to G. by blood, 915 harp of strings made from gut of ram sacrificed by Abraham on Mount Moriah, 927
     strings vibrating at midnight to awaken D. for study of Torah, 927
 house of allowed to sit in Temple, 982,
     984 n9
     Israel (northern kingdom)
     renouncing, 984 n10
 humility of, 406 n376
 idolatry of, 933 n101
 impotence of, 946 n3
 Jacob as example for, 342
 and Jerusalem
     D. believing that "place which Lord will choose" refers to Jerusalem, 908 n101
 and Jesse
     J. telling D. to have brothers
     send wives bills of divorce,
     917 n33
 Job compared with, 463 n39
 joined by 1,400 scholars at Adullam, 920 n50
 and Jonathan
     D. asking J. to bring eight men for quorum for prayer, 919
     n50
     J. not giving D. provisions,
     resulting in misfortunes,
     919-920 n50

David (cont.)

as judge condemning man to death on false testimony, 929 n78
 kindness of, 740 n635
 as king
     D. as "elect" among kings, 912
     n1
     visitations upon Palestine during reign of D., 934-937
 kingdom of
     given to Israelites conditionally, 590 n173 (see also gifts)
 law of
     no man exempt from service in defensive war, 920 n50
     that no woman should be alone
     with man, 942 n143
 and Levites
     D. adding eight sections of Levites, for 24 total, 683
     D. omitting Levites from census, 936
     D. teaching Levites to sing hymns, 930 n84
 life history of found in blessing of Judah, 410
     n388
 life span of appointed to be lengthened by Adam's contribution, 59
     D. receiving five years from
     Abraham, 912 n12
     D. receiving 48 years from
     Joseph, 912 n12
     D. receiving 28 years from Jacob, 912 n12
     three hours of existence allotted to D. at first, 911
 listening to Ziba's slander against Mephibosheth, 909 n109
 loved by God but hated by fellow men, 1120 n27
 merits of acquired by study of Torah, 924
     n67
     Hezekiah owing 15 years of life
     to, 1050
     See also merits
 and Messiah
     D. as one of names of Messiah,
     939 n128
     D. as promised Messiah, 939
     n128
     second D. to be Messiah, 939
     n128
 and Michal legality of D.'s marriage to M., 941 n133

David (cont.)

and Michal (cont.)
     marriage annulled by Saul, 940
     M. taken from D. by Saul, 905
     n80
 and Moabites, 912 n9
 modesty of, 927, 930 n86
 Moses praying for, 821
 as musician
     D. making musical instruments,
     930 n84
 names and titles of, 928 n78
     elect of God, 911, 912 n1
     Elhanan, 928 n78
     man of God, 838 n965 (see also
     man of God)
     one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
     servant of Lord, 805 n80, 929
     n78 (see also servant of Lord)
     son of Jesse as derogatory title,
     588 n163
 one of five kings anointed, 658
     n371, 893 n30
 one of four pious men who addressed unbecoming words to God, 628 n284
     (see also under pious: men)
 one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
 one of six pious men endowed with spiritual gifts
     descended from Ruth, 866
     n61 (see also under pious:
     men)
 in Paradise, 938-940
     D. in hall of gold in, 23 n97
     D. in third division of, 19
     D. intoning psalms in, 938
     D. on horse of fire in, 939 n129
     D. pronouncing blessing over wine in, 939
     D. ranking first in heavenly realm, 938
 partaking of holy bread, 909 n107, 920 n50
 and Philistines
     D. acting as madman in presence of Achish, 918-919
     D. coming to Achish, king of Philistines, 918
     D. singing 15 Songs of Ascents, 923 piety and sin of, 927-931
 power of eye of, 916, 917 n39

David (cont.)

- prayer of
  - efficacy of, 927
  - for exiled Israel, 930 n87
  - for strength against enemies, 986 n21
- as prophet, 915 n24
  - D. as early prophet, 501 n109
  - D. prophesying that he would kill Goliath and erect house of God, 915 n23
  - D. receiving gift of prophecy, 913
- and psalms, 930 n84
  - D. composing psalms only when put in state of ecstasy by music, 929 n81
- punishment of
  - for boastful words regarding Torah, 786
  - D. choosing plague rather than war as punishment, 936, 937 n123
  - with leprosy for adultery, 931 n96
  - in old age for cutting corner of Saul's mantle, 901
  - for speaking of God as the one who stirred up Saul, 937 n119
  - for staying in safe place while army fought Absalom, 933 n107
- and purging of sixth heaven, 5
- repenting for 22 years, 928
- reverence shown to scholars by, 930 n86
- royalty belonging to, 509
- and Sabbath
  - D. coming to high priest Ahimelech on Sabbath and finding priests making shewbread, desecrating Sabbath, 909 n107
  - D. spending every Sabbath studying Torah as protection against angel of death, 938
- and Satan
  - S. appearing to D. in form of deer, 933
  - S. appearing to D. in shape of bird, 928
- and Saul
  - D. cutting off fringes from S.'s garment, 905 n81
  - D. pursued by S., 918-920
  - D. surpassing S. in knowledge and as teacher, 908 n102

David (cont.)

- and Saul (cont.)
  - D. wearing S.'s armor, 916
  - S. taking Merab from D., 905 n80
- saved by
  - miracle, 934
  - spider's web, 919
  - wasp, 919
- second, to be Messiah, 939 n128
- seized by Ishbi, brother of Goliath, 933
- seven stones of, for Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Aaron, David, God, 917 n38
- Shekinah departing from, 928
- as shepherd, 501 n109, 912
  - one of shepherds who assist Messiah on the right, 100 n142
  - tested as shepherd of people, 500 (see also Moses)
- shield of (Magen David)
  - magic power of, 964 n54
- sin of
  - D. desiring to keep sin secret, 806 n889
  - as reason for destruction of priests of Nob, 933
  - as reason why Doeg cast out of pious, 933
  - as reason why Saul and three sons slain, 933
  - taking census without requiring half-shekel offering, 937 n119
- slaying wild beasts with stones, 914 n15
- and Solomon
  - D. receiving revelation about S. as successor and builder of Temple, 946 n3
  - D. transmitting to S. instructions concerning furniture and vessels of Temple, 967 n57
  - parallels between D. and S., 955 n24
  - superiority of S. to D. 966
- as son of Jesse
  - D. as least esteemed of Jesse's sons, 915 n23
  - D. as seventh son of Jesse, 682
- sovereignty of, one of six gifts to Israel from God, 584 (see also gifts)
- spending leisure time in study and prayer, 927

David (cont.)

- story of
  - D. and honey jars, 913-914
  - discovery of thief, 956 n27
  - strength of, 913, 914 n15
  - stricken with leprosy for half a year, 928
- sword of
  - D. swearing by sword, 922 n59
  - Name of God engraved on, 922 n59
- taking 60 breaths of sleep, 927
- and Temple
  - D. seeing earthly and heavenly Temple, 817 n905
  - D.'s wish for Temple, 966
  - site of Temple made known to D. by prophet Gad, 967 n57
- throne of, in Paradise, opposite Divine Throne, 938-939
- time of
  - human life span shortened during, 257 n36
- tomb of, 942-943
  - Herod erecting monument over, 943 n144
  - Herod taking money from, 942
  - Hyrcanus taking money from, 942
  - Solomon putting treasures in, 942
  - story of Jewish washerwomen and, 943
  - story of Muslim pasha dropping sword into, 942-943
- and Torah
  - D. receiving kingdom as reward for zeal in study of Torah, 928 n78
- treated badly by Shimei b. Gera, 947
- trembling of, 936
- and Uriah the Hittite
  - D. slaying U. with sword of children of Ammon, 922 n59
  - U. assisting D. with Goliath's armor in return for Israelite wife, 916
- vanguard of, 941, 942 n143
- victory of, over Lahmi, brother of Goliath, 943 n146
- warfare of, 920-922
  - with Amalekites
    - D. aided by divine intervention, 919
    - D. massacring Amalekites, 307 n278

David (cont.)

- warfare of (cont.)
  - with Amalekites (cont.)
    - D. slaying Amalekite, 582
  - D. buying Jerusalem from Jebusites, 920
  - D. planning to get Jerusalem from Jebusites, 920
  - D. singing song of praise in gratitude for victory over Sihon and Og, 755
  - D. treating fallen warriors with piety, 927 n77
- against Edom, 926 n77
  - D. censured for waging war against Edom, 756 n706
- 18 campaigns of, 922 n59
- against Midianites, 914 n15
- against Philistines, in Valley of Giants, 920-921
- against Shobach the Aramean, 921
- against Syria, 920 n50
- walls of Jerusalem lowering before D., 920, 922 n53
- wives of
  - Abigail, 940
  - D. having 18 wives, 946 n3
  - D. having six wives, 940
  - legality of D.'s marriage to Michal, 941 n133
  - Merab, taken from D. by Saul, 905 n80
  - world created for sake of, 939 n128
- Davidic dynasty. See David: dynasty of
- Davidic kingdom. See David: as king; David: kingdom of
- day
  - angels preparing manna for Israel, 617
  - distinguished from night, 617
  - duration of
    - one of ten things produced on first day of creation, 5
  - God revealing Self to prophets and Jews during, 279 n131, 292
  - Israel judged by God during, 214 n170, 773, 774 n769
  - of revelation on Sinai, twice as long as ordinary day, 613
  - spent by Moses in learning Torah from God, 634
- Day of Atonement
  - Akedah taking place on, 230, 232 n248
  - ceremonies for high priest entering Holy of Holies on, 676

Day of Atonement (cont.)

- ceremony of scapegoat on, 137-138 n10
- consecration ceremonies of Temple held on, 966
- day on which Israel finally received Torah, 631-632
- expiatory sacrifice on, 230, 265
- God giving instructions for building Tabernacle on, 638, 640
- Minḥah service of, 687 n440 (see also Minḥah service; prayers, Jewish)
- observance of, in time to come, 632 n301
- one of 70 holy days celebrated by Jews, 648
- Satan having no power to accuse Israel on, 632 n300
- set on 10 Tishri, 631-632
- smoke of fire of altar as portent of prosperous new year or not, 661 n380
- ten men needed for public divine service on, 249
- two he-goats sacrificed on, 136
- Zechariah son of Jehoiada killed on, 1038
- day of judgment
  - activity of Elijah on, 1021
  - banquet for righteous to be held on, 939
  - burning of idols in Gehenna on, 558 n41
  - David at God's right hand on, 939 n128
  - deeds made known on, 99
  - distinction reserved for David on, 939
  - evil inclination to be slain by God on, 306 n275
  - ḥayyot to bear witness to God on, 726 n586
  - Isaac to redeem descendants from Gehenna on, 261
  - Korah to bear witness to God on, 726 n586
  - Metatron to bear witness to God on, 726 n586
  - and punishment of Azazel, 135
  - and punishment of generation of Tower, 165-166 n90
  - and resurrection of Adam, 97
  - struggle between Elijah and Sammael on, 999 n33
  - suffering on, 572
  - wicked to be led from hell to Paradise on, 939

Day of Rejoicing of Law

- according to Ashkenazic ritual, 481 n57
- day of ten crowns, 658-661
- 1 Nisan as, 658
- day of the Lord
  - as thousand years, 99 n140
  - as world to come, 99 n140
- days
  - counting of, between Passover and Feast of Weeks, 592 n175
  - of week, unfavorable to Haman's lots, 1150-1151
- days to come
  - all nations will rise up against Edom, 304
  - See also* future world; time to come; world to come
- dead
  - blind, childless, lepers, and poor considered as, 517 n142
  - intercession of, 128 n60
  - prayer of, 1013 n84
  - in Sheol
    - reviving at sound of divine voice, 604
  - in sixth and seventh divisions of Paradise, 20
  - tax on, in Egypt, 192-193
- dead, resurrection of. See resurrection: of dead
- Dead Sea
  - coals as large as, in hell, 13
  - formed by canals of Vale of Siddim, 194
- Dead Sea (Sea of Sodom)
  - Sea of Sodom known to Pausanias and Church Fathers as, 20 n73
- death
  - angel of (see angel[s], general: types, of death)
  - as being gathered to one's people, 739
  - brought into world by
    - Adam, 99
    - woman, 65
  - caused by
    - sword of angel, 58 n20
    - venom from hand of angel, 58 n20
  - causing death not as serious a sin as murder, 334 n36
  - day of
    - communicated to pious, 739
    - hereditary, 100 n142
    - by kiss, 832 n950
    - from God, 741, 743 n639

death (cont.)by kiss (cont.)

privilege granted to only few people, 832 n950

rationalistic interpretation of, 832 n950 moment of, as judgment, 58 n20 of Moses and those free from sin caused by sin of Adam, 806 n888 penalty of Adam to be suffered by all, 100 n142

personified

adorned with great beauty, 247
speaking to Abraham, 247

of pious as painless, 58 n20

preparation for, of Isaac, 264

proverb about, 972

as punishment for perjury, 948 n11

remedy against, given to Moses by angel of death, 615 resuscitation from, brought about by means of dew, 994 (see also resurrection of dead)

70 kinds of, 95 n129

signs of approaching, 401 n345 sickness preceding, 400

as sleep, 61 n25

sudden, 400, 401 n357

symbolized by round lentil, 257

three heavenly messengers present at, 97 n135

time of

and appearance of God, 99

radiance of glory seen on pious man at, 635 n309

of wicked as painful, 58 n20

window of, in first heaven, 503

withering of wreath as sign of, 934 n110

Deborah (daughter of Uz)

burial place of below Bethel, under palm tree, 317 called "river of Deborah," 318 n301

mistranslation of name of, 318 n301

death of, in Bethel, 317

and Jacob

D. accompanying J. always, 316-317

D. as J.'s nurse, 318 n302

as mother of Bilhah and Zilpah, 284 n167

nurse of Rebekah, sent to Jacob, 290, 291 n204

Deborah (cont.)

prophecy concerning, as part of blessing of Naphtali, 408

Deborah (prophetess and judge), 867-871

and Barak

haughtiness of D. toward B., 1061-1062 n117

song of praise of, 869

celebrating victory of Sisera with festival at Shiloh, 873 n92

mourning for, 869

name, meaning of ("bee"), 870 n75, 1062 n117

one of two eminent women in Bible, 1061-1062 n117

pictured as fig tree, 874 n103

pride of, 870 n75

receiving revelations from Michael, 870 n73

reigning as judge for 40 years, 869 sitting under palm tree where Deborah (daughter of Uz) buried, 317 subject to frailties of female sex, 868

from tribe of Ephraim, 870 n73

from tribe of Naphtali, 870 n73

wealth of, 870 n74

Decalogue. See Ten Commandments

decapitation

punishment for all those seen by witnesses to worship golden calf, 626

in war, 581

deceit

as companion of hatred, 447

not created by God, 147 n36

See also lying deception. See Deceit; falsehood; lie, diplomatic; lying ## decree

heavenly

sealing of, with wax or blood, 1159, 1161 n122

Decuriones

advising Nebuchadnezzar (i.e., Titus) to destroy Jews, 1087 n52

Dedila. See Delilah

deeds

as accusers and defenders, 52 n12 book of record of, 99 n141

good

bare of, 95 n120

God giving reward for, 332

recorded by Elijah and Messiah, 1000 n35, 1000 n38

deeds (cont.)

made known on judgment day, 99

Deli

place where Abraham saved from fire, 161 n76

Delilah

death of, rotting alive, 882

mother of

Eli, 892 n25

Micah and Heliu (Eli), 882 n125

name, meaning of, 880 n121

and Samson

D. causing S. to lose everything, 880 n121

D. selling S.'s secret to Philistines, 880

demon(s)

Agrat, daughter of Mahlat as, 27 n109

Agrimus as firstborn of, 31

and angels

angels able to see demons, 82 n98

demons as descendants of fallen angels, 82 n98, 121 n57

demons between angels and men, 82 n98

demons having wings like angels, 82 n98

Ben Zadua as chief of, 529 n185

bodies of

covered with hair, 866 n58, 961 n40 (see also hair)

created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day)

created on sixth day, 77

dudaim plant used in expelling, 289 n189

Egypt as home of, 66 n40

exercising power from 17 Tammuz to 9 Av, 660 faces of, covered with hair, 866 n58

as fallen angels, 975 n84

feet of, resembling those of cock, 977 n92

female, misleading pious man, 1017 n97

form of assuming any form they please, 82 n98

genii as, 961 n40

heads of, bald, 866 n58

as husbands of she-devils Lilith and Mahlah, 843

Keteb as most dangerous of, 660 losing fear of men as result of idolatry, 117

demon(s) (cont.)

male, having hair on heads, 866 n58
 name for, 81 n98
 and newborn, legend of, 139
 not casting shadow, 82 n98 numbers of, 82 n98
 observing Torah, 975 n84
 as offspring of Adam and Lilith, 131 presence of, at debates of scholars, 975 n84 ruling Friday night and Saturday, 488 n72 seducing men to idolatry, 82 n98, 118 n54
   sin, 121 n57
 and Solomon
   demons as personal attendants of S., 962 demons assisting S. in building of Temple, 962, 965 n56 demons at throne of S., 970 n69
   S. inventing incantations to exorcise, 962
 as souls of wicked, 82 n98
 three classes of (angel-like, human-like, animal-like), 975 n84 transformation of hyena into, 43 n190
 vanishing as soon as Tabernacle erected, 660 See also angels, fallen; devil(s); evil spirits

depilatory used on Queen of Sheba, 961 n40

desert, 565-569

Dudael
   as abode of Behemoth, 30 n127
   and punishment of Azazel, 135
   evil spirits dwelling in, 324 n321 God's wonders appearing in, 500
 and Israel
   40 years of wandering in, 429
   Israel carrying two shrines in, 429
   as place Israel accepted Torah, 776 near Media, one of places where Joseph buried gold, silver, and precious stones, 397 middle point of, falling within precincts of Shem, 156
 and Moses
   as final resting place of M., 500
   M. asking deserts to intercede, 808
   M.'s longing for, 500

desert (cont.)

and Moses (cont.)
   Samael searching for M. in, 836 near Persia, one of places where Joseph buried gold, silver, and precious stones, 397 near Red Sea, one of places where Joseph buried gold, silver, and precious stones, 397 three mountains retained by God in (Her, Nebo, Sinai), 736
See also Israel (nation; people)/Israelites: in wilderness; wilderness; and under Moses

Desert Kadesh
   one of six names of Mount Sinai, 593

Desert Kadmut
   one of six names of Mount Sinai, 593

Desert Paran
   one of six names of Mount Sinai, 593

Desert Sin
   one of six names of Mount Sinai, 593

Desert Sinai
   one of six names of Mount Sinai, 593

Desuath (one of seven sinners), 857 n9

Deuel (one of seven men refusing to worship Baal), 872-873

Deuteronomy, Book of as "book of the Law," 842 n9
   as book of Torah found in Temple, 1061 n116 personification of, 973

devastation
   one of seven evils, 450

devil(s)
   Ashmedai (Asmodeus) as devil par excellence, offspring of Naamah and Shamdan, 114 n45, 136 offensive odor of, 30 n125
   See also angel(s), fallen; demon(s); devil(s); evil spirits; Mastema; spirit(s) dew

   as food of phoenix, 34
   of heaven, one of tenfold blessings of Jacob, 266 (see also Jacob: tenfold blessing of) important in mystic literature, 9 n22

dew (cont.)

of light
   bringing about resurrection of dead, 92 n113
   of Gnostics, 9 n22 (see also Gnostic ideas)
 not appearing, as miracle for Gideon, 873 n97 quantity for year fixed on first day of Passover, 268 n83
 of resurrection, 6, 9 n22, 604 n210, 997 n12 dropping down on Jacob, 279

diamonds
   in artificial heavens made by Hiram of Tyre, 1105 drops of holy oil turning into, 913

Diasporas
   three in number, 1089 n56

Dibon (city)
   name, meaning of ("flowing with honey"), 799

dietary customs of Egyptians, 380

dietary laws, 752 n674
   and Abraham's hospitality, 205, 206 n140
   Esau and, 270 n100
   and forbidden food
     sinew of hip upon hollow of thigh, 302 observed by brothers of Joseph, 379 observed by Ezekiel, 1102 n94
   and ritual prescriptions for slaughtering, 379
   at time of Messiah, 32 n139
   and unclean fowls, 29
   See also food: forbidden

Dinah (daughter of Leah), 309 n285 age of, when Jacob arrived in Shechem, 309 n286
   burial of grave of, in Arbel, 348-349 n96
     in Holy Land, 348
   compared with Leah, 309 n285 concealed in chest by Jacob, 307
   death of
     caused by grief over Joseph, 341
     in Egypt, 348
     in Palestine, 430 n436
   dishonored
     as punishment of Jacob, 309 n288, 316
     in Shechem, 331
   emigrating to Egypt with Jacob's family, 343 n65

Dinah (cont.)

enticed out to see dancers and singers, 307
 as gadabout, 65, 289 n193
 marriage of, to brother Simeon, 347
 as only daughter of Jacob, 319 n309
 as second wife of Job, 309 n288, 451
 and Shechem
   Azenath as daughter of, 348
   rape of D. by S., 307
   son of D. by Simeon, 348 Dinur, stream
   angels perishing in, 17 n70
   angels springing up from, 16 n62
 Dioscorides of Baala
   and study of medicine, 158
 diplomatic lie. See lie: diplomatic disease(s)
   beginning after death of Abraham, 257 n36
   as consequence of fall, 94, 95 n129
   elephantiasis
     Chenephres punished with, for making Jews wear linen garments, 499 n101 Israelites cured of, in Exodus, 542 and observance of law, 567
   as punishment
     of Elisha, 1030
     of Philistines, 894 n34
   sent to purify from sins, 1089
   Solomon inventing incantations to alleviate, 962 spittle as remedy for, 1006 n60
   24 kinds of, 534 n192
   See also healing; illness; magic arts; medicine; sickness; and under individual diseases
 disfavor, years of, 716-717
   boys not being able to be circumcised, 716 Israel not being able properly to observe Passover, 716
 and Moses
   M. mourning for Israel during, 717 n550
   M. receiving only essential directives during, 716 north wind not blowing during, 716 distance miraculous shortening of, 692
   in Exodus, 542
   for spies in Palestine, 708

distance (cont.)

See also earth(s): contracting of distances of; time: compression of Diul (one of seven sinners), 856
 divination
   by passages from Bible, 1159, 1161 n122
   by passages from books (stichomancy), 1159, 1161 n122
   from stars, taught to men by Barakel, 119
   See also augury; lots; magic arts; sorcery; Urim and Thummim; witchcraft Divine goodness. See God: attributes of Divine herald. See herald, Divine
 Divine Name. See Name, Divine Divine Throne. See Throne: Divine divorce
   bill of, between Abraham and Hagar, 220 customary for warriors to give wives bills of divorce, 928
   David having brothers send wives bills of divorce, 917 n33 of Israelites in Egypt in response to Pharaoh's order, 473 of Moses and Zipporah, 584 noise resounding at, 27 n107
   after revelation of marriage laws, 698 ten years of barrenness as grounds for, 888 n6
 divorcement. See divorce Dobiel (angel)
   guardian angel of Persians, 1116 n7
   high office of Gabriel given to, for 21 days, 1116 n7 Doeg the Syrian, 908 n106 accusing priests at Nob of treason, 906
   and Ahitophel
     as men of evil tongues, 908 n106
   arguing that Moabite females are excluded, 916-917 called "bloody one," 908 n96 called Edomi, 906
   and David cast out of communion of pious on account of David's sin, 933 harping on David's Moabite descent, 906

Doeg the Syrian (cont.)

and David (cont.)
   jealous of David, 913
   mocking David, 924 n67
   one of ten adversaries of David, 922 n59
 death of
   at age 34 years, 906
   as leper, 907
 foreign extraction of, 908 n96 forfeiting share in life to come, 906, 908 n100 (see also world to come: those having no share in)
 not to be resurrected nor given over to punishment, 908 n106
 as president of Sanhedrin and greatest scholar, 906
 and Saul
   D. as friend of S., 906-907
   D. as S.'s armor-bearer, slain by David, 909 n107
   D. attempting to make S. jealous of David, 913
   D. commissioned by S. to kill priests at Nob, 899
   D. convincing S. that David's marriage to Michal not valid, 906
   D. inducing S. to spare Agag, king of Amalekites, 899
   D. making S. jealous of David, 908 n102
   D. seeking to ruin David, 906
   D. trying to poison Saul's mind against David, 906 son of, as armor-bearer of S., killed by David, 907, 909 n107 soul of, burned by angel, 907 to suffer eternal punishment in Gehenna, 908 n106 from tribe of Judah, 908 n96
   wanting admiration, 906
 Doel (husband of Zilpah, youngest daughter of Kenaz), 859 dog(s) on Assyrian-Babylonian monuments, 1053 n82 barking of heard throughout land of Egypt, 546
     when dead, 270 n100
   boldest among animals, 594 n181
   and cats
     originally friends, 35

dog(s) (cont.)

cursed by Noah for not observing sexual abstinence, 41 n178, 151, 152 n54
 Esther referring to Ahasuerus as, 1168 n145
 excrement of
   used in tanning hides for mezu-zot and phylacteries, 546 used in tanning hides from which Torah scrolls made, 546 golden, guarding Joseph's coffin, 546 guarding corpse of Abel, 108 magic
   as reminiscence of Serapis, 548 n3 stationed at gate of Temple, 11 n39 meat of, served to Isaac by Esau, 269, 270 n100
 as protector of Cain, 107, 109 n28
   lizard, 43 n190
 reward of, for being silent at command of Moses, 546 taking refuge with wolf, monkey, and sheep, 36 taking up residence with Adam, 36
   Seth, 36
 to be fed meat forbidden to Israelites, 546 uniting with wolf, 144
 worshiped by Avvites, 1044
 dolmens
   form of, similar to that of human foot, 576 n122
 dolphins, 40-41 n168
   half man and half fish, 35
   See also sirens
 donkey
   emblem of Issachar, 688-689 n447
   shocked at having to serve man without compensation, 41 n174
   See also ass
 Dothan (angel), 334 n29
 Dothan (place)
   sons of Jacob going to, 332
 Double Cave
   Jeremiah speaking to patriarchs in, 1078 place of burial of Reuben, 436
   See also Machpelah: Cave of dove(s)
   able to foresee future, 149 n46

dove(s) (cont.)

idol in form of destroyed and buried by Jacob, dug up and worshiped by Samaritans, 316
   monogamous life of, 45 n192
   representing Israel, 198 returning with olive branch, 148
   sent out by Noah, 148
   as symbol of people of Israel, 934
   on throne of Solomon, 968
   two precious (Ruth and Naamah as), 977 n91
   use of meat of, 41 n175
 doxologies
   of angels, formulas in, 17 n70
   See also angel(s), general: praising God; praise dragon caused to perish by Daniel, 1107 dream(s)
   of Abimelech, 216
   of Abraham, 257 n36
   of Ahasuerus, 1171, 1171 n164
   of chief butler and chief baker in prison, 360
   of Eve, about Cain and Abel, 103
   Elijah appearing in, 1013 n93 interpretation of, 136, 208, 216
   by Daniel, 1095-1096
   interpreters of Balaam as, 760
     Hebrew-Aramaic word for, 777 n784 of Isaac, about death of Abraham, 245
   of Jacob, 328
     first prophetic, 277
     concerning world history, 277
   of Joseph, 328, 330
     11 stars making obeisance to, 383
     as prophecy, 330
   of Laban warning against harming Jacob, 292
   of Levi, 438
   of Naphtali, 444-447
   of Nimrod, 179
   of Pharaoh, 362-364, 470
   of Rebekah revealing Esau's murderous plans, 273 n109
   of sons of Shemhazai, 136 of traveler in Sodom, 208
 drink
   maxim about, communicated by Elijah to R. Judah, 1010 drink offering. See offering: drink drought

  as punishment for bearing false witness against companions, 607 drowned ones

  martyrs during religious persecution, 22 n86

  in second compartment of Eden, 19

Drumah (mother of Abimelech), 874 n103

drunkenness

  curse of, 153-156

  Lot and, 215 n188

  Noah first to drink to excess, 153

  one not responsible for acts committed in state of, 779 n786

See also inebriate; intemperance; intoxication; wine

dudaim. See mandrakes

Dudain desert. See desert: Dudael

Duma (angel, prince of hell)

  accusing David, 931 n93

  taking spirit of dead to proper place, 58 n20

Dumah (angel)

  guarding souls of deceased in Court of Dead, 836 dumb

  made to speak, 218

dust

  colors of, 53 (see also color[s]) for creation of Adam kneaded at holy place in Jerusalem, 55 n16 of earth

    seed of Abraham to be as numerous as, 636 seed of Jacob to be as numerous as, 277 (see also dust: of earth; sand of seashore; star[s]: in heavens)

  as food of serpent, 747 on head, as sign of mourning, 340, 412

  of Jacob, referring to circumcision, 774 n770 man created from, 53-54 return to, after death, 53

dwarfs

  Cainites as, 110

dying

  last wish of, 924 n71

  weeping of, 58 n20 (see also crying; death; weeping; tears)

E

Ea (Babylonian god), 27 n107

eagle(s)

carrying letter of Baruch to Jeremiah, 1090, 1092
carved by Moses on Joseph's cup, 429 engraved on silver leaf used to raise Joseph's coffin from Nile, 621

fearing to swoop down, 2
first to slay bird, 152 n51
Israel described as, 1155-1156
leading Ebed-melech to Baruch, 1090
living immorally after leaving ark,
151-152 n51
one of four beings represented on Divine Throne, 621
reviving corpse as sign of truth of message, 1090
and Solomon

eagle carrying out orders of S., 971
eagle giving information to S., 980 n100
eagle transporting S. to desert and back in one day, 962
golden eagle on S.'s throne, 968 story of eagles and S. and magnificent building, 972 summoned by S. to guard body of David on Sabbath, 938

See also bird(s): of prey; vultures

ear(s)

left, hearing angel, 896 n40
right, hearing Lord by night, 896
n40

two of ten orifices of man, 960

early church. See church: early earth(s)

first (Heled), 6
second (Tebel) inhabited by living creatures, 6
third (Yabbashah), 6
fourth (Harabah), 6
fifth (Arka), 6
sixth (Adamah), 6
seventh (Eretz), 6
abyss over, 6
alarmed at day of revelation, 600 animals arising from, 50 n7 becoming mountainous, 109 n31
center of, as Eben Shetiyyah, 278 contracting of distances of, 709 n520, 934 (see also distance;
time: compression of)

earth(s) (cont.)

contracting of distances of (cont.)
as miracle for Jacob, 280 n148 covered with water, 18

created by God's left hand, 8 n17 created from snow under Divine Throne, 5, 7 n16

created on first day, 5, 8 n18, 77,
82 n98

cursed by God, 21 n75, 79 n89,
79 n90

division of, by Noah, 156-157, 188 fearing Torah would increase sinfulness, 601 n199

and heaven, distance between,
1103, 1104 n101

hymn of praise of, 44 (see also
praise)

impure for 33 generations after giving birth to Adam, 956
n57

limitations of, 7

middle point of navel of, within territory of Shem, 156

misdemeanors of, 76

Moses asking earth to intercede, 808 mouth of, created in twilight between sixth day of creation and Sabbath, 726

n581 (see also under creation: sixth day)

names of, 9 n28

not following God's bidding, 21
n75

obedience of, 21 n75

plants coming from, 50 n7

pregnancy of, 21 n74

punished by God, 76

quarreling with sea about corpses
of Egyptians, 561

rain as consort of, 21 n74

ruled by goodness of God, 2

seven, 6, 9 n28

inhabitants of, 109-110

separated by five layers, 6

seven pillars of (variously identified as Aaron; Abraham; Adam; David; Enoch; Isaac; Jacob; Moses; Noah; Solomon), 9 n28 (see also under world[s])

signs of, taught to men by Arakiel, 119

size of, 6

trembling of, at revelation of Sinai, 603

earth(s) (cont.)

weeping for Moses, 834

witness of, against man, 26-27
n105, 79 n89

earthquake(s)

aiding Israelites in battle against Philistines, 895

causes of, 1012 n77

explained by Elijah to R. Nehorai, 1010 one of four phenomena preceding appearance of God, 995

as one of four portals, 600

result of Joab's lack of trust in God, 927 n77

standing for day of death, 995

when Uzziah tried to offer sacrifice, 1040

east

assigned to Adam, 92

Judah to pitch camp in, 685

east wind

bringing deluge, 554

causing destruction of Samaria, Jerusalem, and Tyre, 554

laying waste Tower of Babel, 554

punishing sinners in Gehenna, 554

Ebal, Mount

altar erected on, with stones from bed of Jordan, 843

ceremonies on, 844 n14

six tribes ascending, 843

Ebed-melech, 1090-1091

entering Paradise alive, 73 n67, 132 n62 (see also Paradise:
entering alive)

interceding for Jeremiah, 1069-1070 led to Baruch by eagle, 1090

name, meaning of, 1070 n13

in Paralipomena of Jeremiah, 1071
n15

pious Ethiopian who escaped from Babylonians, 1090

as proselyte, 1093 n66

one of ten rulers who became proselytes, 1093 n66

saved as reward for rescuing Jeremiah, 1090

sleeping under tree for 66 years, 1090

Eben Shetiyyah (foundation stone of Temple), 7

ark placed on, 11 n39

as beginning of creation, 11 n39

as center of earth and center of sanctuary, 278

derivation of Shetiyyah, 10 n38

Eben Shetiyyah (cont.)

as foundation stone for formation of earth, 11 n39, 280 n141
 God appearing with, to Joseph, 357
 Ineffable Name engraved on, 11 n39, 278, 280 n142
 Jacob casting self down before, 278 keeping Tehom from overflowing earth, 11 n39
 legends concerning, 924 n70
 as metaphor for likeness of Rachel, 358 n124
 oracular significance of, 653 n358
 stone of Jacob as, 277
 tablets of Ten Commandments hewn out of, 619 n258

Eber (son of Shem)
 at burial of
   Abraham, 237 n268
   Sarah, 235
 at circumcision of Isaac, 218
 father of Peleg, 158 n69
 Jacob hiding at house of, 271
 as prophet, 156 n63, 217
 and Shem
   Bet ha-Midrash (academy) of, 252 (see also academy; Bet ha-Midrash) transmitting instruction and knowledge to Jacob, 327

Eblaen
 name, meaning of, 311 n290
 perhaps identified with Eliezer, 311 n290 treated badly by Shechemites, 311

Ecclesiastes, Book of Hezekiah and associates as editors of, 1071 n15
 Hezekiah having copies made of, 1051
 opposition of sages to admitting it into canon, 977 n93 Solomon as author of, 977 n93

eclipse of heavenly bodies in God's proximity, 97 n133
 of moon and sun, 26 n100
 of sun
   at crucifixion of Jesus, 79 n89
   during flood, 145 n25
   at time of fall, 79 n89, 92, 95 n121
   See also moon; sun

Edad (son of Agag) becoming Saul's armor-bearer, 903 n66
 slayer of Saul, 903 n66

Eden

beginning beyond Paradise, 19
 compartments of, 19 distinguished from garden (i.e., Paradise), 23 n97 (see also Eden, Garden of) located in seventh heaven, 22 n84

Eden, Garden of, 68
 souls must pass through after death, 68
See also Eden; Paradise

edict decreeing persecution of Jews, 1155

Edom
 also called Uz ("counsel"), 455 angel of fleeing to Bozrah, 304
   hair of same as wool of goat, 307 n275
     seized by, 306 n275
     on Jacob's ladder, 277
 annihilation of, not taking place before advent of Messiah, 927 n77 denying Moses' request for passage, 736 first king of, appointed on day Elijah taken from world, 999 n31 foreigners as kings of, 324, 325 n323
 God to take vengeance on, 820 identified with Rome, 254 n19, 641 n323, 927 n77, 1087 n52
   explanation of, 419 n425
   ruler of world before Messiah, 163 n82 Moses requesting passage through, 735-736
 name, meaning of, 255 n28
 prince of
   identified with Satan, 306 n275
   to be destroyed by Messiah, 306 n275 Romans as descendants of, 254 n19 sin of, greater than that of Moabites and Ammonites, 737 n622 threatened Israel with sword, 737 n622
 to be destroyed by sword, 737 n622 unbrotherly attitude of, toward Israel, 735-737
See also Edomites; Esau

Edomi

another name of Doeg, meaning of, 906

Edomite

killing those left behind by Nebuchadnezzar, 1086

Edomite kingdoms

48 in number, 572 n399

Edomites

as destroyers of Temple, 1087 n52
 exterminated by Joab, 926 n77
 first king of, Aramean Balaam, 324
 identified with Romans, 325 n323
 Israel forbidden to wage war against, 755
 subject to Jewish kings, 324
 Torah commanding considerate treatment of, 983
See also Edom; Esau

Edrei

site of battle between Israel and Og, 753

effrontery

golden plate of Aaron atoning for, 650

Eglah (pet name of Michal), 940, 941 n131

Eglon (king of Moab), 862 conquered by Ehud, 409

Egypt, 405

as abode of Lilith, 66 n40
 Abraham in, 189-190, 191 n66, 191 n78, 191 n80, 192 (see also Abraham: and Egypt) biblical prohibition against dwelling in, 983, 984 n11 bondage of Israel in beginning of, 465-466
   compared to leprosy, 512
   duration of 400 years, 200 n114
     reduced by merits of Isaac, 263 n69 (see also Isaac: merits of; merits) Israel redeemed for sake of Jacob, 256 n35 reckoned from birth of Isaac, 199
   suffering of Israel in, 511 n127
 boundary dispute with Ethiopia settled by plague of frogs, 528 depicted on tribe of Ephraim's flag in wilderness, 688 tribe of Manasseh's flag in wilderness, 688 fleshpots of, 693-694

Egypt (cont.)

as home of demons, 66 n40
 land of magic and witchcraft par excellence, 66 n40, 965 n55 magicians and wise men of, 409
 Messiah to accept gifts offered by, 649
 Mizraim as capital city of. See Mizraim (city) name, meaning of, 66-67 n40 and Palestine historical reminiscences of relationship between, 364 n163 plagues against corresponding to deeds perpetrated against Israelites, 524-525, 526 n172
     divided into four parts, 523
 punishment of, after flight of Moses, 488 n76 sages of, seeking to cure by magic arts and astrology, 157
 size of, 1005 n53
 three calamities befalling on night of Exodus, 542 n230
 wealth of
     one of five tokens granted to Israel after Exodus, 565 taken by Israel in Exodus, as cause of misfortune for Israelites, 543 n233
See also Exodus; Israel (nation; people)/Israelites: in Egypt; Israel(nation; people)/Israelites: and Exodus Egyptian customs embalming, 412
 Egyptian language
     God addressing Israel in, 602-603
     use of
       by Hebrews, 499 n106
       by Semites, 158 n72
 Egyptian laws
     that one cannot export wagons or animals, 390 n290
 Egyptians
     afflicted with heat when infant Moses left in ark, 479 n48 attitude of, toward adultery, 191 n75 aversion of, to shepherds, 395, 396 n325
     and circumcision
       not practicing rite, 479 n51 rite abandoned after death of Joseph, 479 n51

Egyptians (cont.)

and circumcision (cont.)
     rite introduced by Joseph, 370 n196, 479 n51 compared with asses, 528 n175 corpses of earth and sea quarreling about, 561 swallowed by earth, as reward for Pharaoh, 561 death by water of, 471
 as descendants of Ham, 154
 destruction of, 558-562
 dissolute lives of, 537, 538 n212
 drowned in Red Sea, 558 buried as reward for last honor paid to Jacob, 414 n413
     number of, 561 n43
     as punishment for drowning of Hebrew male children, 561 n51
     source of 12th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127
 engulfed in darkness, 561 n52
 garments of, not sinking in Red Sea, 562 n55
 God attacking in various ways, 523 and Israelites Egyptians depriving Israelites of fields, 465
     Egyptians envious of Israelites, 465, 474 n29
     Egyptians expecting Israelites back after sacrifice in wilderness, 548-549
     Egyptians giving Israelites gold, jewels, etc., at Exodus, 540
     Egyptians happy at departure of Israelites, 542
     Egyptians' hatred of Israelites changing to affection at Exodus, 540
     Egyptians oppressing Israelites, 521
     Egyptians requiring each Israelite to make 600 bricks a day, 468 n9
     enmity between, 470 n12
     reasons for, 465, 466 n5
 and Joseph Egyptians asking J. for food, 369
     rite of circumcision introduced by J., 479 n51
 led into exile by king of Assyria, 154
 magicians of, attempting to save them from sea, 559

Egyptians (cont.)

as masters of astrology and magic, 955 n24
 as masters of Israel for 400 years, 191 n80
 pious among celebrating Passover with Israelites, 544 n246
     proclaiming belief in true God, 544 n246
 punishment of, 214 n170, 215 n179, 523-531
     compared with punishment of Pharaoh, 191 n76 concerning Sarah, 191 n75
     death by water, 471-472, 584
     in Egypt as well as in Red Sea, 560-561 religion of
     as idolatry, 467
     worship of animals in, 395, 398 n330 worship of constellation of ram, 395
 sensuality of, 191 n68, 470 n14
 slain by God with fourth finger of right hand, 638 n315 and sons of Jacob, Egyptians not eating at same table with, 380
 three calamities befalling on night of Exodus, 542 n230 vengeance of, one of five tokens granted to Israel after Exodus, 565 washed ashore, 560
 Ehi (son of Benjamin)
     name changed to Ahiram, 434
       meaning of, 380
 Ehud
     conquering Eglon, king of Moab, 409
     death of, 867
     as descendant of Benjamin, 409
     second judge of Israel, 860 n21 succeeded by Shamgar, 869 n70
     Zebul identified with, 860 n21
 Ehyeh. See Ehyeh Asher Ehyeh Asher
     meaning of, 511 n128
     as name of God, 511 n128 (see also God: names and titles of) Eighteen Benedictions, 1011 fixed by Great Assembly, 1126 origins of, 1126-1127
     patriarchs as authors of, 1126
See also Amidah; prayers, Jewish

Elah

- one of sinful ones identified by Kenaz, 855
- as sinner who hid foreign gods in tent, 857 n5, 857 n8
- tent of, 857 n8

Elam

- firstborn son of Shem, 1132
- posterity of, given dominion in Shushan, 1132

Elas. See Elah

Elath (one of seven sinners), 856, 857 n9

Eldad

- identified with Elidad, 698 n484
- image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
- one of seven pious men of world, 968 (see also under pious: men)
- and Medad, 697-698
- Book of, 698 n482
- distinguished for their humility, 697
- half brothers of Moses and Aaron, 698
- identified with Elidad and Samuel, 698 n481
- mentioned by name in Scripture, 697
- parents of, 698 n484
- prophesying about Magog, 697
- prophesying distant future, 697
- receiving prophetic gift from God, 697
- retaining gift of prophecy for life, 697
- surviving after death of Joshua, 697
- name, meaning of, 698
- prophesying death of Moses and leadership of Joshua, 697
- story of fall of Satan of, 63 n34

elders

- appointment of, 588 n163, 695-697
- one of three signs of true redeemer who would deliver Israel from bondage of Egypt, 405
- first 70 destroyed by fire at Taberah, 695
- forgiven for sins up to day of ordination, 902 n53
- gift of prophecy conferred on, 697 n479
- honor due to, 598 n191
- installation of, 585-588

elders (cont.)

- of Israel
  - abstaining from conjugal relations, 700
  - punished for deserting Moses and Aaron, 516
- names of, 696
- receiving prophetic gift when appointed, 696 n472
- refusing to accompany Moses and Aaron to Pharaoh, 536 n207
- rewarded for supporting Moses, 535
- 70 in number, 695
- to accompany Moses to Mount Horeb for water, 575

Eleazar

- as author of Book of Joshua, 853 n57
- burial place of, 853 n57
- in charge of those who keep sanctuary, 684
- dying soon after death of Joshua, 852
- highest chief of Levites, 684
- and Ithamar
  - sitting at left side of Joshua, 827
- and Moses
  - E. accompanying M. to place of death, 815, 815 n904
  - E. punished for lack of reverence for M., 798
  - M. asking E. to intercede, 809
  - M. passing on to E. applications of Holy Names, 615
- one of 77 pious men in Israel, 629 n287 (see also under pious: men)
- one of ten just men in Israel, 628
- and Phinehas
  - E. passing on to P. applications of Holy Names, 615
- Samael stopping prayer of, 809
- son of Elisheba, 661
- vision of, communicated to Kenaz, 860 n20

Eleazar b. R. Simeon, R.,

- Elijah as teacher of, 1009 n65

Eleazar of Worms, R.

- probably author of Book of Raziël, 90 n110

elect of God

- title given in Scripture to David, Abraham, Jacob, people of Israel, Saul, tribe of Levi, Moses, Messiah, Joshua, Judah, Solomon, Jerusalem, 912 n1

elements, created

- hymns of praise of, 44 (see also praise)

elephantiasis (see also disease[s])

- Chenephres as first person afflicted by, 499 n101

Elflalet (wife of Dan, daughter of Moabite Hamudan), 348

Elhanan (elder from tribe of Naphtali), 696

- another name for David, 928 n78
- name, meaning of, 928 n78

Eli

- astonished by infant Samuel, 889
- and blessing of Hannah, 888
- blindness of, 893 n27
- copying crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters, 892 n24
- death of
  - on hearing of death of sons, 893-894 n33
- death of daughter-in-law on same day as Eli, 894 n33
- Delilah as mother of, 892 n25
- hearing from Saul that sons were killed in battle and ark captured, 893 n33
- holding three highest offices (high priest, president of Sanhedrin, political ruler of Israel), 891
- Hophni and Phinehas as sons of, 893 n26
- house of
  - divine decree against, 908 n104
- image of, on basin on Solomon's throne, 968
- from line of Ithamar, 891
- ruling for 40 years, 892 n23
- and sons, 891-895
- sons of
  - detaining women at sanctuary, 891, 893 n26
  - disgraceful treatment of sacrifices by, 893 n26
  - dying as martyrs, 893 n27
  - dying in battle, 892
  - offenses of, 891
  - slain by Goliath, 893 n33

- as successor of Phinehas, 891, 892 n25
- words of rebuke to sons, 893 n27

Eliab

- daughter of, becoming wife of Rehoboam, 913
- elder from tribe of Reuben, 696
- name, meaning of ("the ship"), 679

Eliab (cont.)

oldest brother of David, 913
prince of tribe of Zebulun, 667, 679 son of Helon ("the sand"), 679 violent character of, 915 n20

Eliakim

described by God as His servant, 805 n880 (see also servant
of God)

elder from tribe of Naphtali, 696
one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)

Eliasaph

name, meaning of ("God multiplied"), 680
prince of tribe of Gad, 680 son of Deuel, 680

Elidad

Eldad identified with, 698 n484
elder from tribe of Benjamin, 696

Eliezer (prophet)

active during reign of Jehoshaphat,
988 n28
grandson of prophet Hanani, 988
n28

Eliezer (servant of Abraham)

and Abraham

E. accompanying A. and Isaac, 226

E. as slave given to A., 177

E. devoted to A., 195, 241-242
n295

E. freed by A., 241

resemblance of E. to A., 239
n276, 240

adept in the law, 237

Bethuel trying to kill, 240

as Canaanite, 239 n282

changing names of judges, 208
curse of, transformed into blessing, 241 described as Canaan, 242 n306

Eblaen perhaps to be identified with, 311 n290

entering Paradise alive, 73 n67,
132 n62, 241, 242 n301
(see also Paradise: entering alive)

evil inclination having no power over, 237

first words of, 241 n295

as giant, 240

going to Sodom to inquire after Lot, 208

identified with Og, 242 n305

mission of, 237-239

Eliezer (cont.)

said to have been a slave (son?) of Nimrod, 202 n119

saved from Laban by pronouncing the Name, 241 n292

as son of Ham, 242 n306

story of ark related to, by Shem, 147 strength of 318 men, 195

traveling to Haran, 239

Eliezer (Tanna, son of R. Simon bar Yohai), 1008

Elijah imparting secrets of Torah
to, 1018

Eliezer, R.

as descendant of Moses, 617

father of R. Israel Baal Shem Tov hospitality of, 1019

informed by Elijah of birth of son, 1019

Eliezer b. Hyrcanus, R.,

Elijah advising R. Eliezer to study with R. Johanan b. Zakkai, 1011 pronounced correct by heavenly voice, 1010

Eliezer b. Parata, R.

Elijah making R. Eliezer disappear,
1004-1005 n51

Elihoreph

and Ahijah

Solomon's two scribes, strange
death of, 979

Elihu (son of Barachel)

identified with Balaam, 460 n32 identified with Isaac, 261, 460 n32

as instrument of Satan, 462 n33

one of four friends of Job, 459-460 (see also Job: four friends
of)

prophet to heathens, 761

speech of, inspired by Satan, 460-461

Elijah the Prophet

and Abiathar (an Amora)

E. explaining to A. about Eph-raimite and concubine, 1010 ability of, to assume various appearances, 1001

accusing Israel before God, 995
and Ahab

E. hiding from A., 993-994

generation of A. not revealing hiding place of E. and 100
prophets, 989 n35

meeting in house of Hiel, 993

Ahijah of Shilo as teacher of, 996
n3

Elijah the Prophet (cont.)

and angel, 1000 n38, 1000 n39, 1001

E. as angel before earthly career, 996 superiority of E. to angel, 1004

n47

and angel of death, 1016-1018

angel of death having no power over E., 999 n25

E. rescuing people from angel of
death, 1016

struggle between, 995-996

and animals

animals noticing presence of E., 1006 n61

E. understanding language of
animals, 1004

apocalyptic writings about, 1009
n70

appearance of

in dreams

to Calif Al-Mutadhid, 1013
n93

to Sultan Sulaiman I, 1013
n93

to R. Joseph, Gaon of Pum-bedita, daily, 1012 n75

assisting poor, 1001-1004

birthplace of, village near Cairo, 1013 n93

bringing about famine, 997 n5

as punishment of Ahab, 993

reconciliation between husband and wife, 1003

reconciliation between R. Judah ha-Nasi and R. H̄ayyah, 1003 bringing souls of sinners from Gehenna at Sabbath, 996

as brother of Enoch-Metatron,
1000 n40

and caravan of 4,000 camels, 1008
n63

celestial body of, 1000 n39

E. receiving, 999 n32

as censor, 1006

as "certain old scholar" in Talmud,
1012 n75

chair of, at ceremony of circumcision, 1020 n103

Christian legends about

E. and anti-Christ, 1022 n113

E. to be killed by anti-Christ,
131 n61

and circumcision

E. zealous for observance of, 999
n25

Elijah the Prophet (cont.)

commanding sun to stand still, 995 concerned to establish oral law, 1011 conjured up to give aid to women in childbirth against Lilith and witches, 1020 n100 and conversations with sages and saints, 1009-1013, 1013 n93 daily duty of, to awaken patriarchs for prayers, 1010 descendant of Gad, 286, 288-289 n183
 description of, 997 n5
   as hairy man, 997 n5
 disciple(s) of, 1026-1027 n1
   Elisha as, 1025-1027
 disguised as Arab, 1003, 1005 n56, 1008 n63
   beggar, 1006
   receiving hospitality of R. Eliezer, 1019 courtier Harbonah in time of Ahasuerus, 1000
 harlot, 1004 n47
 horseman to R. Shimi bar Ashi, 1003 old man, 1012 n75, 1020 n103 ordinary man, Arab, horseman, Roman court-official, harlot, 1001 Persian, 1001
 Rabbi, 1011
 R. Hayyah to R. Judah, 1003 double exclamation of, 998 n19
 elder from tribe of Zebulun, 696
 and Elisha
   Elijah appointing Elisha as successor, 995, 999 n25
   Elisha as disciple of Elijah, 1025-1027
 and Elkanah
   Elijah appearing as old man to reveal secrets, 1018
   Elijah taking Elkanah to tomb of patriarchs and heavenly academy, 1018
 Esther's intentions made known by Elijah at banquet, 1010 eulogy "remembered to good" added to name of, 996 n1
 famine in time of, 189
 fed by ravens, 48, 997 n7
   rationalistic explanation of, 997 n6

Elijah the Prophet (cont.)

and God
   God instructing E. about destiny of man, 995-996
   God showing E. three classes of angels (angels of storm, wind, and fire), 999 n30 great order of (unknown work by E.), 1009 n70 Harbonah identified with, 1177 n182
 having wings, 1001
 in heaven
   E. living in heaven for all time, 996
 as heavenly scribe, 100 n142, 1126 n50
   E. recording deeds of men and chronicles of world, 996
     every marriage, 1000 n35
     good deeds of those who observe Sabbath, 1000 n38
   E. reporting earthly events in heavenly regions, 1011
 holding "key of rain," 997 n12
 on Horeb hearing what Raziel calls down to earth, 614
 identified with Harbonah, 1004 n45
   Khadir, by Arabs, 996 n3
   Phinehas, 892 n25, 993, 996 n3, 1000 n35, 1013 n93
 inflicting punishment on pious, 1017 n97 inhabitant of Jabesh-Gilead, 996 n2
 irascibility of, 1027 n5
 John the Baptist identified with, 1021 n106
 and Kabbalah, 1018-1020
   E. conversing with masters of Kabbalah, 1005 n52
   Maltiel as teacher of Elijah, in Kabbalah, 505 n117
 last act of, to slay Sammael and banish evil, 1021 letter of, to Jehoram, seven years after translation, 1000 life and work of, during reigns of Ahab and Joram, 993-996
 and Messiah
   E. as companion of Messiah in Paradise, 73 n67
   E. as competitor of Messiah, 306 n275

Elijah the Prophet (cont.)

and Messiah (cont.)
   E. as forerunner of Messiah, 825 n930, 1020-1023
     of tribe of Joseph, 997 n9
   E. as Messiah, 100 n142, 1021 n105
   E. as one of eight princes forming cabinet of Messiah, 1021
   E. as one of four Messiahs, 1021 n105
   E. as one of names of Messiah, 1021 n105
   E. as one of princes who assist Messiah, 100 n142
   E. consoling Messiah during exile, 1022 n115
   E. to anoint Messiah, 1022 n112
   E. to introduce Messiah, 1021
   E. writing down good deeds of man, 1000 n35 Messianic activity of on great judgment day, 1021 relation of E. to Moses in Messianic time, 1020 to appear at end of time, 408, 514 to be expounder of law, 1020 to begin three days before coming of Messiah, 1020-1021
   to blow trumpet, 1021, 1120 n25
   to destroy foundations of heathens, 823 to destroy prince of Edom, 306 n275 to establish peace and harmony in world, 1020 to fetch rod of Aaron in future and hand it to Messiah, 730 to induce Israel to repent, 1020 to order coming time and restore tribes of Jacob, 1020 to restore purity of family, 1021 n107 to restore three concealed objects (three jugs: one filled with manna, one with water from well of Miriam, and one with sacred oil), 573, 574 n112 to slaughter angel of Edom, 304 to solve all differences of opinion, 1020

Elijah the Prophet (cont.)

Michael revealing secrets concerning Messianic times to, 1009 n70 miracles of bringing Israel back to God, 998 n18
   during life, eight in number, 1025
 name, 996 n1
   defective spelling of, 257 n35
 names and titles of Abba Elijah (father Elijah), 1013 n90 disciple of Moses, 996 n3
   harbinger of good tidings, 1022 n111
   man of God, 838 n965
   righteous one, 1015 n94
   Sandalfon as angel name of, 996 never marrying, 996 n2
 and 100 prophets hiding place of, not revealed by generation of Ahab, 989 n35
 one of seven with overlapping life terms, 982 n4
 one of those called "man of God" in Scripture, 838 n965 (see also man of God)
 and Paradise
   E. as Psychopomp, guiding pious to appointed places in Paradise, 996 entering Paradise alive, 73 n67, 122 n58, 132 n62, 999 n32, 1000 n34 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
   in fifth division of Paradise, 20
   in hall of gold in Paradise, 23 n97
 participation of
   in deliverance of Jews from hands of Haman, 1004 n45 performing services of sexton, 1004 Phinehas
   identified with E., 783, 885 n140 son of Eleazar identified with, 860 n19
 as physician, 1003
   in story about woman with animal face, 1006 n59
 and pious
   E. sustaining courage of, 1003
   prayer of, 998 n18

Elijah the Prophet (cont.)

present at every ceremony of circumcision, 1020 n103
 as priest, 993
 as prophet
   E. retaining consciousness in moments of prophecy, 612 n242 punished for revealing heavenly secrets, 1013 n84
 and R. Akiba, 1003
   E. finding burial place for R. Akiba, 1004
 and R. bar Abbahu
   E. taking R. bar Abbahu to Paradise to save him from poverty, 1001-1002 and R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon E. as teacher of, 1009 n65
 and R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus E. advising R. Eliezer to study with R. Johanan b. Zakkai, 1011 and R. Eliezer b. Parata
   E. making R. Eliezer disappear, 1004-1005 n51 and R. Elijah Wilna, 1020 n104
 and R. Jose, 1008
   E. imparting regulations concerning prayer to R. Jose, 1012 n76
   E. teaching R. Jose meaning of Scriptural passage about woman as helpmeet of man, 1010
 and R. Joshua b. Levi
   E. getting R. Joshua interview with Messiah, 1012
   E. granting any wish of R. Joshua, 1014
   E. showing R. Joshua precious stones of Messianic time, 1011-1012
   R. Joshua as favorite of E., 1012
   story of journeys together, 1014-1015
   appearing in Koran, 1015 n94
 and R. Judah
   E. communicating three maxims to R. Judah, 1010
 and R. Judah ha-Nasi
   E. attending R. Judah's academy daily, 1010
 and R. Kahana
   E. rescuing R. Kahana, 1001
 and R. Meir
   E. saving R. Meir from Romans, 1001

Elijah the Prophet (cont.)

and R. Nahum
   E. saving R. Nahum from execution in Rome, 1001 and R. Nathan
   E. advising R. Nathan never to fill self with food and drink, 1012-1013 n82 and R. Nehorai, 1012 n77
   E. explaining earthquakes to R. Nehorai, 1010
   E. explaining purpose of noxious insects to R. Nehorai, 1010 relieving mental pain and anguish, 1017 n97
 reproached by widow of Zarephath, 997 n10 returning souls of sinners to Gehenna after Sabbath, 996 reviving dead person, 1027 n3, 1029 n14, 1030 n21
 riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
 and righteous to flee to desert for 45 days before Messiah comes, 1022 n112 running to patriarchs and prophets lamenting edict of Ahasuerus, 1159 sacrificing on altar erected by Saul, 997 n13
 and Sammael struggle between, on day of judgment, 999 n33
 as sandek at circumcision ceremony, 1020 n103 severity of, and R. Anan, 1007 showing special vigilance in Talmudic times, 1000-1001 sitting under tree of life, 1000 n38
 small order of (unknown work by E.), 1009 n70
 story of destruction of Jerusalem, 1015 n94
   E. being sold as slave, 1002
   man and money on Sabbath, 1005 n58 man and spice garden and three sons, 1003-1004 man lacking intelligence and wisdom, 1011 offering of twin bullocks, 994
   pious man misled by female demon, 1017 n97

Elijah the Prophet (cont.)story of (cont.)

- poor scholar at Passover, 1005 n56
- rescuing R. Shila, 1001
- seven years of good fortune for man and wife, 1002
- two brothers, 1006
- two shekels and poor pious man, 1003
- would-be cattle buyer, 1007-1008
- young man and seven years of slavery, 1017-1018 n97
- young woman whose husbands died day after wedding, 1016
- stubbornness of, to God, 994
- subject to own wrath and zeal, 1025
- teachings of theodicy, 1014-1016 and Torah
  - devotion of E. to study of Torah, 1011
- translation of, 996
  - E. after translation, 1000-1006
  - E. before, 993-1000
- prophetic spirit vanishing at, 1025
- shown to Jacob, 277
- traversing world with four strokes, 1004 n46
- of tribe of Gad, 823, 825 n929, 996 n3
- and tribes of Gad, Benjamin, and Levi
  - E. claimed by, 996 n3
- and two pious brothers, 1007
- as witness, 122 n58
- wrath of, 995
- zeal of
  - for circumcision, 1020 n103
  - for purity of family, 1000 n35
- and Zerubbabel
  - Messiah to ascend Mount of Olives with E. and Z., 1120 n25
  - to explain all obscure passages of Torah in time to come, 1120 n25

Elijah Wilna, R.

- interactions with Elijah the Prophet, 1020 n104
- opponent of R. Israel Baal Shem Tov, 1020 n104

Elim

- abundance of water and vegetation at, according to Philo, 568 n86

Elim (cont.)

- appearance of wonderful bird at, 568 n88
- Israel journeying to, in wilderness, 567
- lack of water at, 567
- study of law first taken up at, 567
- 12 wells of water at, made by God at creation, 567

Elimelech

- avarice as sin of, 864 n40
- pictured as bramble, 874 n103
- son of Nahshon, 864 n34
- and sons
  - in aristocracy of Israel, 862
- burial of, by Boaz, 863
- leaving Israel for Moab in time of famine, 862

Eliphaz (king of Teman)

- addressing Job, 459
- announcing damnation of Elihu, instrument of Satan, 461
- identified with Eliphaz, son of Esau, 323, 456 n14
- one of four friends of Job, 459-460 (see also Job: friends of)
- as prophet to heathens, 761
- speech of, to Job, 323
- thanking God for forgiveness, 461

Eliphaz (son of Esau)

- and Amalek
  - E. partly responsible for destruction of A., 582
- E. to be blamed for neglecting education of A., 580 n138
- having sexual relations with father's wife, 324 n319
- identified with Eliphaz, friend of Job, 323, 324 n319
- and Jacob
  - E. and Esau pursuing J., 274-276
  - E. as pupil of J., 321, 324 n318
  - E. sparing J., 275
- Eliphaz swearing to Esau to kill J. to regain birthright, 580 n138

Elisha

- always helping poor and needy, 1025
- assisting widow of Obadiah, 1025-1026
- birthplace of, Abel-meholah ("mourning-dance"), 1026 n1
- cursing those who sold water, 1025
- death and burial of
  - corpse of, reviving dead, 1030, 1030 n21

Elisha (cont.)death and burial of (cont.)

- resulting in first invasion by Arameans, 1030
- declining gifts offered by Naaman, 423 n430
- disciples of, 1026-1027 n1
  - numbering many thousands, 1031
- disease of, 1030 n20
  - E. as first to survive disease, 1030
  - as punishment for excessive severity toward Gehazi and mocking boys of Jericho, 1030
  - as punishment for yielding to passion, 1025

and Elijah

- Elisha appointed as successor of Elijah, 995
- Elisha as disciple of Elijah, 1025-1027

famine in time of, 189

and Gehazi

- pseudepigraphic work about, 1030 n17

Jehoshaphat consulting, 986-987 miracles of

- crossing Jordan River, as first of 16 miracles, 1025
- healing waters of Jericho, second of 16 miracles, 1025
- 16 in number, 1025
- one of those called "man of God" in Scripture, 838 n965 (see also man of God)
- period of activity of, 60 years, 1031

prophetic spirit of, strengthened at translation of Elijah, 1025

reviving dead

- reviving son of Shunammite, 1028
- reviving two dead, 1029 n14, 1030 n21

subject to own wrath and zeal, 1025

Elisha b. Abuyah

- as teacher of R. Meir, 1011

Elishama

- elder from tribe of Naphtali, 696
- name, meaning of ("he obeyed Me"), 679, 681 n424
- prince of tribe of Ephraim, 679
- son of Ammihud ("Me he honored"), 679

Elisheba

- daughter of Amminadab and Aaron's wife, 661
- five joys of, 661
  - brother-in-law Moses being king, 661
  - brother Nahshon being prince of tribe, 661
  - grandson Phinehas being priest of war, 661
  - husband Aaron being high priest, 661
  - son Eleazar being head of priests, 661
- happiest of women, 661
- identified with Puah, 470 n17
- as one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271

Elizaphan

- husband of Ethema, 859

Elizur

- name, meaning of ("my God is a rock"), 679
- prince of tribe of Reuben, 679
- son of Shedeur ("cast into the fire"), 679

Elkanah

- author of Peliah and Kanah, 1018
- deciphering mysterious characters on fiery rock, 1018
- and Elijah
  - Elijah appearing as old man to reveal secrets, 1018
  - Elijah taking Elkanah to tomb of patriarchs and heavenly academy, 1018
  - Elkanah learning mysteries from Elijah, 1018
- equal in importance to 31 pious men, 888 n3
- and Hannah, 887-889
  - endowed with gift of prophecy, 887
- making three pilgrimages each year, 887
- as man of God, 893 n28
- as man of moderate means, 888 n4
- one of those called "man of God" in Scripture, 838 n965 (see also man of God)
- prophesying to Eli the misfortune to come upon Eli's family, 891
- as second Abraham, 887
- stimulating people to make pilgrimages to Shiloh, 887
- virtues of, 887

ell (unit of linear measure), 33, 119

- See also* measures; weights and measures; and under names of individual units

Elohim

- name of God when acting as Judge, 510 (see also God: names and titles of)
- one of two sacred names of God, 643
- standing for God's severity, 150 n46

Elon

- elder from tribe of Zebulun, 696
- king of Gaash, slain by Levi, 314

Elon the Hittite

- father of Adah, Esau's second wife, 271

El Shaddai. See God: names and titles of

Elul (month)

- as "full" month of 30 days in year of Ezra's return, 1125 n49
- Gideon conquering Midianites and Amalekites in, 1151
- new moon of, Moses returning to heaven for 40 days, 632
- war of Israel against Midianites taking place in, 873 n100
- war of Israel against Sihon taking place in, 752 n666, 753
- See also* date

Eluma (daughter of Remac, mother of Samaon)

- responsible for childlessness, 879 n111

Elyoram (daughter of Canaanite Uzzi of Timnah)

- marriage of, to Reuben, 347

Elzaphan (Levite cousin of Aaron)

- attending funeral of Nadab and Abihu, 663

embalming

- corpse of Jacob, for 40 days, 412
- displeasing to God, 412

embryo

- differentiation of sex in, 57 n20
- instruction of, by heavenly hosts, 58 n20
- male changed into female in Leah's womb, 287
- refusal of soul to enter, 57 n20
- soul of, knowing and seeing everything, 58 n20

emerald(s)

- on ephod of Pharaoh, 364
- making owner victorious in battle, 651

emerald(s) (cont.)

- on Solomon's throne, 968
- stone of tribe of Judah in breastplate of Aaron, 651
- See also* precious stones
- emet* ("truth")
  - alef removed from, yielding met ("dead"), 1084 n42
  - written on Adam's forehead, 1084 n42

Emim

- name, meaning of, 137
- as offspring of fallen angels and Cainite women, 137

Emtelai (daughter of Karnabo)

- malady of, 169, 170 n10
- marrying Terah, 168
- name, meaning of, 169 n6

Emtelai (Haman's mother), 1147 n93

Emzaru (Noah's wife), 113 n42

end of time

- coming of, 20
- as mystery, 409-410 n383
- secret of, taken from Isaac and Jacob by Shekinah, 406
- See also* Messianic time(s)

En-dor

- witch of, 900

En-Gedi

- wine required for libations coming from, 709 n519

En Mishpat

- name, meaning of ("fountain of justice"), 734

Enoch (city)

- built by Cain, 111

Enoch (last son of Reuben)

- attacking Edom to west, 321

Enoch (son of Jared, father of Methuselah), 122-124

- adorned by God, 129-130
- and angels
  - E. as ruler over angels, 123
  - E. brought to heaven by Samuil, 126
  - E. changed into angel after translation, 130 n61, 1000 n40
  - E. having sexual intercourse with angels in heaven, 121 n58, 127 n60
  - E. with angel watchers and holy ones, 119
- appearing before Lord, 125-126
- ascension of, 124-129 (see also Enoch: translation of)
- carried to heaven in fiery chariot, 123

Enoch (cont.)

ascension of (cont.)
 taken to heaven from Achuzan, 127
 attributes of, 129
 body of, turned into celestial fire, 130 book(s) of, 126, 127-128 n60
 and Book of Raziël, 142
 born on 6 Sivan, 127
 Christian legends about, 131 n61
     E. to be killed by anti-Christ, 131 n61 conversation with God, 120
 death of, 122 n58
 description of, 129
 as father of astronomy, 123 n59
     calendation, 123 n59
 finding Adam and Eve, 128 n60
 in heaven
     in first heaven, 124
     in second heaven, 124
     in third heaven, 124
     in fourth heaven, 125
     in seventh heaven, 122 n58
     as heavenly scribe, 100 n142, 122 n58, 1126 n50 identified with Metatron, 129, 130 n61 (see also Enoch-Metatron; Metatron; Metatron-Enoch) influence of, prevailing for 243 years, 122
 as inventor of science and knowledge, 121 n58
 life span of, 132 n64
 as "little Lord," 130
 living in seclusion, 119, 122, 123
 marriage of, to sister, 113 n42
 one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
 one of seven pious men in pre-Abrahamic times, 116-117 n53 (see also under pious: men)
 as one of shepherds who assist Messiah, 100 n142
 and Paradise
     E. entering Paradise alive, 73 n67, 122 n58, 131 n61, 132 n62 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
     Paradise as abode of E., 122 n58
 and revelation
     E. as bearer of revelation, 102 n1, 127 n60
 righteousness of, 129

Enoch (cont.)

at right hand of God, 450 (see also God: right hand of)
 as ruler
     over angels, 123
     over men, 123
 as scribe of justice, 119
 as seventh since Adam who pleased God, 122 n58
 as son of Cain, 111, 112 n40
 stature of, 129
 as teacher, 122-123, 126
 as third of seven pious men, 682 (see also under pious: men) three sons of, 127 n60
 and Torah
     E. receiving knowledge of Torah from Seth, 152 n51
     E. transmitting knowledge of Torah to Shem, 152 n51 translation of, 129-131 (see also Enoch: ascension of) because of sinfulness of men, 129 on day of his birth, 128 n60
     into Paradise, 121-122 n58
     on 6 Sivan, 127
 vision of, 124
 as witness, 122 n58
 Enoch (son of Nimrod) identified as Hiwwar ("the leper"), killed by Esau, 258 n38 Enoch-Metatron, 128 n60
     as angel of face, 122 n58
     See also Enoch; Metatron-Enoch Enosh (son of Seth), 117-119
     as ancestor of Enoch, 126
     generation of
         as first idol worshipers, 117 punishment of, by flood, 117
         three sins of, 118 n55
         three visitations of, 118 n55
         wicked, 118 n54
     and idolatry
         E. as originator of idolatry, 118 n54, 119 n56
         E. forming clay image, 117
     name, meaning of, 118 n54
     one of seven pious men in pre-Abrahamic times, 116-117 n53 (see also under pious: men)
     as type of the pious, 118 n54 envy
     one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy) Envy (demon)
     having all limbs of man but without head, coming before Solomon, 963

Epher (grandson of Abraham and Keturah)

Africa named after, 243 invading Lybia, 243
 Ephlāl (grandson of Ishmael), 348
 ephod
     of Aaron
         atoning for idolatry, 650
         having two precious stones, one on each shoulder, 650 one of eight priestly garments of Aaron, 650 (see also under Aaron) set with precious stones, 650
     golden, of Pharaoh, 364 Ephraim
     descendant of Joshua, 404
     descendants of called Ephrati, 405
         seducing Israel to idolatry, 403
         to include King Jeroboam, 317
     as head of academy, 405
     humility of, 406 n376
     and Jacob
         E. being instructed in Torah by J., 402
         E. receiving special and separate blessing from J., 405
         J. giving birthright to E., 404
     and Manasseh adopted by Jacob, 403
         birth of
             announced to Jacob by God, 317
             E. preceding M., 404
         blessing of, 402-406
         sons of Asenath and Joseph, 368
         superiority of E. to M., 405 n367
         to be founders of tribes, 317
     and Manasseh and Benjamin tribes of colors of standard of, 686
     tribe of
         addicted to worship of idol called Sibboleth, 877 n109 battle of, against Philistines at Gath, 547 compared with fish, 404
         confessing to sacrificing children to Moloch, 856 corpses of, remaining on ground at Gath for many years, 547 flag of black with picture of Egypt and bull, 688
         following Ganon in attempt to leave Egypt, 547

Ephraim (cont.)

- tribe of (cont.)
  - lisp of, 404, 406 n375
  - murder common among, 877 n109
  - offering human sacrifices to Baal, 877 n109
  - one of four standard-bearers, 685
  - prince of
    - bringing offering on Sabbath, 666
    - Elishama, 679
  - punishment of, for trying to leave Egypt, 547
  - significance of dedication offering of, 668
  - spy representing (Hoshea), 706
  - standard of
    - in form of fish, 686, 689 n447
    - inscription on, 686
- Ephraimites. See Ephraim: tribe of
- Ephrath
  - place of Rachel's sepulchre, 337
- Ephrathi
  - haggadic interpretations of, 888 n1
- Ephrati
  - as descendants of Ephraim, 405
- Ephron
  - Abraham acquiring Cave of Machpelah from, 235
  - chief of children of Heth, 235
- Epiphanes (son of Antiochus)
  - shipping Solomon's throne from Egypt to Greece, 1131 n13
- epispasm
  - Esau and, 254 n24
  - See also* circumcision
- epispasmos*
  - one of crimes of Achan, 847 n25
- Epistle of Jeremiah, 1071 n15
- Er (firstborn son of Judah), 344
  - age of, at marriage, 7 years, 346 n82
  - death of
    - E. killed by angel on third day after wedding, 344
    - one year after marriage, 346 n82
  - marrying Tamar, daughter of Aram, son of Shem, 344
  - name, meaning of ("the childless"), 344
  - and Onan
    - difference in age of, 346 n82
  - sin of, 346 n79
- erelim (angels)
  - in third heaven, 503

Eretz (seventh earth), 6, 109

- Cain in, 109-110
- error
  - one of seven evils, 450
- Esau
  - adultery of, 283
  - age of
    - at Abraham's death, 258 n37
    - when married, 40, 282
  - associating with two pious men, 579
  - birthmark of, sign of serpent, 253
  - birth of, 251-255
    - blood-red, 253
    - E. causing injury to Rebekah's womb, 254 n16
    - first with all impurity, 253
    - with hair, beard, and teeth, 253
  - and birthright
    - E. cursed by God for selling birthright, 258
    - E. losing birthright, 579
    - E. making son Eliphaz swear to kill Jacob to regain birthright, 580 n138
    - E. scorning birthright, 257
    - E. selling birthright to Jacob, 257-259, 285
  - blessing of, by Isaac, 264
  - burial of
    - in Adorah, 322 n317
    - E. demanding burial place in Cave of Machpelah, 414
    - headless corpse of E. returned to Mount Seir, 415
  - children of, refusing Torah, 593
  - and circumcision
    - E. called "uncircumcised one," 254 n24
    - E. rejecting, 254 n24
    - E. remaining uncircumcised, 253
    - legend that E. underwent epispasm, 254 n24
  - committing lewdness and murder, 257, 579
  - compared to swine, 282-283
  - conflict with sons of Jacob, 414
  - conspiring with Ishmael, 273
  - cunning and deceit of, 261
  - death of
    - in Adora, 321
    - legend about, 415 n422
  - deceitfulness of, 273 n109
  - denying God, 257, 259 n48
  - denying resurrection, 257, 579

Esau (cont.)

- descendants of, 322-325 (see also Esau: sons of)
  - Anah, 323-324
  - choosing Bela as king, 416
  - cut off from world, 258
  - despising Abrahamic covenant, 254 n24
  - dominion over world of, 259 n51
  - Eliphaz as firstborn and most worthy, 322-323
  - rejecting Torah, 625 n276
  - rewarded for E.'s filial love, 265-266, 927 n77
  - Romans as, 254 n15, 259 n51
  - as rulers of Rome, 254 n19
  - served by descendants of Jacob, 258
- despising priestly service, 258
- and dietary laws, 270 n100
- dominion of, over world
  - for merits of Abraham, 259 n51
  - (see also Abraham: merits of; merits)
  - as reward for love of Isaac, 259 n51
- emigrating from Holy Land, 328 n2
- esteemed by contemporaries, 324 n320
- filial piety of, 267 n77, 298 n240, 756 n706
- five crimes of, on day of Abraham's death (murder, rape, rejecting resurrection of the dead, scorn of birthright, denial of God), 257
- garments of, high-priestly raiment of Adam, 265
- giving up share in world to come, 259 n43 (see also world to come: those having no share in)
- gluttony of, 259 n45
- grievous sin of, 271 n105
- guardian angel of, Sammael, 254 n15
- hairiness of, 265
- hand and sword of, 736
- having evil eye, 264
- head of, rolling into Cave of Machpelah onto lap of Isaac, 414
- house of, to be destroyed by house of Joseph, 290
- and hunting, 257, 259 n51, 261, 269, 270 n100

Esau (cont.)

- hypocrisy of, 255
- identified with Rome, 254 n15, 254 n19, 263 n69, 305 n271
  - as swine in rabbinic literature, 284 n162
- idolatry of, 255
- immorality of, 255
- impious way of life of, 199
  - for two years in secret before death of Abraham, 259 n48
- inheritance of
  - E. wanting to be only heir, 271
- and Isaac
  - E. as I.'s blemished offspring, 406
  - E. giving I. forbidden food, 255, 270 n100
  - E. planning to murder I. and Jacob, 271, 273, 273 n109
  - E.'s love for I., 258, 259 n51
  - E. winning I.'s love, 255
  - I. bestowing power of sword on E., 263 n69
  - I.'s blessing of E., 270, 271 n104
- and Jacob
  - birth order of, 254 n22
  - compared to wolf and ram, 303
  - dialogue between, about resurrection, 257-258
  - disagreeing about material world and world to come, 252
  - division of two worlds of, 307 n276
  - E. acknowledging rights of J., 320
  - E. and Eliphaz pursuing J., 274-276
  - E. breaking oath he swore to J., 320, 322 n316
  - E. envying blessing of J., 819
  - E. exchanging messages with J., 295-296
  - E. hating J. on account of blessing, 271
  - E. killed during burial of J., 272
  - E. mortally wounded in thigh by J., 321
  - E. not acknowledging J.'s superiority, 322 n316
  - E. planning to murder Isaac and J., 271, 273, 273 n109
  - E. planning to murder J. while J. grieving for Isaac, 415 n422
  - E.'s anger at J., 271

Esau (cont.)

- and Jacob (cont.)
  - E.'s campaign against J., 319-322
  - E. selling birthright to J., 257-259, 285
  - E. selling claim to burial site in Cave of Machpelah to J., 258, 414
  - E.'s eyes falling out of sockets onto J.'s knees, 414
  - E.'s guardian angel weaker than J.'s, 254 n15
  - E.'s resemblance to J. as reason for sons of J. not killing E., 415 n422
  - E. stealing wealth of J., 276 n124
  - E.'s war against J., 320
  - E. wanting to bite J., 303
  - J. giving red wine to E., 259 n45
  - meeting between, 302-307
  - quarreling in womb, 252, 253-254 n13
    - as two nations in womb, 252
  - youth of, 255-257
- Joseph as opposite of, 579
- killed
  - during burial of Jacob, 272
  - by Hushim (son of Dan), 414
  - by Judah, 415 n422
- legend about, that E. had long teeth, adaptation of Og legend, 305 n263
- marriage of
  - to daughters of Canaanites, as abomination, 263 (see also Canaanite wives; marriage[s])
  - to Judith, daughter of Heth, 283
  - to Mahalath, daughter of Ishmael, 273
  - to ungodly daughter of Ishmael, 274 n121
- and Methuselah's sword, 132 n63
- moving to land of Seir, 271
- name, meaning of, 253, 255 n28
- as nation owning sin, 252
- nearness of hell to, 269
- and Nimrod
  - Esau killing Enoch, son of Nimrod, 258 n38
  - E. killing N.
    - on day of Abraham's death, 257
    - in duel, 259 n38
  - E. putting on garments of Adam in order to kill N., 259 n38

Esau (cont.)

- and Nimrod (cont.)
  - feud between, 257, 259 n38
  - not to behold majesty of Lord, 414
  - one of five men wicked from first to last, 1044 n39
- portion of
  - chosen on advice of Ishmael, 322 n316
  - chosen on advice of Nebaioth, 322 n316
  - money and material possessions of Isaac, 320
- pretending to be pious, 284 n162
- punishment of, for denying God and resurrection, 258
- pursuing evil inclinations in secret, 257
- ravishing betrothed maiden, 257
- refusing to learn, 261
- rejoicing at report of Joseph's death, 393 n293
- residing in Mount Seir, 320
- rewarded for
  - departing from Palestine with 100 cities in Seir, 322 n316
  - kindness to Isaac, 755
- Samael as ally of, 252
- Sammael disguised as, 306 n273
- Satan accompanying on hunt, 264-265
- scorning promise to give Holy Land to seed of Abraham, 258
- seven abominations of, 268 n77
- seven holy places destroyed by (Tabernacle; sanctuaries at Gilgal, Shiloh, Nob, and Gibeon; and First and Second Temple), 264
- sons of (see also Esau: descendants of)
  - appointing foreign kings over selves, 417 n424
  - appointing Jobab of Bozrah to succeed king Bela, 416
  - dividing land of Seir, 416
  - fleeing from sons of Jacob, 321
  - slaying all inhabitants of Seir except 50 lads and maidens, 416
  - to be judged by Messiah, 1090 n57
  - was of
    - allied with Agnias against sons of Seir, 415, 416

Esau (cont.)

- sons of (cont.)
- wars of (cont.)
  - allied with Agnias and Ishmaelites in second campaign against sons of Jacob, 416
  - defeated by Joseph at Raamses, 416
  - against Joseph and brothers, 415
  - victory in battle in desert of Paran, 416
- sword of, legends concerning, 922 n59
- to wrap self in prayer shawl (tallit), 284 n162
- true character of, 269-271
- weeping of, 270, 271 n104 (see also crying; tears; weeping)
- wives of
  - Basemath as second wife, 271
  - double names of, 274 n122
  - E. not separating from Canaanite wives, 274 n121 (see also Canaanite wives; marriage[s])
  - idolatry of, 263, 267 n73
  - Judith of family of Ham, 262
- and world
  - E. ruling over, 252, 257
  - E. to enjoy goods of, 270, 307 n276
  - E. to inherit, 322 n316
- See also* Edom
- escaped, the
  - Michael as, 194, 196 n90
  - Og as, 196 n90
  - Palit (angel) as, 194
- Esh (fire)
  - name of man if God withdraws His Name, 66
- Eshcol (Eshkol)
  - at Abraham's banquet, 205
  - advice of, to Abraham concerning circumcision, 202
  - at burial of Sarah, 235
  - disciple of Abraham, 197 n92
- esophagus
  - one of 12 guides of men, swallowing food and drink, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men)
- Esther, 1129-1180
  - adorned with holy spirit, 1166
  - age of, when coming to court 40 or 80 years, 1144 n68

Esther (cont.)

- age of, when coming to court (cont.)
  - 75 years, 1141
  - fulfillment of promise to Abraham, 1141-1142
- and Ahasuerus
  - E. inviting A. and Haman to banquet, 1167
  - female spirit in guise of E., as wife of A., 1143
- assisted by three angels, 1167
- beauty and piety of, 1141-1144
- E. as ideal of beauty, 60 n24
- birth of
  - causing death of mother, 1141
- as descendant of royal family of Saul, 1145
- description of, 1141-1142
- eating only food permitted to Jews, 1142
- Hadassah another name for, 1141
- intentions of, known by Elijah at banquet, 1010
- interceding for Jews, 1166-1169
- keeping descent and faith secret, 1143-1144
- as last ruler of Israel, 409
- loved by celestials as well as terrestrials, 1144 n68
- marriage of
  - with Gentile, 1139 n54
- modesty of, 1142
- and Mordecai
  - coins struck with figures of E. and M., 1176
  - communications between, 1162, 1164 n138
  - E. as niece of M., 1139
  - E. as orphan taken in by M. and wife, 1141
  - E. as wife of M., 1143, 1164 n141
  - E. concealed by M. for four years, 1139
- name, meaning of ("she who conceals"), 1129, 1130 n1, 1141
- one of four most beautiful women in history, 940, 941 n132
- one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
- as orphan, 1141, 1142
- prayer of, 1164-1166
- seven Jewish attendants of, 1142
- names related to seven days of creation, 1143

Esther (cont.)

- to make up for transgressions of Saul, 1163
- virtues of, 1179
- wealth and power of, 1129
- Esther, Book of
  - canonicity of, 1179 n193
  - edited by men of Great Assembly, 1071 n15
  - edited or declared canonical by Great Synagogue, 1128 n56
  - incorporated into Holy Scripture at request of Esther, 1179
  - last of scriptural writings, 1129
- Esther, Fast of. See fast, three-day
- Esther, Scroll of. See Esther, Book of
- Etam
  - identified with Manohah, 878 n111
- Ethan
  - one of five scribes going with Ezra, 1122, 1125 n50
- Ethan the Ezrahite
  - identified with Abraham, 955 n19
  - wisdom of, Solomon's wisdom greater than, 949-950
- Ethema
  - oldest daughter of Kenaz, 859
- Ethiopia
  - conquered by Sennacherib, 1051 n65
  - Messiah to accept gifts offered by, 649
- Ethiopians
  - as descendants of Ham, 154
  - learning circumcision from Moses, 492 n80
  - led into exile by king of Assyria, 154
- etrog tree
  - Israel praising God with fruit of, on Sukkot, 1175
  - willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175
- See also* tree(s)
- eulogy "remembered to good" added to name(s) of
  - Elijah, 1004 n45
  - Elijah and Moses, 996 n1
  - Harbonah, 1004 n45
- eunuch(s)
  - Daniel as, 1097 n78
  - in Egypt, 349
  - Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah as, 1097 n78
- euphemisms
  - "eating bread" meaning sexual intercourse, 351 n103

Euphrates River

- banks of, one of places where
  - Joseph buried gold, silver, and precious stones, 397
- name, meaning of, 70 n51
- source of, beneath tree of life, 69
- water from, necessary to make mortar for founding of Rome, 948 n11

Eve

and Adam

- E. as A.'s serpent, 102 n3
- E. compared with A., 59
- E. created from third rib of A.'s right side, 67 n42
- E. forbidden by A. to touch tree, 71
- E. weeping after death of A., 98
- oath of E. to make A. eat fruit, 93
- prayer of E. to be buried with A., 98-99
- why E. not created at same time as A., 66 n38, 67 n40

adorned as bride, 66

and animals

- E. giving animals fruit of tree of knowledge, 34
- E. taking care of animals, 70 n57
- E. understanding language of animals, 68 n47
- female animals assigned to E., 92

beauty of, 59, 60 n24, 68 n47

bringing sin into world, 65

burial of

- by angels with Adam and Abel, 99

in Cave of Machpelah, 234

in Hebron, 98 n137

prepared for by Seth, 99

covering nakedness with fig leaves, 93

creation of

- as allegory, 67 n42
- on sixth day, 77
- from third rib of Adam's right side, 67 n42

death of, 98-100

six days after Adam, 98 n138

dream of, about Cain and Abel, 103

and fall

- story of, 92-96
- telling descendants story of, 91-94

and forbidden fruit

- E. taking forbidden fruit, 65

Eve (cont.)and forbidden fruit (cont.)

- oath of E., to make Adam eat, 93

garments of, made of hide of

- female Leviathan, 30 n123

name, meaning of, 68 n47, 102 n3

oath of, to make Adam eat fruit, 93

and Paradise

- E. as weaver of coverings in fifth division, 19-20

- E. entering when 80 days old, 81 n97

- E. going with Seth to gates of, 91

penance of, 86, 88 n106

hindered by Satan, 87

punishment of, 78 n81

number of penalties of, 79 n83

sentence pronounced on, 94

and Satan

- E. hindered by S. in her

penance, 87

having sexual intercourse, 101

and serpent

conversation between, 71

E. as serpent, 68 n47

E. blaming serpent, 94

having sexual intercourse, 102 n3

sexual union of, with male spirits, 115 n47

as "speaker," 68 n47

ten curses of, 76

west and south assigned to, 92

evil

deliverance from, by God, 428

God's final victory over, 306 n275

having appointed time to run its course, 1122

not found in God's proximity, 9 n22

represented by Leviathan, 306 n275

to be abolished in world to come, 306 n275

warded off by prayer, alms, and repentance, 1052 n75

evil eye

- as cause of death of Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, 1100 n92

Esau and, 264

of nations causing breaking of tablets, 661

of Sarah on Hagar, 201

of Sarah on Ishmael, 220

evil eye (cont.)

and sons of Jacob, 371

spell of, broken by priestly blessing, 660-661

evil impulse. See evil inclinationevil inclination (Yetzer ha-Ra)

admonition of Moses to drive away, 661 n380

Amalek identified with, in ## Kabbalah, 580 n141

animals and, 50 n6

born in man, 105 n14

Cain and, 104

created by God, 452

entering body

at time of birth, 61 n25

at time of conception, 105 n14

entering soul

40 days after conception, 61 n25

at time of conception, 61 n25

having no power over

Abraham, 237, 412

Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Aaron, Benjamin, Miriam, David, 412

David, 928, 939 n128

holding sway in this world, 563-564

identical with Sammael, 306 n275

injected into Eve by serpent, 95 n119

in man, 49-50 n6

not in angels, 49 n6

one of things God repented of creating, 141 n20

one of three things to be removed before advent of Messiah, 307 n275 (see also Messiah: advent of)

overcoming, 17 n66

as poison of serpent, 93

removed from people in direct communication with God, 611

slain by David, 939 n128

to be removed in world to come, 611

to be slain by God on day of judgment, 306 n275

to disappear in time to come, 1128 n57

turned into good inclination by Abraham, 939 n128

Evil-merodach

- as cosmocrator, 1050-1051, 1112 n2 (see also cosmocrator)

descendant of Baladan, 1050-1051

Evil-merodach (cont.)

father of Belshazzar, 1112 n2
 freeing Jehoiachin from prison,
 1063 n134, 1108 n116
 ruling while Nebuchadnezzar was beast, 1108
 son of Nebuchadnezzar, 1108
 three sons of (Regosar, Lebuzar Duk, Nabar [i.e., Belshazzar]), 1112 n2 evils, seven (bloodshed, corruptness, error, captivity, hunger, panic, devastation), 450
 evil spirits, 120
 becoming powerless when Israelites recite Shema, 775
 called "angels of Satan," 830 n946 and Divine goodness, 1 dwelling in desert, 324 n321
 invisibility of, 767 n743
 leading people astray, 167 Mastema as leader of, 167
 as offspring of Adam, 109 origin of, in giants, 120
 Samael as head of, 817
 and scholars
   evil spirits envious of scholars,
   305 n259
   evil spirits trying to attack scholars at night, 305 n259
See also angel(s), fallen; demon(s); devil(s); Mastema; Satan;
 spirit(s)
 exclusiveness
   accusations of, against Jews, 51 n8
 execution, methods of being stung by bees, 209
   stoning, 690
 exile, 1065-1109
   first Nebuchadnezzar exiling 300 of noblest people, including Ezekiel, 1061
   under Jehoiachin, 1096 n76
   Messiah consoled by Elijah during,
   1022 n115
   70 years of, fixed by Jeremiah,
   1131 n5
   under Zedekiah, 1096 n76
See also Babylonian exile exiles majority of, from tribes of Judah and Benjamin, 1123 n34
   Rachel interceding for, 403
   returning
     under Ezra, Nehemiah, Mordecai, Joshua, and Zerubbabel, 1121 n30

exiles (cont.)

returning (cont.)
   including Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, 1119
   several returns of, 1123 n34
   sins of, preventing miracles from being wrought, 1123 n36
   three in number, 1096 n76
 Exodus, the, 540-544
   beginning at Raamses, 542 Egyptians and Israelites compared to portly man riding ass, 542 five tokens granted to Israel after,
   565
   God's account of, to Uzza, 556-557 Israelites cured of diseases in, 542 number of people leaving Egypt, 542 provisions of Israelites lasting from 15 Nisan to 15 Iyar, 570
   n89
   for 61 meals, 570 n89
   for 30 days, 570 n89
   for 31 days, 569
   seven weeks from, to revelation on Sinai, 761 n723
   taking place at noon, 814
   taking place on Thursday, 549
   three calamities befalling Egypt on night of, 542 n230
   time of, Shekinah bringing Israelites to 600,000 in number, 393 n305
See also Egypt; Israel (nation;
 people)/Israelites: in Egypt;
 Israel (nation; people)/ Israelites: and Exodus
 exorcism taught to men by Shemhazai, 119
 eye(s)
   black of, enabling one to see, 677
   pupil of, one of five parts of body received from mother, 606
   two of ten orifices of man, 960
   white of, 677
     one of five parts of body received from father, 606
See also body, human Ezbon (son of Gad)
   name, meaning of, 433-434
 Ezekeel (fallen angel)
   teaching men augury from clouds, 119
 Ezekiel
   advising Hananiah, Mishaël, and Azariah to flee, 1098

Ezekiel (cont.)

as descendant of Rahab, 844 n12,
 1093 n65
 famine in Egypt in days of, lasting 40 years, 365
 in first exile of Nebuchadnezzar, 1061 heavens ordered to open before, 48
 and Jeremiah
   E. as son of Jeremiah, 1101 n93
   relationship between, 1093 n65
 and Jeremiah and Baruch fixing calendar outside Holy Land, 1083 n42
 one of eight postexilic prophets,
 991 n56
 one of five to give expected answer to God's questions (Adam, Cain, Balaam, Hezekiah),
 1102 n94
 one of four prophets appointed to proclaim punishment of descendants of Lot, 214
 people arguing with, 1101 n93 praised for strict observance of Law, 1102 n94
 punished for lack of faith, 1102 receiving revelation about future
 Temple, 1101 n93
 reviving dead, 1101-1103
   allegorical interpretation of,
   1102 n94
   of different classes of people, 1101 of Ephraimites who perished attempting to escape from Egypt before Exodus, 1101 of godless Jews who had not believed in resurrection, 1101 of godless Jews who had polluted Temple, 1101
   of handsome youths slaughtered
   by Nebuchadnezzar, 1102
   in valley of Dura, 1098
 story of martyrdom of, 1102 n94
 as teacher of Baruch, 1094
   Pythagoras, 1102 n94
 tomb of, 1094-1095
   adjoining that of Baruch, 1094 covered by mausoleum erected by King Jeconiah, 1094
   as scene of many miracles, 1094
 vision of, 1043 n36
   compared with that of Isaiah,
   1043 n36
   and dry bones, 1102

Ezekiel (cont.)vision of (cont.)

heavenly throne, 1101 n93

visiting Hiram of Tyre, 1105

Ezekiel, Book of edited or declared canonical by Great Synagogue, 1128 n56

men of Great Assembly as editors
of, 1071 n15

Ezra, 1121-1126

abolishing custom of having only Levites as officers of court,
1124 n37

as advocate of people with celestials, 1122

as author, compiler, or editor

E. and five companions (Haggai,
Zechariah, Malachi, Levite Shimur, Hezekiah), writing down Mishnah, 1125 n50

E. as compiler of books of Chronicles, 1120 n27

E. as editor of book of Judges,
1128 n56

E. called "Scribe," 1125 n50

E. called "Scribe of science of Supreme Being unto all eternity," 1123

E. dictating 94 books in 40
days, 1122-1123

E. dividing Torah into portions to be read annually, 1122

E. introducing use of dots over words to indicate doubtful genuineness, 1124 n44

E. not permitted to write one letter of Torah from memory, 1125 n50

E. originating idea of rewriting Pentateuch in "Assyrian" characters, 1122

E. taking five scribes (Sarga, Dabria, Seleucia, Ethan, Aziel) to dictate for 40
days, 1122

census of, after people returned from exile, 637

commanded by God to remain in Babylon as long as Joshua lives, 1123 n35

cursed by Yemenite Jews that he would not have final rest in Holy Land, 1115 n5

death of

according to Josephus, 1126 n51

grave of, miracle at, 1123

not occurring in Holy Land, 1123

Ezra (cont.)death of (cont.)

occurring on journey to King Artachshashta, 1123

on 2 Tevet, 1126 n51

disciple of Baruch, 1093

entering Paradise alive

E. not entering Paradise alive, in rabbinic literature, 1125-
1126 n50

in 4 Ezra, 1125-1126 n50

hearing voice from thornbush, 1122 identified with prophet Malachi, 1115 n5

introduced to Cyrus by Daniel, 1113 leading return from captivity, 1119

and Men of Great Synagogue,
1127 n56

E. and company as Men of Great Synagogue, 1125
n49

as middle of chain of tradition,
1128 n56

occupying office of high priest
after Joshua, 1123 n35

one of five men pious from first to last, 1044 n39 (see also under pious: men)

pronouncing Tetragrammaton "as it is written," 1125 n49

prophetic visions of

E. receiving seven prophetic visions interpreted by Uriel, 1122

showing history and future, 1122 reprimanding those who married foreign women, 1122,

1124 n38

and resettlement of Palestine, 1113, 1121

as second Moses, 1122

sometimes called Malachi, 1121

ten regulations of, 1122, 1125 n49 to withhold 70 books from general populace, 1123, 1125 n50 wanting to preserve purity of Jewish race and spread study of Torah, 1121-1122

Ezra, Book of comprising Ezra and Nehemiah,

1120 n27

as copy of Torah, 1125 n44

Ezra-Malachi

opposing divorce, 1124 n38

Ezra-Salathiel problem, 1126 n50

F

fables. See animals: fables and folklore
of faces

heavenly radiance of, at revelation
of Torah, 600

See also countenance

faith

lack of, war of Amalek as punishment for, 577

those steadfast in, in fourth division of Paradise, 19

Falashas

and personification of Sabbath, 84
n101

falcon

on Solomon's throne, 968

fall, 71-74

of Adam

description of, 64 n35

owing to wine, 153

Eve's story of, 92-96

punishment for, 74-82

See also Adam: fall of; Eve: and fall falsehood

not created by God, 147 n36, 607

one of seven tempter spirits, 435

personification of

asking for shelter on ark, 144

paired with Misfortune on ark, 144-145

See also deceit; lie, diplomatic;
lying

false suspicion

one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)

family, celestial. See heavenly court

famine

causing scabies, 372 n197

in Egypt

averted on account of Jacob's merits, 412

extending from Egypt to Phoenicia, Arabia, and Palestine, 370

Joseph's dream interpretation concerning, 365

lasting two years, 412 ending when remains of Saul and Jonathan brought to Holy Land, 935

not for bread only, but for heavenly words of Lord, 864
n33

as punishment, 372 n198

for theft, 607

during reign of Joram, 991

famine (cont.)

ten God-appointed famines from creation of world until advent of Messiah, 189, 862

first

in time of Abraham, 191 n64
in time of Adam, 189

second

in time of Abraham, 189, 191 n64

in time of Lamech (father of Noah), 191 n64

third, compelling Isaac to move to land of Philistines, 189, 262 n52

fourth, driving sons of Jacob to Egypt, 189

fifth, in time of judges, 189

sixth, in time of David, 189, 901, 934-935 caused by D., who bestowed all priestly gifts on master Ira, 936 n111 seventh, in day of Elijah, 189

eighth, in time of Elisha, 189

ninth, coming on men piece-meal, 189

tenth, to come before advent of Messiah, 189

as test of Abraham's faith, 189

in time of Boaz, 864 n33

in time of Ruth, 862

Faria

identified with Isis, 484 n65

fast, three-day

dates of, 1166 n142, 1168-1169 n145

for Esther, 1164 n141

fast days

scriptural passages read on, 1161 n123

fasting

on account of sin of Benjaminites, 881

of Adam

after loss of Book of Raziël, 142
after murder of Samael's son, 142

criticized by Haman, 1153

forbidden on festivals, 1164, 1166 n142

forbidden on Sabbath, 1135

Israel fasting for seven days, 868 making a beautiful countenance, 352

of Methuselah, 131

fasting (cont.)

and Mordecai, 1135

M. calling on people to fast, 1160

M. ordering fast to atone for eating forbidden food at banquet of Ahasuerus, 1164 n141

of Moses

for 40 days and nights while studying Torah, 634
in heaven, 829

of Ninevites in repentance, 1034

as sign of repentance, 318

of Simeon, for two years, 436

taking place of sacrifices, 200 n111

on Thursday and Monday because Moses went to and from heaven, 628-629 n286

Fast of Esther. See fast, three-day

father(s)

being gathered to, 248 n318

five parts of body received from (bones, veins, nails, brain, white of eye), 606

of Israel, sons of Jacob, 433

as Merkabah, bearers of Divine

Throne, 523 n166

merits of, 624 n274 (see also merits)

all good things coming to Israel on account of, 638

ceasing to be effective, 998 n24

invoked by Elijah, 998 n18

Israelites redeemed from Egypt on account of, 499

Israel saved on account of, 1163
warning against relying on, 508 n118

names of, engraved on rod of

Moses, 554

patriarchs as, 434 n2

of proselytes

Abraham as, 203 n122

sins of, to be visited upon children, 618 n251

sons of Jacob as, 434 n2

three, witnessing passage of Israel through Red Sea, 556

See also patriarchs; and under individual names

Fatima

as daughter of Muhammad, 222 n218

as one of Ishmael's wives, 222 n218

favorite of God

Abraham as, 223

See also beloved of God; friend of God

fear

as consequence of sin, 636 n311
of God

Jacob raising sons in, 433

not in Gerar, 217

Fear of Isaac

oath by, 293

feet

of demons, resembling those of cock, 977 n92

washing of, 204

of strangers, 245

fence

around Law, 612 n239

fenugreek, 852

festivals

dead rising from graves on, 23 n97
Jewish (see under names of individual festivals) pilgrimage, abolished by Jeroboam, 984 n9 (see also pilgrimage festivals) three in number, as reward for observing Sabbath (in months of Nisan, Sivan, and Tishri), 572

field

as metaphor for woman, 752 n673

fig(s)

Deborah pictured as, 874 n103

dried, as food on ark, 148 n37

of Ebed-melech, staying fresh for 66 years, 1090

as forbidden fruit, 73 n70, 93, 95 n122

fruits of, brought to Temple as first fruits, 1175

leaves of, covering Adam and Eve, 72, 74 n70, 74

symbolic of Israel, 1175

willing to serve as cross for

Haman, 1175

See also tree(s)

fingers

sucking of, 41 n181

fire

of altar

likeness of, to lion, 661 n380

remaining on altar for 116 years, 659-660

archangel Michael created from, 16 n63

black (see also color[s])

huge angels made from, in seventh heaven, 504

model of candlestick for Tabernacle made of, 678

Torah written with, on white fire, 1

fire (cont.)

celestial (see fire: heavenly) chariot of, 425
 coals of, weapon of God against Pharaoh, 559 columns of hovering over grave of Ezra at night, 1123
 at consecration of Tabernacle, 692 consuming sacrifice of Aaron, 659-660
 creation of
   on second day, 12-13
   in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day) death by
   as punishment, 209, 211, 212 n168, 601 n197
   for adultery, 246
   for arrogance, 1048 n60
   for certain kinds of immorality, 212 n168
   for usurping priesthood, 1042 n30
 destroying enemy at Hazor, 317 n297
 Divine, 692
   beheld at moment of death, 692
   being extinguished by bundles of wool, 693
 as division between celestial and terrestrial, 12
 as element of creation, 29 n114
 fatal
   burning first troops that Ahaziah sent against Elijah, 692 burning second troops that Ahaziah sent against Elijah, 692 consuming company of Korah, 692 consuming Nadab and Abihu, 692 destroying Job's sheep 692 to murmuring multitude, 692
 flaming boards and clasps of heavenly Temple made from, 503 engraving alphabet on crown of God, 3 flesh of Moses changed into, by Metatron, 503
 green (see also color[s])
   model of candlestick for Tabernacle made of, 678
   staves of heavenly Temple made from, 503

fire (cont.)

heavenly coming down at Elijah's sacrifice on Mount Carmel, 104 n10 coming down at Solomon's consecration of Temple, 104 n10 coming down on Manoah's sacrifice, 104 n10 consuming food, 248 n317 consuming Nadab and Abihu, 104 n10 (see also under fire: fatal) consuming sacrifices, 104 n10 discovery of, and Nehemiah, 1121 n30 firmament crystallized by, 12
   hidden by Jeremiah, 1119 lacking for first sacrifice after returning from captivity, 1119 peculiarities of, 502 n115
   three properties of, 501 wreaking havoc among idolatrous tribe of Dan, 692 wreaking havoc among mixed multitude, 692
 incorporeality of, 15-16 n62
 ishim (angels) made of, 504
 kinds of
   in hell, 13, 15 n60
   six in number, 998 n21
   ministering to angels, 67 n40
   not consuming burning bush, 501, 502 n115 at offerings of David, Gideon, and Manoah, 692
   one face of sun, 24
   one of five things in First Temple only, 1123-1124 n36
   one of four phenomena preceding appearance of God, 995
   one of four portals, 600
   ordered to spare three youths in furnace, 48
 pillar of, 48
   guiding Israelites in wilderness, 542
   lighting way for Sons of Moses, 1088
   at tomb of Ezekiel, 1094-1095
 red (see also color[s])
   huge angels made from, in seventh heaven, 504
   model of candlestick for Tabernacle made of, 678 pillars of heavenly Temple made from, 503

fire (cont.)

representing tribunal in Gehenna, 995 and revelation on Mount Sinai, 12 rivers of flowing before Shekinah, 1047 n55
   in hell, 13
 white (see also color[s])
   angels made of, in third heaven, 503
   model of candlestick for Tabernacle made of, 678
   thresholds of heavenly Temple made from, 503
   Torah written on, with black fire, 1
See also flame
 firmament created on second day, 12, 14 n44, 50 n7, 77, 82 n98
   crystallized by heavenly fire, 12 relation of, to heavens, 12, 14 n46 ruled by plants, 71
   saving earth from waters of heavens, 12
   thickness of, 12
See also cosmogony; cosmology; heavenly bodies; and under individual heavenly bodies
 firstborn
   Amram as, 718
   battle of, with fathers, 537, 542 n230
   as first of three calamities befalling Egypt on night of Exodus, 542 n230 Joseph enjoying rights of, 579 man slain to make teraphim, 291 number of, compared with number of Levites, 682 originally servants of sanctuary, 673
   priestly service of, 258, 259 n44, 602 n205
   all firstborn males before erection of Tabernacle, 265 garments for, before Aaron's time, 268 n89 redemption money for, 682 rights of, 219
   to dominion, 1132
   of sheep, as tribute for priest, 721
   sin of atoned for by tribe of Levi, 682
     worship of golden calf, 682 slaying of, 536-538
   as plague of Egypt, 524, 525

firstborn (cont.)slaying of (cont.)

as second of three calamities befalling Egypt on night of Exodus, 542 n230

in tenth plague

60 myriads slain in, 538 n218 suffering agony of death from midnight until morning,
543 n236

See also birthright; inheritance; primogeniture

first fruits

as tribute to priests, 720

fish

attesting holiness of Sabbath, 1089
n56

big becoming uneasy at winter solstice, 2

eating small, except for Divine goodness, 2

created on fifth day, 28, 77

facing mate during copulation, 42
n190

as food conducive to fecundity,
655 n364

harboring Jonah

created in beginning, 1033
description of, 1033

having least developed mind, 43
n190

hymns of praise of, 45 (see also
praise)

as insignia of Ephraim, 689 n447

made out of water, 29

and Noah, 149 n42

not receiving any names from Adam, 43 n190

ordered to spew forth Jonah, 48 showing Jonah mysterious places, 1033 standard of Ephraim in form of, 686

Fishes (sign of Zodiac). See Pisces

flags of 12 tribes in wilderness

colors of, corresponding to colors of stones in breastplate of high priest, 688

flame

tongue of Moses changed into, by Metatron, 503

See also fire

flax

cursed by God, 104

prohibition against using with wool, 105 n12

seed, as offering of Cain, 104

flesh

one of five parts of body received
from mother, 606 (see also body, human)

flies

not able to approach pious, 1028,
1028 n12

stinging, as plague of Egypt, 534
n188

flood, 147-150

altar destroyed in, rebuilt by Noah, 232 n251

causes of idolatry, 140 n17

immorality, 140 n17

unchastity, 140 n17

violence, 140 n17

chronology of, 147-148, 149 n42,
149 n45

duration of, 147

ideal conditions before, 139

and Noah

flood announced to N. by Uriel, 135

not reaching Holy Land, 150 n47

one of three visitations of generation of Enosh, 118 n55

predictions of

in dreams of Hiwwa and Hiyya, 136

to Enoch, 126

to Methuselah, 133

to Shemhazai by Metatron, 136

as union of male and female waters, 147, 148-149 n39

violence of waters of, 149 n44

flour

mixed with oil, of dedication offering

significance of, for Nahshon and for tribes of Asher, Benjamin, Ephraim, Gad, Issa-char, Naphtali, Simeon, 666-670

significance of, in history of world, 671

flute, 367

accompanying song at Red Sea, 564

See also instruments, musical

flying

Balaam, 795

as common feat of saints in Christian legends, 536 n210

five kings of Midianites, 795

one of accomplishments of sorcerers, 796 n853

Phinehas, 796 n853

flying (cont.)

Zaliah, 795

food

forbidden, 206 n140 (see also dietary laws)

angels transgressing Torah by eating, 616 n248

Daniel refraining from eating,
1096 n77

given to Isaac by Esau, 255

sinew of hip upon hollow of thigh, 302

heavenly, 569-571

for journey, proverb about, 972

for students of Torah, sweet fruit
as, 1074 n24

in time of war, only sacrificial meat to be eaten, 902 n58

food laws. See dietary laws foot washing. See feet: washing of forced marches

of Israelites in wilderness, 691-692, 693 n459

forgetfulness

of Abimelech by Abraham, 217

dependent on repentance, 540

prayer for, 217 n199

of sins, 211

on account of Isaac, 231

on account of merit of Abraham, 232 n248 (see also Abraham: merits of; merits)

after destruction of Temple, 200
n111

and site of Tower of Babel, 164

fornication

Noah admonished against, 156

one of seven tempter spirits, 435

removing soul from God, 610

of Shechem with Dinah, 308

fortune-book

written by Ahitophel, 923

four kingdoms, 194, 196 n82, 231, 648-649, 649 n350

angels of, 277

devastations brought upon Israel
by, 991 n56

dominion of, in vision of Abraham, 199

Israel becoming subject to, through worship of Peor, 779 n786

meaning four kinds of locusts, 991
n56

in possession of Solomon's throne,
1132 n13

ruling world by sword, 268 n78

symbolic interpretation of, 991 n56
to be judged and destroyed by God, 199

fox
 cunning of, 37-38, 42 n190
 hymn of praise of, 45 (see also praise)
 and Leviathan, 38
 and lion
   fable of, 262 n55, 302
   strategy of, used by Jacob, 302 and traveler in Sodom, 207-208
 fragrance
   coming from Joseph's bones, 546 coming from live and dead bodies of pious, 548 n2, 1028, 1028 n12 (see also under pious: men)
 heavenly
   at time of revelation on Sinai, 604 n210 to restore breath to dead bodies, 604 n210 sustaining soul, 648 n343
See also perfume(s) frankincense
   coming from winds in desert, 686
 fratricide, 103-106
 free will, of man, 50 n6
 Friday
   unfavorable in Haman's lots, 1150
 friend of God, 167
   Abraham as, 168 n4
   Benjamin as, 168 n4
   Israel as, 168 n4
   Jerusalem as, 168 n4
   Moses as, 168 n4
   Solomon as, 168 n4
See also beloved of God; favorite of God fringes. See tzitzit
 frog(s)
   confronting David about pride, 927 crawling through marble buildings and killing Egyptians, 918 n42 crocodiles descended from, 529 n179 feeding hungry creatures, 44 hymn of praise of, 45, 46 n194 (see also praise)
   made harmless, 37
   as plague of Egypt, 523, 524, 525, 527
   severest plague, 529 n179
   in story of R. Hanina, 114-115
 fruit(s)
   erelim (angels) appointed over, 503
   forbidden
     apple as, 73-74 n70

fruit(s) (cont.)
   forbidden (cont.)
     fig as, 73 n70, 93, 95 n122
     grape as, 73-74 n70
     identification of, 73-74 n70
     in Paradise, 73 n61
   of soil and tree, one of seven gifts enjoyed by Adam, 84 furnace fiery, size of, 1097-1098, 1099 n85
   smoking
     Gehenna as, 200 n114
     referring to Azazel (i.e., Satan), 200 n114
     three men in, 1097-1101
 future
   knowledge of, 134 n4
 future world
   gift to Israel for observing Torah, 606
   as most precious thing in God's possession, 606
   one of six gifts to Israel from God, 584 (see also gifts)
   Sabbath as foretaste of, 606
See also days to come; time to come; world to come

G

Gaash
   conquered by sons of Jacob, 315
   Elon, king of, slain by Levi, 314
   identification of, 315 n292
 Gabriel (archangel)
   aiding Kenaz against Amorites, 858
   angel of death
     in charge of kings, 830 n946
     G. as one of six, 830 n946
     taking away lives of young persons, 42 n187
   angel of fire
     prostrating before Metatron, 130
     in rabbinic angelology, 874 n105 angel of war, 53 n13
   angel who does not vanish, 16 n62 annihilating Sennacherib's camp, 53 n13, 1046, 1098
   appearance of
     disguised as column of fire, 1098
     disguised as one of wise men of Egypt, 483 indicating presence of Shekinah, 502 n115
 Gabriel (cont.)
   appearance to Abraham after circumcision, 204
     Balaam, 767 n743
     Enoch, 125
     Moses, 502 n115
   bringing Amram and Jochebed together, 476 n40 bringing dust for creation of man, 53, 54 n14 bringing ram to altar to sacrifice in place of Isaac, 232 n245 burying all handmaids who were with Thermutis, 477-478 charged with punishment of sons of fallen angels, 135 ripening produce, 1046, 1047 n58
   in charge of moon, 131 n61
     soul, 57 n20
   coming with drawn sword to kill Abimelech, 217 n191
   corresponding to Judah, 685 created of snow or water, 16 n63, 53 n13 defending Eliezer to Isaac, 242 n301 destroying sinful cities, 207 n154, 213
   and destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, 204 and destruction of Temple, 1075 n26 guardian angel of Israel, 3 n8 herald of light, 53 n13
   holding back waters, 554
   holding burning coals from cherubim, 1075 n26 identified with man clothed in linen in dream of Miriam, 476 n40
     in Ezekiel 10:2, 1075 n26
   and Jacob
     G. as angel who wrestled with J., 306 n273
     G. assisting J., 268 n92, 268 n97, 270 n99
     in deceiving Isaac for blessing, 266
   and Joseph
     G. appearing to J. in wilderness in human form, 332
     G. as teacher of J. in Kabbalah, 505 n117
     G. changing tear from front to back of J.'s garment, 398

Gabriel (cont.)and Joseph (cont.)

G. clothing J. after rescue from pit, 336

G. inciting J. against brothers, 375 n206

G. leading J. to Dothan, 332

G. mutilating Potiphar so that he could not molest J., 350

G. teaching J. all 70 languages, 366, 367 n182

leader of most exalted rank of angels, 13

master of all 70 languages, 612 n242

and Michael

accusing Uzza with brick made from child, 557 carrying out destruction of Temple, 1076 n27

causing fall of Babel, 1112 n4

confusion between, in tradition, 347 n89

G. preferred to M., in Babylonian Haggadah, 1047 n55

as messengers between Mordecai and Esther, 1162

M. preferred to G., in Palestinian Haggadah, 1047 n55

rivalry between, 3 n8, 54 n14, 767 n743, 1099 n87

to open gates of hell in Messianic times, 1120 n25

witnesses of new moon, 535

and Moses

G. accompanying God to fetch M.'s soul, 831

G. appearing to M., 502 n115

G. arranging couch for M.'s death, 832 n948

G. assisting M., 599 n195

G. attacking M. on road to Egypt, 517 n146

G. devising test with burning coal for three-year-old M., 483

G. leading M. and Aaron into palace of Pharaoh, 518

G. making infant M. and Aaron weep in ark, 478

G. sent to fetch M.'s soul, 828

G. showing M. hell, 505-506

G. showing M. Paradise, 507

G. taking Torah scroll of M. to heavenly court, 812

Gabriel (cont.)and Moses (cont.)

G. teaching M. to make candlestick, 645-646 n338

name

Hamon ("noise") as name, 1047 n58

meaning of ("God is mighty"), 685

one of four angels surrounding Divine Throne, 685

one of two angels punished for revealing heavenly secret, 301 n249

opposed to creation of man, 52

ordered by God to drag Leviathan out of Great Sea, 30 n127 positioned on left, 127 n60

prince of strength

witnessing deed between Adam and David, 912 n12

protector of Israel, 2

punished for delaying punishment of Israel, 1116 n7 relation of, to angel of death, 42 n187

requested to pronounce blessing over wine in Paradise, 940 n129 restoring words in chronicles of kings of Persia, 1172 n168 restraining Nebuchadnezzar from walking farther for glory of God, 1072-1073

returning pledges to Tamar, 347 n89

saved from destruction, 52

saving three men from furnace, 1098, 1099 n86

sent to give Abraham milk, 170 and story of reed in sea and site of Rome, 947

summoning Levi, 285

swallowed by Leviathan, 30 n127

throwing Ahasuerus out of bed

365 times, 1170

torturing Pharaoh for 50 days, 560

traversing world with two strokes, 1004 n46

See also under angel(s), general

Gad (prophet)

coming to tell David of punishment for taking census, 936 making known to David site of Temple, 967 n57

one of ten members of board of intercalation, 937 n124

Gad (son of Jacob)

age of, at death, 125 years, 447

as bloodthirsty, 334 n34

born circumcised, 286 (see also covenant[s]: sign of)

as brave man, 329

confession of, 447

death of, 448

firstborn of Zilpah, 403

guarding herd of Jacob, 329 illness of, for 11 months, 447

and Joseph

G. accused by J. of killing lamb, 447

G. and Simeon setting out to slay J., 332

G.'s anger at and hatred of J., 329, 447-448 marriage of, to Uzit, daughter of Amoram, grandson of Nahor, 348

name

given by Leah, 286

inscribed on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686

meaning of ("fortune" or "the cutter"), 286, 288 n183, 289 n185

one of weak among sons of Jacob, 396 n324

penance of, 447

remains of, taken to Hebron, 448

and Simeon

setting out to slay Joseph, 332

sons of

names of, interpreting history of tribe, 433-434

to join Reuben in camp in south, 685

tribe of

blessed by Moses, 822-823

body of Moses taken to territory of, 823

confessing to immoral life, 856 counted first in David's census, 936

elders from (Haggai, Zarhi, Keni, Mattathiah, Zechariah, Shunil), 696 excelling in military skill, 971 n75, 822-823

good fortune of, 286

Moses' psalm of, 823

precious stone of

agate, 856

crystal, 652

prince of (Eliasaph), 680

Gad (cont.)tribe of (cont.)

significance of dedication offering of, 668

spy representing (Geuel), 705

as vanguard of Israel, armed to conquer Holy Land, 410 n393

warfare of attacking Edom to south, 321

in battle of Sartan, 315

against Ninevites, 313

tribe of G. to be strong in battle, 822-823, 971 n75

Gaddi

son of Susi, spy representing tribe of Manasseh, 705

Gaddiel

name, meaning of, 705

son of Sodi, spy representing tribe of Zebulun, 705

Gadites. See Gad: tribe of

Gadriel (fallen angel)

seducing Eve, 95 n131

showing children of men all blows of death, 94 n116

Galen of Caphtor

and study of medicine, 158

galgalim (angels), 801

Galglriel (angel)

of solar system, prostrating before Metatron, 130

Gallizur (angel)

also called Raziel, 614

description of, 615

Gamaliel

name, meaning of, 679, 681 n424

prince of tribe of Manasseh, 679

son of Pedahzur, 679

Ganges River

source of, beneath tree of life, 69

Ganon

chief of Ephraimites, 548 n10 descendant of Joseph, attempting to lead Israelites out of Egypt, 547

king of Philistines who attacked and destroyed Ephraimites, 548 n10 gaonic literature. See geonic literatureGarden of Eden. See Eden, Garden of

Gareb

Micah erecting altar to idols at, 883 n129

garlic

generative power of, 1125 n46
salutary action of, 1122garlic (cont.)to be eaten on Friday, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122 (see also Ezra: ten regulations of)

garment(s)

of Aaron

eight in number (coat, breeches, mitre, girdle, breastplate, ephod, robe, golden plate), 650

of Adam

descended to Noah, to Shem, to Abraham, to Isaac, to Esau, 265 fragrance from, 268 n92

made by God and given to Joseph by Jacob, 405

magic protection of, 259 n38

in safekeeping of Rebekah, 265
worn by Esau, 265

of Adam and Eve

of light, 80 n93

of skin, 161

celestial

provided for Aaron at time of death, 742, 743 n637

of Egyptians

not sinking in Red Sea, 562 n55

given to brothers by Joseph, 389, 390 n289

of glory

Abraham in, 200 n114

of God

God tearing festive robe when Israel sinned, 564

of Israelites

at Exodus

not subject to fire, 688

remaining ever new, 688

in wilderness, given by angels, 544 n242

of Jehoiakim, of two substances mingled together, 1060

of light

of pious, 80 n93 (see also under pious) magical power of, 161

of Nimrod

extraordinary effects of, 257

given to N. by Cush, 161

priestly, 268 n89

eight in number, 740

in second vision of Levi, 438

symbolic interpretation of, 650-651 n353

white, Jacob making people put on, 305 n260 garment(s) (cont.)See also Adam: garment of; Adam: and Eve, garments of; Leviathan

gate

of Abraham's tent, 346 n84

broad, of sinners, 246

at entrance of Paradise, 18

of hell, 15 n55

narrow, of just, 246

Gavon. See Ganon

Ge (fourth earth)

inhabitants of, skillful in arts, science, and knowledge, 110 place of generations of Tower of Babel and their descendants, 110

Ge ben Hinnom

modeled after Gehinnom, having seven compartments, 15 n56

See also Gehenna; Gehinnom; Hades; hell; netherworld; Sheol; Tofet; water(s): below

Ge ben Hinnom (valley near Jerusalem)

Moloch worshiped in, 15 n55

Gedaliah

elder from tribe of Dan, 696

killed on 3 Tishri, 1087 n53

son of Ahikam, 1077 n30 telling Nebuzaradan real cause of seething blood, 1077 n30

Gehazi, 1029-1031

children of

inheriting leprosy, 1029

disregarding order not to accept money from Naaman, 1029

and Elisha

G. afflicted with leprosy for frustrating purpose of E., 675, 1029

G. as disciple of E., 1028

pseudepigraphic work about, 1030 n17

and golden calves at Bethel, 1029

as great scholar in law, 1029

having no faith in resurrection of dead, 1029

not having faith to perform mission, 1028, 1029 n13

one of four men not to have share in world to come, 908 n100, 1029 (see also world to come: those having no share in)

Gehazi (cont.)

and sect of Zadokites, 1030 n17 settling in Damascus, 1030 n17 tricking many into idolatry, 1029
wicked character of, 1029

Gehenna (hell)

any nation ruling over Isaac to be punished in, 244 n311 burning of idols in, on day of judgment, 558 n41
created on second day, 77
descendants of Isaac to be redeemed from, on day of judgment, 261
doorkeeper of, taking place of Abraham, 248 n318
earth watered from, 155 n59
in fifth earth, 6
Jacob believing self doomed to, because Joseph died while he was still alive, 342
located at center of earth, 10 n39
as one of seven divisions of hell, 13 as one of two visitations, 199
place where fallen undergo punishment, 89 n109
rain of flood passing through, 144 relation of, to Jerusalem, 15 n55
Samael searching for Moses in, 835
as smoking furnace, 198, 200
n114
torture of wicked in, announced by angels in fifth heaven, 505
n117
See also Gehinnom; Hades; hell;
netherworld; Sheol; Tofet;
water(s): below

Gehinnom (hell)

word used in rabbinic sources, 15
n55
See also Ge ben Hinnom; Gehenna; Hades; hell;
netherworld; Sheol; Tofet;
water(s): below

Gehinnom (valley near Jerusalem)

Moloch worshiped in, 15 n55

Gemini (Twins) (sign of Zodiac)

answering Haman in defense of
Israel, 1151

See also Zodiac

gender

reversal of, in work, 467, 468 n7

generation(s)

of confusion of tongues, as innocent, 216 (see also generation: of Tower) consecutive sinful, 605

generation(s) (cont.)

of Enosh (see Enosh: generation of) first ten (see also generation[s]:
number of)

God's testing of, 102 n1

longevity of, 102 n1

before flood living without pain or disease,

92 n111

study of astronomy of, 116 n53

of flood, 138-41

doom of, caused by eight grievous sins, 1048 n60

as innocent, 216

losing gigantic strength, 86
n105

losing longevity, 86 n105

losing multitude of children, 86
n105

losing peace, 86 n105

not to be resurrected, 149 n44

one of things God repented of creating, 141 n20

practicing idolatry, 135

punishment of, 145 n26, 164,
215 n179, 521

visited upon children, 608
n217

register of sins of, 210 n155

sexual dissipation of, 145 n26

stature of, 146 n35

suffering death by fire, 1048
n60

fourth, punishment visited on, 605

of Noah, addicted to sorcery, 633

none without 30 pious men, 211
n164

number of

7 from Abraham to Moses, 474
n31

10 from Adam to Noah, 101

(see also generation[s]: first ten)

10 from Jacob to Samson, 879
n111

10 from Noah to Abraham, 167

10 from Perez to David, 666

15 from Abraham to Solomon,
967 n57

26 from Adam to Moses, 592
n177

30 from Abraham to Zedekiah,
967 n57

33 from Adam to Solomon, 967
n57

974 elapsed before Adam was created, 592 n177

generation(s) (cont.)

of revelation, 593 n177

distinction of, 612-613 n244

losing share in world to come, 612-613 n244 (see also
world to come: those having no share in)

seventh

bloodguilt visited upon, 111

most excellent, producing

Enoch, 682

of sinful cities (Sodom and Gomorrah)

losing riches and fertility of soil, 86 n105

of Tower of Babel

doom of, caused by eight griev-
ous sins, 1048 n60

Job better than, 453 n5

losing share in world to come, 165 n90 (see also world to come: those having no
share in) losing unity of speech, 86 n105

punishment of, 164, 521

sins that caused destruction of,
164-165 n88

of wilderness

corpses of, free from worms and insects, 612 (see also under corpse[s])

dying in wilderness, 734

having no physical impurity, 612 and life to come, 22 n92, 735
n615

losing six heavenly blessings, 86
n105

receiving Torah, 715 n539

six blessings of, 86 n105

to be led by Moses in Messianic
times, 1022 n114

worthy to receive Torah, 591

genii. See demon(s)

Gennesaret, valley of

as possession of tribe of Naphtali, 823

Gentiles

accusations of, against Israel, 3 n8

Balaam as great sage of, who lost this world and world to come, 798

circumcised converts of, not considered perfect Jews, 1178
n191

distinguished from Jews by odor of dead bones, 339 n58

as enemies of Israel, 2

God revealing Self to, during night, 279 n131

Gentiles (cont.)

Goliath as great hero of, meeting death on account of strength, 798 guardian angels of, 3 n8
 Haman as wealthy man of, perishing on account of wealth, 798 Jews forbidden to eat food prepared by, 752 n674 offering gifts to Messiah, 649 n350 producing one pious person every year, 211 n164
 refusing Torah, 593-594
 tried by God at night, 214 n170

Genunita
 Jewish attendant of Esther on Tuesdays, 1142 name, meaning of ("garden"), alluding to Paradise, 1142, 1144 n77

geonic literature and idea that God created world through letters, 4 n10 and rationalistic explanations of animal's language, 71 n58

geonic mysticism
 in Book of Razi'el, 90 n110
 Metatron-Enoch in, 128 n60

Gera (son of Benjamin)
 name, meaning of, 380

Gerar
 Abraham journeying to, 216

Gerizim, Mount blessings pronounced on, 874 n103
 ceremonies on, 844 n14
 claimed as holy by Samaritans, 872 pieces of idols broken by Jacob buried under oak on, 316
 six tribes ascending, 843

German popular beliefs that Liliths assemble under trees, 67 n40

Germany
 Jews of, refusing to return to Holy Land, 1124 n36

Gershon (son of Levi)
 name, meaning of, 438, 517 n149
See also Gershon

Gershon (son of Moses and Zipporah), 496
 circumcised by Zipporah on way to Egypt, 515 supposed to be brought up as Gentile, 515

Gershon (firstborn son of Levi), 683 sons of, receiving two wagons for Tabernacle, 665
See also Gershom (son of Levi)

Gershonites
 second division of Levites, 684

Geshem the Arabian oath of Ahasuerus to, 1167

Gethel (angel)
 aiding Kenaz in battle, 859-860 n17
 name, meaning of, 860 n17

Geuel (son of Machi) spy representing tribe of Gad, 705

giant(s)
 allowing spies to go their way, 707-708
 and building of Tower of Babel, 165 n88
 Cainites as, 110
 descendants of, annihilated by Chedorlaomer, Arioch, and Tidal, 194 descended from angels and daughters of men, 708 devouring men, 119
 half mortal, 708
 immortality of, 113 n44
 land of, preserved as reward, 708 number of, that perished in flood, 138 n13
 offspring of angels and daughters of men, 119 fallen angels and Cainite women, 137
 in Palestine, 707
 seeing spies as grasshoppers, 710
 perishing from heat in flood, 146 n35 Sihon as, 751
 stature of, 138 n13
 three, summoned by Sarah, 236 n259

Gibborim
 name, meaning of, 137
 as offspring of fallen angels and Cainite women, 137 (see also giants)

Gibeon battle of, one of three occasions for war of confusion, 896 n42

Gibeonites alliance of, with Israelites, 848 defense of, 850 n44
 excluded by Ezra from entering into assembly of Lord, 1124 n40

Gibeonites (cont.)

excluded from community of Israel forever, 846 and Saul, 937 n114
 S. charged with having killed seven Gibeonites, 935

Gideon (judge), 871-874
 asking for sign, 872 considered one of least worthy judges by Haggadah, 874 n101
 as descendant of
 Joseph, 330
 Manasseh, 404, 822, 872
 ephod of
 G. having ephod made, bearing name of Manasseh, 872 treated as idol after G.'s death, 872 gaining victory during Passover, 872 miracles wrought for, 873 n97 pictured as vine, 874 n103 sign of, blood and water, 872 transgressing law, 873 n97
 victory of, as reward for filial piety, 873 n100 war of, against Midianites, 872

gifts conditional, to Israelites (Holy Land, Temple, Davidic kingdom), 590-591 n173 from God as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572 from God to world, three in number (wisdom, strength, wealth), 798
 heavenly, 628 n285
 magic girdle as, 463 n39
 motif of, in legends, 463 n39
 to Israel
 received in wilderness, three in number (well, clouds of glory, manna), 573 at revelation at Sinai (feelings of shame, compassion, kindness), 612 n240 priestly, symbolic explanation of, 784 n801 unconditional, to Israelites (Torah, priesthood, title "children of God"), 590-591 n173

Gigit (Ishmael's wife), 113 n42

Gihon River
 flowing through fifth division of Paradise, 19 place of Adam's penance, 87-88 n106

Gilgal

- arrival of people at, 843
- Joshua circumcising those born in desert at, 843-844
- name, meaning of, 845 n16
- sanctuary at, one of seven holy places destroyed by Esau, 264

Gilgamesh epic, 61 n25

gimel (letter)

- creation of world through, 4
- standing for
  - gadol* ("great"), 4
  - gemul* ("retribution"), 4
- See also* alphabet; letters of alphabet

girdle

- of Aaron, atoning for theft, 650
- celestial
  - ensuring Job's recovery, 462 n37
  - having three ribands, given to Job, 461
- one of eight priestly garments of Aaron, 650

Girgashites

- emigration of, 848 n34
- connected to legend of kings of Persia and Media, 851 n45

- land provisionally granted to, 157

glass

- first artificial heaven of Hiram made from, 1104
- hall of, in Paradise, for proselytes, 23 n97
- walls of first division of Paradise made from, 19
- white, possession of Zebulun distinguished by, 667

gleaning

- law pertaining to, 865 n50
- for poor, 720

glorification

- garment of, Abraham in, 200 n114 (see also garment[s])
- of God (see God: glory of)
- of Jacob, antiquity of, 257 n35
- radiance of, seen on pious man at time of death, 635 n309
- seven clouds of, 22 n82

gluttony

- one of seven tempter spirits, 435

gnat(s)

- as antidote for poison of viper, 43
- destined to cause death of Titus, 45 n191
- living only one day, 45 n191
- as third plague, 529 n183

Gnostic ideas

- about Adam
  - excellence and size of, 60 n21, 60 n22
  - that A. was androgynous, 67 n42
  - that A. was partly or wholly created by angels, 49 n3
- dew of light, 9 n22
- everything created in pairs, 608 n221
- about first mother, Sophia-Prunicus, 106 n17
- heavens 365 in number, 9 n22 (see also under heaven[s])
- identification of hayyot with four archangels, 687 n440
- man created by lower powers, not by God, 52 n12

Gnostic legends

- concerning Melchizedek, 197 n102

Gnostics

- and allegorical interpretation, 32 n127
- Jewish, and glorification of Adam, 98 n138

goat(s)

- hair of, one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see also under Tabernacle)

- he-goat of peace offering, corresponding to 60 empires, 672

- offering wool for hangings of Tabernacle, 655 n363

- and sacrifice of Noah, 150
- Sammael as, in Kabbalah, 307 n275

she-goat(s)

- three, sacrificed by Abraham, 198
- of three years, symbolizing empire of Greeks, 198
- skin of, used for Tabernacle in remembrance of Jacob, 268 n88

- on Solomon's throne, 968
- speckled and spotted, Jacob asked for, as wages, 290
- wool of, same as hair of angel of Edom, 307 n275

Goat (sign of Zodiac). See Capricorn God

- and Aaron
  - God decreeing that A. to die in desert, 821

God (cont.)

and Abraham

- God promising A. that descendants would go forth from Egypt with great substance, 398 n335

actions of

- adding Name to names of man and woman, 66
- attacking Egypt
  - by bringing pestilence, 523 with darkness, 524-525
  - by hail, 523-525
  - with locusts, 524-525
  - by pouring naphtha on them to create boils, 523-525
  - by sending frogs, 523-527
  - by sending lice, 523-525
  - by sending wild beasts against them, 523-525
  - by slaying firstborn, 524
  - by turning rivers into blood, 523-525

avenging Abel, 104

- being merciful, on 10 Tishri, 631

- breeding snake and lizard to bring forth ḥabarbar, with poisonous bite, 324

- causing Name to dwell in land, 399

- causing storm to help Judah against Edom, 321

- consulting with angels, 48, 51, 51 n10, 52 n12, 61 n25, 77
- creation before creating man, 51

- heavenly court, 61 n25
- souls of pious, 57 n19

- convoking Sanhedrin of angels, 76

- during day, 30 n124
- describing Self as "One," 805 n886

- flying on swift wind against Pharaoh, 558

- foreseeing worship of golden calf, 624

- forgiving in response to repentance, 748

- forgiving sin of Reuben, 820

- fulfilling prayer of one human being for another, 217

- giving three gifts to world, 798

- holding keys of sustenance, rain, graves, womb of barren woman, quickening dead, and birth, 997 n12

God (cont.)

actions of (cont.)

inviting persons to make request Abraham, Ahaz, Jacob,
 Messiah, 198
 Abraham, Jacob, Solomon,
 Ahaz, Messiah, 955 n17
 Solomon, Ahaz, Messiah, 949 joining Self to people in joy and suffering, 582, 583 n150
 judging world, 30 n124
 lamenting for suffering of people, 1087 n47
 lamenting over Temple, 1078
 loathing unchastity, 778 marking sinners by cloud of glory disappearing, 779 never forgiving theft, 607
 providing for needs of creatures,
 30 n124
 putting four men to test (Cain, Hezekiah, Balaam, Adam),
 763, 763 n730
 recounted in wilderness, 572
 recounting ingratitude of Israelites, 713-714
 requiring bondsmen before revelation on Sinai, 598-599 revealing Self
 to Abraham, 198, 199 n107
 to Gentiles by night, 279
 n131, 292
 to human being first, 199
 n107
 to Jews by day, 279 n131
 to Moses in pillar of cloud, 611 in palace of Pharaoh, 533
 to prophets of Jews during
 day, 292
 on Sinai at noon, 600
 revealing several laws to Amram,
 476 n37
 revealing to Abraham
 destruction of sinful cities,
 210, 211 n159
 that Temple would be destroyed, 231 rewarding faithful laborer in this world, 290
 sending darkness and terror upon Ishmaelites, 337, 338 sending fire on earth
 six times as punishment, 692
 six times as token of honor, 692

God (cont.)

actions of (cont.)

sending fire on Israelites in wilderness, 692
 separating waters, 12 showing Moses Tabernacle when
 M. was in heaven, 641 sitting in midst of Eden expounding Torah, 19 slaying Egyptians with fourth finger of right hand, 638
 n315
 tearing decree of annihilation in pieces, 1170
 treating man according to his deserts, 221 n215
 visiting Abraham after circumcision, 204
 wishing to test Isaac, 225
 writing Ten Commandments with middle finger of right hand, 638 n315
 and angels
 God changing names of, at time of Babylonian siege of Jerusalem, 1074
 God consulting with angels, 48,
 51, 51 n10, 52 n12, 61
 n25, 77
 God convoking Sanhedrin of
 angels, 76
 God sending Gabriel to disfigure Vashti, 1135
 God sending seven angels of confusion to disrupt Ahasuer's banquet (Mehuman, Biztha, Harbonah, Bigtha, Abagtha, Zethar, Carcas), 1135
 anger of
 at Balaam, 768 n744 God angry for one instant every
 day, 770
 at Moses for not accepting
 death, 809
 when kings worship sun, 770
 as wind and storm, 699
 appearance(s) of
 to Abimelech, 216
 to Abraham, 212 n166
 concerning Hagar and Ishmael, 220
 at advent of Messiah, fourth appearance, 824 n919
 to Amram in sleep, 475 to Balaam, 763, 765
 in burning bush, 824 n919
 in cloud, 631

God (cont.)

appearance(s) of (cont.)

four in number (in Egypt, on Sinai, to take vengeance on Gog and Magog, in Messianic times), 632 n296
 four phenomena preceding (wind; earthquake; fire; still, small voice), 995
 to Gentiles at night, 763 n730 against Gog, third appearance
 of, 824 n919
 in guise of precursor of congregation, 631
 only at night, 277
 in Paradise, 93
 in pillar of cloud, 700-701
 to three prophets, 612 n242
 ten on earth, 824 n919
 to deliver Israel from Egypt, 824
 n919
 to drown Egyptians in Red Sea,
 824 n919
 to execute judgment on Gog,
 824 n919
 to look at Tower of Babel, 824
 n919
 to make Shekinah dwell in Temple, 824 n919
 to make spirit rest on 70 elders,
 824 n919
 to make water flow from rock,
 824 n919
 to punish Adam, 824
 to reveal Torah, 824 n919
 to see wickedness of sinful cities, 824 n919
 to Sheilah, 875
 attributes of almighty, 631
 bountiful, 631
 compassion, 632 n298
 faithfulness, 511 n128, 631
 goodness, 511 n128
 in daily morning prayer (Yotzer), 2 n6
 and preservation of the people
 Israel, 2
 prevailing from the beginning, 1-2
 and protection of weak, 1 ruling in heaven, 2
 ruling on earth, 2
 as underlying principle of creation, 2 n6
 grace, 632 n298
 graciousness, 631
 greatness, 1127 n56

God (cont.)

attributes of (cont.)
 immutability, 511 n128
 invisibility of, proof for, 351
     n102
 justice and mercy, 54 n15, 210,
     804, 1160 n122
 justice of, Elijah's teachings of, 1014-1016
 kindness of, to those who are undeserving, 629
 long-suffering, 616-617, 631, 632 n298, 714
     and merciful, 54
 love, 714
 loving-kindness, 68 n47
 magnificence, in sixth earth, 6 mercy, 631, 714, 767 n743 (see also justice; mercy)
     as chief attribute of God, 714
     God having mercy on Leah, 285 on Israel for sake of merits of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,
         510 (see also merits)
     Israel redeemed on account
         of, 499 n106
     and man's existence, 54 n15
 number of, 632 n297
     7 in number, 7 n15
     10 in number, 7 n15
     13 in number, 631-632, 632
         n297
 patience with sinners, 617
 sublimity, 511 n128
 truth, 632 n298
 unchangeability, 511 n128
 unity, testified to by Israel and Sabbath, 82 n98
 and Baal, conflict between on Mount Carmel, 994 battle with Pharaoh, 558-559
 blessings of
     on Abraham, 237
     on Levi, 300
     not making things arise "from nothing," 1027 n8
     in world to come, 428
 children of
     as title given to Israelites unconditionally, 590-591 n173
 commandments of, 69
     commanding Abraham to sacrifice Isaac, 225-228
 compared to potter, 444
 contributing three things to formation of child, 608 n224

God (cont.)

conversations of
     with Abraham, Jacob, and Isaac,
         concerning sins of progeny, 261 with Abraham concerning Isaac and his descendants, 230-231 with Abraham only, in ten generations since Noah, 210
 counting Self among pious, 396
     n321
 and covenant, with sons of Jacob, 433
 and creation
     justice and mercy in, 54 n15 left hand creating terrestrial beings, 49 n3
 and David
     conversation between, 918
     God standing by D., 918
 delaying setting of sun until battle against Amalek won, 581 denial of
     by Esau, 259 n48
     one of five crimes of Esau on day of Abraham's death, 257 descent of
     to earth, 164, 166 n91
     into hell to save pious, 508
         n118
 described as priest, 703 n497
 and evil
     God having no contact with evil, 3 n9
     God not being direct source of evil, 773 n766
 fear of (see fear: of God)
 final victory of, over evil, 306
     n275
 garments of, 564
     God tearing festive robe when Israel sinned, 564
     heavens fashioned from, 5
     spattered by blood of angel of Edom, 304
 and Gentiles
     God judging in darkness, 773,
         774 n769
 glorified by death of pious, 664
     n385
 glory of
     in cloud, 227
     dwelling in Tabernacle, 48
     seen by slaves and bondwomen at revelation of Torah, 602
         n207

God (cont.)

grace of, 210-211
 holy spirit of, manifesting self in man's hair, 879 n116
 image of, as bridegroom, 601 n200
 inscrutable ways of, 629-631
 instructing Moses to transmit God's words to people in Hebrew, 597
 and Isaac God appearing to I., 259-260 bidding I. to return to Canaan, 261
     God on side of I., 260
 and Israel
     God accompanying Israel into exile, 1082, 1082 n42
     God addressing Israel in Egyptian language, 602-603
     God as cause of Israel's apostasy,
         998 n18
     God as King of Israel, 824 n918
     God judging Israel in daylight,
         773, 774 n769
     God loving Israel on account of
         Jacob, 256 n35
     God making covenant with Israel for sake of Torah,
         634 God making Israel swear five oaths in exile, 1081 n39
     God not associating Self with evil brought on Israel, 773
         n766
     God performing 13 deeds for Israel in Egypt, 640
     God revealing secrets of Torah
         to Israel, 775
     God revealing Self from four directions, 820
     God suffering when Israel in distress, 502, 502 n115
     God to appear to Israel four times, 820
     like master and student, 775 testifying to uniqueness of Sabbath, 82 n98
 and Jacob
     God announcing impending
         birth of Benjamin to J., 317
         of Manasseh and Ephraim to J., 317
     God appearing to J.
         on day after Feast of Weeks,
         393 n301
         as El Shaddai, 409
         with heavenly court at Bethel,
         319 n303

God (cont.)and Jacob (cont.)

God appearing to J. (cont.)
at time of death, 402
to comfort him for loss of Rebekah, 317

God confirming change of name from J. to Israel, 317-318

God not appearing to J. while sons of J. carry idols, 317

God not revealing Joseph's fate to J., 342

God promising J. that land where he lay would belong to him and his descendants, 400

God revealing that J. was last of patriarchs to have name united with God, 318 (see also God: names and titles
of)

God speaking to J., 290-291
through wolf, 341

God to accompany J. to Egypt, 392

jealous of idols, 625 n276

and Jerusalem

God planning to destroy Jerusalem, 947

and Job

God accusing friends of J., 461

God blessing J., 461

God giving J. girdle, 461

God revealing all history to J., 461

God wishing to connect Name with that of J., 456 n14

and Joseph

God appearing to J. with Eben Shetiyyah, 357

as keeper of vineyard, 774-775

as king and high priest, 703 n497 kiss from, as death, 237 n270 (see also death; Shekinah: kiss of)

lap of Torah lying in, 1

left hand of creating terrestrial beings, 49

n3

earth created by, 8 n17

God creating world with, 1166
n143

holding life and justice, 619
n260

left side of, and hell, 1

love of, for seventh, 682

God (cont.)

and man

communication of, changing with establishment of sanctuary, 660, 661 n381

God treating man according to his deserts, 221 n215

and Moses

God absolved from vow by M., 624

God comforting M. concerning
death, 806-807

God commanding M. to appoint judges, 779

God describing M. as "the One prophet," 805 n886

God granting two wishes of
Moses, 629

God pointing out to M. with fourth finger new moon,
638 n315

God pointing out to M. with index finger of right hand half shekel offering of atonement, 638 n315

God protecting M. from angels,
613-615

God reproaching M. for breaking tablets, 626 n279

God revealing defection of Israel to M. before Exodus, 625
n276

God revealing to M. God's great
Name, 816

God sending Gabriel to fetch
M.'s soul, 828

God sending Michael to fetch
M.'s soul, 828

God sending Zagzagel to fetch
M.'s soul, 828

God showing M. all the land of
Israel, 813-814

God showing M. every generation in future, 630

God thanking M. for breaking tablets, 625

God weeping for M., 834

M. wishing to know ways of
God, 629

name of, 510

avoiding pronunciation of, 128
n60

causing death, 520 n155

desecration of, one of eight grievous sins of Sennacherib, 1048 n60

engraved on gold plate of mitre
of high priest, 794

God (cont.)name of (cont.)

joined to names of three patri-archs, 318, 319 n304

not united with name of living person, 293

revealed to Moses, 511, 511
n127, 523 n166

names and titles of (see also Name, Divine; Name, Ineffable; Shekinah; Tetragrammaton)

Adonai, 522, 643

name of God when having mercy on world, 510

All-Merciful, 522

borne by men, 1052 n70

Comfort, 229

contained in ark of covenant, 643

Ehyeh Asher, 511 n128

Elohim, 643

El Shaddai, 378 n232, 409

God appearing to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob as, 522

name of God when waiting patiently for improvement of sinner, 510

the Eternal, 563

Father, 261

God of Abraham, 174, 510

God of Abraham, God of Isaac, and God of Jacob, 503

God of Isaac, 293, 510

God of Jacob, 510

Hanun (Gracious One), 4

Ineffable Name, engraved on scepter given to Moses,
807, 807 n894

Kadosh (Holy One), 4

Melekh (King), 4

the Place, 279 n130, 1164 n139

Possessor of Heaven and Earth,
197 n100

Rahum (the Merciful), 3-4

Redeemer, 261

Redeemer of Abraham, 217

Ruler of World, 162 n82

70 in number, 649 n348

Shield of Abraham, 187

Solomon, 946 n2

two sacred names, Adonai and Elohim, 643

"the very good," 2 n6

and nations

God making nations swear not to oppress Israel too hard,
1081 n39

God (cont.)

oath of to Noah, never again to destroy world by water, 471, 472 n22 to patriarchs, 813
 phylacteries of, 632 n299
 power of, 7
 praise of learned by Moses from angels, 505 n117
 of pious, taking place of song chanted by nature, 850 n43 promise of to Abraham, that descendants would go forth from Egypt with great substance, 398 n335 to Jacob, that land where he lay would belong to him and to descendants, 400 recognizing God of one's own accord (Abraham, Hezekiah, Job, Messiah), 183-184, 184 n49, 456 n13 at Red Sea, accompanied by 9,000 myriads of angels, 561 n45 relationship with soul, according to Stoics, 61 n25
 residence of, under tree of life, 95 n126 right hand of Abraham at, 197 n95
 Adam at, 450 n17
 bound as long as Israel in exile, 1074 n25
 creating heavenly beings, 49 n3
 David sitting at, on judgment day, 939 n128
 each finger performing deed of salvation, 638 n315
 Enoch at, 450
 God giving Moses Torah with, 619 n260
 God slaying with fourth finger of, 638 n315
 heavens created by, 8 n17
 holding grace and Torah, 619 n260
 Isaac at, 450
 Jacob at, 450
 Methuselah at, 450 n17
 Noah at, 450
 Shem at, 450
 right side of, and Paradise, 1 and Sabbath, testifying to uniqueness of Israel, 82 n98

God (cont.)

and Samael, dialogue between, 558 n42
 servant of, as title, 805 n880 sight of, causing death to mortals, 1043 n34
 and Solomon
 God inviting S. to make request, 949
 as source of good, 3 n9 spirit of, 7 n15 (see also holy spirit; spirit[s]: of Lord)
 as Adam's spirit or soul, 7 n15 coming upon Israelites as reward for trust in God, 562
 in form of dove, 7 n15 identified by Church Fathers with Holy Ghost, 56 n17
 as mercy, 150 n46
 as spirit of Messiah, 7 n15, 56 n17 tears of, for suffering of Israel, turning into pearls, 1081 n39
 ten descents of, to earth, 824 n919 ten parts of body received from (breath, soul, light of countenance, sight, hearing, speech, touch, sense, insight, understanding), 606
 as tenth person for validating ban, 342
 three natures of, symbolized by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, according to Philo, 319 n304 Throne of (see Throne, Divine)
 and Torah
 God offering Torah to nations, 593, 820
 God ornamenting letters in which Torah written, 616
 God proclaiming Torah in languages of Kadesh (Aramaic), Paran (Arabic), Seir (Roman), Sinai (Hebrew), 820
 God sitting in midst of Eden expounding, 19
 God studying, 30 n124
 God taking counsel with, 1
 Torah lying in lap of God, 1
 to slay angel of Edom, 304
 voice of dead in Sheol reviving at sound of, 604 dividing into 70 languages of man on Sinai, 604

God (cont.)

voice of (cont.)
 on Sinai, having no echo, 604 n213
 vow of
 never to exchange Israel for another nation, 761 never to permit Israel to dwell in land other than Palestine, 761 that Moses would not see Holy Land, 813 wind of, 7 n15 (see also God: spirit of) word(s) of
 as act, 48 n1, 232 n243
 first, on Sinai, 602-603
 on Sinai heard by inhabitants of all the earth, 604 wrath of, against heathens, 593
 God-fearing men
 four in number (Abraham, Joseph, Job, Obadiah), 1026, 1027 n8 not sinning, 217 n195
 as proselytes, 1027 n6
 God-fearing one title of Joseph, Abraham, Job, and Obadiah, given on account of charity and loving-kindness, 397, 398 n332
 godless
 to be punished in future world, 611
 Gog
 God to destroy, 820
 and Magog
 prophecies of Saul concerning, 898 suffering in days of, 572
 gold
 of altar of Tabernacle, 647
 associated with Babylon, 648
 bier of Jacob made from, 413
 given to Esau by Jacob for Cave of Machpelah, 304 hall of, in Paradise, for patriarchs, etc., 23 n97
 love of, leading to idolatry, 440
 one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see also under Tabernacle)
 one of thrones of Nimrod made of, 162
 from Ophir, on throne of Solomon, 968 of Parvaim, 22 n96
 bearing fruit, 21 n77
 crown made of, 18

gold (cont.)

refined, fifth division of Paradise built from, 19 seventh artificial heaven of Hiram made from, 1104 and silver, for vessels of Temple, 968 n66 and silver and bronze, used to construct bird of sorcery for Balak, 759 soil of Sodom consisting of, 208-209 of spoons in dedication offering, corresponding to years of Moses' life, 671 in Tabernacle, symbolizing yoke of Israelites under Babylon, 640
 on throne of Pharaoh, 364
 thrones in Paradise made from, 507
 thrones made from, for repentant sinners, 507
 golden calf, 619-622
 Aaron's motives in fashioning, 650, 650 n351
 angels taking away gifts after worship of, 600 identified with Apis of Egyptians, 622 n271 Israel worshipping, 620 punishment for worshipping, three forms of (execution by Levites, death by water, death by plague), 626 n281
 reminders of, 17 n70
 riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
 Sammael roaring from mouth of, 118 n54
 worship of, 801-802
 consequences of disastrous for Israel, 620 diseases and defects returning to Israelites, 675 robes of Israelites taken away by angels, 627 weapons of Israelites taken away by angels, 627 Israel misled by mixed multitude, 674
 one of ten temptations, 757
 one of two sins of people, 659
 golden calves
 at Bethel, 1029
 erected by Jeroboam, 947, 982 gilded calves substituted for, 1045 n45

golden calves (cont.)

taken by Assyrians, 1044
 taken by priests, 1045 n45
 13 in number, 621
 worship of, by pious in Israel, 1038 n4
 golden candlestick, 48
 golden plate
   of Aaron, atoning for effrontery, 650
   one of eight priestly garments of Aaron, 650
 Golgotha
   legend of, 89 n109, 98 n137
 Goliath
   brothers of, as bodyguards of Achish, king of Philistines, 918 challenging Saul, 917 n32
   and David
     G. afflicted with leprosy by D., 916
     G. as one of ten adversaries of D., 922 n59
     G. related to D. by blood, 915
     G. slain by D., 1163
   extraordinary strength of, 917 n32
   name, meaning of, 917 n27
   one of two great heroes of world who met death on account of strength, 798 ruling for 40 days, 915-916, 917 n31
   size of, 755 n687
   slayer of, named Elhanan, 928 n78 son of Samson and Orpah, daughter of Eglon, king of Moab, 862-863, 915, 917 n29 stricken with leprosy for reviling God, 675 three brothers of, as three of ten adversaries of David, 922 n59 trying to disrupt worship of Israelites, 916
 Gomer of Diblaim (wife of Hosea), 1041 n23
 Gomorrah. See Sodom: and Gomorrah good deeds. See deeds: good good inclination evil inclination turned into, by Abraham, 939 n128
   in man, 49-50 n6
   not in animals, 49 n6
   time of entry into body
     at puberty, 61 n25
     in tenth year, 61 n25

good inclination (cont.)

time of entry into man at birth, 105 n14
   at 13 years, 105 n14
 time of entry into soul, 61 n25
 good intentions
   God's reward for, 332
 goodness, divine. See God: attributes of gopher tree
   used to build Noah's ark, 142
   See also tree(s)
 Goshen, land of, 371
   given to Sarah as irrevocable possession, 395 Jacob and family settling in, 396
 gout
   as punishment, 985
 grace
   one of four standards of Divine Throne, 687 n440
 Grace after Meals, 370 n195
   according to Ashkenazic ritual, 575 n118
   benedictions added to, by Joshua, David, and Solomon, 853 n50, 1128 n58
   composed by Moses, 1128 n58
   and prayer of Abraham, 224 n224
   See also prayers, Jewish grain(s)
   curative properties of, 157
   ears of, hymn of praise of, 44 (see also praise)
   erelim, angels appointed over, 503
   rotting during famine, 369, 370 n194
 grandees
   feast for, 1129-1132
   Median nobles and high officials under Persian king Ahasuerus, 1130
 grape
   as forbidden fruit of Paradise, 73-74 n70
   See also fruit(s): forbidden grapevine gigantic, carried along in wilderness, 708 grass
   created on third day, 82 n98
   erelim, angels appointed over, 503
   leaves of, covered with gold dust near grave of Baruch, 1094 reproduction of, 18
 grasshopper
   lesson learned from, 44 gratitude to God
   of Daniel, David, and Leah, 285

Great Assembly
 decrees and ordinances of, 1126
 laying foundations of rabbinic Judaism, 1126 men of, as editors of books of Ezekiel, Minor Prophets, Daniel, and Esther, 1071 n15
See also Great Synagogue great bird Ziz. See Ziz Great Fast
 criticized by Haman, 1153
 Great Hallel
 composed by Mordecai and Esther, 1176-1177 n172
 Psalm 136, 1176 n172
 greatness of God. See God: attributes of Great Sabbath. See Sabbath: Great Great Sea
 emptying into Red Sea, 561 n52
 Moses asking to intercede, 808
 Great Synagogue, 1127 n56
 activities of, 1128 n56
 Chamber of Gazit as, 777 n783
 men of
 and Ezra, as middle of chain of tradition, 1128 n56
 formulating benedictions and prayers, 1128 n58 introducing tripartite division of oral law (Midrash, Halakhah, Haggadah), 1128 n56
 120 in number, 1127 n56
 referred to as "Ezra and his company," 1125 n49 organized in month of Shevat, 1152 n108
See also Great Assembly Great Synhedrin. See Sanhedrin
 Greece
 angel of, on Jacob's ladder, 277
 Greater, as dwelling of Esau, 270 guardian angel of, receiving dominion over Israel, 1116 n7 as ruler of world, 162 n82
 greed cause of death of Saul, 903 n66
 of Sodom, 208-209
 Greek ideas
 bathing of soul in stream of fire, 97 n134
 concerning the soul, 61 n25
 human body consisting of four elements, 54 n15
 man as microcosm, 49 n4
 place of "forgetfulness," 110 n35

Greek ideas (cont.)
 wreath of sun, 26 n101
 Greek influence on legend of Balaam and sons in Ethiopia, 491-492 n80 Greek language
 ascribed to Japhethite system of writing, 158 n72
 as beauty of Japheth, 244 n314
 Bible in, negative view of, 635 n308 translation of Scripture into, as part of Noah's blessing, 156 n65 Greeks empire of, symbolized by she-goat of three years, 198
 Japheth as ancestor of, 244 n314
 learning art of writing from Phoenicians, 484 n67 wisdom of, dependent on Solomon, 955 n18
 green. See under color(s)
 grief
 causing death of Bilhah and Dinah, 340-341
 over death, consoled after year, 341
See also death; mourning; rending clothes
 grigori (angels)
 description of, 125
 in fifth heaven, 125
 rejecting Lord, 125
 Salamiel as leader of, 125
 ground dividing under feet of enemy at Hazor, 317 n297
 guardian angel. See angel(s), general: types
 guides of men
 10 in number, 672 n401
 12 in number (heart, kidneys, mouth, tongue, palate, windpipe, esophagus, lungs, spleen, crop, stomach, liver), 671
See also body, human guilt
 to be proved only through two witnesses, 846 Guni (son of Naphtali)
 name, meaning of, 434

H

Haazinu
 writing of, 697 n477

Habakkuk
 bringing food to Daniel, 1114
 as contemporary of Daniel, 1071 n14
 as contemporary of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, 1071 n14
 as contemporary of Manasseh, 991 n56, 1057 n100 one of four pious men who addressed unbecoming words to God, 628 n284 (see also under pious: men)
 as postexilic prophet, 991 n56
 refusing to leave circle until God answered him, 630-631 n291 Shunammite as mother of, 1028 n10
 as son of Joshua of tribe of Levi, 1115 n6 transported to Daniel by angel, 1114
 habarbar
 offspring of snake and lizard, having poisonous bite, 324 Habdalah. See Havdalah
 habitations. See worlds: of pious Hadad (king of Edom), 419
 death of, 420
 execution of, by Abimenes, 421
 successor of Baal Hamon as king of Edomites, 421
 warfare of against Abimenes of Kittim, 421
 H. allied with Zepho against descendants of Jacob, 419
 H. coming to assistance of Moabites against Midianites, 420 against Moabites, 420, 421
 Zepho asking H. for help in Africa, 418 Hadarniel (angel) becoming messenger of Moses, 613
 huge proportions of, 613
 roaring at Moses, 613
 speaking to Adam, 90 n110 Hadassah
 another name for Esther, 1141
 name, meaning of ("myrtle"), 1141 Haddakum (grandfather of Shechem) conspiring against Jacob, 308-309 refusing to be circumcised, 308 Hades
 angel of, 306 n273
See also Gehenna; hell; netherworld; Sheol; Tofet; water(s): below

- Hadorah
second wife of Asher, 348
- Hadrian
attempting to locate grave of Moses, 1091 n60 boasting of victory over Jerusalem, 754 persecution of, and Jews, 255 n24
- Hadriel (angel)
in charge of sixth division of hell, 882
- Hagar
and Abraham
conjugal relations of, 203 n120
H. bearing daughter after Sarah's death, 237
H. given by Pharaoh, 191 n74
offspring of, as progenitors of many wicked nations, 244 n309 angels appearing to, 201, 203 n122
as bondwoman, 203 n122
as daughter of Ham, 244 n309
as daughter of Pharaoh, 190, 201
as Egyptian, 244 n309
identified with Keturah, 243, 243 n309 piety of, 202 n119, 243 n309
praying to idols, 220 punishment of idolatry of, 221 n216
and Sarah
H. given to S., 190, 201
H. saying that barrenness of S. was punishment for impious life, 289 n198
H. treating S. with contempt, 201 sons of, as idolators, 243
worshiping brick, 221 n216
- Haggadah (pl. Haggadot), ix
Babylonian, preferring Gabriel to Michael, 1047 n55 considering Gideon, Jephthah, and Samson least worthy of judges, 874 n101 contained in second tablets, 632, 633 explaining heavenly gifts received by Israel in wilderness, 570 n92 favorite topics of, deceitfulness and guile of Rome, 284 n162 interpretations of Balaam's orations in, 773 n764 literature included in, viii man as microcosm in, 49 n4 meaning of, viii
- Haggadah (cont.)
and Midrash, viii
modern investigation of, ix
one of three parts of oral law, 592, 1128 n56 (see also Halakhah; Midrash) Palestinian, preferring Michael to Gabriel, 1047 n55
pedagogic, 4-5 n10, 5 n12
popular character of, vii-viii
Reuben referred to in, as example of penitent, 342 n60
among statutes of Israel, 567
teachers of (Rabbanan d'Aggadta), ix wolf taken as symbol of Saul, first king of Israel, 411 n401
- Haggai (elder from tribe of Gad), 696
- Haggai (postexilic prophet), 991 n56
among returning exiles, 1119
showing plan of altar for rebuilt Temple, 1119
and Zechariah and Malachi accompanying Daniel, 1096 n76
last representatives of prophecy, 1121
- Haggi (elder from tribe of Issachar), 696
- Haggith (mother of Adonijah), 940
- Hagiographa, 977 n93
one of three parts of Torah, 592
See also Minor Prophets; Pentateuch; prophet(s)
- hail
chief angel of irin and kadishim made from, 504
hot, falling on Canaanites, 848-849
one face of sun, 24
one of four portals, 600
rivers of, in hell, 13
of seventh plague in Egypt, 523-524, 525
and fire, 531-532
suspended in air dropping down while Joshua battling Amorites, 532
to be sent down by God against Gog, 532 weapon of God against Pharaoh, 559
- hailstones. See hail
- hair
angel of Edom seized by, 306 n275 bodies and faces of demons covered with, 866 n58, 961 n40
- hair (cont.)
on body
as disfigurement of women, 959, 961 n40
ornament to man, 959 covered on woman, 65
curly, because of curse of Ham, 154
each one on head numbered, 453 n6 follicles of, directed by God, 452, 453 n6
God revealing Self to man in, 453 n6
God's holy spirit manifesting in, 879 n116 Israelite male children hidden by, 472 of Jonah, falling out, 1034, 1035 n36
on Judah's chest
becoming hot, 390 n278
becoming stiff, 386, 387 n277
of man, appearance of God's majesty in, 511 n127 one of five parts of body received from mother, 606 (see also body, human) to be combed before ritual bath, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122 wife of Job selling, 458, 459 n29
See also under Absalom; Edom; Elijah; Esau; goat(s); Israel (nation; people)/Israelites: children of; Jonah; Queen of Sheba; Samson; Seir; woman (women); wool
- Halakhah (pl. Halakhot) contained on second tablets, 632
and daily existence, vii formula: This is a Halakhah revealed to Moses on Mount Sinai, 514 Joseph learning from Jacob, 328 one of three parts of oral law, 592, 1128 n56 (see also Haggadah; Midrash)
among statutes of Israel, 567
and Torah, viii
See also law(s); law (Torah); Torah: of Moses
- half-shekel
offering required during census, 937 n119 yearly contribution to sanctuary, 240
See also offering: half-shekel

Halifin

form of acquisition known as, 867
n65

hallah, laws of

Moses and Aaron instructing Israelites in wilderness on,
712 n530

Hallel

chanted on night of slaying of firstborn consisting of Psalm 113 only, 540 n225,
540 n228

composed by Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, 1100 n88

composed by Moses and Israel after crossing Red Sea, 540
n225

manner of reciting, 565 n63

Moses and Aaron as first to recite,
in Egypt, 539

origin of, 540 n225

and Passover

Hallel chanted during sacrifice of paschal lamb and at time of Passover meal, 540 n225

Hallel recited on first day of Passover, 565 n60

Hallel sung on eve of Passover, 264

See also prayers, Jewish

Ham

allotment of lands, islands, languages, and writing of, 157

descendants of through Canaan, having red
eyes, 154

having dark skin, 41 n178, 151

as first sorcerer, 163 n83

inheritance of, as south, 157

later called Zoroaster, 163 n83

and Noah

H. as son of N., 146 n30

H. attempting to keep N. from further procreation, 153-154

H. cursed by N., 154

for not observing sexual abstinence, 41 n178, 151, 152
n54

one of seven sinners, 857 n9

punishment of, 151, 214 n170

sons of, building cities, 707

taking care of birds, 148 n37

wife of, committing adultery with Ahiyah before and after flood, producing Sihon and Og, 752 n668

Haman

and Ahasuerus

A. ordering that H. be hanged, 1175 planning feasts to entrap Jews in immorality, 1132

H. offering A. money for Jews,
1157, 1158 n116

H. restricting access to A., 1162
another name for Memucan, 1147 arguing that Israel's God was old and feeble, 1154-1155

as astrologer, 1152 n108

becoming leper, 1177 n174

casting lots, 1150-1152

on days of week, 1150-1151

on months, to determine favorable time for annihilation
of Israel, 1151

on 12 signs of Zodiac, 1151

to determine most favorable moment to annihilate Jews, 1150

children of fate of, 1176, 1178 n185, 1178

n187

number of, 1168, 1169 n158,
1178 n185

compared with David, 760

daughter of, dying during procession, 1174, 1177 n173

descendant of

Agag, 1163

Amalek and concubine, 1147
n93

Emtelai, 1147 n93

devising intrigues against Jews, 1132

fall of, 1129, 1172-1178

date of, 1169 n153

16 Nisan, 1176 n170

fortune of divided into three parts, 1176 one-third going to restoration of Temple, 1176

genealogy of, 1147 n93

great wealth of, 1146

homage paid to him as to an idol, 1148 hostility of, toward Vashti, 1147 identified with Memucan, 1139

n49

and Jews

H. as "Jew-baiter," 1146-1148

H. choosing Tuesday as day of annihilation of Israel, 1152
n109

Haman (cont.)

and Jews (cont.)

H. oppressing Jews in Shushan, 1129

H. plotting annihilation of Jews, 1150

H.'s decree of annihilation of Jews, 412, 1155-1158
torn in pieces by God, 1170

H.'s opposition of, to rebuilding of Temple, 1148 n95

persecution of Jews by H., 899

and Mordecai

enmity between, 1148-1149

traced back to enmity between Jacob and Esau,
1150 n104

H. erecting cross for M. on first night of Passover, 1169-1172

H. fashioning cross on which to hang M., 1168, 1169 n159

H. having to perform menial services for M., 1173, 1177
n174

H. opposing M. about rebuilding of Temple, 1147

H. selling self to M. as slave,
1149-1150, 1150 n105, 1168

name, meaning of, 1147 n93

one of two wealthy men who perished on account of wealth, 798 responsible for Vashti's death,

1174-1175, 1177 n179

sons of, positions held by, 1177
n176

ten sons of, hanged with Haman, 1176

20 other sons of, 1176

Haman-Memucan, 1138

Hamath, people of worshiping ram, 1044

Hamathites

land provisionally granted to, 157

Hamites

as builders of Tower of Babel, 164
n88

as first idolaters, 164 n88

Hamon ("noise")

as name of Gabriel, 1047 n58

Hamor (father of Shechem), 308

Hanamel (son of Shallum)

one of eight priests descended from Rahab, 844 n12, 1093 n65

son of Shallum son of Tikvah, 1030

Hanamel (cont.)

summoning angels and prince of world to defense of Jerusalem, 1074

uncle of Jeremiah

attempts of, to save Jerusalem from Babylonians, 1074

Hanani (prophet)

daughter of, marrying Asa, 988 n28

Hananiah

death of, 1069

elder from tribe of Levi, 696

false prophecy of, 1072 n20

as false prophet prophesying victory over Nebuchadnezzar, 1069

fiery furnace and, 527

among members of Great

Synagogue, 1127 n56

and Mishaël and Azariah

cast into fiery furnace, 1096 n76, 1098

companions of Daniel, 1095

desire for idolatry eradicated from Israel in days of, 1128 n57 eating only vegetables, 1142

as eunuchs, 1097 n78

fate of, 1100-1101 n92

going to Palestine to join high priest Joshua, 1098

Haman not able to prevail against relative of, 1177 n175

among members of Great

Synagogue, 1128 n57

as prophets, 1096 n76, 1107 n108

as three pillars on which world rests, 728 n590, 1099

one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)

one of six pious men endowed

with spiritual gifts

descended from Ruth, 866

n61 (see also under pious: men)

riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960

as true prophet, 1072 n18

hand(s)

laying on of

as cure, 1003

by Moses on Joshua, 789

raising and lowering, significance of, 581, 583 n145

handmaids, sons of referring to sons of Billah and Zilpah, 327 n7, 330-331 n9

hanging on tree

biblical prohibition against leaving body overnight, 1176

Hanina, R.

story of, 114-115

Hanina b. Dosa, R.

world created for sake of, 51 n8

Hannah

age of, at birth of Samuel, 130 years, 889

barrenness of, 887

Batuel as father of, 888 n2

beauty of, 889 n12

children of, 891 n22

first to call God "Lord of hosts," 889 n10

long prayer of, shortening days of Samuel, 903 n70

miracle wrought for, 890 n15

one of seven sterile women who bore children, 878 n111

one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271

and Peninnah

conflict between, 887

H. interceding for P., 890

prayer of, 888 n9

bringing relief to sons of Korah, 890 considered correct by Rabbis, 889 n11

second prayer of, as abridged form of Amidah, 891 n20

for son, 887-888

taking place on Passover, 890 n13

in thanksgiving, 889-890, 891 n20

words of, encouraging Korah not to despair, 726

Hannibal

defeat of, 421 n426

Hanoah (elder from tribe of Reuben), 696

Hanukkah

as compensation for month of Kislev, 656 n367

as day of sacrifices of Cain and Abel, 105 n11

lights of, to shine forever, 678

Harabah (fourth earth), 6

Haran

burned attempting to rescue Terah's idols from fire, 184 n49

Haran (cont.)

consumed by fire, 177

death of, by fire, as punishment for incest, 180 n40

star of, 177

well of going dry at departure of Jacob, 292, 294 n220

production of water in, increased by Jacob, 278, 283 younger brother of Abraham, 178 n39

Haranites

modesty of, 284 n164

Harar

journeying to Egypt with Ishmael, 220

Harariah

land of, ceded to Jacob by Amorites, 315

harbinger of good tidings

as epithet of Elijah, 1022 n111

Harbonah (angel)

accusing Haman, 1175

identified with Elijah, 1004 n45, 1177 n182

name, meaning of ("annihilation"), 1135

one of seven angels of confusion sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's banquet, 1135

hard

conquered by soft on five occasions, 918 n42

hare

changing sex of, 41 n177

meat of, served to Isaac by Esau, 270 n100 (see also food: forbidden)

Nebuchadnezzar eating piece of live hare, 1065 stomach of, as cure for sterility, 41 n177, 879 n111

harlot

Elijah appearing as, 1001

Haron (angel)

of destruction, struggling with Moses, 623

sometimes called Peor, 623

harp

of David

legend of

rationalistic explanation of, 929 n83

related to legend of Aeol's harp of Greeks, 929 n83

number of strings of, 929 n81

- harp (cont.)
 of David (cont.)
 strings of, made from gut of ram sacrificed by Abraham on Mount Moriah, 927 vibrating to awaken him for study of Torah, 927 to be used in Messianic time to have eight strings, 929 n81
See also instruments, musical
- Harut
 fallen angel of Arabic legend, 128 n60
- Hashkivenu, 1128 n58. See also prayers, Jewish
- hashmal (pl. hashmalim)
 as class of angels, 17 n70
 praising God, 614
 surrounding Divine Throne, 14
- hasid (godly)
 etymology of word, 929 n78
 title given to Joseph, 329 n3
- Hasidim
 Ahijah in legends of, 982 n5
 as source of Jewish legendary material, ix
- Hasmoneans, 825 n925
- Hathach
 another name of Daniel, 1096 n76, 1161
 killed by Haman for acting as mediator between Mordecai and Esther, 1162
 name, meaning of, 1163 n129
- hatred
 banished by righteousness, 447 companion of deception, 448
- Hatzubah
 to keep boundaries of tribes fixed., 852
- Havdalah
 benedictions for, formulated by men of Great Synagogue, 1128 n58
 liturgical formula of, recited at termination of Sabbath, 724 n573
See also prayers, Jewish
- Havilah
 idols of Amorites made from precious stones from, 856
- hawk
 on step of Solomon's throne, 968
- Hayyah, R.
 and two sons, efficacy of prayer of, 1011
- hayyot, holy breath of, arrested by Raziel, 614
- hayyot, holy (cont.)
 bull image of, 17 n70
 as class of angels, 17 n70
 encircling Divine Throne, 1, 6, 14, 17 n69 firmament stretched over heads of, 12
 four faces of, 17 n70
 Israel (angel), belonging to, 17 n70
 joining in David's psalms in Paradise, 938 made of fire, 646
 in Paradise, 24
 perspiration of, as fire, 17 n69, 614 receiving nourishment from radiance of Shekinah, 634 referring to creatures with animal forms, 17 n70
 in seventh heaven, 504
 supporting Divine Throne, 504
 taking place of four archangels in Minḥah service on Day of Atonement, 687 n440
 to bear witness to God on day of judgment, 726 n586
- Hayyot ha-Kodesh (holy creatures).
See hayyot, holy
- Hazarmaveth
 inhabitants of, living in poverty, 158 n70
- Hazleponith (Samson's mother), 878-879 n111, 879 n112
 name, meaning of, 878 n111
 one of seven sterile women who bore children, 878 n111
 one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
 one of 22 women praised in last chapter of Proverbs, 878 n111 of tribe of Judah, 879 n112
- Hazor burned down by Joshua, 869 n71
 destroyed by Joshua, 317 n297
 identification of, 315 n292
 Pirathon, king of Hazor, slain by Jacob, 314 warfare at
 with Amorites 314-315, 317 n297
 conquered by sons of Jacob, 314-315
 walls of, mounted by Judah, 314 walls of, mounted by Naphtali, 314-315
- hazzan
 Elijah as, 1011, 1013 n84
- hazzan (cont.)
 heavenly, in mystic literature, 17 n70
 Jeremiah as, 1013 n84
 pronouncing wedding blessings under huppah, 66
- he (letter)
 added to name of Joseph, 359
 creation of world through, 4
 from name of Abraham, not on standards, 686 occurring twice in Name of God, 359 reserved for God, visible in pillar of cloud over holy ark, 686
See also alphabet; letters of alphabet
- healing
 of all disease in world to come, 591
 of all Jews, before revelation at Sinai, 591 art of, learned from holy book, 142
- book(s) of origin of, 159 n75
 used by Hezekiah, 159 n75
 written down by Shem, 159 n75
 by hissing of brazen serpent, 1053 n90
 and oak of Abraham, 206 n137
 power of, in precious stone, 237 springs, list of, hidden by Hezekiah, 1053 n90
 window of, in first heaven, 503
See also disease(s); illness; magic arts; medicine; sickness
- health
 window of, in first heaven, 503
- hearing
 one of ten parts of body received from God, 606 (see also body, human)
- heart hardening of, 528, 530, 531
 for meditating, 447
 one of 12 guides of men, bestowing understanding and insight, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men) signifying intellect, 42 n189
- heat
 Egyptians afflicted with, at time of Moses' abandonment, 477
- heathen
 bound to observe Noachian commandments, 261 in Exodus, not protected by clouds of glory, 542 heathen (cont.)

God's hatred of, 500, 501 n113 mourning 70 days for Jacob, recompensed at time of Ahasuerus, 412 pious, as descendants of those whom Sarah nursed, 218 represented by Leviathan, 30 n124

heaven(s) (shamayim)

first

angels reading from Torah about first day of creation in, 505 n117 consisting of windows, 503 Moses' tour of, 503, 505 n117 streams of water in, 503 to cover light during night, 5

second

angel Nuriel in, 503
angels reading from Torah about second day of creation in, 505 n117 fallen angels imprisoned in, 124
Moses' tour of, 503
planets fastened to, 5

third

Adam in, 96
angels reading from Torah about third day of creation in, 505 n117 manna in, 5, 9 n22, 427 n432 mills in, for grinding manna for future use of pious, 570
Moses' tour of, 503
Paradise located in, 98 n137, 124, 427 n432
"tall angel" in, identified with Sandalfon, 505 n117

fourth

angels reading from Torah about fourth day of creation in, 505 n117 containing heavenly Jerusalem and Temple, 5, 9 n22
Enoch in, 125
Moses' tour of, 503-504
six gates of, 125
Temple in, 503-504

fifth

angelic hosts residing in, 5 angels reading from Torah about fifth day of creation in, 505 n117
Enoch in, 125
Moses' tour of, 504

sixth

angels in, 504

heaven(s) (cont.)sixth (cont.)

angels reading from Torah about sixth day of creation in, 505 n117
Moses' tour of, 504
as place where trials ordained for earth originate, 5 removal of instruments of punishment from, 9 n22

seventh

as abode of unborn souls, 57 n19
angels reading from Torah about Sabbath in, 505 n117 attached to arm of God, 6
Eden in, 22 n84
Enoch in, 125
heavenly Temple in, 9 n22
Moses' tour of, 504
ofanim in, 505 n117
as place of what is good and beautiful, 6 principalities and powers in, 125

seraphim in, 504, 505 n117

artificial, made by Hiram of Tyre, 1104-1105 becoming fearful and multiplying, 11 n43

creation of

out of fire and water, 7 n16
on first day, 5, 77, 82 n98
by God's right hand, 8 n17
from light of God's garment, 5 out of snow, 11 n43

like curtain, corresponding to curtains of goats' hair in sanctuary, 648 distances between, 1103

and earth

all things coming from, 50 n7 created simultaneously, 5, 8 n17 exceeding earth, 24

and firmament

firmament springing up from, 50 n7 heavens kept in place by firmament, 71

gates of, guarded by angels, 615 lights emanating from, 50 n7

limitations of, 7

meaning of word, 8 n20

Moses asking heavens to intercede, 808

mourning for Moses, 834

number of, 5

seven, 8 n22

God showing Moses, 617

heaven(s) (cont.)number of (cont.)seven (cont.)

origin of idea in tannaitic period, 8 n22 passages referring to, 9 n22
ten, 9 n22
11, corresponding to 11 curtains in Tabernacle, 648
365, according to Gnostics, 9 n22
390, 23 n97
ordered to open before Ezekiel, 48
ruled by goodness of God, 2
Sabbath in, 83-86
Samael searching for Moses in, 836
size of, 6
windows of, 17 n67, 503
witness of, against man, 26-27 n105

heavenly beings

created by God with right hand, 49 n3 grieved by sin of Adam, 76
immortality of, 47
some made of fire and some of water, 647 n342

heavenly bodies

asking for power to destroy sinners, 26 n105
assisting Abraham in battle, 195
attached to wheel, 25
changes in, during flood, 147 consciousness and intelligence of, 27-28 n112

creation of, 25 n98, 99
having power over plants, 71
mourning for Moses, 834
movements of, 25 n100, 26 n105
Bildad questioning Job about, 459

song of praise of, 26 n102, 44 (see also praise)

subjugated through magic, 118 n56

witness of, against man, 26-27 n105

See also cosmogony; cosmology; firmament; and under individual heavenly bodies

heavenly court

absolving Moses of oath to Jethro, 517 n143

arbitrating case between Michael and Samael, 252 arguments of, concerning Cain, 108 n26

heavenly court (cont.)
 condemning Adam, 211 n159
 God appearing with, to Jacob at Bethel, 319 n303 judging between God and Uzza, 556-557
 members
   number of, 120 n57
     70 in number, 211 n159
     71 in number, 95 n124
     60 myriads of angels, 211 n159 to decide case of Sodomites, 211 n159 heavenly decree sealing of, 801 n872
 heavenly family comforting Jacob, 317
   See also heavenly court heavenly ladder
   from one heaven to another, 8 n22 heavenly light. See light: celestial;
   light: heavenly heave offering. See offering: heave Hebel (second son of Eve)
   name, meaning of, 102
 Heber (grandson of Asher)
   name, meaning of, 434
   name Moses called by father, 480
   one of seven names of Jethro, 493
 Hebrew alphabet. See alphabet;
   Hebrew characters; Hebrew script Hebrew characters
   Seth as inventor of, 116 n53
 Hebrew language
   Balaam's ass speaking in, 766
   Balaam's imperfect knowledge of, 768 n746 characters for, allotted to Shem, 157
   God proclaiming Torah in, 820
     (see also Roman language, Arabic language, Aramaic language)
   Joseph speaking to brothers in, 388, 390 n281
   Moses receiving divine communications in, 612 n242 not known by angels, 49 n6
   as original language of mankind, 166 n91 remaining in house of Shem and Eber, 446 reserved for Israel, 164
   spoken by serpent, 70 n58 used by God at creation of world, 164, 166 n91

Hebrew language (cont.)
   used by Semites, 158 n72
   See also alphabet; letters of alphabet
 Hebrews. See Israel (nation; people)/
   Israelites
 Hebrew script
   change of, 1124 n44
 Hebron (city)
   altar erected by Abraham at, 187
   built by sons of Ham, 707
   as burial site (see also Machpelah, Cave of)
     of Adam and patriarchs and matriarchs, 98 n137
     Joseph wishing to be buried in, 430 n443 remains of founder of each tribe transported to, 437 Reuben buried in, 436 inhabitants of, honoring Sarah at her death, 237 n268
   Isaac settling in, 261
   Jews of, 249
   as Kiryat Arba ("City of the Four"), 98 n137 patron of, 249-250
   rewarded for kindness to Abraham, 236 n267
   taken by Jews 47 years after Exodus, 236 n268
 Hebron (one of four sons of Kohath), 718 Hedor
   fox in story of Sodom, 207-208
 Hegai
   adorning Esther above all others in harem, 1142
   chief of eunuchs of Ahasuerus's harem, 1142
 heifer(s)
   with neck broken, brought to atone for sin of those neglecting to accompany wayfarer, 393 n296
   three, sacrificed by Abraham, 198
   of three years, symbolizing domination of Babylon, 198
   See also red heifer Hekhal (pl. Hekhalot) at center of sanctuary, 7
   seven (heavenly halls), 9 n22
   See also Holy of Holies; Holy Place; sanctuary; Tabernacle; Temple
 Heled (first earth), 6
 Helena (queen of Adiabene)
   one of ten rulers who became proselytes, 1093 n66

Heliu. See Eli
 hell
   Abaddon as place of punishment in, 507
   Abraham not letting those who kept law of circumcision enter, 248
   adulterers never getting out of, 609 n229 Alukah as place of punishment in, 506 compartments of, 15 n56
   created on second day, 12
   crying out for souls of pious, 506 darkness of, 532, 534 n198
   description of, 22 n90, 23 n97
   divisions of, 508 n118
     fifth division of, Ahab dwelling in, 988
     names of, 9 n25, 15 n57
     seven, 13
     subdivisions of, 13
   fiery pit of, 135
   gate(s) of Abraham sitting at, on day of judgment, 248
     three, location of, 15 n55
   and hot springs of Tiberias, 15 n55 on left side of God, 1
   location of, 6, 15 n55
   men tortured in, by angels of destruction, 506
   nearness of, to Esau, 269
   Nergal as Babylonian god of, 508 n118
   one of seven things created in the beginning, 1 and Paradise, legends relating to, 22 n90
   as punishment, 1
   punishments of, 506
   reserved for heathen, according to rabbinic literature, 508 n118 rivers of fire in, 13
   rivers of hail in, 13
   shown to Moses by God, 814
   size of, 13, 15 n55
   those spared tortures of Ahaz and Ahaziah, 1039 n6
     kings who do evil, 1039 n6
   those who give opprobrious names to fellow men never getting out of, 609 n229 those who put fellow men to shame never getting out of, 609 n229

hell (cont.)

Tit ha-Yawen as place of punishment in, 506
See also Gehenna; Gehinnom; Hades; netherworld; Sheol; Tofet; water(s): below

Hemah (angel)

as angel of destruction, 505 n117
 identified with Azza, 505 n117
 punishing Moses on road to Egypt, 515

in seventh heaven, 504

Heman (angel)

angel of death in charge of domestic animals, 42 n187
 buried alive opposite grave of Moses, 624 n274
 “the confidant,” identified with Moses, 955 n20
 of destruction, struggling with Moses, 623
 wisdom of, Solomon’s wisdom greater than, 949-950

hen

and cock, story about, 43-44
 worshiped by Babylonians, 1044

Her, Mount

one of three mountains retained by God in desert, 736 retained by God as burial place of Aaron, 736

herald, Divine

Shamiel, 13

heralds of Solomon

seven in number, 969

herbs

created on third day, 77
 eaten on first night of Passover, 48 used in sorcery, 760 n720

herem (anathema), 119

hermeneutic rules

analogy, 884 n135

Hermon, Mount

contesting for spot of revelation, 594
 one of four mountains on which heavenly Jerusalem will descend, 595 n184 (see also Jerusalem: heavenly) 200 angels on, 119

Herod

atonement of, 672 n397
 called “the Idumean,” 254 n19
 eaten by worms as punishment for blasphemy, 717 n552 taking money from David’s tomb, 942

heroes

heavenly light at birth of, 219 n203
 infancy and youth of, enhanced in description, 482 n64
 two great (Samson and Goliath) who met death on account of strength, 798 worship of, as source of idolatry, 163 n83

heron

keen sight of, 43 n190
 as unkind animal, 43 n190
See also animal(s); bird(s)

Heshbon

destruction of, by Israel, 752
 formerly belonging to Moab, 758
 inhabitants of God putting masks on faces of, 752 thrown into convulsions by God, 752

Heshvan (month)

17th of, as first day of flood, 147
 27th of leaving ark, 148
 building of Temple completed in, 966, 1151 death of Sarah in, 235 n256, 1152 n108
See also date

het (letter)

creation of world through, 4
 heart of locust having shape of, 992 n56 standing for hanun (“Gracious One”), 4 (see also God: names and titles of) standing for hattat (“sin”), 4 not contained in names of 12 tribes, 409 n383
 as third letter of name of Yitzhak, on standard of tribe of Ephraim, 686 in Zaphenath-paneah, standing for hakham (“wise”), 368
See also alphabet; letters of alphabet

Heth

children of being friendly to Abraham, 234
   as inhabitants of Jebus, 235
   land provisionally granted to, 157
 Hezekiah (king of Judah), 1045-1048 afflicted with skin disease for sending gold from Temple to Assyrians, 1049 arrogance of, 1051

Hezekiah (cont.)

and associates

attempting to have Hebrew literature put into writing, 1051

as editors of books of Isaiah, Proverbs, Song of Songs, and Ecclesiastes, 1071 n15 breaking in pieces brazen serpent made by Moses, 1053 n89

burial of, next to David and

Solomon, 1051

burying Ahaz as though poor, 1045 burying father as pauper, 1053 n89

celibate life of, 1049

as child of Isaiah 9:5, 1052 n70

as composer of Adonai Elohe Yisrael, 1128 n58 (see also prayers, Jewish)

death of, 1051

declaring leap year by adding second month of Nisan, 1053 n89 failing in gratitude, 1048-1049

as first to recover from disease, 1050

frugal ways of, 1048

illness of, punishment for unseemly language, 1052 n75

as infant, destined as sacrifice to Moloch, 1045

and Isaiah, 1049

H. marrying daughter of I., 1054

life span of 15 years added to, 1057 n102

   H. owing added 15 years of life to merits of David, 1050

men of, 1053 n89

miracles wrought for, 1048-1054

name, meaning of, 1053 n92

one of five to give expected answer to God’s questions, 1102 n94

one of princes who assist Messiah, 100 n142

piety of, 1051

H. among most pious of Israel, 1045

H. as one of five men pious from first to last, 1044 n39 (see also under pious: men)

H. as one of six pious men endowed with spiritual gifts descended from Ruth, 866 n61 (see also under pious: men)

Hezekiah (cont.)

piety of (cont.)
 victory over Sennacherib as reward for, 1045-1046
 prayer of, 1050
 as model, 1052 n76
 that God would defeat enemy, 986 n21
 put to test by God, 763 recognizing God of own accord,
 184 n49, 456 n13
 referred to by Psalm 110, 197 n95,
 1052 n70
 refusal of, to sing song of praise to God, 1048-1049, 1051-
 1052 n67
 saved from fire through merits of descendants, 1045, 1047
 n47
 scraping gold from Temple, 1053
 n89
 Shebnah (high priest) as opponent
 of, 1048
 sins of, 1049
 stopping upper spring of Gihon,
 1053 n89
 taking throne of Solomon from Sennacherib, 969
 to be Messiah, according to divine plan, 1049
 and Torah
 devotion of H. to study of Torah, 1052 n67
 H. mandating study of Torah, 1045 undertaking six reforms, 1053 n89
 warfare of
 victory over Sennacherib as reward for piety, 1045-1046 number of survivors of, 1047
 n57
 wicked sons of (Rabshakeh and Manasseh), 1054
 winning wealth back, 397
 Hezekiah (son of R. Hiyya), 1124
 n42
 Hezron (father of Caleb), 861 n25 married though one year old, 395 Hiel
 commander-in-chief of Israelite
 army under Ahab, 993 suffering curse of Joshua against one who would rebuild
 Jericho, 993
 high priest
 Aaron appointed as, 649-650

high priest (cont.)

breastplate of (see also Aaron:
 breastplate of; breastplate;
 precious stones)
 names engraved on, 356
 precious stones in, 35
 colors corresponding to flags of tribes, 688
 giving information, 846 clad in Urim and Thummim, 775 forbidden to have two wives, 1039
 n11
 greater than Michael, 676 n415
 having to observe certain ceremonies when entering
 sanctuary, 676
 mitre of, determining age of women of Midian, 797
 not allowed to take part in funeral procession, 663
 and Satan
 high priest seized by S. to prevent him from performing service, 677 n415
 S. having to flee before high priest, 676
 from sons of Aaron, 48 to come from tribe of Levi, 649
 high priesthood
 line of succession in, 892 n25
 Hilkiah (father of Jeremiah), 1067
 descendant of Rahab, 844 n12
 finding Torah in Temple, 1061
 n116
 fleeing from persecution of Jezebel, 1067 identified with high priest, 1070
 n10
 one of eight priests descended from Rahab, 1093 n65
 as prophet, 1067
 Hillel
 Babylonian who revived knowledge of Torah, 1124 n42
 hind depicted on tribe of Naphtali's flag
 in wilderness, 688
 as "pious one" among animals, 43
 n190
 hip
 sinew of, removed in ritual slaughtering, 379 (see also food:
 forbidden)
 Hippocrates
 and study of medicine, 158
 hippodrome, 970-971
 Hirah
 chief shepherd of Judah, 343

Hirah (cont.)

identified with Hiram, king of Tyre, 347, 348 n95
 Hiram (architect)
 descendant of Oholiab, assistant of Bezalel, 967 n61
 descendant of tribes of Naphtali and Dan, 642, 967 n61 entering Paradise alive, 966 (see also Paradise: entering
 alive)
 master workman of Temple, 642, 966 Hiram (friend of Judah) identified with Hiram of Tyre,
 1105 n105
 Hiram (king of Tyre), 1104-1106
 Arabic version of legend of, 1105
 n105
 claiming to be God, 100 n142, 1103-1104 n100, 1105
 n105
 conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, 1105 considering self god, 1104-1105
 entering Paradise alive, 73 n67, 132 n62, 1105 n105 (*see
 also* Paradise: entering
 alive)
 fashioning artificial heavens, 1104 fashioning statue of daughter from gold given by Solomon,
 958 n36
 forced by Nebuchadnezzar to consume own flesh, 1105 furnishing cedars for building of Temple, 1105
 identified with Hirah, 347, 348
 n95
 identified with Hiram, friend of Judah, 1105 n105
 name, meaning of, 1105 n105
 one of four kings claiming to be
 gods, 1039 n16
 one of ten rulers who became pros-
 elytes, 1093 n66
 palace of, 1105 n105
 swallowed by earth, to return in future as home of pious, 1105 rewarded with long life, 1105
 n105
 and Solomon
 correspondence between, 958
 n36
 H. desiring to test wisdom of Solomon, 955
 story of war between, 980 n100

Hiram (cont.)

- stepfather of Nebuchadnezzar, 1105
- visited by Ezekiel, 1105
- Hiram (title of Phoenician kings), 422 n429
- historical reminiscence
  - concerning Babylonian exile and catastrophe of 70 c.e., 1074 n24
  - defeat of Ephraimites by Philistines as, 548 n10
  - in enmity of Egyptians and Israelites, 470 n12
  - Jews as sellers of wax in Rome, 930 n87
  - palace of Hiram of Tyre and building in Babylon with eight towers, 1105 n105
  - Palmyrene archers assisting in campaign against Jerusalem, 1087 n53
  - of relations between Babylon and Palestine, 848 n33
  - of relationship between Egypt and Palestine, 364 n163
  - Sisera resembling Alexander the Great, 869 n72
  - war between Egypt and Canaan as, 548 n10
  - in wars of sons of Jacob with sons of Esau, 419 n425, 421 n426
- history
  - revealed to Abraham in vision, 200 n114
  - of Israel, 198, 200 n112
  - of world, 198
- Hittites
  - spies reporting that they dwell in mountains, 710
- Hivites
  - land provisionally granted to, 157
  - preparing for war against sons of Jacob, 332
- Hiwwa (son of Shemhazai), 136
- and Hiyya, dreams of, 136
- Hiwwar ("the leper")
  - Enoch, son of Nimrod, 258 n38
- Hiyya, R.
  - and sons reviving knowledge of Torah, 1124 n42
- Hiyya (son of Shemhazai), 136
- Hiyyah, R.
  - blinding lustre of chariot of, 1013 n84
- Hobab
  - one of seven names of Jethro, 493

Hodu psalm (Psalm 136)

- recited by Mordecai, 1176 n172
- holidays, Jewish. See holy days; and under names of individual holidays
- holiness
  - one of three natures of God, according to Philo, 319 n304
- holy book (Book of Raziel), 141-143
  - different accounts of, 143 n23
  - entrusted to Shem, 142
  - given to Abraham by Shem, 142
  - given to Noah by Raphael, 142
  - made of sapphires, 142
  - passed from Jacob, to Levi, to Moses, to Joshua, to Solomon, 142
  - See also* Raziel, Book of
- holy days
  - manna descending on, 574 n108
  - manna not descending on, 571-572
  - 70 celebrated by Jews (52 Sabbaths, seven days of Passover, eight days of Tabernacles, Pentecost, Day of Atonement, New Year), 648
  - souls of pious reading from Torah scroll on, 812
- Holy, holy, holy, 614, 1165
  - praise of angels during day, 617
  - praise of seraphim in seventh heaven, 504
  - said by Metatron at end of David's psalms, 938
  - in seventh heaven, 125
  - See also* praise
- Holy Land
  - as central point of earth's surface, 7
  - controlled by 12 Canaanite tribes, 159 n73
  - given to Israelites conditionally, 590 n173
  - God causing Name to dwell in, 399
  - Israel's right to, legends explaining, 322 n316
  - Israel swearing not to reconquer, 1081 n39
  - as land of living, 837 n958
  - land of Philistines as part of, 262 n53
  - Messianic kingdom to be confined to, 401 n345
  - Moses not allowed to enter, 515

Holy Land (cont.)

- mountains of, to be ground into powder, one of seven wonders of Messiah, 1021
- no revelations made to prophets outside of, 1032 n27
- in possession of strangers, 196 n82
- possessions acquired outside of, 304, 306 n274
- promise of God to Jacob concerning, 277
- Shekinah dwelling in, 260
- Shekinah not revealing self outside of, 1032 n27
- size of, 709 n520
- superiority of, at time of resurrection, 401 n345
- See also* Israel (land); Palestine
- Holy of Holies
  - angels remaining outside of, 453 n4
  - falling within precincts of Shem, 156
  - place where meteor fell, 11 n39
  - priest raising curtain of, on pilgrimage festivals, 644
  - waters below, 924 n70
  - See also* Hekhal; Holy Place; sanctuary; Tabernacle; Temple
- Holy Place
  - of Tabernacle, 48
  - in territory of Benjamin, 409
  - See also* Hekhal; Holy of Holies; sanctuary; Tabernacle; Temple
- holy places
  - seven destroyed by Esau, 264, 268 n77
- holy spirit
  - adorning Esther, 1166
  - answering Eliezer, 226
  - causing Egyptians to love and fear Israelites, 543 n232
  - crying out against Judah for marrying a Canaanite, 344
  - departing from Israel with death of last three prophets, 1124 n36
  - and Isaac
    - holy spirit filling I., 266
    - I. deserted by holy spirit, 264
  - and Jacob
    - holy spirit abandoning J. during time he grieved for Joseph, 405 n366
    - holy spirit enabling J. to bless Ephraim and Manasseh, 404

holy spirit (cont.)
   and Jacob (cont.)
     revelation of holy spirit to J., 290
   joy as necessary condition for manifestation of, 268 n94
   one of five things in First Temple only, 1123-1124 n36
   revealing to Rebekah words of Isaac and Esau, 265
   Shekinah as, 276 n124
   See also God: spirit of; spirit(s): of Lord honey
   from bees of Paradise given to Asenath, 427 n432 flowing from trees in Palestine, 709
   one of rivers in Paradise, 507
   as stream from tree of life, 127 n60
   See also bees; manna; milk: and honey honeycomb
   Torah as sweet as, 286
 Honi (i.e., Onias)
   sleeping for 70 years, 1091 n58
 hoopoe, 961 n39
   story of Solomon and, 958-959
   wild cock identified with, 975 n85 Hophni
   image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
   and Phinehas, descendants of Aaron killed by Goliath, 916
   as righteous man slain by Philistines, 223
   son of Eli, 893 n26
 Hor, Mount
   Moses looking at Holy Land from, 814
   See also Abarim, Mount; Nebo, Mount; Pisgah, Mount Horeb, Mount
   defective spelling of, 501 n113
   as holy mount, 501, 501 n113
   Moses sent to, to fetch water, 575 moving toward Moses, 501 name, meaning of ("sword"), 500
   one of six names of Mount Sinai, 593
   as place God desired for His abode, 500
   as place where God revealed law, 500 sheep not allowed to graze on, 501 n113

Horeb, Mount (cont.)
   six names of (mountain of God; Bashan; mountain of humps; mountain of abode; Sinai), 500, 501 n113
 horn four in number, in four corners of Tabernacle (kingdom, priesthood, Shekinah, Torah), 648
   as symbol of David's everlasting kingdom, 915 n22
   used by Pharaoh against Israelites, 559
 hornet(s)
   cure for sting of, 43
   penetrating rocks and killing Amorites, 756 n701, 918 n42 remaining on east side of Jordan, 755 sent by God against Amorites, 755 spitting venom across Jordan against Canaanites, 755 springing forth from remains of horse, 42 n190
   two kinds of, 756 n702
   See also wasp
 horse(s)
   being dragged to death by, 1048, 1051 n65
   bred with ass by Adam, 324, 324 n322 cherub having form of mare, 561 n44, 561 n47 fiery, and translation of Enoch, 123 heavenly mare of Pharaoh, 558, 561 n44 use of, in warfare, 314
   worshiped by Sepharvites, 1044
 horseman
   Elijah appearing as, 1001
 Hosea
   burial of, in Safed, 1040
   death of, in Babylon, 1040
   descendant of Reuben, 318
   first to try to lead Israel back to God, 318, 332
   marriage of, 1039-1040
     as prophetic vision, 1041 n23
   one of three great prophets, 1039
   son of Beeri, prophet and prince, 1039
   time of activity of, 1041 n20
   wife of, Gomer of Diblaim, 1041 n23

Hoshea
   Assyria taking tribes into exile in reign of, 1044
   name, changed by Moses to Joshua, 706 son of Nun, spy representing tribe of Ephraim, 706 hospitality
   of Abraham, 206 n130, 223, 224 n223, 225
   to archangels, 204
   mirrored by acts of God, 206 n138 forbidden in Sodom, 212 importance of providing provisions to departing guest, 919-920 n50
   of Jethro to Moses, 902 n60 of Jews of Hebron, 249
   of Lot, 214 n176
   toward angels, 212
   merit of, 984 n8
   as one good quality of Micah, 882
   and Shekinah, 206 n134
   of Shunammite, 1028, 1029 n14
   of widow of Zarephath, 997 n11
   See also strangers; traveler(s); wayfarer hosts of heaven
   fighting against Sisera, 868
 hot springs
   in time of flood, 151 n48
 hour smallest fraction of, 770, 771 n758
 house
   with many doors, 224 n223
   as metaphor for wife, 155 n60
 housefly
   as cure for sting of hornet, 43
 Hozai (prophet), 1058 n104
 Huldah (prophetess) active among women, 1068
   contemporary of Jeremiah, 1068
   descendant of Joshua and Rahab, 1059 having academy in Jerusalem, 1062 n117 married to Shallum son of Tikvah, 1030 name, meaning of ("weasel"), 870 n75, 1062 n117
   one of two eminent women in Bible, 1061-1062 n117
   pride of, 870 n75
   Rahab as ancestress of, 843
   relation of, to Jeremiah, 1059
   supervising one of seven classes of women, 23 n97

Hulta

- attending Esther on Sundays, 1142
- one of seven Jewish attendants of Esther, 1142
- human beings. See man (human beings; humanity)
- human figure
  - carved by Moses on piece of Joseph's cup, 429
- humanity. See man (human beings; humanity)
- humility
  - of Aaron, 743
  - of Abraham, 236 n267
  - David rewarded for, 406 n376
  - Ephraim rewarded for, 406 n376
  - Joktan rewarded for, 406 n376
  - lessons in, concerning Solomon, 971-973
  - of letter alef, 4
  - of Moses, 700
  - proverb about vine and, 406 n376
  - as qualification of prophet, 633 (see also prophet[s]: qualifications of)
- hunger
  - one of seven evils, 450
- hunting
  - and Esau, 257, 259 n51, 261, 269
  - E. accompanied by Satan in, 264-265
  - and Nimrod, 257
- Huppim (son of Benjamin), 380
- name
  - changed to Hupham, 434
  - meaning of, 380
- Hur (son of Miriam)
  - and Aaron the Levite
    - holding up Moses' arms during battle against Amalek, 581
  - leaders when Moses was on Mount Sinai, 620
- image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
- one of martyred prophets, according to Josephus, 1078 n30
- one of seven pious men of world, 968 (see also under pious: men)
- slain by people, 620, 622 n265
- Hurfita ("haste")
  - allusion to Friday, because people hasten to prepare for Sabbath, 1144 n77
- Hurfita ("little ewe-lamb")
  - one of seven Jewish attendants of Esther, attending Esther on Fridays, 1143

hurricane

- sent by God three times (over Job's house; when Jonah found in ship; when God revealed Self to Elijah on Horeb), 458 n24
- See also* lightning; storm; thunder; thunderstorms
- husbandry
  - love of, as cause of downfall of Uzziah, Cain, Noah, and Lot, 1042 n30
- Hushai the Archite
  - counseling David about Absalom, 932
- Husham
  - succeeding Jobab as third king of Esau's sons, 325 n323, 416
- Hushim (son of Dan)
  - deaf, 414
  - killing Esau, 414
  - son of Dan and Elfalet, 348
  - wanting to proceed with burial of Jacob, 414

hyena

- colors of, 43 n190
- sexual metamorphosis of, 41 n177, 43 n190
- transformation of, into demon, 43 n190

hyssop

- meaning of, symbolizing Israel as God's treasure, 535

I

Ibicus

- identified with Anoko, 180 n45

Ibzan (judge)

- identified with Boaz, 864 n31, 879 n113
- not inviting Samson's parents to wedding banquets, 877

Ichabod

- birth of, 894 n33
- grandson of Eli, 894 n33
- name, meaning of, 894 n33
- as seventh-month child, 890 n13

Iddo (prophet)

- man of God out of Judah, 883 n133
- one of those called "man of God" in Scripture, 838 n965 (see also man of God)
- Shunammite as mother of, 1028 n10
- Shunammite as wife of, 1028

identification

- by means of affinity of blood and bone, 950
- Idne. See Adne Sadeh
- idol(s)
  - and Abraham's youth, 182-183
  - brought by Israelites from Egypt, 567 n72
  - burning of, in Gehenna, on day of judgment, 558 n41
  - in dream of Joseph, 330
  - on earrings of Shechemites, 317 n295
  - of Egyptians, destroyed in tenth plague, 537-538
  - falling to ground, 173 n24
  - generation of Enosh as first worshippers of, 117
  - with hatchet, 185-186, 186 n50
  - punishment of, 558 n41
  - sacrifices offered to, by daughters-in-law of Isaac, 263
  - taken by Jacob from sons and destroyed, 316
  - worship of, forbidden, 69
- See also* idolatry
- idolaters
  - corpses of, hung on gallows, 780-781 n790
- idolatry
  - and Abraham
    - A. said to have composed book of laws on, 191 n80
    - during youth, 182
  - of Ahaz, 1043
  - of Asa's mother and/or grandmother, 986 n18
  - as cause of flood, 140 n17
  - coming from fallen angels, 121 n57
  - commandment against, 605
  - idolatry as infringement of First Commandment, 609 n234
  - consequences of, 117
  - of descendants of Noah, 167
  - desire for
    - eradicated from Israel in days of Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, 1128 n57
    - eradicated from Israel in days of Mordecai and Esther, 1128 n57
  - ephod of Aaron atoning for, 650
  - of generation of flood, 135
  - of Hagar, 221 n216
  - impurity of, to be removed from Israel in time to come, 677 n417

- idolatry (cont.)
 of Ishmael, 221 n216
 of Israelites (see also Israel: idolatry of) idolatry in Egypt, 535 idolatry of all tribes except Reuben, Simeon, and Levi, 435 n6 idolatry of tribe of Dan, 579
 idolatry under Nebuchadnezzar, 1134 n15
 Israel addicted to idolatry during reign of Ahab, 988 n35
 Israel free from idolatry during reign of Josiah, 949 n12
 Israel free from idolatry for only 20 years, 949 n12
 and Jacob
   J. cautioning sons against, 411
   Jeremiah warning against, 1071 n15
 and Jeroboam
   of J. and people, 984 n9
   J. tricking people into worshipping golden calves, 982-983
 Jezebel leading Ahab into, 987
 love of gold leading to, 440 men seduced to, by demons, 118 n54
 of Nebuchadnezzar, 1097
 one of things God repented of creating, 141 n20
 origin of, 118 n54
   in hero worship, 163 n83
   occupying Greeks, 118 n54
 rabbinic view of, 1072 n16
 as sin, 316
   as capital offense, 625 punishable by death by stoning, 779
   one of eight sins committed by Pharaoh, inhabitants of sinful cities, builders of Tower of Babel, Sennacherib, and Nebuchadnezzar, 562 n54, 1048 n60
   one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)
   one of three cardinal sins, 278, 280 n147
   one of three sins of generation of Enosh, 118 n55
 of Zepho, 419
See also avodah zarah; idol(s)
 Iebul. See Zebul
 Iehud. See Ehud
- Igal
 elder from tribe of Issachar, 696
 son of Joseph, spy representing tribe of Issachar, 705
- ignorance
 of law, no excuse for breaking law, 786
 of people before revelation of Torah, 611
- illness
 first, legend of, 238 n272
 as forerunner of death, 92 n111, 401 n357
See also disease(s); healing; magic arts; medicine; sickness; and under individual diseases
- image of jealousy
 fashioned by generation of exile, 1101 n93
- imago vocis*
 in revelation at Sinai, 612 n238
- immorality
 one of three cardinal sins, 278, 280 n147
 punished by fire, 212 n168
 as sin that hastened flood, 139
- immortal bird, 39 n150
- immortality
 of animals, 39 n150, 72, 517 n144 denied to Moses, 515
 of giants, 113 n44
 of heavenly beings, 47
- immortals, 131 n61 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
 to taste death in time to come, 885 n140
- impatience
 producing anger as her son, 102 n3
- incense
 bringing death on Nadab and Abihu, 729
 before Joseph, 367
 keeping angel of death at bay, 72
 offering of, 722
 spices for, 640
- incest
 of Amon, 1055, 1058 n112
 forbidden by commandments, 69
 of Jehoiakim, 1060
 of Manasseh, 1058 n112
 and nakedness, 158 n67
 one of eight sins committed by Pharaoh, inhabitants of sinful cities, builders of Tower of Babel, Sennacherib, and Nebuchadnezzar, 562 n54
- incest (cont.)
 one of three sins of generation of Enosh, 118 n55
- inclinations
 two in number, 448
See also evil inclination; good inclination
- India
 sages of, studying curative trees and spices, 157
- Indian influence and animal fables, 43 n190
- inebriate
 irresponsibility of, 779 n786
See also drunkenness; intemperance; intoxication; wine
- Ineffable Name. See Name, Ineffable; also God: names and titles of
- inextinguishable name, 306 n273
- infants
 death of, as punishment for sins of parents, 599 n196
 speaking, 134 n2
   Ben Sira, 1083 n42
   child of Zuleika, in defense of Joseph, 358
   as favorite subject in Jewish and Christian legends, 359 n134
   Jeremiah, 1067, 1083 n42
   Melchizedek, 134 n2
   speaking and walking, 170-171, 172 n15
   Moses, 476, 829
- Ingethel. See Gethel
- ingratitude
 as grave as idolatry, 874 n103
 of Joash, 1039 n16
 of Moabites and Ammonites, 1039 n16
- inheritance
 birthright and, 258
 laws of
   and daughters of Zelophehad, 785-786
   and succession of Solomon, 946 n3 and rights of firstborn, 219
See also birthright; firstborn; primogeniture
- injustice
 one of seven tempter spirits, 435
- ink
 heavenly, on forehead of Moses, 634
 pious marked with, by angel, 1075 n26

- innocents, slaughter of, 471-472
- insanity
one exception in beautiful and good world, 918
- inscription(s)
of Ahab, denying God of Israel, 987 found by David, about king reigning 1,000 years, 973 n79 Greek, in magnificent building, 972 on pillar found in Tangiers, Africa, concerning Canaanites, 848 n34 on Solomon's throne, 970 n70
on standards of tribes of Dan, Ephraim, and Judah, 686
- insects
Jonah annoyed by, 1034-1035
noxious, Elijah explaining purpose of, to R. Nehorai, 1010
See also under individual insects
- insight into Halakhah, aiding in building Tabernacle, 641
one of ten parts of body received from God, 606 (see also body, human)
- instruction
one of three natures of God according to Philo, 319 n304
- instruments, musical 1,000 playing on wedding night of Solomon, 948 played by women, 394
sacred, hidden by Baruch and Zedekiah until advent of Messiah, 1091
See also cithern; cymbals; flute; harp; ram(s): horn of; shofar; timbrel; trumpet(s)
- intemperance
in Sodom, 210 n155
See also drunkenness; inebriate; intoxication; wine
- intention
mattering more than deed, 655 n364
- intercession
doctrine of, in later authorities, 508 n118
Pharisaic doctrine of, 508 n118
- interest
exacted from Obadiah by Jehoram, 1027 n7
- intermarriage
law of, broken by Zimri, 781 n791
of Mahlon and Chilion, 862
prohibition of, 1124 n38
with Moabites, 864 n40
applied to Moabite males because of Ruth, 794 n845, 866 n64
- interpreter
in communications between Ahasuerus and Esther, 1174, 1177 n178 used by God to communicate with Eve, 76
- intoxication, 722
as cause of all sins, 155 n58
of Judah, 344
of people at coronation of Jeroboam, 984 n9
of Solomon when Temple completed, 949 n13
See also drunkenness; inebriate; intemperance; wine
- invisibility
of Asmodeus, on earth, 973
in Christian legends, 844 n13
of Elijah, 1020 n103
of Jochebed and Miriam, 474
as miracle, 844 n13
of sanctuary, 996
of spies at house of Rahab, 475 n35
- Ira (David's friend)
one of four heroes of tribe of Dan, 796 n854
teacher of David, 927
- Irad (descendant of Cain), 111
- Iranian influence on word Chalkidri, 40 n154
- Iranian mythology
and Ziz legends, 32-33 n139
- iron armor of Jashub, king of Tappuah, 314 (see also war/warfare; weapon[s]) associated with Rome, 648-649
not used in Tabernacle or Temple, 648
one of thrones of Nimrod made of, 162
second artificial heaven of Hiram made from, 1104
- tools
created on third day, to fell trees, 18 prohibited for work in Temple, 35
- Isaac
and Abraham
I. as chief mourner for A., 248 n317
I. indebted to merits of A., 261 (see also Abraham: merits of; merits)
I. resembling A., 251
I.'s reverence for A., 260
similarities between, 259, 942 n140
and Abraham and Jacob (see Abraham: and Isaac and Jacob)
age of
at death, 257
life span of I., 264
old age of I., 264
at time of Akedah, 37 years, 1079
and Akedah, 224
age of I. at time of, 253 n3, 1079 Akedah occurring on Day of Atonement, 230 injury to I. in, 233 n255
I. as hero of, 228 n229
I. as perfect sacrifice, 259-260
I. in Paradise after Akedah, 233 n255
I. returning after Akedah, 233 n254
I.'s terror at, 270 n101 remembrance of sacrifice of Akedah by two daily sacrifices, 232 n249 source of second of Eighteen Benedictions, 1126 willingness of I. to be sacrificed, 228, 251
and angels
I. accompanied by angel, 240
question of angels concerning I., 279 n134
tears of angels falling on eyes of I., 264
Balaam recounting history of, to Pharaoh, 482
beholding vision of Merkabah, 270 n101 bellwether of Abraham's flocks sacrificed instead of, 232 n245 binding of, 229 (see also Akedah) in conformity with law, 232 n242
birth of, 218-219
to aging parents, 179-180

Isaac (cont.)birth of (cont.)

- announcement of, 205
- bondage of Israel in Egypt reckoned from, 199
- celebration of, 224-225, 225 n226
- date of, 218, 219 n203
- on first day of Passover, 218
- keeping world from ceasing to exist, 219 n203
- as second of seven miracles visible to all, 219 n208 (see also miracle[s])
- as "seventh-month child," 890 n13
- sun shining splendidly on, 218

blessing

- Esau, 264
- Esau and Jacob before his death, 319-320
- leading to dispute between E. and J., 819
- God, 230
- Jacob, 263-68, 272
- Judah, 440
- Levi, 438
- Levi and Judah, 316-317

blindness of, 232 n243, 264

- cause of, 264, 267 n74
- disqualifying I. for priestly service, 268 n89
- effects on eating of, 264
- as first case of disease, 267 n74
- I. regaining sight, 267 n75
- as punishment for preferring Esau, 267 n74
- spiritual, 264

blood of, brought as sacrifice, 233 n255

burned to ashes and then brought back to life, 233 n255

as burnt offering, 225-226, 260

circumcision of, 218

- on eighth day, 251

as composer of Shokhen Ad, 1128 n58 (see also prayers, Jewish)

cunning of, 269

daughters-in-law of, offering sacrifices to idols, 263

death and burial of, 366 n169, 379

- burial of I., by Jacob alone, 415 n422 corpse of I., not decaying, 411-412 (see also under corpse[s])

death of I., by kiss of Shekinah, 411

Isaac (cont.)death and burial of (cont.)

- funeral of I., 320
- grave of I., dug by I. himself, 320
- I. wishing to be buried in Cave of Machpelah next to Abraham, 320
- last wish and will of, 319-320
- descendants of
  - redeemed from Gehenna by I., 263 n69
  - to be redeemed from Gehenna on day of judgment, 261
  - as true progeny of Abraham, 220 n214
- deserted by holy spirit, 264
- eating lentils after death of Abraham, 257
- Elihu son of Barachel identified with, 261, 460 n32
- and Esau
  - E. as blemished offspring of I., 406
  - I. and E.'s filial love, 264
  - I. attempting to reform E., 256 n31
  - I. bestowing power of sword on E., 263 n69
  - I. fooled by E., 255
  - I. not discerning wickedness of E., 264
  - I. (though dead) praying to God to have mercy on E., 414
- evil inclination not having any effect on, 412 (see also evil inclination)
- famine in time of, 259
  - compelling move to land of Philistines, 189
- as fifth of seven pious men, 682 (see also under pious: men)
- filial piety and modesty of, 262 n62
- as firstborn, 268 n89
- fulfilling commandment to honor father and mother, 593
- and Gerar
  - conversation of, concerning sins of progeny, 261
  - I. departing from, 260
  - I. giving tithe of all possessions to poor in, 260
  - I. settling in, 260
  - Philistine wells running dry when I. leaves, 261
  - trees failing to yield their fruit when I. leaves, 261

Isaac (cont.)

and God

- God appearing to I., 263 n67
- God demanding I. as sacrifice, 251
- I. pleading with God for descendants, 263 n69
- image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
- as indulgent father, 434 n1
- and Ishmael (see also Ishmael)
  - Isaac mourning for Ishmael, 248 n317
  - Isaac receiving all honors, 248 n317
  - quarrels between, 219, 251
- and Jacob
  - I. commanding J. to go to house of Bethuel for wife, 272
  - I. frightened by J., 271 n101
  - I. given wine by J., 266
  - I.'s tenfold blessing of J., 266
  - resemblance between, 396 n327
- and Jacob and Esau
  - I. dividing possessions between J. and E., 320
- and Jacob and Judah
  - as judges in case of Tamar, 345
- and Joseph
  - I. mourning for J., 343 n69
- and land, abundant yield of, 260
- marriage of, 237
  - late in life, 251
  - to Rebekah, 251
- merits of (see also merits)
  - one of five charms to protect Jacob, 300 n247
  - reducing years of Egyptian servitude, 263 n69
  - to be rewarded in future, 261
- missionary activity of, 328 n1
- and Moses
  - I. appearing at death of M., 837
  - I. as prophet as great as M., 1058 n104
  - superiority of M. to I., 837
- name, meaning of, 219 n203, 255 n28
  - I. as name of Abraham's pet (bellwether of flock), 232 n245
  - I. as one of six men given name by God before birth, 201
  - never changed, 203 n122, 260
  - numerical value of, 263 n69
  - should have been Yishak instead of Yitzhak, 263 n69
- not mentioned by Isaiah as one of fathers, 263 n69

Isaac (cont.)

not participating in erection of altar, 231 n241
 one of eight whose corpse not touched by worms, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])
 one of five pious men for sake of whose merits Israel to be redeemed, 502 (see also under pious: men)
 one of seven patriarchs of world, 968
 one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
 one of seven pious men erecting altar, 771 (see also under pious: men)
 one of ten just men in Israel, 628 in Paradise
   I. unworthy to pronounce blessing over wine in, 939 purpose of stay in, after Akedah, 233 n255 for three years, 231
 as perfect sacrifice, 259-260
 and Philistines, 259-263
   covenant between, 261, 263 n66, 293
   enmity between, 260
   I. interceding for Philistines, 263 n65
 piety of piety of Rebekah equal to, 251-252
 pleading with God for Israel, 1079
 prayer of accompanied by sacrifice on Mount Moriah, 253 n8 for deliverance of Jacob from Canaanites, 310
   efficaciousness of, 253 n10
   heard by God, 252
   I. instituting daily afternoon prayer, 240, 1128 n58
   on Mount Moriah, 251-252
   on site of field Abraham bought from Ephron, 242 n300
 as prophet, 343 n69
   knowing Joseph's fate, 342 prophetic eye of, 272
 punishment of
   blindness as, 267 n74
   for lack of paternal love, 276 n124
   loss of prophetic spirit as, 267 n74

Isaac (cont.)

and Rebekah childlessness of
   due to both of them, 253 n8
   duration of, 253 n7
   I. blaming R. for childlessness, 251
   I. pretending R. was sister, 260, 274 n123
 marriage of childless, 251
   not entirely happy, 251
   piety of I. equal to that of R., 251-252 represented as blind man on monument of Jebusites, 921 n51 resignation of, to God's will, 232 n242
 returning to Canaan, 261 revealing mysteries of nature to Job, 261
 reward of, 260
 at right hand of God, 450 (see also God: right hand of) sacrifice of (see also Akedah; Isaac: and Akedah)
   as burnt offering, 260
 and Sarah
   I. as firstborn of mother, 268 n89
   I. mourning for S., 234, 251
   S. dressing I. in finery, 226
 seeing earthly and heavenly Temple, 817 n905
 settling in Hebron, 261
 and Shekinah
   death of I. by kiss of Shekinah, 411
   I. as one of six righteous men who drew Shekinah back from six heavens, 473
   I. beholding face of Shekinah, 837
   I. giving up life at appearance of Shekinah, 232 n243
   Shekinah deserting I., 270, 276 n124
 special virtue of, excelling in prayer, 715 n543 suspicious of Eliezer, 242 n299, 301
 tithe of, 438
 to redeem descendants from Gehenna on day of judgment, 261 virtues coming to Jacob through, 253 n1

Isaac (cont.)

walking on head, 242 n301
 wealth of, 260, 262 n60, 276 n124 wearing garments of Adam, 265
 wells dug by motivation for digging, 263 n68
   number of, 263 n63
   previously stopped up, 260
 Isaac Loria, R. See Luria, R. Isaac Isaiah
   age at death, 120 years, 1055
   beholding Divine Throne, 1040-1041
   as blood relative of king, 1044 n42
   as comforter of mourners for Zion, 1043 n35 daughter of, marrying Hezekiah, 1054
   death of
   being sawed in two, 1057 n103
   by hand of Manasseh, 1055
   last words of, 1056 n96
   martyrdom of, 1057 n103
   describing self as "servant of Lord," 805 n880 (see also servant of Lord)
   and Hezekiah, 1049
   I. rebuking Hezekiah for showing heathen holy ark and tablets, 1051
   and Manasseh
   I. condemned to death by M., 1054
   kinship between, 1058 n105
   and Obadiah
   prophesying in 71 tongues, 1058 n104
   receiving permission from Great Sanhedrin to prophesy, 1058 n104
   one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
   one of four men described in Bible as creatures of God, 1071 n13
 as prophet, 612 n242 (see also Isaiah: and Obadiah) call of, 1042 n32
   of consolation, 1041
   distinguished above all other prophets, 1042-1043 n32, 1058 n104
   first vision of, 1042 n29
   as great a prophet as Moses, 1058 n104
   one of four prophets appointed to proclaim punishment of descendants of Lot, 214

Isaiah (cont.)as prophet (cont.)

- one of martyred prophets, according to Josephus, 1078 n30
- one of three great prophets, 1039
- prophetic spirit of, received from God, 1043 n32
- retaining consciousness in moments of prophecy, 612 n242
- respected by Ahaz, 1043
- son of Amoz, 1042 n25
- swallowed up by tree, 1055, 1057 n103
- Tamar as ancestress of, 344
- time of activity of, 1041 n20, 1042 n25
- touched with live coal
  - by Michael, 1043 n36
  - as punishment for slandering Israel, 1041
- vision of, 1043 n36
  - compared with that of Ezekiel, 1043 n36

Isaiah, Book of

- Hezekiah and associates as editors of, 1071 n15
- Hezekiah having copies made of, 1051

Iscah ("the seer")

- another name for Sarah, 178 n38, 178

Ish

- name Adam gave to self, 66

Ishah

- name given by Adam to wife, 66

Ishbi

- slain by David and Abishai, 934

Ishbosheth

- descendant of Benjamin, 317
- uncle of Mephibosheth, 929 n79

ishim (angels)

- made of snow and fire, 504

Ishmael

- accompanying Abraham and Isaac, 226
- banishment of, 219-221
  - reasons for, 220 n214
- birth of, prophesied to Hagar, 201
- as blemished offspring of Abraham, 406
- catching locusts and sacrificing them to idols, 220 n211
- children of, refusing Torah, 593
- circumcision of, at 13 years, 251
- committing adultery and murder, 220 n211

Ishmael (cont.)

- death of, 273
- entering Paradise as pious man, 248 n317 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
- Esau conspiring with, 273
- fever of, 220
- as firstborn, 219, 222, 226
- first legitimate child of father, 268 n89
- going to land of Canaan, 222
- and Isaac
  - Ishmael persecuting Isaac, 220 n211
  - Ishmael taunting Isaac for being circumcised on eighth day, 251
- quarrels between, 219
- journeying to Abraham in land of Philistines with family, 222
- one of six men given name by God before birth, 201
- punishment of idolatry of, 221 n216
- repentance of, 237, 248 n317
- returning to wilderness with family, 221
- rule of, represented by ram, 198
- to turn to path of righteousness, 199
- wife/wives of
  - beating children and cursing Ishmael, 221
- Gigit as, 113 n42
- I. divorcing, 221-222
- two, 221-222

Ishmael, R.

- as ideal of beauty, 60 n24

Ishmael b. Jose, R.

- censured by Elijah for prosecuting Jewish thieves and criminals, 1006

Ishmaelite kingdoms

- 12 in number, 672 n399

Ishmaelites

- causing death of 80,000 priests who passed Nebuchadnezzar, 1086
- identified with Arabs, 206 n136
- and Joseph
  - Ishmaelites buying J. from Midianites, 333, 336
- making alliance with sons of Esau against sons of Jacob, 416
- merchandise of
  - bags of perfumery, 337
  - pitch and skins of beasts, 337
- as merchants, 337

Ishmaelites (cont.)

- one of things God repented of creating, 141 n20
- territory of, invaded by Tarshish, 369
- treatment of Jews by, 221 n215

Ishmar

- Babylonian myth of descent of, into hell, 15 n56

Isidao

- identified with Zerori, 315 n292

Islamic legends

- about Aaron's rod, 731 n600
- of angel of death assuming form of ram, 307 n275
- explaining how Moses buried self, 833 n952
- about Joseph eating little during famine, 370 n190
- through misunderstanding, stating that Adam donated 40 years to David, 912 n12
- about Solomon's knowledge of languages of animals, 958 n34
- story of Muslim pasha dropping sword into David's tomb, 942-943
- story of travels of Elijah and R. Joshua b. Levi, 1015 n94
- of two Pharaohs in Joseph's time, 370 n195
- See also* Muslim ideas; Muslim writers

Israel (angel)

- belonging to order of hayyot, 17 n70 (see also hayyot, holy)

Israel (kingdom)

- division of, into Judah and Israel, 981-982
- northern kingdom (Israel)
  - renouncing house of David and loyalty to sanctuary, 984 n10

Israel (land)

- allotment of, 851-853
  - time required for, 852
  - by Urim and Thummim, 852
- conquest of, 845-853
  - lasting seven years, 852 n46
- division of, 814
  - carried out by decision of Urim and Thummim, 852-853 n47
- lasting seven years, 852 n46

Israel (cont.)

Israelites commanded by God not to enter Palestine by force, 716

one of six gifts as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572, 584 (see also gifts; Sabbath: observance of)

shown to Moses by God, 813-814

See also Holy Land; Palestine

Israel (nation; people)/Israelites and Aaron

Israelites convinced of priesthood of A., 728-731

Israelites loving A. more than Moses, 740

all of nature mourning for, 1081 n39

and angels

angels chanting praise of Israelites, in second heaven, 505 n117

angels consulting Israel about secrets, 775

Israelites preceding angels in praising God, 17 n66, 562

Israelites preferred to angels, 13

Israel's superiority to angels, 775 n774

apostasy of, God as cause of, 998 n18

assigned to God, 164

as bride, receiving gifts, 591, 601 n200

as bridegroom, 601-602 n200

called "sons of rebellion," 802

censuses of, 636-638 (see also census[es] of Israel)

at arrangement into camp divisions, 636

at distribution of promised land, 636

occasions on which censuses taken, 636-637

after people returned from exile, 637

in reign of David, 637

by Saul when he set out against Amalek, 637

by Saul when he set out against Nahash, 637

at time of Exodus, 636

after worship of golden calf, 636

children of

born same night as Moses, saved on account of his merits, 479 (see also Moses: merits of; merits)

Israel (cont.)

children of (cont.)

born same night as Moses, 600,000 in number, 479

male

born in fields and taken care of by angels and God, 472 growing long hair to hide selves, 472

suckling on pebbles, 472

swallowed by earth until grown, 472 sacrificed to idols of Egyptians, 467

coming originally from Babylon and returning there, 984 n15 commanded to observe Abrahamic covenant, Sabbath, and commandment against idolatry, 596 compared to Adam, 713 compared with stone, 1169 n159

confessing sins on Mount of Judah, 868

and creation

Israel taken into special consideration when man created, 48 defended against accusations, 2

as descendants of Shem, 158 n68

described as eagle, 1155-1156 described as flock of sheep, 859, 860 n20 described as vineyard, 774-775

desiring a king, 895

devoted to study of Torah during time of Samuel and Saul, 988 n35 different kinds of trees symbolizing Israel, 1175 distinguished from all other nations, 773

by circumcision, 773

by costume, 773

by food, 773

by token on doorposts, 773 divided into groups by Moses, 684-685 divisions of, three in number (priests, Levites, laymen), 592 dominion of Persians over, as result of victory of Dabiel (angel) over Gabriel, 1116 n7

duplicity of, 602 n204

and Edom

Edom's unbrotherly attitude toward Israel, 735-737

Israel (cont.)

and Edom (cont.)

Israel forbidden by God from bringing war against Edomites, 736

Israel to gain control of Edom in world to come, 755

in Egypt

bondage of Israel in Egypt, 465

duration of, 86 years, 552

as punishment for Abraham going to Egypt, 191 n66

as punishment for Abraham's lack of trust in God, 199 n110

as punishment for Abraham's making scholars engage in war, 986 n22

revealed to Abraham, 199

children used as building material, 880

enmity of Egyptians toward Israel, 470 n12

reasons for, 465, 466 n5

God lending ear to prayer of Israelites, as source of 16th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127

God performing 13 deeds for, 640

God sending three deliverers (Moses, Aaron, Miriam), 648 increased suffering of, 520-523

Israelites addressed by God in Egyptian language, 602-603

Israelites losing honored position with death of Joseph, 466 n3

Israelites not affected by plagues, 530

Israelites oppressed by Egyptians, 521

Israelites profiting from first plague by selling water, 527

Israelites redeemed from Egypt, 509-511, 538-540

on account of merits of Amram and Jochebed, 474 n30 (see also merits) on account of merits of fathers, 499 n106 (see also merits)

for sake of Jacob, 256 n35

Israelites refusing to listen to Aaron and five sons of Zerah, 489

Israel (cont.)in Egypt (cont.)

Israelites speaking Egyptian language, 602-603

Israelites speaking Hebrew language, 604 n209

Israelites to be punished for demanding flesh to eat, 573

Israelites upset with Moses and Aaron on account of increased oppression, 521

Israelites walled up in Pharaoh's building projects, 521 latter years of, 497-499

number of increasing despite Pharaoh's plan, 467, 468

60 myriads minus 3,000, 636

remarriages of, 475

response of Israelites to Pharaoh's order that male children be drowned, 473

600,000 in number, 465

suffering beginning after death of Levi, 465

envied by Balaam, 819

existence of world depending on, 1151-1152 n107

and Exodus (see also Egypt; Exodus; and under Moses)

five tokens granted to Israel after Exodus, 565

Israelites cured of their diseases in Exodus, 542

Israelites each clothed in purple by angels at Exodus, 688 majority of Israelites of Exodus afflicted with defects and diseases, 675

and wealth of Egyptians

Israelites capturing public treasure of Egyptians at Red Sea, 541

Israelites going out from Egypt with treasures, 397, 543 n232, 543 n233

Israelites receiving private wealth of Egyptians, 540-541 fathers of, sons of Jacob, 433

as firstborn son of God, 83

first commandment to, to release Hebrew slaves in seventh year, 523 n168

and four kingdoms

Israel becoming subject to four kingdoms through worship of Peor, 779 n786

Israel (cont.)

given three gifts on account of merits of Aaron, 573, 574 n113 (see also merits)

given title "elect of God" in Scripture, 912 n1

and God

God as King of, 824 n918

God making covenant with Israel for sake of Torah, 634

God proclaiming redemption for, source of seventh of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127

Israel as possession of God, 596, 636

Israel judged by God during day, 214 n170

Israel loved by God on account of Jacob, 256 n35

Israel receiving three crowns from God, 670 (see also crown[s])

Israel thought of by God before creation of world, 772 like student and master, 775 testify to singular sanctity of Sabbath, 82 n98

having evil tongues during time of Samuel and Saul, 988 n35 having three national duties after entering Holy Land (establish monarchy, annihilate Amalek, build Temple), 897 n47

Hebrew language reserved for, 164

history of

as Moses' last words to Joshua, 815 n902

recounted by Ahasuerus, 1156-1157

recounted by Balaam, 772-773

shown to Moses by God, 814

and Holy Land

Israel entering Holy Land, 256

n35

Israel entering Holy Land, as source of Nineteenth

Benediction, 1127

Israel's exclusive right to Holy Land, legends explaining, 322 n316 identified with Logos by Philo, 301 n253 idolatry of (see also idolatry: of Israelites)

in Egypt, 535

Israel (cont.)idolatry of (cont.)

Israel addicted to idolatry during reign of Ahab, 988 n35

Israel free from idolatry during reign of Josiah, 949 n12

Israel free from idolatry for only 20 years, 949 n12

Israelites seduced to idolatry by Midianite priest Aud, 871

Israelites worshipping Beelzebub, 872

Jeroboam and Jehu seducing Israel to idolatry, 403

as innocent dove, 198

as kingdom of priests, 598 n191

as lamb for atonement, 401 n345 merits of (see also merits) redemption on account of, 499

n106

Metatron (identified with Michael) as guardian angel of, 201

n248

Michael and Gabriel as guardian

angels of, 166 n91

Michael as guardian angel of, 817

Moab's hatred of, 792

moon as symbol of, 25 n100

and Moses

Israelites blessed by M., 586-587, 819-826

Israelites divided into groups by M., 684-685

Israelites lamenting for M., 826-827

Israelites learning art of writing from M., 484 n67

Israelites receiving three gifts on account of merits of M., 573, 574 n113 names of, 70 in number, 649 n348 nations to bow down twice before, 236 n267

officers of appointed as judges, 779

seven myriads, 8,600 in number, 779

one part of carried off by cloud, 1089 n56

exiled to Daphne near Antiochia, 1089 n56

praising God and passing through Red Sea, as source of 15th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127

and promised land

Israelites commanded by God not to enter Palestine by force, 716

Israel (cont.)

and proselytes, dispute between about offerings, 717 prosperity of, under Saul, 637 protectors of, 2
 punishment of
 by Amalek, 578
 coming from sanctuary, 730
 for idolatry under Nebuchadnezzar, 1134 n15
 for lack of reverence for ark, 892
 for permitting Micah's idolatry, 881
 for rebellion, lasting 40 years, 714-715
 for whoredom with Moabite
 women, 779
 reaping abundant harvest in land of Philistines, as source of ninth of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127
 redemption of on account of God's mercy, 499
 n106
 on account of Israel's own merits, 499 n106
 on account of merits of pious of future generations, 499 (see also merits)
 in future days, on 15 Nisan, 541
 Israel to be redeemed by Messiah for sake of Jacob,
 256 n35
 Israel to be redeemed through
 Moses, 428
 from "kingdoms" in time to
 come, 543 n235
 reasons for, 499 n106
 as reward for faith of Abraham,
 198, 536 n201
 for sake of merits of five pious men (see also under pious:
 men), 502
 rewarded for trust in God, 562 rewarded for trust in Moses, 562 and Rome, two nations destined to be hated by all, 252
 as ruler of world, 162 n82
 and Sabbath
 Israel as spouse of Sabbath, 606 testify to unity of God, 82 n98 saved on account of merits of fathers, 1163 (see also merits)
 and Shema Israelites reciting Shema upon awakening and retiring, 775

Israel (cont.)

at Sinai Israelites dying and being revived at revelation of Torah, 603
 Israelites preparing for revelation, 598-599
 Israelites receiving three gifts,
 612 n240 (see also gifts)
 Israelites warned to remain pure for three days before revelation, 612 n239
 sins of, 564 n58
 sacrifices to atone for, 198
 two to atone for (selling Joseph, worshipping golden calf),
 659 songs of, ten in number, 562
 strength of, lying in Torah, 773
 n765
 sullenness of, 565
 sun and moon shedding light for sake of, 1154
 teaching art of writing to Phoenicians, 484 n67
 thornbush as symbol of, 502
 to be scattered over all the earth, 816
 and Torah Israelites not receiving Torah
 until having performed
 three ceremonies (circumcision, baptism, sacrifice), 598 Israelites repeating Torah four
 times, 634
 Israelites rewarded with heavenly gifts for accepting Torah,
 602 n204 (see also gifts)
 Israelites studying Torah morning and night, 775
 necessary for existence of world,
 1166 n143
 Torah as bride of Israel, 820
 Torah offered to Israel, 596-598
 transgressing all Ten Commandments by worshipping idols of Micah, 883 n131
 tribes of, divisions of, 553 n23 troubles of, 272
 two commandments for, as reward
 for Abraham's humility,
 196, 198 n106
 uniqueness of, testified to by God and Sabbath, 82 n98 universe depending on preservation
 of, 1161 n122

Israel (cont.)

warfare of Ammonites and Moabites committing four acts of hostility against Israel, 214
 against Arameans, 850-851,
 1031 n22
 attack of Amalek on Israelites as punishment for desecration of Sabbath, 580 n136
 as punishment for lack of faith and neglect of Torah and laws, 577-580
 Israelites advancing against Amorites, 716-717
 Israelites defeated by Amorites,
 717 Israelites defeating Sihon, 751-752 Israelites indifferent to spoils of battle against Og, 756
 n698 Israelites learning of miracle of leveling mountains from two lepers, 750 n662
 Israelites not to wage war against Moabites, 758
 Israelites proclaiming peace to city before waging war, 792 Israelites saved by Name from mountain wielded by Og,
 756 n695
 Israelites saving Egyptians in battle against Zepho, 465 Israelites wounded but not killed by enemies, 717-718 n556
 against kings of Canaan, 845-
 846, 850 n44
 lasting seven years, 851 against Midian
 each tribe sending 2,000 warriors, 795 n850
 humane warfare of Israelites, 795 Israelites chosen by lot for war, 794
 Israelites hiding from war, 794 observance of religious statutes during, 797 return from, 797-798
 Moab and Midian allied against
 Israel, 759
 war against, in time of Jephthah, 214 in wilderness (see also wilderness)
 at Arnon, 749-750
 four opinions of what Israelites should do in wilderness, 551

Israel (cont.)in wilderness (cont.)

- garments given to Israelites by angels in wilderness, 544 n242
- ingratitude of Israelites recounted by God, 713-714
- Israelites attempting to return to Egypt, as second of ten temptations, 565
- Israelites compared to Abraham, 569
- Israelites complaining to Moses about lack of water after death of Miriam, 732
- Israelites criticizing Moses, 586
- Israelites denying God, 712
- Israelites desiring flesh to eat, 699
- Israelites desiring to make idol, one of ten temptations, 757
- Israelites dying after eating quail, 699
- Israelites entering wilderness with no provisions, 542
- Israelites lamenting without cause on 9 Av, 712
- Israelites murmuring against God and Moses, 693, 747
- Israelites murmuring against God and Moses at Zalmonah, 749
- Israelites murmuring for flesh, one of ten temptations, 757
- Israelites not bringing any sacrifices, 709 n519
- Israelites not permitted any meat except sacrificial, 709 n519
- Israelites preparing graves on 8 Av, 715
- Israelites protected in camp by cloud, 579
- Israelites punished by death on 9 Av, 715
- Israelites punished by serpents at Punon, 747-749
- Israelites punished for rebellion, 713-716
- Israelites rebelling against Moses after punishment of Korah, 729
- Israelites receiving water from rock on account of merits of those in Cave of Machpelah, 732 (see also merits)

Israel (cont.)in wilderness (cont.)

- Israelites singing song of praise to well in valley of Arnon, 749-750
- Israelites throwing stones at cloud of glory, 712, 713 n538
- Israelites trusting in Lord, 542
- Israelites waiting for Miriam to be healed, 703
- Israelites wanting Dathan and Abiram to be leaders, 712
- Israelites wanting to return to Egypt, 712, 746
- Israelites wanting to stone Moses for lack of water, 737
- lack of faith of Israelites, 565
- number of Israelites dying each year, 733 n604
- ten temptations of, 757-758
- world created for sake of, 48, 1165
- and worship of golden calf, 619-622
- Israelites doomed to suffering on account of worship of golden calf, 620
- Israelites losing power over angel of death by worshipping golden calf, 620
- Israelites suffering death by water as result of worshipping golden calf, 628 n282
- years of disfavor of, 716-717
- See also* Jew(s); Jewish people; Judaism
- Israel (person)
  - as beloved of God, 168 n4
  - called "man," 145 n28
  - as friend of God, 168 n4
  - and God, Israel disobeying, 2
  - Laban as archenemy of, 760
  - name, meaning of, 301-302 n253
  - name of heavenly being spoken of by geonic mystics, 301 n253
  - as name of patriarch, 256-257 n35
  - one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
  - right of, to Cave of Machpelah, legends explaining, 322 n316
  - sons of
    - Jacob's 12 sons as, 305 n259
    - Jewish people as, 305 n259
    - meaning of, 305 n259

Israel Baal Shem Tov, R.,

- as founder of Ḥasidim, 982 n5
- unrivaled in Ḥasidic Kabbalah, 1019

Israelites. See Israel (nation; people)/Israelites

Issachar (son of Jacob)

- age of, at death, 122 years, 442
- ancestor of tribe of wise, 343 n61
- blessing of, by Jacob, 408
- born as reward for dudaim, 440
- compact of, with Zebulun, 289 n194
- death of, 442
- descendants of
  - to be members of Sanhedrin, 408
  - to be scholars who fix calendar, 408
- fifth son of Leah, 287
- inventing explanation about what happened to Joseph, 339
- marriage of, to daughter of Jobab, grandson of Eber, 348
- name
  - inscribed on standard of tribe of Judah, 685
  - meaning of ("a reward"), 287, 433, 441
  - one of weak among sons of Jacob, 396 n324
  - rewarded for devotion to Torah, 408
- sons of, 433
- testament of, 440-442
- to join Judah in camp in east, 685
- to make Mizraim like Sodom, 385
- to study Torah, 408
- tribe of
  - blessed by Moses, 822
  - confessing to consulting idols, 855
  - devoting itself to study of Torah, 287
  - donkey as emblem of, 688-689 n447
  - elders from (Zuar, Uzza, Igal, Palti, Othniel, Haggi), 696
  - flag of, black with picture of sun and moon, 688
  - house of instruction and Great Sanhedrin to be located in, 822
  - known for wise words, 433
  - as mathematicians, 434 n5
  - Moses' psalm of, 823
  - observing Torah, 433
  - prince of (Nethanel), 679

Issachar (cont.)
 tribe of (cont.)
   renowned for wisdom and erudition, 664, 666
   sages consulted by Ahasuerus belonging to, 1137-1138 n38 sapphire as stone of, 651, 856
   as scholars, 410 n391, 434 n5
   significance of dedication offering of, 666-667
   spy representing (Igal), 705 to be tribe of scholars and judges, 822
   warfare of attacking Edom to north, 321
     battle of Sartan, 315
     against Ninevites, 313
   wise counsel of, 343 n61 Istehar
   placed in constellation of Pleiades, 136 pronouncing Ineffable Name, 136 and Shemhazai, 136
 Italy
   identified with Kittim, 419 n425 Ithamar
   in charge of sons of Gershon and Merari, 683
   and Eleazar priestly line of, coming to power with Eli, 891
     sitting at left side of Joshua, 827
   helping Moses to draw up accounts for construction of Tabernacle, 656 n369
   one of 77 pious men in Israel, 629 n287 (see also under pious: men)
   one of ten just men in Israel, 628
 Ithiel
   another name of Solomon, 857 n13, 946 n2 meaning of ("God with him"), 945 Ithra
   father of Amasa, 917
   as Ishmaelite, 918 n45
 ivory
   Og's bed fashioned from, 755
 Ivvim
   name, meaning of, 137
   as offspring of fallen angels and Cainite women, 137
 Iyar (month)
   1st of Moses instructed to take census of men over 20 fit to go to war, 679

Iyar (cont.)
   15th of provisions of Israelites in Exodus lasting from 15 Nisan to, 570 n89 Amalek conquered in, 580 n149, 1151
   See also date
 Iye-abarim
   Israelites continuing hostile actions against God at, 749
 Izhar
   name, meaning of ("heat of noon"), 718
   one of four sons of Kohath, 718
   son of Kohath, 805
   war of Amalek against Israelites in, 580 n149

J

Jabal (son of Lamech and Adah)
   first man to erect temples to idols, 112
 Jabbok (brook)
   Jacob at, 294, 295
   J. and stranger taking animals across ford of, 298-299
 Jabel
   name as corruption of Jabin, 869 n71 Jabesh-Gilead
   punishment of inhabitants of, 884 n135
   women of, as virgins, 884 n135
 Jabez
   entering Paradise alive, 73 n67, 862 n30 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
   identified with Othniel, 860, 861 n23
   name, 860 n19
 Jabin (king of Hazor)
   enemy raised up against Israel by God, 867 Jachin
   elder from tribe of Simeon, 696
 jackals
   hating their young, 41-42 n181
 jackdaw bird, 109 n31
 Jacob, 251-293
   abandoned by prophetic spirit, 372 n198
   and Abraham
     J. as deliverer of A., 401 n347
     parallels between, 319 n303
     superiority of J. to A., 256 n35

Jacob (cont.)
   and Abraham and Isaac (see Abraham: and Isaac and Jacob) and academy (see Jacob: and Bet ha-Midrash) addressing wolf, 341
   age of
     at marriage, 84 years, 282, 284 n160
     when blessed, 63 years, 266
     when coming to Egypt, 130 years, 395
   altars erected by, 305
     at Bethel 316, 317 n299
   and angel(s)
     angels being J.'s army, 303
     angels increasing flocks of J., 290 intervention of angels, 291 n209
   J. injured by angel, 302, 305 n258
   J. receiving blessing from angel with whom he wrestled, 819
   J.'s encounter with angels, described in Prayer of Joseph, 306 n273
   J. wrestling with angel, 279, 298-302 angel as Esau, 304, 306 n273
     angel as Esau's guardian angel, 300 n247
     angel as Metatron, 300 n248
     angel as Michael, to remind Jacob of tithes, 301 n251
   J. healed by sun of injury sustained in encounter with angel, 303 legend that it took place in heaven, 301 n250 question of angels concerning J., 279 n134 appointed by God to be lord of all earthly things, 307 n280 and Arameans, covenant between, 293 arriving at gates of heaven, source of third of Eighteen Benedictions, 1126 Balaam recounting history of, to Pharaoh, 482
   and Beer-sheba
     J. going to, to hew down cedars planted by Abraham, 392
     J. going to, to learn will of God, 275-276
   believing Samson to be Messiah, 408

Jacob (cont.)

believing self doomed to Gehenna because Joseph died while he was still alive, 342
 as beloved of God, 168 n4
 and Bet ha-Midrash, 324 n318 (see also academy; Bet ha-Midrash)
 J. as head of, 394 n310
 of Shem and Eber, 255, 261
 birth of, 251-255
 circumcised, 253, 327 (see also covenant[s]: sign of)
 and blessing
 blessings given by J.
 to Asenath, 425
 to Dan, referring to Samson, 879 n116
 to grandchildren, 404
 not without blemish, 819
 blessings received by J.
 from Abraham, 255, 256
 from angel with whom he wrestled, 819 due to merits of Joseph, 327
 from holy spirit, 267
 from Isaac, 264-268, 272, 819
 as prophecy of Israel's history, 268 n95
 from Michael, 300 relation of J.'s blessings to blessings of Moses, 824 n912 brothers of, 425-426
 burial of
 body embalmed, 328, 412
 body not decaying, 411-412 (see also under corpse[s])
 in Cave of Machpelah, 414
 description of bier, 412, 413
 Esau slain during, 272
 funeral cortège, 413, 414 n413 grandchildren not allowed to touch bier, 414 n405
 in Holy Land, 328
 J. giving instructions for transporting bier, 411 casting self down before Eben Shetiyyah, 278 cautioning against blasphemy, 411
 idolatry, 411
 celebrating Feast of Tabernacles, 317 n299 celebrating Feast of Weeks on 15th of third month, 393 n301 charms protecting, five in number, 300 n247

Jacob (cont.)

children of, 285-290 (see also Jacob: sons of; Jacob: daughters of)
 as twins, 285
 circumcision of, by Isaac, 255 n26 conceived first, 254 n22
 countenance of (see Jacob: face of) courage of, 275
 daughter(s) of, 285, 287
 meaning of, 343 n69
 punished for arrogance of J., 305
 and David
 J. giving D. 28 years, 912 n12
 death of, 411-415
 at age 33 years younger than age of Isaac at death, 395
 in Egypt, 328
 by kiss of Shekinah, 411
 delaying to fulfill vow, 316-317
 descendant(s) of having to serve descendants of Esau, 258
 J. deserting, 263 n69
 on list of king's pensioners in Egypt, 398 n333 Mordecai as, 269, 1139
 number of, at time of J.'s death, 60 myriads, 415 n417 number of, to be like dust of earth, 277 (see also dust: of earth; sand of seashore; star[s]: of heavens) describing self as angel of God, 256 n35
 servant of Lord, 805 n880 (see also servant of Lord)
 and Dinah
 J. refusing to let D. marry Esau, 307
 dream of, 328
 concerning world history, 277
 in Egypt
 arrival of J., 394-396
 J. asking not to be buried in Egypt, 399, 401 n345
 J. going to Egypt, 328
 no illness in Egypt while J. there, 396 n329
 and Ephraim
 J. giving birthright to E., 404
 J. instructing E. in Torah, 402 and Ephraim and Manasseh, 403 erecting booths, 317 n299 (see also Tabernacles: Feast of)
 and Esau
 birth of, 251-255

Jacob (cont.)

and Esau (cont.)
 birth order of, 254 n22
 compared to wolf and ram, 303
 dialogue between, about resurrection, 257-258
 disagreeing about material world and world to come, 252
 division of two worlds of, 307 n276
 E.'s anger at J., 271
 E.'s campaign against J., 319-322
 exchanging messages, 295-296
 J. appropriating birthright of E., 327
 J. buying birthright from E., 257-259 motive for, 259 n44
 J. buying E.'s share in Cave of Machpelah, 304, 414
 J. charged by angel with holding E.'s heel at birth, 372 n198
 J. giving E.
 only animals unfit for sacrifices, 305 n270
 presents for a year, 304
 red wine, 259 n45
 tenth of all his wealth, 303
 J. hated by E. on account of blessing, 271
 J. insisting that E. leave Palestine, 320
 J. opening eyes and smiling (though dead) when E.'s eyes fell on his knees, 414
 J. owing honor to older brother, E., 295, 298 n233
 J. preparing for encounter with E., 302-303
 J. refusing to let Dinah marry E., 307
 J. saved from E. by premature darkness, 277
 J. securing birthright by cunning, 258
 J. sending animals as offering to E., 298, 298 n245
 J. striking E. mortal wound with arrow, 321
 meeting between, 295-298, 302-307
 prayer of J. to God concerning war with E., 297
 quarreling in womb, 252, 253-254 n13
 resemblance of E. to J. as reason for sons of J. not killing E., 415 n422

Jacob (cont.)

and Esau (cont.)
 youth of, 255-257
 evil inclination not affecting, 412 (see also evil inclination)
 as example for David, Ahab, Joram, and Mordecai, 342
 face of heavenly being identified with,
     301 n253
   man in moon having, 256 n35
   in Merkabah, 279 n134 representing human race, 279
     n134
 and family
   settling in land of Goshen, 396 traveling to Egypt, 391-392
 family of
   all males married in, 395
   counting of members of, 396
     n321
   70 in number, 392, 393 n305,
     395, 396 n321
   69 in number, 395
 famine averted from Egypt on
   account of merits of, 412
 famine in time of, 328
 favored by younger Haggadah (nationalistic), 256 n35 fearing dangers of travel, 376 n224
   that he would be made an idol,
     400, 401 n345
   to make war with Esau, 296-297 feeling sin of Israel more than other patriarchs, 256 n35
 first to make vow, 278
   tithe, 278, 280 n144, 301 n251
 fleeing to house of Eber, 271
 foreseeing that descendants of Ephraim and Manasseh would seduce Israel to idolatry, 403
 foretelling history of future to sons, 672 n390
 fulfilling first of Ten Commandments, 593
 glorification of, 257 n35
 as goal of creation, 401 n347
 and God
   conversation of, concerning sins of progeny, 261
   God appearing to J.
     on day after Feast of Weeks,
       393 n301
     at time of death, 402
   God's blessing of J., 266-267

Jacob (cont.)

and God (cont.)
 J. addressing God as Shaddai,
   378 n232
 J. invited by God to make request, 198 (see also God: actions of, inviting . . .)
   promise of God to J.
     concerning land, 277
     to bring Israel out of Egypt, 509-510
 going to Timna, 315
 good deeds of, rewarded by division of waters of Jordan River for Joshua, 844 n14
 guardian angel of Michael as, 254 n15, 406 n373
   mightier than Esau's guardian
   angel, 254 n15
 happy years of, 328 n2
 and Haran
   compression of time in J.'s journey to, 278 (see also earth[s]: contracting of distances of; distance; time:
   compression of)
 J. bringing good fortune to, 290
 J. rolling stone from well in, 278
 miracle of water supply of, 278, 279 miracles on way to, 276-280
 hardships of, 327
 and Hebron
   J. dwelling in, 328 n2
 height of, 265
 hewing 12 stones, one for each
   son, 341-342
 hiding at house of Eber for 14
   years, 271, 276 n127
 household of, census of, 636
 as ideal man, 279 n134
 as ideal of beauty, 60 n24
 identified with Israel (nation), 254 n15
   man in moon, 279 n134 (see also man in moon)
 and idols
   J. destroying teraphim and idols taken from Shechem as spoil, 316
   J. hiding foreign gods under terebinth, 857 n5
 image of, on Solomon's throne, 968 impatience of contrasted with resignation of
   Abraham, 378 n228

Jacob (cont.)

inheritance of world to come, 322 n316 (see also Jacob: portion of)
 and Isaac
   I.'s blessing of J. depending on pious deeds, 270
   J. causing terror to I., 271 n101
   J. deceiving I. into giving blessing of firstborn, 265-268
   J. giving I. wine to drink, 266
   J. grieving for I., 415 n422
   J. leaving house of I., 272-274
   J. resembling I., 396 n327
   J. summoned to I. from Bethel, 316 and Isaac and Judah
   as judges in case of Tamar, 345
 and Israel (nation)
   Israel loved by God on account of J., 256 n35
   Israel to be redeemed by Messiah for sake of J., 256
     n35
 at Jabbok, 294-295
   J. and stranger taking animals
     across ford of Jabbok, 298-299
 and Joseph dwelling together for 17 years, 399
   Jacob abandoned by holy spirit
     during grief for Joseph,
       405 n366
   Jacob bowing before Joseph,
     394, 401 n348, 401 n355
   Jacob giving Joseph coat of many colors, 330
   Jacob imparting to Joseph mark of true redeemer of Israel, 516
   Jacob learning of Joseph's fate,
     391-394
   Jacob mourning for Joseph, 340
   Jacob receiving word of Joseph's death on 10 Tishri, 341
   Jacob reciting Shema when Joseph embraced him,
       394
   Jacob revealing to Joseph teachings of wisdom and mystery of Messianic age, 409
     n382
   Jacob sending Joseph to inquire
     after welfare of brothers,
       331, 334 n23
   Jacob suspecting Joseph was
     alive, 341-342

Jacob (cont.)and Joseph (cont.)

Jacob suspecting Joseph was in Egypt, 370

Jacob teaching Joseph

Halakhot, 328
instruction and knowledge, 327

three signs to distinguish true redeemer of Israel, 405

Jacob telling Joseph to forgive brothers, 411

Jacob understanding meaning of Joseph's dream, 330

Joseph swearing oath to Jacob, 400, 401 n351

last conversation of, as halakhic discussion, 393 n296

parallels between, 327-328

accompanied by angels, 328
appropriating older brother's birthright, 327

becoming servant, 327

being shepherd, 327

blessed with wealth, 328

body embalmed, 328

born circumcised, 327 (see also covenant[s]: sign of) childless mother, 327

dying in Egypt, 328

exacting promise from sons to bury him in Holy Land, 328

favorite son, 327

going to Egypt and ending famine, 328

great things announced to, in dream, 328

hated by brethren, 327

living in land of stranger, 327 marrying wives outside Holy

Land, 328

master of, blessed by God, 327

mother of, bearing two sons, 327

providing sustenance for each other, 328 remains carried to Holy Land for burial, 328

separated for 17 years, 399

serving for sake of woman, 327 suffering in birth of, 327 journey of, to Jerusalem, 318

and kid of goat

being deceived by means of, 343 n62

Jacob (cont.)and kid of goat (cont.)

deceiving father by means of, 343 n62

and Laban, 281-282

covenant between, 293, 921, 922 n57

J. fleeing before L., 290-292

J. leaving L. with flocks of 600,000 animals, 290

J.'s agreement with L. concerning marriage to Rachel, 282

J.'s anger at L., 284

J. spending every night with L. reciting Psalms, 277

last wish of, 399-401

leading lament for Israel, 1081 n39

and Leah (see Jacob: marriage of; also Leah: and Jacob) letter of, to ruler of Egypt, 377-378

marriage of, 282-284

J. not to take wife from Canaanites, 272

J. resolving to marry only four daughters of Laban, 293 woman from family of Abraham, 262, 293

to Leah and Rachel, 283

to Rachel, 284

to two sisters, and laws of Torah, 284 n167

merits of (see also merits)

Abraham delivered from fiery furnace for sake of, 400

famine averted from Egypt on account of, 412

Jordan River becoming dry for, 256 n35

Laban blessed on account of, 1027 n6 man created on account of, 256 n35

one of five charms to protect him, 300 n247

and water in Haran, 278

world created for sake of, 400

and Methuselah's sword, 132 n63
missionary activity of, 327

as model of companionableness, 278

and Moses

comparison between, 280 n153, 837

J. appearing at death of M., 837

J. prophesying rise of M., 411 relation of J.'s blessings to blessings of M., 824 n912

Jacob (cont.)and Moses (cont.)

superiority of M. to J., 837 as most prominent of patriarchs, 168 n2

mourning

for Joseph, 340

for seven days, 415

for 70 days, 412

for 22 years, 342

name (see also Israel [person])

changed to Israel, 203 n122, 317-318

by angel, 306 n273

given by God, 253, 255 n28

interpretation of, 255 n28

J. learning from Michael that name would be changed, 300

meaning of, 269

numerical value of, 253

spelling of, 257 n35

as nation owning Torah, 52 neck of, turning hard as ivory, 303

not desiring wealth, 304

not expressing untruth, 268 n91
not fulfilling vow made at Bethel promptly, 316

observing Sabbath

according to Bible, 307 n280

J. rewarded for, with unbounded possessions, 280 n139

observing Torah, 298 n234

one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)

one of eight whose corpse not touched by worms, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])

one of five pious men for sake of whose merits Israel to be redeemed, 502 (see also under pious: men)

one of four men described in Bible as creatures of God, 1071 n13

one of seven patriarchs of world, 968 (see also patriarchs)

one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])

one of seven pious men erecting altar, 771 (see also under pious: men)

one of seven with overlapping life terms, 982 n4

one of shepherds who assist Messiah on left, 100 n142

Jacob (cont.)

one of six righteous men who drew Shekinah back from six heavens, 473
 one of ten just men in Israel, 628
 as originator of Feast of Tabernacles, 317 n299
 in Paradise
   J. unworthy to pronounce blessing over wine in, 939
 parting waters of Jordan River, 275 piety of, warding off attack by Amorites, 311 n289 piety of sons of, 390 n280
 pleading with God for Israel, 1079-1080 portion of (see also Jacob: inheritance of) Cave of Machpelah and title to Holy Land, 320 future as, 307 n276
 pouring out drink offering on pillar, 318
 prayer of
   for deliverance from Canaanites, 311
   J. instituting daily evening prayer, 1128 n58
   J. not permitting self to be interrupted in prayer, 1176 n172 for sons on second trip to Egypt, 377
 as priest on earth, 299 promise of, at Bethel to give God a tenth of everything, 402 promised unbounded possession of land, 277 prophesying
   redeemer to take them out of Egypt, 411 rise of Moses, 411
   that Joshua would lead Israel into Holy Land, 404 prophetic spirit of, 318, 370, 391, 405 n367
   J. abandoned by, 372 n198
 protecting Asenath with amulet, 348
 punishment of
   for calling Esau "lord," 298 n246
   for calling self lord of all earthly things, 305 for causing terror to Isaac, 271 n101 death of Rachel as, 317 n293 for delaying to set aside tithes for God, 305 n267

Jacob (cont.)

punishment of (cont.)
   for excessive self-confidence, rape of Dinah as, 307
   for ingratitude, dying 33 years younger than Isaac, 395 for not promptly fulfilling vow made at Bethel, 316 pursued by Eliphaz and Esau, 274-276
 at Raamses, giving blessings to sons, 406 and Rachel (see also Jacob: marriage of; Rachel: and Jacob) death of R. as punishment of J., 317 n293
   J. marrying R., 284
   J. meeting R. at well, 278
   J. proposing marriage to R., 282
   J. serving another seven years for R., 284
   J. weeping for kissing R., 281
 Raphael as teacher of, in Kabbalah, 505 n117
 and Rebekah
   J. weeping at command of R., 295
   R.'s blessing of J., 262, 267 receiving instruction and knowledge from Shem and Eber, 327 reciting Shema when Joseph embraced him, 394 remnant of, as dew from Lord, 266 represented as lame man on monument of Jebusites, 921 n51 returning home at age 50 after death of Shem, 262 reunited with Joseph and Simon in Egypt, source of tenth of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127 revelation to, that Reuben repented and did penance for trespass against J., 400
 at right hand of God, 450 (see also God: right hand of) robbed of possessions by Eliphaz, 281, 282 n156 saved from hot spring, 275 seed of (see Jacob: descendant[s] of) setting up pillar of stone made from 12 pillars, 277-278
   in token of revelation of God at Bethel, 318
 and Shechem
   J. coming to Shechem in peace, 304

Jacob (cont.)

and Shechem (cont.)
   J. concerned to lay out boundaries so that Sabbath not violated, 304-305
   J. entering Shechem on Friday, 304
   J. establishing bathhouses, marketplaces, and mine in Shechem, 305, 307 n280
   J. journeying to Shechem after Succoth, 304
   J. settling in area around Shechem, 314
   war of J. against Shechemites, 406 n377
 and Shekinah
   J. addressed by Shekinah, 392
   J. dying by kiss of Shekinah, 411
   J. visited by Shekinah, 406
   Shekinah dwelling in Israel for sake of J., 256 n35
   Shekinah over bed of J., 400
 as shepherd, 501 n109
 shortcomings of, 298 n240 shown attempt of Nebuchadnezzar to burn three in fiery furnace, 277
   destruction of Temple, 277
   earthly and heavenly Jerusalem in dream, 816 earthly and heavenly Temple in dream, 816, 817 n905 encounter of Daniel with Bel, 277 revelation of Mount Sinai, 277 Temple in its glory, 277
   translation of Elijah, 277
 signing bill of sale with Yod-He, 305 as sixth of seven pious men, 682 (see also under pious: men) slaying
   Adoram the Edomite, 320-321
   Laban, king of Aram, 314
   Pasusi, king of Sartan, 314
   Pirathon, king of Hazor, 314
   Shebir, king of Mahanaim, 314
   Zerori, king of Shiloh, 314
   sometimes called "the pious," 256 n35 sons and grandsons of, becoming fathers when young, 395 sons of, 285-290, 433-450 (see also Jacob: children of)
   abandoned by prophetic spirit, 372 n198

Jacob (cont.)

sons of (cont.)
 angry with Shechem, 308 appointed chief shepherds by Pharaoh, 398 n330 blessed by God, 394 n309
 born with twin sisters, 285, 319 n309
 bringing wolf to Jacob, 341 burying Esau, 321
 and Canaanite women, 348 n95 compared to animals, 470 n18 conflict with Esau and followers, 414 covenant of God with, 433 deserving to be called fathers of Israel, 432 n2, 433 difference of ages of, 288 n170
 driven by famine to find food in Egypt, 189 eating meat from flocks, 334
 exacting tribute from sons of Esau, 321
 excommunicating Asher, 393 n293 great sin of, never forgiven, 336 n50
 inheritance of, 157
 J. sending sons out to look for body of Joseph, 341
 J. sending sons to Egypt for food, 370-371, 372 n198
 keeping idols taken as spoil from Shechem, 316 making war on Edom, 321
 mourning for J., 412
 names of, 433-435
   meaning of, 288 n170
 praised for filial devotion and chastity, 434 n2
 repenting of selling Joseph, 339, 340
 second journey to Egypt of, 376-379 sent to look for body of Joseph, 341 shedding blood, 316
 as sons of Israel, 305 n259
 spending Sabbath with Isaac, 824 n912 stature and handsomeness of, 371 swearing oath not to tell Jacob what they had done with Joseph, 339 trying to overtake Midianites to ransom Joseph, 339 wanting to kill Asenath, 348

Jacob (cont.)

sons of (cont.)
 at war with sons of Esau, 415-417
   wives of, 347-349
 special virtue of, truth, 715 n543
 staying in Succoth
   for year, 304
   for 18 months, 307 n277
 as stern father, 434 n1
 strength of, 278, 280 n152, 427 n432 uprooting oak tree with one hand, 316, 317 n297 studies of, 256 n29
 studying Torah under guidance of Eber, 276 n127 suffering with descendants, 736 n621
 and Tabernacle
   J. preparing necessary building material for, 648 n344
 taking 12 stones from altar of Akedah, 277 telling man's character by looking at him, 393 n307 telling tribes to help one another, 411 tenfold blessing of (dew of heaven; fatness of earth; corn and wine; Torah and commandments; peoples serving him; nations bowing down to him; rule of, over brothers; mother's sons bowing down to him; all who curse him being cursed; all who bless him being blessed), 266
 ten generations from J. to Samson, 879 n111 tents of, referring to houses of study, 777 n780
 as third patriarch, 263 n69 throne of, as greatest in Paradise, 508 n118
 and tithe consecrating Levi to God, 300, 403
   J. as first to tithe income, 278, 280 n144, 301 n251
   of sons of J., 405 n364
   and Ten Days of Penitence, 280 n144 title of
   J. given title "elect of God" in Scripture, 912 n1
 to rule over all in the end, 252

Jacob (cont.)

uprightness of, 256 n29
 viewing famine as punishment for holding Esau's heel at birth, 372 n198 virtues coming to, through Isaac, 253 n1 virtues coming to Joseph through Jacob, 253 n1 vision of ladder of, 277, 279 n134
 voice of, 736
   prophecy concerning, 266
 wages requested as speckled and spotted goats and black sheep, 290 water in well rising to top for, 280 n153
 wealth of, 328
 welcoming righteous into Paradise, 431 n444
 in womb, saved from Samael by Michael, 252
See also Israel (person)
 Jacob, R.
   Elijah revealing mysteries to, 1018
 Jacobel (Semitic god), 256 n35
 Jael approaching fleeing Sisera, 868
   beauty of, 60 n24, 868, 871 n85
   J. as one of four women of perfect beauty, 941 n132
   God's name attached to name, 871 n85
   one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
   praying for sign, 868
   and Sisera
     J. giving Sisera milk of her breast, 871 n85
     J. slaying Sisera with spike, 869
 Jahath
   one of five other names of Bezalel, 642 Jahel, 857 n13
   one of other names of Solomon, 857 n13 Jahshun (judge) identified with Nahshon, 864 n31 Jahzeel (son of Naphtali)
   name, meaning of, 434
 Jair (son of Manasseh) burned by angel Nathaniel, 873
   commanding seven men to be burned, 873
   elder from tribe of Joseph, 696
   equalling Abimelech in wickedness, 872

Jair (cont.)

- erecting altar to Baal, 872
- forcing people to worship Baal, 872
- of keen mind, 847 n23
- perishing in battle of Ai, 845, 847 n23
- piety and learning of, 41 n175
- as successor of Abimelech, 872
- to be slain by inhabitants of Ai, 41 n175

Jakeh

- another name of Solomon, referring to ruling whole world, 945, 946 n2

Jaldabaot

- as progenitor of shame, 106 n17

Jambres (son of Balaam)

- name, 489, 491-492 n80

See also Jannes: and Jambres

Jambri. See Zambri

Jamin (elder from tribe of Simeon), 696

Jannes (son of Balaam), 489, 520 n161

- and Jambres
- accompanying Balaam on journey, 766
- archmagicians of Egyptians, 559-560
- assisting Balaam in flying, 795
- battling with angels over fate of Egyptians, 559-560
- defeated by Michael, 560
- drowned in Red Sea, 767 n740
- dying at Red Sea, 622 n265
- killed shortly after fashioning golden calf, 796 n854
- punished by Metatron, 562
- responsible for fashioning golden calf, 767 n740
- name of, 491-492 n80

Janus

- succeeding Zepho as king of Kittim, 420

Jaoel (archangel)

- as chief of seraphim, 200 n114
- holding male and female Leviathans in check, 31 n127
- leading Abraham to highest heaven, 200 n114
- See also* angel(s), general: types

Japheth

- allotment of lands, islands, languages, and writing of, 157
- as ancestor of Greeks, 244 n314
- blessed by Noah, 154

Japheth (cont.)

- Greek language called "beauty of Japheth," 244 n314
- inheritance of (north), 157
- joining 45 kings of Persia and Media against Joshua, 850
- Persians descended from, 1144 n68
- rewarded for covering Noah, 154
- rewarded for pious act toward Noah by descendant Ahasuerus being found worthy to marry Esther, 1144 n68
- son of Noah, 146 n30
- sons of, as "uncles" of Israel, 244 n314
- taking care of reptiles, 148 n37

Jared

- father of Enoch, 126
- grandson of Enosh, 119
- life span of, 132 n64
- name, meaning of, 132 n64

Jashub (king of Tappuah)

- gathering force to fight against Jacob, 310
- slain by Judah, 314

Jashub (son of Issachar)

- name, meaning of ("the returning one"), 433

jasper

- changing color, as did Benjamin's feelings, 652
- Hebrew name yashpeh ("there is a mouth"), 652
- precious stone of tribe of Benjamin in breastplate of Aaron, 652

javelins, 314. See also weapon(s)

Jazer (city)

- name, meaning of ("help"), 799

Jebus

- inhabitants of, as children of Heth, 235

Jebusite language

- ascribed to Japhethic system of writing, 158 n72

Jebusites

- and Abraham, covenant between, 293
- David buying Jerusalem from, 920
- as descendants of Abimelech, king of Gerar, 921 n51
- given money for Jerusalem, 920, 921 n53
- land provisionally granted to, 157

Jebusites (cont.)

- legend that they settled in Cyprus after being driven out of Palestine by David, 922 n53
- received Jerusalem from Abraham in exchange for Cave of Machpelah, 920
- spies reporting that they dwell in mountains, 710

Jeconiah

- living off charity on account of David's curse of Joab, 946

Jediael (elder from tribe of Benjamin), 696

Jedidiah

- name, meaning of ("friend of God"), 945
- as real name of Solomon, 945

Jehoahaz

- anointed as king, 1060
- carried off into exile by Pharaoh, 1060
- one of five kings anointed, 893 n30
- son of Jehu, as repentant sinner, 1038 n5
- successor of Josiah, 1060

Jehoash

- one of eight rulers of Davidic dynasty to die violent death, 933 n107
- one of kings anointed with holy oil, 658 n371
- throne of Solomon carried to Egypt by Pharaoh Necho in time of, 969

Jehoiachin

- blessed with distinguished posterity, 1061
- Daniel as son of, 1096 n76
- exile under, 1096 n76
- identified with exile of scholars, 1063 n132
- freed from prison by Evil-Merodach, 1063 n134, 1108 n116
- giving keys of Temple back to God, 1061
- giving self over to Babylonians, 1061
- installed as king of Judah by Nebuchadnezzar, 1060
- kept in prison for 27 years, 1063 n134

Jehoiada

- crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters transmitted to, by Ahijah, 892 n24

Jehoiada (cont.)

death of Joash becoming wicked after,
     1038 high priest, hiding child Joash in Holy of Holies, 1037
 installing Joash as king of Judah, 1037 married to Jehosheba, 1037
 son of Benaiah, 1037
 transmitting crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters to
 prophets, 892 n24

Jehoiakim

body of, tattooed with names of idols, 1060
 committing incest, 1060
 conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, 1060
 death of
     J. as one of eight rulers of Davidic dynasty to die violent death, 933 n107
     J. slain by Nebuchadnezzar, 1060 peculiar, 1062 n128
 exile under, 1096 n76
 garments of two substances mingled together, 1060
 performing epipost upon self, 1060 ruling after Jehoahaz carried into exile, 1060
 story of skull of, 1060
 tattooed "membrum" with Name
 of God, 1062 n125

Jehonadab

one of seven men refusing to worship Baal, 872-873

Jehoram

exacting interest from Obadiah,
     1027 n7
 slain by Jehu's bow for taking interest, 1027 n7
 wicked king of Judah, 1000

Jehoseph

spelling of name of Joseph on ephod of Aaron, 650
See also Joseph: name of

Jehoshaphat, 986-989

association of, with house of Omri,
     988 n27
 concerned about purity and sanctification of Temple, 987 condemned to death by God for joining Ahab in war, 988
     n30
 consulting prophet Elisha, 986-987

Jehoshaphat (cont.)

gracious toward scholars, 987
 humility of, 988 n28
 modesty of, 986
 ordinance of, about ascending
     Temple Mount, 987
 prayer of, that God would defeat enemy, 986 n21
 saved from death by prayer, 988
     n30
 son of Asa, 986, 988 n28
 suffering of, having atoning power,
     989 n43
 supplying food to Elijah during famine, 994
 trusting in God, 987
 war with Ammonites under, 397
 wealth of, 986

Jehosheba (wife of Jehoiada), 1037

Jehu (king), 1037

anointed king by Jonah, 1031, 1037 descendant of Joseph, 330 descendant of Manasseh, 317
     seducing Israel to idolatry, 403
 dynasty of, lasting five generations,
     1037, 1038 n5
 Jonadab censured for friendship
     with, 590 n173
 killing king of Judah, 986
 last legitimate king of northern kingdom, 1032 n25
 not opposing worship of Baal at Bethel, 1037
 not promoting peace, 1038 n4
 of tribe of Manasseh, 1032 n25

Jehudah (fourth son of Leah), 285

name, meaning of ("thanks unto God"), 285, 407
 name of Judah, 407
See also Judah

Jekuthiel

name Moses called by mother, 480 one of seven men refusing to worship Baal, 872-873

Jemimah

name, meaning of "beautiful as the day," 462 n37
     "day," 461

oldest daughter of Job, 461
 playing cithern, 461

Jephthah, 874-877

Abdon as successor of, 876 considered one of least worthy judges by Haggadah, 874
     n101
 earth refusing to receive corpse of,
     877 n109

Jephthah (cont.)

horrible death of, 876 leading war against Getal (king of Ammonites), 874-875
 legend that he did not sacrifice daughter, 877 n109
 offspring of father and woman of another tribe, 874
 punished for slaying Ephraimites, 877 n109
 vow of not according to law, 876, 876
     n108
     to sacrifice whatever came out of door of house, 875
     war against Israel in time of, 214
 Jephuneh (father of Caleb), 861 n25
 Jered
     name Moses called by Miriam, 480
 Jeremiah, 1067-1072
 activity of, in work of redemption, 1022 n114
 as author of Book of Lamentations and Book of Kings, 1071 n15
     Epistle of Jeremiah, 1071 n15
     Paralipomena of Jeremiah, 1071
     n15
 and Baruch confusion between, 1083 n42
     fate of, 1082-1083 n42
     as "former prophets," 1124
     n36
     and other pious men commanded to leave Jerusalem,
     1076 n28
 birth date of, 9 Av, 1070 n11
 body of, disinterred by Alexander and buried in Alexandria,
     1083 n42
 born circumcised, 1067 (see also covenant[s]: sign of) brother of Susannah, 1070 n10
 Buzi as name of, 1084 n42, 1101
     n93
 call of, 1068
 cast into lime pit, 1069
 concealing sacred objects in cave, 1091 condemning alliance with Egypt, 1068 consecrated as prophet while in womb, 1071 n13
 contemporary of Zechariah and Huldah, 1068
 crocodiles disappearing from Nile through prayers of, 1083
     n42

Jeremiah (cont.)

descendant of Joshua and Rahab, 844 n12,
   847 n22, 1059, 1067
   one of eight priests descended from Rahab, 1093 n65
 different versions of martyrdom of,
   1083 n42
 different versions of whereabouts
   during exile, 1083 n42 entrusted with sanctuary and all contained in it, 1091
 evil treatment of, as cause of Babylonian exile, 1072
   n16
 and Ezekiel
   J. as father of E., 1101 n93
   relationship between, 1093 n65
 and Ezekiel and Baruch fixing calendar outside Holy Land, 1083 n42
 falsely imprisoned for treason, 1069 first public appearance of, during reign of Josiah, 1068
 as Hazzan in congregation of
   pious, 1013 n84
 as immortal in Christian legend,
   1093 n66
 as infant, 1070 n12
 Job compared with, 463 n39
 journey of, to Babylon, 1081-1085 legend of stoning of, connected to legend of stoning of Onias,
   1091 n58
 marching with captives beyond Bari, 1086 n47
 mocked by Israelites, 1084-1085
   n44
 modesty and humility of, 1071
   n13
 and Moses
   J. as prophet like M., 1070
   n13
   parallels between, 1070 n13
 name, meaning of, 1070 n12
 naming of, 1070 n12
 and Nebuchadnezzar
   as childhood friends, 1077 n29
   J. favoring peace with N., 1068
   N. charging Nebuzaradan to be kind to J., 1081-1082
 one of eight postexilic prophets,
   991 n56
 one of four men described in Bible as creatures of God, 1071
   n13

Jeremiah (cont.)

one of four pious men addressing unbecoming words to God, 628 n284 (see also under
   pious: men)
 one of four prophets appointed to proclaim punishment of
   descendants of Lot, 214
 one of martyred prophets, according to Josephus, 1078 n30
 one of "two witnesses," 1071 n13,
   1083 n42
 perpetuating memory of Josiah in Lamentations, 1059
 prophecy of, foretelling return of Jews to Palestine at end of 70 years, 1111-1112
 prophesying for 40 years, 1070
   n13
 prophesying 70 years of exile, 1131
   n5
 as prophet like Moses, 1070 n13 returning to Palestine to remain there, 1082
 sending Babylonian women away, 1090-1091
 sent from Jerusalem to Anathoth, which resulted in fall of Jerusalem, 1074-1075
 speaking as infant, 1083 n42
 speaking to patriarchs in Double Cave, 1078
 stoned by Egyptians, 1083 n42
 story of meeting with Plato in Egypt, 1083 n42
 telling people God will sustain them in study of Torah as with manna, 572
 two tears of, becoming two fountains, 1086 n47
 writings of, 1071 n15
 zealous for honor of God and honor of people, 999 n25
 and Zedekiah
   J. falling on evil times in reign of Z., 1068
   J. released from prison by Z., 1069

Jeremiah legends

and Ben Sira legend, 1083 n42

Jeriah (son of Shelemiah), 1069

Jericho

battle against, 849-850
 captured by Joshua, 845-846 conquered on Sabbath, 845 curse against one who would rebuild Jericho, 993 declared anathema, 845

Jericho (cont.)

descendants of Jethro settling around, 589
 healing of waters of, second of 16 miracles performed by Elisha during life, 1025
 relinquished by descendants of Jethro to tribe of Judah, 589 to be overthrown through sound of trumpets, 775
 walls of, disappearing into bowels
   of earth, 847 n22
 Jeroboam (king), 982-984 able to interpret Leviticus in 103
   ways, 1058 n109
   abolishing three pilgrimage festivals and Sabbaths, 984 n9
   attempting to incite war against Judah and Jerusalem, 983 bringing about division between Judah and Israel, 983
   building fortress at Sarira, 982 n2 claiming kingship on account of Ephraimitic descent, 984
   n9
   cruelty of, in war, 984-985
   as descendant of Ephraim, 317
   seducing Israel to idolatry,
   403
   Joseph, 330
   son of Micah, 882
   Zarua as mother of, 982 n2
 as disciple of Ahijah, 982
 early history of, 982 n2
 great learning of, 988 n34
 having respect for Amos, 1040
 idolatry of, 882, 984 n9
   J. introducing worship of Baal,
   332
   J. setting up golden calves, 947, 982
   J. tricking people to worship
   idols, 982-983, 984 n9, 995 one of three kings not to have share in world to come, 908 n100, 1058 n109 (see also under world to come) pride of, leading to destruction, 982
 as scholar, 982, 983 n6
 and Solomon
   conflict between, 981, 981 n1
   staying in Egypt with Sousakim until Solomon died, 982
   n2
 as wicked king, 988 n34

Jerusalem

angels chanting glory of, in third heaven, 505 n117
 beginning of creation, 10 n39
 beloved of God, 168 n4 (see also beloved of God) bought by David from Jebusites, 920
 burial places in, 1121 n32
 capture of, by Babylonians, 1074-1078 center of earth, 89 n109, 128 n60
 center of Palestine, 10 n39
 city of fallen angels, 89 n109
 conquest of, brought about by God, 1077 n29 corpses removed from, 1121 n32
 destruction of beginning of 70 years of exile counted by Jeremiah, 1129
   consequences of, 86 n105
 earthly and heavenly, 816
 as friend of God, 168 n4 (see also friend of God)
 given title "elect of God" in Scripture, 912 n1 God's plan to destroy, 947
 heavenly
   in fourth heaven, 5
   in pseudepigraphic literature, 280 n141
   to descend on four mountains: Tabor, Hermon, Carmel, and Sinai, 595 n184 lament over, 1078-1081 Melchizedek as king of, 196
 mount of, as site of Akedah, 232-233 n253
 name
   meaning of, 197 n102, 231
   named after Solomon, 232 n253
   Salem, renamed by Melchizedek, 232 n253
   70 names of, 649 n348
 prominent inhabitants of, exiled to Spain, 1087 n53 promised to Jebusites by Abraham in exchange for Cave of Machpelah, 920
 as provocation to God, 949 n12 relation of Gehenna to, 15 n55 remaining impregnable as long as Baruch present, 1092
 Israel brought daily offering, 1076
 Jeremiah present, 1074, 1076 n28
 Michael protected it, 1073, 1074 n25

Jerusalem (cont.)

remaining impregnable as long as (cont.)
   Shekinah dwelled there, 1076 n27 story of walls sinking before Babylonians, 1077 n29 surrounded by high wall, 920
 well of Beer-sheba to supply water to, in Messianic time, 260 young men of, charms of, 1085 n45
 Jesse (father of David), 911
   age at death, 400 years, 911
   also known as Nahash ("serpent"), 912 n7 one of eight princes to rule over world in Messianic time, 911
   one of four to lead sinless life, 473, 911, 912 n7 (see also sinless life)
   one of greatest scholars, 911
   one of princes who assist Messiah, 100 n142
   piety of, 912 n7
   slain by Moabite king, 911
 Jesus (son of Mary) Balaam as cryptic name for, 761 n722, 796 n855 contrasted with Jesus, son of Sira, 1084 n42
   death of
     death of Balaam resembling, 796 n855
   as descendant of priestly family, 470 n19 descent of, into hell, influencing Kabbalah, 508 n118
   identified with Logos and Israel, 301 n153 identified with Michael by Church Fathers, 301 n248 Jonah as prototype of, 1035 n38
   and Joshua claims made for Joshua applied to Jesus, 706 n505
     name of Jesus as form of Joshua, 706 n505 Melchizedek as type of, 197 n104 performing miracles with Ineffable Name, 11 n39
   as second Adam, 63 n35
   as "son of God," 1100 n90
   story of worship of infant by Magi, 244 n311 Jesus (son of Sira) contrasted with Jesus, son of Mary, 1084 n42

Jether

one of seven names of Jethro, 493
 Jethro, 493-494, 583-585
 advisor to Pharaoh, 471 n21, 497 (see also Balaam; Job; Reuel) fleeing to Midian, 497
 in Amalek's army, 585 n151 converting kinsmen and compatriots to true God, 589
 descendants of
   called "families of scribes," 590 called Tirathites, Shimeathites, and Suchathites, 590 dedicating lives to study of Torah, 590 dwelling in Jericho for 480 years, 589 enjoying legal status as pure-blooded Israelites, 590 n170
   inheriting J.'s devotion to Torah, 590 moving to wilderness to Jabez to house of instruction, 590 not to be destroyed by Israel in Messianic time, 776
   relinquishing Jericho to tribe of Judah, 589 rewarded for piety, 590
   settling in land of Jericho, 589
   supporting selves by making pottery, 590 n172
 descent of, from Abraham, 496 n91 devising test with burning coal for three-year-old Moses, 483 having seven daughters, 493
 love of Torah of, 588
 miracle at arrival, manna falling at noon, 588
 and Moses
   hospitality of J. to M., 902 n60
   J. consenting for M. to return to Egypt, 515
   J. criticizing M. as judge, 585-586
   J. imprisoning M. for ten years, 497 n96
   J. returning from M. to native land, 588-589
   J. throwing M. into pit, 495 time of J.'s arrival at M.'s camp, 585 n151, 585 n156
 piety of, 588
 position of, in Pharaoh's court, 585 n151
 as priest of idols in Midian, 493, 783

Jethro (cont.)

- as proselyte, 585 n156
- most excellent, 588
- reward of, 588-591
- sent home before revelation at Sinai, 591
- seven names of (also Jether, Hobab, Keni, Reuel, Heber, Putiel), 493
- transformation of, into God-fearing man, 493
- turning to God of Israel, 583, 584
- welcomed by Moses, Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, 584

Jethro-Reuel. See Reuel

Jeush (son of Esau), 321

Jew(s)

- Ahithophel as great sage of, who lost this world and world to come, 798 (see also under world to come)
- Babylonian, suffering at hands of Mazdic priests in Sassanide empire, 1116 n7
- called Children of Lord of All, 1179
- counting of
  - forbidden by Jewish law, 638 n314
- See also* census(es) of Israel
- denunciation of, by Haman before Ahasuerus, 1152-1155
- designated as son of covenant, 248 n318
- edict of annihilation of Ahasuerus against, 1155-1158
- fleeing from Shushan, 1132
- and Gentiles
  - Jews distinguished from Gentiles by odor of dead bones, 339 n58
  - Jews forbidden to eat food prepared by Gentiles, 752 n674
  - not distinguished by God in terms of rewards and punishments, 508 n118
- God revealing Self to, during day, 279 n131
- indicted by Satan, 1158-1161
- Korah as wealthy man of, perishing on account of wealth, 798
- lifestyle of, caricatured by Haman, 1152-1153
- as masters of other nations, 1176, 1178 n190
- oppressed in Hebron, 249
- during persecution of Hadrian, 255 n24

Jew(s) (cont.)

- returning to Jerusalem under leadership of Ezra, 1119
- Samson as great hero of, meeting death on account of strength, 798
- sinful conduct of, at banquets of Ahasuerus, 1159
- subject to kings of Edomites, 324
- wealth of, at time of erection of Tabernacle, 651 n354
- Yemenite, cursed by Ezra to live in poverty, 1115 n5

See also Judaism

Jew (Yehudi)

- meaning of, 434 n4, 1141 n60

jewel(s)

- on altar of heavenly sanctuary, 1
- graven with Name of Messiah, 1
- See also* jewelry; precious stones; and under individual precious stones

jewelry

- bracelets for Rebekah, foreshadowing tablets with Ten Commandments, 240
- earrings of Shechemites, idols on, 317 n295
- Joseph wearing, 367
- nose ring for Rebekah, 240
- precious stones as, 240
- See also* jewel(s); precious stones; and under individual precious stones

Jewish

- meaning of term, ix

Jewish law. See law: Jewish

Jewish legends

- distinguishing features of, viii
- flying in, 796 n853
- infants speaking in, 359 n134 (see also under infants)

Jewish people

- as sons of Israel, 305 n259
- See also* Israel (nation; people)/Israelites; Jew(s); Judaism

Jezebel, 990

and Ahab

- J. as cause of A.'s suffering, 990
- J. as co-regent with A., 990
- J. as wife of A., 987
- J. attaching unchaste images to A.'s chariot, 990
- J. leading A. into idolatry, 987
- J. offering to idol A.'s daily increase in weight in gold, 990
- J.'s responsibility for A.'s wicked life, 990, 990 n48

Jezebel (cont.)

- daughter of king, 990 n51
  - daughter of priest, 990 n51
  - death of, 990
  - good qualities of, 990
  - one of two reigning queens in Jewish history, 990 (see also Athaliah)
  - persecuting prophets, 1067
- Jezer (son of Naphtali)
- name, meaning of, 434
- Joab, 924-927
- as avenger of brother Asahel, 905, 945-946
  - city captured by, called Rabbah of children of Ammon, 926 n77
  - conquering Amalekite capital by infiltrating inside, 925
  - crime of, murder of Abner and Amasa, 945
  - and David
    - D.'s curse of J., transferred to Solomon's offspring, 946
  - J. and Israelites bringing Amalekite king back to D., 926
  - J. as D.'s first general, 924, 945
  - punishment of J., as deathbed instruction of D., 945
  - war of, against Edom, 926 n77
  - death of, 947 n10
  - devising plan to enter Jerusalem, 920
  - exterminating all Edomites, 926 n77
  - father of Joel, 947 n10
  - hand loosed from sword by blood of unborn baby, 926
  - lack of trust in God of, 927 n77
  - name, meaning of, 926 n76
  - pious descendants of, 946 n4
  - president of Sanhedrin, 924
  - president of the academy, 945
  - referred to as Tahchemonite, 926 n76
  - seeking protection of Temple, 945
  - and story about father and mother and 12 children, 924-925
  - and story of blacksmith, 925
  - trial of, 947 n8
  - as true Jewish hero, 924
- Joah
- supporting Shebnah against Hezekiah, 1048
- Joash, 1037-1039
- becoming wicked after death of Jehoiaada, 1038

Joash (cont.)

claiming to be god, 1104 n100
 defeating Arameans, 1031 n22 evil end of, 1038
 hidden in Temple as child, 1039 n8
 ingratitude of, 1039 n16
 installed as king of Judah by Jehoiada, 1037
 kept in hiding as child in Holy of Holies by high priest
   Jehoiada and wife
   Jehosheba, 1037
 name, meaning of, 1039 n9
 one of four kings claiming to be
   gods, 1039 n16
 one of kings anointed with holy oil, 658 n371, 893 n30 undertaking restoration of Temple, 1037-1038

Joauv

form of name of, 184 n49
 god made out of silver, 183

Job, 451-463

abode of
   in Karnaim, 458 n21
   in Magdala of Dyers, 458 n21 afflicted with boils, 457
   50 plagues, 458 n25
   leprosy, 457
 afflictions of, as punishment for advising Pharaoh to enslave
   Hebrews, 471 n21
 better than generation of Tower of Babel, 453 n5
 blasphemy of, 463 n38
 blessed by God, 461
 chastity of, 462 n36
 children of, appearing in heaven, 460 compared with David, 463 n39
 compared with Jeremiah, 463 n39 corpse of, left unburied for three
   days, 461
 as counsellor of Pharaoh, 470, 471
   n21, 497 (see also Pharaoh:
   four advisors of) advising enslavement of Hebrews, 471 n21
   advising killing all male children of Hebrews, 468, 471
 date of, 452 n3
 daughters of meaning of names of, 462 n37
   singing hymns, 461
   transformed by magic ribands
   into higher beings, 461

Job (cont.)

death of, 461
   leaving not one pious man
   among Canaanites, 706
 denying resurrection of dead, 452
 described by God as His servant, 805 n880 (see also servant
   of God)
 destroying idol near house, 455
 fate of, compared with fate of David and Solomon, 463
   n39
 as fictitious character, 453 n3 friends of, 459-460 (see also Bildad; Elihu; Eliphaz; Zophar)
   having pictures of one another in crowns, 459
   holy spirit poured over, by God, 462 as kings, 460 n31
   names of, preserved, 462
   receiving signs of Job's distress,
   459, 460 n30
   rewarded for sympathy, 462 spared punishment of hell, 462 speeches of, 452
   thinking that Job's fate was punishment for sin, 460
 and God
   J. believing God made mistake,
   452
   J. murmuring against God, 451
   J. serving God out of fear, 453
   n4
 as God-fearing one, 397 (see also God-fearing one) grandson of Esau, 451
 heeding warning of plague of hail, 531 hospitality of, 224 n223
 identified with Jobab, 325 n325,
   453 n3, 455, 456 n14
 identified with Uz, son of Nahor,
   456 n14
 image of, on throne of Solomon, 968
 as Jew, 452 n3
   in late Haggadah, 453 n3
 as Jewish sage, 462 n38
 as king of Edom, 324, 455
 life span of, 210 years, 462 n35 making sin offering on behalf of friends, 461
 marriage of, to Dinah, 451, 461
 and monument of Arabic general Ayyub in Constantinople,
   453 n3
 as most pious Gentile, 451-452

Job (cont.)

one of 18 called "servant of God," 451, 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
 one of four God-fearing men, 1026
 one of seven patriarchs of world, 968
 one of three who lived to see new world, 462 n35 (see also Daniel; Noah)
 other men buried with, according to custom of Amorites, 707
   n509
 and patriarchs, 451-453 early legend considering J. contemporary of patriarchs,
   453 n3
   J. compared with patriarchs,
   451, 453 n4
 and poverty, 462 n33
 prayer of, being pure, 455 n12
 prophecy and, 452-453 n3
 as prophet, 761, 762 n727
 punishment of, delayed three years,
   458 n21
 receiving girdle from God, 461
 recognizing God of own accord, 184 n49, 456 n13 (see also God: recognizing of own accord)
 restoration of, 460-463
 revelations of God to, 463 n38 rewarded by God for repentance, 462 n38
 and Samael
   J. given over to S. to distract S.
   from Israelites, 552
   S. to fetch soul of J., in seventh heaven, 504
 and Satan, 455-457
 size of wounds of, 458 n26
 suffering of, 457-459
   duration of
     one year, 462 n34
     seven years, 461
     30 years, 462 n34
   J. tested by suffering and found wanting, 463 n38
 superiority of Abraham to, 455
   n10
 temptations and sufferings of Abraham assigned to, 232
   n247
 weakness of, 455 n8
 wealth and benefactions of, 453-455 wealth of, as foretaste of Messianic time, 453

Job (cont.)

wife of advising J. to blaspheme God,

458, 458 n27advising J. to pray for death, 457 dying of exhaustion, 460

imploing friends of Job, 460

leading pious life, 459 n28

named Zitidos, 460

trials of, 457-458

See also Jobab

Job, Book of

cantillation of, 463 n39 (see also Proverbs: book of; Psalms:
book of)

Moses as author of, 453 n3

Jobab (Edomite king), 325 n323

identified with Job, 324, 453 n3, 455, 456 n14succeeding Bela as king of sons of Esau, 416*See also* JobJochebed (daughter of Levi; mother of Moses and Aaron), 469, 785

age of

at birth of Moses, 130 years, 668at marriage to Amram, 126
years, 474at marriage to Amram, 130
years, 475 n36

and Amram

children of, 474

Israel redeemed from Egypt on account of merits of, 474
n30 (see also merits)

marriage of J. to A., 438, 474

birth of

in Egypt, 438

on journey to Egypt, 395, 396
n321entering promised land at age of 250 years, 785as Hebrew midwife, refusing to comply with Pharaoh's order, 469, 474made invisible by God, so as not to be captured by Pharaoh's hangmen, 474 (see also invisibility)

and Moses

J. as mother of M., 395

J. blamed and exonerated for exposing infant M., 479
n46J. exposing infant M. to danger, 474 n30Jochebed (cont.)and Moses (cont.)J. leading M. to Joseph's bones, 546J. making ark from bulrushes for M., 477

J. mourning for M., 834

J. rewarded for defiance of Pharaoh by return of M. to her, 478J. searching for M. after death, 834J. teaching M. history of Hebrews, 487 n69name, meaning of ("divine splendor"), 474one of 22 women of valor, 238
n271

as proselyte, 470 n17

rewarded for good deeds, 469

Shiphrah identified with, 469, 470 n17supervising one of seven classes of
women, 23 n97

Joel (prophet)

identified with Joel son of Samuel,
991 n56

name, meaning of, 992 n56

one of eight postexilic prophets,
991 n56

son of Joab, 947 n10

time of activity of, 1041 n20

during famine in Joram's time, 991in time of Manasseh, 991, 991
n56, 1057 n100

Joel (son of Samuel), 895

identified with prophet Joel, 991 n56Joezer (elder from tribe of Joseph), 696

Jogli (elder from tribe of Dan), 696

Johanan (elder from tribe of Naphtali), 696

Johanan (high priest)

father of Mattathias the Hasmonean, 825 n925

Johanan b. Zakkai, R., 128 n60

beauty of, 22 n80

believing Job served God out of fear, 453 n4careful examination of witnesses of, 1097 n79disciples of, as "third division," 22 n87Elijah advising Eliezer b. Hyrcanus to study with, 1011expected to be met at death by Hezekiah, 1052 n67Johanan b. Zakkai, R. (cont.)

as just, 18-19

last words of, 97 n132

on Nimrod, 162 n77

R. Johanan's favorable opinion of Job, 462-463 n38story of Hadrian being shown Amorite corpses, 754

in third compartment of Eden, 19

Johanan Hyrcanus. See John Hyrcanus

John Hyrcanus, 825 n925

fighting against Antiochus IV Epiphanes, 942taking money from tomb of David, 942John of Anathoth (adherent of Belchira), 1057 n101

John the Baptist

identified with Elijah, 1021 n106

Joktan (brother of Peleg)

duration of man's lifetime shortened in his time, 157name, meaning of ("modest one"), 158 n70prince for descendants of Shem, 160

as progenitor of 13 tribes, 158 n70

rewarded for humility, 406 n376

Jonadab (the Rechabite)

ascetic practices of, 590

censured for friendship with Jehu, 590 n173descendants of, becoming members of Sanhedrin as reward for hospitality of Jethro, 777

n783

elder from tribe of Judah, 696 entering Paradise alive, 73 n67 (see also Paradise: entering

alive)

nephew of David, described as wise but wicked, 590 n173son of Rechab, descendant of Jethro, 590

sons of entering Paradise alive, 1090

n57 (see also Paradise:

entering alive)

not exiled, 1089 n57

sent to "mountains of darkness," 1089-1090 n57to be first to bring offerings to Temple in Messianic time, 776

Jonah

abandoned into sea, 1032

Jonah (cont.)

in belly of fish for three days, 1033 effects on J. of being in belly of fish, 1034
 fish ordered to spew forth, 48
 J. speaking to Leviathan, 1033
 J. to capture Leviathan in days to come, 1033 n31 charged with mission of anointing Jehu king, 1031 contemporary of Daniel, 1071 n14 contemporary of Isaiah, Hosea, and Daniel, 1035 n38 disciple of Elijah, 1026 n1
 entering Paradise alive, 1035, 1035 n38 (see also Paradise: entering alive) fleeing from divine revelation, 1032 n27 flight of, 1031-1032
 forgiven by God, 1034
 as God-fearing one, 398 n332 (see also God-fearing one) hair of, falling out, 1034, 1035 n36
 journeying on ship, 1031-1032
 and kikayon (plant protecting J.), 1034-1035 known as false prophet, 1031 Messianic part ascribed to, 1033 n31, 1035 n38 not fulfilling vow to go to Nineveh, 1033 n32
 prayer of, 1033, 1035 n37
 having regular form of Seliḥah, 1033 n32 (see also prayers, Jewish) proclaiming destruction to inhabitants of Jerusalem, 1031
 to Nineveh, 1034
 prototype of Jesus, 1035 n38
 receiving two divine revelations concerning Nineveh, 1032 n26
 riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
 son of widow of Zarephath resuscitated by Elijah, 994, 1035 n38
 soul of, 1033 n32
 storm over, 1031
 one of three hurricanes sent by God, 458 n24
 time of activity of, 1035 n38, 1041 n20
 voice of, reaching every corner of Nineveh, 1034

Jonah (cont.)

wife of,
 known for piety, 1035
 name of, 113 n42
 zealous for honor of Israel, 999 n25
 Jonah, Book of not part of Book of Twelve, 1035 n38
 Jonathan (Maccabee), 315 n292
 Jonathan (nephew of David) Nathan (prophet) identified with, 948 n11 slaying one of Philistine giants, 948 n11 Jonathan (son of Saul)
 atoning with offering of gold and burnt offering, 898
 as Av Bet Din, 907
 modesty of, 907
 to be slain for tasting food on certain day, 898 Joram (son of Ahab), 990-992 hardening heart against compassion, 990
 having sympathy with people's suffering, 991 n53
 Jacob as example for, 342
 king of Samaria, 986
 miserliness of, 990
 one of eight rulers of Davidic dynasty to die violent death, 933 n107 prophet Joel active during reign of, 991 seven years of famine during reign of, 991
 usurious practices of, 990
 warfare of allied with kings of Judah and Edom against Moab, 990-991 against Moab, 990-991
 J. victorious on account of merits of observing Sabbath, 1027 n5
 wickedness of, 990
 Jordan River becoming dry for merits of Jacob, 256 n35 (see also Jacob: merits of; merits) ceasing flowing at penance of Adam, 87 division of waters of by Jacob, 275
 as reward for good deeds of Abraham, 844 n14
 good deeds of Jacob, 844 n14 piety of Joseph, 327, 844 n14

Jordan River (cont.)

Elisha's crossing of, as first of 16 miracles performed during life, 1025 Israelites marching through, 843 waters of, miraculously piling up, 843

Jose, R.

and Elijah, 1008
 E. imparting to R. Jose regulations concerning prayer, 1012 n76
 E. teaching R. Jose meaning of Scriptural passage about woman as helpmeet of man, 1010

Joseph

age of, at death of Pharaoh, 71 years, 422
 and angels
 clothes given to J. by angel, 366 n169
 J. led to Dothan by Gabriel, 332
 sallow complexion of J. changed by angel, 337 n51 appropriating birthright, 327 and Asenath
 J. blessing A., 424
 J. meeting A., 423-424
 marriage of, 348, 424-425
 astrological prediction fulfilled concerning, 352 beauty of, 60 n24, 352, 359, 367, 396 n319, 423 (see also Joseph: handsomeness of) distracting women guests of Zuleika, 354-355 equal to that of Rachel, 329 begging for life, 332
 and Benjamin
 in Egypt, 379-382
 J. blessing B., 379
 J. demanding that brothers bring B. to Egypt, 374-375
 J. giving B. five changes of clothes, 389
 J. giving B. 300 shekels, 390 n288
 J. holding B. hostage, 384
 J. making self known to B., 390 n279
 J. weeping at sight of B., 381 n244 birth of, circumcised, 327 (see also covenant[s]: sign of) birthright conferred on, because of sin of Reuben, 407 brothers of (see also Joseph: and Benjamin)

Joseph (cont.)

- brothers of (cont.)
  - anger of Gad at J., 329
  - angry at J.'s revelation of his identity, 388
  - confession of, 384 n263
  - conspiring against J., 332
  - in Egypt, 370-372
  - envying J., 329
  - fearing vengeance from J., 421
  - hatred of brothers for J., 329-331, 361 n136
- J. accusing brothers falsely
  - of being cruel to animals, 328
  - of being spies, 372
  - of looking at daughters of Canaanites, 328
  - of treating sons of Bilhah and Zilpah with contempt, 328
- J. and brothers meeting in Egypt, 372-376
- J. demanding that brothers bring Benjamin to Egypt, 374-375
- J. giving brothers 100 shekels, 390 n289
- J. giving brothers two changes of clothes, 389
- J. giving changes of clothes to children of brothers, 389
- J. imparting to brothers mark of true redeemer of Israel, 516
- J. keeping silent about what brothers did to him, 402, 405 n360, 405 n370, 449-450
- J. making brothers swear oath to take his bones to Palestine, 427
- J. making identity known to brothers, 387-390
- J. not betraying brothers, 349
- J. partly responsible for crime of brothers, 361 n136
- J. preparing Sabbath meal for, in Egypt, 379
- J. putting brothers in prison, 373
- openly expressing hatred of J., 330, 331 n11
- resolving to destroy Mizraim, 385-386
- as "the bull," 385
- burying gold, silver, and precious stones in four different places, 397
- Calcol ("giver of food") identified with, 955 n21

Joseph (cont.)

- capturing Zepho (son of Eliphaz), 415
- chastity of, 405, 579, 866 n60
- coat of, 334 n43
  - brought to Jacob, 339-343, 343 n64
  - by Judah, 343 n64, 346 n74
  - by Naphtali, 343 n64
  - by sons of bondwomen, 343 n64
- called Passim, 330
- as holy tunic of priest, 331 n11
- Joseph receiving coat from Jacob, 330
- smeared with blood of slaughtered kid, 328
- compared with Noah as tzadik, 329 n3
- death and burial of, 427-431
  - all Israel participating in, 430 n437, 430 n443
  - body, embalmed, 328
  - body, emitting pleasant fragrance, 337, 546
- bones
  - buried in Shechem, 429
  - coming to life and assuming form of sheep, 430 n442
  - sought by Moses in Egypt, 545-546
  - wrapped by Moses in sheepskin on which "Name of God" written, 430 n442
- burial in Holy Land, 328
- burial in royal palace, 430 n438, 546
- coffin
  - carried in desert 40 years, 429
  - finding of, 548 n3
  - guarded by two golden dogs, 546
  - kept in tent of Moses in wilderness, 548 n6
  - miraculously rising to Moses, 546
  - sunk in Nile, 428-429
  - to make waters abundant, 430 n438
  - to prevent Egyptians from worshipping his body, 430 n438
- death of
  - at age 110 years, 839 n966
  - because he accepted gifts of Pharaoh, 423 n430
  - because of haughtiness as ruler, 423 n429
  - in Egypt, 328

Joseph (cont.)

- death and burial of (cont.)
  - death of (cont.)
    - premature death of J., 422, 422 n429
    - as punishment for allowing brothers to call Jacob "servant," 422, 423 n430
    - allowing Jacob to bow to him, 394
    - reasons for, 423 n429
    - on Sabbath, according to Kabbalah, 466 n3
  - J. wishing to be buried in Hebron, 430 n443
  - ten years before allotted time, 422
  - words of J. on deathbed, 427-428
- decree of, concerning purchase of corn in Egypt, 371
- as delicate lad, 329
- and descendants, proof against evil eye, 370 n185
- descendants of
  - Gideon as, 330
  - hoping to conquer Amalekites, 579
  - Jehu as, 330
  - Jeroboam as, 330
  - Joshua as, 330
  - Phinehas as, 794
  - ruling over Israel, 330
  - to be victorious over descendants of Esau, 579
- description of, 328, 351
  - as slave, 364
- desiring to sanctify Name of God, 354
- destined to be father of 12 sons, 381 n251
- division of waters of Jordan River for Joshua on account of, 844 n14
- and dream(s), 328, 330
  - 11 stars making obeisance to him, 383
- J. interpreting dreams, 361 n150
  - of chief butler and chief baker, 360-361
  - J. keeping part of interpretation of dream secret, 361
  - of Pharaoh, 365-367
- J.'s dream fulfilled in entirety, 384 n261
- J.'s dream understood by Jacob, 330

Joseph (cont.)

- in Egypt (see also Joseph: and Potiphar)
  - Balaam recounting history of J. to Pharaoh, 482
- J. acquiring knowledge necessary for being statesman, 351 n105
- J. and Benjamin, 379-382
- J. and brothers meeting, 372-376
- J. as administrator for Magron, son of Pharaoh, 422
- J. as helper and counsellor of Egyptians, 422
- J. as king, 367-370, 378 n234
- J. asking members of Pharaoh's family to intercede for him regarding transporting Jacob's body, 412-413
- J. as viceroy, 422, 422 n429
- J. before Pharaoh, 364-367
- J. bought by Zuleika for 80 pieces of gold, 350
- J. called Zaphenath-paneah by Pharaoh, 368
- J. demanding that brothers bring Benjamin to Egypt, 374-375
- J. demanding that Egyptians circumcise selves, 369
- J. exiling Egyptians from native provinces, 398
- J. given great wealth by Pharaoh and Egyptians, 368
- J. given many changes of garments by Zuleika, 353, 355 n112
- J. given Pharaoh's signet ring, 367
- J. instructed in arts, 351
- J. left with shopkeeper, 349
- J. living as Nazirite, 380 (see also Nazirite)
- J. presenting brothers to Pharaoh, 389
- J. pretending not to know Egyptian language, 355 n111
- J. prophesying birth and death of Pharaoh's sons, 365
- J. selling grain to all who came, 397
- J. set over land by Pharaoh, 366
- J. succeeding Pharaoh as ruler of Egypt, 427
- J. telling signs and tokens of dream interpretation to Pharaoh, 365

Joseph (cont.)

- in Egypt (cont.)
    - J. tried in Egyptian court, 358, 358 n130
  - J. weeping about going to Egypt, 337
  - opposition of Pharaoh's officials to J., 366, 367 n181
  - ordinance of J. that one-fifth of land produce should belong to Pharaoh, 399 n341
  - power of J. in Egypt, 376-377
  - in prison, 359-362
    - angels bringing J. clothes from Paradise, 364
    - jailer kindly disposed to J., 359
  - J. leaving prison on New Year, 366 n169
  - as overseer of prison, 359-360
    - for ten years, 359
    - for 13 years, 366 n169
    - for 12 years, 362
  - wisdom of J.'s counsel to Pharaoh, 367 n180
- and Esau
- J. as opposite of E., 579
- famine in time of, 328
- J. providing food for man and beast in, 329 n3
  - J. providing for whole world during, 397
  - J. saving in years of plenty to prepare for, 369
- fasting and praying, 352
- as father of two tribes, 408-409
- firstborn
- J. enjoying rights of, 579
  - of mother, 403
- first of Hasidim, 329 n3
- first of sons of Jacob to die, as punishment for having corpse of Jacob embalmed, 412
- first son of Rachel, 287-288
- first to appear in Holy Land, 825 n927
- first to be subjected to Egyptian bondage, 332
- following ritual prescriptions in slaughtering cattle, 379
- found by royal princesses following scent, 337
- fulfilling commandment to observe Sabbath, 593
- fulfilling Ten Commandments, 429
- Gabriel as teacher of, in Kabbalah, 505 n117

Joseph (cont.)

- giving away possessions, 397
- giving David 48 years, 912 n12
- giving Dinah gifts, 389
- God adding to wisdom of J., 368
- as God-fearing one, 397, 398 n332
- handsomeness of, 335, 349, 350, 373 (see also Joseph: beauty of)
- having faith in resurrection, 579
- and Hebrew language
  - J. addressing brothers in Hebrew, 388, 390 n281
  - J. understanding Hebrew, 373, 386
- honesty of, 430 n442
- house of, to destroy house of Esau, 290
- identified with Serapis, 622 n266
- indicating that Mordecai would be arrayed in five royal garments, 389
- as inventor of measures, 399 n339
- and Ishmaelites
  - J. beaten by Ishmaelites for weeping, 337
  - J. ill-treated by Ishmaelites, 338, 381
  - J. interceding for Ishmaelites with God, 338
  - J. sold to Ishmaelites by Midianites, 336
- issuing proclamation that all should go out to meet Jacob, 394
- and Jacob
  - dwelling together for 17 years, 399
  - Jacob blessed on account of merits of Joseph, 327 (see also merits)
  - Jacob bowing before Joseph, 394, 401 n348, 401 n355
  - Joseph blessed by Jacob, 408-409
  - Joseph bringing evil reports of brothers to Jacob, 328
  - Joseph laying hands on Jacob, source of 13th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127
  - Joseph learning Halakhot from Jacob, 328
  - Joseph preparing chariot with own hands to meet Jacob, 393
  - Joseph punished for having Jacob's corpse embalmed, 412

Joseph (cont.)and Jacob (cont.)

Joseph receiving from Jacob coat of many colors, 330
 instruction and knowledge, 327
 two gifts, 405
 Joseph resembling Jacob in appearance, 327
 Joseph sent by Jacob to check on brothers at Shechem, 331
 Joseph studying under Jacob and Isaac, 329 n6
 Joseph swearing oath to Jacob,
 401 n351, 413
 Joseph telling Jacob falsely that sons of handmaids slaughtering choice cattle of herd, 329
 Joseph tending flock of Jacob, 329
 last conversation of, as halakhic
 discussion, 393 n296 parallels between (see Jacob: and Joseph, parallels between) premonition of Joseph concerning Jacob, 391
 separated for 17 years, 399
 terror of Jacob at report of Joseph's death, 271 n101 virtues coming to Joseph through Jacob, 253 n1
 as just, 18-19
 kindness and generosity of, 396-399 last words of, showing belief in resurrection of dead, 430
 n435
 magnanimity of, 421-423
 marriage of, 424-425
 to Asenath, daughter of Dinah
 and Shechem, 348
 merits of
 and final redemption, 328 n3
 Jacob blessed on account of, 327
 (see also merits)
 miraculous powers of, 351 Mordecai compared with, 1178
 n189
 and Moses
 J. appearing at death of M., 837
 J.'s bones
 sought by M. in Egypt, 545-546 wrapped by M. in sheepskin on which "Name of God"
 written, 430 n442

Joseph (cont.)and Moses (cont.)

J.'s coffin kept in M.'s tent in wilderness, 548 n6
 miraculously rising to M., 546
 J.'s cup carved and broken by M., 429
 mountains of antedating mountains of Israel,
 825 n927
 as hill-country of Ephraim, 825
 n927
 name changed to Jehoseph, 359
 meaning of ("increase"), 288,
 289 n201, 433
 name of God attached to, 871
 n85
 spelled Jehoseph on ephod of Aaron, 650
 nobility of character of, 405 n370
 noble lineage of, 409
 oath of
 by life of Pharaoh, 373, 375
 n210
 not to succumb to temptation, 354
 by sign of covenant of Abraham, 400 observing commandment not to commit adultery, 593-594
 observing law before revelation, 379 observing Sabbath before revelation of law, 381 n238
 one of four God-fearing men, 1026
 piety of, 327
 in resisting temptations, 351, 381 n238
 and pit
 J. cast into pit, 331-335
 J. looking sallow and sickly after being in pit, 336, 337 n51
 J. naked in pit, 333, 336
 J. taken from pit by Midianites, 335 plea of J. to be saved from pit, 333
 Reuben throwing J. into pit,
 334 n41
 and Potiphar (see also Potiphar: and Joseph)
 enmity of P. toward J., 411
 n400
 J. as slave of P., 439-352

Joseph (cont.)and Potiphar (cont.)

J. associating with two wicked men, Potiphar and Pharaoh, 579
 J. called pious because of virtue over P.'s wife, 329 n3
 P. blessed on account of J., 1027
 n6
 sale of J. by Medanites to P., 339
 story of, 349-350
 precious stone of, beryl, 856
 price of 20 pieces of silver, 336
 correlated with annual payment to sanctuary, 336 correlated with price of redemption of firstborn
 son, 336
 used by brothers to buy shoes, 336 prophetic spirit of, 389
 punishment of
 for allowing Jacob to bow to him, 394
 for forgetting father, 548 n10
 for having corpse of Jacob embalmed, 412
 for one moment of passion, 381
 n251
 standard of descendants bearing name of Ephraim, not his,
 423 n429
 and Rachel
 J. pleading at R.'s grave for her to arise, 337-338
 J. shielding R. from Esau, 305
 n262
 J. weeping at R.'s grave, 337-338
 R. speaking to J. from grave, 338
 as reformer of taxation of soil, 398
 n339
 represented by Ephraim on high priest's breastplate, 872 resemblance of Naphtali to, 444 resembling Sarah, 409
 rewarded for chastity and steadfastness, 359
 virtuous life, with high position,
 370 n183
 reward of, most fruitful land, 822
 as ruler of world, 162 n82
 sale of, 335-337
 by Ishmaelites to descendants of Medan, son of Abraham,
 for five shekels, 338
 "over meal," 335

Joseph (cont.)

- sale of (cont.)
  - one of two sins of people, 659
  - by Medanites to Potiphar, officer of Pharaoh, 339
  - as slave, 328
  - for 20 pieces of silver, 335
- as scholar and prophet, 398 n333
- sending ten donkeys to Canaan, 390 n291
- Shekinah resting on, 351
- shunning bloodshed, 579
- sons of
  - to rule nations, 822
  - two in number, 288
- and sons of handmaids, relations between, 330-331 n9
- soul of, struggle between passion and virtue in, 358 n126
- special virtue of
  - chastity, 715 n543
  - loving-kindness, 715 n543
- steadfastness of, 355 n110
  - deserting him, 356
- studying in Bet ha-Midrash, 328
- studying under Jacob and Isaac, 329 n6
- superiority of Moses to, 837
- taught 70 languages by Gabriel, source of fourth of Eighteen Benedictions, 1126
- telling captors he was slave, 349
- ten temptations of, 188 n52, 352 n107
  - J. resisting temptation, 356-359
  - vision of dead in, 356
- thanking God for happy state in Egypt, 351
- three masters of, 337-339
- titles of
  - al-Ziddik*, given by Muslim writers, 329 n3
  - "God-fearing one," 397
  - "good and pious one," 328 n3
  - hasid*, 329 n3
  - hatzadik*, frequent among Arabic-speaking Jews, 329 n3
  - tzadik*, 328-329 n3
- to be ancestor of Ephraimitic Messiah, 289 n201
- treasures of, 552
- treatment of sons of Bilhah and Zilpah, 329 n7
- tribe(s) of
  - blessed by Moses, 822
  - elders from (Jair, Joezer, Malchiel, Adoniram, Abiram, Sethur), 696

Joseph (cont.)

- tribe(s) of (cont.)
  - having most fruitful land, 822
  - onyx as stone of, 652
  - rejected because Joseph slandered brethren, 650 n351
  - to be first in future world to appear in Holy Land, 822
- visions of, 428
- warfare of
  - absence of J. from war against Esau, 322 n317
  - against Ninevites, 313
  - against Tarshish, 369
- wealth of, 328, 349
- wisdom of, Solomon's wisdom greater than, 949-950
- and Zuleika, 352-359
  - conversation between, 353-354
  - J. accused of immorality by Z., 357-358
  - J. resisting Z., 354-355
  - J. sentenced to prison for harming Z.'s good name, 358
  - J. spared from death by Z., 359, 359 n133
  - torn garment of J., 397-398
  - as proof of innocence, 399 n340
- Joseph della Reyna, R.
  - conjuring up Elijah to learn how to conquer Satan, 1018-1019
- Joseph ha-Levi
  - mentioning anointing of, by Elijah, 1022 n112
- Josephus
  - on Abraham as king, 181 n46
  - on Akedah, 228 n230
  - on anti-Israelite policy of Egyptians, 474 n29
  - on appointment of judges, 588 n164
  - on Balaam, 769 n752
    - on B. as prophet, 762 n725
    - on B.'s ass speaking with voice of man, 768 n745
    - on B.'s lengthy address, 775 n772
    - on B.'s oration, 773 n764
  - on battle at Ai, 847 n23
  - on cherubim, 644 n333
  - on chronology of Rebekah's death, 318 n302
  - on date of fall of Jericho, 847 n22
  - on Evil-merodach's sons, 1112 n2
  - on idolatry of Solomon, 949 n12
  - on intermarriage, 781 n790

Josephus (cont.)

- on inviolability of oath, 848 n35
- on Jacob
  - escaping from Laban, 294 n224
  - J.'s message to Esau, 298 n236
  - not wanting to lodge with Canaanites, 280 n140
  - serving Laban for seven years, 284 n166
- on Jephthah, 876 n106
- on Jethro, 494 n82
- on Joseph
  - interpreting dreams, 361 n150
  - J.'s dream, 331 n17
  - search of J.'s brothers' sacks, 383 n256
- on Judah's oration, 387 n268
- on location of Sambation River, 1089 n56
- on Manoah, 878-879 n111
- on martyred prophets, 1078 n30
- on meaning of cake of barley, 873 n100
- on meaning of name of Samson, 879 n111
- on Moses
  - delivery of M. from Nile, 479 n48
  - last moments of M.'s life, 815 n904
  - legend of M. and Ethiopians, 492 n80
  - name of M., 481 n59
  - precocity of M. 481 n64
  - question of whether or not M. died, 832 n951
  - relationship between M. and Zipporah, 494 n81
  - story of M. stomping on crown of Pharaoh, 484 n65
- name Thermutis found in, 479 n48
- on Noah as preacher, 145 n25
- on Potiphar's wife, 358-359 n132
- on Ruth
  - R. performing ceremony of "taking off shoe," 867 n65
  - time of story of R., 864 n31
- Samson described as prophet, 879 n116
- on sin of Tower generation, 165 n90
- on succession of high priests, 892 n25
- on talkativeness of young women, 280 n149
- on Torah, viii
- on tower of Ecbatana built by Daniel, 1118 n20

Josephus (cont.)

- tripartite division of Tabernacle in, 651 n353
- on uprooting of mandrake, 289 n189
- and view that demons are souls of wicked, 82 n98
- Joshua (high priest, son of Jehozadak)
  - escaping death by fire in furnace, 1106
  - identified with Ben Sira, 1084 n42
  - among members of Great Synagogue, 1127 n56
- Joshua (son of Nun)
  - adding benediction to Grace after Meals, 1128 n58 (see also Grace after Meals; prayers, Jewish)
  - appointed to office of hangman, 841
  - appointment of, 787-790
  - and Book of Deuteronomy, 842
  - and Caleb (see also Joshua; and spies)
    - rending garments at blasphemy of Israelites, 712
    - rewarded by receiving property in Holy Land allotted to other spies, 716
  - causing people to pass before ark, 847 n28
  - circumcising those born in desert at Gilgal, 843-844, 845 n16
  - J. to take away reproach of Israelites by circumcising them, 288
  - coins struck by, 853 n54
  - commanded to remove shoes, 511 n122
  - as composer of (see also prayers, Jewish)
    - Al Ken Nekavveh Lekha, 1128 n58
    - Alenu, 853 n50, 1079, 1128 n58
    - second benediction in Grace after Meals, 853 n50, 1128 n58
  - crossing Jordan River, 843
  - cutting off father's head, 841, 842 n2
  - death and burial of, 852
    - death of
      - at age 110 years, 793
      - J. dying childless, 711 n526
      - J. dying free from sin, 853 n56

Joshua (cont.)

- death and burial of (cont.)
  - death of (cont.)
    - ten years early, 793
    - because of giving advice to Moses, 794 n847
  - mourning for J., 852
- descendant of
  - Ephraim, 404, 822
  - Joseph, 288, 330
  - J. growing up ignorant of descent, 841
- devotion of, 626 n277
- and Eliezer
  - as two leaders at head of Israel entering Holy Land, 790 n830
- errors committed by, 626 n278
- establishing laws revealed to Moses on Sinai, 842 n7
- face of, shining like moon, 813
- as first Jewish conqueror, 841
- having daughters but no sons, 711 n526
- as ideal type of scholar, 842 n9
- infancy of
  - J. exposed after birth, 842 n2
  - J. pious from infancy, 1061 n114
  - J. spewed forth unharmed from whale, 841
  - J. swallowed by whale, 841, 842 n2
- introducing regulations for cities of refuge, 800 n869
- killing Balaam, 796 n855
- kissing steer on nose, 37
- lack of intelligence of, 711 n526, 842 n3
- leader of Israel for 28 years, 852
- letter of, to allied kings of Persia and Media, 851
- as man in moon, 842 n6
- and Michael
  - M. speaking to J. about study of Torah, 844
- and Moses
  - J. as servant of M., 841-842
  - J. awaiting M.'s return from Sinai, 625
  - J. instructed by M. on campaign against Amalek, 580-582
  - J. made successor of M., 841
  - J. mourning for M., 834
  - J. punished for giving advice to M., 711 n526
  - J. sent by M. to battle Amalekites, 579

Joshua (cont.)

- and Moses (cont.)
  - J.'s mind kindled and spirit stirred, putting on garments of M., 842 n9
  - J. speaking to Israel on last day of M.'s life, 812-813
  - J.'s vision at moment of M.'s death, 833 n952
  - M. asking J. to intercede, 808-809
  - M. serving J. from 1 Shevat to 6 Adar, 810-812
  - name given by M. to Hoshea, 706
- mother of, breasts miraculously flowing with milk, 841
- names and titles of
  - called "cutter of heads," 842 n2
  - called "robber," 848 n34
  - J. described by God as His servant, 805 n880 (see also servant of God)
  - J. given title "elect of God" in Scripture, 912 n1
- one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
- one of ten just men in Israel, 628 in Paradise
  - J. unworthy to pronounce blessing over wine, 939
- participating in breaking of tablets, 626 n279
- prayer of, 847 n27
  - Samael stopping prayer of J., 809
- and Rahab
  - J. blamed for marrying R., 845 n19
- royal apparel of, 851
- and Sabbath
  - J. conquering Jericho on, 846 n22
  - J. not allowing trumpets to be blown on, 846-847 n22
- song of praise of, 849-850
- and spies
  - J. attempting to contradict report of spies, 710
  - J. sending out Perez and Zerah as spies, 345
- stature of, 851
- sun standing still for J., 24, 48, 848-850, 1152 n108
- surpassing Amalek in knowledge of astrology and magic, 1152 n108

Joshua (cont.)

- as teacher of Israel, 827
- ten ordinances of, concerning private property, 852
- told to loose shoes from feet as sign of mourning for neglect of Torah, 844
- as type of disciple of wise, 842 n7
- unable to resolve difficulties of law, 841
- warfare of
  - with Amalekites, 841, 1152 n108
- J. blamed for defeat at Ai, 847 n23
- J. capturing Jericho, 845-846
- J. destroying Hazor, 317 n297
- J. not leading Israelites in battle at Ai, 847 n23
- J. proceeding slowly in conquering Canaan, 793
- J. victorious against Amalek, 680
- 31 kings captured by, 755
- 31 kings slain by, 846, 848 n33, 850 n44
- weeping, 809
- wisdom of, like candle, 789
- Joshua b. Levi, R.
  - adventure of, with angel of death, 23 n97
- description of Paradise of, 23 n97 and Elijah
  - E. getting R. Joshua interview with Messiah, 1012
  - E. granting any wish of R. Joshua, 1014
  - E. showing R. Joshua precious stones of Messianic time, 1011-1012
  - R. Joshua as favorite of E., 1012
  - R. Joshua incurring displeasure of E. for second time, 1007
  - story of journeys together, 1014-1015
- entering Paradise alive, 22 n90, 73 n67, 132 n62, (see also Paradise: entering alive)
- modesty of, 1012
- question to, about rainbow, 1013 n92
- story of fugitive and R. Joshua, 1006-1007
- Josiah, 1058-1063
  - death of, in battle against Egyptians, 1059
  - enlisting aid of Huldah to bring about reform, 1059

Josiah (cont.)

- finding copy of Torah in Temple, 1059
- hiding holy ark before destruction of Temple, 1059
- Israel free from idolatry during reign of, 949 n12
- killed by darts through nostrils, 59
- one of eight rulers of Davidic dynasty to die violent death, 933 n107
- one of most pious kings of Israel, 1059
- one of six men given name by God before birth, 201
- one of six pious men endowed with spiritual gifts descended from Ruth, 866 n61 (see also under pious: men)
- pious son of Amon, 1058-1059
- possessing nostrils of Adam, 58
- ruling over both Judah and Israel, 1059
- Shallum as another name for, 1066 n1
- slain by Pharaoh on account of David's curse of Joab, 946
- three sons of (Jehoiakim, Johanan, Zedekiah), 1062 n124
- trying to eliminate idols from houses, 1059
- Jotham (son of Uzziah)
  - administering kingdom during last 25 years of Uzziah's life, 1039 n19, 1043
  - characterizing Othniel, Deborah, and Gideon as olive or fig trees or vine, 872
  - comparing Abimelech to thorn-bush, 872
  - parable of, 874 n103
  - piety of, 1043, 1044 n38
  - as teller of parables, 872
  - youngest son of Gideon, 872
- journey
  - maxim about, communicated by Elijah to R. Judah, 1010
  - as metaphor for life, 973 n78
- joy(s)
  - of four ages, 22 n81
  - interrupted, 661-664
  - as necessary condition for manifestation of holy spirit, 268 n94
  - window of, in first heaven, 503
- Jubal
  - inventor of music sung in temples to idols, 112

Jubal (cont.)

- son of Lamech and Adah, 112
- Jubilee year
  - criticized by Haman, 1153-1154
- Judah (judge)
  - identified with Othniel, 861 n22
- Judah (kingdom of)
  - kings of, descendants of Judah, 912 n2
  - later kings of, 1037-1063
  - prophet of, 983 n8
- Judah (Othniel), 860
- Judah (son of Jacob)
  - admitted to heavenly academy after prayer of Moses, 820-821
  - age of, at death, 119 years, 440
  - animal images and, 439
  - becoming intoxicated, 344 and Benjamin
    - J. as surety for B., 377, 385, 387 n267
    - J. pleading with Joseph for B., 384-387
  - blamed for two things, 346 n74
  - bones of, joining together when Moses prayed, 820
  - burning wagons ornamented with idols, 389
  - and Canaanite king Barsan, 343-344
  - confession of, 345, 384 n263, 407
  - reward for, 347 n90
  - source of sixth of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127
  - death of, 440
    - corpse of, falling to pieces, 820
  - J. as fourth of Jacob's sons to die, 465 n2
  - defending Simon and Levi, 310
  - descendants of
    - confessing openly, 407
    - Messiah to be descendant of J., 408
    - to be princes over Jacob's sons, 316
  - Er as firstborn son of, 344
  - face of, like lion, 312, 313
  - fulfilling commandment not to kill, 593
  - gnashing teeth, 313, 314 n291
  - going to Arbel, 315
  - hair on chest (see also hair)
    - becoming hot, 390 n278
    - becoming stiff, 386, 387 n277
  - having impudence of dog and bravery of lion, 407

Judah (cont.)

and Isaac
 J. being blessed by I., 316-317, 440
 and Isaac and Jacob
 as judges in case of Tamar, 345
 and Jacob
 blessing of Judah by Jacob, 407-408, 410 n388
 Judah bringing Joseph's coat to Jacob, 343 n64, 346 n74 Judah deceiving Jacob by means of kid, 347 n87
 and Joseph death of first wife and sons of Judah, as punishment for selling Joseph, 346 n81, 347 dialogue between, 384-390
 Judah accused of being responsible for death of Joseph, 343
 Judah comparing Joseph to Pharaoh, 384
 Judah guarding pit, 333
 Judah not saving Joseph, 346 n74
 Judah pleading with Joseph for Benjamin, 384-387
 Judah preventing others from killing Joseph, 334 n34
 Judah proposing to sell Joseph to Ishmaelites, 333
 Judah responsible for selling Joseph, 346 n81
 Judah saving Joseph from death, 407
 Judah selling Joseph without knowledge of brothers, 335 n48
 Judah viewed unfavorably for not saving Joseph from slavery, 334 n46 Judah weeping for Joseph, 340 kingship conferred on, because of sin of Reuben, 407
 and Levi
 fighting against Ninevites, 312
 as lion, 385
 name
 inscribed on banner, 685
 J. called Jehudah by mother, 407
 J. given title "elect of God" in Scripture, 912 n1
 meaning of, 433, 439, 823
 reason for, 288 n175
 penance of, 440

Judah (cont.)

as pious man, 347 n86
 recognizing kin in Manasseh's touch, 387 revealing history of Israel until advent of Messiah, 440 right eye of, shedding tears of blood, 386
 rod of, identical to rod of Aaron, 730 n600 sent to Goshen to erect Bet ha-Midrash, 392
 sin of finally forgiven, 820-821
 not returning Benjamin back to Jacob, 820 with Tamar, 820
 and sons, 343-347
 as standard-bearer, corresponding to Gabriel, 685
 and Tamar, 344-345
 J. compelled by angel of love to notice T., 344, 347 n86
 J. confessing about improper relations with T., 439
 J. deceived by T. by means of kid, 347 n87
 J. judging that T. should suffer death by burning, 345
 J. saving T. and two sons from fire, 347 n89, 407
 testament of, 439-440
 to pitch camp in east, 685
 tribe of
 blessed by Moses, 820
 bow as chief weapon of, 821
 confessing to worship of golden calf, 855 courage of, in crossing Red Sea, 672 n388 elders from (Zerah, Dan, Jonadab, Bezalel, Shephatiah, Nahshon), 696 flag of, azure with picture of lion, 688
 Haman not able to prevail against descendant of, 1177 n175
 Israel led forth from Egypt on account of, 394 n311
 lion as insignia of, 689 n447
 Moses' psalm of, 823
 one of four standard-bearers, 685
 precious stone of carbuncle, 856 (see also precious stones)
 emerald, 651

Judah (cont.)

tribe of (cont.)
 prince of (Nahshon), 679
 receiving Jericho from descendants of Jethro, 589-590 rewarded with royalty of Israel, 555 spy representing (Caleb), 706
 standard of colors of, 685-686
 figure of lion on, 686
 inscription on, 686
 wanting to jump into waters of Red Sea, 555 voice of, 385, 387 n275, 390 n281
 bringing down walls of city of Egypt, 388
 J. to destroy Mizraim by voice, 385
 warfare of, 439
 against Amorites, 314
 in battle of Sartan, 315
 against Esau, 320
 J. attacking Edom to south, 321
 J. brave in battle, 321
 J. mounting walls of Hazor, 314
 J. slaying Jashub, king of Tappuah, 314
 against Ninevites, 312, 313
 warning against wine, unchastity, and greed, 440
 wives of Alit, daughter of noble merchant Shua, 347
 Bath-shua, daughter of king of Adullam, 343-344
 Canaanite women, 349 n98, 439
See also Jehudah Judah (son of R. Hiyya), 1124 n42
 Judah ha-Nasi, R.
 and Elijah
 E. attending academy of R. Judah daily, 1010
 E. communicating three maxims to R. Judah, 1010
 R. Judah cured of toothache by E., 1003 Judah he-Hasid of Regensburg, R. story of Elijah and circumcision, 1020 n103 Judaism
 admission to, requiring submission to three ceremonies (circumcision, baptism, sacrifice), 598
 Alexandrian, importance of Akedah for, 233 n255

Judaism (cont.)

- defense of, against Christian polemics, 200 n111
- See also* Jew(s)
- judge(s), 855-885
  - appointed by Moses, 587
  - each to execute two sinners, 779
  - famine in time of, 189
  - first, 855-857
  - God commanding Moses to appoint, 779
  - number of, 588 n164
  - respect due to, 588 n164
  - seven qualifications for, 586, 588 n162
- Judges, Book of
  - edited by Ezra, 1128 n56
- judgeship
  - mantle as symbol of, 344
- judgment
  - day of (see day of judgment)
  - after Enoch fetches book of deeds, 100 n142
  - fourth herald of Solomon reminding about, 969
  - at moment of death, 58 n20
- judgment day. See day of judgment
- Judith
  - daughter of Heth, married to Esau, 283
  - of family of Ham, wife of Esau, 262
- Jupiter (planet)
  - assisting Abraham in battle, 195
  - moving from west to east for sake of Abraham, 197 n98
  - Zadkiel as angel in charge of, 131 n61
  - See also* heavenly bodies
- jus primae noctis*
  - introduced by Bethuel, 241 n294
- just
  - thrones for, in Paradise, made from rubies, 507 (see also under pious)
- justice
  - and mercy
    - dialogue of, 54 n15
    - near to souls of pious, 611
    - ruling world jointly, 1
  - neglect of, as one of eight sins committed by Pharaoh, inhabitants of sinful cities, builders of Tower of Babel, Sennacherib, and Nebuchadnezzar, 562 n54, 1048 n60

justice (cont.)

- one of four standards of Divine Throne, 687 n440
- practice of, one of three natures of God according to Philo, 319 n304
- in seventh heaven, 6

K

Kaat Kesef ("silver charger")

- numerical values of letters in (930), 671

Kabah

- worship of, in Mecca, 221 n216

Kabbalah

- Abijah to be Ephraimitic Messiah in, 985 n17
- allegorizing legend of Cain, 102 n3
- Amalek identified with Sammael and evil inclination in, 580 n141
- on anamnesia, 58 n20
- calling Joseph tzadik because of sexual purity, 328 n3
- describing charms applied by Moses to strengthen Joshua's intellect, 842 n3
- description of Paradise in, 23 n97
- destruction of Temple not reality in, 1092 n64
- on differentiation of sex in embryo, 57 n20
- and doctrine concerning Adam Kadmon, 49 n4
- on Egypt as home of witchcraft and demons, 66 n40
- Gabriel as teacher of Joseph in, 505 n117
- identification of Leviathan with "Evil" in, 32 n127
- identification of Satan with Leviathan in, 42 n187
- on identity of angels with souls, 16 n63
- on Israel as God's portion, 166 n91
- and legend that Nebuchadnezzar ordered Temple rebuilt and people returned, 1077 n29
- Maltiel as teacher of Elijah in, 505 n117
- Nebuchadnezzar as descendant of Queen of Sheba in, 1073 n21
- and new legends, ix
- Raphael as teacher of Jacob in, 505 n117

Kabbalah (cont.)

- Raziel as teacher of Adam in, 505 n117
- on residence of Shekinah under tree of life, 95 n126
- on resurrection of dead in Holy Land 40 years earlier than in other countries, 401 n345
- on righteous having to pass through Gehenna before entering Paradise, 508 n118
- rivalry between Solomon and Hiram of Tyre in solving riddles in, 958 n36
- Sammael as goat in, 307 n275
- on Satan's power over Job, 456 n14
- Seth as Messiah in, 116 n52
- on souls passing through river of fire, 97 n134
- as source of Jewish legendary material, ix
- and view that
  - Abraham learned witchcraft in Egypt, 191 n80
  - Akedah took place on Day of Atonement, 232 n248
  - all souls are part of Adam's soul, 57 n19
  - demons are souls of wicked, 82 n98
  - Yofiel as teacher of Shem in, 505 n117
  - Zadkiel as teacher of Abraham in, 505 n117
  - Zagzagel as teacher of Moses in, 505 n117
- See also* mysticism; mystic literature
- Kabbalists
  - having power to conjure up Elijah, 1018
- Kaddish
  - to be recited by Zerubbabel after God's lecture on new Torah, 1120 n25
  - See also* prayers, Jewish
- Kadesh
  - name, meaning of ("sanctity"), 734
  - place of judgment against Moses and Aaron, 194
- Kadesh-Barnea
  - Israelites remaining at, for 19 years, 731
  - Moses sending spies from, on 27 Sivan, 707
  - rebellion of Korah at, 731
- Kadosh (the Holy One), 4. See also God: names and titles of

- kaf (letter)
 creation of world through, 4
 standing for
kavod ("honor"), 4
keter ("crown"), 4
kisseh ("throne of God"), 4
See also alphabet; letters of alphabet
- Kafziel (angel)
 in charge of Saturn, 131 n61
- Kahana, R.
 saved by Elijah, 1001
- Kal (angel)
 guardian angel of Nebuchadnezzar, 1104 n104
- Kanah
 book of Kabbalah authored by Elkanah, 1018
- Kangar
 author of Midrash of Chaldees, 157
- Karaïtes
 attempting to ridicule Rabbanites, 270 n100
- Karaite sources
 slandering Boaz, 866 n60
- Kardu
 mountain on which ark rested, 151 n48
- Karnaim
 abode of Job, 458 n21
- Kasbiel (angel)
 as chief of the oath, 137 n9
- Kasdim (people)
 identified with Chaldees, 243
- Kasdim (place)
 location of Nimrod's palace, 186
- Kaspiel. See Kasbiel
- Kastimon and Afira
 monsters as rulers of abode of Cainites, 110 n34
- kataṭav* ("to write") meaning may be "to edit," 1071 n15
- Katriel (angel). See Gadriel
- Kawkabel (fallen angel)
 teaching men about astrology, 119
- Kazban (Falsifier). See Zabnak
- Kazfiel (angel)
 angel of death in charge of kings, 42 n187
- Kedushah
 recited by Israel only on Sabbath, 1043 n36
- Kemuel (angel)
 destroyed by Moses, 613
 leader of destroying angels, 214 n179
- Kemuel (cont.)
 as porter in charge of 12,000 angels of destruction, 613
- Kemuel (person)
 Balaam belonging to family of, 761 n722
 identified with Balaam, 244 n315, 761 n722
 Beor, 244 n315
- Kenaani
 another name for Sihon, 752 n669
- Kenan (son of Arpachshad), 116 n53
 ancestor of Enoch, 126
 grandchild of Seth, founder of a city, 116 n53 inducing his generation to worship idols, 116 n53 master of wisdom, 116 n53
- Kenath (city)
 Nobah giving name to, 799
- Kenaz campaigns of, 858-860
 chosen by lot to be prince over Israel, 855 commanded by God to deposit 12 stones in holy ark, 856
 death of, 859
 executing those who murmured against him, 858 fighting with 300,000 men, 858
 having three daughters, 859
 name of, 857 n1
 people murmuring against, 858
 praying to God for sign by means of sword, 858
 reigning for 57 years, 858
 and Seenamias (sons of Caleb), as spies, 844 n10 son of Caleb, 857 n1 son of Othniel, 857 n1
 stepfather of Caleb, 861 n25
 vision of, concerning length of world, 859 younger brother of Caleb, 861 n25
- Keni
 elder from tribe of Gad, 696
 one of seven names of Jethro, 493
- Kenites
 attitude of Saul toward, 902 n60
 to announce to Israel arrival of Messiah, 776
- Keren ha-Puch
 name, meaning of
 "as the diamond," 462 n37
 "splendid as saffron," 462 n37
 third daughter of Job, 462 n37
 translated in LXX as "horn of Amalthea," 462 n37
See also Amaltheas
- Kesed (city)
 founded by descendants of Kesed, 243
- Kesed (nephew of Abraham)
 descendants of, establishing themselves opposite to Shinar, 243
 Kasdim (Chaldees) named for, 243
- Keteb (most dangerous of demons), 660
- Keturah
 Abraham's third wife, 243 n309
 daughter of Japheth, 244 n309, 244 n314 identified with Hagar, 243, 243 n309
 name, meaning of, 243 n309
 sons of
 as blemished offspring of Abraham, 406
 names of, 244 n309
 not to come near Isaac, 243, 244 n311
- keys, held by God, 997 n12
- Kezef (angel)
 coming to destroy Israel, 730 n595
 of destruction, struggling with Moses, 623
 fighting against Moses on Horeb, 730 n595 name, meaning of ("wrath"), 730 n595
- Keziah
 name, meaning of
 "exquisite as aromatic cassia," 462 n37
 "perfume," 461
 second daughter of Job, 461
 using censer, 461
- Kibroth-hattaavah (place)
 name, meaning of, 699
- kid
 as atoning sacrifice for deception of dipping Joseph's coat in kid's blood, 340
 as atoning sacrifice on Day of Atonement, 265 blood of, resembling human blood, 339
 of dedication offering corresponding to governors, 671
 significance of, for Nahshon and for tribes of Asher, Benjamin, Dan, Ephraim, Issachar, Manasseh, Reuben, and Simeon, 666-670
 symbolic significance of, in history of world, 671

- kid (cont.)
   and Judah
     Tamar deceiving Judah with kid,
       as Jacob deceived his father,
       347 n87
   for Passover sacrifice, 265
   reward for Tamar, 344
   rules for ritual slaughtering of,
     observed by brothers of
     Joseph, 328
   as sin offering of atonement on 10
     Tishri, 341
- Kiddush
   benedictions for, formulated by men of Great Synagogue,
     1128 n58
   See also prayers, Jewish
- kidneys
   for making resolves, 447
   one of 12 guides of men, giving counsels, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of
     men)
- Kikanos (king of Ethiopia)
   death of, 489
   laying siege to city for nine years, 489 war of, against nations of East, 489
- kikayon
   caused to grow to protect Jonah, 1034
- Kilab (son of David)
   one of four sinless men, 912 n7 (see also sinless lives)
- kindness to wayfarer, 393 n296 (see also hospitality)
- king
   without army, 1
   to country as heart is to body, 218
     n202
   forgiven for sins up to day of coronation, 902 n53
   never to be present at funeral, 947
     n6
   people's demand for, 895, 897-898
     n47
- kingdom
   one of crowns of Abraham, 188
     n57
   one of four horns in four corners of Tabernacle, 648 (see also under horn)
   one of three crowns Israel received from God, 670 (see also under crown[s])
- kingdoms
   three, Israel subject to (Babylon, Media, and Greece), 361
- kingdoms (cont.)
   60 in number, 672 n399
- kingdoms, four. See four kingdoms
- kings anointed (Saul, David, Joash, and Jehoash), 658 n371
   claiming to be gods, four in number (Hiram, Nebuchadnezzar, Pharaoh, Joash),
     1039 n16
   Davidic, permitted to sit in Temple court, 930 n88
   doing evil, having no share in world to come, 1038-1039
     n6 (see also world to come:
     those having no share in)
   of earth, consulting Balaam about portents on day of revelation, 600
   of east, coming to Abraham, 237 Edomite, coming from alien peoples, 324
   four (David, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Hezekiah), prayers of, in war, 986 n21
   Jewish, coming from their own
     people, 324
   of Judah, in third division of Paradise, 19
   law for, first herald of Solomon reciting, 969
   ruling over whole world (Solomon, Ahab), 987
   of west, coming to Abraham, 237
- Kings, Book of Jeremiah as editor of, 1071 n15
- king's highway, 751
- Kingu
   and Tiamat, 30 n118
- kinship. See blood relationship
- Kiriath-Arba ("City of Four") inhabited by Anak, 707
   See also Hebron
- Kiriath-Jearim
   Uriah coming from, 1071 n14
- Kirkisani
   Karaite writer, 661 n381
   treatise of, on Jewish sects, 661
     n381
- Kiryat Arba. See Kiriath-Arba
- Kishon River
   fighting against Sisera, 868
   troops of Sisera drowned in, 868
- Kislev (month)
   15th of Jacob celebrating Feast of Weeks, 393 n301
- Kislev (cont.)
   24th of rain stopping, 147
   compensated with feast of Hanukkah, 656 n367
   everything ready for Tabernacle in, 655
   and Tever Sihon and Og conquered in, 1151
   See also date
- Kislon (elder from tribe of Benjamin), 696
- Kitor (city)
   ruled by Queen of Sheba, according to legend of hoopoe, 958-959
- Kittim
   identified with Italy, 419 n425
   identified with Rome, 254 n19,
     777 n782
   victorious against Africans, 419
- knowledge
   given by God for sanctification of His holy Name, 414 n406
   and wisdom given by God to resist temptation, 414 n406
- kof (letter)
   creation of world through, 4
   fourth letter of name of Isaac, on standard of tribe of Dan, 686 as letter of word ketz ("end"), not contained in names of 12 tribes, 409 n383
   numerical value of (100), height of Temple in ells, 253
   standing for kelalah ("curse"), 4
   third letter of Jacob, 253
   on standard of Ephraim, 686
   See also alphabet; letters of alphabet
- Kohath (son of Levi), 805
   four sons of (Amram, Izhar, Hebron, Uzziel), 718 grandfather of Moses, 480
   image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
   name, meaning of ("bluntness"), 438, 718
   one of seven pious men of world, 968 (see also under pious:
     men)
   one of six righteous men who drew Shekinah back from six heavens, 473
   sons of entrusted with transportation of ark, 665

Kohath (cont.)
 sons of (cont.)
 most distinguished among Levites, 683
 taking care of
 ark of covenant, 683
 Holy of Holies in desert, 683
 Kohathites
 first to be numbered in census of Levites, 683 (see also census[es] of Israel)
 having to walk backwards, 683 slain by God for unwillingness to take care of ark, 683 Kokabiel (angel)
 of stars, prostrating before Metatron, 130
 Koptiziah, mountains of Zepho slaying monster in, 418
 Korah (son of Esau), 321
 and Dathan and Abiram, Tabernacle of, 724
 death of, 1087 n53
 discovering one of places where Joseph hid valuables, 397
 in fifth division of Paradise, 20
 followers of appointed as keepers of portals of hell, 726
 death of, by heavenly fire consuming souls and leaving bodies, 1087 n53
 punishment of, 725-726
 to be raised from earth, one of seven wonders of Messiah, 1021
 250 in number, 725, 728
 253 in number, 720 n563
 and Moses
 K. abusing M. and Torah, 720-722 K. feeling slighted by M. when Elizaphan appointed chief of Levite division of Kohathites, 718
 K. inciting rebellion against M., 720
 K. questioning M. about laws, 719
 M. pleading with K., 722-725
 name, meaning of ("baldness"), 718
 one of two wealthy men who perished on account of wealth, 798 pride bringing about fall of, 718
 punishment of continuing in hell, 725

Korah (cont.)
 punishment of (cont.)
 K. consumed by fire, 726 n585
 to cease after resurrection, 725
 rebellion of, 718-720
 and commandment of fringes (tzitzit), 720 n566
 gaining support from people, 723 including members of all tribes except Levi, 720 n563
 taking place during sojourn at Kadesh-Barnea, 731
 relationship of, to Asaph, 728 n590
 riches of, 718, 719 n560
 sons of
 as authors of many psalms, 728
 n590
 entering Paradise alive, 728
 n590 (see also Paradise:
 entering alive)
 number of, 728 n589
 as prophets, 888 n1
 receiving prophetic gift, 727
 relieved by prayer of Hannah, 890 saved by flying in air, 728 n589
 three in number
 as composers of psalms, 823 saved because of their repentance, 724, 726-728
 three pillars on which world rests, 728 n590
 swallowed up by earth, 725
 to bear witness to God on day of judgment, 726 n586
 treasurer of Pharaoh, 718
 wife of, inciting K. to rebellion against Moses, 719, 726

Koran
 and story of torn garment proving Joseph's innocence, 399
 n340
 Korduene (Armenia). See Kardu
 Kushta (place)
 inhabitants of never speaking untruth, 862 n28
 not dying before old age, 862
 n28
 name, meaning of, 862 n28

L

Laban
 and Balaam
 B. identified with L., 796, 796
 n855

Laban (cont.)
 and Balaam (cont.)
 relationship between, 295 n229
 blessed on account of merits of Jacob, 1027 n6 (see also Jacob: merits of; merits)
 brother of Rebekah, 251
 deceitfulness of, 283 fearing Esau, 294 n220
 having two daughters, 283
 and Israel
 L. as Israel's archenemy, 760
 L. inciting Pharaoh and Amalek
 against Israel, 760
 and Jacob
 anger of J. toward L., 284 covenant between, 293, 921,
 922 n57
 dream of L. warning against harming J., 292
 enmity of L. toward descendants
 of J., 862 n29
 in Haran, 278
 L. conspiring with Esau against
 J., 293-294
 L. deceiving J. about returning home, 290
 L. envying wealth and good fortune of J., 290
 L. overtaking J. at mountain of Gilead, 292
 L. pursuing J., 292
 L. using witchcraft against J., 294 n223
 Michael appearing to L., telling him not to do anything to J., 292
 pious daughters of L. marrying
 Jacob, 274 n121
 punishment of L. for evil designs against J., 295 n228
 king of Aram, slain by Jacob, 314
 name
 as antiphrastic, 241 n293
 meaning of, 241 n293
 other names of Arami ("the deceiver"), 283
 Cushan, 861
 prominent social position of, 280
 n149
 sorcery of, 243, 294 n223
 swearing not to pass over stone boundary with hostile intent, 293
 teraphim of
 L. consulting teraphim, 281
 L. getting another set of teraphim, which revealed
 J.'s escape, 294 n220

Laban (cont.)

- teraphim of (cont.)
  - L. searching for teraphim in J.'s camp, 292
  - stolen by Rachel, 291
  - wife of
    - Adinah, bearing twin daughters, Leah and Rachel, 262
- Labbiel (archangel)
  - commanding angels opposed to creation of man, 52
  - name changed to Raphael, the Rescuer, 52 (see also angels, general: types)
- Labosordacus (son of Niglissar; grandson of Evil-merodach), 1112 n2
- Lacedaemonians
  - as descendants of Abraham, 244 n314
- ladder
  - of Jacob, vision of four kingdoms and, 277, 279 n134
- Lahad
  - one of five other names of Bezalel, 642
- Lahash (angel)
  - leading angels to snatch words of Israelites interceding for Moses, 809
- Lahmi (brother of Goliath)
  - conquered by David, 943 n146
- Lailah (angel), 57 n20, 197 n98
  - angel of night, 55
  - fighting for Abraham, 195
- lamb
  - he-lamb of peace offering, corresponding to building of Second Temple, 672
  - on Solomon's throne, 968
- lamb, paschal
  - blood of, on doorposts and lintel, as reminder of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, 535
  - commandment to sacrifice, 534
  - sacrifice of
    - early law concerning, 535
    - Hallel chanted during, 540 n225
    - to show that Israelites had given up idolatry, 535
  - selection of, 536 n206
  - See also* Passover; sacrifice
- lame
  - made whole, 218
- Lamech (father of Noah)
  - blind, 111
  - famine in time of, 191 n64

Lamech (cont.)

- great-grandson of Cain, 111
- inadvertently killing son, 111
- killing Cain, 111
- and knowledge of future, 134 n4
- life span of, 132 n64
- as prophet, 112 n42
- 77 descendants of, perishing at time of flood, 112 n37
- son of Methuselah, 133
- two wives of, 111-112
- lamed (letter)
  - creation of world through, 4
  - standing for luhot ("celestial tablets"), 4
  - See also* alphabet; letters of alphabet
- lament, great, 1078-1081
- lamentation
  - over Temple, 1078
- Lamentations, Book of, 1071 n15
- Lamia
  - Lilith conceived as, 67 n40
- lamps
  - golden, on Solomon's throne, 968
- lance
  - as weapon of Phinehas, 781
- land. See Holy Land
- language(s)
  - acquisition of, through swallowing, 115 n49
  - Adam naming animals in 70 languages, 512
  - African, 158 n72
  - Agogian, 158 n72
  - Ahasuerus ruling that wife must speak language of husband, 1137
  - of animals
    - Arabic legend about, 957 n34
    - Elijah understanding, 1004
    - Solomon's knowledge of, 957 n34
    - Islamic legends about, 958 n34
    - Solomon's story of guest wanting to learn, 953-954
  - assigned to nations, 164
  - confounded, 164
  - number of, 159 n72
  - invented by Adam, 60
  - 70 in number, 114, 413, 512
  - obscene, one of eight grievous sins of Sennacherib, 1048 n60
  - original, spoken by man and animals, 70 n58
  - See also under individual language*
- Lapidoth. See Lappidoth
- Lappidoth
  - one of names of Barak, 870 n73

Latinus (king of Kittim)

- destroying canal from Kittim to Africa, 420
- marriage of, to Ushpiziwnah, daughter of Asdrubal, 420
- war of, against Asdrubal, 420
- laundry
  - to be done on Thursdays, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122
- laurel tree
  - to make water sweet, 566
  - See also* tree(s)
- laver
  - for sanctuary, made from mirrors, 654
- law(s)
  - biblical
    - forbidding marriage of Egyptian males and Jewish females, 949 n16
    - that married woman should not be alone with man, 942 n143
    - transgressed by Solomon, 948
  - civil, given to Israel at Marah, 567
  - concerning last wish of dying, 924 n71
  - eight sections of, revealed to Moses on first day of dedication of Tabernacle, 673
  - favoring rich in Sodom, 209
  - fish must be devoured by Leviathan, 1033
  - forbidding sacrifice outside Temple in Jerusalem, 997 n13
  - of God, producing pious man, 47-48
  - ignorance of, not an excuse, 786
  - of inheritance, and succession of Solomon, 946 n3
  - Jewish
    - forbidding counting of Jews, 638 n314
    - stories explaining about forbidden meat given to dogs, 546
  - against killing animal and its young on same day, 899
  - of marriage, given to Israel at Marah, 567
  - Moses as interpreter of, 616 n248
  - of nature, suspended during mourning for Methuselah, 139
  - of Nehemiah and company that no vessel or utensil is to be handled on Sabbath, 1120 n26

law(s) (cont.)

- obliging day laborer to work until dark, 287
  - oral, consisting of Midrash, Halakhah, and Haggadah, 592
  - revealed by God through divine prophecy, 616 n248
  - of sanctity, revealed to Aaron and descendants, 673
  - of separation of Levites, revealed on first day of dedication of Tabernacle, 673
  - suspensions of, 896-897 n42
  - that firstborn son of patriarchs to be ruler of world, 1132
  - that king never to be present at funeral, 947 n6
  - written on hearts, 611
- law (Torah)
- fence around, 612 n239
  - gradual revelation of, 239 n275
  - neglect of observance of, war of Amalek as punishment for, 577
  - observance of, 50 n6 (see also Halakhah; Ten Commandments) and disease, 567
  - study of, first taken up at Elim, 567
- See also* law(s); Torah

Law of Moses. See Torah: of Moses

lawsuits

- civil cases of, to be handled swiftly, 690
- criminal cases of, to be handled slowly, 690
- settled by manna, 571

laymen

- one of three divisions of Israel (see also priest[s]; Levites), 592

lead

- third artificial heaven of Hiram made from, 1104

Leah

- age of, at death, 44 years, 319 n307
- barrenness of, 285
  - not mentioned in old Midrashim, 288 n170
- beauty of, 283
- bowing before Esau, 305 n262
- burial of, in Hebron, 98 n137
- children of
  - Issachar as fifth son of L., 287
  - L. bearing twins seven months after marriage, 285

Leah (cont.)children of (cont.)

- Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah as sons of L., 285
  - seventh child of, a daughter, 287
  - Zebulun as sixth son of L., 287
- daughter of Laban and Adinah, 262
- death of, 319 n307, 320
- envied by Rachel, 285
- first to give thanks to God since creation, 285
- as gadabout, 289 n193
- God having mercy on, 285
- gossip about, 285
- and Jacob
  - L. as wife of J., 283
  - L. giving Zilpah to J. as wife, 286
  - L. hated by J., 285, 288 n168
- as one of four mothers, 434 n3 (see also mothers; Rachel; Rebekah; Sarah)
- one of seven sterile women who bore children, 878 n111
- as one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
- supervising one of seven classes of women, 23 n97
- to marry older of Rebekah's sons, 283
- as twin sister of Rachel, 319 n307
- weakness of eyes of, reason for, 283
- weeping of, causing eyelashes to fall out, 283
- in women's Paradise, 940
- and Zilpah
  - L. naming second son of Z. Asher, 286
  - L. naming son of Z. Gad, 286

Lebanon

- Canaan dwelling in, 188
- Temple as, 1077 n29

Lebanon, Mount

- as fifth mountain on which heavenly Jerusalem will descend, 595 n184 (see also under Jerusalem: heavenly)

Lebiel. See Labbiel

Lebuzar Duk

- one of three sons of Evil-merodach, 1112 n2

left hand

- God created world with, 1166 n143

left side

- of Messiah, 100 n142

Leliel (angel)

- of night, prostrating before Metatron, 130

Lemech. See Lamech

Lemuel

- another name of Solomon, 946 n2

lentils

- as mourner's meal, 259 n41
  - of Adam and Eve after murder of Abel, 257
  - of Isaac after death of Abraham, 257
  - of parents of Haran after he perished in furnace, 257
  - reason for, 257
  - as price of birthright, 259 n46
  - symbolizing death, 257
- Leo (Lion) (sign of Zodiac)
- answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151

leopard

- on Solomon's throne, 968

leper(s)

- considered as dead, 517 n142, 1042 n29 (see also blind; childless; poor)
- denied right of staying within camp, 675
- law regarding, 675
- one of five insulting names hurled at David by Shimei, 931 n96
- put out of camp, 674
- regulations for cleansing, 673

leprosy

- Aaron and Miriam afflicted with, for slandering Moses, 702
- Abimelech afflicted with, on account of treatment of Isaac, 260-261
- affliction of those who worshiped golden calf, 675
- bathing in blood as remedy for, 499 n101
- Cain afflicted with, 107, 109 n28, 675
- daughters of Zion afflicted with, for unchastity, 675
- as disease of Naaman, Syrian captain, 1029
- Egyptian bondage compared to, 512
- Egyptians afflicted with, at time of Moses' abandonment, 477
- Gehazi afflicted with, for frustrating purpose of Elisha, 675
- Goliath afflicted with by David, 916

leprosy (cont.)

Goliath afflicted with (cont.)
 for reviling God, 675
 Haman afflicted with, 1177 n174
 Job afflicted with, 457
 Miriam afflicted with, for slandering Moses, 675
 Naaman afflicted with, for arrogance, 675
 as part of sixth plague, 530
 Pharaoh afflicted with in time of Abraham, 190
 in time of Moses, 497
 as punishment
 for adultery, 931 n96
 for arrogance, 1042 n30
 for coming near to burn incense before Lord, 728
 of Moses, 512
 for pride of Naaman, 1030 n15
 of serpent, 79 n83
 for speaking ill of neighbor, 702 of those who devote selves to acquiring possessions, 109
 n28
 Shebnah afflicted with, for evil deeds, 1051 n64 13 sins punished by (blasphemy, unchastity, murder, false suspicion, pride, illegal appropriation of rights of others, slander, theft, perjury, profanation of Divine Name, idolatry, envy, contempt of Torah), 675 Uzziah afflicted with, for presuming on rights of priesthood, 675 whoever enters Tabernacle without being commanded to be afflicted with, 663
 letters of alphabet combination of, by which God created world, 641, 642 n326
 and creation, 4 n10, 49 n3 crowns and embellishments of, 892
 n24
 engraved on precious stones of breastplate of Aaron, 650,
 651 n356
 mystic theory of, 5 n12
 and pedagogic Haggadot, 4-5 n10 refraining from testifying against Israel, 1079
 speaking to God, 3
 on standards of tribes, 686
 Torah glorified with, 807
See also under individual letters

Levi

age of, at death, 137 years, 438
 ascension of, 301 n251, 437-439
 L. taken to heaven by Michael, 300 blessed
 by God, 300
 by Isaac, 316-317, 438
 censured by Jacob for sin, 410
 n387
 covenant of, Abrahamic covenant referred to as, 674 n409
 death of, 439
 descendants of, to serve in sanctuary, 316
 discovering money in sack of grain,
 374, 375 n221
 favorable portrayals of, 375 n216
 glorification of, in legend of Asenath, 427 n432
 idealized as prophet and priest, 334 n34
 and Judah
 fighting against Ninevites, 312
 resembling Jacob, 328 n3
 last of Jacob's sons to die, 465
 loving-kindness of, to son of Pharaoh, 427
 making amends for sin at Shechem, 821
 name given by God, 285
 meaning of
 "accompanied," 288 n174
 "borrowed," 288 n174
 "conduct," 433, 718
 one crowned with 24 gifts of
 priests, 285
 one of six righteous men who drew Shekinah back from six
 heavens, 473
 one of weak among sons of Jacob,
 396 n324
 possessing wisdom, prophecy, and priesthood, 375 n216 priesthood bestowed on L., 437
 because of sin of Reuben, 407
 prophetic spirit of, 426-427
 as seventh pious man, 682 (see also under pious: men)
 and Simeon
 conspiring against Joseph, 332,
 334 n41
 slaying inhabitants of Shechem, 308-309, 438
 summoned through angel Gabriel, 285 third of Jacob's sons to die, 465 n2

Levi (cont.)

third son of Leah, 285
 as tithe of Jacob's sons, 300, 403
 to destroy Mizraim with sword, 385 to execute vengeance on Shechem for Dinah, 437
 tribe of
 blessed by Moses, 821
 clinging to Abrahamic covenant, 673 discerning plan of Pharaoh, 467 elders from (Amram, Hananiah, Nethand, Sithri), 696 given title "elect of God" in Scripture, 912 n1
 having responsibility of atoning for sin of firstborn, 682
 having smallest number of sinners, 857 n3
 high priest to come from, 649
 Moses' psalm of, 823
 not worshiping golden calf, 601, 626, 673
 observing Torah in Egypt, 673
 precious stone of carbuncle, 651
 emerald, 856
 receiving crowns, 601 refusing to serve Pharaoh, 468
 n6
 remaining faithful to covenant of fathers, 403
 remaining faithful to God, 473
 as scholars to expound Torah and render decisions, 407
 too wise to be deceived by Pharaoh, 474 n32
 tradition of Scribes belonging to, 410 n387
 visions of
 on deathbed, 437
 second, 438
 warfare of
 L. assisting Judah in battle
 against Amorites, 314
 L. attacking Edom to east, 321
 L. in battle of Sartan, 315
 L. slaying Elon, king of Gaash, 314
 wives of daughter of Jobab, grandson of Eber, 348
 Milcah, 438
 two in number, 474 n33
 Leviathan
 abode of, in depths of sea, 31 n127

Leviathan (cont.)

- and angels
  - battle of L. with angels in last hour, 28-29
  - L. as bad angel, 32 n127
  - struggle between, 306 n275
- and Behemoth (see also Behemoth)
  - allegorical interpretations of, 32 n127
  - combat between, 29, 32 n139, 33
  - as female-male pair, 30 n127
  - as food of pious in life to come, 31 n127
  - legends of, and Messianic banquet, 31 n127
- as clean animal, 32 n139
- created on fifth day, 28, 77
- description of, 28
- empowered to destroy rivers, 1047 n55
- as evil, 30 n124
- fins of, and ritual slaughtering, 32 n139
- as food for pious at end of time, 28-29, 31 n127
- form of, as serpent encircling world, 32 n127
- foul smell of, 28, 30 n125
- and fox, 38
- gender of
  - Leviathan and Behemoth as female-male pair, 28, 30 n118, 30 n127
  - female, 30 n118
  - killed by God, 28, 30 n126
- God sporting with, 30 n124
- hide of
  - canopy over heads of pious made from, 30 n123
  - garments of Adam and Eve made from, 30 n123, 80 n93
- identification of
  - with "Evil" in Kabbalah, 32 n127
  - with Rahab and angel of death, 20 n73
  - with Satan in Kabbalah, 42 n187
  - with sea, 30 n125
  - with vault of heaven to which signs of Zodiac affixed, 31 n127
- Jonah speaking to, 1033
- kept in check
  - by archangel Jaoel, 31 n127
  - by stickleback fish, 28

Leviathan (cont.)

- lying on abyss, 39 n142
  - power of, over animal world, 28, 37-38
  - relationship of, with angel of death, 42 n187
  - representing evil, 306 n275
  - representing power of heathen, 30 n124
  - slain by God, 30 n127, 306 n275
  - spouting up water at winter solstice, frightening big fish to stop eating small, 2
  - and story about compensating pious son, 42 n190
  - as taninim or tanin, 29 n117
  - to be captured by Jonah in days to come, 1033 n31
  - to devour all fish, 1033
  - torn by Ziz, 32 n139
  - two consorts of, 39 n141
  - in vision of Abraham, 200 n114
- Levite
- of Judges 17:7 identified with Jonathan of Judges 18:30, 883 n130
- Levites
- apathy of, about returning to Palestine, 1121
  - appointed by Moses as judges, 626
  - becoming servants of sanctuary, 626-627 n279
  - census of, 681-683 (see also census[es] of Israel)
  - Levites omitted by David from census, 936
  - confessing to wanting to prove whether Tabernacle is holy, 855
  - consecrated as servants of God and His sanctuary, on first day of dedication of Tabernacle, 673
  - defiling selves through contact with dead bodies of worshipers of golden calf, 674 n410
  - descendants of Moses as, 511 n121
  - divided by Moses into eight sections, 683
  - divisions of, 665, 683-684
  - fighting with other tribes over returning to Egypt, 746
  - giving tithe to priests, 821
  - killed by Babylonians for refusing to sing songs, 1088
  - not tempted to rebellion by spies, 821
  - number of, 682

Levites (cont.)

- offerings of, on first day of dedication of Tabernacle, 674
  - as officers of court, 1124 n37
  - one of three divisions of Israel (see also priest[s]; laymen), 592
  - punished with loss of tithes for not wanting to return to Palestine, 1121
  - remaining true to God, 821
  - rewarded for piety in refusing to worship golden calf, 626 n279
  - slaying those who worshiped golden calf, 821
  - as Sons of Moses, 1088
  - taking place of firstborn, 682
  - to be blessed with earthly goods, 821
  - walking barefoot, 683
- Lewdness, Well of, 778
- libations
- wine required for
    - coming from En-Gedi, 709 n519
    - coming from Miriam's well, 709 n519
  - See also* offering; sacrifice(s)
- Libnian language
- used by Semites, 158 n72
- Libra (Balance) (sign of Zodiac)
- answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151
- lice
- plague of Egypt, 523, 524, 525
  - brought through mediation of Aaron, 528
- licentiousness
- of Amorites, 210 n155
  - in Sodom, 210 n155
- lie, diplomatic
- sometimes permitted, 307 n276
  - See also* deceit; falsehood; lying
- life
- eternal, one of seven gifts enjoyed by Adam, 84
  - as temporary sojourn, 396 n327
  - window of, in first heaven, 503
- life span
- of antediluvians, rationalistic explanation of, 78 n72
  - of first ten generations, 102 n1
  - human
    - shortened after death of Abraham, 257 n36
    - shortened in days of David, 257 n36
  - in time of patriarchs, 235

light

bright, emanating from body of persons distinguished for beauty, 942 n137 celestial (see also light: heavenly) appearing at birth of heroes, 134 n1, 219 n203, 476 n42 radiating from countenance of Jochebed, 474 shining in Cave of Machpelah as long as Jacob dwelt in Canaan, 415 n423
 created on first day, 77, 82 n98
 and darkness, struggle between, 11 n42
 as element of creation, 29 n114
 of first day
   allowing man to see whole world, 5 concealed in anticipation of wickedness, 5 different from light created on fourth day, 5 to appear to pious in world to come, 5
 first ray of, 7
 from God's splendor, as beginning of creation, 8 n18 heavenly (see also light: celestial) at birth of heroes, 219 n203
   one of seven gifts enjoyed by Adam, 84
 of heavenly bodies, 25 n98
 from light, 8 n18
 miraculous, shining in Rebekah's tent, 242 n303
 one of ten things produced on first day of creation, 5
 primordial
   and creation, 85 n104
   shining on Moses for first three months of life, 476 n42 and splendor of Adam's countenance, 85 n104 to appear at first trumpet blast of Elijah in Messianic time, 1021 reaching full strength in time of Solomon, 967 n57 shining over R. Akiba's grave, 236 n265 as sign of heavenly origin, 134 n3
 lightning weapon of God against Pharaoh, 559 (see also hurricane; storm; thunder; thunderstorms) lights created on fourth day, 50 n7

lilies

on Solomon's throne, 968
 Lilith
   abode of, in Egypt, 66 n40
   and Adam
     begetting demons, 131
     descendants of, 114-115
     L. as first wife of A., 64, 67 n40
     L. insisting on full equality with A., 64
   and children
     babies protected from L. by amulet, 65
     L. afflicting women in childbirth, 1020 n100
     L. injuring babies, 64-65
     L. slaying own children, 714
     L. strangling little children with Ashmedai, 114 n45 created out of dust, 64
   female spirit, 956 n25
   husband of, as demon accompanying Caleb and Phinehas on spy mission, 843 identified with Babylonian Labartu, 67 n40 identified with Naamah, appearing to men in sleep, 110 n34 insubordination of, 67 n40 queen of Sheba, assailing Job, 457 queen of Zmargad, 458 n20
   in Red Sea in Egypt, 67 n40
   as wind spirit, 67 n40
 Liliths (night spirits)
   assembling under trees, according to German popular beliefs, 67 n40 lime powder
   as weapon, 312
 linen
   blue, purple, and scarlet among 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see also under Tabernacle) lion(s) among animals of fourth plague, 530 (see also plague[s]: against Egypt)
   on ark, having fever, 147
   associated with wine, 153, 155 n58
   carrying out orders of Solomon, 971
   carved by Moses on piece of Joseph's cup, 429
   Daniel saved from, 1096 n76, 1096 n77 depicted on tribe of Judah's flag in wilderness, 686, 688

lion(s) (cont.)

engraved on silver leaf used to raise Joseph's coffin from Nile, 621
 Esther referring to Ahasuerus as, 1168 n145
 and fox, fable of, 262 n55, 302 gilded, on hippodrome, 970-971
 golden, on Solomon's throne, 968
 guarding doors of palace of Pharaoh, 518
 hymn of praise of, 45 (see also praise)
 as insignia of tribe of Judah, 689 n447 Judah known as, 409
 as king of beasts, 913, 914 n16
 likeness of fire of altar to, 661 n380 lizard as protector of, 43 n190
 magic, 548 n3
 Nebuchadnezzar described as, 1155-1156
 and Noah, 150
   encounter of, 148 n37
   lion hurting N., 151 n51
 number of, in pit of Darius, 1117 n16
 one of four beings represented on Divine Throne, 621 ordered to do no harm to Daniel, 48 Ornias having form of, 965 n56 prophet of Judah killed by, 984 n8
 with snake around neck, as pet of Nebuchadnezzar, 1103 Lion (sign of Zodiac). See Leo lips
   misshapen, because of curse of Ham, 154
 lithology
   Kenaz as master of, 857 n1 liturgical formulas
   in angels' doxologies, 17 n70 (see also prayers, Jewish) liturgy traced back to angels, 17 n70 (see also prayers, Jewish) liver
   for anger, 447
   one of 12 guides of men, promoting irritation, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men)
 lizard(s)
   as antidote for scorpion's venom, 43
   in desert of Shur, 566

lizard(s) (cont.)

as protector of lion, 43 n190
and snake, ḥabarbar as offspring of, 324

locusts

of eighth plague, preserved in brine to be eaten, 532
kinds of, 992 n56
as plague of Egypt, 524, 525

Logos

and Enoch legends, 130 n61 identified with Israel, 301 n253 role of, in creation, according to Christians, 52 n12

long-suffering. See God: attributes of

Lord

as avenger, 304
swearing falsely by name of, 605
See also God

Lot

and Abraham
L. deeply indebted to A., four times, 213-214
L. leaving and forsaking God of A., 193
L. ungrateful to A., 214 n171 moving to Canaan, 179
strife between, 193, 196 n82
accused of being usurer, 214 n171 admitted to kingdom of Sodom, 194
as ancestor of David, 214 n171
children of, refusing Torah, 593
consequences of departure of, 194 daughter of, riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
and daughters, 215 n188
incident with L.'s daughters, 216
L. having two betrothed daughters, 214 n177
L. ready to sacrifice honor of daughters, 213
death of, 235
descendants of, 214
precluded from entering assembly of Lord, 794 n845 hospitality and, 212, 214 n176
immorality of, 193
lasciviousness of, 214 n171, 215 n188
love of husbandry as cause of downfall of, 1042 n30
as perfect and pious man, 214 n171
pleading for sinners, 212
prophecy of punishment of descendants of, 214 saved by archangel, 206

Lot (cont.)

settling in land of Moabites and Ammonites, 217 n189 taken captive by Chedorlaomer, Arioch, and Tidal, 194
wife of, 215 n180
beholding Shekinah when turning to look back, 213 betraying presence of angels, 212
looking back at Sodom, 213
L. ready to sacrifice honor of, 213 turned into pillar of salt, 213, 214 n174, 215 n180

Lotan (son of Esau), 21

lots

casting, 249
by Haman, 1150-1152
drawing
to see how to kill Joseph, 334 n33
to see who would bring Joseph's coat to Jacob, 343 n64 falling against Jonah, 1031
identifying sinners, 898
Jacob assigning lands to tribes by, 784
Kenaz identifying 6,110 sinners by means of, 855 promised land divided by, 784 stones of, crying out decision, 853 n47
use of
to choose leader, 855, 890 n17
to identify sinners, 846, 855, 898
See also augury; divination; magic arts; sorcery; Urim and Thummim; witchcraft

love

as attribute of God, 714 of father, extending to third generation, 223

love of admiration

as one of seven tempter spirits, 435 (see also spirits: seven tempter)

loving-kindness

of fathers, 224 n224

Lubar, Mount

mountain on which ark rested, 156

luck

emigration to Palestine and, 263 n66

Lucus (king of Sardinia)

Turnus, king of Benevento, making war on, 417

lungs

one of 12 guides of men, absorbing fluids, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men)

Luria, R. Isaac

and Elijah

E. at circumcision of R. Luria, 1019
E. revealing mysteries of universe to R. Luria, 1019
"father of Kabbalistic Renaissance," 1019

Luz (bone)

almond-shaped bone forming nucleus of new body in resurrection, 401 n345, 862 n28 immortal bone of body, 862 n28
legend of, 39 n151
coming to Arabs from Jews, 401 n345

Luz (city)

angel of death having no power in, 861, 979 captured by Israelites under Othniel, 860-861 inhabitants of, never dying unless they leave city, 92 n113, 861 not conquered by Sennacherib or Nebuchadnezzar, 861 purple made in, 862 n28 secret approach to, 860-861

lying

of Adam and Eve, concerning son of Samael, 141-142
See also deceit; falsehood; lie, diplomatic

M

Maani Shakir

identification of, 315 n292

Maccabean wars

remiscences of, in legend of Jacob and Amorites, 315 n292 (see also historical reminiscence)

Macedonia

sages of, applying medical knowledge practically, 157

Macedonia-Greece

one of four kingdoms, 196 n82 (see also four kingdoms)

Machir

grandson of Joseph, 422

Machpelah, Cave of acquired by Abraham from Ephron, 235
 as burial site (see also Hebron [city]: as burial site) of Adam, 98 n137, 234, 236 n263 Esau selling claim to, 258
 of Eve, 98 n137, 234
 of Jacob, 414
 order of graves in, 415 n423
 of Sarah, 234
 those buried in, to rise first, 236 n263 celestial light shining in, as long as Jacob dwelt in Canaan, 415 n423 conveyed with right of primogeniture, 244 n316
 as Double Cave, 236 n263 (see also Double Cave)
 as entrance to Paradise, 69 n49
 as first portal of Garden of Eden, 68 fragrance of Paradise pervading whenever Jacob entered, 415 n423 guarded by angels, 234
 Isaac wishing to be buried in, next to Abraham, 320
 Israel's right to, legends explaining, 322 n316
 Jacob giving Esau large sum of money for, 304, 306 n274
 legend about, 248 n317
 light of, 236 n266
 merits of those sleeping in, Israelites receiving water from rock on account of, 732 (see also merits) strangers coming to, to pray at, 249

Macob
 marriage of, to pious daughters of Laban, 274 n121

mad restored to reason, 218

Magdala
 grove of cedars at, considered holy, 393 n308

Magdala of Dyers
 as abode of Job, 458 n21

Magen David (shield of David)
 magic power of, 964 n54

magic. See magic arts

magic arts and Balaam (son of Beor), 417

magic arts (cont.)
 books on, given by Abraham to children of his concubines, 244 n313

Egyptian magicians taking nine of ten measures allotted to world, 559

Egyptians as masters of, 955 n24

healing powers of, 157 (see also disease[s]; healing; illness; medicine; sickness)

Potiphar's wife and, 352

and subjugation of heavenly bodies, 118 n56

taught by Uzza and Azazel, 117

ten measures allotted to world, 559

See also augury; divination; lots; sorcery; Urim and Thummim; witchcraft magic carpet of Solomon

 story of, 971

magicians, Egyptian (see also under magic arts) animating golden calf, 622 n266
 attempting to save Egyptians from sea, 559 bringing frogs upon land, 527
 not able to stop plagues they produced, 530-531 producing first two plagues with help of Ben Zadua, chief of demons, 529 n185

punishment of
 by angel of face, 561-562 n53
 by Metatron, 562
 by Michael, 560
 trying to produce plagues, 529 n185

turning water into blood, 527

magnificent building statues of, Arabic origin of legend, 973 n77

Magog
 punishment of people of, 698 n482
See also Gog; and Magog

Magron (king of Egypt)
 death of, 465
 son of Pharaoh, 422

Mahalalel
 ancestor of Enoch, 126
 marriage of, to sister, 113 n42
 one of seven pious men in pre-Abrahamic times, 116-117 n53 (see also under pious: men)
 son of Kenan, 116 n53

Mahalath (daughter of Ishmael) identified with Basemath, 274 n121, 274 n122 marriage of, to Esau, 273

Mahanaim
 conquered by sons of Jacob, 315
 name changed to Penuel, 300
 meaning of
 "double host," 294
 "host," 295
 Shebir, king of, slain by Jacob, 314
 site where angels of Palestine met Jacob, 294
 site where Jacob saw men from Isaac's household, 295

Mahlah
 husband of, as demon accompanying Caleb and Phinehas on spy mission, 843

Mahlia (first wife of Benjamin), 348

Mahlon and Chilion
 death of, punishment for Elimelech's sin, 864 n40
 marrying daughters of Eglon, king of Moab, 862
 punished for intermarriage, 862
 sons of Elimelech, 862

Mahol
 wisdom of three sons of, not as great as Solomon's, 949-950

Mahseiah (grandfather of Baruch and Seraiah) one of eight priests descended from Rahab, 844 n12, 1093 n65

Makir, R. identity of, 159 n75

Malachi
 and Haggai and Zechariah
 accompanying Daniel, 1096 n76
 last representatives of prophecy, 1121
 identified with Ezra, 1115 n5, 1121 identified with Mordecai, 1115 n5
 one of eight postexilic prophets, 991 n56
 among returning exiles, 1119
 teaching that sacrifices could be offered before completion of Temple, 1119

Malala, Johan (chronologist)
 on death of Cain, 113 n44

Malchiel (elder from tribe of Joseph), 696

Malchiel (grandson of Asher) first husband of Hadorah, 348
 name, meaning of, 434

male changed into female in Leah's womb, 287
See also man (male)

malham (bird)
 immortality of, 72
 not eating of fruit of tree, 72
See also milham; phoenix

Malol (king of Egypt, successor of Magron)
 called Maror ("bitterness") by Israelites, 467
 name, meaning of, 475 n36
 oppressing Hebrews, 465

Maltiel
 as teacher of Elijah in Kabbalah, 505 n117

mammals Behemoth as most notable representative of, 33
 created on sixth day, 33
 formed out of solid earth, 33
See also animals

Mamre
 and Abraham
   M. advising A. concerning circumcision, 202
   M. as disciple of A., 197 n92
   M. giving pious advice, 203
     n124
   M. partaking of A.'s banquet, 205
 at burial of Sarah, 235
 field of, as site of God's appearance
   to Abraham, 203 n124

man (Adam) body of, created of earth, 50 n7 creation of, from dust, 53, 65 dust for, taken from place of atonement, 54
See also man (human beings; humanity); man (male)

man (human beings; humanity) actions of, as witnesses, 57 n20
 and angels
   angels and creation of man, 51-53 man as angel, 47
   man as terrestrial being inferior to angels, 17 n66
   man created in image and likeness of angels, 50 n6
   man having more wisdom, 59
   opinions of angels about creation, 51

man (cont.)
 and angels (cont.)
   superiority of man, 50 n6 body of, as microcosm, 47
 born of woman, passing self off as
   god, 776
 combining heavenly and earthly elements, 47, 49 n6
 configured as monsters, 6, 9 n27
 and creation
   on account of merits of Jacob, 256 n35 (see also merits)
   double account of, 67 n42
   from dust, 263
   by God with both hands, 49 n3
   by hand of God, 47, 49 n3
   in image and likeness of angels,
     50 n6
   by lower powers, 52 n12 (see also Gnostic ideas)
 man as beginning and end of,
   60 n22
 man as crown of, 50 n8
 man as first work of, 55 man as purpose of, 50 n8
 as mortal, 100 n142
 opposition of angels to, 51, 614,
   615 n247
 on seventh day, 60 n22
 on sixth day, 60 n22
 death of, 58 n20
   appearance of God at, 58 n20
   deeds of, as defenders, 58 n20
   guardian angels meeting at time
     of, 430 n444
 depicted on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686
 depravity of, 160-61
   caused by posterity of fallen
     angels, 135
 descended from one pair, 66 n38
 division of, into seven classes, 23
   n97
 dominion of, over animals, 135 n7 dying against his will, 56
 eating flesh and blood of animals, 119
 Elijah appearing as, 1001
 engraved on silver leaf used to raise Joseph's coffin from Nile, 621 enmity with Satan, 63
 entering Paradise alive, 100 n142
   (see also Paradise: entering
     alive)
 facing mate during copulation, 42
   n190
 fall of, 71-74 (see also Adam: fall of; fall)

man (cont.)
 figure of, carved by Moses on Joseph's cup, 429
 four sinless (Benjamin; Amram; Jesse; Kilab [Chileab], son of David), 473, 912 n7
 free will of, 55, 57 n20
 having both good and evil inclinations, 49-50 n6 (see also evil inclination; good inclination)
 having place in heaven or hell, 58
   n20
 history of, shown to Moses, 815
   n902
 ideal, 58-62, 60 n22
 as image of this world, 47
 individual, having one guardian
   angel, 57 n20
 intelligence of, maturing, 67-68
   n44
 language of, original, 70 n58
 late appearance of, on earth, 47 life span of, affected by sin of Adam, 100 n142
 limbs of, as witnesses, 57 n20
 as microcosm, 49 n4
 Moses asking man to intercede, 808-809
 name, meaning of, 68 n47
 not able to comprehend acts of
   God, 462 n33
 one of four beings represented on Divine Throne, 621
 seduced to idolatry by demons,
   118 n54
 seven, refusing to worship Baal (Deuel, Abi Yisrael, Jekuthiel, Shalom, Ashur, Jehonadab, Shemiel), 872-873 seven, with overlapping terms of life (Adam, Methuselah, Noah, Shem, Jacob,
   Amram, Ahijah, Elijah),
   982 n4
 simple, description of, 441 sinfulness of, 1
 soul of, 55-58
   created of heaven, 50 n7
   as witness, 57 n20
 soul of one righteous more precious than all, 605 n216 stature of, shortened as one of three visitations of generation of Enosh, 118 n55
 superiority of
   to angels, 50 n6
   to other creatures, 47

man (cont.)

- taught to make idols by fallen angels, 118 n54
- ten guides of, 672 n401 (see also guides: of men)
- ten orifices of (eyes, ears, nostrils, mouth, anus, urethra, navel), 960
- riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
- three, losing this world and gaining world to come (gatherer of wood on Sabbath, blasphemer, Achan), 847-848 n31
- three who lived to see new world (Daniel, Job, Noah), 462 n35
- to be counted from age of one month, 681 (see also census[es] of Israel)
- to be counted from 20 years of age, 679, 681 (see also census[es] of Israel)
- transformation of, into apes, 118 n55
- virtuous, one in 1,000, according to Solomon, 952
- walking about with sword in hand, 216
- and world, 47-51
  - parallels between, 49 n4
  - world created for sake of man, 51 n8
- See also* man (Adam); man (male); woman (women)

man (male)

- avoiding being alone with woman, 215 n188
- changed into female in Leah's womb, 287
- compared to woman, 263
- confusion of word for "male" with word for "remembrance," 926 n77
- distinguished from woman by odor of dead bones, 339 n58
- See also* man (Adam); man (human beings; humanity)

Manasseh, 1054-1058

- birthright of, 404
- bringing idol into Holy of Holies, 646
- committing incest with sister, 1056 n95, 1058 n112
- contemporary of Joel, Nahum, and Habakkuk, 991 n56
- cutting divine Name from Scriptures, 1058 n112

Manasseh (cont.)

- descendants of
  - Gideon as, 404
  - seducing Israel to idolatry, 403
  - to include King Jehu, 317
- as descendants of Judah, confessing openly, 407
- and Ephraim
  - adopted by Jacob, 403
  - birth of, announced to Jacob by God, 317
  - blessing of, 402-406
  - sons of Asenath and Joseph, 368
  - to be founders of tribes, 317
- fashioning image with four faces, 1054, 1056 n97
- forfeiting share in world to come, 908 n100, 1058 n108 (see also world to come: those having no share in)
- great learning of, 988 n34, 1055
- as guard of city of Egypt, 371
- as interpreter between Joseph and brothers, 374
- and Isaiah
  - condemning I. to death, 1054
  - kinship between, 1058 n105
  - M. as grandson of I., 1056 n94
- mastery of knowledge of Torah of, 1057 n99
- name, meaning of, 1056 n95
- presiding over penitents in Paradise, 19
- put in oven, 1067 n6
- repentance of, 1058 n108
- M. saved by repentance, 1055
- restoring city of Baal-bek, 1058 n103
- ridiculing Torah, 1054
- ruthless toward people, 1054
- setting up idol in Temple on 17 Tammuz, 1054, 1056 n96
- sins of, 1056-1057 n98
  - Shekinah leaving sanctuary on account of, 1057 n98
- son of Hezekiah, 1054
- as steward of Joseph's house, 382
- strength of, 374
- tribe of
  - confessing they desecrated Sabbath, 856
  - destroying Amalekites, 680
  - flag of, black with picture of Egypt and unicorn, 688
  - prince of (Gamaliel), 679
  - significance of dedication offering of, 669
  - spy representing (Gaddi), 705
  - as wicked king, 988 n34

Manasseh, Prayer of, 1058 n107

mandrakes (dudaim)

- depicted on tribe of Reuben's flag in wilderness, 688
- in folklore, 289 n189
- as fragrant apples, 440
- Rachel and, 440-441
- resembling manikins, 689 n447
- Reuben tied ass to, 287
- securing two sons for Leah, 287
- uprooted by dog, 289 n189, 289 n193
- used in expelling demons, 289 n189
- whoever tears it up must die, 287

manikin

- as insignia of tribe of Reuben, 689 n447

man in moon

- having Jacob's face, 256 n35
- identified with Jacob, 279 n134
- Joshua as, 842 n6

mankind. See man (human beings; humanity)

manna

- absorbed into body, 570, 571 n98, 694, 713
- amount of, an omer for every man, 571
- and angels
  - grinding of manna by angels, 570, 619 n254
  - manna as "bread of angels," 570, 571 n95
  - created on same day as angels, 570 n94
- manna as food of angels, 207 n143, 694
- manna causing one to be equal in strength to angels, 570
- manna prepared by angels in third heaven, 9 n22, 427 n432
- ceasing to fall at death of Moses, 844
- color of, sparkling more than usual on Sabbath and holy days, 571-572
- commandments concerning, 572
- continuing to come down until crossing of Jordan, 845 n17
- like coriander seed, 433
- created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78, 570 n94 (see also under creation: sixth day)
- created on second day of creation, 570

manna (cont.)

as daily ration, 569-570
 descending first time at Alush, 574 n109 descending on holy days, 574 n108 earthen vessel full of, placed before holy ark, concealed by Josiah before destruction of Temple, 572-573 enormous mass of, 571 falling at noon on day Jethro arrived, 588
 as food for livestock, 573
 as food of phoenix, 34
 fragrance of, 573
 gathering of, 571-575
 as gift to Israel from God, 433, 591 given to Israel as reward for good deeds of Moses, 845 n17 for Israel in wilderness, 48 of last day
   sufficing for 14 years, 845 n17
   sufficing for 39 days, 845 n17 lasting until fourth hour of day, 571
 lawsuits settled by, 571 melted into rivers, from which pious will drink in hereafter, 571
 miraculous appearance of, 570, 571 n100 miraculous flavor of, 570
 mixed multitude not partaking of, 574 n103 not descending on holy days, 571-572
 one of six blessings of generation of wilderness, 86 n105
 one of three gifts received by Israel, given on account of merits of Moses, 573, 574 n113 (see also gifts; merits)
 as perfume, 577 n132 precious stones and pearls raining down with, 650 promised to descendants of Abraham as reward for readiness to sacrifice Isaac, 569 rivalry of, with well of Miriam, 577 n132
 and Sabbath
   gathering of manna on Sabbath, one of ten temptations, 757
   manna not descending on, 571-572

manna (cont.)

and Sabbath (cont.)
   miracle of manna and sanctification of Sabbath, 545 storing more than day's supply, one of ten temptations, 757 sustaining Israel for 40 years, 573 taste of like any food, 584, 693
   bitter to heathen, 571
 to return in time to come, 577 n134
 used as offering to golden calf, 621 vessel for, created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day) vessel with, hidden by Josiah, 1062 n118
 in world to come, 570, 571 n97
   manna as food of pious in, 574 n108
 Manohah
   Etam identified with, 878 n111
 man of God
   Elkanah as, 893 n28
   meaning of expression, 838 n965
   Moses as, 838, 838 n965
   out of Judah identified with prophet Iddo, 883 n133 title applied to Moses, Elkanah, Samuel, David, Iddo, Shemaiah, Elijah, Elisha, Micaiah, Amos, 838 n965 man of mountain, 34, 39 n147, 39 n148. See also Adam; Adne Sadeh Manoismus
   speaking of ten creations, 48 n1 manslaughter
   and cities of refuge, 799 mantle
   as symbol of judgeship, 344 Maono
   judge in Zeboiim, 208
 Marah
   bitter waters of made sweet by tree of life, 568 n82
     to establish which women were chaste, 568 n82 commandment concerning observance of Sabbath revealed at, 574 n109
   lack of water at due to neglect of study of Torah, 567
   one of ten temptations, 757

Marah (cont.)

precept of Sabbath rest given to Israel at, 567 marble
   on Solomon's throne, 968
 Mardon (son of Nimrod) killed in battle, 194
   wicked, 161
 Marduk, 30 n118
 mare. See horse
 Marheshwan. See Heshvan
 Mariokh. See Mariuk
 Mariuk (guardian angel), 126
 Maroshah (wife of Zebulun), 348
 marriage(s)
   of Cain to sister, 112 n42
   contract story of, and second tablets, 632-633
   every one recorded by Elijah, 1000 n35 between Jews and nations, banned by Ezra, 1122
 laws of disregarded by Ahaz, 1043
   in Egypt, 694
   forbidding marriage of blood relatives, 698 Jews of Ezra's time revolting against, 1124 n38
 levirate, 336, 337 n54
 made in heaven, 57 n20, 242 n297
 and polygamy, 111
 prohibited, 284 n167
 Mars (planet)
   in fourth heaven, 504
   Sammael as angel in charge of, 131 n61
   warming moon, 504
   See also heavenly bodies; Zodiac Marsena (prince of Resen)
   having charge of bakery, 1136
   one of seven princes of Persia consulted by Ahasuerus about fate of Vashti, 1136
 martyrs drowned during religious persecution, 22 n86
   of government, in first compartment of Eden, 19
   ten, death of, as partial payment of debt of sin of Jacob's sons selling Joseph, 336 n50
 Marumath (one of Terah's gods), 182, 183, 184 n49
 Marut (fallen angel of Arabic legend), 128 n60

- Mary (mother of Jesus)
 coining phrase "Thanked be God," 866 n53
- Mashhit (angel)
 angel of death in charge of children, 42 n187
 angel of destruction, struggling with Moses, 623
- Massah
 name, meaning of, 575
 spot where water flowed from rock, 575
- Mastema
 accuser of Abraham, 225 n228
 adversary of Moses and Israel in Egypt and at Red Sea, 965 n56 bound by God from 14 to 18 Nisan, 553 n27 having one-tenth of unclean spirits, 157
 as leader of evil spirits, 167
 as Satan, 159 n74
 spirit of, not ruling over seed of Jacob, 255
See also angel(s), fallen; devil(s); demon(s); evil spirits; Satan
- Mastemah. See Mastema
- Matarel (archangel)
 angel of rain, 120 n57
- maternal descent, 689
- Matriel (angel)
 angel of rain, prostrating before Metatron, 130
- Mattaniah
 another name of Zedekiah, 1062 n124 called Jehoiachin, installed as king by Nebuchadnezzar, 1060
 elder from tribe of Benjamin, 696
 elder from tribe of Gad, 696
 name changed to Zedekiah, 1065
- Mattathias the Hasmonean
 son of Johanan (high priest), 825 n925
- maxims
 communicated by Elijah to R. Judah, 1010 three, to be observed by travelers, 390
- Mazle-Din (Perverter of Judgment). See Maono
- measure for measure describing plagues on Egyptians, 526 n172
- measures
 Joseph as inventor of, 399 n339
 linear, 33, 117, 119, 1005 n53
- measures (cont.)
See also weights and measures; and under names of individual units
- meat
 brought to Adam by angels, 69
 commandment against eating, 153 n56
 with milk, 206 n140
 angels transgressing Torah by eating, 616 n248
 only sacrificial meat to be eaten during war, 902 n58
- Medad
 image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
 name, meaning of, 698
 one of seven pious men of world, 968 (see also under pious: men) prophesying that quail to bring evil, 697 See also Eldad: and Medad
- Medan (son of Abraham)
 Joseph sold to, 338
- Medes praised for modesty, 284 n164
- Media
 angel of, on Jacob's ladder, 277
 custom of kings of, having dancers appear at carousals, 1137 n35 as kingdom of wolf, conquered by Mordecai of tribe of Benjamin, 409 and Persia
 allied kings of, sending letter to Joshua, 850-851
See also Media-Persia
- Median language
 ascribed to Japhethite system of writing, 158 n72
- Media-Persia
 one of four kingdoms, 196 n82 (see also four kingdoms)
See also Medo-Persian power
- medical remedies
 Hezekiah concealing book of, 1051
- medicine
 beginnings of knowledge of, 157-158
 and curative powers of trees and spices, 157 father of, 973 n77
 source of, in book of Noah, 157
See also disease(s), healing; illness; magic arts; sickness
- medieval authors
 and date of creation, 81 n97
- medieval influence on significance of precious stones in breastplate of high priest, 652 n357
See also Middle Ages
- Medo-Persian power
 symbolized by ram of three years, 198
See also Media-Persia
- Mehujael (descendant of Cain), 111
- Mehuman (angel)
 name, meaning of ("confusion"), 1135
 one of seven angels of confusion sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's banquet, 1135
- Meir, R.
 Elisha b. Abuyah as wicked teacher of, 1011
- Melchizedek
 born with sign of covenant on him, 248 n318 (see also covenant[s]: sign of) changing name of Salem to Jerusalem, 232 n253
 composer of psalms, 823
 deposed by God, 196
 Gnostic legends concerning, 197 n102
 grave of, in center of earth, 98 n137
 as high priest, 196
 as king of Jerusalem, 89 n109, 128 n60, 196
 as priest of Jerusalem, 89 n109
 and Shem
 M. as descendant of S., 197 n102
 M. identified with S., 197 n102
 S. sometimes called M., 196
 as son of prostitute, 197 n102
 speaking as infant, 134 n2 (see also under infants) as title of Canaanite kings, 422 n429 to be priest and king in Achuzan, 128 n60
 as type of Jesus, 197 n104
- Melchizedekites
 teachings of, 1000 n39
- Melkiel
 name given to Moses by Jochebed, 481 n57
- mem (letter)
 creation of world through, 4

mem (cont.)

as last letter of name of Abraham, on standard of tribe of Dan, 686

in Passim, standing for Midianites, who bought Joseph from merchants, 330

standing for mehumah ("confusion"), 4
melekh ("king"), 4

in word shittim, standing for mehillah ("forgiveness"), 647

See also alphabet; letters of alphabet

memory loss of, caused by Shekinah, 406

Memucan
another name of Daniel, 1096 n76
identified with Daniel designated by God to perform miracles and bring about death of Vashti, 1136
identified with Haman, 1138 n41,
1139 n49, 1147
prince of Jerusalem
one of seven princes of Persia
consulted by Ahasuerus
about fate of Vashti, 1136
providing for needs of all in palace, 1136

and Vashti
enmity between, 1138 n45
M. responsible for death of V., 1147

See also Daniel-Memucan

Memuchan. See Memucan

men. See man (human beings; humanity); and under
pious: men

Menahem
name, meaning of, 133

Men of Great Assembly. See Great Assembly

Men of Great Synagogue. See Great Synagogue

menstruation
and not daring to touch teraphim,
294 n224

as penalty for Eve's sin, 79 n85

precept in connection with, 68 n45

meon
meum athamaticum, as cure for barrenness, 202 n117

Mephibosheth (grandson of Saul) instigated slaying of Ishbosheth in hope of succeeding him as king, 929 n79
reputed to be great man, 907

Mephibosheth (cont.)

teacher of David, 927

wronged by David's granting half of possessions to Ziba, 909
n109

Merab
children of, 941 n133
taken from David by Saul, 905
n80

Merari (son of Levi)
name, meaning of, 438, 475 n36
sons of receiving four wagons for Tabernacle, 665
third division of Levites, 684

Mercury
Michael as angel in charge of, 131
n61

mercy of God (see God: attributes of)
and justice (see also justice: and mercy)
dialogue of, 54 n15
near to souls of pious, 611
ruling world jointly, 1
in seventh heaven, 6

Meres (prince of Mursa)
having charge of poultry, 1136
one of seven princes of Persia
consulted by Ahasuerus
about fate of Vashti, 1136

Meribah
episode of water at, taking place
one year before death of Moses, 801 n870
name, meaning of, 575
people of, anger of Moses at, 798
n862
spot where water flowed from rock, 575
waters of, 731-733

merit of observance of Sabbath, giving Joram victory in war against Moab, 1027 n5
of study of Torah, not taken away
by sin, 924 n67

merits
of Aaron clouds of glory given on account
of, 573, 574 n113
two of sons saved on account of,
730 n599
of Abiel (grandfather of Saul), 898
of Abraham
forgiveness of Israel's sins on account of, 232 n248
Isaac indebted to, 261

merits (cont.)

of Abraham (cont.)
miracles wrought for Daniel due
to, 1097 n77

Moses receiving Torah on account of, 616 n248
one of five charms to protect Jacob, 300 n247
as reason for Esau's dominion over world, 259 n51
world created for sake of, 167
of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob God's mercy on Israel for sake
of, 510

of Amram and Jochebed Israel redeemed from Egypt on account of, 474 n30

of ancestors of Saul, 898

of David Hezekiah owing 15 years of life
to, 1050

of fathers, 624 n274, 768 (see also fathers: merits of; and under individual fathers)
all good things coming to Israel
on account of, 638
ceasing to be effective, 998 n24
God calling away three angels of destruction in recognition
of, 623
invoked by Elijah, 998 n18
Israel redeemed from Egypt on account of, 499
Israel saved on account of, 1163
of fathers and wives of fathers high priest venturing into Holy of Holies depending on, 676

of five pious men (see also under
pious: men)
Israel redeemed for sake of, 502
of Hezekiah's descendants Hezekiah saved from fire through, 1047 n47

of Israel, 510, 768
redemption of Israel on account of own merits, 499 n106

of Jacob
famine averted from Egypt on
account of, 412
Laban blessed on account of,
1027 n6
man created on account of, 256
n35

of Joseph
final redemption to take place on account of, 328 n3
Jacob blessed on account of, 327

merits (cont.)

- of Miriam
  - well given on account of, 573, 574 n113, 576
- of Moses
  - children born on same night as M. saved on account of, 479
  - cloud of glory reappearing on account of, 573
  - manna given on account of, 573, 574 n113
- of Moses and Aaron
  - saving world from God's angry wind, 699
- of pious of future generations
  - Israel redeemed on account of, 499
- of Rachel
  - one of five charms to protect Jacob, 300 n247
- of Sarah
  - one of five charms to protect Jacob, 300 n247
- of those sleeping in Cave of Machpelah
  - Israelites receiving water from rock on account of, 732
- of 12 tribes
  - creation of world brought about through, 434 n2
  - invoked by Elijah, 998 n18
- Merkabah
  - bearers of Divine Throne, 523 n166
  - fathers as, 523 n166
  - Jacob's countenance in, 279 n134
  - wheels of, eyes of Moses changed into, by Metatron, 503
- Merodach
  - father of Nebuchadnezzar, 1112 n2
  - as sun god, 1053 n82
- Merodach-baladan (Babylonian king)
  - Nebuchadnezzar as secretary to, 1072
- Meroe
  - name of Moses' foster-mother, 540 n226
- Merois (daughter of Pharaoh)
  - wife of Chenephes, king of Memphis, 479 n48
- Merois (place)
  - place of burial of Moses' foster-mother under name of Meroe, 540 n226
- Meros (star)
  - not fighting against Sisera, 868

Meroz

- prominent person refusing to take part in war against Sisera, 870 n82

Mesene

- Jewish slaves sent to viceroy of, 1073 n21

Mesha

- Ahab's son victorious over, 989 n35

Meshabber (angel)

- angel of death in charge of animals, 42 n187

Messiah

- advent of, 57 n19
- annihilation of Edom not to take place before, 927 n77
- announced by bird, 44-45
- nature to be restored at, 1081 n39
- tenth famine to come before, 189
- three things to be removed before (evil inclination; Seir; wicked kingdom), 307 n275
- to be announced to Israel by Kenites, 776
- trumpet at, 232 n246
- and angels
  - angels chanting glory of, in fourth heaven, 505 n117
- Messiah superior to angels, 790 n836
- anointing of, 1022 n112
- appointed to bring salvation, 1
- assisted by council of 14, 100 n142
- bidden by Abraham to wait for appointed time, 198
- birth of, on day of destruction of Temple, 1087 n53
- as child referred to in Isaiah 9:5, 1052 n70
- coming from Rome on night of end of redemption, 541
- countenance of, rays emanating from, 790 n836
- Daniel as, 1097 n77
- David as, 939 n128
- as David's son, 816
- descendant of Judah and Levi, 912 n2
- descendant of Perez, son of Judah, 347 n92
- and description of life of pious in Paradise, 23 n97

Messiah (cont.)

and Elijah

- E. as companion in Paradise, 73 n67
- E. as competitor of Messiah, 306 n275
- E. as forerunner of Messiah, 1020-1023
- E. as Messiah, 100 n142, 1021 n105
- E. securing for R. Joshua b. Levi interview with Messiah, 1012
- Messiah consoled by E. during exile, 1022 n115
- Messiah introduced by E., 1021
- Messiah to be anointed by E., 1022 n112
- writing down good deeds of man, 1000 n35
- Ephraimitic
  - to be revived, one of seven wonders of Messiah, 1021
  - to inaugurate future redemption, 825 n927
- eyes of, 408
- garments of, 408
- gifts to
  - Messiah to accept gifts of Egypt and Ethiopia, 649
  - Messiah to reject gifts of Rome, 649
  - offered by Gentiles, 649 n350
- greater than three patriarchs, 790 n836
- interview of, with Zerubbabel, 1119
- invited by God to make request, 198 (see also God: actions of, inviting . . .)
- Israel to be redeemed by Messiah for sake of Jacob, 256 n35
- of Joseph
  - in J.'s dream, 330
- knowing God through own reasoning, 184 n49
- left side of, 100 n142
- Miriam as ancestress of, 470 n19
- and Moses
  - Messiah more exalted than Moses, 790 n836
  - Messiah seen by Moses in heavenly Temple, 816
  - superiority of Moses to Messiah, 834 n953
- Naamah as ancestress of, 976
- name of
  - engraved on jewel, 280 n142

Messiah (cont.)

name of (cont.)
 engraved on stone of heavenly Temple, 1 (see also Eben Shetiyyah) one of seven things created in beginning, 1
 names and titles of David, 939 n128
 Elijah, 1021 n105
 Messiah given title "elect of God" in Scripture, 912 n1
 Perez, allusion to Messiah as "the breaker," 347 n92 Yagon, 548 n10
 one endowed with seven divine gifts, 1063 n136
 one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
 one of six men given name by God before birth, 201 (see also under name)
 one of six pious men endowed with spiritual gifts descended from Ruth, 866 n61 (see also under pious: men)
 and Paradise
 entering alive, 132 n62 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
 in fifth division of Paradise, 20
 secret chamber of Messiah in Paradise, 23 n97
 as priest of justice, 100 n142
 princes assisting, 100 n142
 eight in number, 1021
 putting end to all sinfulness, 1
 recognizing God of own accord, 456 n13 reign of, to last 40 years, 401 n345
 riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
 right side of, 100 n142
 rod of Aaron to be handed over to, in future, 730
 as ruler of world, 162 n82
 and Seth
 Messiah as descendant of S., 115
 Messiah identified with S. by Gnostic sect, 116 n52 soul of S. entered into Messiah, 116 n52
 seven wonders of, 1021 shepherds assisting, 100 n142
 and Solomon
 S. as Messiah, 967 n59

Messiah (cont.)

and Solomon (cont.)
 S. thought to be Messiah by inhabitants of Sheba, 244 n311
 as son of (see also Messiah: to be descendant of) David, 100 n142, 215 n188
 entering Paradise alive, 1035 n38
 Messiah to be second D., 939 n128
 must be "son of D.," 1021 n105
 one of four Messiahs, 1021 n105
 and Rehoboam, 214
 Ephraim, to precede Messiah son of David, 548 n10
 Joseph, 100 n142
 Manasseh, 100 n142
 Ruth, 215 n188
 Solomon and Naamah, 215 n188 spirit of, as spirit of God, 56 n17 (see also God: spirit of)
 as stone cut out without hands, 1097 n80
 Tamar as ancestress of, 344
 teeth of, 408
 in time to come Messiah not to be anointed, 658 n371
 to annihilate Rome, 361
 to appear after nations take kingdom of Edom up to Bet Gubrin, 304 to ascend Mount of Olives with Elijah and Zerubbabel, 1120 n25
 to be born and brought up in Rome (i.e., Babylon), 1106 n106 to be descendant of Davidic kings, 977 n89
 Jehoiachin, 1061
 Judah, 408
 Lot, 214
 tribe of Dan on mother's side, 410 n392
 tribe of Joseph
 one of four Messiahs, 1021 n105
 son of widow of Zarephath as Messiah of tribe of Joseph, 1035 n38 tribe of Judah, 408, 410 n388 to be great prophet, akin to Moses, 790 n836

Messiah (cont.)

to be king of Israel in future, 820 to be ninth ruler of whole world, 161 (see also cosmocrator) to be surrounded by seven shepherds, 820
 to blind Belior, 306 n275
 to furnish tenth red heifer, 677 n417
 to judge Azazel and companions, 306 n275
 to judge sons of Esau, 1090 n57 to perform miracle of resurrection before eyes of people, 1021 to reveal all treasures, 1091 travail of, 924 n72
 weeping of, 20
 in hall of gold in Paradise, 23 n97
 world created for sake of, 939 n128
 Messiah, time of. See Messianic time(s) Messiahs numbering four (Messiah son of David, Messiah of tribe of Joseph, Elijah, priest of righteousness), 1021 n105 Messiahship
 staff as symbol of, 344
 Messianic banquet
 conceived of, in spiritual sense, 31 n127
 and disposal of three monsters, 32 n139
 Moses to be cupbearer at, 838-839 n966
 not contained in tannaitic literature, 30 n127 Messianic herald
 Zerubbabel described as, 1120 n25
 Messianic kingdom
 to be confined to Holy Land, 401 n345
 Messianic prophecy, 777 n782
 Messianic time(s)
 angels not permitted to approach God as closely as Israel, 775 animals to be tame, 79 n87, 92 n113 beauty of man in, 86 n105
 and celestial light, 84
 cities of plain to be restored, 213 and darkness, 243
 descendants of Isaac to possess realms of mighty rulers, 260

Messianic time(s) (cont.)

dietary laws and, 32 n139
 earth to become level again, 109 n31
 eight princes to rule over world, 911
 Elijah to restore three concealed objects (three jugs: one filled with manna, one with water from well of Miriam, and one with sacred oil), 574 n112 fertility of earth, 86 n105, 109 n30
 and fulfillment of Noachian commandments, 70 n55 golden trees in Temple to blossom again, 966 heavenly fire coming down, 104 n10 illuminating stones, 857 n14
 increase of flocks, 290
 Israel to go to Seir and take possession, 304
 Israel to rejoice in delights and pleasures, 773
 Job's wealth a foretaste of, 453
 joy of Israel in, 619
 made known to Abraham, 198
 manna in, 570, 571 n97
 Michael and Gabriel to open gates of hell, 1120 n25
 mountains to be razed, 1021
 mystery of, not revealed to sons of Jacob, 407 nations to bow down before Israel, 236 n267
 and Passover, 543 n235
 place of honor for Adam, 100 n142 precious stones to be used, 1013 n90 precious stones to take place of sun, 1011-1012 relations between men and animals to be restored, 92 n113 restoration of blessings of Adam, 86 n105 resurrection of dead, 399
     those buried in Palestine to rise without delay, 399 those buried outside Palestine to go from land to land before, 399-400 resurrection of Moses at beginning of, 73 n67 riches of Joseph to be enjoyed by pious, 397
 Rome and all nations to be destroyed by Israel, 776

Messianic time(s) (cont.)

secrets concerning, revealed to Elijah by Michael, 1009 n70
 seven shepherds and eight princes of, 100 n142 Shekinah to become visible to all, 1021
 and suffering, 572
 Temple to stand in perfection as described by Ezekiel, 1021 trees of Temple to bloom again, 95 n125 vessel of manna and jug of sacred oil to be restored by Elijah, 573 visitations of generation of Enosh to be rescinded, 118 n55
 Well of Lewdness losing force, 778 well to supply water to Jerusalem, 260
 Zerubbabel, 1120 n25
See also end of time metaphor
     Eben Shetiyyah as metaphor for likeness of Rachel, 358 n124
 Metatron (archangel)
     as angel of face, 503, 845 n21
     angels prostrating before, 130 arranging interview between Zerubbabel and Messiah, 1119 being changed into angel after translation, 1000 n40
     as celestial high priest, 660, 661 n381
     in charge of world, 21 n75
     as executioner of Jannes and Jambres, 562
     as God's messenger, 137 n10
     as guardian angel of Israel with Michael, 166 n91 identified with Michael, 300-301 n248, 845 n21
     as guardian angel of Israel, 301 n248
     as master of heavenly song, 17 n70
 and Moses
     Metatron as "prince of face," teaching Moses, 615
     Metatron conducting Moses to celestial regions, 503
     Metatron consoling God weeping for Moses, 834
     Metatron placing Moses on couch to die, 832 n948
     Moses refusing services of Metatron, 845 n21

Metatron (cont.)

offering souls of pious in heavenly Tabernacle, 660 pleading for Isaac's life, 231 n242 predicting flood to Shemhazai, 136
 as "prince of world," 1049, 1052 n69 saying "Holy, holy, holy" at end of David's psalms, 938 sent to restrain Abraham from slaying Isaac, 231 n242
 70 names of, 130
 signing deed giving David 70 years of life from Adam, 911
 as supervisor in sixth heaven, 5
 to bear witness to God on day of judgment, 726 n586
 and Zerubbabel
     Metatron dealing kindly with Z., 1119
     Metatron revealing to Z. time when Messiah would appear, 1119 Metatron-Enoch
     legends of, 130 n61
     as "prince of face," 128 n60
See also Enoch-Metatron meteor
     falling down where Holy of Holies situated, 11 n39 Methuselah, 131-132
     building altar at Achuzan, 127 composing parables in praise of God, 131
     death of
         and beginning of flood, 139
         mourning at, 131-132
     entering Paradise alive, 73 n67, 132 n62 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
     fearing power of witchcraft, 134 n5
     and knowledge of future, 134 n4
     life span of, 132 n64
     name, meaning of, 132 n62, 132 n64
     one of seven with overlapping life terms, 982 n4
     one of shepherds who assist Messiah on right, 100 n142 proclaimed ruler of earth, 131
     at right hand of God, 450 n17 (see also God: right hand of)
     as ruler, 132 n62
     son of Enoch, 126
     sword of, 131, 132 n62 bestowed on Jacob by Isaac, 258

Methuselah (cont.)
 sword of (cont.)
 and birth of Noah, 134 n5 given to Esau by Jacob in exchange for birthright, 258 inherited from Abraham by Isaac, 258

Methushael
 as descendant of Cain, 111

mezuzah (pl. mezuzot) question of Korah concerning, 719
 tanning of hides for, 546

Micah (postexilic prophet), 991 n56
 as disciple of Elijah, 1026 n1
 identified with Micaiah son of Imlah, 1041 n20
 time of activity of, 1041 n20

Micah (son of Delilah)
 death of, by fire, 882
 father of Jeroboam, 882
 granted share in world to come on account of hospitality, 882 hospitality as one good quality of, 882 identified with Sheba, son of Bichri, 884 n139
 and idolatry
 M. erecting altar to idols at Gareb, 883 n129
 M. fashioning golden calf, 880,
 882-883 n126, 883 n128
 M. fashioning graven image,
 880, 892 n25
 M. finally abandoning idolatry and receiving gift of prophecy, 881
 M. seducing Benjaminites to pay homage to idols, 881 various idols of M., 881
 and Moses Moses writing Name of God on body of Micah, 880
 Micah owing life to miracle performed by Moses, 880
 Micah used as building material
 in Egypt, saved by Moses, 880 position of, in hell, 882
 as priest of Bethel, 883 n133 removed from position by Solomon, 881
 spared tortures in hell, 882
 taking up residence close to sanctuary at Shiloh, 880-881
 time of activity of, 883 n127, 883
 n128, 883 n131, 884 n136
 as treasurer under David, 881

Micaiah (son of Imlah) activity of, at time of Ahab, 989
 n36
 Micah identified with, 1041 n20
 one of those called "man of God"
 in Scripture, 838 n965 (see also man of God)
 prophesying to Ahab, 987

mice causing defeat of Sennacherib by gnawing bows and armor of Assyrians, 1047 n58
 gnawing through metal vessels and killing Philistines, 918 n42
 as plague on Philistines, 892, 894
 n34

Michael (archangel)
 and Abraham
 M. appearing to A. after circum-
 cision, 204
 M. as angel who delivered A.,
 177 n33
 M. bringing news to A. of Lot's
 captivity, 194
 M. stopping A. from slaying
 Isaac, 229
 M. visiting A. at time of his
 death, 244-245
 accompanying Enoch, 126
 and Adam
 M. announcing imminent death of A., 91
 M. burying A., 97 n135
 M. first to prostrate self before
 A., 63
 M. preparing A.'s body for grave, 96-97
 M. taking A. to third heaven, 96
 as angel of face, 845 n21
 as angel of mercy, 53 n13
 as angel of prayer, 53 n13
 as angel who does not vanish, 16
 n62
 announcing birth of Isaac, 205, 207 n154
 to Sarah that she will bear son, 204 appearance of
 to Balaam, 767 n743
 indicating presence of Shekinah,
 502 n115
 to Laban, telling him not to do anything to Jacob, 292
 being bound so Nebuchadnezzar
 could conquer Jerusalem,
 1073, 1074 n25
 blowing trumpet to introduce Messiah, 1021

Michael (cont.)
 bringing dust for creation of man,
 54 n14
 in burning bush as forerunner of Shekinah, 501
 as celestial high priest, 660, 661
 n381
 charged with punishment of Shemhazai's ilk, 135
 in charge of Mercury, 131 n61
 coming with drawn sword to kill Abimelech, 217 n191
 communicating revelations to Deborah, 870 n73
 consisting of fire, the heavenly element, 16 n63, 53 n13
 corresponding to Reuben, 685 defeating Jannes and Jambres, 560 destroyer of Assyrians, 1047 n55
 and Elijah
 M. revealing to E. secrets concerning Messianic times,
 1009 n70
 with Enoch before Lord, 126
 and Gabriel accusing Uzza with brick made from child, 557
 carrying out destruction of Temple, 1076 n27
 causing fall of Babel, 1112 n4
 G. preferred to M. in Babylonian Haggadah,
 1047 n55
 as guardian angels of Israel, 166
 n91
 as messengers between Mordecai
 and Esther, 1162
 M. preferred to G. in Palestinian Haggadah, 1047 n55
 M. superior to G., 53 n13
 as princes of the angels, 53 n13 rivalry between, 3 n8, 54 n14,
 767 n743, 1099 n87
 same stories told of, 347 n89
 sent against male and female Behemoth, 30 n127
 to open gates of hell in Messianic times, 1120 n25
 as witnesses of new moon, 535
 as guardian angel of Israel, 3 n8, 301 n248, 817 (see also Michael [archangel]: as protector of Israel)
 at head of 70 angels to teach languages to families of Noah, 446 high priest greater than, 676 n415
 as high priest in heavenly Temple,
 5, 53 n13

Michael (cont.)

identified with Holy Ghost by Church Fathers, 301 n248
 Jesus by Church Fathers, 301 n248
 Metatron, 845 n21
 inserting reed in sea, 948 n11
 interceding for Jews, 1154
 and Jacob
 M. acknowledging J.'s birth-right, 300
 M. appearing to J. as shepherd, 299
 M. as angel who wrestled with J., 306 n273
 M. as guardian angel of J., 299, 406 n373
 M. assisting J., 252, 268 n92, 268 n97, 270 n99
 M. assisting J. in deceiving Isaac for blessing, 266
 M. blessing J., 300
 M. injuring J. in hollow of thigh 299
 M. revealing secret to J. that name would be changed, 300
 and Joshua
 M. appearing to J., 845 n21
 M. saving J. (i.e., Jehoshua) from death by fire, 1106 n108
 M. speaking to J. about study of Torah, 844
 as leader of most exalted rank of angels, 13
 listening to Uzza's charges against Israel, 552 making Judah notice Tamar, 346 n84
 as master of heavenly song, 17 n70
 and Moses
 Michael accompanying God to fetch Moses' soul, 831
 Michael arranging couch for Moses' death, 832 n948
 Michael as intermediary between Shekinah and Moses, 870 n73
 Michael asking God for permission to bury Moses, 830 n946
 Michael guiding Moses' hand in sacrifice, 598
 Michael sent to fetch Moses' soul, 828
 Michael speaking to Moses in heaven, 346-347 n86

Michael (cont.)

and Moses (cont.)
 Michael struggling with Satan over body of Moses, 830 n946
 name
 also called Palit ("the escaped"), 194, 196 n90
 meaning of ("who is like God"), 685
 one of four angels surrounding Divine Throne, 685
 one of names of Barak, 870 n73
 opposing creation of man, 51-52 in Paradise
 M. asking to pronounce blessing over wine, 939 n129 presenting soul to God, 68
 as priest in heaven, 299
 as prince of angels, 53 n13
 as prince of Paradise, 53 n13
 prince of wisdom
 witnessing deed between Adam and David, 912 n12
 as protector of Israel, 2 (see also Michael [archangel]: as guardian angel of Israel) required to be present at morning song of heavenly beings, 301 n248 required to start song of praise in heaven, 299 rescuing three men from furnace, 1099 n87
 returning pledges to Tamar, 347 n89
 and Samael
 case between, arbitrated in heavenly court, 252
 M. trying to burn S., 252
 and Satan
 struggle between, over body of Moses, 830 n946
 saved from destruction, 52
 saving Lot and wife and daughters, 213 sent to keep Ahasuerus from sleeping, 1170 sent to rescue Tamar, 345
 as seraph who touched Isaiah with live coal, 1043 n36
 and Solomon
 M. assisting S. to lock up demons, 963
 taking Levi to heaven as Jacob's tithe of sons, 300 tears of, becoming precious stones, 245

Michael (cont.)

traversing world with one stroke, 1004 n46
 and Uriel, burying Adam, 97 n135
 as wall of fire between Israel and Egyptians, 555 n35 watching over Israel from his appearance to Moses on Mount Horeb to worship of golden calf, 502 n115

Michal

barrenness of, 940
 called Eglah ("calfkin"), 940
 as daughter of Cush, 941 n134
 as daughter of Saul, 940
 and David legality of M.'s marriage to D., 941 n133
 M. as wife of D., 940
 M. enabling D. to escape, 941 n133
 M. punished by God for reproaching D., 940
 M. taken from D. by Saul, 905 n80 death of, in childbirth, 940 fulfilling commandment of phylacteries, 940, 942 n134
 as ideal of beauty, 60 n24, 940
 kindness of, 940
 marriage of
 to David, legality of, 941 n133
 to Palti, legality of, 941 n133
 one of four women of perfect beauty, 941 n132
 one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
 piety of, 940
 raising children of Adriel and Merab, 940 raising Merab's children, 941 n133

Middle Ages

belief in generative power of precious stones in, 647 n342
 as source of Jewish legendary material, ix

Midian

allied with Moab against Israel, 759 complete annihilation of, 794-795 well at Moses meeting Zipporah at, 494
 opening made at twilight of first Sabbath eve, 494

Midianites

defeated by Hadad, 420 enmity toward Moabites, 420
 fearing to keep Joseph, 336

Midianites (cont.)

- five kings of, slain by Israelites, 795
- identified with Moabites, 793 n842
- inciting Moabites against Israel, 760 n721
- making alliance with Moab against Edom, 420
- making war on Moabites, 420
- punished before Moabites, 792-793
- rescuing Joseph from pit, 335
- slaughtered by Edomites, 420
- victory of Gideon over
  - as reward for fulfilling commandment of omer, 873 n100
  - taking place
    - on day omer was brought, 873 n100
    - on first night of Passover, 873 n100
    - on second night of Passover, 873 n96
- war against
  - connected with death of Moses, 793
  - Israelites polluted by Jewish apostate slain in Midian, 797
  - taking place in month of Elul, 873 n100
- midnight
  - north wind blowing at, 717 n548
  - prayer at, first found in mystic literature of Middle Ages, 929 n83
- Midrash (pl. Midrashim)
  - contained on second tablets, 632
  - and Haggadah, viii
  - and Jewish legends, viii-ix
  - old Midrashim not mentioning barrenness of Leah, 288 n170
  - one of three parts of oral law, 592, 1128 n56 (see also Haggadah; Halakhah)
  - and parenesis, viii
  - and pseudepigraphic literature, viii
  - as source of Jewish legendary material, ix
- Midrash of the Chaldees
  - taught by Egyptians, 157
- Milcah (wife of Levi), 438
- Milcah (wife of Nahor, brother of Abraham)
  - bearing Bethuel after birth of Isaac, 238

Milcah (cont.)

- mother of Serug, 168 n3
- milham* (bird)
  - name of, 73 n67
  - version of phoenix legend, 73 n67
  - See also* malham; phoenix
- military service
  - exemption from, for newly married men, 920 n50
- milk
  - found in breasts of men, 1144 n66
  - and honey, 172 n14
  - land flowing with 709, 827
  - one of rivers in Paradise, 507 (see also rivers: flowing under thrones of pious)
  - produced by goats in Palestine, 709
  - served with meat, 206 n140
  - as stream from tree of life, 127 n60
  - See also* dietary laws; food: forbidden; meat
- mill
  - introduced by Jews to Babylon, 1074 n24
- millennium
  - and day of the Lord, 99 n140
  - to take place after 7,000 years, 99 n140
- Minḥah service
  - ḥayyot taking place of four archangels in, 687 n440
  - introduced by Isaac, 240, 1128 n58
  - most acceptable to God, 998 n18
  - to be said at three o'clock in afternoon, 240
  - See also* prayers, Jewish
- ministering angels. See angel(s): types
- Minor Prophets
  - edited or declared canonical by Great Synagogue, 1071 n15, 1128 n56
- miracle(s)
  - and Aaron
    - A. being clothed with celestial garments for death, 741
    - A.'s rod blooming to prove his priesthood, 730
    - cave appearing for A.'s death, 741
    - holy oil for anointing hanging on A.'s beard, 657
  - and Ahasuerus
    - words of chronicles heard though not uttered, 1171
    - of scepter, 1169 n149
  - and animals
    - Balaam's ass speaking, 766-767
    - jawbone of Abraham's ass preserved, 878

miracle(s) (cont.)

- barrenness removed from sterile women
  - Isaac and Rebekah having children, 252
  - Rachel bearing children, 289 n202
  - Ruth becoming pregnant, 867 n68
  - seven in number (Sarah, Rebekah, Leah, Rachel, Hannah, Hazleponith, Zion), 878 n111
- and blood
  - blood of sacrifice being sufficient for all Israelites, 598
  - miracle of never-congealing blood, 1078 n30
- of candlestick for sanctuary, 678
- and David
  - D. and Abishai, 934
  - D. saved from winepress, 934
  - in D.'s flight from Saul, 918-919
  - D.'s pebble striking Goliath, 918 n42
  - wall of Jerusalem lowering itself before D., 920, 922 n53
- Ebed-melech saved from destruction of Jerusalem, 1090
- and Elijah
  - E. and Hiel under altar, 994
  - E. and twin bullocks, 994
  - performed by E.
    - bringing Israel back to God, 998 n18
    - eight in number, 1025
    - for Nahum, 1001
- and Elisha
  - at death of E., 1030
  - oil for widow of Obadiah, 1026
  - 16 in number, 1025
  - crossing Jordan River as first of 16 miracles, 1025
  - healing waters of Jericho as second of 16 miracles, 1025
  - of Exodus, performed by God's will, 555 n32
  - for Gideon, 873 n97
  - at grave of Ezra, 1123
  - for Hannah, 890 n15
  - of healing all sick among Jews, 591
  - for Hezekiah, 1048-1054
  - of invisibility, 844 n13 (see also invisibility)

miracle(s) (cont.)

and Jacob

J. being saved from hot spring, 275of J. on journey to Haran, four
in number, 276-280

performed by J., 517 n153

Jeremiah saved from lime pit, 1069
at Jericho, 847 n22

and Joseph

J.'s coffin rising from ground to Moses, 546performed by J. for Potiphar, 351

and Joshua

at J.'s crossing of Jordan, 843

of Kenaz conquering Amorites single-handedly, 858of lots, in dividing promised land, 784 (see also lots)making possible presence of all Israel at consecration of Levites, 674 n410and manna (see also manna)manna falling at noon at Jethro's arrival, 588

and Moses

of God for M., 512

performed by M., 517 n153

at Mount Carmel, 994

of nature

earthquake, thunder, and lightning in battle against Philistines, 895

of grain growing in 11 days, 991

narrow space in bed of Jordan River containing all people, 844 n14sun not setting on day of revelation on Sinai, 613 (see also sun)sun shining ten extra hours on day of Hezekiah's recovery, 1050 (see also sun)

and Passover

first night of Passover as night of miracles, 1047 n54Israelites transported on clouds to Holy Land to eat sacrifice, 536performed by prophet of Judah, 983 n8performed for Phinehas, 12 in number, 781-782performed for spies in Palestine, 709 n515in present world prefiguring miracles in world to come, 1103 n95miracle(s) (cont.)

as primordial creations, 51 n9

of Red Sea, 555-556, 561 n46
ten in number, 555-556, 557
n36

seven great, 850 n39

sickness before death as fourth great miracle since creation, 401 n357

and Solomon

wealth coming to S. from sea, 949 n16when S. brought cherubim into Temple, 644spring of water flowing from Samson's mouth, 878of supply of holy oil for anointing, 657teraphim transformed into drinking vessels, 292terrifying Nebuchadnezzar, six in number, 1098

of 12 stones, 277

in valley of Arnon, 749

visible to all, seven in number, 219
n208of wagons and oxen for Tabernacle, 665 of water, 750 n665

bitter water made sweet in wilderness, 566-567water flowing from Elijah's fingers, 995

water from rock, 575

in wilderness, 688

Miriam

and Aaron

slandering Moses, 700-702

as ancestress of David (and Messiah), 470 n19becoming mother of Bezalel, builder of Tabernacle, 469corpse of, not decaying, 411-412, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])

death of

day of, 738 n623

by kiss of Shekinah, 411, 743
n639M. as only woman to die during march through desert, 731

on Mount Nebo, 814

on 1 Nisan, 737

reasons for, 731

report of, in Scripture following law of red heifer, 733 n602and temporary disappearance of well, 573, 574 n113Miriam (cont.)first child of Jochebed and Amram, 474 healed after a week, 702-3

Hebrew midwife, 469 identified with Puah, 469, 470

n17

illness of, cured, 469

merits of, well given on account of, 573, 574 n113 (see also merits)

and Moses and Aaron

as three shepherds, 737-739

mourning for, 737, 738 n625

name, meaning of ("bitterness"), 474, 475 n36one of three deliverers sent by God to deliver Israel from Egypt, 648one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271prophecy of, that Jochebed would bring forth redeemer of Israel, 477

as prophet, 814

prophetic dream of, 476

punishment of, with leprosy, 675, 702-704refusing to comply with Pharaoh's
order, 469

rewarded for good deeds, 469

slandering Moses, 703-704

song of, at Red Sea, 564

speaking to Amram about consequences of divorce of all Israelites, 475supervising one of seven classes of
women, 23 n97

as talebearer accusing Moses, 65

union of, with Caleb

yielding royal house of David, 469

Miriam, well of, 575-577

accompanying Israelites in wilderness, 576, 577 n129

containing "fat fish," 577 n133 created in twilight of sixth day of creation, 220 (see also under creation: sixth day)

created on second day, 576

disappearing for a time at death of Miriam, 573, 574 n113, 731, 737

as gift to Israel, 591

given on account of merits of Miriam, 573, 574 n113,
576 (see also merits)healing waters of, 576, 577 n134,
577 n135

Miriam, well of (cont.)

hidden in Sea of Tiberias, 576 identified by sheep of Abraham, 576 identified with fourth well dug by Isaac, 263 n63 identified with well in wilderness, 750 n663 leaders of 12 tribes chanting to, 576 miraculous plants growing around, to be enjoyed in Messianic times, 576 n131 moving from river to river and well to well at termination of Sabbath, 577 n135 name of, not found in tannaitic sources, 577 n126 rivalry of, with manna, 577 n132 settling opposite Tabernacle, 576
 in shape of sieve-like rock, 576
 springing up for Ishmael, 220 taken by Abimelech and demanded back by Abraham, 576
 to return in time to come, 577 n134
 water from, tasting like all beverages, 584 water gushing forth from, to ocean, 576
 as well at which Eliezer stopped, 241 n288
 wine required for libations coming from, 709 n519

Mirod

chief butler of Pharaoh, 363

mirrors

as gifts of women to sanctuary, 653-654
 significance of, for Israelites in Egypt, 654 used to make laver for sanctuary, 654

Misfortune (personified)

asking for shelter on ark, 144-145
 paired with Falsehood on ark, 144-145

Mishael

and Elzaphan, unable to keep Passover because of attending burial of Nadab and Abihu, 675-676
 fiery furnace and, 527
 Levite cousin of Aaron, attending funeral of Nadab and Abihu, 663
 among members of Great Synagogue, 1127 n56

Mishael (cont.)

one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
 one of six pious men endowed with spiritual gifts descended from Ruth, 866 n61 (see also under pious: men)
 riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
See also Hananiah: and Mishael and Azariah

Mishnah

contained in second tablets, 633
 containing statements going back to Great Synagogue, 1128 n56
 as great "secret" revealed to Israel only, 1125 n50 written down by Ezra and five companions, 1125 n50

missiles

used by Pharaoh against Israelites, 559

mitre

of Aaron, atoning for pride, 650
 one of eight priestly garments of Aaron, 650

mixed multitude

denying God, 712
 descendants of, and daughters of tribe of Simeon as sinners who fell prey to Moabite women, 782 n799
 of Exodus, 542, 544 n246
 God not wanting Moses to take out of Egypt, 624 marrying daughters of tribe of Simeon, 782 n799
 Moses accepting those who did penance, 624 not partaking of manna, 574 n103
 rebelling against God and Moses, 693 and worship of golden calf, 625 n276, 654 n360, 674

Mizpah

assembly at, offering rulership to Jephthah, 874 Samuel assembling people for prayer at, 895 water test at, 895

Mizraim (city)

capital city of Egypt, 370 n184, 371, 375 n204

Mizraim (person)

builder of Tower of Babel, 164 n88 son of Ham, coming to assistance of Egyptians, 553 n21

Moab (place)

allied with Midian against Israel, 759 king of sacrificing son to God of Israel, 991 sacrificing son to idol, 991 n54
   violating corpses of Edomite kings, 992 n56 prohibition of waging war against, extending until David's birth, 794 n845 to be spared because of Ruth, 758 war of Joram against, 990-991 Moab (son of Lot) allied with Midianites against Edom, 420 daughters of, sinning with Zimri, 285 Hadad, king of Edom, making war against, 420 hatred of, for Israel, 792
 marrying Canaanite, 235
 name, meaning of ("by the father"), 758

Moabite

one of five insulting names hurled at David by Shimei, 931 n96

Moabites

Abdon protecting Israel against, 876 and Ammonites
   cruelty of, toward Israel when conquered by Babylon, 1086 Moabites enlisting assistance of Ammonites against Edomites, 421 command to wage war against, fulfilled by David, 792 committing four acts of hostility against Israel, 214
 conquered by Sennacherib, 1051 n65
 as descendants of Lot, 214
 and Edomites
   Moabites enlisting assistance of Ammonites against Edomites, 421
   Moabites paying tribute to Edomites, 420
   Moabites rebelling against Edomites, 420 enmity with Midianites, 420
 fearing Israel, 758
 fleeing battle, 420
 identified with Midianites, 793 n842

Moabites (cont.)

Israel not to wage war against, 758
 males excluded from Israel, 863, 864, 864 n40, 865 n53 males excluded from Jewish communion, 916-917 not to enter assembly of Lord to tenth generation, 7f92 Peor as god of, 778
 seducing Israelites to worship Peor, 778
 Torah commanding considerate treatment of, 983

moderation

in consumption of wine, 155 n58 (see also drunkenness; inebriate; intemperance; intoxication; wine)

mole, 42 n186

made harmless, 37

Moloch

fires of, 34
 Philistines sacrificing humans to, 922 n54
 place of worship of, 15 n56
 worshiped in Gehinnom, 15 n55
See also Gehenna; Gehinnom; hell

Monarchos

made king of Ethiopia, 491
 name of, 491 n80

monarchy

dating from Nimrod, 168 n5 establishment of, as one of three national duties, 897 n47 institution of, commanded by God, 897 n47

Monday

day on which God separated celestial and terrestrial waters, symbolizing Israel and heaven, 1150 fasting on, because Moses descended from heaven on, 628-629 n286 Moses descended from heaven on, 628-629 n286
 souls of pious reading from Torah scroll on, 812

money

leading astray, 440
 penalties of, 637
 prohibition against carrying on Sabbath, 951
See also wealth

Monobaz (king of Adiabene)

one of ten rulers who became proselytes, 1093 n66

monster(s), 33

Afira and Kastimon as, rulers of abode of Cainites, 110 n34
 centaur, killed by Zepho, 418, 419-420 n425 contest with angels, 30 n127 creature slain by Zepho in mountains of Koptiziah, 418 human beings configured as, 6, 9 n27
See also Behemoth; Leviathan

months

Haman casting lots on, 1151
See also calendar; date; and under individual months

monument(s)

erected by Abraham in Jerusalem, 920 erected by Jacob and Laban on border between Palestine and Aram, 921 of Jebusites, 921 n51

moon

acquiring complete light after 15 days, 967 n57 Asherah as, 874 n105
 assigned place on fourth day of creation, 23
 created on fourth day, 23, 77, 82 n98
 darkness of, 26 n100, 35 (see also eclipse) dialogue of, with God, 23-24 eclipse of, 26 n100 (see also moon: darkness of) endowed with wisdom and passion like man, 25 n100
 full, on fourth day of creation, 26 n100 Gabriel as angel in charge of, 131 n61
 having light but no heat, 26 n104
 having likeness of woman, 28 n112
 in Joseph's dream standing for Bilhah, 330
   standing for Rachel, 330
 Joshua's face shining like, 813 laughing after sin of Adam, 76 made of light, 28 n112
 new dead rising from graves on, 23 n97
   divine teaching about, 535
   as festival (see New Moon)
   God pointing out, with fourth finger, 638 n315

moon (cont.)new (cont.)

to be proclaimed on testimony of two witnesses and through president of court, 535 not shining for seven days at death of Adam, 97 n133
 punishment of, 25, 25 n100
 signs of, taught to men by Seriel, 119
 song of praise of, 26 n102 (see also praise) suffering of, after sin of Adam, 76 and sun, 26 n100
   moon made lesser than sun, 24
 as symbol of Israel and the pious, 25 n100 wanting to be spared sight of sinful mankind, 24
 warmed by Mars in fourth heaven, 504 worship of, in cities of plain, 213
 moon god
   children sacrificed to, 184 n49

moor-hen

entrusted with secret of shamir by angel of sea, 974 suicide of, 974
 taking oath to watch shamir carefully, 974

Mordecai, 1139-1141

advising Jews not to join in feasts, 1132
 and Ahasuerus
   five gifts received by M. from A., 1178 n189
   M. fasting for week praying that God would punish A. for desecrating Temple vessels, 1135
   M. honored by A., 1172-1174
   M. thwarting conspiracy against A., 1145-1146 calling on people to fast so as to avert annihilation, 1160
 compared to
   Abraham, 1141 n60
   Joseph, 1178 n189
   Moses, 1141 n60
 deported to Babylonia with King Jeconiah, 1140 descended 45 generations from Jacob, 1139
   from Jacob, 269
   on mother's side from tribe of Judah, 1140
   from tribe of Benjamin, 1140

Mordecai (cont.)

dream of, 1161-1164
 dressed in garb of mourning, 1160, 1161 establishing academy in Shushan, 1140
 and Esther
   coins struck with figures of M. and E. on, 1176
   communications between, 1162, 1164 n138
   desire for idolatry eradicated from Israel in days of, 1128 n57
   marriage of, 1143
   M. asking E. to intercede for Jews, 1162
   M. concealing E. for four years, 1139
   M. miraculously having milk in breasts for E., 1144 n66
   M. to have Jews spend three days in prayer and fasting on behalf of E., 1163
   M. visiting E. daily to prevent witchcraft from being used against her, 1144 n78 receiving one-third of Haman's fortune, 1176
 genealogy of, 1140 n56
 and Haman
   descendants of Jacob and Esau, 1149
   enmity between, 1148-1149
     traced back to enmity between Jacob and Esau, 1150 n104
   H. erecting cross for M. on first night of Passover, 1169-1172
   M. charged to carry out H.'s execution, 1175
   M. opposing H. about rebuilding Temple, 1147
   M. recalling edict of H., 412 story of military campaign in India, 1149
 Jacob as example for, 342
 as "Jew," 1140, 1141 n60
 as king of Jews, 1176
 knowing language of deaf-mutes, 1140
 living more than 400 years, 1127 n56 Malachi identified with, 1115 n5
 among members of Great Sanhedrin, 1140
 among members of Great Synagogue, 1127 n56

Mordecai (cont.)

name
   meaning of ("pure myrrh"), 1140
   other names of Ben Jair, 1140
     Ben Kish, 1140
     Ben Shimei, 1140
     Bilshan ("master of languages"), 1140
     Pethahiah, 1141 n62
 not paying attention to procession, 1176 n172
 not permitting self to be interrupted in prayer, 1176 n172
 owing existence to Judean David, who spared Shimei, 1140
 piety of, 1140
 prayer of, 1160, 1161 n123, 1161 n124 and first benediction of Amidah, 1161 n123 (see also prayers, Jewish) pride of, 1148-1150
 reciting Hodu psalm (i.e., Psalm 136), 1176 n172 (see also prayers, Jewish) refusing to give divine honor to Haman, 1148-1149 of royal blood, 1140 trusting in God after edict of Haman, 1158-1159 understanding 70 languages of world, 1140
 wisdom of, 1179
 Moriah, Mount
   altar erected by Adam on, 89 n109
   as gate to Paradise, 98 n137
   Isaac and Rebekah going to, to pray, 251
   name, meaning of, 232-233 n253, 596 n186
   place of Bet ha-Midrash of Shem and Eber, 252 place of offering of Isaac, 231, 232 n253
   prayer of Isaac on, accompanied by sacrifice, 253 n8 in proximity to Paradise, 89 n109 sacrifice on, 251
   source of dust from which Adam created, 89 n109 sun sinking while Jacob passing Mount Moriah, 276
   as Temple Mount, 232 n253
   where Adam landed after expulsion from Paradise, 89 n109

mortality

of creatures, 47

mortals

Samael searching for Moses among, 836

Moryon (third son of Pharaoh), 498

Moserah

mourning for Aaron in, 746

Moses

and Aaron

A. accompanying M. on mission to redeem Israel from Egypt, 513

complete equality of, 517 n152

description of God of, 518-519

eating paschal meal in Egypt, 539

extraordinary appearance of, 518

as first to recite Hallel, 539

instructing people on laws of hallah and orlah, 712 n530

miracle of repeated by Egyptian school-children, 519

repeated by Pharaoh's wife, 519

M. consecrating A. and sons as priests on 23 Adar, 657

M. informing A. of impending death, 739-740

M. instructing A. and sons how to perform priestly functions in Tabernacle, 657

M. instructing A. and sons in priestly laws, 650

M. stripping A. and putting garments on Eleazar, 741

M. teaching A. all God taught him, 516 not to lead Israel to Holy Land until Messianic time, 734

before Pharaoh, 516-520

presiding over third division of Paradise, 19 protected from rebellion by cloud of glory, 712

resembling angels, 518

speaking to God, 521-522

and Aaron and Miriam

Moses slandered by Miriam and A., 700-702

as three shepherds, 737-739

altar of

called "My Miracle" to glorify victory over Amalek, 582

hidden by Solomon, 1062 n118

Moses (cont.)

- and Amalek, 577-583
  - M. and Aaron the Levite and Judean Hur watching battle against, 581
  - M. hesitating to attack A., 583 n145
- as ancestor of clan of 600,000 men, 715 n540
- and angels
  - angel of death giving M. remedy against death, 615
  - angel of wisdom taking M. to place of scholars interpreting Torah, 514
  - angels becoming friends of M., 615
  - Gabriel appearing to M., 502 n115
  - Gabriel leading M. and Aaron into Pharaoh's palace, 518
  - Gabriel showing hell to M., 505-506
  - Gabriel taking Torah scroll of M. to heavenly court, 812
  - Michael appearing to Moses, 501
  - M. as lord of angels, 791-792
  - M. contending for Torah, 613-616
  - M. exalted above angels, 807 n893
  - M. fearing
    - angels after Israel's worship of golden calf, 622-623
    - Metatron, 503
    - sword of angel of death, 810
  - M. first to notice appearance of destroying angel, 730 n595
  - M. frightened by angels so as to forget Torah, 615
  - M. learning praise of God from angels, 409 n383, 505 n117
  - M. meeting angels of terror (Gallizur, Hadarniel, Kemuel, Metatron, Rigyon, Sandalfon), 613-615
  - M. passing through flames of Sandalfon, 614
  - M. prevented by angel of death from blessing Israel, 819
  - M. protected by God from angels, 613-615
  - M. receiving gifts from angels, 729
  - M. recounting wonders of life to Samael, 829

Moses (cont.)

- and angels (cont.)
  - M. refusing help of angel, 845 n20
  - M. refusing to submit to angel of death, 615 n245
  - M. slaying Hemah for swallowing him, 515
  - M. slaying Kemuel, 613
  - M. speaking in heaven to Michael, 346-347 n86
  - M. struggling with
    - Af, Haron, Hemah, Kezef, and Mashhit, 623
    - angels, 626 n279
    - destroying angels, 623, 624 n274
  - M. swallowed by Af and Hemah down to feet, 515
  - M. using incense to keep angel of death from destroying rebellious Israelites, 729
  - superiority of M. to angels, 701 n493
  - Yefefiyah, handing over Torah to M., 615
- anger of, 797, 798 n862
  - causing doom, 733-735
  - causing M. to forget words of God, 797, 798 n862
  - having bad effect on, 574 n110
  - at people of Meribah, 798 n862
  - at sons of Aaron, 798 n862
- announcing law of sacrifices after defeat by Amorites, 717
- ascension of, 502-505, 505 n117, 832 n951, 837 n960 (see also Moses: in heaven; Moses: in Paradise)
- in cloud, 613
- legend of, 815 n904
- M. remaining in heaven
  - from 18 Tammuz to 28 Av, 628
  - from 7 Sivan to 17 Tammuz, 629 n286
- M. returning from heaven on 11 Tishri, 585
- M. spending 40 days in heaven for second time, 633
  - in study of Torah, 615, 617
- M.'s tour of heavens, 503-505
- after revelation on Sinai, 615 n246
  - several ascensions of, 505 n117
- asking people to nominate judges, 587

Moses (cont.)

- as author/composer of
  - Amidah, 1128 n58 (see also prayers, Jewish)
  - book of Job, 453 n3
  - 11 psalms, 823
  - Grace after Meals, 1128 n58 (see also prayers, Jewish)
  - psalms for Benjamin, Gad, Issachar, Judah, Levi, and Reuben, 823
- bearing mark of true redeemer, 516
- beauty of, 479 n50, 481, 481-482 n64
- beholding future, 814-815
- birth of, 475-477
  - attended by great radiance, 476
  - circumcised, 479 n51, 829 (see also covenant[s]: sign of; Moses: circumcision of)
  - date of
    - 7th of Adar, 477 n44
    - six months after conception, 476
  - and description of basket (ark) of Moses, 477, 479 n46
  - in month of Adar, 1152 n108
- blessing Israel
  - all tribes, 826
  - at consecration of Tabernacle, 819
  - first time, at erection of Tabernacle, 819
  - four times, 819-820
  - at installation of judges, 819
  - M. not blessing tribe of Simeon, 821, 825 n924
  - M. prevented by angel of death from blessing Israel, 819
  - tribe of Asher, 823
  - tribe of Benjamin, 822
  - tribe of Gad, 822-823
  - tribe of Issachar, 822
  - tribe of Joseph, 822
  - tribe of Levi, 821
  - tribe of Naphtali, 823
  - tribe of Reuben, 820
  - tribe of Zebulun, 822
- blessing(s) of, 824 n912
  - at hour of death, 819-826
  - more effective than others, 819
  - number exceeding blessings of predecessors, 819
  - relation to blessings of Jacob, 824 n912
- brother-in-law of Elisheba, 661

Moses (cont.)

burial of (see also Moses: death of) body of M. taken to Gad's territory, 823
 by celestial beings, 833 n952 corpse of M. not decaying, 411-412, 832 (see also under corpse[s]) by God, 832, 833 n952
 grave of attempt of Roman government to locate, 1091 n60 connected by underground passage to graves of patriarchs, 832
   created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78, 833 n952 (see also under creation: sixth day) location of, unknown, 781 n792, 832, 833 n952 opposite spot where Peor bound, 623
 Michael asking God for permission to bury Moses, 830 n946
 by M. himself, 833 n952
 M. requesting that bones be carried to other side of Jordan, 802
 by three angels, 97 n135
 tomb and bier of, made by God, 807 and burning bush, 501-502, 509-511, 815 n902 (see also Moses: and Sinai; thorn-bush) and calendar, 534-535 circumcision of (see also Moses: birth of)
   on eighth day by parents, 479 n51
   M. recognized as Hebrew by circumcision, 479 n51 commanded to remove shoes, 509, 511 n122
   to wage war against Midian, 792 commanding that women of Midian be killed, 797
 compared to Abraham, 837
   Adam, 837
   animals of fifth day of creation, 838
   Balaam, 760, 771
   burning candle, 697 n479
   firmament of second day of creation, 838

Moses (cont.)

compared to (cont.)
   heavenly bodies of fourth day of creation, 838
   Jacob, 280 n153, 837
   light of first day of creation, 838
   Noah, 837
   sea of third day of creation, 838 condemned for calling Israelites "fools," 738 confronted by Zimri, 779-780
 contrasted with Balaam in haggadic literature, 762 n727 credited with many accomplishments in culture and society, 484 n67 crown acquired by M., 672 n399 death of, 800-801, 826-827 (see also Moses: burial of) Abraham, Adam, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Noah appearing at, 837 age at, 120 years, 831, 839 n966 ascent to heaven on day of, 816 caused by sin of Adam, 806 n888 caused by waters of Meribah, 478
 date
   1st of Adar, 839 n966
   6th of Adar, 477 n44
   7th of Adar, 477 n44, 737, 812-813, 839 n966
   7th of Iyar, 477 n44
   in month of Adar, 839 n966, 1152 n108 disappearance of well, clouds of glory, and manna at, 573, 574 n113 eye of M. not becoming dim at death, one of six distinctions, 833-834 n953 face of M. remaining radiant after death, one of six distinctions, 833-834 n953
 Gabriel sent to fetch soul of, 828
 God angry with M. for not accepting death, 809
 God comforting M. concerning death, 806-807
 God's command concerning, 815
 God sending Michael to fetch Moses' soul, 828
 by kiss of God, 743 n639
 by kiss of Shekinah, 411
 last hours of, 817-819
 manna ceasing to fall at, 844

Moses (cont.)

death of (cont.)
   M. delivering to Joshua scroll with Ineffable Name and book of song, 827
   M. imploring God that he not have to die, 813
   M. pleading again for life, 817-818
   M. refusing to die, 58 n20, 832 n948
   M. seeing glory of God at moment of death, 834 n953
   on Mount Nebo, 814, 823
   on Mount Pisgah, 774
   mourning for, 744 n643, 834-835, 835 n954
     God Himself weeping for M., 834 rending garment and putting dust on head, 827
     for three months, 834 mysteries revealed to M. before death, 815 n902 nearly a year after death of Miriam, 737
   in public, 815 n904
   as punishment for calling Israel "rebels," 805 n879
 on Sabbath
   according to Kabbalah, 466 n3
   afternoon, 839 n966
 struggle between Michael and Satan over Moses' body, 830 n946 on Sunday, Wednesday, Friday, or Saturday, 839 n966 view of some that M. did not die, 832 n951
 and war against Midianites, 793 Zagzagel sent to fetch soul of, 828 degeneration of family of, 881 descendants of, as Levites, 511 n121 (see also Moses: sons of) and desert, longing of M. for, 500 (see also Moses: in wilderness) difficulty of, in understanding calendar, 534-535 compounding of holy anointing oil, 535 construction of candlestick in Tabernacle, 535, 678 which animals are permitted or prohibited, 535

Moses (cont.)

distinction(s) of owing to Israel, 625 n275, 717 n550
   owing to Torah, 634
   six in number eye of M. not becoming dim at death, 833-834 n953 face remaining radiant after death, 833-834 n953
   M. able to see entire Holy Land with one glance, 833-834 n953
   M. and God speaking face to face, 833-834 n953
   no prophet equal to M., 833-834 n953 voice of M. able to be heard throughout camp, 833-834 n953 distinguished in this world and world to come, 806 dividing promised land, 784 dividing sea into 12 parts, 829
 and Divine Throne
   M. saved by clinging to Divine Throne, 623 doing three things on own authority (breaking tablets, adding day of preparation for revelation on Sinai, giving up conjugal life), 626 n279
 and Edom
   M. assuring king of Edom that Israelites would not attack Edomite women, 737 n622
   M. requesting passage through Edom, 735-736 education of, 483
 in Egypt, 465-544
   age of M. at time of flight from Egypt, 487 n69, 488 n76
   M. asking Pharaoh to let Hebrews rest one day a week, 485-486
   M. bringing plagues at age 80 years, 829
   M. cast into prison by Pharaoh, 520 n155
   M. charged with three plagues that proceeded from air and fire, 523
   M. drowning Egyptians, 829
   M. fleeing from Pharaoh, 487, 488-490
   M. killing Egyptian taskmaster, by pronouncing Name of God, 486-487

Moses (cont.)

in Egypt (cont.)
   M. miraculously released from prison, 520 n155
   M. returning to Egypt on mission, 515-517
     on same ass that bore Abraham to Akedah on Mount Moriah, 515
   M. taking crown from Pharaoh at age six months, 829
   M. working along with Israelites in bondage, 485 plagues brought through M., 529-534
 and Eleazar
   M. asking E. to intercede, 809
   M. passing on to E. applications of Holy Names, 615
 and Elijah
   relationship of, in Messianic time, 1020 and Ethiopia
   age of M. when becoming king of Ethiopia, 27 years, 490 age of M. when leaving Ethiopia, 67 years, 491
   M. as king of Ethiopia for 40 years, 490-493
   M. forced to marry queen of Ethiopians while fleeing from Pharaoh, 701 n488
   M. teaching circumcision to Ethiopians, 492 n80
   M. using birds to eat serpents in campaign against Ethiopians, 492 n80 evil disposition of legend of, also told of Aristotle, 484 n68
   legend of, and king of Arabia, 483-484
   M. transforming evil disposition, 483-484 eyes of, changed into Merkabah wheels by Metatron, 503
 face of
   as fiery red, 661 n381 remaining radiant after death, one of six distinctions of M., 833-834 n953 shining like sun, 813 finding favor with Kikanos, 489
 as first national leader of Israel, 545
 as first sage, 484 n67
 as first to enter Red Sea, 557 n36 flesh of, changed into torches of fire by Metatron, 503

Moses (cont.)

foster-mother of, 479 n48
 founding cities of refuge, 799 gates of wisdom open to, 49 in number, 950 and generation of desert brought to life, one of seven wonders of Messiah, 1021
 and God
   conversation between, 501-502
   God addressing M., 509
   God angry with M. for not accepting death, 809
   God changing M.'s face to look like Abraham, 616 n248
   God comforting M. concerning death, 806-807
   God commanding M. to appoint judges, 779
   God disapproving of M.'s breaking tablets, 635 n305
   God kissing soul of M., 831-834
   God not accepting prayers of M., 801
   God recounting actions favoring M., 807
   God reversing order of heaven and earth for sake of M., 806 God showing to M.
     all generations, 630, 631 n291
     all judges and prophets of future, 788
     all land of Israel, 813-814
     future, 509-510, 512
     reward awaiting him in heaven, 816
   Tabernacle in heaven, 641
   M. acknowledging God's justice, 818-819 n908
   M. appealing to God for assistance in judgment, 689-691
   M. appointed king by God, 641
   M. arguing with God, 509-510
     about golden calf, 623-624
   M. imploring God that he not have to die, 813
   M. instructed to perform ceremony to convince people of Aaron's priesthood, 730 to speak to rock for water, 732, 737
   M. near to Mercy and Justice, 611

Moses (cont.)and God (cont.)

- M. not to look on glory of God, 630
- M. rebuked by God for allowing sin at Shittim, 792
- M. sitting in presence of God, 807 n893
- M. sustained by seeing God, 635 n309
- revelation of name of God to M., 511, 523 n166
- revelation to M. directly from God, 612 n242
- speaking face to face, one of six distinctions of M., 833-834 n953
- in Goshen
  - M. going to land of, 485
  - story of Dathan and Shelomith, 486
- grandson of
  - doing avodah zarah, 881
  - officiating as priest before Micah's idol at Shiloh, 881
  - as old prophet at Beth-el, 881
  - subverting idol worshipers, 881
- as half man and half God, 838
- as half terrestrial and half celestial, 838 n965
- hand of, becoming leprous, 675
- having "benevolent eye," 819
- as head of generation at time of resurrection (see Moses: Messianic activity of; Moses: in time to come; Moses: in world to come)
- in heaven (see also Moses: ascension of; Moses: in Paradise)
  - for 40 days and nights, 806-807
  - M. as one of servants of Lord, 832
  - M. fasting, 829
  - for 120 days and nights, 829
- and Hebrew language
  - M. receiving divine communications in Hebrew, 612 n242
- Heman "the confidant" identified with, 955 n20
- as high priest (see Moses: as priest)
- and Holy Land
  - M. wanting to enter Holy Land to fulfill commandments, 828 n942
- humiliation of, 637 n313
- humility of, 503, 596 n187, 635 n310, 700 (see also Moses: modesty of)

Moses (cont.)

- identified with Musaeus, the Greek sage, in syncretistic writings, 481 n59, 484 n67
- and idolatry
  - M. casting idolaters into ocean, 625
  - M. ordering execution of idolaters
    - at command of God, 626 n279
    - on own authority, 626 n279
- image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
- imploring
  - blessings for tribes, 820-823
  - forgiveness for Judah and Reuben, 820
- importance of, as great as that of cherubim, 838 n965
- Ineffable Name revealed to, 511
- infancy and youth of, 480-482, 485-488
  - Arabic version of legend of M. as child, 484 n65
- M. abandoned by shores of Red Sea, 477
- M. beginning to prophesy at four months, 480
- M. exposed on 6 Sivan, day of revelation of Torah on Mount Sinai, 479 n47
- M. exposed on 21 Nisan, 477
- M. refusing to nurse
  - at all, 476, 479 n51
  - from Egyptian woman, 478, 479 n51
- M. rescued from water, 477-480
  - by angels and Michael, 487
  - by Gabriel, 482-485
- M. suckled by Jochebed, 478
- M. taking crown from king and putting it on head, in third year, 482
- M. walking and speaking with parents at age of one day, 476 (see also under infants)
- M. walking and talking at age of three days, 829 (see also under infants)
- remarkable size of M., at three years old, 481
- influence of, upon people, 612 n240
- instituting preaching in synagogues on holy days, 653
- instructing, method of, 634
- intelligence of, 481

Moses (cont.)

interceding

- on account of ten just men in Israel (Moses, Aaron, Eleazar, Ithamar, Phinehas, Joshua, Caleb, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob), 628
- for Jews, 1170
- for Miriam, 702
- intercessions for, 808-810
  - M. asking Great Sea to intercede, 808
  - M. asking hills and mountains to intercede, 808
  - M. pleading with works of creation to intercede for him, 818, 818 n908
- as intermediator, 610-613, 835 n955
- Isaiah as great a prophet as, 1058 n104
- and Israel
  - Israelites being critical of M., 586
  - law of circumcision bestowed on Israel through M., 807
  - M. appointed over 60 myriads of Israel in this world, 807
  - M. as greatest religious guide of Israel, 545
  - M. asking angel of face to intercede for Israel, 809
  - M. asking Caleb to intercede for Israel, 809
  - M. asking forgiveness for Israel, 826
  - M. asking 70 elders and leaders to intercede for Israel, 809
  - M. blamed for Israel's sin, 622-625
  - M. blessing Israelites, 586-587
  - M. blessing Israel upon completion of Temple, 661
  - M. insisting on direct guidance from God for Israel, 845 n20
  - M. interceding for Israel, 627-629, 628 n283, 714, 715 n541, 1080 (see also Moses: prayer of; prayer)
    - after golden calf, 624
  - M. making children of Israel drink from ocean, 625
  - M. making serpent of brass to heal Israelites punished by serpents, 748
  - M. prevented by angel of death from blessing Israel, 819

Moses (cont.)and Israel (cont.)

M. reproaching Israel with its sins, 757

and Jeremiah

M. appearing to Jews with J., 1080

parallels between, 1070 n13

and Jethro

conditions imposed on M. by J., 517 n143

M. absolved of oath to J. by heavenly court, 517 n143

M. allowing J. to think he was Egyptian, punishment for, 495

M. asking J.'s consent to return to Egypt, 515

M. as shepherd for 40 years, 500-501

M. released from vow to J., 802

M. swearing oath to J. not to leave, 500

M. waiting on guests at feast of J., 584

M. welcoming J., 584

and Jochebed

J. teaching M. history of Hebrews, 487 n69

M. led to Joseph's bones by Jochebed, 546

and Joseph

miracle at Nile to get J.'s coffin, 429

M. searching for J.'s coffin, 428-429

M. seeking J.'s body to bring bones to resting place, 545-546

M. taking charge of J.'s remains, 428-429, 430 n437, 547-548 n1, 633

M. wrapping J.'s bones in sheepskin on which "Name of God" written, 430 n442

and Joshua

M. addressing J. in last hour of life, 818

M. asking J.

to be kind to Zipporah, 819 n909

to intercede, 808-809

to take care of Jochebed, 819 n909

M. bestowing on J. insight, understanding, and radiant countenance, 789

M. blessing J., 581, 818

Moses (cont.)and Joshua (cont.)

M. giving J. book of prophecy as inheritance, 790

M. instructing J. on campaign against Amalek, 580

M. laying both hands on J.'s head, 789

M. laying only one hand on J.'s head, 789

M. not understanding discourse of J., 827

M. sending J. to battle Amalekites, 579

M. serving J. from 1 Shevat to 6 Adar, 810-812

M. sitting at right side of J., 827

M.'s last words to J., 815 n902

M.'s legacy to J., 790-791

M. subordinating self to J., 827

M. treating J. as equal, 581

as judge, 585-586

kindness of, 740 n635

as king, 634, 635 n308

of Israel, 590 n170, 696, 820

in Jeshurun, 590 n170

of Jews, 590 n170

and priest, 511 n121

and Korah, M. pleading in vain with K., 722-725 lament of, in Aramaic language, 1081 n37

last campaign of, 791-794

Law of (see Torah: of Moses)

leprosy of, 514 n132, 675

as Levite, not permitted to enter place in Tabernacle assigned to priest, 664

n384

meekness of, 701 n490

merits of children born on same night as

M. saved on account of, 479

clouds of glory reappearing on account of, 573

manna given on account of, 573, 574 n113

saved on account of, 573

and Messiah

Messiah more exalted than Moses, 790 n836

Moses meeting Messiah in heaven, 816-817

Messianic activity of (see also

Moses: in time to come;

Moses: in world to come) with Elijah or Messiah, 838

n966

Moses (cont.)Messianic activity of (cont.)

M. to be cupbearer at Messianic banquet, 838-839 n966 work of redemption, 1081 n36

in Midian

length of time in, 487 n69, 488 n76

M. journeying to Midian, 491

M. meeting Zipporah at well in Midian, 493 well in, same as well God created at beginning of world, 494

miracles of, performed before elders of people in Egypt, 516 and Miriam and Aaron (see Moses: and Aaron and Miriam)

mission of, 503

M. declining, 509-511, 512-513

modesty of, 581 (see also Moses: humility of)

as M.'s special virtue, 715 n543

Mordecai compared to, 1141 n60

on Mount Horeb, 501-502 (see also Moses: at Sinai)

name

eulogy "remembered to good"

added to, 996 n1

meaning of, 480, 481 n59

not mentioned in Tetzavveh section of Pentateuch, 268

n284, 627

names and titles of, 480, 484-485 n68

Abi Gedor, 480

Abi Soco, 480

Abi Zanoah, 480

elect of God, 912 n1

faithful shepherd, 500-501, 501 n109, 1081 n36, 1159,

1161 n122

father of prophecy, 485 n68, 955 n18

father of prophets, 545

father of wisdom, 955 n18

father of wise, 485 n68

friend of God, 168 n4

hasid, 485 n68

Jekuthiel, 480

Jered, 480

king in Jeshurun, 545

man of God, 838, 838 n965

master of all prophets, 485 n68

M. called Heber as child, 480

M. called Hermes by Egyptians, 484 n67

M. called Melkiel by Jochebed, 481 n57

Moses (cont.)names and titles of (cont.)

- M. called Moses by daughter of Pharaoh, 480
  - M. called Moyses by Artapanus, 484 n67
  - M. describing self as "servant of Lord," 805 n880 (see also Abraham; David; Isaiah; Jacob)
  - Nathaniel, 481 n57
  - pious, 485 n68
  - Shemaiah b. Nethanel, 480
  - son of Amram, 613
    - as derogatory title, 588 n163
  - ten in number, 481 n57
  - Tobiah, 481 n57
  - wisest of wise, 545
- and Og
- M. fearing to wage war against O., 754
  - M. permitted to enter land of Sihon and Og, 800
- one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)
- one of eight whose corpse not touched by worms, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])
- one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
- one of seven shepherds who will lead Israel with Messiah in Messianic time, 508
- one of shepherds who assist Messiah on left, 100 n142
- one of six men given name by God before birth, 201 (see also under name)
- one of ten just men in Israel, 628
- one of three deliverers sent by God to deliver Israel from Egypt, 648
- one of two redeemers, 430 n434 (see also Aaron)
- one of "two witnesses" in Christian tradition, 1071 n13
- in Paradise
- M. in hall of gold, 23 n97
  - M. unworthy to pronounce blessing over wine in, 939
- parents of, 473-475
- perfection of, 511 n122
- M. as greatest and most perfect of all men, 838 n961

Moses (cont.)

and Phinehas

- M. sending P. into battle with ark and Urim and Thummim, 794
- piety of, 788
- M. as one of five men pious from first to last, 1044 n39 (see also under pious: men)
  - M. as one of five pious men for sake of whose merits Israel to be redeemed, 502 (see also under pious: men)
  - M. as one of four pious men who addressed unbecoming words to God, 628 n284 (see also under pious: men)
  - M. as one of seven pious men erecting altar, 771 (see also under pious: men)
  - M. as one of seven pious men of world, 968 (see also under pious: men)
  - M. greater than all pious men, 837-839
  - shown by copying Torah scrolls, 812
- in pit for seven years, 495
- play on words anav ("humble") and ani ("poor") of, 636 n310
- prayer(s) of
- barred from heaven, 801
  - for David and dynasty, 821
  - for death, 826-828
  - for Israel, 628 n284
  - M. praying 515 prayers, 805
  - for Reuben's life in future world, 824 n920
  - saving only two of Aaron's sons, 730 n599
  - for successor, 787-788, 789 n824
  - for suspension of judgment, 801-806
  - like sword, 801
  - to three patriarchs for help against angels of destruction, 623
  - for victory over Amalek, 581
  - in wilderness, 551
- as priest
- as high priest, 514 n139
  - performing priest's service in Tabernacle, 514, 514 n139
  - performing services of high priest for 40 years, 658 n372

Moses (cont.)

and promised land

- God allowing M. to look at promised land from top of mountain, 805 n876
  - God granting all of M.'s requests except immortality and entering Holy Land, 515
  - God not allowing M. to enter promised land lest he see idols, 805 n879
  - M. dividing promised land, 784
  - M. dying outside promised land because he allowed Jethro to think he was Egyptian, 495
  - M. imploring God to do away with sentence denying him entrance to promised land, 800
  - M. not to enter, 734
  - M. to die in desert without entering promised land, 716
- and prophecy, 502
- as prophet, 814
- M. as "elect" among prophets, 912 n1
  - M. as greatest prophet among Israelites, 761
  - M. prophesying for 40 years, 1070 n13
  - only original, 612 n242
- prophetic spirit of, 500
- punishment of
- for anger, 797-798
  - for boastful words regarding legal question, 786
  - for calling Israel "rebels," 805 n879
  - for hesitation, by descendants being made Levites, 514
  - for indecision about Zimri, 780
  - leprosy as, 512
  - for refusing God third time, 522
  - for reluctance, 596 n187
  - on road to Egypt, 515
  - for stubbornness, 512-515
  - pursued by 70 elders for tablets, 625
- in rabbinic literature
- M. spoken of as "Moses our master," 484 n68
- radiance of face of, 600-601, 602 n204, 619 n260, 632 n295, 634
- diminished after Israel worshiped golden calf, 619 n260

Moses (cont.)

radiance of face of (cont.)
   origin of, 635 n309, 635 n310
   and Shekinah, 619 n260
 raising hands resulting in victory in battle, 581
 receiving revelation concerning red heifer, 676
 recounting sins of Dathan and Abiram, 724
 recounting ten temptations of Israelites, 757
 at Red Sea
   sea ordered to divide before, 48 resurrection of, at beginning of Messianic time, 73 n67
 revelations to, 815 n902
   earthly and heavenly Temple,
     817 n905
 rewarded for interceding for Israelites, 839 n966
 at right hand of God, 535 (see also God: right hand of) rod of, 512, 514 n132
   becoming serpent, 512
   coming from Jacob to Joseph,
     496-497 n95
   created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth
     day) dividing Red Sea, 553-554
   doing good, 575
   engraved with exalted Name,
     names of ten plagues,
     names of three Fathers, names of six Mothers, and names of 12 tribes, 554
   given to spies as weapon against Canaanites, 842 n6
     against giants, 708
   identified with rod of Aaron,
     842 n6
   made from branch of tree in Paradise, 837 n958
   made from sapphire, 626 n279
   as shepherd's staff, 501 n111
   smiting rock for water, 575 taken away as punishment for smiting rock, 735 n611
   taken from tree of life, 568 n82
   turning lions into meek animals, 518 weight of (60 seah), 626 n279
 as ruler of sea, 792
 and Sabbath
   M. failing to communicate law of Sabbath in time, 574
     n109, 574 n110

Moses (cont.)

and Sabbath (cont.)
   M. receiving instruction to celebrate Sabbath by lighting
     candles, 677-678
   M. transforming Sabbathbreakers into apes, 691
     n452
   Sabbath as commandment revealed to M., 545 Sabbath bestowed on Israel through M., 807
 and Samael
   M. chastising S., 828-831
 and Satan
   M. attacked by S. on way to Egypt, 517 n146, 538
     n216
   S. disguised as M., 620
 second Ezra as, 1122
 seized by great fear, three times, 639 sentenced to death, 487
 seven generations from Abraham to, 224 n222, 474 n31 sexual abstinence of, 509, 511
   n122, 700, 832
 and Shekinah
   M. as seventh righteous man who drew Shekinah back from seventh heaven, 473
   M. receiving nourishment from radiance of Shekinah, 634
   M. uniting with Shekinah, 509
   Shekinah assisting M. in census
     of Levites, 682
 as shepherd, 501 n109
 and Sihon and Og
   M. permitted to enter land of,
     800
   M. slaying S. and O. with rod,
     756 n695
   M. waging war against S. and O., 829
 at Sinai
   M. breaking tablets of Ten Commandments, 4, 625
   M. carried to God in cloud, 596
   M. erecting 12 memorial pillars
     on Mount Sinai, 598
   M. ordered to Mount Sinai on second day of third month, 596
   M. returning with second tablets
     on 10 Tishri, 632
   M. to receive tablets second time on 10 Tishri, 631

Moses (cont.)

singing song of praise to God, 820
 sin(s) of, 803-804
   M. claiming to be free of sin,
     806 n891
   M. wishing sin to be recorded,
     806 n889
 slandering those in grave, 806
   n889
 slaughterer of Ziz, 32 n139
 slaying guardian angel of Egyptians, 829
 son of Amram, 726 n581, 734, 804-805 (see also Moses:
   names and titles of)
 sons of biting off fingers rather than play harps for tyrants, 1088 hidden from enemies by cloud, 1088 land of, 1088
   and legend about sons of Rechab, 1089 n57
   Levites as, 1088-1090
   living peaceably and in prosperity, 1088
   more than 600,000 in number, 1089 n55
   never suffering sickness, 1089
   uncircumcised, 517 n148
   way illuminated by pillar of fire, 1088 soul of Seth entered into, 116 n52 speech impediment of, 513, 514
   n136
   removed by God for a time, 514
     n140
   story of reason for, 483
 speech of admonition of, 756-758
 and spies
   M. giving instructions to spies,
     706
   M. giving spies two weapons
     against giants, 708
   M. sending Caleb and Phinehas
     as spies to Jazer, 752
   M. sending spies from Kadesh-Barnea on 27 Sivan, 707
 staff of (see Moses: rod of) strength of will of, 483
 studying oral teachings at night, 617 studying written teaching in day, 617 successor of, to be invincible, 775
 summoning Dathan and Abiram, 722-723

Moses (cont.)

and sun

- M. asking sun why it was shining after destruction of Temple, 1080
- M. bidding sun and moon to stand still, 829
- M. causing sun to stand still, 583 n144, 583 n146 (see also sun)

superiority of

- to Abraham, 837
- to Adam, 837
- to all prophets, 834 n953
- to angels, 701 n493
- to fathers, 523 n166
- to Isaac, 837
- to Jacob, 837
- to Joseph, 837
- to Messiah, 833-834 n953
- to Noah, 837
- to other mortals, 806 n889

surpassing

- all creation, 838
- all men in understanding, 838 n961
- all other human beings, 838
- sword of executioner unable to cut neck of, 487, 488 n76

and Tabernacle

- first sanctuary erected by M., 545
- God showing Tabernacle to M. in heaven, 641
- M. assembling people on 11 Tishri to instruct them about Tabernacle, 653
- M. giving accounting of construction of Tabernacle, 655
- M. rejecting gifts of women at first, 653-654
- M. setting up Tabernacle, 656
- M. to make furniture of Tabernacle, 641 n324
- Tabernacle as commandment revealed to M., 545

taking city by using storks, 490-491

teaching writing to Hebrews, 484 n67

tent of

- heavenly bodies going to, 627
- M. hiding heavenly gifts in, 628 n285
- sapphire quarry in, 635 n306
- seraphim going to, 627
- tested as shepherd of people, 500 (see also David)

Moses (cont.)

testing wisdom of Bezalel, 641

- three outstanding moments in life of (burning bush, Sinai, vision on Mount Pisgah), 815 n902 in time to come, 543 n235 (see also Moses: Messianic activity of; Moses: in world to come)

tongue of, changed into flame by Metatron, 503

and Torah

- Korah abusing, 720-722
- M. becoming master of Torah, 619 n256
- M. copying 13 scrolls of Torah, 812
- M. devoting 40 days and nights to study of Torah second time, 634
- M. fasting 40 days and nights while studying Torah, 634
- M. forgetting what he learned about Torah, 617
- M. giving Torah first to women for sake of merits of mothers, 597 n189
- M. putting life in danger for sake of Torah, Israel, and Justice, 619 n257
- M. receiving Torah, 616-619 on account of merits of Abraham, 616 n248
- from God's right hand, 829
- from Yefefiyah, 615
- M. repeating Torah in 70 languages, 757, 812
- M. repeating whole Torah, 757
- M. sent away while God revealing Torah to people, 601
- M. spending 40 days in heaven in study of Torah, 615, 617
- M. teaching Torah in academy, 801
- M. telling people of punishments for not observing Torah, 597
- M. to present Torah to men and women differently, 596
- to women first, 596
- M. writing down Torah, 634
- reed used by M. in writing Torah, 837 n958
- revelation of, as final, 842 n8
- Torah as gift of God to M., 504, 617

Moses (cont.)and Torah (cont.)

- Torah named after M., 806
- tour of heavens of, 503-505
- translation of (see Moses: ascension of)
- turning bitter water sweet, 829
- unable to decide four legal cases, 789 n822
- uniqueness of leadership of, 791 n838
- vision of
  - clear, 612 n242
  - clear and distinct, 611
- visiting Paradise and hell, 505-509
- voice of, 602 n201
  - able to be heard throughout camp, one of six distinctions of M., 833-834 n953
  - on day of revelation, 600
  - heard throughout land of Egypt, 542, 543 n241
  - strength of, carrying for 12 miles, 711 n521
- and war against Midian
  - M. commanded to wage war against Midian, 792
  - M. commanding that women of Midian be killed, 797
  - M. not leading in war against Midian, 794
- wealth of, gained from diamonds of second tablets, 633
- in wilderness
  - manna given to Israel as reward for good deeds of M., 845 n17
  - M. requesting Sihon to let Israel pass through land, 751
  - M. striking rock for water, 738
  - M. striking rock instead of speaking to it, 734
  - people murmuring against, 565, 566
  - sin of M., at waters of Meribah, 735 n613
  - and water ordeal, 626 n279
  - wisdom of, 484 n67
  - Solomon's wisdom greater than, 949-950
  - like torch, 789
  - wishes of, three in number (that Shekinah might dwell with Israel; that Shekinah might not dwell with other nations; that he might learn to know ways of God), 629

Moses (cont.)

wives of
 M. given Adoniah, queen of Ethiopia, 490, 491
 M. marrying sister of idolaters, 883 n130
 Tharbis, 492 n80
 Zipporah, 494-497
 world created for sake of, 939 n128
 in world to come (see also Moses: Messianic activity of; Moses: in time to come)
 M. appointed over 55 myriads of pious men, 807, 807 n894
 M. to be given scepter engraved with Ineffable Name, 807
 M. to be teacher of Israel, 508
 M. to lead generation of wilderness, 1022 n114
 M. to lead Israel, 838
 writing 613 commandments, 829
 Zagzagel as teacher of, in Kabbalah, 505 n117
 and Zelophehad
 M. sentencing Z. to death by stoning, 690
 and Zipporah
 M. divorced from Z., 584
 Moses Hamon, R.
 physician to Sultan Sulaiman I, 1013 n93 Moses Krammer, R.
 great-grandfather of R. Elijah Wilna, 1020 n104 Most Holy
 of Tabernacle, 48
See also Holy of Holies; Holy Place; sanctuary; Tabernacle; Temple Mosul
 another name for Babylon, 1115 n5 Belshazzar as king of, 1115 n5
 mother
 five parts of body received from (skin, flesh, blood, hair, pupil of eye), 606 “mother earth” traces of, in Jewish legends, 54 n15
 mothers
 covenant with, 434 n3
 four in number (Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, and Leah), 434 n3 merits of (see merits) names of six of, engraved on rod of Moses, 554 mothers (cont.)

as prophetesses, 254 n15, 271
 six in number (Sarah, Rebekah, Jacob's four wives) witnessing passage of Israel through Red Sea, 556 mountain(s)
 of abode, one of six names of Mount Horeb, 500
 attesting holiness of Sabbath, 1089 n56 becoming rocks as result of idolatry, 117 contest of, 594-596
 of darkness
 location of third Diaspora, 1089 n56
 mentioned in Alexander legend of Talmud, 964 n51
 trysting place of spirits and demons, 962 fighting for honor of being spot for revelation, 594-596 four in number, on which heavenly Jerusalem will descend, 595 n184 (see also Jerusalem: heavenly) of God, one of six names of Mount Horeb, 500 God retaining three in desert (Sinai, Nebo, Her), 736 of humps, one of six names of Mount Horeb, 500 leveled by cloud preceding Israel, 736 one of three visitations of generation of Enosh, 118 n55 origin of, 18, 20 n71, 79 n90, 109 n31
 of promised land, leaping to meet Israelites, 749
 Samael searching for Moses in, 836 to be razed, at fourth blast of Elijah on trumpet in Messianic time, 1021 wielded by Og perforated by ants, 754 perforated by hoopoe, 756 n695 perforated by raven, 756 n695
 Mount Hermon. See Hermon, Mount
 Mount Horeb. See Horeb, Mount
 Mount Lubar. See Lubar, Mount
 Mount Moriah. See Moriah, Mount
 Mount of Olives
 Shekinah dwelling on, for 13½ years, 1076 n27
 Mount of the Kings
 one of names of Mount Horeb, 501 n113

Mount Sinai. See Sinai, MountMount Zion. See Zion, Mount

mourning

customs of, visiting house of, 462 n33
 immoderate, 236 n259
 introduced at death of Adam, 99 n140
 Isaac mourning Sarah for three years, 251 length of
 for Abraham, 248 n317
 for Deborah, 70 days, 869
 seven days, 99 n139, 114
 for Jacob, 415
 for Sarah, 235
 six days, 99, 99 n139
 three days, 99 n139
 lentils and, 257
 signs of, 412
 bare feet, 844
 baring shoulders, 989 n45 dust on head, 340
 rending clothes, 339, 340
 sackcloth, 342
See also grief; rending clothes mouse
 creation of, 36
 hymn of praise of, 45, 46 n194 (see also praise)
 and Noah, 36
 wild boar springing forth from remains of mountain-mouse, 42 n190
 mouth
 given to Jacob, 768
 giving birth through, 43 n190
 one of ten orifices of man, 960
 one of 12 guides of men, cutting all kinds of food, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men)
 mulberry tree
 David not to attack until he hears marching in, 920-921
See also tree(s)
 mule
 created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day)
 female, of Solomon, as special act of creation, 945 offspring of horse and ass, 324, 324 n322
 white she-mule having poisonous bite, 324
 multicolor
 color of tribe of Benjamin's flag in wilderness, 688

multipe
   springing forth from backbone of fish, 42 n190 multitude, mixed. See mixed multitude multitude, ungrateful, 691-693 Muppim (son of Benjamin)
   name changed to Shephupham, 434
     meaning of, 380
 murder
   coat of Aaron atoning for, 650
   common among Ephraimites, 877
     n109
   destroying likeness of God, 609
     n228
   forbidden by commandments, 69
   one of five crimes of Esau on day of Abraham's death, 257
   one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)
   one of three sins of generation of Enosh, 118 n55
   punishment of, devastating war
     over mankind, 606
 murderer
   damned for eternity to Gehenna, 607 description of punishment of, 609
     n229
   one of five insulting names hurled at David by Shimei, 931
     n96
 murex snail producing Tyrian purple dye, 377 murmuring
   at Elim, 568 n86
   in wilderness (see also Israel [nation; people]/Israelites:
       in wilderness)
     against God and Moses, 569
     against Moses, 565, 566
     against Moses and Aaron, 573
 Musaeus
   Greek sage, identified with Moses in syncretistic writings, 481
     n59, 484 n67
 Musaf service
   and New Moon celebration, 1010
   See also prayers, Jewish music
   accompanying song at Red Sea, 564
   at ascension of Moses, 505 n117 heavenly, at revelation of Sinai,
     602 n201
 musical instruments. See instruments, musical musicians

   celebrating Joseph's appointment, 367
 music of spheres, 27 n107
   Pythagorean doctrine of, 26 n102
 Muslim ideas
   Jews considering Ezra to be son of God, 1126 n50
   Melchizedek as descendant of Shem, 197 n102
   story of fall of Satan, 63 n34
   See also Islamic legends Muslim writers
   giving Joseph title al-Ziddik,
     "truthful one," 329 n3
   on Job living in Karnaim, 458 n21
   See also Islamic legends
 myrrh
   coming from winds in desert, 686 strewn before Joseph by king's servants, 367
 myrtle
   compared to thornbush, 255
   in hand of one entering Paradise, 18 known by fragrance, 255 symbolic of pious, 1141 mysteries
   Book of Razi'el and, 90
   known to watchers of heaven, 120
 mysticism doctrine that God desires prayers
     of pious, 202 n116
   speculative, 23 n97
     concerning letters and creation,
       4 n10
   See also Kabbalah
 mystic literature
   of agonistic period, 17 n70
   angels praising God in, 45 n194
   of geonic period
     Metatron in, 21 n75
     speaking of heavenly being named Israel, 301 n253 God's visit to pious in Paradise connected with song of cock, 46 n194
   heavenly Hazzan in, 17 n70
   See also Kabbalah
 mythology
   and astronomy, 25 n100

N

Naamah
   Ammonite mother of Rehoboam, 214

Naamah (cont.)
   calling worshipers to pay homage to idols, 112
   daughter of Ammonite king, destined to be ancestress of Messiah, 976
     Cainite Lamech and Zillah, 112,
       138 n11
     Enoch, 138 n11
   female spirit, 956 n25
   identified with Lilith, appearing to men in sleep, 110 n34
   mother of Ashmedai (devil par excellence),
       114 n45, 136
     Rehoboam, 977 n89
   one of two precious doves, 977
     n91
   sister of Tubal-cain, leading fallen angels astray, 136
   wife of Noah, 113 n45
     saved on ark, 144
   wife of Shamdan, 114 n45, 136 Naaman (son of Benjamin)
   humility of, 1030 n15
   leprosy of, as punishment for pride, 1030 n15
   name, meaning of, 380
   slayer of Ahab, 988
   stricken with leprosy for arrogance, 675 Naaseniens
   view of, that all things endowed with sensation, 45 n194
 Nabal
   Abigail as wife of, 940, 942 n137
   leading loose life, 903 n72
   not mourning for Samuel, 900
   pride of, 903 n72
   untimely death of, for failing to assist poor, 903 n72
 Nabar (i.e., Belshazzar)
   one of three sons of Evil-merodach, 1112 n2
 Nabatean
   angel appearing as, 206 n136 (see
     also angel[s], general:
       appearing as)
 Nabiah
   king of Transjordanian tribes, coming to aid of Joshua against kings of Persia and Media, 851 Naboandelus (Belshazzar; son of Labosordacus), 1112 n2 Nabopolassar participating in building, 468 n7

Naboth

executed by Ahab, 987
 of noble descent, 989 n38
 as pious man and great singer, 987 soul of, in abode of pious, 989 n42
 three false witnesses testifying against, 989 n39

Nadab

and Abihu consumed by incense offering, 722
 death of, 664 n383
   brought by incense, 729
   on day of dedication of Tabernacle, 658
   by two flames of fire from Holy of Holies, 662
 disastrous sacrifice of, 662
 funeral of, 663
 garments remaining intact at
 death of, 664 n385
 mourning for, 663
 performing priestly service, 602
 n205
 riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 960
 sins of, 662
 image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
 one of 77 pious men in Israel, 629
 n287 (see also under pious:
 men)
 welcoming Jethro with Moses, 584

Nahash, 748

identified with Hanun, Ammonite
 king, 898, 932
 attacked by Saul, 898

name, meaning of ("serpent"), 912
 n7

Nahbi (son of Vophsi)

spy representing tribe of Naphtali, 705

Nahmanides

mentioning anointing of Messiah
 by Elijah, 1022 n112

Nahor (brother of Abraham)

at circumcision of Isaac, 218

death of, 235

and Milcah, descendants of, 761

Nahor (son of Serug)

as soothsayer, 167

Nahshon

brother of Elisheba, as prince of tribe, 661
 dedication offering of, 665-666
 elder from tribe of Judah, 696
 four sons of: Elimelech, Shalmon (father of Boaz), Naomi's father, Tob, 864 n34

Nahshon (cont.)

grandfather of Boaz, 864 n31
 name, meaning of ("wave of the sea"), 679
 plunged into Red Sea first, 665 prince of tribe of Judah, to make first dedication offering, 665-666, 679
 son of Amminadab ("prince of My
 people"), 679
 as temporal king, 667

Nahshon, R.

Babylonian Gaon, circumcising children who die before eighth day, 1022 n118

Nahum

called Gamzu, 1004 n48
 as contemporary of Jothan, 1057 n100
 Manasseh, 991 n56, 1057 n100
 story of N.'s journey to Rome and condemnation to death, 1001

nails

one of five parts of body received from father, 606 (see also
 body, human)

nakedness

of Adam and Eve, 72
 of Cainites, 136
 and curse of Ham, 154
 and execution, 1137 n36
 God punishing wicked while naked, 562 n55
 and incest or unchastity, 158 n67
 and story of Vashti and Ahasuerus, 1135-1138

name

change of patriarchal, 203 n122
 given by God
   to Samuel, 890 n17
   to six men, before birth (Ishmael, Isaac, Moses, Solomon, Josiah, Messiah),
   201, 946 n2

lengthening of, as mark of honor,
 203 n122

shortening of, as sign of degradation, 203 n122

theophorous, abbreviation of, 118
 n56

Name, Divine

exalted, engraved on rod of Moses, 554 given to spies as weapon against
 giants, 708
 profanation of, one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)

Name, Divine (cont.)

See also God: name of; God: names and titles of

Name, Ineffable

blasphemed by son of Shelomith, 690 contained in ark of covenant, 643 engraved on

Eben Shetiyyah, 11 n39, 278

rod of Jethro, 494

shard laid over abyss, 605

sun, 27 n106

Jesus performing miracles by means of, 11 n39

knowledge of, 11 n39

giving mastery over nature, over life and death, 278

one of six blessings of wilderness generation, 86 n105

letters of, flying away when one swears falsely in God's
 Name, 605

made known to Istehar, 136

Methuselah writing on sword, 131
 and praise of God, 24

proclaiming of, one of three signs of true redeemer who would deliver Israel from bondage of Egypt, 405

pronounced by Lilith, 64

revealed to Moses, 511, 512

sealing boundaries of waters, 21
 n73

taught to Aaron by Moses, 516

uttered by Moses to protect Israel, 578

written on teraphim, 291

See also God: names and titles of name, inextinguishable, 306 n273

Naomi

as Ammonite, 758

arriving in Bethlehem at end of first day of Passover, 865
 n48

as mother of Mahlon and Chilion,
 sons of Elimelech, 862

as nurse to Boaz, 867 n69

oath of, to provide for Ruth, 866
 n56

one of 22 pious women whose piety praised by Solomon,
 865 n49

one of 22 women of valor, 238
 n271

returning to Holy Land, 865 n43

Naphtali

age of, at death, 132 years, 408, 444

Naphtali (cont.)

blessing of, by Jacob, 288 n180, 408
 death of, 447
 descendants of Deborah, 408
 dreams of, 444-447
 fleetness of, 291 n216, 314 n291, 316 n292, 386, 390 n278, 410 n397 going to foreign houses of learning, 410 n391
 and Jacob
   N. bringing Joseph's coat to Jacob, 340, 343 n64 marriage to Merimit, daughter of Amoram, grandson of Nahor, 348
 as messenger
   of Jacob, 444
   of Joseph's brothers, 408
   to Rachel and Leah, 291 sent back to Egypt to get bill of sale for Cave of Machpelah, 414
 name, meaning of, 286, 288 n180, 433
 one of weak among Jacob's sons, 396 n324 resemblance of, to Joseph, 444
 second son of Bilhah, named by Rachel, 286
 sons of, 434
 tribe of
   blessed by Moses, 823
   confessing they taught children out of books of Amorites, 856
   elders from (Elhanan, Eliakim, Elishama, Sanachiah, Zabdi, Johanan), 696 flag of, dull red with picture of hind, 688 house of instruction at Tiberius in territory of, 823
   precious stone of amethyst, 856
     turquoise, 651
   prince of (Ahira), 680
   scholarship of, 410 n396
   significance of dedication offering of, 670
   spy representing (Nahbi), 705 valley of Gennesaret as possession of, 823 women outnumbering men in, 680
 vision of ship, 445-446

Naphtali (cont.)

wanting to be buried in Hebron, 447
 warfare of attacking Edom to south, 321
   in battle of Sartan, 315
   mounting walls of Hazor, 314-315
   against Ninevites, 313
 Naphtalites
   swift runners, 971 n75
 naphtha
   as plague of Egypt, 523
 Naracho
   name ascribed to first Pharaoh, 193 n81 Narrative of Zosimos
   legend about Land of Blessed in, 1089 n57 Nasargiel (angel)
   angel of hell, 505-506
   name, meaning of, 508 n118
 Nathan (prophet) encouraging David before revelation, 930 n88 identified with Jonathan, David's nephew, 948 n11
   one of ten members of board of intercalation, 937 n124 sent to David with message that he was not to build Temple, 927
   as Solomon's teacher, 948 n11
   son of one of David's brothers, 930 n88
 Nathan, R.
   Elijah advising N. never to fill self with food and drink, 1012-1013 n82
 Nathanel. See Nathaniel Nathaniel (angel)
   angel of fire, 873, 874 n105
   extinguishing fire of Jair, 873 striking Jair's people with blindness, 873 Nathaniel (Nethanel) name of Moses, 481 n57 (see also Moses: names and titles of)
 nations
   Abraham made father of 30 nations, 165 n88 approached by God offering them Torah, 593 asking Balaam about sacrifices, 771 n759 assigned to angels, 164, 166 n91, 445-446 distribution of, by lot, 166 n90 nations (cont.)

doomed to Gehenna, 636
 evil eye of, bringing about breaking of tablets, 661
 fearing Israelites because of miracles in wilderness, 546-547
 God making nations swear not to oppress Israel too hard, 1081 n39 guardian angels of, judgment on, 922 n54 hatred of, due to hatred of God and Torah, 795 n848 immorality of, making them unfit for Torah, 593-594
 Israel and Rome destined to be hated by all, 252
 Israel swearing not to rebel against, in exile, 1081 n39
 number of, 158 n72
   70 in number, 252, 672 n399
   130 in number, 672 n399
 power of, held in check while lamps in Temple burn, 645 punishment visited first on guardian angels of, 558 n41 reactions of, to Ten Commandments, 606
 refusing Torah, 593
 rejoicing at Israel's immorality, 783 sacrifices of, not acceptable to God, 771-772 n759
 seven extermination of, commanded by God, 847 n22
   marriage forbidden with women from, 949 n16
   table of, in Genesis, 158-159 n72
   to bow down before Israel during Messianic times, 235 n267 during reign of Solomon, 236 n267 twice, 236 n267
   and wicked designs against Israel, 2 nature
   all of, mourning for Israel, 1081 n39 deteriorating after destruction of Temple, 1081 n39 elements of, Moses asking to intercede, 808 standing still at revelation of Sinai, 604-605 n213 Christian parallel to, 605 n213

nature (cont.)

to be restored at advent of Messiah, 1081 n39

Natzbat (daughter of Adiel, wife of Jesse), 911

navel

one of ten orifices of man, 960
string (see umbilical cord)

Nazirite

Absalom as, 931

Joseph living as, in Egypt, 380

R. Jacob as, 1018

Samson as, 878, 880 n121

Nebaioth (son of Ishmael)

Esau choosing portion on advice
of, 322 n316

giving away Mahalath to Esau in marriage, 273

Nebalata, house of descendants of Araunah, 1121 n32 prominent at end of Second Jewish Commonwealth, 1121 n32

Nebo (Babylonian heavenly scribe),
130 n61

Nebo (city)

name, meaning of ("produce"), 799

Nebo, Mount

deaths of Moses, Aaron, and Miriam on, 814

graves of patriarchs on, 832 n952

Moses looking at Holy Land from, 814

name, meaning of, 814

one of three mountains retained by God in desert, 736

retained by God as burial place of Moses, 736

as Reuben's possession, 823

site of death of Moses, 823

See also Abarim, Mount; Hor,
Mount; Pisgah, Mount

Nebuchadnezzar, 1072-1074

attempt of, to burn three in fiery furnace, shown to Jacob, 277

auguries of, 1073

as avenger of Zechariah, 1077 n30

as beast, 1103-1104

besieging Jerusalem for 3½ years,
1077 n29

bringing cedar tree to Babylon at time of exile, 1074 n24

called "dwarf," 1088, 1089 n54 calling upon Levites to sing songs of Zion by Euphrates, 1088 charging Nebuzaradan to be kind to Jeremiah, 1081-1082

Nebuchadnezzar (cont.)

claiming to be god, 100 n142,
1103 n99, 1103-1104

n100, 1105 n105

compared with Solomon, 760

conquering Hiram of Tyre, 1105

conquering Jehoiaqim, 1060

as cosmocrator, 162 n82, 970 n72, 1050-1051, 1103, 1112 n2

cruelty of, to captives, 1085-1086

death of, 1107-1108

descendant of Baladan, 1050-1051
described as grandson of Nimrod,
1073 n21

described as lion, 1155-1156

divination used by, 1073 n24

doom of, caused by eight grievous sins, 1048 n60

dream of, interpreted by Daniel, 1095-1096

and drinking vessel made from bones of slain Jew, 1098

eating piece of flesh from live hare,
1066 n3

eight sins of (neglect of justice,
idolatry, incest, bloodshed,
blasphemy, arrogance, slander, obscenity), 562 n54

executing 60,000 Jews who had worshiped idol, 1102

father of Evil-merodach; grandfather of Belshazzar, 1112 n2 forcing Hiram of Tyre to consume own flesh, 1105

giving alms to ward off heavenly decree, 1104 n104

grandson of Sennacherib, 1073
n22

having dwarfish figure, 1103 n96

idolatry of, 1097

idolatry of Israel under, 1134 n15 installing Mattaniah, called Jehoiachin, as king of Judah, 1060

and Jeremiah, as childhood friends,
1077 n29

Kal as guardian angel of, 1104
n104

killing members of Sanhedrin,
1066 n3

life as beast

lasting 40 days, 1103

lasting seven months, 1103

lasting seven years, 1104 n103

making two exiles of Jews, 1061

name, meaning of, 1099 n84

not able to conquer Luz, 861

Nebuchadnezzar (cont.)

one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)

one of four kings claiming to be
gods, 1039 n16

participating in building, 468 n7

pet of, lion with snake around neck, 1103

praise of God by, 1100 n90

punished as beast, 1104 n102 punished for sins by being made to live as beast for 40 days, 1103

reigning for 40 years, 1107 restrained by Gabriel from walking farther for glory of God, 1072-1073

secretary to Merodach-baladan, 1072

sins of, 1104 n104

slaughtering handsome youths desired by Babylonian
women, 1102

and Solomon's throne, 1131 n13 lameness of N. caused by throne, 1131 n13

N. injured while attempting to ascend throne, 1097 n80

N. taking throne from Egypt to Babylonia, 969

son-in-law of Sennacherib, 1046, 1072 son of Merodach-Baladan, 1053

n83

son of Solomon and Queen of Sheba, 1072

standing for Titus, 1087 n52

stepson of Hiram of Tyre, 1105

treasures of

discovered by Cyrus as reward for giving Jews permission to rebuild Temple, 1130

N. sinking treasures in Euphrates rather than pass them on to Evil-merodach, 1130

wise men of, envious of Ben Sira,
1083-1084 n42

and Zedekiah, conflict between, 1065-1066

Nebuzaradan

as avenger of Zechariah, 1038,
1077 n30

called Arioch, 1086 n46

captain of Nebuchadnezzar's guard, 1038

carnage caused by, 1075

Nebuzaradan (cont.)

- charged by Nebuchadnezzar to be kind to Jeremiah, 1081-1082
- executing more than one million, 1075
- large number of priests killed by, 1078 n30
- as proselyte, 1075, 1078 n30
- saved from annihilation, 1046
- taking charge of transport of exiles, 1086 n46
- Necho (pharaoh)
  - called Necho the hobbler, 969
  - carrying Solomon's throne to Egypt in time of Jehoash, 969
  - injured by mechanism of Solomon's throne, 969
  - name, meaning of, 970 n71, 1062 n123
  - ships of, covered with corpses from Red Sea, 1068
- necromancy, 796 n856, 900
  - can only be performed during day, 904 n75
- Neelatamauk (city)
  - founded by Ham, 156
- Neelatamauk (wife of Ham), 156
- nefilim. See nephilim
- Nehardea (city)
  - site where Jehoiachin built synagogue in exile, 1063 n134
- Nehemiah
  - as author of Book of Ezra, 1119
  - called Tirshata, 1120 n26
  - death of, on 2 Tevet, 1126 n51
  - given name Zerubbabel because born in Babylon, 1119
  - introducing strictness in observance of Sabbath, 1120 n26
  - loved by God but hated by fellow men, 1120 n27
  - among members of Great Synagogue, 1127 n56
  - Zerubbabel identified with, 1063 n135, 1119
- Nehorai, R.
  - and Elijah, 1012 n77
    - E. explaining earthquakes to R. Nehorai, 1010
    - E. explaining purpose of noxious insects to R. Nehorai, 1010
- Nehorita ("the luminous")
  - one of seven Jewish attendants of Esther, attending Esther on Wednesdays, 1143

Nehoshet ("brass"), 748

- neighbor
  - speaking ill of, leprosy as punishment for, 702
- Nemuel
  - elder from tribe of Reuben, 696
  - true name of On, 727
- nephilim
  - as builders of Tower of Babel, 165 n88
  - name, meaning of, 137
  - offspring of fallen angels and Cainite women, 137
  - offspring of families of Seth and Cain, 138
- Nergal (Babylonian god of hell), 508 n118
- Neriah (father of Baruch)
  - descendant of Rahab, 844 n12
  - one of eight priests descended from Rahab, 1093 n65
  - one of scribes accompanying Ezra, 1125 n50
- Neshiah
  - fifth earth, Cain in, 110
  - name, meaning of, 110
- nest with birds
  - law of, transgressed by priests, 896 n40
- Nethand (elder from tribe of Levi), 696
- Nethanel
  - called son of Zuar ("burden"), 679
  - name, meaning of ("God gave"), 679
  - prince of tribe of Issachar, 679
  - as spiritual king, 667
- netherworld
  - thirst of inhabitants of, 110 n35
  - See also* Gehenna; Gehinnom; Hades; hell; Sheol; Tofet; water(s): below
- new moon. See moon: new
- New Moon (festival)
  - criticized by Haman, 1154
  - as festival for women, 655 n364
  - reward for refusing to give up jewels for making golden calf, 620
  - Musaf service and, 1010
- new world
  - one of six gifts to Israel from God, 584 (see also gifts)
  - three who lived to see (David, Job, Noah), 462 n35
  - See also* world to come
- New Year
  - accusations of Satan against Israel on, 27 n105

New Year (cont.)

- Adam expelled from Paradise on, 81 n97
- Akedah referred to in Zikronot in Musaf for, 228 n229
- Akedah taking place on, 232 n248
- angels speaking about Abimelech on, 218
- creation of Adam on, 81 n97
- criticized by Haman, 1153
- Elisha promising child to Shunammite on, 1028-1029 n12
- fortunes of men determined for whole year on, 218
- God deciding fate of all men for coming year on, 1029 n12
- as judgment day, 231 (see also day of judgment)
- one of 70 holy days celebrated by Jews, 648
- ram's horn blown on, 232 n248
- smoke of fire of altar on Day of Atonement predicting prosperous new year or not, 661 n380
- when good and evil deeds of man brought before God, 456
- See also* date; Rosh Hashanah
- Niblos
  - body of, put inside golden statue, 417
  - killed in battle in Valley of Campania, 417
  - son of Lucus, commander-in-chief of Sardinian troops, 417
- night
  - angels sending manna to earth in, 617
  - as best time for serious study, 618 n251
  - of covenant of pieces, as second of four nights inscribed in Book of Memorial, 541
  - of creation of world, as first of four nights inscribed in Book of Memorial, 541
  - disturbed, 1169-1172
    - as first night of Passover, 1169-1170
    - as second night of Passover, 1171 n160
  - duration of, one of ten things produced on first day of creation, 5
  - evil spirits trying to attack scholars in, 305 n259

night (cont.)

- four nights inscribed by God in Book of Memorial, 541, 543 n235
- Gentiles tried by God at, 214 n170
- God revealing Self to Gentiles during, 279 n131, 292
- of miracles
  - first night of Passover as, 1047 n54
- as proper time for prayer and study, 929 n83
- of slaying of firstborn, as third of four nights inscribed in Book of Memorial, 541
- spent by Moses repeating what he had learned from God during day, 634
- of tears, 711-713, 713 n532
- of tenth plague, one of four nights inscribed in Book of Memorial, 541
- time for divine revelation, 294 n221, 356 n113
- time Moses studied oral law, 618 n251
- when end of redemption accomplished, as fourth of four nights inscribed in Book of Memorial, 541
- wicked punished by God during, 538 n216
- See also* darkness
- night spirits (Liliths)
  - assembling under trees, according to German popular beliefs, 67 n40
- Niglissar (son of Evil-merodach), 1112 n2
- Nile River
  - coffin of Joseph in, 428-429
  - inundation of, 395, 396 n329
  - name, meaning of, 70 n51
  - source of, beneath tree of life, 69
- Nimrah (city)
  - name, meaning of ("gaily colored"), 799
- Nimrod, 161-63
  - and Abraham
    - N. advised to slay A., 181
    - N. attempting to make A. suffer death by fire, 175-176, 186
    - N. killed by A., 259 n38
    - N. making war on A., 194
    - N. offering to pay Terah for A., 181
  - as astrologer, 168

Nimrod (cont.)

- being taught language of Cush, 446
- and births
  - of females, 168
  - of males, 168
- as chief of Hamites, 162 n81
- choosing Shinar as capital, 161
- claiming to be god, 1103-1104 n100
- death of, at hands of Esau, 180 n45
- demanding people abandon Shem's teaching, 163 n86
- dream of, 179
- emigrating to Assyria, 178 n36
- and Esau
  - feud between, 257, 259 n38
  - N. envying E., 257
  - N. killed by E. in duel, 257, 259 n38, 405
- fate of, read in stars, 179
- as father of Pharaoh, 202 n119
- as first to eat meat, 162 n77
- garments of, extraordinary effects of, 257
- and garments of Adam, 405, 259 n38
- great house built by, 168-169
- and hunting, 257
- identified with
  - Amraphel, 162 n82, 163 n87, 180 n45, 196 n85
  - Zoroaster, 163 n83
- instigating building of Tower of Babel, 163 n87, 164 n88
- as leader of corrupt men, 161-162
- making idols, 161
- making war on Chedorlaomer, 194
- monarchy dating from, 168 n5
- mother of, 254 n17
  - difficult pregnancy of, 252
- moving to Babylon, 171
- name, meaning of, 162 n77
- one of five men wicked from first to last, 1044 n39
- one of seven sinners, 856, 857 n9
- as prince for descendants of Ham, 160
- as ruler of world, 162 n82 (see also cosmocrator)
- as ruler over men and beasts, 257
- seducing men to evil, 163 n83
- setting self up as god, 162
- slaughtering 70,000 male children, 169
- son of, killed by Esau, 258 n38

Nimrod (cont.)

- teaching Persians to worship fire, 163 n83
- worship of fire connected with, 163 n83
- Nimshi (elder from tribe of Zebulun), 696
- Nineveh
  - destruction of, 1035 n37
  - honored by sending of prophet to, 1032 n27
  - king of, formerly Pharaoh of Joseph's time, 414 n413, 560
  - named after Ninus (i.e., Nimrod), 163 n83
  - population of, 1034, 1035 n34
  - repentance of, 1034-1035
  - size of, 1034
- Ninevites
  - army of, numerous as sand of seashore, 313 (see also dust: of earth; star[s]: in heavens)
  - continuing in loving-kindness for 40 days, 1035
  - having 40 days respite before destruction of their city, 412
  - penance of, 1035 n35
  - story of treasure being returned to legitimate owners, 1034
  - war of sons of Jacob against, 311-314
- Ninus
  - identified with Amraphel, 163 n87, 196 n85
- See also* Nimrod
- Nisan (month)
  - 1st of
    - day of ten crowns, 658
    - death of Miriam, 737
    - first day for regular sacrificial service, 658
    - first day of first month of year, 658
    - first day of week, Sunday, 658
    - first day on which priests partook of certain portions of offering, 658
    - first day when heavenly fire seen on altar, 658
    - first day when priests bestowed their blessing on Israel, 658
    - first day when Shekinah came to dwell among Israel, 658
    - Isaac's birthday, 655
    - priests performing sacrificial rites, 658

Nisan (cont.)1st of (cont.)

princes of tribes beginning to bring offerings, 658

rain beginning to fall after famine in Joram's time, 991 sacrifice in any but appointed place forbidden, 658

Tabernacle set up on, 655

10th of

Egyptians attacking Israelites, 536 n206

13th of

circumcision of Abraham, 203 n124

Haman's edict ordering extermination of Jews, 412

14th of God keeping Mastema bound, to 18 Nisan, 553 n27

when sacrifices of Cain and Abel brought, 103

15th of Abraham learning of Lot's captivity, 194

battle between Abraham and kings who captured Lot, 195

circumcision of Abraham, 203 n124

end of plagues, 528 n174

important events happening on, 191 n76

night appointed for miraculous deeds, 195

night when Pharaoh punished on account of Sarah, 190

Passover to be celebrated, 534 provisions of Israelites in Exodus lasting from, to 15 Iyar, 570 n89 redemption of Israel in future days, 541

16th of

day for offering omer, 991, 1176 n170 destruction of cities of plain, 213

fall of Haman, 1176 n170

21st of

Israelites singing praise and gratitude for redemption from waters, 477

Moses exposed on, 477

Akedah taking place in, 232 n248 competition with Tishri for highest place in Jewish legend, 219 n203

Nisan (cont.)

Egyptian redemption completed in, 428 festival in, one of three given as reward for observing Sabbath, 572

and intimidation of evil spirits by seraphim, 1

Israelites to leave Egypt in, 428

Israel redeemed from Egypt in, 1151

three-day fast in, 1164, 1166, 1166 n142, 1166 n143,

1168 n145, 1169 n153

year to begin with this month, 534
See also date

Noachian commandments, 70 n55, 152 n51, 158 n67, 224

n221, 594 n181

heathen bound to observe, 261

as minimum of laws necessary for civilization, 594 n181

not fulfilled in time of Ezekiel, 1101 n93

number of, 70 n55

observed by Abraham, 239 n275 seven, 223

to be fulfilled in Messianic times, 70 n55

to be observed by all men, 151

See also Noah; Pharaoh: eight sins of Noachite laws. See Noachian commandments

Noah

altar of

N. rebuilding altar destroyed by flood, 232 n251

on place where Adam, Cain, and Abel sacrificed, 151

and angels

N. escaping angel of death, 148 n38

question of angels concerning N., 279 n134 appearing at death of Moses, 837 and ark (see also ark [Noah's]) animals and, 36 diseases on, 159 n75

food for animals in, 147

gathering animals for, 143, 145 n24

N. commanded by God to leave ark, 150-153

N. entering ark at noon, 814

N. sending out dove from, 148

N. sending out raven from, 148

Noah (cont.)

birth of, 133-135

and sword of Methuselah, 134 n5

blessing of

containing translation of Scripture into Greek, 156 n65 divided, 819

bodily defect of, 150

book of

containing plant remedies for disease, 157

received from Raphael after flood, 143 n23

and Book of Raziel, 90 n110

called Menahem by Lamech and others, 133

castration of, 155 n61

circumcised from mother's womb, 134 (see also covenant[s]: sign of) commanded not to eat meat, 70 n55

compared with Joseph as tzadik, 329 n3 cursing Ham, 154

daughters-in-law of, 158 n67

descendants of, 156-60

depravity of, 167

number of, 158 n72, 159 n73

description of, 133

dividing earth by lot, 156

drunkenness of

N. first to drink to excess, 153

favorable view of, 146 n29

fingers of hands not separated, 135 n6

first to introduce slavery, 153

utter curses upon associates, 153

generation of, addicted to sorcery, 133

generations from Adam to, ten in number, 101, 102 n1 generations to Abraham from, ten in number, 167

given permission to eat meat, 151 and God

God pointing way to ark with little finger of right hand, 638 n315

God's blessing of N. remaining upon world until Abraham, 819 grandson of Methuselah, 133

image of, on Solomon's throne, 968

Noah (cont.)

as inventor of plough and other farm implements, 134 and lion, 148 n37, 150 injury by, rendering N. incapable of sexual intercourse, 151 n51, 155 n60
 love of husbandry as cause of downfall of, 1042 n30
 Moses compared to, 837
 mother of, 113 n42
 and mouse, 36
 name
   kept secret, 133
   meaning of, 133, 134-135 n5, 147, 150
   and rest, 134 n5
   significance of, 151 n50
 naming of, 133, 134 n4
 natural phenomena and, 134
 not able to perform priestly services, 150 oath of God to, never again to destroy world by water, 471, 472 n22
 one of seven patriarchs of world, 968
 one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28 (see also under world[s])
 one of seven pious men erecting altar, 771 (see also under pious: men)
 one of seven pious men in pre-Abrahamic times, 116-117 n53 (see also under pious: men)
 one of seven with overlapping life terms, 982 n4
 one of three who lived to see new world, 462 n35 (see also Daniel; Job)
 prayer of, to God, 147 preaching repentance, 140 n19
 and prediction of flood, 139 providing food for man and beast in time of famine, 329 n3 and raven, 37, 41 n177, 41 n178, 151, 152 n54 (see also raven)
 at right hand of God, 450 (see also God: right hand of) sacrifice of, 150, 152 n52
 saved by grace of God, 144 second of seven pious men, 682 (see also under pious: men) selfishness of, 151 n49
 sexual abstinence of, 155 n60
 son of Lamech, 133

Noah (cont.)

sons of, 146 n30
 stealing hair from sleeping swine, 41 n174
 superiority of Moses to, 837
 suspicion against, 41 n176
 taking care of wild animals, 148 n37
 as tzadik, 145 n28
 vine of, as offshoot of tree of knowledge, 155 n58
 wife of, 113 n42
   Noamzara as name of, 146 n29
   one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
 willing to care for ancestors, 102 n1
 and wine, 153, 155 n58
   N. assisted by Satan in cultivating grapes, 153
 Noah's ark. See ark (of Noah); Noah: and ark
 Noamzara (Noah's wife), 146 n29
 Nob
   execution of priests at, 904 n78
   on account of David's sin, 933 as last act in divine decree against house of Eli, 908 n104 priests at baking shewbread on Friday, 909 n107 deserving of death, 907 n92 sanctuary at, one of seven holy places destroyed by Esau, 264
 nobility exile of, during reign of Jehoiakim, 1063 n132
nofet ("honeycomb") Torah as sweet as, 286
 noises
   of universe inaudible to man, 27 n107 noon
   Noah entering ark at, 814
   significance of, 814, 815 n904
   time of execution of God's commands, 814 time of Exodus from Egypt, 814
 north all evil coming from, 645
   assigned to Adam, 92
   Dan, Asher, and Naphtali to pitch camp in, 685 left unfinished by God, 7 location of hellfire, snow, darkness, devils, etc., 6

north (cont.)

Paradise situated in, 645, 646 n340
 qualities of, 645 n337
 northern kingdom destroyed by Assyrians, 1044
 northern tribes
   exiled beyond Sambation River, 1089 n56
 nostrils
   two of ten orifices of man, 960
 Notarikon
   hermeneutical rule of, 370 n187, 409 n382 nudity. See nakedness
 number 1 number of pious produced by Gentiles every year, 211 n164
   year
     of flood, 526
     of Job's suffering, 526
     of judgment on Gog, 526
     of plagues, 526
     of tortures of hell, 526
   2 cherubim on ark of covenant, 643 great heroes of world (Samson and Goliath), dying on account of strength, 798 great sages of world (Balaam and Ahithophel), losing this world and world to come, 798 (see also under world to come) wealthy men in world perishing on account of wealth, 798
   years
     of famine in Egypt, 412
     of fasting for Simeon, 436 3 conditional gifts to Israel, 590-591 n173 (see also gifts) cubits as height of altar, 648
   days
     corpse of Job left unburied, 461
     of distress of pious, 373
     Jonah spent in belly of fish, 1033 days and nights Abraham walked in midst of fire, 186 deliverers sent by God to deliver Israel from Egypt, 648 divisions of Israel, 592

number (cont.)3 (cont.)

- gifts of God to world, 798 (see also gifts)
- gifts received by Israel at Sinai, 612 n240 (see also gifts)
- God having preference for "third," 592
- importance of, in life of Moses, 592
- men losing this world and gaining world to come, 847-848 n31
- mountains retained by God in desert, 736
- parts of oral law, 592
- parts of Torah, 592
- patriarchs, 592
- persons carrying out communications between God and Israel, 592
- things contributed by God to formation of child, 608 n224
- things Moses did on own authority, 626 n279
- things world exists for sake of, 660
- unconditional gifts to Israel, 590-591 n173 (see also gifts)
- wishes of Moses, 629

4

- beings represented on Divine Throne, 621
- men described in Bible as creatures of God, 1071 n13
- mountains on which heavenly Jerusalem will descend, 595 n184
- nights inscribed by God in Book of Memorial, 541
- pious men who addressed unbecoming words to God (Moses, David, Habakkuk, Jeremiah), 628 n284
- portals (fire, earthquake, storm, hail), 600
- times Torah to be impressed on Israel, 634
- voices heard at Sinai, 605 n214

5

- bearing title "beloved of God," 168 n4
- bearing title "friend of God," 168 n4
- men pious from first to last, 1044 n39

number (cont.)5 (cont.)

- men wicked from first to last, 1044 n39
- parts of body received from father, 606
- parts of body received from mother, 606
- sinful cities, 211
- voices heard at Sinai, 605 n214

6

- days of mourning, 99
- heavens, 665
- laws of Torah prescribed for king, 665
- miracles terrifying Nebuchadnezzar, 1098
- mothers (Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, Leah, Bilhah, Zilpah), 665
- names of Mount Sinai, 593
- orders of Mishnah, 665
- wagons for Tabernacle, 665

7

- altars erected by seven pious men, 771
- angels of confusion sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's banquet, 1135
- clouds of glory enveloping Israelites in Exodus, 542
- days of mourning, 114
  - for Jacob, 415
  - for Sarah, 235
- days of retirement for Aaron and sons after anointing, 657
- days of wedding festivities, 425
- evils, 450
- generations from Abraham to Moses, 224 n222
- golden idols of Amorites, 856
- great wonders in history, 237
- heralds to remind Solomon of duties, 969
- holy places destroyed by Esau, 264
- kine of Pharaoh's dream, 362
- months of Reuben's illness, 435
- names of Jethro, 493
- nations whose extermination commanded by God, 847 n22
- Noachian commandments, 151
- patriarchs of world (Adam, Noah, Shem, Job, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob), 968

number (cont.)7 (cont.)

- pious men
  - from Adam to Levi, 682
  - in pre-Abrahamic times, 116-117 n53
  - of world (Kohath, Amram, Moses, Aaron, Eldad, Medad, Hur), 968
- punishments of Cain, 450
- righteous men slain by Philistines, 223
- sevenfold pain suffered by Job for seven years, 461
- sounds of trumpet at resurrection, 605 n214
- tempter spirits, 435
- things created in beginning, 1
- voices heard at Sinai, 605 n214
- years
  - of conquest of land of Israel, 852 n46
  - of division of land of Israel, 852 n46
  - Jacob lived around Shechem unmolested, 314
  - Jacob would serve Laban for Rachel, 282
  - of Reuben's penance, 435
  - Solomon took to build Temple, 966
  - of warfare for Israelites, 851

8

- day of circumcision, 248 n318
- grievous sins of Sennacherib, 1048 n60
- men whose corpses not touched by worms, 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])
- miracles performed by Elijah during life, 1025

9

- censuses of Israel, 637
- songs sung by Israel to God in course of history, 562

10

- candlesticks in Solomon's Temple, 645
- curses pronounced against Adam, 95 n127
- days of penitence from New Year to Day of Atonement, 903 n72
- essential constituent parts of human body, 671
- famines appointed by God, 189
- generations
  - from Adam to Noah, 101

number (cont.)10 (cont.)generations (cont.)

from Jacob to Samson, 879

n111

from Noah to Abraham, 167,
168 n1

from Perez to David, 666

just men in Israel, 628

lists of generations in Scriptures, 671 measures of beauty in world, 1085 n45

miracles

connected with Exodus, 556, 671

God wrought for Israel in Egypt, 671

ordinances of Joshua concerning private property, 852 parts of body received from God, 606

persons needed to pronounce valid ban, 342

plagues of Egypt, 523-525, 525
n170

punishments

of Egyptians, 525-526 n170

of serpent, 95 n131

quorum required for morning prayers, 919 n50

Sefirot, 671

significance of, 48 n1, 525-526
n170

sons of Benjamin, 380

tables in Solomon's Temple, 644-645

temptations

of Abraham, 187, 526 n170

of Joseph, 188 n52, 352 n107

words of creation, 525 n170

11

materials for construction of Tabernacle, 641 n322

months of illness of Gad, 447

12 blessings recited by Levites facing Mount Gerizim, 843

constellations in heavens, 422, 665, 671

curses recited by Levites facing Mount Ebal, 843

days Rachel fasted, 318

guides of men, 672

hours

in day, 342, 422

in night, 342, 422

in Jewish legends, 343 n67

number (cont.)12 (cont.)

memorial pillars erected by

Moses on Mount Sinai, 598 miles of cleft in Temple, 1042

n30

months

of flood, 149 n45

punishment of sinners in Gehenna, 149 n45

in year, 342, 422, 671

oxen to draw wagons for Tabernacle, 665

precious stones on Aaron's
breastplate, 342, 650

significance of, 342, 422

signs of Zodiac, 342 stones taken by Jacob from altar of Akedah, 277

tribes, 342, 422

wings

of Azazel, 95 n131

of Satan, 62

years

Joseph spent in prison, 362

Rachel bore no child before

Benjamin, 318

13

age when good inclination enters man, 105 n14

attributes of God, 631-632

deeds God performed for Israel
in Egypt, 640

gifts from God to Israel in world to come, 640 (see also gifts)

materials used in construction of Tabernacle, 640

representations of golden calf, 621

14

members of council to assist Messiah, 100 n142

15

age of Cain at time of sacrifice, 105 n11

generations from Abraham to Solomon, 967 n57

materials for construction of Tabernacle, 641 n322

16

different character sets for 72
languages, 157

miracles performed by Elisha during life, 1025

17

years

Jacob and Joseph dwelled together, 399

number (cont.)17 (cont.)years (cont.)

Jacob and Joseph separated, 399

18

age of majority, 488 n76

men given title "servant of God," 452 n2

20

age of majority, 263 n69

pieces of silver as price of Joseph, 335

years Israel free from idolatry, 949 n12

22

books of Bible, 11 n82, 82
n98

creations, 11 n82, 82 n98

generations from Adam to Jacob, 82 n98

letters of Hebrew alphabet, 11
n82, 82 n98

years

Jacob dwelled apart from parents, 342

Jacob mourned for Joseph,
342

24

books of Bible, 956 n25

25

years Zebul reigned as judge, 859

26

age of Isaac at time of Akedah, 253 n3

28

years Joshua was leader of Israel, 852

30

age of Cain at time of sacrifice, 105 n11

generations from Abraham to Zedekiah, 967 n57

shekels as penalty if ox kills servant, 637

33

days of impurity for woman after giving birth to male child, 967 n57

generations

from Adam to Solomon, 967
n57

of impurity for earth after giving birth to Adam, 967
n57

36

age of Rachel at death, 318

number (cont.)

- 37
 age of Isaac at time of Akedah, 253 n3, 1079
- 39
 no generation without 39 pious men, 211 n164
- 40
 age of Abel at time of sacrifice, 105 n11
 Cain at time of sacrifice, 105 n11
 Esau when married, 282
 Isaac when married, 282
- days
 Egyptians spent embalming Jacob, 412
 Goliath ruled, 915-916, 917 n31
 of Moses' stay on Sinai, 149 n42 Nebuchadnezzar lived as beast, 1103 of punishment in flood, 149 n42
 of respite for Ninevites before city destroyed, 412 Solomon fasted in order to be granted wisdom, 955 n18
 spies scouted Palestine, 708 that Ninevites were pious, 1035
- days and nights Moses in heaven, 806-807
- steps Orpah followed Naomi, 915, 917 n30
- years
 dead buried in Holy Land to rise before those buried in other countries, 401 n345
 Deborah reigned as judge, 869
 Israelites punished by death for rebellion, 715
 Israel sustained by manna, 573
 Jeremiah prophesied, 1070 n13
 Joseph ruled in Egypt, 422
 Moses prophesied, 1070 n13
 Moses reigned in Ethiopia, 491
 Moses was shepherd for Jethro, 500 of Nebuchadnezzar's reign, 1107 Othniel reigned as judge, 860

number (cont.)

- 40 (cont.)
 years (cont.)
 reign of Messiah, 401 n345
 respite for Canaanites, 548 n8 of wandering in wilderness, 429, 542
- 42
 men killed by bears after curse of Elisha, 1027 n4 sacrifices brought by Balak, 1027 n4 years of famine in Egypt, 365
- 43
 years spent building Tower of Babel, 165 n88
- 45
 righteous needed to save sinful cities, 211
- 49
 correct interpretations of Torah, 956 n25
 gates of wisdom, 950
- 50
 days
 Abel lived, 105 n11
 Pharaoh tortured by Gabriel, 560
 gates of wisdom, 633, 635 n306
 plagues afflicting Job, 458 n25
 righteous needed to save sinful cities, 210-211
 shekels as penalty for dishonoring woman, 637
- 51
 age of city of Zoar, 213
- 52
 years
 of Babylonian exile, 1073 n24
 God warned unrighteous in sinful cities, 211
- 57
 years Kenaz reigned as first judge, 858
- 60
 cities founded by Og, 754
 miles, as height of walls around cities founded by Og, 754
- seah
 weight of rod of Moses, 626 n279
 weight of tablets, 626 n279
 years of Elisha's activity, 1031
- 66
 years Ebed-melech slept under tree, 1090
- 69
 members of Jacob's family, 395

number (cont.)

- 70
 age of Adam when Cain born, 103 n4
 David at death, 938
- angels
 surrounding Divine Throne, 164
 surrounding each of 70 thrones in Paradise, 507 to teach 70 languages to 70 families of Noah, 446 average age of man, 62 n28
 days of mourning for Jacob, 412 descendants of Noah, 158 n72
 diseases as consequence of fall, 95 n129
 families of Noah, 446
 holy days celebrated by Jews, 648 (see also holy days)
 kinds of deaths, 95 n129
 lamps in Solomon's Temple, 645 languages of men, 114, 364, 366, 413, 446
- members
 of heavenly court, 211 n159
 of Jacob's family, 392, 393 n305
 of Sanhedrin, 274 n114
- names
 of God, 649 n348
 of Israel, 649 n348
 of Jerusalem, 649 n348
 of Metatron, 130
 nations of world, 158 n72, 645
 plagues upon flesh after fall, 944 seah, as weight of tablets of Ten Commandments, 625 secretaries of Pharaoh, 518
 significance of, in Tabernacle, 648 steps on Pharaoh's throne, 364, 366 thrones in Paradise, 507
- years
 of Babylonian exile, 1073 n24
 person's life span, 261
- 71
 members
 of heavenly court, 95 n124
 of heavenly Sanhedrin, 1027 n6
- 72
 diseases as consequence of fall, 95 n129
 languages in earth as divided by Noah, 157

number (cont.)

- 72 (cont.)
 nations divided by Noah, 157
- 75
 years of marriage of Abraham and Sarah before birth of Isaac, 202 n116
- 77
 age of Adam when Cain born, 103 n4 descendants of Lamech who perished at time of flood, 112 n37
 golden tables hidden in tower of Baghdad, 1091 pious men in Israel (70 members of Sanhedrin, Aaron, Aaron's four sons, Caleb, Phineas), 629 n287
- 83
 kinds of deaths, 95 n129
- 84
 age of Jacob when married to Rachel, 282
- 90
 age of Sarah at Isaac's birth, 233
- 99
 islands divided by Noah, 157
- 100
 age of Abraham at birth of Isaac, 1079 cities given to Esau in Seir, 322 n316
 shekels
 Joseph gave to brothers, 390 n289 penalty for slander, 637
- 104
 lands in earth divided by Noah, 157
- 116
 years fire remained on altar, 659-660
- 120
 age of Moses, 502
 Simeon at death, 437
 angels surrounding throne of Abraham in Paradise, 507 days Shekinah would rest on Mount Horeb, 502 men of Great Synagogue, 1127 n56 numerical value of Hebrew word for thornbush (seneh), 502
 years
 of man's life, 140 n19
 Noah preaching repentance, 143-44

number (cont.)

- 125
 age of Reuben at death, 436
- 127
 age of Sarah at death, 1138 n47
 provinces ruled by Ahasuerus, 1130, 1131 n6, 1138 n47 provinces ruled by Esther, corresponding to years of Sarah, 1138 n47
- 130
 age of Hannah at birth of Samuel, 889
 Jacob when migrating to Egypt, 669
 Jochebed at birth of Moses, 668
- 177
 age of Pharaoh at death, 427
- 208
 sons and advisors of Haman, 1168
- 210
 years of servitude in Egypt, 263 n69, 510, 511 n126, 513
- 232
 kingdoms ruled by Ahab, 988 n32
- 243
 years of influence of Enoch, 122
- 244
 persons killed by lions in pit of Darius, 1114
- 248
 commandments, corresponding to number of members of body, 603
 members of human body, 97 n134, 1050 numerical value of name of Abraham, 203 n122 rivers of balsam, 97 n134
- 252
 kingdoms ruled by Ahab, 987 years that blood of Jehoiada seethed in hall of priests, 1038
- 300
 shekels Joseph gave to Benjamin, 390 n288
- 310
 words of God for every righteous man, 807 n894 worlds prepared for pious in world to come, 807
- 318
 Eliezer having strength of 318 men, 195

number (cont.)

- 318 (cont.)
 numerical value of
 name of Eliezer, 197 n93
 name of Jesus, 197 n93
- 365
 advisors of Haman, 1168
 books of Enoch, 128 n60
 days in solar year, 1171 n164 number of prohibitions, corresponding to number of days of year, 603 times Ahasuerus thrown out of bed, corresponding to number of days in solar year, 1170, 1171 n164
- 366
 books of Enoch, 126, 128 n60
- 400
 years of bondage in Egypt, 199, 263 n69
- 410
 years of existence of first Temple, 949 n12
- 550
 cattle tithed by Jacob, 300
- 600
 bricks each Israelite required to make daily, 468 n9
- 613
 commandments of Torah, 593
- 620
 letters in Ten Commandments, 635 n308
- 800
 proverbs of Solomon, 950
- 903
 kinds of deaths, 95 n129
- 930
 years Adam lived, 671
- 974
 generations
 before creation when Torah written down, 102 n2 suppressed before flood, 101, 1,464
 lions in pit of Darius, 1114
- 1,700
 forgotten traditions restored by Othniel, 860
- 3,000
 executed for worshipping golden calf, 627
 proverbs of Solomon, 950
- 5,000
 gates of wisdom opened to Moses on Sinai, 956 n25

number (cont.)

- 7,000
years of duration of world, 126, 859
- 8,000
gates of understanding opened to Moses on Sinai, 956 n25
- 11,000
gates of knowledge opened to Moses on Sinai, 956 n25
- 22,000
children with Mordecai in Bet ha-Midrash, 1170
- 24,000
Israelites dying as result of sin with daughters of Moab, 796 men from tribe of Simeon lost to plague at Shittim, 783-784 sinners executed by judges of Israel, 782 n798
- 30,000
angels as bodyguards of Moses on tour of heavens, 503
- 60,000
executed by Nebuchadnezzar for worshipping idol, 1102 male children conceived same night as Moses, 404
- 70,000
heads, mouths, and stingers of scorpions in hell, 506 male children slaughtered by Nimrod, 169
- 80,000
archers of Palmyrenes assisting Nebuchadnezzar in war against Israel, 1086
priests
burned at stake at destruction of Temple, 1107 n108 whose death caused by Ishmaelites, 1086
- 200,000
Ephraimites killed by Philistines, 548 n10
- 300,000
men fighting with Kenaz, 858
- 600,000
angels in each host accompanying Jacob, 294 heads of families leaving Egypt, 542 Israelites at time of Exodus, 393 n305, 465

number (cont.)

- 600,000 (cont.)
male children born same night as Moses, saved on account of his merits, 479 sheep and goats in Jacob's flock, 290 sons of Moses numbering more than, 1089 n55
- 60 myriads
firstborn slain during tenth plague, 538 n218
Israelites to be brought out of Egypt, 513
Jacob's descendants at time of his death, 415 n417 prophets during Elijah's time, 1026 n1 standard number representing Israel, 211 n159
- 60 myriads minus 3,000
number of Israelites, 636 of Israelites as sum of numerical values of names of 12 tribes, 636 of righteous needed to save sinful cities, 210-211
- numbers, exaggerated, 172 n18, 894 n34
of conversion, 935
of Job's possessions and wealth, 453-454
in warfare, 309-313, 415-419, 420, 858, 868, 870 n80, 872, 876, 880 n124, 882, 914 n15, 925-926, 986, 987, 1045-1046
- Nun
receiving revelation that his child would cut off his head, 842 n2
- nun (letter)
in Asenath, standing for nobemet, for she wept and entreated, 368
and creation, 4
long nun at end of mishpatan, explanation of, 787 n818, 789 n822 suspended in Judges 18:30, explanation of, 883 n130 standing for ner, lamp of the Lord and of the wicked, 4 in Zaphenath-paneah
standing for navi ("prophet"), 368
navon ("discreet"), 368
See also alphabet; letters of alphabet

- nuptial benedictions, 242 n298
quorum for, 241 n285
- Nuriel (angel)
in second heaven, 503, 505 n117
height of (300 parasangs), 503
- nursing. See breast-feeding
- nut tree
symbolic of Israel, 1175
willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175
See also tree(s)
- nymphs, holy
seven golden idols of Amorites, 856

O

- oak tree
of Abraham, 206 n137
A. sitting under, at Mamre, 247
healing properties of, 206 n137
Absalom caught in branches of, 932
pieces of idols broken by Jacob buried under, 316
under which Deborah buried called "oak of mourners of Deborah," 318 n301
See also tree(s)
- oath
of angels, 119
of Benjamin before Joseph, 388
chief of, 137 n9
of Eliezer to Abraham concerning wife for Isaac, 238 of Esau, concerning birthright, 258 of Eve, to make Adam eat the fruit, 93
of God, 232 n243
to Noah not to destroy earth again by water, 152 n55, 210, 471, 472 n22
inviolability of, 848 n35 of Jacob to take no wives other than four daughters of Laban, 293
of Joseph
to Jacob, 401 n351
to Jacob to bury him in Canaan, 413
not to succumb to temptation, 354
swearing by life of Pharaoh, 373 of Laban not to pass over stone boundary with hostile intent, 293

oath (cont.)

- of Naomi to provide for Ruth, 866 n56
  - of pious, not to succumb to temptation, 354
  - of sons of Jacob not to tell Jacob what they had done with Joseph, 339
  - swearing of, 322 n317
    - by Fear of Isaac, 293
    - by God of Abraham, 293
    - by God of Nahor, 293
    - by life of father (b'pahad aviv), 294 n227
    - by sign of covenant, 238, 239 n284, 400 (see also circumcision; covenant[s]: sign of)
  - sworn at Shibah, 261
- Obadiah (prophet)
- active during time of
    - Amaziah, 1041 n20
    - Jehoshaphat, 1041 n20
  - as disciple of Elijah, 1026 n1
  - as "God-fearing one," 397 (see also God-fearing one)
  - identified with Obadiah, high official in Ahab's court, 1027 n7, 1041 n20
  - and Isaiah
    - prophesying in 71 tongues, 1058 n104
    - receiving permission from Great Sanhedrin to prophesy, 1058 n104
  - Jehoram exacting interest from, 1027 n7
  - as most insignificant of prophets, 1058 n104
  - non-Jewish descent of, 1027 n6
  - one of four God-fearing men, 1026
  - pious protector of prophets in hiding, 990
  - prophecy of, against Edom, 323, 1026
  - as proselyte and overseer in Paradise, 19, 22 n91
  - supporting 100 prophets in hiding, 998 n23, 1026
  - widow of, assisted by Elisha, 1025-1026
  - wife of, one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
- Obed (grandfather of David), 911
- born circumcised, 867 n68 (see also covenant[s]: sign of)
  - name, meaning of, 867 n68, 911
  - the pious, son of Ruth and Boaz, 864

Obed Edom

- lighting lamp twice a day before ark, 942 n135
- rewarded with many children, 942 n135
- women in house of
  - giving birth after two months, 942 n135
  - giving birth to six children at one time, 942 n135

Oboth

- Israelites continuing hostile actions against God at, 749

obscenity

- one of eight sins committed by Pharaoh, inhabitants of sinful cities, builders of Tower of Babel, Sennacherib, and Nebuchadnezzar, 562 n54 (see also Pharaoh: eight sins of)

ocean

- drinking from, as method of capital punishment for worshippers of golden calf, 625-626
  - as "Great Sea," 20 n73
  - identified with "sea of death," 20 n73
  - location of, 6
  - name, meaning of, 20 n73
  - wanting to flood world at breaking of tablets, 625
  - See also* sea; sea of death; water(s)
- Odihel (husband of Pheila), 859

odor

- of dead bones, distinguishing between pious and wicked, Jew and Gentile, man and woman, 339 n58

Ofaniel (angel)

- angel of wheel of moon, prostrating before Metatron, 130
- ofanim (type of angel), 33 n139
- above, corresponding to ofanim below, 648

- in seventh heaven, 505 n117
- surrounding Divine Throne, 6
- and translation of Enoch, 129
- See also* angel(s): types

offering

- burnt
  - accompanying prayer of Isaac, 253 n8
  - atoning for sinful thoughts, 456 n14
  - bull as, 598
  - not brought by Abraham, 225

offering (cont.)

- burnt (cont.)
    - sacrifice of Isaac as, 225-226, 228-229, 260
  - dedication
    - of princes of tribes for
      - Tabernacle being same for each, 665-673
    - significance of, for each tribe, 666-673
    - symbolic significance of total of, 671
    - symbolizing history of world from Adam to erection of Tabernacle, 671
  - drink
    - poured out by Jacob on pillar at Bethel, 318
  - free-will, to treasury at Shiloh, 859
  - of gold in amount of one's increase in weight, 990, 990 n50
  - half-shekel
    - pointed out by God with index finger of right hand, 638 n315
    - to sanctuary at second census, 637
  - heave
    - Adam as, 65
    - first and second tithes to priests, 721
    - to be separated from dough, 65
  - incense, 722
    - Nadab and Abihu consumed by, 722
  - peace
    - bull as, 598
    - he-goat as, 672
    - he-lamb as, 672
    - not brought by Abraham, 225
    - sacrifice of Abel as, 105 n12
  - purification
    - of women before having conjugal relations, 893 n26
  - sin
    - of Aaron, calf as, 659
    - made by Moses to atone for any possible wrong in building Tabernacle, 657
    - offered by Job on behalf of friends, 461
    - on 10 Tishri, 341
  - whole
    - sacrifice of Abel as, 105 n12
    - See also* libations; sacrifice(s)
- officers
- number of, 588 n164

official(s)

chiefs, 737
 elders, 737
 magnates, 737
 princes, 737
 of Roman court
   Elijah appearing as, 1001
 rulers of fifties, 737
 rulers of hundreds, 737
 rulers of tens, 737
 rulers of thousands, 737
 offspring, blemished
   of Abraham
     Ishmael as, 406
     sons of Keturah as, 406
   of Isaac, Esau as, 406

Og

and Abraham
   A. freeing O., 753, 756 n689
   A. receiving O. as gift from Nimrod, 753
   O. as slave to A., 753
   O. bringing A. news of Lot's bondage, with wicked motive, 753
   O. circumcised by A., 756 n691
 battle of Israelites against, 753
   taking place in Edrei, 753
   taking place on Sabbath, 756
     n693
 beauty of, 756 n704
 bed of, fashioned from ivory, 755
 at circumcision of Isaac, 219
 claimed as child by Ham, 152 n54
 death of, 754
 escape of from Amraphel's sword, 756
     n697
   from flood, 756 n697
 founder of 60 cities, 754
 as giant, 753-756, 829
   last of giants, 754, 756 n697
   only one to escape hand of Amraphel, 754
 guardian angel of, put in chains by
   God, 751
 identified as "the escaped," 196
   n90
 identified with Eliezer, Abraham's steward, 753
 legend of, about long teeth, 305
   n263
 life span of, 755 n684
   500 years, 753
 with Pharaoh when Jacob came to Egypt, 395
 promising to serve Noah as slave, 144

Og (cont.)

size of thigh bone of, 753
 slain by Moses, 753
 as slave of Nimrod, 755 n689
 sons of Shemhazai as ancestors of,
   137 n10
 on top of ark, 144

Ogi

identified with Og, who is identified with Eliezer, 180 n41
 slave given to Abraham, 177

Ohad

elder from tribe of Simeon, 696

Oholiab (elder from tribe of Zebulun), 696

from tribe of Dan, assisting Bezalel in construction of Tabernacle, 642

Oholibamah-Judith

double name of one of Esau's wives, 274 n122

oil

on anointing stone made from 12
 stones, 277-278
 coming down from heaven for Jacob's sake, 92 n113
 holy, 915 n22
   of anointing
     for anointing kings, 1038 n2
     prepared by Moses, 658
     n371
     anointing of Enoch with, 126
   changing body of anointed,
     917 n35
   one of five things in First Temple only, 1123-1124
     n36
   drops of, on David's garments turning to diamonds and pearls, 913
   hidden by Josiah, 658 n371,
     1062 n118
   jug of, concealed by Josiah
     before destruction of Temple, 573
   not pouring out on David's brothers, 913
   sanctuary and vessels anointed
     with, 657
 inexhaustible, and widow of Obadiah, 1026
 Jacob anointing site of Luz with,
   92 n113
 of life
   description of, 92 n113
   dispensed to pious, 91
 for light in Tabernacle, symbolizing Messiah, 640-641

oil (cont.)

olive, in golden bowl on throne of Solomon, 968
 one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see also under Tabernacle)
 from pitcher poured from pitcher rather than from horn, 1037
   used to anoint Jehu, 1037
   used to anoint Saul, 1038 n2
 as stream from tree of life, 127 n60
 from tree of His mercy, 91
See also anointing old age
   change of appearance in, as one of seven wonders of history, 237
   marks to distinguish it from youth, 237 not distinguished by appearance before death of Sarah, 237 signs of, in appearance of Abraham, 239 n276

older

to serve younger, 252, 254 n19

olive tree

depicted on tribe of Asher's flag in wilderness, 688
 Othniel pictured as, 874 n103
 as tree of life, 92 n113
 wainscoting of fourth division of Paradise made from, 19
See also tree(s)

omen

meeting young maidens on entering city, 281

omer, 1173

amount of daily manna for each person, 571
 brought on 16 Nisan, 991, 1176
   n170
 Counting of Omer, 592 n175
 offering, 1140
   barley cake as, 872 preparation of, 865 n48

Omri, house of, 986

On

becoming intoxicated, 727 called On, "the penitent," 727 saved because of repentance, 724 son of Peleth, saved with sons of Korah, 726-728
 true name of, Nemuel, son of Eliab, brother of Dathan
   and Abiram, 727
 wife of
   On owing salvation to, 726
   pleading for On, 727

Onan

age of, at marriage, 7 years, 346 n82
 dying on account of sin, 344
 and Er, difference in age of, 346 n82
 name, meaning of ("mourning"), 344 not begetting children with Tamar, 344 second son of Judah, 344
 sin of, 346 n79
 and Tamar

living together for year without consummating marriage, 344

onanism, 346 n79

in Ben Sira legend, 1083 n42

one-horned animal, 40 n166

one-horned ox. See unicorn

Onias

legend of stoning of, connected to legend of stoning of Jeremiah, 1091 n58

See also Honi

Othiel (angel)

supervising fifth division of hell, 988

Onkelos

speaking with Balaam through necromancy, 796 n856

Onoskelis

unclean spirit having shape and skin of fair-hued woman, 963

onyx

on bier of Jacob, 413

endowing one who wears it with grace, 652 precious stone of Joseph in breastplate of Aaron, 652

on throne of Pharaoh, 364

See also precious stones

Ophir

gold from, on Solomon's throne, 968

oral law. See law: oral oral Torah. See Torah: oral

oranges

legend of women friends of Potiphar's wife and, 354-355, 356 n118

organs (bodily)

legend about rivalry of, 978-979, 980 n97

See also body, human; guides: of men; and under individual organs

organs (musical)

in fourth heaven, 125

orgies

in sinful cities, 207 (see also cities: sinful)

Origen

defense of Christians by, 51 n8

on Gabriel as angel of war, 53 n13

on Jacob's encounter with angel, 306 n273

on Michael as angel of prayer, 53 n13

Oriokh. See Ariuk

orlah

laws of, Moses and Aaron instructing Israelites in wilderness on, 712 n530

Ornias

having form of lion, 965 n56

as offspring of Uriel (identified with Ariel, "lion of God"), 965 n56 story of Solomon and old man

with impious son, 964

vampire spirit who stole money from king's page, 963

Orpah

accompanying Naomi, 915, 917 n30

attempting to kill Abishai, 934 bringing forth four giants (Goliath and three brothers), 862-863 conversion to Judaism only temporary, 864 n40 daughter of Eglon, king of Moab, daughter-in-law of Naomi, 862 killed by Abishai, 934

leading life of infamy, 915

name, meaning of, 917 n27

rewarded for 40 steps with Naomi and four tears, 915 sons of, killed by David, 1163

orphans

Job's concern for, 454

Osnappar

one of eight other names of Sennacherib, 1054 n92

Osnappar of Assyria (king)

leading penitents of Nineveh, 1034

Osorchan I

Zerah identified with, 986 n19

Osra (mother of Serug), 168 n3

ostrich

cruelty of, 43 n190

Othniel (judge), 860-862

capturing Luz, 860

Othniel (cont.)

connected with family of David, 911

devotion of, to Torah, 861 n23

elder from tribe of Issachar, 696

entering Paradise alive, 861 (see also Paradise: entering alive)

father of Kenaz, 857 n1

half-brother of Caleb, 860 identified with Judah (judge), 862 n30

Jabez as epithet of, 860

Judah as real name of, 860

pictured as olive tree, 874 n103

reigning 40 years as judge, 860

restoring 1,700 traditions forgotten since Moses, 860

as scholar, 860

as successor of Joshua, 861 n22, 861 n26

as successor of Kenaz, 860 n21 victory of, over Adoni-bezek, 860

wife of, 860

zealous for study of Torah, 860

Othniel-Jabez. See Othniel

ox (oxen)

and ass

Solomon's story of conversation between, 953-954 offered by Adam, 88 n108 (see also unicorn)

of peace offering corresponding to books of Scripture, 671

at dedication of sanctuary

significance of, for tribes of

Asher, Benjamin, Dan,

Ephraim, Gad, Manasseh,

Naphtali, and Simeon,

668-670

symbolic significance of, in history of world, 671

and sacrifice of Noah, 150

on Solomon's throne, 968

to draw wagons of Tabernacle

living forever, 665

12 in number, 665

ox, wild (reem)

on coins struck by Joshua, 853 n54

Ozni (son of Gad)

name, meaning of, 433-434

P

Pagiel

name, meaning of ("the interceder"), 680

Pagiel (cont.)

prince of tribe of Asher, 680 son of Ochran ("the afflicted"), 680

pain

God employing same means to inflict and cure, 568 n82

pairs

everything created in, 608 n221

paitanim, 191 n76, 481 n57

medieval, praising Abraham in Akedah, 228 n229

of Synagogue

Jose b. Jose, 128 n60

pakod

use of word in addressing people, one of three signs of true redeemer of Israel from bondage of Egypt, 405
words of redeemer ("I have surely visited you"), 428

palate

one of 12 guides of men, tasting flavors of food, 671 (see also body, human; guides:
of men)

Palestine

claim of Canaanites to, 196 n82
created before other parts of world, 10 n39

and Egypt

reminiscences of relationship between, 364 n163 (see also historical reminiscence)

emigration to, and luck, 263 n66 filled with treasures when conquered by Israel, 717

foreign kings in, 846, 848 n33

as God's favorite land, 10 n39 guardian angel of, hurled from heaven by God, 712

plague in, during visit of spies, 708
n511

promised to Jacob, 277

resettlement of, under direction of Ezra, 1121

as rightful possession of Israel, 158
n68

situated in center of earth, 10

n39

size of, 1005 n53

soil of, as material for Adam's head,
54 n15

as unlawful possession of Canaan,
159 n73

See also Holy Land; Israel (land);
promised land

Palestinian Haggadah. See Haggadah

Palie

name, meaning of, 194

Palit (angel)

identified with Michael, 194

Pallu

elder from tribe of Reuben, 696

married though two years old, 395

palm tree, 567

brought to Babylon 40 years before
exile, 1074 n24

Deborah buried under, 317

Deborah (prophetess) sitting under, 317

indicating accession to royal dignity, 901 n52

70 palms, corresponding to 70

elders, at Elim, 567

symbolic of Israel, 1175

symbolic significance of, 568 n86, 1175

as tree of life, 92 n113

willing to serve as cross for

Haman, 1175

See also tree(s)

Palmyra

burial place of Queen of Sheba,
964 n53

Palmyrenes

archers of, 1087 n53

and destruction of Temple, 1087
n53

Palnesser

one of eight other names of Sennacherib, 1054 n92

Palti (husband of Michal)

chastity of, 866 n60

legality of marriage to Michal, 941
n133

praised for control of passions, 941
n133

See also Paltiel

Palti (son of Raphu)

elder from tribe of Issachar, 696

spy representing tribe of Benjamin, 705

Paltiel (husband of Michal)

crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters transmitted to, by Eli, 892 n24

God's name attached to name, 871
n85

transmitting crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters to Ahitophel, 892 n24

See also Palti (husband of Michal)

Paltit (daughter of Lot)

name, meaning of, 209

punished for feeding beggar, 209

Paneas Grotto

running from east bank to west bank of Jordan, 802

panic

one of seven evils, 450

panthers

among animals of fourth plague,
530, 533-534 n188

parable(s)

of king and servant, 806 n891

Paradise

as abode of unborn souls, 57 n19 account of, allegorization of, 69

n50
Adam and Eve in, 68-71, 77, 81
n97, 103 n4

allegorical conception of description
of, 80 n95

banquet for righteous to be held on judgment day, 939

bees of, honeycomb produced by, 424 created before world, 21 n76

created on third day, 18, 77, 82
n98

David in, 939-940

description of, 18, 19-20, 21 n77,
23 n97

in R. Joshua b. Levi, 23 n97

divisions of, 19-20

seven in number, 6, 19, 22 n91

earthly, 21 n77, 68

entering alive, 73 n67

Baruch, 1083 n42, 1093 n66

Bithiah, 73 n67, 132 n62, 481,
540 n226

Chileab, 19, 941

Ebed-melech, 73 n67, 132 n62

Eliezer, 73 n67, 132 n62, 241,
242 n301

Elijah, 73 n67, 122 n58, 132

n62, 999 n32, 1000 n34

Enoch, 73 n67, 122 n58, 131

n61, 132 n62

Hiram (architect), 966

Hiram (king of Tyre), 73 n67,
132 n62, 1105 n105

Ishmael, 248 n317

Jabez, 73 n67, 862 n30

Jonadab (the Rechabite), 73
n67

Jonah, 1035, 1035 n38

Joshua b. Levi, R., 22 n90, 73
n67, 132 n62

Messiah, 132 n62

Methuselah, 73 n67, 132 n62

Othniel, 861

Phinehas, 892 n25

Paradise (cont.)

entering alive (cont.)
 Serah, 73 n67, 132 n62, 391, 393 n295
 sons of Jonadab the Rechabite, 1090 n57 sons of Korah, 73 n67, 132 n62, 728 n590
 urshana (animal), 147, 148 n37
 extent of, 19
 forbidden food of, wheat, 73-74 n70 four streams in, 21 n79 (see also Paradise: rivers of) fragrance of, 22 n83, 268 n92, 1005 n54
 clinging to Jacob, 266
 herbs of, 248 n317
 leaves of, 1002
 pervading Cave of Machpelah whenever Jacob entered, 415 n423 gate of
 of carbuncle, 18 (see also precious stones) guarded by cherubim, 68
 Gehazi having no share in, 1029 (see also world to come: those having no share in) God's visit to pious in, 46 n194 halls of, three in number glass, for proselytes, 23 n97
 gold, for patriarchs and other biblical figures, 23 n97
 silver, for righteous of Israel, 23 n97 and hell, legends relating to, 22 n90
 ice of, 857 n11
 identified with heavenly Jerusalem, 21 n77 (see also Jerusalem: heavenly) inhabitants of, 22 n85
 walking on heads, 242 n301
 location of, 6, 21 n77, 22 n84, 999 n32
 in east, 10 n33
 near Jerusalem, 89 n109
 in north, 645, 646 n340
 on right side of God, 1
 in third heaven, 98 n137, 427 n432
 in west or northwest, 10 n33 Manasseh presiding over penitents in, 19
 and Moses
 Moses' tour of, 507-508

Paradise (cont.)

and Moses (cont.)
 Paradise shown to Moses by God, 814
 one of seven things created in beginning, 1
 portion of, assigned to women, 23 n97
 preexistence of, 21 n76, 82 n98
 as reward, 1
 rivers of, 70 n51 (see also Paradise: four streams in) Samael searching for Moses in, 836
 secret chamber of Messiah in, 23 n97 70 thrones made of precious stones in, 507
 Shamshiel as prince of, 507
 size of, 507
 spring of living water in, 507 tree of life in, 124
 in vision of Abraham, 200 n114
 women's, 940
 seven divisions of, 940
See also Adam: and Eve, in Paradise; Adam: and Paradise; heaven(s) Paralipomena of Jeremiah, 1071 n15
 Paran
 one of names of Sinai, 501 n113
 parasang
 unit of (linear) measurement, 33, 117, 1005 n53 (see also measures) parenesis
 and Midrash, viii
 parents
 failing to honor, as insult to God, 608 n226 honor due to
 as honor to God, 608 n226
 not to conflict with honor due to God, 654 n359 Parukh (angel)
 guarding books, 117 n53
 Parvaim, gold of
 crown made of, 18
 paschal lamb. See lamb: paschal
 paschal meal
 Moses and Aaron eating, in Egypt, 539
See also Passover Pashhur
 announcing birth of Jeremiah to father, 1070 n11
 elder from tribe of Asher, 696
Passim
 garment referred to as, 334 n43

Passim (cont.)

Hebrew name of Joseph's coat of many colors, 330 meaning of ("clefts"), 330
 significance of letters of, 330 (see also under individual letters) telling story of sale of Joseph, 330 Passover
 ceremonies of, purpose of, 535
 criticized by Haman, 1153
 date of 15 Nisan, 534
 eve of Hallel sung on, 264, 265, 540 n225
 storehouses of dew unlocked on, 264, 265
 first, 534-536
 first day of quantity of dew fixed for year, 268 n83
 first night of Abraham learning of Lot's captivity, 194
 and covenant of pieces, 202 n115
 herbs eaten on, 48
 important events happening on, 191 n76
 as night Haman erected cross for Mordecai, 1169-1172
 as night of miracles, 1047 n54, 1170, 1171 n160 Gideon gaining victory during, 872 lasting eight days in description of Haman, 1153, 1155 n112 laws concerning, communicated to elders by Moses, 535
 as memorable day of 1 Samuel 1:4, 888 n9
 in Messianic times, 543 n235 Sabbath preceding called Great Sabbath, 536 n206
 piyyut for, 557 n39
 sacrifice of, by Jacob, 265
 second, law concerning, 675
 second night of, as disturbed night, 1171 n160 seven days of, one of 70 holy days celebrated by Jews, 648 and three-day fast of Mordechai, 1166 n142 Passover lamb. See lamb: paschal Passover meal
 Hallel chanted during, 540 n225
 Pasusi
 identification of, 315 n292

Pasusi (cont.)

king of Sartan, slain by Jacob, 314

paternal descent

determining man's admission to tribe, 689-690

paths

12 in number, opening up for each tribe, one of ten miracles at Red Sea, 556

patriarchs

as authors of Eighteen

Benedictions, 1126

benedictions of, 777 n780

buried in Hebron, 98 n137

dying by kiss of God, 743 n639

graves of connected to burial site of Moses by underground passage, 832

on Mount Nebo, 832 n952

greater than Moses, 838 n961

in hall of gold in Paradise, 23 n97

Job and, 451-453

Messiah greater than, 790 n836

oath of God to, 813

observing laws subsequently revealed to Moses, 239 n275 praised for kindness, 740 n635 refusing to welcome righteous into

Paradise, 431 n444

special virtues of, 715 n543

as three pillars on which world rests, 728 n590, 1101 n93 tomb of (see also patriarchs: graves of)

Elijah taking Elkanah to, 1018

of God, seven in number, 968

Moses as seventh, 682

See also fathers; and under individual patriarchs

patristic literature

on Christian made in image of

God, 51 n8

See also Church Fathers

paws

sucking of, 41 n181

pe (letter)

creation of world through, 4

in Pasim, standing for Potiphar, 330

standing for

pesha ("transgression"), 4

podeh ("redeemer"), 4

in Zaphenath-paneah, standing for podeh ("redeemer"), 368

poter ("interpreter of dreams"), 368

pe (cont.)

See also alphabet; letters of alphabet

peace

greatness of, 1038 n4

greeting of, between Moses and

Jethro, 584

reigning on day of consecration of Tabernacle, 660

in seventh heaven, 6

window of, in first heaven, 503

peace offering. See offering: peace

peacock

on Solomon's throne, 968

pearl(s)

in artificial heavens made by

Hiram of Tyre, 1105

bringing owner sleep, 651

as crown at entrance of Paradise, 18

drops of holy oil turning into, 913

grains of manna appearing as, 571 n100, 650

in heavenly Temple, 816

presented by Pharaoh to chieftains of army, 552 n17

on Solomon's throne, 968

tears of God turning into, 1081 n39

thrones in Paradise made from, for scholars of Torah, 507 white, stone of tribe of Zebulun in breastplate of Aaron, 651

See also precious stones

pebbles of David

five in number, standing for God, three patriarchs, and Aaron, 916

Pedahzur

name, meaning of, 681 n424

peddlers

having permission to sell cosmetics to women in town, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122

Pekah (son of Tabeel; king of northern kingdom), 1051 n66

conquered by king of Assyria, 1044

king of Samaria, 1048

warfare of, against Ahaz, 1044

Pelatiah, 1073 n21

remonstrating with

Nebuchadnezzar about cruelty to Jews, 1067 n8

Peleg (son of Eber)

days of, families of earth divided in, 446

Peleg (cont.)

division of earth during life of, 157, 158 n69

Peleth

name, meaning of ("miracle"), 727

Pelethites

Benaiah as chief of, 980 n95

Peliah

book of Kabbalah authored by Elkanah, 1018

Pelilah

marriage of, to Terah, 243

penance

of Reuben, 435

Peneme (angel), 137 n9

pen for tablets of Sinai

created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78 (see also under creation: sixth day)

Peninnah

children of

death of children of, 890

eight lost, 891 n22

ten in number, 891 n22

and Hannah, conflict between, 887

second wife of Elkanah, 887

taunting words of, 888 n7

Penitence

Ten Days of

granted to Israel as reward for tithes of Jacob, 280 n144

from New Year to Day of Atonement, 903 n72

See also penance; repentance

penitents

in fifth compartment of Eden, 19

See also penance; penitence; repentance

Pentalpha

engraved on ring given to Solomon by Michael, 963

five A's interlaced, 964 n54

Pentateuch

one of three parts of Torah, 592 (see also Prophets; Hagiographa)

written down, 633

Pentecost (Feast of Weeks)

celebrated by Jacob on 15th of third month, 393 n301

connected with sacrifice of Noah, 152 n52

criticized by Haman, 1153

day of sacrifices of Cain and Abel, 105 n11

Festival of Revelation, 128 n60

Pentecost (cont.)

- lasting two days in description of Haman, 1153, 1155 n112
- one of 70 holy days celebrated by Jews, 648
- referred to as "the day," 889 n9
- See also under date*

Pentophoe

- wife of Pharaoh's chief cook, in Philo, 355 n111

Penuel

- name given by Jacob to place of encounter with angels, 300 people. See Israel (nation; people)/Israelites

Peor (god of Moabites), 778

- worship of, 779 n786
- consisting in baring body, 778
- Israel becoming subject to four kingdoms through, 779 n786

Peor (place)

- also called Bamot-baal, 776 n775
- another name for Haron, 623
- site of great disaster to befall Israel, 775
- site of Israel's sin with daughters of Moab and punishment, 775

Perez

- breaking through mother's womb, 347 n92
- Messiah as descendant of, 347 n92
- name
  - as allusion to Messiah, 347 n92
  - meaning of ("mighty"), 345
- one of twin sons of Tamar, 345
- and Zerah
  - sent out as spies by Joshua, 345
  - sons of Judah, as spies, 844 n10
  - twin sons of Tamar, 345

perfect ones

- in fourth division of Paradise, 19

perfume(s)

- from Paradise, brought to wilderness by clouds, 655 n365
- on Solomon's throne, 969
- wood growing in Jerusalem having flavor of cinnamon to be used as, 1085 n45

See also fragrance

Perizzites

- having right of habitation, 193

perjury

- death as punishment for, 948 n11, 1067 n6
- not a capital crime, 1067 n6

perjury (cont.)

- one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)

persecution

- of Hadrian, Jews during, 255 n24
- of Jews in time of Ben Sira, 1084 n42

Persia

- identified with Chaldea, 458 n22
- king of, and Benaiah, 978-979
- and Media
  - allied kings of, sending letter to Joshua, 850-851
- seven princes of, consulted by Ahasuerus (Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, Memucan), 1136

Persian custom

- compelling excessive drinking of wine at banquet, 1133

Persian ideas

- fire of Rigny, 615 n247
- legend of Adam taking 30 kinds of trees from Paradise, 81 n96
- legend of different kinds of fires in hell, 15 n60
- redeemer Saoshyant to spring up from seed of Zarathustra, 115 n47
- sources using legend of man and lost purse, 630 n290

Persian language

- ascribed to Hamitic system of writing, 158 n72
- used by Hamites, 158 n72

Persian law

- that married women should not show faces to any man but husband, 1137 n35

Persian princes

- refusing to participate in desecration of holy vessels, 1138 n42

Persians

- descended from Japheth, 1144 n68
- ox of, 88 n108
- praised for modesty, 284 n164
- view of noxious animals of, 45 n191

pestilence

- as plague of Egypt, 523, 525
- window of, in first heaven, 503

Peter legend, Jewish

- of Peter sitting on stone from which Ezekiel used to deliver prophecies, 1101 n93

Pethahiah (another name of Mordecai), 1141 n62

Pethor (Petor; city)

- founded by son of Kemuel, 244 n315

real name of Aram-naharaim, 243

Pethuel (father of Joel)

name, meaning of, 992 n56

Petor (son of Aram son of Kemuel), 243

Phadihel (angel)

- sent to Eluma to announce conception and birth of Samson, 879 n111

Phanuel (archangel), 16 n65

Pharaoh

- accompanying Israelites in Exodus, 546

afflicted with

- boils, 497
- leprosy, 497, 499 n101
- age of, at death, 177 years, 427
- Amalek as counselor of, 471 n21
- anger of, at advisors who advised against letting Israelites go, 542 n230, 546

appointing sons of Jacob as chief shepherds, 398 n330 attempting to discover birth of male children, 472 n23 attempt to poison P., 360, 361, 361 n143 bathing in blood of slaughtered Israelite children, 497 battle of, with God, 558-559 becoming lame when trying to ascend Solomon's throne, 1060, 1062 n123

chief butler of (Mirod), recommending Joseph as interpreter, 363

claiming to be god, 1103-1104 n100, 1105 n105

as cosmocrator, 162 n82, 517-518, 552 n15, 1155 n113 (see also cosmocrator)

cunning of, 466-468

and death of firstborn

P. escaping plague of death of firstborn, 540 n222

P. fearing death as firstborn, 539-540

decreeing Israelites not permitted to rest on Sabbath, 520

doom of, caused by eight grievous sins, 1048 n60

dreams of, 362-364

cattle symbolizing years of abundance or famine, 362

Pharaoh (cont.)dreams of (cont.)

ears of corn symbolizing years of abundance or famine, 362

about old man with balance, 470

P. summoning wise men to interpret dreams, 362

edict of, duration of, 480 n56

eight sins of (neglect of justice, idolatry, incest, bloodshed, blasphemy, arrogance, slander, obscenity), 562 n54 also committed by inhabitants of sinful cities, builders of Tower of Babel, Sennacherib, and Nebuchadnezzar, 562 n54

and Exodus

P. ordering magnates to ask pardon of Israelites, 540

of Exodus

identification of, 499 n104

falling dead when Moses tells

Name of God, 520 n155

fate of, 562 n54

drowning with army, 562 n54

only Egyptian not drowned in Red Sea, 560, 562 n54

first, 192

names ascribed to, 193 n81

first to be attacked by frogs, 529 n181 flung from throne at roaring of Judah, 387

four advisors of (Jethro, Balaam, Job, Reuel), 471 n21, 497 hardening heart, 528, 529 n178, 530

caused by God, 531

having feast for birth of son, 361 and Hebrews

P. pursuing Hebrews in Exodus, 548-553

P. releasing Hebrews from bondage, 539

P. riding swiftest horse in pursuit of Hebrews, 558

P. trying to keep Hebrews from increasing, 466-467 plan of P. against Hebrews, 466 and Jacob

P. impressed by J., 398 n330

and Joseph

J. before P., 364-367

J. interpreting dreams of P., 365-367

Pharaoh (cont.)and Joseph (cont.)

J. prophesying birth and death of P.'s sons, 365 opposition of P.'s officials to J., 366, 367 n181

P. as one of two wicked men J. associated with, 579

P. persecuting Hebrews not same as P. at time of Joseph, 474 n29

P. setting J. over land, 366 keeping guard at portals of hell, 560, 562 n54

king of Nineveh, 414 n413, 560

liberated from Assyrians by Hezekiah, 1049

as magus, 528 n175

mortally wounded on trip to Goshen, 497-498

and Moses (see also under Moses: in Egypt)

P. going to M. to plead for end of plagues, 539

name, meaning of, 192-193

negative view of, 217 n192

never dying, 560

not heeding warning of plague of hail, 531

one of four kings claiming to be gods, 1039 n16

order of all midwives to be Egyptian, 472

interpreters to be executed, 363 order rescinded, 364

Israelites not to sleep in own homes, 467

male children of Hebrews to be killed, 469

male children to be drowned, order rescinded, 478

palace of, description of, 518

participating in building, 467, 468 n7

punishment of

compared with punishment of Egyptians, 191 n76

concerning Sarah, 191 n75, 216 and Sarah, 189, 191 n80

son born to, 361

and story of Rakyon, 192 (see also Rakyon) suffering death by fire, 1048 n60 summoning wise men, 483

to interpret dreams, 362

three advisors of (Balaam, Jethro, Job), 497

Pharaoh (cont.)

throne of customs pertaining to steps of, 364

having 70 steps, 364 precious stones and metals of, 364

at time of Exodus as ruler of world, 162 n82 (see also Pharaoh: as cosmocrator)

at time of Joseph had made acquaintance of Isaac, 396 n327

as ruler of world, 162 n82 (see also Pharaoh: as cosmocrator)

as title of all Egyptian kings, 422 n429 tortured by Gabriel for 50 days, 560 troops of, stricken with blindness and dumbness, 487 trying to restore health by murdering Israelite children, 497 withholding straw from brick making of Israelites, 520

Pharisees

permitting intercourse with heathen women, 781

tradition of belonging to tribe of Simeon, 410 n387

Pheila (second daughter of Kenaz), 859

Phenech

prince for descendants of Japheth, 160

Phicol (captain of Abimelech's host) at circumcision of Isaac, 218

Philistines

Abraham among, 216-218

battle of Samuel against, one of three occasions for war of confusion, 896 n42 breaking covenant made with Abraham, 260 character of, 261

Dagon as god of, 892

as enemies of Kenaz, 859 n15 and Isaac

covenant between, 263 n66, 293

Philistines envious of I.'s wealth, 260 punishment of Philistines for unkindness to I., 261 trees of Philistines failing to yield fruit when I. leaves, 261

Philistines (cont.)and Isaac (cont.)

- wells of Philistines running dry when I. leaves, 261
- land of, as part of Holy Land, 262 n53
- plague of mice on, 894 n34
- punishment of, 260
  - being smitten in secret parts, 894 n34
- seeking alliance with Abraham, 222-223
- struck with disease, 894 n34
- victory of, over Ephraimites at Gath, 547
- war with, blamed on sins of sons of Eli, 891-892
- wickedness of, 263 n67

Philo

on Abraham

- A. mourning for Sarah, 236 n259
- changing of names of Abram and Sarai, 203 n122
- conjugal relations of A. with Hagar, 203 n120
- faith of A., 199 n110
- hospitality of A., 206 n140
- reaction of A. to announcement of Isaac's conception, 207 n151
- warriors of A., 197 n93

on Adam

- A. naming living creatures, 43 n190

A. partly or wholly created by angels, 49 n3

wisdom of A., 62 n29

on Akedah, 228 n230, 233 n255

on annihilation of Sihon's army, 753 n681

on Balaam

- B. attempting to influence God, 775 n772

insincerity of B., 769 n752

Benjamin, name of, 319 n308

on birds and fishes, relationship between, 21 n128

on body being formed from fire, water, air, and earth, 608 n224

on Cain and Abel, 105 n12, 105 n16

on Canaan and Noah, 155 n61

on circumcision, 249 n318

on conditions before fall, 92 n113

on conflagration of world, 116 n53

Philo (cont.)

on creation

- of heavenly bodies, 25 n99
- order of, 7-8 n17
- on cursing of serpent, 78 n82
- on divine voice at Sinai, 604 n213
- division of commandments in, 619 n258
- on double account of creation of man, 67 n42
- on effects of holy oil, 917 n35
- on fishes, 43 n190
- on God of three patriarchs, 319 n304
- Hebrew midwives, names of, 470 n17

ideas of

- human body consisting of four elements, 54 n15
- ideal man, 60 n22
- man as microcosm, 49 n4
- man created by lower powers, not by God, 52 n12
- man not made by hand, 49 n3
- man on boundary between mortal and immortal, 49 n6
- nothing but good emanates from God, 3 n9
- sinner regarded as dead while alive, 78 n72
- identifying Israel with Logos, 301 n253
- on identity of angels with souls, 16 n63
- on importance of seven, 8 n21
- on intelligence of heavenly bodies, 28 n112
- on Isaac and character of sons, 267 n75
- on Isaac's piety, 262 n62
- on Israel, meaning of name, 301 n253
- on Jacob's ladder, 279 n134
- on Jacob suspecting that Joseph was in Egypt, 372 n198
- on Joseph
  - angel meeting J. in wilderness, 334 n29
  - frugality of J.'s Sabbath meal, 381 n250
  - J.'s dream, 331 n17
  - J.'s kindness and wisdom, 361 n142
  - Pharaoh's perceptions about J., 366 n171
  - search of J.'s brothers' sacks, 383 n256
- on legend that Cain never died, 113 n44

Philo (cont.)

- on length of a man's life, 140 n19
- on manna, 574 n113

on Moses

- blessings of M., 824 n920
- daughter of Pharaoh adopting M., 479 n48
- devotion of M. to nation and attempts to alleviate its suffering, 488 n70
- education of M., 484 n67
- M.'s self-discipline, 484 n68
- M.'s slowness of speech, 514 n140
- name of, 481 n59
- P. describing M. as high priest, 658 n372
- precocity of M., 481 n64
- question of whether or not M. died, 832 n951
- on music of spheres, 26 n102
- on night, 214 n170
- on Noah, 145 n28
  - naming of, 134 n4
- on oath taken by God, 232 n243
- on pillar of salt, 215 n180
- on place of residence of angels, 16 n63
- on plants, 21 n74
- presupposing identification of Midianites with Moabites, 793 n842
- on primordial light, 8 n19, 85 n104
- on punishment
  - of Egyptians for not protesting Pharaoh's desire for Sarah, 191 n75
  - of Sodomites, 215 n179
- on raven, 149 n46
- on revelation of Torah in wilderness, 595-596 n185
- on salamander, 40 n157
- on Samuel as greatest of kings and prophets, 897 n43
- on Sarah
  - beauty of, 191 n73
  - praying to God, 191 n73
- on seduction of Israel to idolatry and unchastity, 778 n785
- on seven branches of candlestick representing seven planets, 646 n339
- on significance of seven, 683 n430
- on Simeon
  - P. blaming S. for throwing Joseph into pit, 334 n41
- on smoking furnace, 200 n114

Philo (cont.)

- on Sodom, 210 n155
- on sons of Jacob, names of, 434 n4
- on souls of pious, 612 n241
- on spread of famine, 371-372 n197
- symbolic interpretation of priestly garments in, 650-651 n353
- on Tamar
  - P. giving idealized picture of T., 346 n82
- on time, origin of, 7 n14
- translating Elohim as "God's goodness," 3 n6

Phineas. See Phinehas

Phinehas (prophet)

- identified with Phinehas son of Eleazar the priest, 860 n19

Phinehas (son of Eleazar)

- as angel of God mentioned in Judg. 2:1, 997 n4
- attempting to punish Zimri and Cozbi, 780
- attempting to reconcile God and Israel, 782, 783
- attempting to ward off plague by slaying sinners, 781 n792
- and Balaam
  - P. flying after B., 796 n853
  - P. killing B., 796 n855
- blamed for not preventing war between Jephthah and Ephraimites, 877 n109
- and Caleb
  - accompanied on spy mission by two demons, husbands of she-devils Lilith and Mahlah, 843 (see also Lilith)
  - appearance of, transformed by demons, 843
  - conquering Jazer, 752
  - sent as spies to Jazer, 752
- as commander-in-chief of army, 798 n860
- death and burial of, 885 n140
- debating with Moses and pious men about Zimri, 781
- decree of, against wine of Gentiles, 784 n804
- descendant of Joseph and Jethro, 783, 794
- and Eleazar
  - E. passing on to P. applications of Holy Names, 615
- Eli as successor of, 891, 892 n25
- entering Paradise alive, 892 n25 (see also Paradise: entering alive)

Phinehas (cont.)

- forbidding drinking wine of heathens, 798
- as forerunner of Messiah, 783
- grandson of Aaron, 783
- grandson of Elisheba, 661
- held responsible for the many who died in war with Benjaminites, 883-884 n134
- holy spirit departing from, 876
- identified with Elijah, 783, 860 n19, 885 n140, 892 n25, 993, 996 n3, 1000 n35
- image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
- and Jabez, prophets summoned by Kenaz, 859
- as Levite, slaying prince of tribe of Simeon and mistress, 821
- as messenger of God to Israel after death of Joshua, 861 n22
- one of 77 pious men in Israel, 629 n287 (see also under pious: men)
- one of ten just men in Israel, 628
- peace as reward for zeal of, 784 n804
- prayer of, concerning Benjaminites, 880-881
- as priest
  - P. appointed priest as reward, 783
  - P. as high priest
    - P. losing high-priestly dignity, 891
    - P. taking into battle gold plate of mitre of high priest, 794
    - rivalry of, with Jephthah, 876
  - P. becoming priest at same time as father and grandfather, 784 n802
  - P. granted everlasting priesthood, 783
  - P. summoned by Kenaz, 859
- rewarded, 782-784
- sent to mountain of Danabene at age of 120 years, 882
- slaying Cozbi, 794
- as spy, chosen by Joshua, 843
- sword of, legends concerning, 922 n59
- 12 miracles performed for, 781
- and war against Midian, 794
- zeal for God of, 715 n543, 779-782

Phinehas (son of Eli)

- as high priest, 891
- as righteous man slain by Philistines, 223

Phinehas-Elijah

- entering Paradise alive, 885 n140
- exercising high-priestly functions for several centuries, 892 n25

Phoenician language

- used by Hamites, 158 n72

Phoenicians

- learning art of writing from Hebrews, 484 n67
- teaching art of writing to Greeks, 484 n67

phoenix

- on chariot of sun, 127 n60
- color and size of, 34
- dew as food of, 34
- excrement of, 34
- as flying creature, 34
- form of
  - having feet and tails of lion, 34
  - having heads of crocodile, 34
- in fourth heaven, 125
- as guardian of terrestrial sphere, 34
- manna as food of, 34
- as most wonderful of birds, 34
- name of, 39 n151
- refusing to eat fruit of tree of knowledge, 34
- and resurrection of dead, 39-40 n150
- rewarded with eternal life, 34
- in seventh heaven, 125
- See also malham; milham*

phylacteries, 554

- command concerning, given to descendants of Abraham, 196
- of God, 632 n299
- Michal fulfilling commandment of, 940
- of Mordecai, 1178 n189
- not worn on Sabbath, 690
- significance of, 196
- tanning of hides for, 546
- physiognomy, book about
  - composed by Solomon, 977 n93

pig

- associated with wine, 153, 155 n58

pigeon

- sacrificed by Abraham, 198
- and sacrifice of Noah, 150

Pi-hahiroth

- Israelites turning back to, 549
- place where Joseph hid one-third of wealth, 549
- site of sanctuary of Baal-zephon, 549
- See also* Pithom (city)

pilgrimage

life of pious conceived as, 328 n1

pilgrimage festivals

abolished by Jeroboam, 985 n17

priest raising curtain of Holy of Holies on, 644

three times a year, 766

See also Passover; Pentecost; Tabernacles, Feast of

pillar(s)

of brick, made by descendants of Seth, 116

of cloud, 48

God appearing in, 612 n242, 700-701

guiding Israelites in wilderness, 542

over holy ark, 686

responding to word of Moses, 686

weapon of God against Pharaoh, 559

of cloud and fire

created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day)

one of six blessings of generation of wilderness, 86 n105

of earth, seven in number, 9 n28

(variously Aaron, Abraham, Adam, David, Enoch, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Noah, Solomon) personified as seven saints, 9 n28

of fire, 48

guiding Israelites in wilderness, 542

identified with angel, 555 n35
lighting way for Sons of Moses, 1088

on mountain of Abraham's sacrifice, 227

at tomb of Ezekiel, 1094-1095
weapon of God against Pharaoh, 559

of heavenly Temple, made from red fire, 503

made by descendants of Seth, 116 of Paradise, identical to celestial ladder of Konen, 69 n49

patriarchs as, 1101 n93

preceding Israelites leveling mountains, 750 n662

of salt, Lot's wife turned into, 213, 215 n180

set up by Jacob at Bethel, 316, 318 of smoke, between Paradise and gate of heaven, 68

pillar(s) (cont.)

of stone, made by descendants of Seth, 116

supporting world (Hananiah, Mishael, Azariah), 728 n590, 1099

12 memorials, erected by Moses on Mount Sinai, 598

pious

Abel as type of, 109 n31

actions of, made known while in womb, 254 n13

and blessing

pious as blessing for world, 395

pious bringing blessing to those they visit, 291 n207

bodies of

flies not able to approach, 1028, 1028 n12

fragrance emanating from live and dead bodies of, 268 n92, 548 n2, 1028, 1028 n12

God being solicitous about, 429 not showing signs of decay, 1095 n73

remaining intact one year after death, 807

canopy over heads of, made from hide of Leviathan, 30 n123

death of, 58 n20

as atoning, 664 n386

God communicating day of, 739

God glorified by, 664 n385

as great a calamity as destruction of Temple, 1087 n53

pious met by Michael and Gabriel at death, 430 n444

pious praising God when dead, 23 n97 (see also praise)

pious seeing God after death, 632 n296 radiance of glory seen on pious, at time of death, 635 n309

when dead

lacking faculty of speech, 430 n444

not able to intercede for living sinners, 871 n91

digging wells for water, 263 n68

distinguished from wicked by odor of dead bones, 339 n58 division of, into classes, 22 n85, 23 n97

efficaciousness of prayer of, 252

among Egyptians
celebrating Passover with Israelites, 544 n246

pious (cont.)

among Egyptians (cont.)

proclaiming belief in true God, 544 n246

feeling like strangers in this world, 236 n260

food for

Behemoth as, 33, 33 n143

manna as, 573 n102, 574 n108

Ziz as, in world to come, 28-29

of future generations merits of, Israel redeemed on account of, 499 (see also merits)

God counting Self among, 396 n321

God descending into hell to save, 508 n118

greater than angels, 17 n66

grieving over Israel's suffering, 23 n97

happiness of

often deferred, 282

pious enjoying happiness during last years of life, 399, 401 n344

hindered by Satan, 327

of Israel

worshiping golden calves, 1038 n4

law of God producing, 47-48

life of, conceived as pilgrimage, 328 n1

loath to have last rest among wicked, 401 n345

and manna

manna as food of pious in world to come, 573 n102, 574 n108

manna ground for, in third heaven, 570

pious finding manna at door of tent, 573 n102

pious to drink in hereafter from rivers formed by melted manna, 571

mark set on foreheads of, by angel, 1075 n26

as masters of their hearts (passions), 273 n109

men

custom of Amorites to delay burial of, 706 n509

each cultivating special virtue, 714

pious (cont.)

men (cont.)

enumerations of four addressing unbecoming words to God (Moses,

David, Habakkuk,

Jeremiah), 628 n284

five for sake of whose merits

Israel to be redeemed

(Aaron, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses), 502

five pious from first to last (Abraham, Moses, Aaron,

Hezekiah, Ezra), 1044 n39

(see also wicked men:

wicked from first to last) six endowed with spiritual gifts, descendants of Ruth (David, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishaël, Azariah, Messiah),

866 n61

seven erecting altars, 771 (see also altars: erected by seven

pious men)

seven in world (Adam, Noah,

Enoch, Abraham, Isaac,

Jacob, Levi), 682, 968

seven preceding Abraham

(Adam, Enoch, Mahalalel, Noah, Shem, Seth, Enosh),

116-117 n53, 256 n34

12 in time of Noah, 160, 161

n76

77 in Israel (70 members of Sanhedrin, Aaron, Aaron's

four sons, Caleb, Phineas),

629 n287

honor of, prized by God, 767

and Jeremiah and Baruch commanded to leave Jerusalem,

1076 n28

merits of (see also merits)

protecting other men buried

with, 706-707 n509

moon as symbol of, 25 n100

Moses greater than all, 837-839

myrtle symbolic of, 1141

in mystic literature, 46 n194

names of, received from God, 203

n122

never relying on promises of earthly good, 296

number of, in generations and

world, 211 n164

and Paradise

pious led into Paradise by Michael and Gabriel, 430

n444

pious (cont.)

pilgrimages of pious continuing pilgrimages

under Jeroboam, 985 n17

praise of God of, 850 n43 praying to God for redemption, 23

n97

punished for not having guided wicked back to righteousness, 1075 n26

purified in river of fire, 97 n134

rejuvenation of, 39 n150

riches of Joseph reserved for, 397

souls of

creation of, 7 n15

God consulting with, 57 n19

in immediate proximity of God, 611

in loftiest places, 612 n241

reading from Torah scroll copied

by Moses, 812

as sacrifices in heavenly Temple,

5

in seventh heaven, 6

standing before God like angels,

429-430

transformed into angels, 68, 122

n58

studying Torah under tree of life,

22 n85

suffering of

pious attributing suffering to

sins, 372 n198

pious not allowed to suffer more than three days, 373, 1169

n153

pious suffering first, then happy,

399

taking great care not to squander possessions, 300 n247

thrones of, 508 n118

in Paradise, made from precious

stones, 507

to dwell in palace of Hiram of Tyre

in future, 1105

treasures of ocean stored in Sea of Chaifa for, 822

at well, 241 n288

wine preserved for, 21 n79

wishing to prove piety under temptations, 352 n107

women

not included in curse pronounced on Eve, 476

in world to come

future world set apart for pious,

327

light of first day appearing to

pious, 5

pious (cont.)

in world to come (cont.)

manna as food of pious, 573

n102, 574 n108

pious given wine, 268 n92

reward of pious postponed for future world, 21 n77

310 worlds prepared for pious,

807

tree of life preserved for pious,

81 n96

Ziz as food for pious, 28-29

See also righteous

Pirathon (king of Hazor)

slain by Jacob, 314

Pirathon (place), 315 n292

Pisces (Fishes) (sign of Zodiac) answering Haman that Jews would be swallowed up, 1151

Pisgah, Mount

Balak taking Balaam to top of, 774

death of Moses on, 774

Moses looking at Holy Land from, 814

Moses' vision on one of three outstanding moments in life of M., 815

n902

place of misfortune for Israel, 774

See also Abarim, Mount; Hor,

Mount; Nebo, Mount

Pishon River

flowing from Paradise, 559 identified with Nile, 70 n51

sinner burned at, 856

pitch

rivers of, in hell, 13

Pithom (city)

earlier name of Pi-hahiroth, 549 evidence of ancient king participating in public building project, 167

fortification of, 466-467

piyyut

for Great Sabbath, 557 n39

Place, the

as name of God, 279 n130

See also God: names and titles of plague(s)

against Egypt

first announced by Moses, 526

duration of, one week, 526

as punishment for worship of Nile, 528 n176

second, frogs, 523-525, 527

third

gnats, 529 n183

lice, 529 n183

plagues (cont.)against Egypt (cont.)

fourth

killing children of Egyptians, 534 n188, 534 n190as punishment for Egyptians trying to force Israelites to amalgamate with other nations, 530wild animals, 529-530, 533-534 n188

fifth killing livestock of Egyptians, 534 n190

pestilence, 530

sixth, boils, 530

seventh, hail, 531

eighth, locusts, 532

ninth, darkness, 532-533

tenth destruction of Egyptian idols

during, 537-538executed by God Himself, 537, 538 n213Israelites sleeping during, 538
n216night of, one of four nights inscribed in Book of Memorial, 541slaying of firstborn, 533, 536-538taking place exactly at midnight, 537, 538 n213beginning on 1 Shevat, 528
n174

brought by

Aaron, 526-529

Moses, 529-534

Moses and Aaron together, 530connection with ten words of creation, 525 n170

divided into four parts, 523

duration of, 528 n174

one week, 528 n174

three weeks, 528 n174

one year, 526

ending on 15 Nisan, 528 n174

names of, engraved on rod of Moses, 554preceded by warning period,
528 n176

of one week, 528 n174

of three weeks, 526, 528
n174

at Red Sea, 557 n36, 559

number of, 557 n36

ten in number, 525

plagues (cont.)in Palestine during visit of spies,
708 n511

upon Philistines, 892

as punishment

for adultery, 607

for census-taking, 936

for lack of enthusiasm for building Temple, 937 n123, 937
n124

of Zimri, 782 n798

See also Egypt; Exodus

planets

corresponding to seven branches of candlestick, 639

each having own angel, 131 n61

function of, 131 n61

See also heavenly bodies; see also under names of individual *planets*plant-man. See Adne Sadeh; man of mountain

plants

Adam plant deadly to anyone who comes near, 289 n189Adam praying to God to give food
to, 69

created on third day, 18, 50 n7

hymns of praise of, 44 (see also
praise)

as remedies for disease, 157

See also herbs; medicine; trees

Plato

described as Moses speaking in Attic Greek, 484 n67receiving wisdom from Jeremiah and other Jewish sages, 159
n75

Platonic ideas

anamnesia, 58 n20

Pleiades

Istehar in, 136

stealing two stars from Bear, 149
n40

two stars removed from, 147

plenitude

window of, in first heaven, 503

poison

used by Bethuel on Eliezer, 240

politeness, rule of, 701

polypsychism, 56 n18

pomegranates

golden, on Solomon's throne, 968

poor

considered as dead, 517 n142 (see
also blind; leprous; childless)kindness to, causing one to retain Adam's features, 1104 n104poor (cont.)legends about, and Elijah and R.
Joshua b. Levi, 1014studying Bible and Mishnah, in seventh compartment of Eden, 19

treatment of, in Sodom, 209

See also poverty

portals

fire, earthquake, storm, hail, 600

Posiel (angel)

in charge of sixth division of hell,
884 n138

possessions

acquired by Jacob outside Holy Land, 304, 306 n274

Potiphar

called Potiphera, 350, 351 n100

chief baker of accused of dereliction of duty, 360

executed, 361

guilty of gross negligence, 361
n143

chief butler and chief baker of condemned to death, 360

having dream, 360

in prison for ten years, 360

chief butler of

accused of dereliction of duty, 360failing to remember to intercede for Joseph, 362guilt of, not as great as that of chief baker, 361 n143

restored to butlership, 361

as eunuch, chief, 350, 351 n101

made eunuch as punishment for evil intentions toward Joseph, 351 n101

and Joseph

enmity of P. to J., 411 n400

P. blessed on account of J., 1027
n6P. buying J. from Medanites, 339

P. interrogating J., 350

P. interrogating shopkeeper about J., 349P. as one of two wicked men J.
associated with, 579P. put in prison for life by J., 351 n101

P. putting J. in prison, 350

wife of P., and J., 328, 349

Potiphera

Joseph's father-in-law, 351 n100

Potiphar identified with, 351 n100

potter

God compared to, 444

poverty

as most precious gift of God to Israel, 1012 n76 (see also gifts)

window of, in first heaven, 503
worse than pain, 453

See also poor

praise

David singing song of, 755

hymns of

of all creation, 44-45

in Christian legends, 46 n194

Methuselah composing parables of, 131

song of, at Red Sea

composed by Moses and sung by Israel, 750 n663

See also Holy, holy, holy

prayer(s)

of Abimelech for Abraham, 217

of Abraham in Egypt, 189-190

afternoon, instituted by Isaac, 1128 n58

and alms and repentance

warding off evil, 1052 n75

daily (see prayers, Jewish)

of dead, 1013 n84

efficaciousness of, 253 n10

Elijah imparting to R. Jose regulations concerning, 1012 n76 of Hagar to God and idols, 220

having power to ward off half of punishment decreed by God, 730 n599 of Isaac on Mount Moriah, accompanied by sacrifice, 253 n8 of Ishmael, 220

of Michael and Abraham, 247

of Mordecai, 1160, 1161 n123, 1161 n124

of Moses

concerning successor, 787-788

for Israel, 628, 628 n284

saving only two of Aaron's sons, 730 n599

during war of Joshua against Amalek, 581

in wilderness, 551

of pious, efficaciousness of, 252

place of Isaac's, 242 n300

and repentance

to bring about Messianic

redemption of Israel, 1013 n84

before retiring at night, 401 n356

prayer(s) (cont.)

of Sarah in Egypt, 190

superiority of, to sacrifices, 888 n5

taking place of sacrifice, 200 n111

taught by Abraham, 224 n224

of thanks after eating manna, 573

window of, in first heaven, 503

See also offering; prayers, Jewish; sacrifice

Prayer of Joseph (lost pseudepigraphic work), 256 n35 account of Jacob's encounter with angel in, 306 n273

Prayer of Manasseh, 1058 n107

prayers, Jewish

Abraham's name mentioned in blessings, 187

Adonai Elohe Yisrael, composed by Hezekiah, 1128 n58

Akedah referred to, in Zikronot in Musaf for New Year, 228 n229

Alenu, composed by Joshua, 853 n50, 1079, 1128 n58

Al Ken Nekavveh Lekha, composed by Joshua, 1128 n58

Amidah

first benediction of, 1161 n123

Moses as author of, 1128 n58

and prayer of Mordecai, 1160, 1161 n124

daily

afternoon, instituted by Isaac, 1128 n58

evening, instituted by Jacob, 1128 n58 instituted by Moses, 1128 n58 instituted by patriarchs, 1128 n58

morning, instituted by

Abraham, 1128 n58

quorum of ten required for, 919 n50

100 benedictions of, instituted by David, 937 n123

doxologies of angels, formulas in, 17 n70 expression "God, shield of David" used in benediction after reading Haftarah, 931 n94

Grace after Meals, 370 n195, 853 n50 (see also Grace after Meals) benediction added to, by David, 1128 n58

composed by Moses, 1128 n58

and prayer of Abraham, 224 n224

prayers, Jewish (cont.)

Hallel, sung on eve of Passover, 264 (see also Hallel; Passover)

Hashkivenu, 1128 n58

Havdalah, recited at end of Sabbath, 724 n573

Hodu psalm (Psalm 136)

recited by Mordecai, 1176 n172

Kedushah, recited by Israel only on Sabbath, 1043 n36

Kiddush

benedictions for, formulated by men of Great Synagogue, 1128 n58

at midnight

first found in mystic literature of Middle Ages, 929 n83

Minhah service (see also Minhah service)

ḥayyot taking place of four archangels in, 687 n440

introduced by Isaac, 240

as most acceptable to God, 998 n18

to be said at three o'clock in afternoon, 240

Musaf service of New Moon celebration, 1010

Seliḥah and prayer of Jonah, 1033 n32

Shema (see also Shema)

recited by Israelites upon awakening and retiring, 775

recited by Jacob when Joseph embraced him, 394

Shokhen Ad, composed by Isaac, 1128 n58

Yisṭabbah, composed by

Solomon, 1128 n58

Yotzer (daily morning prayer), 2 n6 instituted by Abraham, 1128 n58

See also Amidah; Eighteen Benedictions

precious stones

on altar of celestial heaven, graven with name of Messiah, 1 book about, composed by Solomon, 977 n93

on breastplate of Aaron, 342, 650 engraved with names of patriarchs and 12 tribes, 650

qualities of, 651-653

12 in number, 650

on breastplate of high priest colors of, used on four standards, 685-686

precious stones (cont.)

- on breastplate of high priest (cont.)
  - indicating guilt, 898, 902 n57
  - making Urim and Thummim
  - perform functions, 652
  - oracular importance of, 652

in bridal chamber of Adam and Eve, 66 engraved with names of 12 tribes, 856

on ephod of Aaron

- engraved with names of six tribes, 650

on ephod of Pharaoh, 364
generative power of, 647 n342
from Havilah

- ability of, to restore sight, 856
- idols of Amorites made from, 856

intended for Temple

- discovered by scribe Hilkiah and delivered to angel Shamshiel, 1091

around neck of Abraham, healing power of, 237

presented by Pharaoh to chieftains of army, 552 n17

raining down with manna, 650
as seat of Nimrod on his throne, 162

on 70 thrones in Paradise, 507

on Solomon's throne, 968

in story of R. Hanina, 114-115
for Tabernacle

- etched by clouds from river Pishon, 655 n365

- one of 13 materials for construction, 640 (see also under Tabernacle)

tears of Michael becoming, 245 thrones made from, for pious, 507

to be set in ephod and in breastplate, 640

to be used in Messianic time, 1013 n90

to take place of sun in Messianic time, 1011-1012 used to make idols, 117

on wheel of sun, 237

See also jewel(s); jewelry; and under individual stones

predestination

- of intellectual and other traits of man, 57 n20

pride

- causing impurity, 1016 n95
- mitre of Aaron atoning for, 650

pride (cont.)

- one of eight grievous sins of Sennacherib, 1048 n60
- one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)
- unbecoming to women, 870 n75

priest(s)

- Aaron and sons consecrated as, on 23 Adar, 657

anointed

- Aaron and sons and Zadok as only ones, 658 n371
- burned at stake at destruction of Temple, 80,000 in number, 1107 n108

consecration of, 657-658

- Aaron and sons, on 23 Adar, 657

- of Egypt, favorable position of, 398

- gifts of, received by Aaron on first day of dedication of Tabernacle, 673

- Israel as kingdom of, 598 n191
- of justice, Messiah as, 100 n142

- large number killed by Nebuzaradan, 1078 n30

and Levites, institution of

- one of six gifts to Israel from God, 584 (see also gifts)
- priests taking place of Levites as bearers of ark, 843

- one of three divisions of Israel, 592

- permitted to remain in possession of land, 397

- of righteousness, one of four Messiahs, 1021 n105

- robes of, 649-651

- tribute for imposed on people by Moses, 720-721

- 24 gifts as, 285, 783

priesthood

- of all firstborn males before erection of Tabernacle, 265

- belonging to Aaron and his descendants, 509

- blessing of, bestowed on Levi, 437

- crown of, one of three Israel received from God, 670 (see also crown[s])

- garments of, in second vision of Levi, 438

- given to Israelites unconditionally, 590-591 n173 (see also gifts)

priesthood (cont.)

- and Levites, institution of
  - one of six gifts as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572 (see also gifts; Sabbath: observance of)

- one of crowns of Abraham, 188 n57

- one of four horns in four corners of Tabernacle, 648 (see also horn)

- taught to Abraham by Melchizedek, 196
- usurpation of, punished by death by celestial fire, 1042 n30

priestly garments, 268 n89. See also Aaron: and priesthood, priestly clothing of

priestly gifts

- symbolic explanation of, 784 n801

priestly service

- and birthright, 258
- of firstborn, 268 n89
- garments for, 268 n89

primogeniture

- Isaac invested with right of, 244 n316

See also birthright; firstborn; inheritance

prince of darkness

- as angel of death (i.e., Satan), 11 n41

- created by God, 11 n41

See also angel(s): types

prince of earth

- Satan as, 21 n75 (see also Satan)

prince of face

- Metatron-Enoch as, 128 n60

prince of shades

- Raphael (archangel) as, 53 n13

prince of world, 1049

- angel in charge of world, 21 n75
- exclamation of, 18

- Metatron as, 1052 n69

- not identified with prince of earth, 21 n75

princes

- assisting Messiah, 100 n142

- dedication offerings of, 665-673

eight

- called Messiahs, 100 n142

- as great men of New Covenant, 100 n142

gifts of

- bringing gifts after people, 664
- providing jewels for robes of high priest, 664

- providing wagons for transportation of Tabernacle, 664-665

princes (cont.)

gifts of symbolic explanations of, 673

n403

for Tabernacle, 664-673

seven, assisting Messiah, 100 n142
of tribes (see also under individual tribes)

names of, 681 n424

Procrustes

story about bed of, 210 n155

Prometheus

and Adam, 85 n104

promise

of God to Jacob

in dream, concerning land, 277 land on which he lay would belong to him and descendants, 400

of unbounded possession, 277

See also covenant(s)

promised land

Canaan as, 187

census of Israel at distribution of, 636

death of Amram in, 548 n10 divided among tribes according to their numbers, 784

division of, 786 n808

Israelites entering, 842-845

See also Holy Land; Israel; Moses; Palestine

property

value of, 379

prophecy

of Abraham concerning Isaac, 227

at birth of Serug, 167 concerning voice of Jacob, 266

drops of, 62 n30

about future of Israel, in dream of chief baker, 361

gift of all mothers endowed with, 254

n15

exclusive possession of Israel
after death of Moses, 453
n3

received from God by Eldad and Medad, 697

remaining with wise, 1124 n36
of Saul, 898

taken from prophets at destruction of Temple and given to children and fools, 1124
n36

withdrawn from heathens, 761

of God to Og, king of Bashan, 219 prophecy (cont.)

holy spirit of, one of five sacred objects concealed by God
at destruction of Temple, 645

spirit of coming upon elders, 696

coming with joy, 391 departing from Israel at end of Persian period, 1128 n56

departure of, necessitating canonization of holy writings, 1128 n56

“fathers” and “mothers”

endowed with, 263 n72

unconscious, 334 n25

prophet(s)

able to suspend but not abrogate
law, 997 n113

Balaam as, 760

confirming prophecies uttered by Moses, 612 n242

crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters transmitted to, by Jehoiada, 892 n24

David as, 501 n109

during Elijah's time

60 myriads in number, 1026 n1

false, 1106-1107 of Bethel, 983-984 n8

causing sun and moon to stand still, 873 n93

first

Gad and Nathan, 915 n24

identification of, 652 n358

Jeremiah and Baruch, 915 n24

Samuel and David, 915 n24

joyful mood necessary for, 372
n198

of Judah, 983 n8

killed by lion, 984 n8

living to old age, 423 n429

martyred (Hur, Shemaiah, Ahiah, Zechariah, Isaiah,
Jeremiah), 1078 n30

as messengers of God's words, 611
like Moses

Jeremiah as, 1070 n13

non-Jewish, 762 n727

not receiving revelations outside of Holy Land, 1032 n27

no two speaking same words, 988,
989 n42

number of, 62 n30

one of three parts of Torah, 592

(see also Hagiographa; Pentateuch)

ordering of books of, 1041 n20

prophet(s) (cont.)

owing distinction to Israel, 717
n550

postexilic, 8 in number (Joel,
Amos, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi, Ezekiel, Jeremiah), 991
n56

qualifications of, 635 n306

wealth, strength, humility, and wisdom, 633

Rahab as ancestress of, 843

receiving divine communications in Aramaic, 612 n242

and sage, link between, 1126

Samuel as, 501 n109

of Scripture, 48 in number, 1026
n1

as seventh-month children, 890
n13

three great, 1039-1043

wealth of, 1032

wise men greater than, 1124 n36

prophetess(es)

mothers as, 271

Rachel as, 288, 289 n201

Rebekah as, 263 n69, 268 n81, 271

of Scripture, 7 in number, 1026 n1 prophetic gift. See prophecy: gift of prophetic spirit. See prophecy: spirit

of

Prophets, Minor. See Minor Prophets
proselyte(s)

Abraham as father of, 203 n122

attracting by kindness, 585 n154 called “God-fearing men,” 1027
n6

circumcision and, 219 n205

as descendants of those whom Sarah nursed, 218

having no claim on property in Holy Land, 589

and Israelites dispute between, about offerings, 717

laws pertaining to, 865 n44

none admitted into Jewish fold during time of David and Solomon, 937 n117

in Paradise

in first division of, 19

hall of glass for, 23 n97

thrones for righteous proselytes made from silver, 507

praise of, 936 n112

sons of Sennacherib becoming, 1046

proselyte(s) (cont.)

ten rulers becoming (Hiram, Ebed-melech, Antoninus, Talmi, Monoaz, Tobai, Bolan, Bithiah, Helena, Beruria), 1093 n66

proverb(s)

about child and piece of bread, 749, 750 n662 about child taking after mother's brothers, 883 n130 about city and Abba Kolon, 948 n11
 about dinner of herbs where love is, 975 about flattery and king, 947
 about hearing not like seeing, 598 n191 inscribed on doors of magnificent building, 972 about mercy and justice, 805
 about moving slowly, 972
 about ox and slaughtering knives, 1175, 1177 n182
 about pious and wicked, 770
 about pious deeds, 799 about pride and destruction, 769
 about raven and crow, 283
 about rope and water bucket, 383, 384 n264, 385, 386, 387 n274 about snake and rope, 262 n55
 of Solomon
   800 in number, 950
   3,000 in Scripture's counting, 950 about stone cast into well, 794
 about thief and receiver, 701, 702 n493
 about throwing stick, 778, 779 n786
 about time and death, 972
 about trouble being sufficient for day, 510, 511 n127
 about vanity of all earthly things, 972 about vine and humility, 406 n376 about weasel and cat, 759
 about wheat, 238
 about wicked and neighbor, 719, 720 n563 about wicked never doing good deed completely, 1147 n92
 about wisdom and gold, 953
 about wise and foolish, 1032 n25

Proverbs, Book of

cantillation of, 463 n39

Proverbs, Book of (cont.)

Hezekiah and associates as editors of, 1071 n15
 Hezekiah having copies made of, 1051
 not always in harmony with Book of Psalms, 955 n24 Solomon as author of, 977 n93

psalm(s)

composed by David fleeing from Absalom, 933 n100 composition of, 930 n84 recited by Jacob every night with Laban, 277

Psalms, Book of

cantillation of, 463 n39
 of David, 823
 not always in harmony with Book of Proverbs, 955 n24

Psalm 22

in prayer of Esther, 1166, 1167, 1168 n145

Psalm 30

composed by Solomon, according to Haggadah, 564 n59

Psalm 110, as reference to

Abraham, 197 n95
 Hezekiah, 197 n95

Psalm 136 (see also prayers, Jewish)

Hodu psalm, recited by Mordecai, 1176 n172

Psalter. See Psalms, Book of pseudepigraphic literature

Christian interpolations in, ix and Christians, viii
 classes of angels found in, 17 n65
 and early Church, ix-x extent of, ix
 and Haggadah, viii
 heavenly Jerusalem in, 280 n141
 and idea that demons are descendants of fallen angels, 82 n98

  world created for Israel, 50 n8

importance of, ix

Joseph given title "pious one" in, 328 n3

on Leviathan-Behemoth legends, 31 n127

and sectaries, viii

as source of Jewish legendary material, ix

and Synagogue, ix-x

Synagogue's disavowal of, viii

Pseudo-Philo

address by Deborah in, 870 n78 censure of Gideon in, 874 n101
 on Deborah, 873 n92

Pseudo-Philo (cont.)

on Elkanah, 888 n3
 on Hannah, 888 n7
 on Jael, 871 n85
 on judges, 861 n22, 869 n70, 869 n71 on Kenaz and judges, 859 n15, 859 n16, 859 n17, 860 n19, 860 n20 legend about Samuel in, 890 n17
 on merits of fathers, 871 n91
 on Philistines and ark, 894 n34
 on Phinehas identified with Elijah, 885 n140
 on Samson, 879 n111, 879 n115
 on sin of Benjaminites, 883 n134
 on Sisera's army, 870 n80
 spelling of names in, 860 n21
 story of call of Samuel in, 895-896 n40 story of witch of En-dor in, 904 n77 words of rebuke of Eli to sons in, 893 n27

Psychopomp

Elijah as, 996

Ptolemy of Egypt

commanded Septuagint to be prepared, 1093 n66

Puah (Hebrew midwife), 469 (see also Jochebed; Miriam; Shiphrah)

identified with

  Elisheba, wife of Aaron and daughter-in-law of Jochebed, 470 n17

  Miriam, 469, 470 n17

name, meaning of, 470 n17

Puah (son of Issachar)

name, meaning of, 433

Pul

one of eight other names of Sennacherib, 1054 n92

punishment(s)

of Cain, seven in number, 450

capital, methods of decapitation, 626

  drinking from ocean, 626

  by plague, 626 n279

  by water, 626 n279

death by fire, for daughter of high priest who leads unchaste life, 345

Divine, averted through penitence, 768 entirely ward off by repentance, 730 n599

gout as, 985

punishment(s) (cont.)

- leprosy (see leprosy)
- one-half of, warded off by prayer, 730 n599
- after revelation of Torah, meted out according to merits, 599 n196
- before revelation of Torah, visited upon all, 599 n196
- of sinners, 625-627
  - through unclean spirits, 157
- visited on fourth generation, 605
- for worship of golden calf
  - lips becoming closed, 626 n279
  - three forms of (execution by Levites, death by water, death by plague), 626 n281
  - tongue cut off by water, 626 n279
- Punon
  - Israelites punished by serpents at, 749
- Pure Brethren
  - writings of, 45 n194
- purification
  - laws of, 797-798
  - ritual, and Abraham, 204, 205
  - of warriors before war, 583 n145
  - See also* ablution
- Purim, Feast of
  - as celebration of fall of Haman, 1179
  - introduced by men of Great Synagogue, 1128 n56
  - origin of, 1179-1180
- purple
  - dye, obtained from murex snail, 377
  - See also under* color(s)
- Put
  - as builder of Tower of Babel, 164 n88
  - one of seven sinners, 856, 857 n9
- Putiel
  - maternal grandfather of Phineas, 784 n800
  - as one of seven names of Jethro, 493
  - as other name for Jethro or Joseph, 784 n800
- putrefaction
  - of dead, 58 n20
  - and spontaneous generation of animals, 42 n190
- Pythagoras
  - Ezekiel as teacher of, 1102 n94
- Pythagorean doctrines
  - music of spheres, 26 n102

Q

- quail, 699-700
  - episode of, at Elim, 568 n86
  - as gift to Israel, 591
  - kinds of, 574-575 n116
  - miraculous appearance of, 573
- queen(s)
  - among heathens, two in number (Semiramis, Vashti), 990 n51
  - in Jewish history, two in number (Athaliah, Jezebel), 990
- Queen of Sheba, 958-962
  - Arabic legend of, 961 n40
  - burial of, in Palmyra, 964 n53
  - descended from Abraham and concubines, 1073 n21
  - as female demon, 458 n20, 965 n55
  - as great witch, 458 n20
  - having hair on feet, 959
  - having hair on legs, 961 n40
  - as queen of Egypt and Ethiopia, 962 n47
  - raiding Job, 458 n21
  - ruler of Kitor, according to legend of hoopoe, 958-959
- and Solomon
  - asking S. how to withstand three enchantments of snakes, 796
  - burial of Q. by S., 964 n53
  - letter of S. to Q., 959
  - Q. marrying S., 961 n40
  - Q. posing riddles to S., 955, 959-961
  - Q. sending gifts to S., 959
  - as sorceress, 963-964

R

- Raah
  - star in Egyptian prophecies, 623
- Raamses (city), 371
  - fortifications of, 466, 467
- Jacob giving blessings at, 406
- Rabbah of children of Ammon
  - city captured by Joab, 926 n77
- Rabbanites
  - lack of reverence of, for heroes of Israel, 897 n43
  - ridiculed by Karaites, 270 n100
- Rabba-yakkira
  - one of eight other names of Sennacherib, 1054 n92
- Rabbi Johanan. See Johanan b. Zakkai, R.

rabbinic literature

- Abraham never called Abram in, 256 n35
- Amoraic sources of, frequently using Edom for Rome, 254 n19
- Amoraim on Abraham's observance of law, 239 n272
- angelology of Babylonian Talmud, 137 n10
- classes of angels found in, 17 n65
- division of world according to, 10 n33
- fourth plague in, 534 n188
- hell reserved for heathen in, 508 n118
- and idea
  - that thrones in Paradise reserved for time after resurrection, 508 n118
  - that world created for sake of Abraham, Moses, David, Messiah, 50 n8
- identification of Esau with Rome and swine in, 284 n162
- Joseph given title "pious one" in, 328 n3
- Moses spoken of as "Moses our master" in, 484 n68
- as point of departure for Jewish legendary material, ix-x
- popular character of, vii
- seven clouds of glory in, 543 n241
- stating that fall of Jericho took place on Sabbath, 846 n22
- tannaitic sources rarely using Edom for Rome, 254 n19
- See also* Amoraic sources; Hagga-dah; Halakhah; Kabbalah; Midrash; Mishnah; tannaitic literature
- Rabdos
  - houndlike spirit, coming before Solomon, 963
- Rabshakeh (son of Hezekiah), 1056 n94
  - advisor to Sennacherib, 1047 n54
  - as apostate, 1056 n94
  - killed falling from Hezekiah's shoulders, 1054
- Raccia
  - site of synagogue founded by Ezra, 1123
- Rachel (daughter of Laban)
  - age of, at death, 36 years, 318
  - 45 years, 319 n307

Rachel (cont.)

barrenness of, 285-286, 289 n202, 327
 for 14 years after marriage, 288 n176
 beauty of, 283
 bowing before Esau, 305 n262
 burial of
   in Ephrath, 318, 337
   immediately after death, 319 n310 tomb of, 319 n310
   on way, so that she could intercede for exiles, 318, 403 daughter of Laban and Adinah, 262, 278
 death of attributed to sin of Jacob, 317 n293
   giving birth to Benjamin, 293, 318, 449 premature, as punishment for stealing teraphim, 293
   R. having presentiment of premature death, 288 n178
   R. speaking to Joseph from grave, 338 at time of death of Laban, as punishment for breaking covenant with Jacob, 319 n307 descendants of, bringing victory to Israel against Amalekites, 580 n142
 Eben Shetiyyah as metaphor for likeness of, 358 n124
 God promising to lead Israel back for sake of, 1080
 and Jacob
   J.'s love for R., 282
   J. weeping after kissing R., 281
   R. as wife of J., 283
   R. giving Bilhah to J., 286
   R. to give sign to J. on wedding night, 282, 282 n159 jealousy of, 285, 288 n176
 and Leah
   R.'s envy of L., 65, 285
   R.'s kindness to L., 289-290 n202
   R. telling L. sign to deceive Jacob on wedding night, 289-290 n202 naming son of Bilhah Dan, 286 one of four mothers, 434 n3 (see also Leah; Rebekah; Sarah)
 one of four women of perfect beauty, 941 n132

Rachel (cont.)

one of seven sterile women who bore children, 878 n111
 one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
 pleading for Israel, 1081 n39
 pleading with God for Israel, 1080
 as prophetess, 288, 288 n178, 289 n201 punishment of, for letting Jacob go to Leah, 287
 sons of Benjamin, 288, 305 n262
   Joseph, 287-288
   R. granted son on New Year's Day, 287
   two in number, 327
 stealing teraphim of Laban, 291, 294 n220, 294 n224 suffering of, in giving birth to Joseph, 327
 supervising one of seven classes of women, 23 n97
 tending sheep of Laban, 278 to marry younger of Rebekah's sons, 283
 tribes of Haman not able to prevail against descendant of, 1177 n175
   12 in number, 288
   in women's Paradise, 940
 Rachel (daughter of Shuthelah) story of birth of child at time of Exodus, 541 Raguil (angel)
   bringing Enoch to heavens, 126
 Rahab (angel)
   angel of sea, 18, 142
   drowned with Egyptians in Red Sea, 557 chief of waters, 142
   God's strife with, 20 n73 identified with Leviathan and angel of death, 20 n73
   as prince of Egypt, 558 n42
   punishment of, 18
   rebellng at creation of world, 18
   See also angel(s), general: types; Leviathan Rahab (woman)
   ancestress of eight priests (Jeremiah, Hilkiah, Shallum, Hanamel, Baruch, Neriah, Mahseiah, Seraiah), 1093 n65 eight prophets and of prophetess Huldah, 843

Rahab (cont.)

ancestress of (cont.)
   prophets and priests, 1070 n10
 beauty of, 60 n24
   R. as one of four most beautiful women in history, 940 descendants of, seven kings and eight prophets, 844 n12 escaping fate of inhabitants of Jericho, 847 n22
 as illustration of effect of repentance, 844 n12 living immoral life for 40 years, 843, 844 n12 oath of two spies to, 847 n22
 one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
 receiving from Zerah line bound to her window, 345 wife of Joshua, 843 Rahtiel (angel)
   angel of constellations, prostrating before Metatron, 130 Raḥum (the Merciful)
   as name of God, 3-4
   See also God: names and titles of rain
   as consort of earth, 21 n74
   drops of, directed by God, 452, 453 n6
   of flood, passing through Gehenna, 144 formation of, 21 n74, 69, 70 n52
   hot, 144
   as part of blessing of Jacob, 266 quantity for year fixed on last day of Tabernacles, 268 n83
   as tears, 20 n73
   windows of, in first heaven, 503
 rainbow created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78 (see also under creation: sixth day)
   first visible in Noah's days, 152 n55 and question to R. Joshua b. Levi, 1013 n92 as reflection of God's majesty, 152 n55
   as sign that God has laid aside His weapon, the bow, 152 n55
   See also bow Rakyon (Have-naught) legend of, with King Ashwerosh, Arabic origin of, 192-193, 193 n81

ram(s)

as burnt offering in place of Isaac, 230 coming to life again after sacrificed for Isaac, 232 n246 of dedication offering, corresponding to princes of tribes, 671 horn of (see also instruments, musical; shofar; trumpet[s]) blown at end of revelation on Mount Sinai, 230 blown on New Year, 231, 232 n248, 235 n256
   to be blown at end of exile, 230 of peace offering, corresponding to 60 myriads of Israel's fighting hosts, 672 representing rule of Ishmael, 198 sacrificed by Abraham, 88 n108, 198
   created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day) strings of David's harp made from gut of, 927
   three in number, 198
 Sammael, angel of death, taking form of, in Islamic legend, 307 n275 sign of Zodiac (see also Aries; heavenly bodies; Zodiac) constellation worshiped by Egyptians, 395 sinews of, made into harp strings by David, 230 skin of made into girdle for Elijah, 230
   one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see also under Tabernacle)
   in Tabernacle, dyed red, symbolizing Rome, 640 of three years, symbolizing Medo-Persian power, 198
 and wolf, legend of, 303
 worshiped by people of Hamath, 1044
 worshiped in Egypt, 535
 Ramael (angel)
   as destroyer of Assyrians, 1047 n55
 Ramathaim-Zophim
   haggadic interpretations of, 888 n1
 Ramiel (archangel)
   angel of thunder, prostrating before Metatron, 120 n57, 130

Ramirat (demon)

carrying out orders of Solomon, 971
 Ramoth Gilead
   Ahab slain in, 988, 989 n42
 rapacity
   sin that hastened flood, 139
 rape
   one of five crimes of Esau on day of Abraham's death, 257 Raphael (archangel)
   and Abraham
     R. appearing to A. after circumcision, 204
     R. healing A., 204
   as angel in charge of sun, 131 n61
   as angel of healing, 52, 337 n52 curing Jacob of injury inflicted by Michael, 299 healing wound of Abraham, 204
   as angel who clothed Joseph, 337 n52
   as leader of most exalted rank of angels, 13
 name changed from Labbiel, 52
   meaning of derived from refaim ("shades"), 53 n13
     "God heals," 685
   one of four angels surrounding Divine Throne, 685
   as prince of shades, 53 n13
   and punishment of Azazel, 135
   the Rescuer, 52
   returning Book of Raziel to Adam after repentance, 90 n110 saving Lot, 207 n154
   sent to banish unclean spirits, 157
   substituting for Gabriel, 337 n52
   as teacher of Jacob in Kabbalah, 505 n117 Rashiel (angel)
   angel of whirlwind, prostrating before Metatron, 130 rational explanations of wonders in battle against Sisera, 870 n81
 raven, 149 n46
   able to foresee future, 149 n46
   bringing food from Jehoshaphat to Elijah, 994 and burial of Abel, 108 ceasing to despoil earth, 184 n49 changing appearance on Noah's ark, 37 and crow, proverb about, 283

raven (cont.)

cursed by Noah for not observing sexual abstinence, 41 n177, 41 n178, 151, 152 n54 destined to bring food for Elijah, 149 n46 devouring seed, 167
 gait of, 37
 impregnated through mouth, 37, 41 n177 living immorally after leaving ark, 151-152 n51
 not approaching house of Ahab, 994 not returning to ark, 150 n47 ordered to feed Elijah, 48
 sent out by Noah, 148
 use of meat of, 41 n175
 Raziel, Book of, 89-91
 and Adam
   Book disappearing at death of, 142
   Book given to A. by Raziel, 141
   Book restored to A. by Rahab, 142
   Book stolen from A. by angels and thrown into sea, 142 coming into possession of Seth after Adam's death, 90 n110 disappearing after fall, 90 n110
   hidden by Enoch, 142
   instructions in, for building ark, 143
   R. Eleazar of worms as probable author of, 90 n110 returned to Adam by Raphael after repentance, 90 n110 Raziel (angel)
   another name of Gallizur, 614 appearing to Adam with book, 90 arresting breath of hayyot, 614 functions of, in heaven, 614
   revealing teachings of God, 614
   as teacher of Adam in Kabbalah, 505 n117 Razuyal
   theophorous name, 113 n42
 Reaiah
   one of five other names of Bezalel, meaning of ("to behold"), 642
 Rebekah
   admonished by Abraham to keep guard over Jacob, 255
 age of
   at death, 158 years, 318 n302
   at marriage, 251, 253 n4

Rebekah (cont.)

barrenness of, 251, 327 (see also Rebekah: and Isaac, childlessness of) because of injury of Esau, 254 n16
 duration of, 253 n7
 as result of curse by kin, 240
 beauty of, 241 n290, 260
 burial of
   in Hebron, 98 n137
   at night, 317
 as counterpart of Sarah, 241
 as daughter of Bethuel, king of Haran, 239, 251 idolatrous priest, 267 n73
 death of, 317
   age at time of, 253 n4
   before Deborah, 318 n302
 descendants of, not free from cunning and deceit, 253 n5 descended from deceivers (ramai) or Arameans (arami), 253 n5 dream of, revealing Esau's murderous plans, 273 n109 gifts of Eliezer to, 240 injury of, 240, 242 n301
 and Isaac
   childlessness of, 251 (see also Rebekah: barrenness of)
   due to both of them, 253 n8
   duration of, 253 n7
   I. pretending R. is sister, 260 marriage of, not entirely happy, 251
 and Jacob
   R. accompanying J. to Bethel, 316-317
   R. giving J. maternal blessing, 262
   R.'s love for J., 255
   R. warning J. about Esau, 271-272, 295 learning from holy spirit that she would be mother of Esau, 240 merits of, one of five charms to protect Jacob, 300 n247 (see also merits)
 no one to mourn for her, 317 one of four mothers, 434 n3 (see also Leah; Rachel; Sarah)
 one of seven sterile women who bore children, 878 n111
 one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271

Rebekah (cont.)

piety of equal to piety of Isaac, 251-252
 prayer of
   efficaciousness of, 253 n10
   in praise of God, 262
   that God would not destroy all scholars, 254 n15 pregnancy of, difficulty of, 252
 as prophetess, 254 n15, 263 n69, 271, 272, 273 n109, 273 n113 receiving revelation through Shem or other medium, 254 n18 saved from jus primae noctis by God, 241 n294 sister of Laban, 240, 251, 283 sons of, two in number, 283, 327 suffering of, in giving birth to Jacob, 327
 supervising one of seven classes of women, 23 n97
 to be mother of 12 tribes, 254 n16 weeping of, 273, 273 n113
 in women's Paradise, 940
 wooing of, 239-242
 rebels
   including members of all tribes except Levi, 720 n563 Rechab
   sons of, legend about, similar to legend of Sons of Moses, 1089 n57 Rechabites
   covenant with, that descendants would be members of Sanhedrin and teachers of Israel, 590 following practices of Jonadab, 590 rewarded by God, 590
 red. See under color(s)
 redeemer
   Aaron as, 430 n434
   of Israel
     date of birth announced by astrologers, 471 n21
     mark of, 516
   Moses as, 430 n434
   true, three signs of, 405
   words of, 428
 redemption
   final, to take place on account of merits of Joseph, 328 n3
   Israel swearing not to despair of, 1081 n39
   Israel swearing not to divulge appointed time of, 1081 n39

redemption (cont.)

Messianic
   part played by Moses in, 1081 n36
   to be brought about by prayer and repentance, 1013 n84
 repentance as necessary condition for, 1021 n106 revelation of secret of, one of seven wonders of Messiah, 1021
 second, 433
 time of, three Diasporas will return in, 1089 n56 red heifer
   ashes of kept forever, 676
     taken into exile to Babylon, 677 n417 used for purification of Israel, 676 Messiah to furnish tenth one, 677 n417
   number of, 677 n417
   revelation concerning, 676
   used for purification of sin, 733 n602
   See also heifer(s)
 Red Rome
   allusion to identification of Rome with Edom, 641 n323 Red Sea
   darkness at, 532, 534 n198
   division of, 553-558
     first of ten miracles connected with passage of Israelites, 555-556
     as reward for piety of Joseph, 327, 330
   Egyptians killed in, 540
   Israel's turning from, one of ten temptations, 757 (see also under temptations) miracles of water of, 555-556 not wanting to divide because Israelites had rebelled against God, 555 n30 passage through, 48, 555-558 rationalist explanation of, 557 n38 witnesses of, 556, 557 n39 refusing to obey Moses, 554
   sweet waters of, 568 n79
   ten miracles at, 557 n36
 reem (wild ox)
   description of, 146 n34
   giant animal, 33, 39 n145
   horns of, 445
   mammoth beast, 913

reem (cont.)

- reproduction of, 33
- size of, 33, 39 n146
- too large for ark, 144

See also ox, wild refuge, cities of. See cities: of refuge

Regoita ("rest")

- one of seven Jewish attendants of Esther, attending Esther on Sabbath, 1143

Regosar

- one of three sons of Evil-merodach, 1112 n2

Rehoboam (son of Solomon)

- afflicted with issue on account of David's curse of Joab, 946
- as king, 984 n9
- Naamah as mother of, 977 n89
- and Solomon
  - S. calling on R. to slay Joab, 947 n10

S.'s throne carried to Egypt during life of, 969

rejuvenation

- of pious, 39 n150

Renanim

- as celestial singer, 29
- identified with Bar Yokni, 32 n139
- name of Ziz, 29 (see also Ziz)

rending clothes

- father and brothers of Joseph, 361 n136

mourning for Jacob, 412

as sign of anger, 339, 382

despair, 382

grief, 382

mourning, 340 (see also under mourning)

repentance

actions of, 1034

putting ashes on head, 424

wearing sackcloth, 318, 424

of Adam, 86-89

creation of, 1

denied to Eli's sons, 893 n27

fasting and, 318

most grievous sins forgiven on

account of, 735 n615

as necessary condition for final redemption, 1021 n106

and prayer

to bring about Messianic

redemption of Israel, 1013

n84

and prayer and alms, warding off

evil, 1052 n75

reaching Divine Throne, 505 n117

repentance (cont.)

of Reuben, 318

saving Manasseh, 1055

sinful cities given opportunity for, 212 n167

warding off entire punishment,

730 n599

window of, in first heaven, 503

See also penance; penitence

Rephaim

idol, 965 n56

name, meaning of, 137

as offspring of fallen angels and Cainite women, 137

Rephidim (place)

lack of water at, one of ten temptations, 757 (see also under temptations) war of Amalek during sojourn of Israelites in, 577-580 reptiles

created on sixth day, 77

hymns of praise of, 45 (see also praise)

See also salamander; serpent; shamir

resh (letter)

creation of world through, 3-4

as first letter in name of God

Rahum, the Merciful, 3-4

standing for ra ("wicked"), 3

rasha ("evil"), 3

as third letter of name of Abraham,

on standard of tribe of

Ephraim, 686

See also alphabet; letters of alphabet

rest

and name of Noah, 134 n5

Rest of Words of Baruch (Paralipomena of Jeremiah), 1071

n15

resurrection

of animals, 232 n246

by Abraham, 198, 200 n113

of fourth plague, 530

of dead, 628

belief in

by Joseph, 579

reinforced by Ezekiel's reviving dead dead raised by Ezekiel, praising God, 1103 n95 dead to rise in garments in which buried, 900, 904

n77

denied by

Esau, 579

resurrection (cont.)

of dead (cont.)

denied by (cont.)

Job, 452

dew of, 994, 997 n12

resurrection to be brought about through "dew of light," 92 n113 dialogue between Jacob and Esau about, 257-258

doctrine of, 39 n150

doubt of, one of five crimes of Esau on day of Abraham's

death, 257

from graves on Sabbath, festivals, and new moons, 23

n97

promised to Adam, 97

on Sabbath, festivals, and new moons, 23 n97

at second blast of Elijah on trumpet in Messianic time, 1021

seven sounds of trumpet heard

at, 605 n214

those buried in Cave of Machpelah to be raised

first, 236 n263

those buried in Holy Land to rise before those buried in other countries, 401 n345

time of, made known to

Abraham, 198

Reu (ancestor of Abraham), 167

Reuben

admonishing children to join themselves to Levi, 435-436 afflicted with illness for seven months as punishment,

435

age of, at death, 125 years, 436

angel of, to be rebuffed by angel of

Esau, 579

anger of, that Leah passed over in favor of Bilhah after death

of Rachel, 318

birthright of forfeited because of sin, 407

given to Joseph, 285

blessing of, by Jacob, 407

burial of, in Hebron in Double Cave, 436 (see also Machpelah: Cave of)

confession of, 345, 384 n263

death of, 436

descendants of, to include Hosea,

318

Reuben (cont.)

as firstborn of mother, 285, 403
 first of brothers to attempt to save Joseph, 332, 333
   men to do penance, 318
   sons of Jacob to die, 465 n2 forgiveness of sin of, 824 n921
 God forgiving sin of, 820
 good deed of, saving Joseph, 820
 and Jacob
   R. acting disrespectfully toward J., 318
   R. censured by J. for sin, 410 n387
   R. rebuked by J. in blessing, 819
   R. trying to separate J. from Bilhah, 319 n312
 and Joseph
   R. as oldest son, responsible for J., 339
   R. intending to save J. from pit, 332, 334 n36, 334 n41
   R. not present when J. was sold, 339
   R. preventing others from killing J., 334 n34
   R. proposing to cast J. into pit, 332
   R. rescuing J., 285
 marriage of, to Elyoram, daughter of Canaanite Uzzi of Timnah, 347
 name
   inscribed on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686
   meaning of ("see the normal man"), 285, 433 occupied with penance, praying, and studying Torah, 339
 one of weak among sons of Jacob, 396 n324
 penance of, 400
   R. as example of penitent, 342 n60
   R. rending clothes, 339
   for seven years, 435
   for sin against Jacob, 339
   source of fifth of Eighteen Benedictions, 1126-1127
 pronouncing curse against incest, 824 n921
 in pseudepigraphic literature, 319 n312
 reminding brothers of their sins, 373
 significance of dedication offering of, 667

Reuben (cont.)

sin of with Bilhah, 435, 820
   against Jacob, 435
 as standard-bearer, corresponding to Michael, 685 testament of, 435-436
 tribe of angry with Moses for bestowing honors on tribe of Judah, 720 n563
   blessed by Moses, 820
   confessing to burning sacrifices to idols, 855
   elders from (Hanoch, Carmi, Pallu, Zaccur, Eliab, Nemuel), 696 flag of, red with picture of man-drakes, 688
   manikin as insignia of, 689 n447
   Moses' psalm of, 823
   one of four standard-bearers, 685
   precious stone of ruby, 651
     sardius, 856
   prince of (Elizur), 679
   rejected because of Reuben's sin with Bilhah, 650 n351 spy representing (Shammua), 705
   standard of
     colors of, 686
     figure of man on, 686, 689 n447
     inscription on, 686
   and tribes of Simeon and Levi not intermarrying with those not of pure Jewish blood, 691 n448
 warfare of attacking Edom to north, 321
   battle of Sarta, 315
   to destroy Mizraim with arm, 385 warning against unchastity, 435, 436 wife of, as Canaanite, 349 n98 Reuben, R.
   story of R. Reuben and angel of death, 1016-1017 Reubenites. See Reuben: tribe of Reuel (son of Esau), 321 advising Pharaoh to cease oppressing Hebrews, 470-471 banished by Pharaoh, 471
   as father of Jethro, 494 n83

Reuel (cont.)

one of seven names of Jethro, 493
 revelation
   divine, taking place at night, 356 n113
   to Moses, directly from God, 612 n242 not through medium of angels, 616 n248
 at Sinai, 599-602
   audibility of visible, 612 n238
   causing death, 612 n238
   choice of time of, 591
   day of
     portents on, 600
 Israelites granted power over angel of death at, 612 n238
 Israel preparing for, 598-599
 Israel receiving three gifts at, 612 n240 (see also gifts)
 Moses adding extra day of preparation for, one of three things Moses did on own authority, 626 n279
 music at, 602 n201
 time of, 592 n177
   on 6 Sivan or 7 Sivan, 297 n188
   on 15 Sivan, 297 n188
   in presence of living and dead, 604 violent motions of entire universe at, 600, 601 n198
   and Zodiac, 297 n188
 in Tabernacle, 673-674
 tenth to take place on day of judgment, 601
 of Torah
   delayed by God, 591-592
   Torah as sixth, 601
 Revelation, Festival of. See Pentecost revelations
   ten in number, 602 n206
 reward
   of pious, postponed for future world, 21 n77
   and punishment and creation, 1 remaining with descendants to fourth generation, 1038 n5 riddle(s) of Queen of Sheba about angels and Abraham, 960
   about cedar trunk, 961 about Daniel and three friends, 960
   about daughter of Lot, 960
   about distinguishing circumcised and uncircumcised, 960

riddle(s) of Queen of Sheba (cont.)

about distinguishing males and females, 960 about Elijah and Messiah, 960 about enclosure with ten doors, 960 about flax, 961, 962 n47
 about golden calf, 960
 about Jonah, 960
 about land that only once saw the sun, 960
 about Lot and daughters, 960
 about Naphtha, 961 about one who is neither born nor dies, 960 about rouge-tube, 961 about Samson and Philistines, 961 about seven and nine, 959-960
 about signet, cord, and staff, 960 about something moving with head cut off, 960
 sources of, 962 n46
 about Tamar, 961
 about wick, 960
 right (righteousness)
   in seventh heaven, 6 (see also righteousness) righteousness
   banishing hatred, 447
   one of four standards of Divine Throne, 687 n440
   in seventh heaven, 6
   See also right righteous ones
   concerned about welfare of their animals, 733 n606
   death of
     on birthday, 477 n44
     possessing atoning power, 733 n602 righteous not dying unless expressing desire to, 740 n632 to be met by merciful angels when entering other world, 430 n444
   to be welcomed by Jacob, 431 n444 four transformations of, 19
   among Gentiles acting as priests of God, 598 n191
   greater than angels, 1100 n89
   having to pass through Gehenna before entering Paradise, 508 n118
   of Israel, hall of silver in Paradise for, 23 n97 righteous ones (cont.)

joy of, in Paradise, announced by angels in sixth heaven, 505 n117 light of, 19
 men
   drawing Shekinah back from six heavens, six in number, 473
   every one to receive 310 words from God, 807 n894 number of, as stars, 330 (see also dust: of earth; sand of seashore; star[s]: in heavens) punished for sins during lifetime, 383 n257 reward of, in world to come, 258, 611 soul of one, more precious than all mankind, 605 n216 to raise dead in world to come, 1103 n95
   See also pious right hand of God. See God: right hand of rights of others illegal appropriation of, one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy: 13 sins punished by) Rigion
   fire of, 615 n247
   See also Rigyon Rigyon (angel)
   as stream of fire, 614
 ritual baths
   caricatured by Haman, 1152
   reaching to neck, 88 n106
 rivers
   flowing under thrones of pious, four in number (honey, milk, wine, balsam), 507 Moses asking rivers to intercede, 808 in third earth, 6
 Rizpah
   noble deeds of, 941 n131
   wife or concubine of David, 941 n131 robbery forbidden by commandments, 69
     Noah, 308
   in sinful cities, 207
 robe(s)
   one of eight priestly garments of Aaron, 649-651

rock

bringing forth
 blood, 738, 739 n627
 honey, 738, 739 n627
 water, 575, 738

rod

of Aaron (see Aaron: rod of)
   created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78 (see also under creation: sixth day)
 Ineffable Name engraved on, 494
 hewn from sapphire of Divine Throne, 496 n88 putting forth blossoms, 494 testing suitors of Jethro's daughters, 494 of Moses (see Moses: rod of)

Rokita

attending Esther on Mondays, 1142 name, reminding Esther of rakia ("firmament"), created on second day, 1142
 one of seven Jewish attendants of Esther, 1142
 Roman language, 158 n72
   ascribed to Japhethite system of writing, 158 n72
   God proclaiming Torah in, 820 (see also Arabic language, Aramaic language, Hebrew language)

Roman legion

stationed in Palestine, 284 n162

Romans

as descendants of Edom/Esau, 254 n15, 254 n19, 259 n51 prophesied to slay great Jewish scholars, 254 n15

Rome

Amalek as designation for, 580 n141
 appellations of, transferred to Christians, 254 n19 Babylon identified with, 948 n11, 1100 n90 called "boar out of the wood," 284 n162 deceit and guile of, 284 n162
 descent of, from Abraham, 649, 649 n350
 identified with Amalek, 254 n19
   Babylon, 1106 n106

Rome (cont.)

identified with (cont.)
 Edom, 254 n19, 641 n323, 927 n77
 explanation of tradition of, 419 n425
 Esau, 254 n19, 263 n69
   called swine, 284 n162
 Kittim, 254 n19
 Seir, 254 n19
 and Israel, two nations destined to
   be hated by all, 252
 Messiah to reject gifts of, 649
 not to contribute to messianic
   Temple, 649
 as one of four kingdoms, 196 n82
 punishment of, 215 n179
 as ruler of world, 162 n82
 site of, place where Gabriel put reed in sea, 947
 story of founding of, resembling myth about founding of Babylon, 948-949 n11
 Rosh (son of Benjamin)
   name, meaning of, 380
 Rosh Hashanah
   Jacob erecting altar at Bethel on,
   317 n299
   See also date: New Year; New Year Rosh Hodesh. See New Moon (festival)
 Rotheus (brother of Deborah) father of Bilhah and Zilpah, a Chaldean, 284 n167, 444
 royalty
   belonging to David and house of David, 509
   signet as symbol of, 344
ruah
   as wind, 56 n17
 ruby/rubies
   on ephod of Pharaoh, 364 fourth division of Paradise built
   from, 19
   pinnacles of heavenly Temple made
   from, 503
   promoting pregnancy, 651 relation of, to mandrakes, 651
   on Solomon's throne, 968
   stone of tribe of Reuben in breast-plate of Aaron, 651
   thrones for just made from, 507
   thrones in Paradise made from,
   507
   See also precious stones Ruhiel (angel)
   angel of wind, prostrating before Metatron, 130

Ruḥshita ("movement")

one of seven Jewish attendants of Esther, attending Esther on Thursdays, 1143
 rule of conduct to take two companions on journey, 903 n73
 ruler of dark, 7
 rulers, heathen claiming to be gods (Nimrod, Pharaoh, Sennacherib, Hiram, Nebuchadnezzar),
   1103-1104 n100, 1105
   n105
 rulers of world
   list of, 162 n82
   See also cosmocrator
 Ruth
   age of, at marriage, 40 years, 864
   ancestress of six pious men endowed with spiritual gifts (David, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, Azariah, Messiah), 866 n61
   beauty of, 866 n57
   and Boaz, 862-867
   marriage of R. to B., 864
   R. admired by B., 863
   R. describing self as one of handmaids of B., 865 n53
   R. led to field of B. by angel,
   865 n51
   daughter of Eglon, king of Moab, daughter-in-law of Naomi, 863 desiring to follow Jewish customs, 863
   famine in time of, as punishment, 862 gleaning in fields, 863, 866 n55
   God putting blessing in ears of corn, 866 n54
   living to see glory of Solomon,
   864, 867 n69
   as Moabite, 758
   destined to be ancestor of David, 793
   Moabite great-grandmother of David, 214, 214 n17
   modest words of, contrasted with indecent words of Potiphar's wife, 356 n115
   mother of Obed the pious, 864 and Naomi
   as two doves, 758, 977 n91
   one of mothers of Israel, 865 n53
   one of 22 women of valor, 238
   n271

Ruth (cont.)

as pious and reliable Jewess, 915 time of story of, 862, 864 n31 Ruth, Book of time of events of, 861 n26

S

Sabbath

abolished by Jeroboam, 984 n9
 as Adam's defender, 84 battle against Og taking place on,
   756 n693
 breaking of death by stoning as penalty for,
   690 Sabbath not to be broken in construction of Tabernacle, 653
   by Zelophehad, 690
 candles lighted on, 677-678
 caricatured by Haman, 1151-1152
 commandment concerning observance of fulfilled by Joseph, 593
   given to Adam, 70 n55 revealed at Alush, 574 n109
   revealed at Marah, 574 n109
   revealed to Moses, 545
 as creation in itself, 85 n102
 criticized by Haman, 1154
 David dying on, 938
 as day of study and religious instruction, 654 n360 dead rising from graves on, 23
   n97
 desecration of
   as cause of calamity at Gibeah,
   884 n134
   first Sabbath, 572, 574 n109
   by Joshua, 846 n22
   one of crimes of Achan, 847
   n25
   by priests making shewbread,
   909 n107
 in Egypt, 488 n72
 fasting forbidden on, 1135 52 in number, components of 70
   holy days celebrated by Jews, 648
 first, 83
   praise of God on, 83
   violation of, 572, 574 n109
 gatherer of wood on, one of three men losing this world and gaining world to come,
   847-848 n31

Sabbath (cont.)

and God

testifying to uniqueness of Israel,
82 n98

Great

piyyut for, 557 n39

as Sabbath preceding Passover, 536 n206symbolic description of world to come as, 99 n140

in heaven, 83-86

and heavenly light, 84

holiness of, attested by Sambation River, 1089 n56and Israel, testifying to unity of God, 82 n98Israelites not making war on, 555
n30

and Jacob

J. rewarded for observing, 280
n139law of Nehemiah and company no vessel or utensil to be handled on Sabbath, 1120
n26

laws of

Jacob concerned to observe, 304-305Moses instructing people in, 653 limits to journeys on, 237

of Lord, to take place 6,093 years after creation, 99 n140manna not descending on, 571-572man receiving additional soul on,
85 n104meal, made by Joseph for brothers in Egypt, 379night of, to be devoted to conjugal pleasures, 1125 n46not willing to be subservient to Haman's wicked plans, 1150

observance of

by Abraham, not referred to in Bible, 307 n280Ahab's son's victory over Mesha as reward for, 989 n35Ahab's victory over Syrians as reward for, 989 n35by Jacob, according to Bible, 307 n280leading to redemption, 574
n109merits of, giving Joram victory in war against Moab, 1027 n5Sabbath (cont.)observance of (cont.)to be rewarded by six gifts from God (land of Israel, future world, new world, sovereignty of dynasty of David, institution of Priests and Levites, freedom from three afflictions—sufferings of times of Gog and Magog, travails of Messianic time,
and day of judgment), 572to be rewarded by three festivals and six gifts, 572 (see also gifts)one not allowed to carry money
on, 951

personification of, 84 n101

phylacteries not worn on, 690

preexistence of, 85 n102

production of music forbidden on, 847 n22respite granted to souls of Gehenna on, 577 n135

and rest

precept of, given to Israel at Marah, 567

and sacrifices

only daily sacrifices permitted
on, 666

sanctification of, 545

scrolls read by Hebrews on, 522-
523 n164

seraphim silent on, 1043 n36

as sign between God and Israel, 1150

significance of, 85 n102

singular sanctity of, testified to by God and Israel, 82 n98souls of pious reading from Torah scroll on, 812superseded by circumcision, 248
n318

termination of drinking water after, 577 n135

well of Miriam moving around after, 577 n135to be celebrated by lighting candles, 677-678Vashti forcing Jewish women to spin and weave on, 1135

work permissible on, 653

and world to come

eternal Sabbath in, 85 n102
joy of Sabbath as one-sixtieth of,
608 n220Sabbath as foretaste of, 99 n140, 606Sabbath (cont.)and world to come (cont.)symbolic description of world to come as Great Sabbath, 99 n140Zechariah son of Jehoiada killed
on, 1038

Sabbath-breaker(s)

story of, 689-691

transformed by Moses into apes,
691 n452

sabbatical year

criticized by Haman, 1154

king to read word of God to people in Temple in, 984 n9

sackbuts

used by Pharaoh against Israelites 559

sackcloth

as sign of mourning, 342, 412

as sign of repentance, 318

sacrifice(s)

of Abel as whole offering, 105 n12
of atonementat dedication of Temple, kid as, 340

on new moon, 25 n100

for sins of Israel, 198

binding of, before slaughter, 232 n242child (see also Moloch)

in Egyptian bondage, 467 story of Akedah as protest against, 233 n255

connected with Torah, 771 n759 consumed by heavenly fire, 104

n10

daily

commandments concerning observance of, given to Adam, 70 n55offered by Phineas-Elijah, 783, 784 n803two in number, in remembrance of sacrifice of Isaac, 232 n249expiatory, on Day of Atonement, 230 fasting taking place of, 200 n111

human

Jephthah offering daughter, 877
n109

offered to Baal, 877 n109

practiced by Philistines, 922 n54

of Job on behalf of friends, 461

law of announced by Moses after defeat

by Amorites, 717

sacrifice(s) (cont.)

- law of (cont.)
    - forgotten by Moses in anger, 798 n862
  - offered on morning of revelation of Sinai, 598
  - ordinances of, observed by Saul, 898-899
  - performed by elders before priests, 598
  - prayer taking place of, 200 n111
  - public, in wilderness, performed by Levites, 709 n519
  - salt from sea offered with, 10 n33, 14 n52
  - slaughtering of, by non-priest, 889, 890 n18
  - souls of pious as, 5
  - superiority of prayer to, 888 n5
  - before war, 795 n849
  - See also* fasting; libation; offering; prayer(s)
- sadeh (letter). See tzade
- sage(s)
- conversations of Elijah with, 1013 n93
  - and prophet, link between, 1126
  - two great (Balaam and Ahithophel) losing this world and world to come, 798
- Sagittarius (Archer) (sign of Zodiac)
- answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151
- saints
- intercession of, for Israel, 1161 n122
- salamander, 34, 40 n157
- blood of, as protection, 34, 1046, 1047 n47
  - clothes of, 40 n158
  - King Hezekiah owing life to, 34
  - originating from fire of myrtle wood, 34
  - properties of, 34
  - See also* reptiles; serpent; shamir
- Salamiel (angel)
- leader of grigori, 125
- Salem
- identified with
    - Jerusalem, 197 n102
    - Shechem by Samaritans, 197 n102
  - as Melchizedek's city, 197 n102
  - name of
    - changed to Jerusalem by Melchizedek, 232 n253
    - meaning of, 197 n102
  - See also* Jerusalem

salt

- exempt from tithing, 255
  - not to be used in certain religious ceremonies, 215 n180
  - pillar of, 214 n174 (see also Lot: wife of)
  - from sea, offered with every sacrifice, 10 n33, 14 n52
  - of Sodom, poisonous quality of, 215 n184
- Samael (angel)
- ally of Esau against Jacob, 252
  - assisting Pharaoh in pursuing Israelites, 550
  - desiring to slay Jacob in womb, 252
  - fall of, 194
  - fettering Lahash, 809
  - as head of evil spirits, 817, 830 n946
  - identified with Satan, 101, 103 n5
  - Job given over to, to distract S. from Israelites, 552
  - making accusations against Israel, 551-552
  - and Michael, case between, arbitrated in heavenly court, 252
  - and Moses
    - S. chastised by M., 828-831
    - S. receiving permission to fetch M.'s soul, 828
    - S. waiting for moment of M.'s death, 817
    - vain search of S. for M., 835-837
  - prostrating before Metatron, 130
  - R. Joseph della Reyna attempting to conquer, 1018-1019
  - in seventh heaven, 504
  - son of, and Adam and Eve, 141-142
  - stopping prayer of
    - Caleb, 809
    - Eleazar, 809
    - Joshua, 809
  - taking souls away from men, 504
  - See also* Sammael; Satan
- Samaon
- descendant of Dan, 286
- Samaria
- founded by those who would not expel heathen women, 1091
  - gates of, inscription of Ahab on, 987
- Samaritans
- attempting to prevent rebuilding of Temple, 1120 n23

Samaritans (cont.)

- claiming Mount Gerizim as holy, 872
  - considering it unlawful to keep wine in leather casks, 1134 n18
  - fashioning images of Jacob and Joseph, 1045 n46
  - identifying Shem with Melchizedek, 197 n102
  - worshipping idol in form of dove, 316
- Sambation River
- attesting holiness of Sabbath, 1089 n56
  - flowing at border of land of Sons of Moses, 1088
  - location of, 1089 n56
  - references to, in Christian, Muslim, and Samaritan writings, 1089 n56
  - resting on Sabbath, 1088, 1089 n56
  - ten tribes dwelling beyond, 1089 n56
- samekh (letter)
- in Asenath, standing for setirah ("hidden"), 368
  - creation of world through, 4
  - in Passim, standing for soharim, merchants who bought Joseph from Ishmaelites, 330
  - See also* alphabet; letters of alphabet
- Samlah of Masrekah
- succeeding Hadad as king of Edomites, 420
- Sammael (angel)
- as adversary of Moses and Israel in Egypt and at Red Sea, 965 n56
  - Amalek identified with, in Kabbalah, 580 n141
  - as angel of death in Islamic legend, taking form of ram, 307 n275
  - as angel of Edom, 306 n275
  - as angel of Esau, 306 n273, 307 n275
  - appearing from fire as golden calf, 622 n266
  - attempting to possess Moses' soul, 830 n946
  - Cain as son of, 965 n56
  - in charge of Mars, 131 n61
  - choosing Seir as people, 307 n275
  - disguised as Esau, 306 n273

Sammael (cont.)

downfall of, as penalty of serpent, 79 n83 and Elijah, struggle between, on day of judgment, 999 n33
 as goat in Kabbalah, 307 n275
 and God, dialogue between, 558 n42
 as greatest of angels, 131 n61
 as guardian angel of Egypt, 558 n42
 Esau, 254 n15, 306 n273
 Rome, 306 n273
 having 12 wings, 40 n155
 hiding pledges of Tamar, 347 n89
 identified with Satan, 228 n234
   Yetzer ha-Ra, 306 n275
 name, meaning of, 94 n116
 as prince of Rome, 131 n61
 roaring from mouth of golden calf, 118 n54
 as seducer of Eve, 94 n116 similarity of Beelzebul to, 965 n56
 as tempter of Abraham, 228 n234
 to be slain by Elijah, 1021
See also Samael; Satan
 Samsaweel (fallen angel)
   teaching men signs of sun, 119
 Samson, 877-880
   believed by Jacob to be Messiah, 408 blindness of, 878
   carrying gates of Gaza on shoulders, 879 n115
   character weakness of, 878
   considered one of least worthy judges by Haggadah, 874 n101
   death of, 878
   and Delilah, 880 n121
   D. selling S.'s secret to Philistines, 880
   descendants of having gigantic strength and great valor, 882 n125
     war cry of, 882 n125
   described as prophet by Josephus, 879 n116 Eluma as mother of, 879 n111
   father of Goliath, 917 n29
   hair of, emitting bell-like sound, 878 having sexual intercourse with Philistine women, 880 n121 having spirit of God, 879 n116

Samson (cont.)

maimed in both feet, 878
 marrying Philistine woman from Timnah, 880 n121 mother of, Hazleponith, 878-879 n111, 879 n112
 name, meaning of, 879 n111
 as Nazirite, 878
 never recognized by God as "servant of Lord," 805 n880 (see also Solomon) not a prophet, 879 n116
 one of four heroes of tribe of Dan, 796 n854
 one of two great heroes of world who met death on account of strength, 798
 and Philistines, riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 961 possessing strength of Adam, 58
 as righteous man slain by Philistines, 223
 son of Manoa and Zelalponit, 877 spiritual distinctions of, 878
 spring of water flowing from mouth, 878
 stature of, 879 n115
 strength of, 877-878, 879 n114
   causing death, 58
 ten generations from Jacob to, 879 n111
 thirst of, 878, 879 n119
 from tribe of Dan, 680, 877
 uprooting mountains, 878 victory of, over Philistines, 878 water flowing from, rationalistic explanation of, 879-880 n119 weapon of, jawbone of ass on which Abraham rode to Mount Moriah, 878 Samuel
   activities of, 894-898
   aging suddenly, 900
   assembling people at Mizpah for prayer, 895 asserting incorruptibility, 347 n89
   birth of, 889
     as "seventh-month child," 889, 890 n13
   death of
     at age 52 years, 892 n23, 900
     shortly before death of Saul, 891 n19
   as descendant of Korah, 719 n561, 888 n1

Samuel (cont.)

doubling sections of Levites to 16 men, 683
 elder from tribe of Asher, 696
 equal to Moses, 897 n43
 executing Agag, 899, 902 n65 frail, 889
 humility of, 896 n40
 infancy and youth of, 889-891
   learning and intelligence of, as infant, 889
 Samuel brought to Shiloh at age two, 889 unusual qualities of, as infant, 889
 as Levite, not able to perform any holy service after age of 50 years, 903 n70 linking period of judges with period of kingdom, 887
 as Nazirite, 897 n43
   not permitted to slay Agag, 902 n65
 one of princes who assist Messiah, 100 n142
 performing water ordeal, 626 n279
 as prophet, 887
   as early prophet, 501 n109
   as master of prophets, 897 n43
 and Saul, 887-909
   conversation between, after Samuel's death, 900-901
   Samuel appearing to Saul after death, 904 n77
   Samuel giving Saul sign of who successor would be, 899
   Samuel interceding for Saul, 899
   Samuel mourning for Saul, 900
 name
   made known by God, 889, 890 n17
   meaning of, 890 n17
 one of those called "man of God" in Scripture, 838 n965 (see also man of God) performing sacrificial rites though not a priest, 896 n42 premature death of, due to sins, 903 n68 receiving special revelation that David to be king, 913 revelation to, punishment of priests, 896 n40 ruling
   for 12 years, 892 n23
   for 40 years, 903 n69

Samuel (cont.)

sons of

Ahijah and Joel (prophet), 895, 897 n46

repenting, 895

two in number, 891 n22

unworthy, 895

story of call of, 895-896 n40

summoned back to earth, accompanied by Moses and a number of pious, 900 victorious over Philistines, 895

Samuil (angel)

bringing Enoch to heavens, 126

Sanachiah

elder from tribe of Naphtali, 696

Sanballat the Horonite

oath of Ahasuerus to, 1167

sanctuary

as asylum for criminals, 947 n8

center of, as Eben Shetiyah, 278

as commandment revealed to Moses, 545 curtains for, woven by virgins, 1075, 1077 n30 day of consecration of, to be reckoned with days of creation, 660 described as "avenger of unchastity," 672 n393

first, erected by Moses, 545 heavenly (see also Temple: heavenly) altar of, having jewel engraved with name of Messiah, 1 distance of 18 miles from terrestrial sanctuary to, 280 n141 in front of God, 1

one of seven things created in beginning, 1

relation of, to terrestrial sanctuary, 661 n381

terrestrial sanctuary corresponding to, 661 n381

terrestrial sanctuary placed opposite, 280 n141

invisible, 996 (see also invisibility)

punishments of Israel coming from, 730

terrestrial

corresponding to heavenly sanctuary, 649 n346, 661 n381

at distance of 18 miles from heavenly sanctuary, 280 n141 placed opposite heavenly sanctuary, 280 n141

sanctuary (cont.)terrestrial (cont.)

relation of, to heavenly sanctuary, 661 n381

as testimony to forgiveness of God, 638

and vessels, anointed with holy oil, 657

See also Holy of Holies; Holy Place; Tabernacle; Temple sanctuary, celestial. See sanctuary: heavenly

Sandalfon (archangel)

as angel name of Elijah, 996

angel of prayer according to Rabbis, 53 n13

connected with Ziz, 33 n139

description of, 615

and differentiation of sex in embryo, 57 n20

function of, 17 n70

huge proportions of, 613

instructing R. Joseph della Reyna how to conquer Satan, 1018-1019 making crown for head of Lord, 613-614

name, meaning of, 1000 n40

as "tall angel" seen by Moses in third heaven, 505 n117

sandek

at circumcision ceremony, 1020 n103

See also circumcision

sand of seashore

Amorites as numerous as, 310

descendants as numerous as, 229-230

inhabitants of Africa as numerous as, 418

sons of Jacob as numerous as, 421-422

See also dust: of earth; star(s): in heavens

Sanhedrin

appointed by God to judge serpent, 95 n124

heavenly, members of, 71 in number, 1027 n6

held responsible for the many who died in war with Benjaminites, 883-884 n134

members of

as descendants of Issachar, 408

70 in number, 274 n114, 621

70 of 77 pious men in Israel, 629 n287 (see also under pious: men)

Sanhedrin (cont.)members of (cont.)

71 in number, 95 n124

qualifications for membership in, 777 n783

turning Jehoiaxim over to Nebuchadnezzar, 1060

and worship of golden calf, 621

sapphire (color). See under color(s)

sapphire (stone)

increasing strength of vision and healing diseases, 651 quarry of

under Divine Throne, 635 n305

in tent of Moses, 635 n306

stone of tribe of Issachar in breastplate of Aaron, 651

See also precious stones

Saracen

angel appearing as, 206 n136

Sarah

and Abraham

S. as wife of A., 177

S. blaming A., 203 n121

S. calling A. her brother, 190

S. complaining to A., 201

S. insisting that A. divorce from Hagar, 219

S. known as sister of A., 216

S.'s beauty observed by A., 189

barrenness of, 201, 202 n116, 117

cured, 218, 219 n203

as punishment for impious life,

according to Hagar, 289

n198

beauty of, 59, 60 n24, 189, 191

n68, 191 n73, 205, 216,

234

S. as one of four most beautiful women in history, 940

S. as one of four women of perfect beauty, 941 n132

burial of, 233-237

in Cave of Machpelah, 234

in Hebron, 98 n137

children of, cursed by Abimelech, causing blindness of Isaac, 267 n74

daughter of

Haran, 177

Shem, 244 n309

death of, 207 n151, 231, 233-237, 247, 251

confusion in land after, 234

by kiss of God, 237 n270

in month of Shevat, 1152 n108

mourning in land after, 234

premature, reason for, 236 n259

Sarah (cont.)

eavesdropping in own tent, 65
 in Egypt, 191 n80
 and Isaac
   S. appearing to I. after her death, 242 n304
   S. defending I. as being her own child, 224
   S. dressing I. in finery, 226
   S. going to Hebron looking for I., 234
   S. laughing at announcement about I., 207 n151
   S. mourning for I., 233
   S.'s attachment to I., 226
 jealousy of, 220 n214
 length of life of, 236 n258
 light of, burning miraculously throughout week, 240-241 likeness of, hanging in Pharaoh's bedroom, 411 n400
 merits of, one of five charms to protect Jacob, 300 n247 (see also merits)
 name of, also called Iscah, 178, 178 n38, 180 n44 one of four mothers, 434 n3 (see also Rebekah, Rachel, Leah)
 one of seven sterile women who bore children, 878 n111
 one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
 as only woman with whom God ever spoke, 76, 254 n18 prophetic gift of, 180 n44 protected from Pharaoh by angel, 190 punishment of, for lack of faith, 207 n151 Rebekah as counterpart of, 241 resemblance of Joseph to, 409 rewarded for trust in God, 219 n203
 suckling 100 babies, 218, 219 n208
 supervising one of seven classes of women, 23 n97
 taken as wife by Abimelech, 216 tent of, remaining unoccupied until Isaac married Rebekah, 242 n302 treating Hagar as bondwoman, 203 n122
 in women's Paradise, 940
 words of resignation of, 234, 235 n256

Sarga

one of five scribes going with Ezra, 1122

Sargiel (angel)

filling hell with souls of wicked, 508 n118

Sargon

one of eight other names of Sennacherib, 1054 n92

Sartan

battle at, 315
 identified with "tower of Straton," i.e., Caesarea, 315 n292
 name, spelling of, 315 n292
 Pasusi, king of, slain by Jacob, 314 walls of, scaled by Judah, Gad, Simon, Levi, Reuben, Dan, Naphtali, and Issachar, 315

Satan

accompanying Esau on hunt, 264-265 accusing Abraham before God, 224-225
   Israel, 3 n8, 27 n105
   men, 376 n224
 and Adam
   fall of S. as punishment for leading A. to sin, 64 n35
   S. demanding trial of wit with A., 62-63
   S. refusing to do homage to A., 63
   S.'s jealousy of A., 62, 63 n35, 64 n35
 advising Nimrod, 176
 appearances of
   to Abraham, 226
   to David in form of deer, 933
     in shape of bird, 928
   to Eve in guise of angel, 87
   to Isaac, 225-226
   to Nimrod, 171
   to Sarah, 233-234, 236 n259
 assisting Noah in cultivating grapes, 153 attempting to assign names to animals, 63
 blindness of, 1128 n57
 called "the ugly one," 95 n130
 created out of fire of hell, 64 n35
 as destroying angel, 538 n216
 disguised as
   angel, 93
   beggar, 224, 225 n226, 1171 n167
   appearing to Job, 455-456

Satan (cont.)

disguised as (cont.)
   beggar (cont.)
     frequent in Jewish legends, 456 n14 bread merchant in story of Job, 458 human, 176, 178 n34
   king of Persia, 457
   large brook of water in road, 227 old man, 226, 227, 233-234
   serpent, 96 n131
     appearing to Moses, 496 distinguished from Sammael, 131 n61 enmity with man, 63
 entering clay image made by Enosh, 117
 and Eve
   S. appearing to E. in guise of angel, 87
   S. having sexual intercourse with E., 101
   S. trying to hinder E. in her penance, 87
 fall of, 62-64, 94 n116 Eldad's story of, 63 n34
   as punishment for conduct toward Job, 64 n35
     leading Adam to sin, 64 n35
   S. cast down from heaven, 462
   S. dismissed from heavenly host, 92
   S. flung from heaven by God, 63
 having no power to accuse Israel on Day of Atonement, 632 n300 having to flee before high priest, 676
 having 12 wings, 62
 hindering pious, 327
 holding sway in this world, 563-564
 identified with Azazel and smoking furnace, 200 n114
   Leviathan in kabbalistic literature, 42 n187
   serpent, 95 n131
 indicting Jews, 1158-1161
 inspiring Elihu against Job, 460-461 jealousy of, 72
   of Adam, 62, 63-64 n35
   of God, 63 n35

Satan (cont.)

- and Job, 455-457
    - good motives of S., in testing J., 463 n39
  - S. accusing J. on New Year's Day, 456
  - S. appearing to J.
    - as beggar, 455-456
    - as bread merchant, 458
  - S. asking God to put J. into his power, 456
  - S. depriving J. of all he owned, 457
  - S. given power over J.'s body and possessions, 457
  - S. surrendering to J., 458
  - S. vanquished by J., 458, 462
  - knocking knife out of Abraham's hand, 232 n242
  - as Mastema, 159 n74
  - and Michael
    - struggle between, over body of Moses, 830 n946
  - and Moses (see also Satan: and Michael)
    - S. attacking M. on road to Egypt, 517 n146
    - S. disguised as M., 620
  - permitted to claim everything corporeal as his due, 830 n946
  - as prince
    - of darkness or angel of death, 11 n41
    - of earth, 21 n75
    - of Edom, 306 n275
  - rebellion of, and fall of angels, 121 n57
  - seizing high priest by throat to prevent him from performing service, 677 n415
  - and Torah
    - S. inquiring about whereabouts of Torah, 617
  - to renew rebellion on last day, 64 n35
  - transformation of, into angel, 94 n118
  - winning serpent to his side, 92-93
  - See also* angel(s), general: types, of death; demon(s); devil(s); Mastema; prince of darkness; Samael; Sammael
- Satanel. See Satan
- Satarel (archangel)
- as angel of hidden things, 120 n57

Saturday

- chosen as day of rest for Hebrews
  - by Moses, 487, 488 n72
- as unlucky day, 488 n72

Saturn

- Kafziel as angel in charge of, 131 n61
  - representing star of evil, 103 n5
- saturnalia
- heathen celebration of, 87, 88 n107

Saul

- assisted by angel in covering great distance, 901 n48
- attempting to communicate with dead Samuel, 900
- attitude of, toward Kenites, 902 n60
- beauty of, 60 n24, 898
  - S. possessing beauty of body but not of soul, 905 n80
- census of army of, 899
- census of Israel of
  - when setting out against Amalek, 637
  - when setting out against Nahash, 637

and David

- D. pursued by S., 918-920
- S. and three sons slain on account of D.'s sin, 933
- S. as one of ten adversaries of D., 922 n59
- S. persecuting D. and followers, 899
- S.'s jealousy of D., 916
- S. surpassed by D. in knowledge and as teacher, 908 n102
- S. taking away daughters Merab and Michal from D., 905 n80

death of

- in battle, 901
- by cutting neck, 58
  - as punishment for executing priests at Nob, 904 n78
- as descendant of Benjamin, 317, 902 n55
  - victorious against Agag, king of Amalek, 680
- descendants of
  - left hanging by Gibeonites for half a year, 1176
  - seven given to Gibeonites, 935
- devotion of, to Torah, 905 n80
- free from sin, 901-902 n53
- given sword by angel, 899

Saul (cont.)

and Jonathan

- S. ready to slay J. for tasting food on certain day, 898

as king, 898-905

- court of, 905-909
- length of rule of, 905 n80
- one of kings anointed with holy oil, 658 n371, 893 n30
- S. as first king of Israel to rule over Edom, 324
- S. as first ruler of Israel, 409
- S. chosen as king on account of merits of ancestors, 898
- S. losing crown on account of Agag, 899

lacking trust in God, 922 n55

names and titles of

- called Cush, "Ethiopian," 941 n134
- called "elect of God," 901
- given title "elect of God" in Scripture, 912 n1
- observing priestly laws of purity, 901, 905 n80
- observing sacrificial ordinances, 898-899
- one of princes who assist Messiah, 100 n142
- piety of, 901, 937 n113
- possessing neck of Adam, 58
- and priests of Nob (see also Nob)
  - S.'s death as punishment for executing priests, 904 n78
- S. executing 85 priests, 904 n78
- S. regretting executing priests, 901

prophecies of

- concerning reign of David, 937 n113
- concerning war of Gog and Magog, 898

prophetic gift of, 898

prosperity of Israel under, 637

punished

- for seeking help from sorcerers, 903 n73
- for taking Michal from David by having Esther taken by Ahasuerus, 1144 n68
- reporting to Eli that sons were killed in battle and ark captured, 893 n33
- responsible for suffering of Jews at hands of Haman, 1164 n140
- retaking tablets from Goliath, 898

Saul (cont.)

- as righteous man slain by Philistines, 223
  - seized by evil spirit, 899, 903 n67
  - sign of successor of, given by Samuel, 899
  - sin of
    - sparing Agag and wife, 902 n62, 1163
    - out of greed, 902 n62, 903 n66
    - to be made up for by Esther, 1163
  - son of Simeon and Bunah, 348
  - three sons of, righteous men slain by Philistines, 223
  - virtues of, 905 n80
    - innocence as chief virtue of, 898
    - modesty of, 898
  - vision of, 901 n52
  - and warfare
    - against Amalekites, 899
    - S. as distinguished military hero, 898
    - S.'s attack on Nahash, king of Ammonites, 898
    - S.'s campaign against Philistines, 898
  - wealth of, 899
  - wife of, 901
- Saul of Pethor
- succeeding Samlah as king of Edomites, 420
- scapegoat
- Azazel as, 137-138 n10
  - ceremony of, on Day of Atonement, 137-138 n10
- scepter
- engraved with Ineffable Name to be given to Moses in world to come, 807
  - given to Messiah by God, one of seven wonders of Messiah, 1021
- scholar(s)
- compared to ark of covenant, 644 n330
  - exile of, identified with exile of Jehoiachin, 1063 n132
  - interpreting Torah in 49 different ways, 514
  - Jehoshaphat gracious toward, 987
  - Jewish, prophesied to be destroyed by Romans, 254 n15
  - made to engage in war by Asa, 985, 986 n22
  - thrones for, in Paradise, made from pearls, 507

scholar(s) (cont.)

- wandering of, from town to town, 1161 n122
- Scorpio (Scorpion) (sign of Zodiac)
- answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151
- scorpion(s)
- bite of, removing foreskin of Abraham, 203 n126
  - in caves of hell, 13
  - in desert of Shur, 566
  - heads of, used in sorcery, 760 n720
  - in hell, fantastic proportions of, 506
  - killed by sparks from cherubim, 643
  - lizard as antidote for venom of, 43
- scribe(s)
- accompanying Ezra, names of, 1125 n50
  - heavenly, office of, given to Enoch or Elijah, 1126 n50
  - tradition of belonging to tribe of Levi, 410 n387
- Scripture
- translation of, into Greek, 156 n65
  - See also* Bible; canon
- sea
- casting up valuable things for Solomon, 949 n16
  - creation of, showing God's might, 29 n115
  - of death
    - identified with ocean, 20 n73
    - not to be confused with "Dead Sea" (i.e., Sea of Sodom), 20 n73
  - distinguished from water, 9 n23
  - growing restless at winter solstice, 2
  - hymn of praise of, 44 (see also praise)
  - in Jewish legend, 9 n23
  - separating second from first earth, 6
  - over seventh earth, 6
  - waging war against wood of field, 20-21 n73
  - See also* ocean; water(s)
- sea (Red Sea)
- division of
    - one of five tokens granted to Israel after Exodus, 565
  - ordered to divide before Moses, 48
  - quarreling with earth about corpses of Egyptians, 561
- sea monsters
- created on fifth day, 82 n98

Sea of Chaifa

- in land of Zebulun, 822
  - site where all treasures of sea brought to shore, 822
  - treasures of ocean stored in, for pious, 822
- Sea of Sodom
- healing of, 215 n184
  - known to Pausanias and Church Fathers as "Dead Sea," 20 n73
- seasons
- four colors corresponding to, 971
- Sebam (city)
- name, meaning of ("perfume"), 799
- secret(s)
- lore of Torah, 949 n14
  - of world revealed to Solomon, 948
  - See also* mysteries
- Sedecla
- daughter of Adod, witch of Endor, 903 n74
  - name, meaning of, 903 n74
- seeds
- curative properties of, 157
- Seenamias
- and Kenaz, sons of Caleb, as spies, 844 n10
- Sefer Milhamot Benei Yaakov* (Book of Wars of Sons of Jacob), 315 n292
- Sefer Raziel*. See Raziel, Book of
- Seir (descendant of Esau)
- and angel of Edom
    - Seir chosen as people by Sammael, angel of Edom, 307 n275
    - seizure of angel of Edom by hair, 306-307 n275
    - "hairy one," 306-307 n275
  - sons of
    - making alliances with children of East and Midianites against sons of Esau, 416
    - quarreling with sons of Esau, 415
- Seir (place)
- Bet Gubrin identified with, 306 n275
  - Esau moving family to, 271
  - identified with Rome, 254 n19
  - inhabitants of
    - as experts in agriculture, 324-325 n322
    - identified with Amalekites, 307 n278
  - Israel going to, in Messianic time, 304

Seir (cont.)

- land of, divided among five sons of Esau, 416
- made province of Kittim, 421
- name, meaning of, 255 n28
- one of names of Sinai, 501 n113
- one of three things to be removed before advent of Messiah, 307 n275

Seir, Mount

- Esau's family taking up residence in, 320
- home of Judith, wife of Esau, 262

Sekwi (the seer), 32 n137

- name of Ziz, 29

Selac, Mount. See Telag, Mount

Selath

- one of seven sinners, 857 n9

Seleucia

- one of five scribes going with Ezra, 1122

self-denial

- as remedy for barrenness, 888 n7

Selihah

- prayer of Jonah having form of, 1033 n32

See also prayers, Jewish

Semalion (angel)

- announcing death of Moses, 835 n955

Semiramis

- Ahab and Zedekiah attempting to seduce, 1106 n106
- name, meaning of, 1063 n134
- one of two reigning heathen queens, 990 n51 (see also Vashti)
- wife of Nebuchadnezzar, 1073 n21
- interceding for Jehoiachin, 1061

Senaah (elder from tribe of Benjamin), 696

seneb (thornbush)

- numerical value of (120), 502
- See also* burning bush; thornbush

Sennacherib

- army of, 1045-1046
- annihilated by Gabriel, 53 n13, 1046
- campaign of, against Judah, 1051 n65
- claiming to be god, 1103-1104 n100, 1105 n105
- conquering Moabites, Ammonites, Arabs, and Ethiopia, 1051 n65
- as cosmocrator, 1047 n51
- defeat of, caused by mice, 1047 n58

Sennacherib (cont.)

- downfall of, taking place on same day Hezekiah became ill, 1052 n71
- eight other names of (Tiglath-pileser, Palnesser, Shalmanesser, Pul, Sargon, Osnappar, Rabba-yakkira), 1054 n92
- eight sins of (neglect of justice, idolatry, incest, bloodshed, blasphemy, arrogance, slander, obscenity), 562 n54, 1048 n60
- father-in-law of Nebuchadnezzar, 1072
- as grandfather of Nebuchadnezzar, 1073 n22
- killed by two sons, 1046
- not able to conquer Luz, 861
- pious descendants of sons of, 1048 n61
- policy of exiling conquered populations, 1047 n51
- punishment of, 215 n179
- receiving tribute from King Ahaz, 397
- Shebna delivering Jerusalem into hands of, 1051 n63
- Shemaiah and Abtalion as descendants of, 869 n72
- size of camp of, 1045
- sons of
  - becoming proselytes, 1046
  - graves of, 1048 n61
- story of death of, 1046
- suffering death by fire, 1048 n60
- taking throne of Solomon from Egypt, 969
- to be Gog and Magog, according to divine plan, 1049
- victory of Hezekiah over, 1045-1046

sense

- one of ten parts of body received from God, 606 (see also body, human)

Sepharvites

- worshiping horse, 1044

serafim. See seraphim

Serah (daughter of Asher)

- bringing glad tidings to Jacob, 411 n398
- entering Paradise alive, 73 n67, 132 n62, 391, 393 n295 (see also Paradise: entering alive)

Serah (cont.)

- one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
- raised in house of Jacob, 348
- as 70th member of family of Jacob, 396 n321
- singing the story of Joseph to Jacob, 391
- skilled in playing harp, 391
- telling Moses that Joseph's coffin in Nile, 428-429

Serah (daughter of Malchiel and Hadorah), 348

Seraiah (brother of Baruch)

- last high priest, 1076 n29

Seraiah (elder from tribe of Dan), 696

- connected with Christian legend about descent of anti-Christ from tribe of Dan, 796 n854

descendant of Rahab, 844 n12

- one of four heroes of tribe of Dan, 796 n854

- one of scribes accompanying Ezra, 1125 n50

seraph (pl. seraphim), 801

- angered by Uzziah, 1040
- burning books of accusations against Israel, 3 n8
- feet of, concealed, 17 n70
- as God's advisors, 52 n12
- having six wings, 17 n70, 504, 1043 n36
- and intimidation of evil spirits, 1
- roaring like lions, 613-614
- in seventh heaven, 504, 505 n117
- hiding face with two wings, 504
- surrounding Divine Throne, 6
- silent on Sabbath, 1043 n36
- size of wings of, 504
- taking Adam to river Acheron, 96
- and translation of Enoch, 129
- See also* angel(s), general: types

Serapis

- magic dogs as reminiscence of, 548 n3

Sered (elder from tribe of Zebulun), 696

Seriel (fallen angel)

- teaching men signs of moon, 119

serpent(s)

- accusations of, against God, 94 n118
- as birthmark of Esau, 253
- brass (brazen), 747-749
- hissing of, as healing remedy, 1053 n90 serpent(s) (cont.)brass (cont.)

made by Moses, broken by Hezekiah, 1053 n89

change in appearance of, 37-38

as cleverest of animals, 37 climbing tree of knowledge, 95

n119

curse on, by God, 75, 78 n82, 94

cutting off feet of, 79 n83, 84 depicted on tribe of Dan's flag in wilderness, 686, 688, 689

n447

desiring to have intercourse with women, 102 n3

dust as food of, 747 eating fruit of tree, 71-72

enmity of

with man, 94, 96 n131

with woman, 75

envious of

Adam, 70 n56

human conjugal relations, 71

man, 71, 72 n60

and Eve

serpent conversing with E., 71, 93 serpent injecting evil inclination into E., 95 n119

facing mate during copulation, 42
n190

form of, resembling man, 37, 94,
96 n131

fumigation with horns of hind as remedy against, 43 n190

identified with Satan, 95 n131

idol of Ammonites, engraved on sword of children of Ammon, 922 n59

killed by sparks from cherubim, 643 kind of death caused by, 748 n654 knowing place of hidden treasure,

957 n31

leprosy of, 79 n83

and man with jug of milk, controversy before Solomon, 951-952 old, 96 n131

poison of, as evil inclination, 93

as possessor of gold and silver, 73
n60

punishments of

carried out by angels, 76

nine in number, 79 n83

ten in number, 75, 95 n131

rod of Aaron becoming, 519

rod of Moses becoming, 512

serpent(s) (cont.)

similarities of, to man, 71, 72-73
n60

slandering God, 73 n62

speaking Hebrew, 70 n58

splitting tongue of, 79 n84

springing forth from backbone of human body, 43 n190

superiority of, 42 n185, 71

symbol of all that is wicked and hated by God, 253

venom of, 15 n59

weakness of, for female sex, 43
n190

wickedness of, 43 n190

Serug (son of Reu)

as fourth generation from Noah, 167 idolater, 161 n76

mother of, 168 n3

name, meaning of, 167, 168 n5

servant of God

title given to Abraham, Jacob, Israel, Messiah, Moses,
Joshua, Caleb, David,
Isaiah, Eliakim, Job,
Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, Azariah, Nebuchadnezzar, Zerubbabel, angels, 452
n2, 805 n880

See also servant of Lord

servant of Lord, 928 n78

those describing self as (Abraham, Jacob, Moses, David), 805
n880

See also servant of God

service, Divine

one of three things for whose sake world exists, 660

Sesanchis. See Shishak

Seth

and Adam

S. attending A.'s sickness, 91

S. beholding vision at A.'s death, 96

S. only one awake when A.'s body buried by angels, 98

S. receiving knowledge of Torah
from A., 152 n51

S. taking care of burial of A., 98
n137

ancestor of

Enoch, 126

humanity, 115, 592

Messiah, 115

astronomical knowledge of, 116
n53

as bearer of revelation, 102 n1

Seth (cont.)

birth of

in Adamah, second earth, 110

with sign of covenant on him, 115, 248 n318 (see also covenant[s]: sign of)

descendants of, 115-117

as inventors of astronomy, 116

dog taking up residence with, 36 dwelling in vicinity of Paradise, 138

family of, becoming corrupted, 138

as foundation of mankind, 115
n50

glorification of, 116 n52

identified with Messiah by Gnostic sect, 116 n52

as inventor

of division of time into weeks, months, and years, 116
n53

of Hebrew characters, 116 n53

marriage of

to niece, 112 n42

to sister, 113 n42

meeting of, with wild beasts, 92
n113

name, meaning of, 115 n50

not needing to be circumcised,
115, 248 n318

one of seven pious men in pre-Abrahamic times, 116-117
n53 (see also under pious:
men)

one of shepherds who assist Messiah on right, 100
n142

one of 13 men born perfect, 115

pillars made by, 116 n53

receiving knowledge from angel Uriel, 116 n53

soul of entering into Messiah and Moses, 116 n52

and Torah

S. receiving knowledge of Torah
from Adam, 152 n51

S. transmitting knowledge of Torah to Enoch, 152 n51 translation of, to angels, 116 n52

as virtuous man, 116

Sethiani

Gnostic sect, 116 n52

Sethur

elder from tribe of Joseph, 696

son of Michael, spy representing tribe of Asher, 705

- seven (number)
 significance of, 8 n21
See also number: 7; seventh
- seventh
 day
   rest on, as token of resurrection, 99
   as Sabbath, 682 (see also Sabbath) generation, most excellent, producing Enoch, 682
 love of God for, 682 month, Tishri, month of holy days, 682 patriarch, Moses, 682
 period of time, favorite of God, 682 sabbatical year, as year of Jubilee, 682 son of Jesse, David, 682 world, only one inhabited by human beings, 682 year, as sabbatical year, 682
See also number: 7; seven (number)
- seventh-month child
 all prophets as, 890 n13
 Ichabod as, 890 n13
 Isaac as, 890 n13
 Samuel as, 890 n13
- sex
 differentiation of, in embryo, 57 n20
- sexual desire viewed as result of eating forbidden fruit, 79 n85
- sexual immorality
 of generation of flood, 145 n26
- sexual intercourse of Adam with animals, 66 n39
 before fall of Adam and Eve, 66 n39 between men and demons, 82 n98 prohibited on Sabbath by Samaritans and other sects, 1125 n46
- Shaare Mavet
 in fifth earth, 6
 one of seven divisions of hell, 13
See also hell
- Shaare Zalmavet
 in fifth earth, 6
 one of seven divisions of hell, 13
See also hell
- Shabdaz
 famous horse of Persian king Khorsau II, 1176 n169
- Shadad ben Ad
 powerless against angel of death, 972
- shadow
 not cast by demons, 82 n98
 as soul that reflects body, 82 n98 (see also polypsychism)
- Shakkara (Liar). See Sherek
- Shakrura (Archdeceiver). See Sharkar
- Shalem
 name given by Shem to site of altar of Abraham, 231
- Shalem (Place of Peace), 231, 307 n279 (see also Salem)
- Shalgiel (angel)
 angel of snow, prostrating before Metatron, 130
- Shallum
 another name for Josiah, 1066 n1
   Zedekiah, 1066 n1, 1062 n124
 husband of prophetess Huldah, 1062 n118
 name, meaning of, 1066 n1
 son of Tikvah, husband of Huldah, revived by contact with bones of Elisha, 1030
- Shallum (Jeremiah's cousin)
 descendant of Rahab, 844 n12
- Shallum (uncle of Jeremiah)
 one of eight priests descended from Rahab, 1093 n65
- Shalmanesser
 one of eight other names of Sennacherib, 1054 n92
- Shalmon (son of Nahshon, father of Boaz), 864 n34
- Shalom
 elder from tribe of Asher, 696
 one of seven men refusing to worship Baal, 872-873
- shamayim* (heaven). See heaven(s)
- Shamgar
 succeeding Ehud, 869 n70
- Shamiel (angel)
 confused with Shammiel, 17 n70
 as Divine herald, 13
See also Shammiel
- shamir, 34, 35
 Abyssinian legend of, 975 n82 brought from Paradise by eagle, 975 n85 brought to Solomon, 974
 created for use in sanctuary, 975 n82 created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 82 n99, 975 n82 (see also under creation: sixth day) disappearing after destruction of Temple, 35, 975 n82
- shamir (cont.)
 entrusted by angel of sea to moorhen, 974
 given by God to angel of sea, 974 guardian bird of, wild cock, 975 n85
 properties of, 35
 size of, 35
 stone that splits rocks, used by Moses, 973 substance of, 975 n82
 used for hewing stones of Temple, 35, 40 n162
 as worm, 40 n165
See also reptiles; salamander; serpent(s)
- Shammiel (angel)
 probably correct reading for Shamiel, 17 n70
See also Shamiel
- Shammua (son of Zaccur)
 spy representing tribe of Reuben, 705
- Shamshiel (angel)
 angel of day, prostrating before Metatron, 130
 as prince of Paradise, 507
- Shaphar (son of Hori)
 name, meaning of, 705
 spy representing tribe of Simeon, 705
- Shapor (king)
 cohorts of, swallowed by snake in desert of Shur, 566
- Sharkar (judge in Gomorrah), 208
- Shaul (elder from tribe of Simeon), 696
- shav* ("lie"). See shin (letter)
- shaving
 as disgrace, 719
- Shavuot. See Pentecost
- Sheba (land), 959
 distance from, to Palestine, 458 n21 inhabitants of, thinking Solomon to be Messiah, 244 n311
 as land of sorcerers, 965 n55
 queen of (see Queen of Sheba)
- Sheba (son of Bichri)
 father of Jeroboam, 983
 identified with Micah, son of Delilah, 884 n139 killed by inhabitants of Abel of Beth-maacah, 982 n2 rebelling against David, 922 n59, 981
 taking refuge in Abel of Beth-maacah, 981-982 n2

Sheba (son of Keturah), 244 n311
 Shebat. See Shevat
 Shebir (king of Mahanaim)
   slain by Jacob, 314
 Shebnah (high priest)
   afflicted with leprosy as punishment for evil deeds, 1051 n64
   as Amarkol (high Temple official), 1051 n62 delivering Jerusalem into hands of Sennacherib, 1051 n63 dragged to death by Assyrians, 1048, 1051 n65
   most prominent scholar of his time, 1051 n64 opponent of Hezekiah, 1048 treachery of, 1048
 Shecaniah (elder from tribe of Asher), 696 Shechem (person)
   and Dinah
     rape of D. by S., 307
     S. desiring to marry D., 307
     S. giving city of Shechem to D., 405 outrage at, 307-309
   son of Hamor, 308
 Shechem (place)
   bones of Joseph buried in, 429 depicted on Simeon's flag in wilderness, 688 given to David by Shechem (person), 405 given to Dinah as gift, 405 identified with Salem by Samaritans, 197 n102 inhabitants of, being circumcised, 308-309
   and Jacob
     Eliphaz and Esau pursuing J. opposite Shechem, 274
     J. establishing bathhouses, marketplaces, and a mint in Shechem, 307 n280
     J. journeying to Shechem, after Succoth, 304
     J. settling in area around Shechem, 314
     J.'s war against Shechem, 406 n377
   Shechem as one of two gifts given to Joseph by Jacob, 405
   Shechem as place of ill omen for J. and offspring, 331-332 survivors of, telling Jashub, king of Tappuah, what sons of Jacob had done, 310

Shechem (cont.)
   ten tribes of Israel rebelling against David in, 331 to be called city of imbeciles, 438
   war against, 309-311
   wickedness of, 311
 Shechemites
   defeat of, 316 n292
   killing of, justification for, 311 n290
 sheep
   associated with wine, 153, 155 n58
   black, Jacob asked for, as wages, 290 of dedication offering, corresponding to government officials, 671 fleece of, tribute to priests, 721 Israel imaged as, 859, 860 n20
   and sacrifice of Noah, 150
 she-goat(s). See goat(s) Sheilah (daughter of Jephthah)
   God appearing to, 875
   going out to meet Jephthah, 875
   name, meaning of, 875
   prayer of, 875
   saying Torah speaks only of animal sacrifices, 875
 shekel(s)
   five, redemption money for first-born, 682 half offering of
       reason for, 637
       to sanctuary at second census, 637
     significance of, 637
 sheker ("falsehood"). See shin (letter)
 Shekinah
   accompanying spies, 706
   and angel(s)
     angel(s) keeping faces toward, 503 distance from Shekinah to angels, 10 n30, 16 n64 glory of Shekinah as subsistence of angels, 16 n62, 207 n143 radiance of Shekinah sustaining angels, 635 n309 beheld by dead rising from graves, 23 n97
     Lot's wife when turning to look back, 213 brightness of, 117 (see also Shekinah: glory of; Shekinah: radiance of)

Shekinah (cont.)
   bringing number of Israelites to 600,000 at time of Exodus, 393 n305 calling for repentance of sons of Korah, 727 causing loss of memory, 406 departing from
     Abraham, 211, 212 n166
     David for a time, 928
   sanctuary on account of sins of Manasseh, 1057 n98
   Shekinah never departing from western wall, 1076 n27
   Temple and not returning until time of Isaiah, 1077 n30 descending between cherubim in Tabernacle, source of 17th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127 drawing close to mortals because of Amram's piety, 473 drawn back by six righteous men (Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Levi, Kohath, Amram), 473 drawn back to earth by Moses, 473 dwelling with husband and wife, 319 n312
     on Mount of Olives for 13½ years, 1076 n27 only with those who are strong, rich, wise, and humble, 1032 n28 only with those whose spirit is joyful, 717 n550 originally among men, 473
     in synagogue in Nehardea, 1063 n134
     under tree of life, 118 n56
   exile of, 542, 543 n240, 583 n150
   Shekinah going with Israel into exile, 393 n305
   first journey of, during Isaiah's time, 1057 n98 gazing at light of, as one delight of world to come, 645 glory of, as subsistence of angels, 16 n62, 207 n143 (see also Shekinah: brightness of; Shekinah: radiance of)
   and Holy Land
     Shekinah dwelling in, 260, 280 n137, 392
     for sake of Jacob, 256 n35
   Shekinah not able to reside outside of, 291

Shekinah (cont.)

- as holy spirit, 276 n124
- horn of, one of four horns in four corners of Tabernacle, 648
- and Isaac
  - I. beholding face of Shekinah, 837
  - I. giving up life at appearance of Shekinah, 232 n243
  - I. looking at Shekinah at time of Akedah, 267 n74
- Shekinah causing I. to forget secret of end of time, 406
- Shekinah deserting I., 270, 276 n124
- and Jacob
  - Shekinah accompanying J.'s funeral cortege, 413
  - Shekinah accompanying J. to Egypt, 392
  - counted among 70 family members, 396 n321
  - Shekinah addressing J., 392
  - Shekinah causing J. to forget secret of end of time, 406
  - Shekinah over bed of J., 400
  - Shekinah taking soul of J. with kiss, 411
  - Shekinah to rest on J., 291
  - Shekinah visiting J. on deathbed, 406
- kiss of, as manner of death of Aaron, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Miriam, and Moses, 411
- in Messianic time
  - Shekinah becoming visible at third blast of Elijah on trumpet, 1021
- Michael
  - as forerunner of Shekinah, in burning bush, 501
  - indicating presence of Shekinah, 502 n115
- and Moses
  - M. to look for Shekinah where rock shows imprint of human foot, 576 n122
  - M. uniting with Shekinah, 509
  - M. wishing Shekinah might dwell with Israel, 629
  - M. wishing Shekinah might not dwell with other nations, 629
- radiance of Shekinah providing nourishment for M., 634
- Shekinah and radiance of M.'s face, 619 n260

Shekinah (cont.)

- and Moses (cont.)
  - Shekinah assisting M. in census of Levites, 682
  - Shekinah communing with M. between cherubim on ark, 643-644
  - Shekinah descending upon earth for sake of M., 509
  - Shekinah speaking through M.'s mouth, 602 n201
- number of Israelites necessary for Shekinah to dwell in their midst, 592 n177
- place of, as place of great light, 619 n260
- presence of, 630 n288
  - in assembly of ten, 16 n64
  - indicated by appearance of Gabriel or Michael, 502 n115
  - one of six blessings of generation of wilderness, 86 n105
  - in wilderness march, 692
- protecting from
  - disease, 117
  - vermin, 118 n56
- radiance of (see also Shekinah: brightness of; Shekinah: glory of)
  - on faces of circumcised, 960
  - providing nourishment for hayyot and Moses, 634
  - sustaining angels, 635 n309
- redemption of, with Israel, 542
- remaining in Paradise, 117
- resting
  - on Joseph, 351
  - on one who is joyous, 266
  - in territory of Benjamin, 825 n926
- returning to earth on day of consecration of Tabernacle, 660
- returning to heaven, 1076 n27
- revealing self only to descendants of Jacob, 280 n137
- rivers of fire flowing before, 1047 n55
- stations of, 1077 n30
  - ten in number, 1057 n98, 1076 n27
- in Temple
  - in midst of precious stones in heavenly Temple, 816
  - Shekinah absent from Second Temple, 156 n65
  - Shekinah withdrawing from Temple, 1076 n27

Shekinah (cont.)

- in Temple (cont.)
  - of Solomon, 154
  - to dwell in Israel, 638
  - to rest on mountain, 594-595
  - transferred from earth to heaven, 117, 129
  - west as place of, 824 n914
  - withdrawal of, 118 n56
    - to heaven, 661 n380
    - to lowest heaven after sin of Adam, 473
    - to second heaven after Cain's crime, 473
    - to third heaven after sins of generation of Enoch, 473
    - to fourth heaven after sins of generation of flood, 473
    - to fifth heaven during building of Tower of Babel, 473
    - to sixth heaven because of wicked Egyptians at time of Abraham, 473
    - to seventh heaven because of abominations of Sodom, 473
- Shelah
  - name, meaning of, 346 n81
  - one of seven sinners, 856
- Shelemiah
  - one of scribes accompanying Ezra, 1125 n50
  - perhaps identified with Shimur, 1125 n50
  - son of Hananiah, 1069
  - unable to take revenge on Jeremiah, 1069
- Shelomi (elder from tribe of Asher), 696
- Shelomith
  - beauty of, 486
  - and Dathan, story of Moses and, 486
  - daughter of Dibri of tribe of Dan, 486
  - and Egyptian taskmaster
    - offspring of, 486
    - S. dishonored by, 486, 689
  - son of
    - mocking showbread, 691 n451
    - not of pure descent, 689
    - rejected by tribe of Dan, 689
    - sentenced to death by stoning for blasphemy, 690
  - name, meaning of ("my God is peace"), 679
  - prince of tribe of Simeon, 679
  - presenting dedication offering, 667-668

Shem

academy of, 241, 242 n303 (see also academy; Bet ha-Midrash; Shem: and Eber, Bet ha-Midrash of) allotment of lands, islands, languages, and writing of, 157 ancestor of Assyrians, 1047-1048 n59
 as bearer of revelation, 102 n1
 book of, 160 n75
 at burial of Abraham, 237 n268
   Sarah, 235
 circumcising Abraham, 203 n126
 at circumcision of Isaac, 218
 death of, 262
 and Eber
   Bet ha-Midrash of, 252, 256 n29 (see also academy; Bet ha-Midrash; Shem: academy of) Jacob studying at, 255, 261
   transmitting instruction and knowledge to Jacob, 327
 as father of Aram, 346 n79
 as first prophet to heathens, 761 going to Paradise and receiving remedies, 159 n75 identified with Melchizedek, 197 n102 (see also Shem-Melchizedek) receiving name when God appointed him priest, 196, 197 n102
 image of, on Solomon's throne, 968
 inheriting middle of earth, 156
 and Noah
   S. as son of N., 146 n30
   S. blessed by N., 154
   S. given medical book by N., 157
   S. offering sacrifice for N., 150
   S. rewarded for covering N., 154
 one of seven patriarchs of world, 968
 one of seven pious men in pre-Abrahamic times, 116-117 n53 (see also under pious: men)
 one of seven with overlapping life terms, 982 n4
 praise of, 154
 as presiding judge over Tamar, 347 n89
 as priest, 152 n51

Shem (cont.)

prophesying to nations for 400 years, 761 receiving knowledge of Torah from Enoch, 152 n51 relating story of ark to Eliezer, servant of Abraham, 147
 at right hand of God, 450 (see also God: right hand of) sent as prophet, 217
 taking care of domestic animals, 148 n37
 third of Noah's sons, 592
 Yofiel as teacher of, in Kabbalah, 505 n117

Shema

evil spirits becoming powerless when Israelites recite, 775, 775 n774
 recited by Israelites upon awakening and retiring, 775
 recited by Jacob when Joseph embraced him, 394
See also prayers, Jewish

Shemaiah

and Abtalion, as kings of Baal-bek, 1048 n61 bearing divine message to Jeroboam, 982 n4
 death of
   S. as martyr executed by Baasha, wicked king of Israel, 982 n5
   S. as one of martyred prophets, according to Josephus, 1078 n30
 descendant of Sennacherib, 869 n72, 1046
   Sisera, 869 n72
 one of those called "man of God" in Scripture, 838 n965 (see also man of God)

Shemaiah b. Nethanel

name Moses called by Israel, 480

Shemeber

the voluptuary, king of Zeboiim, one of godless kings of Palestine, 194

Shemhazael

having intercourse with wife of Ham on ark, 152 n54
 Sihon and Og as sons of, 752 n667

Shemhazai (angel)

asking to dwell among men, 135-136
 as chief of angels, 119 grandfather of Sihon and Og, 751 and Istehar, 136

Shemhazai (cont.)

penance of, 136
 teaching men about exorcism and roots, 119
 two sons of, 136

Shemhazai (fallen angel), 118 n56

Shemiel

one of seven men refusing to worship Baal, 872-873

Shemini Atzeret. See Tabernacles

Shem-Melchizedek

born with sign of Abrahamic covenant, 197 n102 (see also covenant[s]: sign of) spoken of by Church Fathers, 197 n102

See also Shem

Sheol

all creatures descending to, 806 n891
 in fifth earth, 6
 one of seven divisions of hell, 13
 outer division of, those slain before their time in, 607
 Samael searching for Moses in, 835
 two divisions in (inner and outer), 606-607
See also Gehenna; Gehinnom; Hades; hell; netherworld; Tofet; water(s): below

Shephatiah (elder from tribe of Judah), 696

shepherd(s)

Amos as, 501 n109
 David as, 500, 501 n109
 Jacob as, 501 n109
 life of, as proper preparation for being ruler, 329 n6 Moses as, 500, 501 n109
 seven

  assisting Messiah, 100 n142
   called Messiahs, 100 n142
   as patriarchs and prophets, 100 n142
   to lead Israel with Messiah in Messianic time, 508

task of, 500

three (Moses, Aaron, Miriam), 737-739

Sherek (one of judges of Sodom), 208

Sheshai

and Ahiman and Talmi, three giants in Palestine, 707
 name, meaning of, 707
 one of three giants summoned by Sarah, 236 n259

Sheshbazzar

Daniel identified with, 1096 n76,
1120 n23
name, meaning of, 1096 n76
Zerubbabel identified with, 1120
n23

Shethar (prince of India)

having charge of wine, 1136
one of seven princes of Persia
consulted by Ahasuerus
about fate of Vashti, 1136

Shetiyyah. See Eben Shetiyyah

Shevat (month)

1st of
beginning of plagues, 528 n174
Moses serving Joshua from, to 6
Adar, 810-812
23rd of
beginning of war with Benjaminites, 883 n134
campaign of 11 tribes against children of Benjamin in, 1151 organization of Great Synagogue
in, 1152 n108
wars against worshipers of image of Micah in, 1152 n108
See also date

shewbread. See showbread

Shibah

name, meaning of, 261
place where Isaac and Philistines renewed covenant, 261

Shibboleth

pronounced as Sibboleth by Ephraimites, 406 n375,
877 n109

Shield of Abraham, 188 n56

See also God: names and titles of, 187

Shila, Rabba bar

Elijah speaking with, in heaven,
1010

Shillem (son of Naphtali)

name, meaning of, 434

Shiloah

souls bathing in, 97 n134

Shiloh

conquered by sons of Jacob, 315
king of (Zerori), slain by Jacob, 314 sanctuary at, one of seven holy places destroyed by Esau, 264
as spiritual center of Israel, 887
Shimeathites (descendants of Jethro), 590

Shimei (son of Gera)

ancestor of Mordecai, 1139

Shimei (cont.)

and David

S. as one of ten adversaries of
D., 922 n59
S. executed for ill treatment of
D., 947
S. hurling five insulting names
at D., 931 n96
S. mocking D., 1139-1140
S.'s ill treatment of D., 948 n11
S. spared by D. and Solomon, 1140 distinction of, due to merits of wife, 1140

executed

for ill treatment of David, 947 by pronouncing of name of God, 948 n11
by Solomon for breaking oath,
948 n11

Solomon's teacher, 947

Shimeon. See Simeon

Shimi bar Ashi, R.

healed by Elijah after swallowing
noxious reptile, 1003

Shimron (son of Issachar)

name, meaning of ("the observing one"), 433

Shimshai

casting lots for Haman, 1150
one of Haman's sons, 1148 n95 secretary to Ahasuerus, 1171-1172
n168

Shimur

and friends, hiding Temple vessels in tower at Baghdad, 1091
perhaps identical to Shelemiah,
1125 n50

shin (letter)

creation of world through, 3
numerical value of, 263 n69
in Shittim, standing for shalom ("peace"), 647

standing for

shav ("lie"), 3
sheker ("falsehood"), 3

See also alphabet; letters of alphabet

Shinab

father hater, king of Admah, one of godless kings of Palestine, 194

Shinar

abode of Rakyon, 192
capital of Nimrod, 161
name
associated with Babylon, 165
n88
meaning of, 165 n88

ship

Anibal sailing to Kittim in, 420 depicted on tribe of Zebulun's flag
in wilderness, 688
Latinus sailing to Africa in, 420

Shiphrah

Hebrew midwife, 469 (see also Puah; Jochebed; Miriam) identified with Jochebed, 469, 470
n17
name, meaning of, 470 n17
as proselyte, 470 n17

Shishak (pharaoh)

called "lame Pharaoh," 1062 n123, 1131 n13
demanding daughter's jointure, 983 father-in-law of Solomon, 969
name, meaning of, 984 n13
Zebub ("fly") as real name of,
984 n13

and Solomon's throne

lameness of Shishak caused by Solomon's throne, 1131
n13

Shishak appropriating Solomon's
throne, 969

Shishak attempting to ascend Solomon's throne, 1131
n13

Shishak carrying off Solomon's
throne, 983

taking wealth of Egypt away from Israelites, 397, 983

Shittim

meaning of ("follies"), 647
plague on sinners of, 783
significance of letters of, 647
sin committed at, 781 n790 24,000 descendants of Simeon falling at, 407
well of identified with Well of Lewdness, 778, 779 n787
relation to that of Sodom, 215
n184

shittim wood

bequeathed to Isaac by Abraham,
648 n344
bequeathed to Jacob by Isaac, 648
n344
boards made from, never decaying, 647
for Tabernacle
of altar of Tabernacle, 646
coming from Paradise, 648 n344
one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see
also under Tabernacle)

shittim wood (cont.)
 for Tabernacle (cont.)
   used for Tabernacle as atonement for sin committed in Shittim, 647
 taken from Paradise by Adam, 648
   n344
 Shobach (king of Armenia)
   mother of, using magic against Joshua, 851
   son of king slain by Joshua, 850 uniting 45 kings of Persia and Media against Joshua, 850
 Shobach the Aramean
   one of ten adversaries of David,
   922 n59
   stature of, 921
   war of David against, 921 Shobal
   son of, one of five other names of Bezalel, 642 (see also Bezalel: five other names
   of) Shobi (son of Nahash)
   coming to aid of David in rebellion of Absalom, 932
 shoe(s)
   loosed from feet of brothers in Egypt, 336
   ceremony of, 867 n65
   as indication of giving up conjugal life, 509, 511 n122
   in presence of Shekinah, 509,
   511 n122
   as punishment, 336
   for failing to enter into levi-rate marriage, 336, 337
   n54
   as sign of mourning, 844
   as part of price of Joseph, 337 n51
 shofar
   to be blown by God in Messianic
   times, 1022 n116
   to be blown by Michael in Messianic times, 1022
   n116
   See also instruments, musical;
   ram(s): horn of; trumpet(s) Shokhen Ad
   as acrostic, 1128 n58
   composed by Isaac, 1128 n58
   See also prayers, Jewish showbread, 48
   mocked by son of Shelomith, 691
   n451
 Shuah
   one of seven sinners, 856

Shunammite, 1028-1029
   and Elisha
     E. predicting that Shunammite would have child, 1028 hospitality of Shunammite to E., 1028
   as mother of Habakkuk, 1028 n10
   as mother of prophet Iddo, 1028
   n10
   one of 22 women of valor, 238
   n271
   rewarded for hospitality, 1029 n14
   sister of Abishag, wife of prophet Iddo, 1028
 Shunil (elder from tribe of Gad), 696 Shur, desert of filled with snakes, lizards, and scorpions, 566
   Israel journeying to, 566
   snakes in, 568 n78
 Shushan
   birthplace of Daniel, 1117 n17
   capital city of Elam, 1132
   fast and prayer meeting in, 1164-1165 festivities in, 1132-1134
   Jews fleeing from, 1132 misfortunes happening in, after edict of annihilation, 1157
 Sibboleth
   versus Shibboleth, 877 n109
 Sibyl in the moon, 256 n35 sickness
   of Adam, 91-92
   window of, in first heaven, 503
   See also disease; healing; illness;
   magic arts; medicine
 sight
   one of ten parts of body received
   from God, 606 (see also body, human)
 sign Eliezer recognizing wife of Isaac by, 239 forbidden to ask prophet for, 1052
   n79
   of identification between Rachel
   and Jacob, 282, 282 n159
   of successor of Saul, 899 signet
   as symbol of royalty, 344
 sign of covenant. See covenant[s]: sign of; also circumcision signs of earth. See earth(s): signs of signs of moon. See moon: signs of signs of sun. See sun: signs of Sihon
   claimed as child by Ham, 152 n54

Sihon (cont.)
   defeated by Israel, 751-752
   as giant, 751, 829
   guardian angel of, put in chains by
   God, 751
   killed in war against Israel, 751 king of Amorites, 751-753
   name meaning of ("foal"), 751
     other names of Arad, 751, 752 n669
       Kenaani, 752 n669
   and Og
     as sentinels of Palestine, 759
     n716
     sons of Ahiah, son of Shemhazai, one of fallen
     angels, 751
     as sons of Shemhazael, 752
     n667
     victories over, greater than victory over Pharaoh, 755,
     756 n700
   son of Ham's wife, 752 n668
   sons of Shemhazai as ancestors of,
   137 n10
   war with, taking place in Elul, 753 silence imposed on world during conflict between God and Baal, 994-995
 silver associated with Media, 648 cup, reserved for king and viceroy in Egypt, 383 n256 (see also cup, silver) and gold
     sixth artificial heaven of Hiram made from, 1104
     third and fifth divisions of Paradise built from, 19 utensils made from, in Solomon's time, 948
     wainscoting of fifth division of Paradise made from, 19
   hall of, in Paradise, for righteous of Israel, 23 n97
   one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see
   also under Tabernacle)
   one of thrones of Nimrod made of, 162 second division of Paradise built
   from, 19
   in Tabernacle, symbolizing sovereignty of Persia and Media over Israel, 640
   on throne of Pharaoh, 364

silver (cont.)

- thrones for righteous proselytes made from, 507
- thrones in Paradise made from, 507
- of vessels in dedication offering, corresponding to years from creation to advent of Moses in 40th year, 671

Simeon (priest)

- one who hid holy vessels, 1092 n63

Simeon (son of Jacob)

- age of, at death, 120 years, 437
- bones of, carried to Hebron, 437 and Bunah

Saul as son of, 348

- censured by Jacob for sin, 410 n387

deathbed confession of, 436

death of, 437

- descendants of, to be dispersed, 407

Dinah as wife of, 348 n95

fasting for two years, 436

- frightening valiant men of Pharaoh, 374 and Gad, setting out to slay Joseph, 332

and Joseph

S. guilty of envy of J., 436

S. kept by J. as hostage, 374

S. not wanting to relinquish J.'s coat, 340

S. threatening war on Midianites to get J., 335

S. throwing J. into pit, 333, 334 n41, 374

and Levi

blessing of, by Jacob, 407

S. included in L.'s blessing, according to Philo, 825 n923 killing inhabitants of Shechem, 308-309

wanting to kill Joseph, 332, 334 n34

marriage of, to sister Dinah, 347 name

inscribed on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686

meaning of ("yonder is sin"), 285, 433, 436

one of weak among sons of Jacob, 396 n324

right hand of, withering for seven days, 436

second of sons of Jacob to die, 465 n2

Simeon (cont.)

second son of Leah, 285

as spokesman of brothers, 336 n49

terrible voice of, 335, 336 n49

to destroy Mizraim with hand, 385

to join Reuben in camp in south, 685

treated kindly in prison in Egypt, 379

tribe of

elders from (Jamin, Jachin, Zohar, Ohad, Shaul, Zimri), 696

flag of, green with picture of Shechem on it, 688

having largest number of sinners, 857 n3

losing 24,000 men in plague at Shittim, 783

not blessed by Moses, 821, 825 n923

not furnishing Israel with king, 825 n923 precious stone of smaragd, 651

topaz, 856

prince of

Shelumiel, 679

Zimri, 779

rejected because of sins at Shittim, 650 n351

significance of dedication offering of, 667-668

spy representing (Shaphat), 705

to bring forth teachers, 407 tradition of Pharisees belonging to, 410 n387

warfare of

battle of Sartan, 315

S. and Levi killing inhabitants of Shechem, 308-309

S. attacking Edom to west, 321

S. threatening war on Midianites to get Joseph, 335

wife of, Canaanite, 349 n98

Zimri as descendant of, 285

Simḥat Torah. See Day of Rejoicing of Law

Simon (son of Jacob). See Simeon

Simon bar Yoḥai, R.

associating self with Ahijah, 981

Elijah imparting secrets of Torah to, 1018

hiding for 13 years to escape Romans, 1001 not wishing to converse with R. Joshua b. Levi, 1012 pride of son of, 1008

sin

of Adam, causing death of Moses and those free from sin, 806 n888 brought into world by woman, 65 fear as consequence of, 636 n311

hereditary, 100 n142

not taking away merit of study of Torah, 924 n67

of sons of Jacob, never forgiven, 336 n50

to be abolished in world to come, 306 n275

window of, in first heaven, 503

See also sinfulness; sins

Sinai, Mount

and Moses

M. asking Mount Sinai to intercede, 808

M. erecting altar on Mount Sinai, 598

name, meaning of, 500, 501 n113

no idolatry on, 595

one of four mountains where heavenly Jerusalem will descend, 595 n184

one of six names of Mount Horeb, 500

one of three mountains retained by God in desert, 736

originally part of Mount Moriah, 595

within precincts of Shem, 156 preferred as site of revelation, 595 retained by God as place of revelation, 736 revelation at, 591-593, 599-602

and fire, 12, 200 n114

one of three outstanding moments in life of Moses, 815 n902

seven weeks from Exodus to, 761 n723

shown to Jacob, 277

voices heard at, 605 n214

rising into air, 601

Samael searching for Moses at, 836

six names of (Desert Sin; Desert

Kadesh; Desert Kadmut;

Desert Paran; Desert Sinai;

Horeb), 593

to return to Mount Moriah in future world, 595

sinar

garment to be used by women to cover lower parts of bodies, 1122

meaning of, 1125 n47

sinful cities. See cities: sinful

sinfulness

of human beings, 1

and Messiah, 1

repentance created on account of, 1

and reward and punishment, 1

Temple service as atonement for, 1

See also sin; sins

Sinim, Land of

as dwelling-place of sons of Rechab, 1089 n57

Sinites

land provisionally granted to, 157

sinless life

four leading (Amram, Benjamin, Chileab, Jesse), 473

sinner

cloud of glory disappearing from, 779

God not wishing sinners to be publicly disgraced, 769 n748

having pious son

throne for, in Paradise, made from copper, 507

identified by Kenaz

five in number, 480, 857 n3

six in number, 110, 857 n3

punishment of, 625-627

plague as, 626

through unclean spirits, 157

repentant

thrones for, in Paradise, made from gold, 507

seven in number (variously

Canaan, Put, Selath,

Nimrod, Elath, Desuath,

Ham, Shelah, Diul,

Shuah), 856, 857 n9

unable to move, 847 n28

worshiping own images in water,

872, 873 n98

sin offering. See offering, sin sins

causing destruction of generation of Tower, 164-165 n88

causing flood, 140 n17

eight of Pharaoh, inhabitants of sinful cities, builders of

Tower of Babel,

Sennacherib, and

Nebuchadnezzar, 562 n54

expiation of 12 months as term of, 526

forgiveness of, 211

on account of Isaac, 231

for bridegroom on day of wedding, 902 n53

sins (cont.)

forgiveness of (cont.)

for elder on day of ordination, 902 n53

for king on day of coronation, 902 n53

and sacrifices, 198

sins of Israel, 232 n248

keeping back rain (lies), 936 n112 punished in hell, 506-507

three cardinal (idolatry, immorality, bloodshed), 280 n147

sirens, 40-41 n168

Sisera (general), 867

approached by Jael while fleeing,

868

battle against

one of three occasions for war of confusion, 896 n42

conqueror of world at age of 30

years, 867, 869 n72

death of

in battle, 871 n85

body of, sent to mother, 869

S. meeting death at hands of

woman, 1163

S. suffering death by fire, 1048

n60

fighting against Israel with 900

chariots, 1163

intoxication of, 871 n85

leading 31 kings of Palestine, 868

name, 869 n72

preventing women from taking ritual baths, 1163

punished with heavenly fire for blasphemy, 869 n72

reminiscent of Alexander the Great, 869 n72

Shemaiah and Abtalion as descendants of, 869 n72

stature of, 867

strength of voice of, 867

troops of, drowned in Kishon

River, 868

victory over

won by tribes of Naphtali and Zebulun, 870 n73

won on first night of Passover,

871 n85

wonders in battle against, rational explanation of, 870 n81

sister

same as wife, 878 n111

Sithri (elder from tribe of Levi), 696

Sivan (month)

1st of

waters beginning to recede, 148

Sivan (cont.)

6th of birth and translation of Enoch, 127

Moses exposed, 479 n47

revelation of Torah on Mount

Sinai, 479 n47, 297 n188

7th of

Moses remaining in heaven

from, to 17 Tammuz, 629

n286

revelation on Sinai, 297 n188

15th of

birth of Isaac, 219 n203

revelation on Sinai, 297 n188

23rd of Mordecai recalling edict of

Haman, 412

27th of

Moses sending spies from

Kadesh-Barnea, 707

Ethiopian Zerah conquered by Asa

in, 1151

festival in, one of three given as reward for observing

Sabbath, 572

revelation on Sinai occurring in,

202 n115

See also date

Siwan. See Sivan

sixty fiery scourges, 1080, 1081 n39

six-winged creatures, in seventh

heaven, 125

skin

garments of, of Adam and Eve, 161 of goat, used for Tabernacle, in remembrance of Jacob, 268

n88

one of five parts of body received

from mother, 606 (see also

body, human)

skin eruptions

venom of viper as cure for, 43

See also leprosy

slain ones

before their time, in outer division of Sheol, 606-607

slander, 703 n494

bells on robe of Aaron atoning for, 650

as grievous sin, 280 n147

as most abominable sin, 716 n547

one of eight sins committed by

Pharaoh, inhabitants of

sinful cities, builders of

Tower of Babel, Sennach-

erib, and Nebuchadnezzar,

562 n54, 1048 n60

slander (cont.)

- one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)
- punishment of, 703
  - being eaten alive by worms, 908 n106

slaughtering, ritual

- and fins of Leviathan, 32 n139
- rules for, observed by brothers of Joseph, 328

slavery

- as evil, 167
- Noah first to introduce, 153

sleep

- of Adam, purpose of, 64
- as death, 61 n25
- deep, as foretaste of death, 929 n80
- purpose of, 64
- sent by God to Israelites on night of tenth plague, 538 n216
- as sign of mortality, 66 n37
- 60 breaths of, 927
- about one-half hour, 929 n80

small

- more precious than great in eyes of God, 301 n251

smaragd

- breaking when looked at by unchaste woman, 651
- stone of Simeon in breastplate of Aaron, 651
- See also* precious stones

smoke

- descending, as sign of rejection, 105 n13
- God's grace indicated by, 661 n380
- rising, as sign of acceptance, 105 n13

snail(s)

- murex, producing Tyrian purple dye, 377
- purple, possessions of Zebulun distinguished by, 667
- as remedy for boils, 43

snake(s)

- arising from rotting bones of Balaam, 796
- used for three enchantments, 796
- coiled around neck of pet lion of Nebuchadnezzar, 1103
- in desert of Shur, Israelites not fearing, 566
- and lizard

- hababar as offspring of, 324
- in Mordecai's dream, 1162

sneeze, blessing after, 401 n357

snow

- archangel Gabriel created from, 16 n63
- heavens created out of, 11 n43
- ishim (angels) made of, 504
- as primeval component of earth, 8 n18

- Shalgriel as angel of, 130

snuff dishes, on Solomon's throne, 968

Socrates

- as disciple of Ahitophel, 923

Sodi (elder from tribe of Zebulun), 696

Sodom

- cruelty to animals in, 209
- despoiled by Chedorlaomer, Arioch, and Tidal, 194
- destruction of, 206
  - by angels, 212
  - time of, 213-214
- and Gomorrah, as sinful cities, 207
- greed of, 208-209
- inhabitants of, drawing water from Well of Lewdness, 779 n787
- laws of, 209
- salt of, poisonous quality of, 215 n184
- story of traveler and fox in, 207-208
- thieves in, 209
- wealth of, 208-209

Sodomites

- cruelty of, 209
- favorable description of, 210 n155
- punishment of, 214 n170, 215 n179
- sins of, 140 n18
- to be judged by heavenly court, 211 n159
- tried by equal numbers of angels and human souls, 211 n159
- wickedness of, 210 n155

sodomy

- practiced by Nebuchadnezzar on captive kings, 1106, 1106 n107

soft

- conquering hard on five occasions, 918 n42

soil

- changing when Egyptians step on it, one of ten miracles at Red Sea, 556

virgin

- Christological explanation of, 54 n15
- and creation of Adam, 54 n15

Solomon

- adding benediction to Grace after Meals, 1128 n58
- age of, when assuming throne, 946 n1
- and animals
  - animals subservient to S., 962
  - S. knowing language of animals, 957-958 n34, 958
- appointing Zadok as high priest, 947 n10
- attempting to discover time of advent of Messiah, 955 n18
- author/composer of
  - books of Sons of the East, 978 n93
  - conjuring books, 964 n48
  - incantations to alleviate diseases, 962
- proverbs
  - 800 in number, 950
  - Scripture counting them as 3,000 in number, 950
- psalms, 823
  - Psalms 30, according to Haggadah, 564 n59
- Song of Songs and books of Proverbs and Ecclesiastes, 977 n93
- Yishtabbah, 1128 n58
- banished from kingdom by Asmodeus, 975
- becoming chief cook for king of Ammon, 976
- as beggar, 975-978
  - S. atoning for three sins by wandering as beggar for three years, 975-976
- as beloved of God, 168 n4 (see also beloved of God)
- and Benaiah
  - story about chess game of, 978
- coins struck by, depicting S.'s name, David's name, and Jerusalem, 930 n85
- compared with Nebuchadnezzar, 760
- and David
  - parallels between, 955 n24
  - S. carrying out deathbed instructions of D., 945
  - S. putting treasures in tomb of D., 942
  - S. succeeding D. at age of 12 years, 945
  - superiority of S. to David, 966

Solomon (cont.)

death of legend concerning death of S.
 similar to legend of death of Moses, 833 n92

and demons
 demons assisting in building of Temple, 962-963
 demons at S.'s throne, 970 n69
 S. able to turn power of demons to his advantage, 962
 S. as master of demons, 962-965
 S. inventing incantations to exorcise demon, 962
 and story of spirit stealing money and food of king's page, 962-963

dominion of over all creation, 961 n38
 over spirits and demons, 964
 n48

dream revelation of, in Gibeon, 949 fate of, compared with fate of Job and David, 463 n39

15 generations from Abraham to
 S., 967 n57

food at table of, 971

forfeiting power to perform miraculous deeds, 964

as friend of God, 168 n4 (see also friend of God)

games and shows of, 970
 games of chess, 978

giving judgment without evidence of witnesses, 956 n25

and God
 glorification of name of God by
 S., 824 n913
 God appearing to S. in dream revelation in Gibeon, 949
 S. as name of God in Song of Songs, 946 n2 (see also God: names and titles of)
 S. growing unmindful of God, 973
 S. led by God to Ammon, 976
 S. never recognized by God as "servant of Lord," 805
 n880 (see also Samson)

growing tropical plants in Palestine, 962

and Hiram of Tyre
 correspondence between, 958
 n36
 story of war between, 980 n100

holy spirit coming upon, 977 n93

Solomon (cont.)

idolatry of
 S. building temples to Baal and Raphan, 964
 S. making images of brazen oxen, 949 n12

invited by God to make request, 198

and Jeroboam, conflict between,
 981

Jerusalem named after, 232 n253

and Joab, S. punishing J., 945-947

as king
 anointing of, in public, 945
 counteracting Adonijah's claim to throne, 946 n3
 court of, 978-980
 length of reign of, 40 or 80
 years, 946 n1
 nations to bow down before Israel during reign of, 236
 n267
 S. as third of Jewish kings, 592
 S. as wicked king, 967 n59
 S. reminded of duties by seven heralds, 969, 1101 n93
 S. ruling over all creatures of
 world, 958
 S. walking in ways of Lord only for first four years of reign,
 949 n12

and magic, 957 n32
 magic carpet of, Arabic origin of legend, 973 n77
 magic ring of, 964, 965 n56, 973, 976

as Messiah, 967 n59
 S. thought by inhabitants of Sheba to be Messiah, 244
 n311

name
 meaning of, 945, 946 n2
 S. as one of six men given name
 by God before birth, 201, 946 n2 (see also under
 name)

names and titles of
 "elect of God," 912 n1
 father of wisdom, 955 n18
 other names of, 857 n13
 as attributes (Agur, Jakeh, Lemuel, Ithiel), 946 n2
 Ben, Jakeh, Ithiel, 945
 Jedidiah as real name of S., 945 Koheleth, 946 n2

Nathan (prophet) as teacher of,
 948 n11

Solomon (cont.)

new ordinances and ceremonies introduced by extension of prohibited marriages, 955 n18
 institution of eruv, 955 n18
 washing hands before meals,
 955 n18

one of five kings anointed, 893 n30

one of seven pillars of earth, 9 n28
 (see also under world[s])

one of ten members of board of intercalation, 937 n124

opinion of differing from that of David on seat of wisdom, 956 n24
 that head (intellect) is seat of wisdom, 956 n24

ordering execution of Adonijah,
 946 n3

pool of, drying up on Sabbath, 1089 n56

pride of
 and story of ants, 971-972
 and story of magic carpet, 971

as prophet, 977 n93

and Rehoboam
 S. calling on R. to slay Joab, 947
 n10

riding on she-mule that was special act of creation, 945

as ruler of world, 162 n82 (see also cosmocrator)

sin(s) of (see also Solomon: and
 women)
 amassing silver and gold, 948, 973
 having many wives, 949 n16,
 973, 975 n80
 keeping many horses, 948, 973
 marrying foreign wives, 948,
 967 n59
 multiplying gold, 973
 three in number, 976
 transgressing biblical laws, 948

story about demon Ornias and old man
 with impious son, 964
 hoopoe, 958-959
 magic carpet of, 971
 S. and fallen angels Azza and Azrael, 962
 S. and magnificent building of
 eagles, 972
 S. putting daughter in high tower, 979
 that S. died without regaining
 throne, 977 n93

Solomon (cont.)

story about (cont.)
   visiting rich man and poor man, 975 succeeding to throne by law of inheritance, 946 n3
 summoning Beelzeboul, 963
 summoning creatures to dance and entertain, 958
 and Temple
   building of Temple, 641
   demon bringing cornerstone up out of Red Sea, 964 demons assisting in, 962, 963 instructions concerning furniture and vessels of Temple transmitted from David to S., 967 n57
   source of 14th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127
   dedication of, as source of 18th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127
   Shekinah to dwell in, 154
   S. drinking wine when Temple completed, 949 n13
 throne of, 968-970
   Ahasuerus not daring to sit on, 969, 1130
   brazen images on, 949 n12
   brought by Alexander the Macedonian to Egypt, 1131 n13 carried to Egypt by Pharaoh Necho in time of Jehoash, 969 carried to Egypt during life of Rehoboam, 969
   Cyrus as only Gentile ruler to sit on, 1115 n7
   Cyrus found worthy to ascend, 1131 n13 damaged in time of Epiphanes, 1131-1132 n13 Darius not daring to sit on, 969 demons at, 970 n69
   description of, 968-969, 970 n69
   fate of, 1131 n13
   finally brought to Rome, 1132 n13
   history of, 1131 n13
   inscriptions on, 970 n70
   legends about, 970 n70
   lost by Sennacherib to Hezekiah, 969 made use of by cosmocrators, 970 n72

Solomon (cont.)

throne of (cont.)
   magnificence of, 968
   Nebuchadnezzar injured while attempting to ascend, 1097 n80 only able to be used by S. and descendants, 970 n72 Pharaoh becoming lame when trying to ascend, 1060, 1062 n123 reaching Elam through Darius, 969 regained by Asa, 985
   sent by ship to Greece by Epiphanes son of Antiochus, 1131 n13 Shishak attempting to ascend, 1131 n13
   similarity of, to Divine Throne, 864 n39 symbolic explanations of six steps of, 970 n70
   as symbol of Cosmocratia, 1132 n13 taken from Egypt by Sennacherib, 969 taken from Egypt to Babylonia by Nebuchadnezzar, 969 taken from Greeks by Romans, 969 taken from Median rulers by Greeks, 969
 and Torah
   S. praised for mastery of Torah, 955 n18
   S. to spring from Jacob as nation of Torah, 252
 from tribe of Judah, 642
 two scribes of, Elihoreph and Ahijah, 979
 in valley of ants, 971-972
   S. speaking with ants, 972
 wealth of, 948
   coming in miraculous way, 949 n16 diminishing after marriage to Pharaoh's daughter, 949 n16
 and wine, 958
 wisdom of, 949-958
   akin to divine wisdom, 956 n25
   animals submitting controversies to S., 951-952 brought to bear on foreign rulers, 954-955
   and case of child claimed by two mothers, 347 n89, 950, 955 n26

Solomon (cont.)

wisdom of (cont.)
   and case of
     debtor and egg, 956 n27
     man with jug of milk and serpent, 951-952 poor man with sack of flour, 956 n27
     Roman maiden and youth involving theft, 951 three men accusing one another of theft, 951
     two-headed Cainite, 950-951
   excelling wisest men of all other nations, 955 n24 fame spread far and wide, 952 49 gates of wisdom open to S., 950 greater than that of Ethan the Ezrahite, Heman, Calcol, Darda, three sons of Mahol, Abraham, Moses, Joseph, generation of wilderness, Adam, 949-950
   as knowledge of science and philosophy, 955 n18 learned from holy book, 142
   legend of thief who betrayed self, 957 n30
   manifested in equipment and ornamentation of Temple, 966 and riddles
     of Queen of Sheba, 955, 959-961
     S. baffled by riddle of Abdamon, 955
   S. asking for wisdom, 949
   S. fasting 40 days in order to be granted wisdom, 955 n18 statements of S. concerning virtuous men and women, 952 and story of guest wanting to learn language of animals, 953-954 laborers sent from Pharaoh, 954
     three brothers who served him to acquire wisdom, 952-953 three rules of conduct and three brothers, 953 superior to that of David, 956 n27 supplementing words of David, 955 n24 tested by Hiram of Tyre, 955

Solomon (cont.)

- wisdom of (cont.)
  - 3,000 parables of, 955 n24
  - as wisest of men, 949 n13
- and women
  - marriages of, 947-949, 949 n16
  - to daughter of Hiram of Tyre, 958 n36
  - to Pharaoh's daughter, 947, 949 n12
  - to Queen of Sheba, 961 n40
  - wedding feast of, on same day as consecration of Temple, 947
  - to women from "seven nations," 949 n16
- Queen of Sheba
  - letter of S. to Queen, 959
  - Queen posing 22 riddles to S., 959-961
  - S. imparting to Queen secret of withstanding three enchantments of snakes, 796
- Ruth living to see glory of S., 864, 867 n69
- S. falling in love with
  - Sonmanites, Jebusite woman, 964
- S. having illicit relations with foreign women, 949 n16
- S. rebuked by Bathsheba for neglecting daily sacrifice, 948
- story of love of S. and Naamah, 976
- wives of
  - foreign wives not observing commandments, 949 n16
  - Pharaoh's daughter as favorite, 948, 949 n16
- words of, against women, 957 n32
- as youth
  - overruling decisions of David, 956 n27
  - solving case of dispute over inheritance, 950, 955 n26
- Solomon, R.
  - commanded by Babylonian prince to show him grave of Ezekiel, 1094
- Solomon, Testament of, 965 n56
  - Christian elements of, 965 n56
  - pagan elements of, 965 n56
  - parallels to Solomon legend in, 965 n56

song(s)

- of celestials, causing death to Assyrians, 1046
- of Israel
  - first, on night when freed from captivity, 562
  - second, of triumph at Red Sea, 562
  - third, when well sprang up in wilderness, 562
  - fourth, of Moses before death, 562
  - fifth, of Joshua after victory over Amorites, 562
  - sixth, of Deborah and Barak after victory over Sisera, 562
  - seventh, David's psalm of thanksgiving, 562
  - eighth, Solomon's song at dedication of Temple, 562
  - ninth, of Jehoshaphat going to battle against Moabites and Ammonites, 562
  - tenth, to be sung at future deliverance, 562
  - nine in number
    - sung by Israel to God in course of history, 562
  - ten in number, 562, 564 n59
- of Levites in Temple, atoning power of, 564 n58
- of people of Israel after passage through Red Sea, 563
- of praise, one of five tokens granted to Israel after Exodus, 565
- at Red Sea (see Song at the Sea)
- Song at the Sea, 562-565
  - as first song ever sung in God's honor, 565 n63
  - moving God to grant forgiveness to Israel, 562
  - repeated by Miriam and women, 564
  - second of nine songs sung by Israel to God in course of history, 562
  - as song of Moses, 563
  - verses included in, 565 n66
- Song of Moses
  - causing heaven and earth to keep silent, 830 n947
- Song of Songs
  - as allegorical presentation of history of Israel, 977 n93
  - Hezekiah and associates as editors of, 1071 n15

Song of Songs (cont.)

- Hezekiah having copies made of, 1051
- as holiest of holy books, 977 n93
- Solomon as author of, 977 n93
- Sonmanites
  - Jebusite woman with whom Solomon fell in love, 964
- son of Amram
  - as derogatory name of Moses, 726 n581, 734
- son of Bathsheba
  - as derogatory name, 656 n367
- son of the nest, 32 n137, 138
- sons
  - not ready to care for grandparents, 102 n1
- sons of God
  - angels as, 121 n57
  - as descendants of Seth, 121 n57
- sons of Israel. See Israel (nation; people)/Israelites: children of
- sons of Korah
  - entering Paradise alive, 73 n67, 132 n62 (see also Paradise: entering alive)
- Sons of Moses. See Moses: sons of; also Levites
- Sons of the East, books of
  - Solomon as author or redactor of, 978 n93
- Sophia-Prunicus (first mother)
  - Gnostic ideas about, 106 n17 (see also Gnostic ideas)
- sorcerer(s)
  - Balaam as, 760
  - Laban as, 294 n223
  - Sheba as land of, 965 n55
  - See also* magicians, Egyptian
- sorcery
  - generation of Noah addicted to, 133
  - herbs and heads of scorpions used in, 760 n720
  - See also* augury; divination; magic arts; lots; Urim and Thummim; witchcraft
- Sosipater
  - African general, slain in battle against Zepho, 419
- soul(s)
  - abode of, while unborn, 6, 57 n19
  - all part of Adam's soul, 57 n19
  - born against its will, 56
  - burning of
    - of Nadab and Abihu, 698 n482
    - of people of Magog, 698 n482
  - created on first day, 55

soul(s) (cont.)

and death of person, 56
 departing
   from body after seven or three days, 99 n140 from brothers of Joseph when he revealed self to them, 388
   at death, 58 n20, 448
 of embryo, knowing and seeing everything, 58 n20 escaping from body every night, 55, 56-57 n18 fastened to spine, 61 n25
 forced to enter sperm, 55
 form of, as bird, 61 n25
 as image of God, 59
 immortality of, 61 n25
 of man, 55-58
 as material, 61 n25
 not sleeping, 61 n25
 number of, 56 n18
 one of ten parts of body received from God, 606 (see also body, human)
 one of three things contributed by God to formation of child, 608 n224 of one who has tasted piety, compared to palm tree, 567 of pious
   creation of, 7 n15
   as sacrifices in heavenly Temple, 5
   in seventh heaven, 6 (see also pious: souls of) as pledge entrusted to man by God, 742 n636 powers of, five in number, 55
 questioned by angel, 55-56
 refusal of, to enter embryo, 57 n20 relationship with God, according to Stoics, 61 n25
 as spirit of God, 55
 as spiritual, 61 n25
 stored in seventh heaven, 6, 55 sustained by fragrant odors, 648 n343 taken by angel to view hell, 55-56
   to view Paradise, 55
 time of entering body, 61 n25
 time when inclinations enter, 61 n25
 united with body, 55
 various powers of, 56 n18
 of wicked, in fifth earth, 6

Sousakim (king of Egypt)

giving sister-in-law Ano to Jeroboam as wife, 982 n2

south

assigned to Eve, 92
 as blessed region, 687 n441
 dews of blessing and rains of plenty coming from, 645 place of fire and smoke, 6
 qualities of, 645 n337
 Reuben to pitch its camp in, 685

space

in Palestine for all multitudes at time of resurrection, 657, 658 n373

Spain

Jews of, refusing to return to Holy Land, 1124 n36

sparrow, on Solomon's throne, 968

Spartans

as descendants of Abraham, 244 n314

spears, throwing, 314

speech

confounding of, 164
 immediately after birth, 139, 140 n16
 one of ten parts of body received from God, 606 (see also body, human)

spelling, defective

of Horeb, 501 n113
 as indication of being morally defective, 236 n267
 of name of Abishai, 937 n123
 of name of Elijah, 257 n35

spelling, plene

of name of Jacob, 257 n35

spells

taught to men by Armaros, 119
See also magic arts; sorcery; witchcraft

sperm

and conception of human being, 55

spices

for anointing oil in Tabernacle, to anoint high priest, 640-641 brought by Adam from Paradise, 81 n96
 curative properties of, 157
 one of 13 materials for construction of Tabernacle, 640 (see also under Tabernacle) used in Temple, coming from Paradise, 81 n96

spider, web of saving David from Saul, 919

spies

accompanied by Shekinah, 706
 appearing to giants as grasshoppers, 708 attempting to incite people to rebellion, 711-712
 avoiding suspicion of inhabitants of Jericho, 844 n11 bearing fruits of land through Palestine, 708 bringing evil report of promised land, 704-705
 death of
   because bodies fell apart, 717 n552
   by croup, 717 n552 deceiving Israelites into lamenting about fate at hands of peoples of Palestine, 711-712
 disguising selves
   as carpenters, 844 n11
   as pottery merchants, 844 n11
 disreputable houses as hiding places for, 375 n209 gigantic stature of, 709 n513
 given instructions by Moses, 706
 Israelites believing report of, 711
 Joseph accusing brothers of being, 372-373 meeting mourners for Job throughout Canaan, 706 n509 names of, showing wickedness, 705-707
 one from each tribe except Levi, 704
 in Palestine, 707-709
 pretending to be deaf and dumb, 844 n11
 punishment of, 716
   tongues growing to touch navel, 716
 rebellion of, 785
 reporting
   about giants in Hebron, 709 that land flows with milk and honey, 709 returning after 40 days, 708
 selection of, first step in preparation for war, 842 sending of, 703-705
 slanderous report of, 709-711
 ten wicked, 705
 terrified by giants in Kiriath-Arba, 707
 two pious, 706
   names indicating pious actions, 706

- spies (cont.)
 two weapons of, against giants, given by Moses (staff, Divine Name), 708
- spirit(s)
 over animals, in time to come, 642 n328
 evil (see evil spirits) of Lord, coming over Rebekah, 262 night (see Liliths)
 one of three things contributed by God to formation of child, 608 n224
 as personal attendants of Solomon, 962 prophetic departing from Elisha when E. rebuked King Jehoram, 1025 not manifest during Second Temple because only small number of people returned, 1121 vanishing at translation of Elijah, 1025 remaining at tip of nose after death, 58 n20 seven tempter (fornication, gluttony, strife, love of admiration, arrogance, falsehood, injustice), 435
 unclean
 nine-tenths of, banished from earth, 157 tormenting men with pain and suffering, 157 spirit of God. See God: spirit of
- spittle
 as remedy for sickness, 1006 n60
- spleen
 for laughing, 447
 one of 12 guides of men, promoting laughter, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men)
 removed from 50 men running before Adonijah, 941
- spoils of war
 distribution of, 195, 197 n101
 taken in war against Midian, 797
- spoon, golden
 of dedication offering significance of, for Nahshon and for tribes of Asher, Benjamin, Dan, Ephraim, Issachar, Manasseh, Naphtali, Reuben, Simeon, and Zebulun, 666-671
- spoon, golden (cont.)
 of dedication offering (cont.)
 symbolic significance of, in history of world, 671
- spring
 color green corresponding to, 971
 spring equinox
 and intimidation of evil spirits by seraphim, 1
- springs (of water)
 appearing wherever patriarchs travel or settle, 276
 created on third day, 82 n98
 in third earth, 6
- staff
 as symbol of Messiahship, 344
- standards
 colors of, 685-686
 four, 684-687
 of groups of angels, 684
 hooks on, 686
 used in Exodus, 687 n439
- standing
 while studying Torah, 790 n832
- star(s)
 created and assigned place on fourth day, 23, 77, 82 n98 11 in Joseph's dream, symbolizing J.'s brothers, 330, 383 of evil, bringing misfortune to Israel, 103 n5
 having light but no heat, 26 n104
 in heavens (see also dust: of earth; sand of seashore)
 descendants as numerous as, 229-230
 righteous as numerous as, 330
 seed of Abraham to be as numerous as, 636
 sons of Jacob as numerous as, 422
 hymn of praise of, 44 (see also praise)
 not shining for seven days at death of Adam, 97 n133
 and planets
 Moses asking stars and planets to intercede, 808 rebellion of, 127 n60
 as tiny threads loosed from moon, 25
 unlucky, named Ra ("evil"), 534 n196
See also heavenly bodies; moon; planets; sun
- starvation
 window of, in first heaven, 503
- steer
 change in appearance of, 37
 kissed on nose by Joshua, 37
- sterility
 eating of hare's stomach as cure for, 879 n111
See also barrenness; childlessness
- stichomancy, 1159, 1161 n122
- stickleback fish
 keeping Leviathan in check, 28
- stinging flies. See flies: stinging
- Stoic ideas
 parents in middle position between divine and human, 608-609 n226 on relationship between God and soul, 61 n25
 that soul enters body at time of conception, 61 n25
- stomach
 one of 12 guides of men, affording pleasant sleep, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men)
- stone(s)
 cut out without hands, as reference to Messiah, 1097 n80 found in Holy of Holies, as beginning of creation, 10 n39 (see also Eben Shetiyah) heaps of, as sign of covenant, 293 illuminating, in Messianic times, 857 n14
 Israel compared with, 1169 n159
 made from 12, anointed by Jacob, 277-278 12, becoming one, 277
- stones, precious. See precious stones
- stoning
 method of execution for blasphemy, 690
 breaking Sabbath, 690
 idolatry, 779
- storehouses of life
 in seventh heaven, 6
- stork
 called "pious one," 43 n190
 as compassionate and merciful, 44 guarding purity of family life, 44
 keen sight of, 43 n190
- storm
 over house of Job, 457, 458 n24
 one of three hurricanes sent by God, 458 n24
 one of four portals, 600

storm (cont.)

See also hurricane; lightning; thunder; thunderstorms

strangers

hospitality to, forbidden in Sodom, 212

legends about, and Elijah and R. Joshua b. Levi, 1014

treatment of

in sinful cities, 207-208

in Sodom, 212

See also hospitality; traveler(s); wayfarer

Straton, tower of identified with Sartan, 315 n292 (see also Caesarea)

straw

exempt from tithing, 255

stream(s)

flowing from tree of life, 127 n60, 507

from Holy of Holies, to uncover treasures buried in earth, 1091 of life, 70 n51

strength

causing Samson and Goliath to meet death, 798

one of three gifts of God to world, 798 (see also gifts)

as qualification of prophet, 633 (see also prophet[s]: qualifications of)

strife

one of seven tempter spirits, 435

stubbornness

of Moses, 512-515

Suah (one of seven sinners), 857 n9

succoth

Jacob staying in, for year, 304

Succoth. See Tabernacles, Feast of

Suchathites

descendants of Jethro, 590

suffering

on day of judgment, one of three great afflictions from which Israel will be freed as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572

having atoning power, 989 n43
holding sway in this world, 563-564

of individual, causing God to grieve, 583 n150

in Messianic time, one of three great afflictions from which Israel will be freed as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572

suffering (cont.)

in times of Gog and Magog, one of three great afflictions from which Israel will be freed as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572

suicide

of moor-hen, 974

Suiel (angel)

angel of earthquake, prostrating before Metatron, 130

Sukkot. See Tabernacles, Feast of

Sulaiman I (sultan)

Elijah appearing to, in dream, 1013 n93

sulphur

rivers of, in hell, 13

See also hell

summer

color red corresponding to, 971

summer solstice

and strength of Behemoth, 2

time when Moses smote rock and blood flowed from it, 877 n109

sun

accompanied by angels, 24

assigned place on fourth day, 23

Baal as, 874 n105

bathing in stream of fire, 26 n104

as bridegroom, 24, 26 n101

cooled by Venus in fourth heaven, 504

course of change in, 140-141 n19

365 days, 24

created on fourth day, 23, 77, 82 n98

crown of, removed by angels in evening, 26 n105 darkness of, 26 n100 (see also sun: eclipse of) double-faced, 24

each turn of, having different angel appointed over world, 877 n109

eclipse of, 26 n100

during flood, 145 n25

at time of crucifixion of Jesus, 79 n89

at time of fall, 79 n89, 92, 95 n121

endowed with wisdom and passion like man, 25 n100

forced to shine after destruction of Temple, 1080, 1081 n38

four turns of, 877 n109

God's name engraved on, 27 n106

sun (cont.)

greater than moon, 24, 26 n100 growing dark at Adam's disobedience, 76 (see also sun: eclipse of)

having power over plants, 71

healing qualities of and devastating power of, 302

healing Jacob of injury sustained in encounter with angel, 302

motes of sunbeams as carriers of healing to sick, 25, 27 n108

human countenance of, 26 n102

hymn of praise of, 26 n102, 44 (see also praise)

Israelites suffering from, after death of Aaron, 747, 748 n651

in Joseph's dream, designating Jacob, 330

and Joshua

sun obeying J., 848-850

sun and moon ordered to stand still for J., 48 sun standing still for J. in Tammuz, 1152 n108

sun to aid J. in battle, 581 led through stream, 26 n103

made of fire, 28 n112

miracle of sinking, while Jacob passing Mount Moriah, 276

and moon

appearing before God to call for punishment of Korah, 724 depicted on tribe of Issachar's flag in wilderness, 688

having to be driven to their duty, 724

lamenting over edict of

Ahasuerus, 1159

Moses asking sun and moon to intercede, 808 ordered to stand still before Joshua, 48

shedding light for sake of Israel, 1154

turning black, called Ethiopians, 96

Moses' face shining like, 813

not setting

on day of revelation on Sinai, 613

on last day of Moses' life, 812 miracle occurring four times for Moses' sake, 613

sun (cont.)

not shining for seven days after death of Adam, 97 n133 precious stones to take place of, in Messianic time, 1011-1012 Raphael as angel in charge of, 131 n61 rising and setting early for Jacob, 302 setting ten hours early at funeral of Ahaz, 1052 n81 shining ten extra hours on day of Hezekiah's recovery, 1050 signs of, taught to men by Samsaweel, 119 standing still, 583 n146
   for Elijah, 995
   for Hezekiah, 1052 n68
   for Joshua, 48, 849
   in Tammuz, 1152 n108
   for Moses
     on day of battle with Amalek, 615 n245
     on days of battle with Sihon and Og, 615 n245
     when Moses commanded, 615 n245
   one of seven great miracles, 850 n39, 850 n40
   one of six wonders since creation of world, 849
   on summer's day in Tammuz, 850 n40 wanting to be spared sight of sinful mankind, 24
 wheel of grating against, 27 n107, 27 n108 precious stone attached to, 237
   as witness against man, 79 n89
   worship of, in cities of plain, 213
 sunbirds possessing 12 wings, 40 n155
 Sunday
   as day on which God created heaven and earth, 1150
 "superman"
   as goal of creation, 50 n8
 supplication
   window of, in first heaven, 503
 Suriel (angel)
   as angel of death, 833 n952
   Uriel identified with, 687 n440
 Susanna
   beauty and goodness of, 1095 condemned to death on false testimony, 1095

swine

brought as sacrifice by enemy, 1076 n29
 cloven-footed, 282-283
 Esau identified with Rome as, 284 n162
See also boar, wild sword(s), 314
   angel with, pointing to Balaam's destruction, 768
   of children of Ammon, serpent engraved on, 922 n59
   Esau to live by, 270
   flaming
     in front of Paradise, 80 n95
     as metaphor of Gehenna, 80-81 n95 given to Esau and other nations, 768
   legends concerning, 922 n59
   used by Pharaoh against Israelites, 558-559
   used to kill Balaam, 796, 796 n855
 synagogue
   beadle of, 943, 943 n145
   and disavowal of pseudepigraphal writings, ix-x founded by Ezra near Mount Ararat, 1126 n52
     in Nisibis, 1126 n52
 Synhedrion. See Sanhedrin
 Syrian language used by Hamites, 158 n72
 syzygies
   doctrine of, 608 n221

T

Tabeel (father of Pekah), 1051 n66
 Tabernacle
   able to be folded up and taken down, 657 candlestick in, corresponding to sun and moon created on fourth day, 639 command of God to build, 638-640 completion of, 653-655
   consecration of, fire at, 692
   curtain in, corresponding to firmament, 639
   as dwelling place of God's glory, 48 erection of, as finishing touch to creation of world, 660 everything ready for, in month of Kislev, 655

Tabernacle (cont.)

existing for sake of Torah, 643 failures in setting up, 656
 first day of dedication of eight sections of laws revealed to Moses on, 673 gifts of priests received by Aaron on, 673 law of separation of Levites revealed on, 673 Levites consecrated as servants of God on, 673 third law revealed on, expelling lepers and unclean persons from camp, 674
 God commanding angels to build one in heaven, 660
 heavenly, 660
 Holy Place of, 48
 of Korah and Dathan and Abiram, 724
 laver in, symbolizing sea created on third day, 639
 materials for construction of, 640-641
   11 in number, 641 n322
   13 in number (gold, silver, brass, blue linen, purple linen, scarlet linen, goats' hair, rams' skins, badgers' skins, shittim wood, oil, spices, onyx, precious stones), 640
   15 in number, 641 n322
   gold, as expiation of golden calf, 640
 middle bar of becoming circular, 648 n344
   length of, 648 n344
   made from tree Abraham planted at Beer-Sheba, 648
 Most Holy of, 48
 one of seven holy places destroyed by Esau, 264 parts of, corresponding to creation in six days, 639 purpose of, as place for Shekinah, 643 revelations in, 673-674 setting up of, 655-656
 set up by Moses, 656
 set up on 1 Nisan, Isaac's birthday, 655 Shekinah returning to earth on day of consecration of, 660 size of (70 cubits), corresponding to 70 holy days celebrated by Jews, 648

Tabernacle (cont.)

skin of goat used for, in remembrance of Jacob, 268 n88 skin of taḥash (sea creature) used for, 35
 as symbolic representation of human body, 639 symbolic significance of, 648-649, 649 n346
 veil of, 48
 well of Miriam settling opposite, 576 whoever enters without being commanded, to be stricken with leprosy, 663
 wood for from Paradise, 81 n96
     from tamarisk tree, 224 n225
See also Holy of Holies; Holy Place; sanctuary; Temple

Tabernacle of revelation identical to Tabernacle in camp, constructed from extra materials, 655-656

Tabernacle of Testimony, 638

Tabernacles, Feast of celebrated by Jacob, 317 n299

 criticized by Haman, 1153
 eight days of, among 70 holy days celebrated by Jews, 648 Israelites enveloped in seven clouds of glory in Exodus at, 542 last day of, quantity of rain for year fixed on, 268 n83 priests offering libations in Temple on, 318
 water libation performed on, 929 n78

See also date

table(s)

for bread and salt, placed on northern side, 645 n337
 golden hidden in tower of Baghdad, 1091 taken from Paradise by Solomon, 1091
 of Moses, 644-645
     positioned in center, 645
     showbread placed on, 645
 of nations (see nations: table of)
 in Solomon's temple positioned five to south and five to north, 645
     ten in number, 644-645
 in Tabernacle
     pattern of fire for, coming down from heaven to Moses, 645 n338

table(s) (cont.)

in Tabernacle (cont.)
     to indicate delights of pious in Paradise, 645 of tongues, 158 n72
 tablets of Sinai. See Ten Commandments: tablets of Tabor, Mount
     contesting for spot of revelation, 594
     one of four mountains on which heavenly Jerusalem will descend, 595 n184

Tadmor (city)

built by Solomon, 962

taḥash

as clean animal, 35 created exclusively for needs of Tabernacle, 647
 description of, 35
 size of, 647
 skin of, for use for Tabernacle, 35

Tahchemonite

name applied to Joab and David, 926 n76

tallit (prayer shawl)

and Esau, 284 n162
 as reward for descendants of Shem, 154

Talmai (giant)

and Ahiman and Sheshai, three giants in Palestine, 707
 name, meaning of, 707
 one of three giants summoned by Sarah, 236 n259

Talmai (Ptolemy of Egypt)

one of ten rulers who became proselytes, 1093 n66

Talmud

Babylonian
     compiled by R. Ashi, 1128 n56
     contained in second tablets, 633
 Talmudic-Midrashic literature
     as source of Jewish legendary material, ix
See also rabbinic literature

Tamar

and Amnon, 941
 as ancestress of Amoz, 344
     David and Messiah, 344
     Isaiah, 344
 as daughter of Aram, 346 n79
     Shem, 345, 346 n79
 deceiving Judah by means of kid, 347 n87

Tamar (cont.)

giving birth to twin sons, 345
 having gift of prophecy, 344 Judah confessing to improper relations with, 439
 marriage of
     to Er, son of Judah, 344
     to Onan, second son of Judah, 344 modesty of, reward for, 344
 name, meaning of, 346 n79
 not considered child of David because born before mother's conversion to Judaism, 941 praying to God for deliverance, 345
 as proselyte who converted to Judaism from idolatry, 346 n82
 riddle of Queen of Sheba about, 961

tamarisk

of Abraham, 206 n137
 and middle bar in boards of Tabernacle, 224 n225

See also tree(s)

Tamiel (archangel)

as angel of deep, 120 n57

Tammuz (month)

1st of Adam and Eve expelled from Paradise, 81 n97
 10th of
     Noah sent forth raven, 148
 17th of demons exercising power, to 9 Av, 660
     Manasseh setting up idol in Temple, 1056 n96
     Moses remaining in heaven, from 7 Sivan to, 629 n286

18th of

Moses staying in heaven from, to 28 Av, 628

Amorite kings subjugated in, 1151

Joshua making sun stand still in, 1152 n108

and strength of Behemoth, 2
See also date

tannaitic literature

on Abraham's observance of law, 239 n275
 early, Amalek as designation of Rome in, 580 n141 idea of seven heavens originating in, 8 n22

tannaitic literature (cont.)

- not containing anything about Leviathan and Behemoth, 30 n127
- Messianic banquet, 30 n127
- use of Edom for Rome rare in, 254 n19
- See also* Amoraic sources; Hagga-dah; Halakhah; Kabbalah; Midrash; Mishnah; rabbinic literature

Tappuah

- Jashub, king of, slain by Judah, 314
- subdued by sons of Jacob, 315

Targumim

- as source of Jewish legendary material, ix

Tarshish

- invading territory of Ishmaelites, 369
- Joseph making war on, 369
- prince of Tarsus
  - having charge of palace, 1136
  - one of seven princes of Persia consulted by Ahasuerus about fate of Vashti, 1136

tattoos

- of Jehoiakim on "membrum," 1062 n125
- of names of idols on body of Jehoiakim, 1060

Taurus (Bull) (sign of Zodiac)

- answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151

tav (letter)

- in Asenath, standing for tammah ("the perfect one"), 368
- creation of world through, 3
- as sign of death upon foreheads of men, 3
- in Zaphenath-paneah, standing for tomekh ("supporter"), 368
- See also* alphabet; letters of alphabet

taw (letter). See tav

tears

- changing into pearls, 248 n317
- night of, 711-713
- See also* crying; weeping

Tebel

- second earth, 6
- seventh earth, inhabited by men, 110

Tebet (month). See Tevet

teeth

- gnashing of, by Judah, 313, 314 n291
- long, of Esau and Og, 305 n263

teeth (cont.)

- lost at cry of Judah, 388
- set on edge, of Adam and Eve, 72
- Tehom
  - kept from overflowing earth by Eben Shetiyyah, 11 n39
- Telag, Mount
  - Sheilah going up to, 875
- Temah (Sisera's mother), 871 n87
- Temple
  - Ahaz setting up idol in, 1043
  - altar of (see altar: of Temple)
  - blessings disappearing at destruction of, 968 n64
  - blessings upon world at erection of, 968 n64
  - breach torn in, when Uzziah trying to offer sacrifice, 1040
  - building itself, 967 n60
  - building of
    - completed in month of Heshvan, 966
    - no worker becoming sick or dying during, 966
    - one of three national duties, 897 n47
    - Solomon planting golden trees at, 966
    - taking seven years, 966
  - built in territory of tribe of Benjamin, 1148-1149, 1150 n102
  - burned by angels, 1076 n27
  - burned down completely on 10 Av, 1077 n29
  - called "house of David," 930 n89
  - captured on 7 Av, 1077 n29
  - confusion between First and Second Temple in stories, 1087 n53
  - consecration of, held on Day of Atonement, 966
  - created by God with both hands, 49 n3
  - dedication of
    - source of 18th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127
    - taking place in month of Abraham's birth, 966
  - defilement of, by enemy, 1076 n29
  - destruction of, 198
    - by Amalek (i.e., Rome), 582, 583 n147
    - by angel, 1076 n29
    - because David listened to Ziba's slander against Mephibosheth, 909 n109

Temple (cont.)destruction of (cont.)

- and hatred of Ammonites and Moabites for Israel, 214
- by Nebuchadnezzar
  - God concealing five sacred objects at (ark, candlestick, fire of altar, holy spirit of prophecy, cherubim), 645
- party played by Gabriel in, 1075 n26
- revealed to Abraham, 231
- and sacrifices, 198
- saving Israel from annihilation, 1081 n39
- shown to Jacob, 277
- sins as cause of, 1072 n16
- in time of Zedekiah, 1065
- to take place on 9 Av, 712
- disappearing from sight of man, to become visible again in Messianic times, 1092 n64
- duty to perform service in, 199
- Edomites as destroyers of, 1087 n52
- everything in, being fruitful and multiplying, 647 n342
- fire set on 9 Av, 1077 n29
- foundation stone of, as center of earth, 7 (see also Eben Shetiyyah)
- four angels setting fire to, 1075
- gates of
  - opening by selves, 1077 n29
  - sinking into earth, 1091
- given to Israelites conditionally, 590 n173 (see also gifts)
- glory of, shown to Jacob, 277
- gold used in, not booty from heathen temples, 966
- having secret place for hiding holy objects, 1062 n118
- heavenly (see also sanctuary: heavenly)
  - Aaron as high priest in, 816
  - in fourth heaven, 9 n22, 503-504
  - precious stones in, 816
  - in seventh heaven, 9 n22
  - Shekinah dwelling in, 816
  - shown to Moses by God, 617
- importance of, in stopping torrential rains in month of Heshvan, 966
- instructions concerning furniture and vessels of
  - handed down from Moses, 967 n57

Temple (cont.)
 instructions concerning furniture and vessels of (cont.)
   transmitted from David to Solomon, 967 n57
 iron tools prohibited for work on, 35 keys of given back to God by Jehoiachin, 1061
   legend of, 1076 n29
   thrown heavenward by high priest, 1075
 as Lebanon, 1077 n29
 mourning of Moses and patriarchs
   for, 1078-1079
 part played by Palmyrenes in destruction of, 1087 n53
 reflecting honor on David, 966 sacrifices to be brought to, 198 service, atoning power of, 1
 site of
   in inhabited land, 10 n33
   in Jerusalem
     partly in territory of Benjamin, 411 n401, 825
       n926
     partly in territory of Judah,
       825 n926
   known before Solomon, 967
     n57
   made known to David by prophet Gad, 967 n57
 as place of Abraham's circumcision of self, 232 n249
   beginning of creation, 10 n39
   Isaac's offering, 231
 of Solomon (see also Temple, First)
   building of, 965-968
   consecration of, on same day as wedding feast of Solomon, 947 cornerstone of, brought up by demon from Red Sea, 964
   existing for 410 years, 949 n12
   Shekinah to dwell in, 154
 symbolism of, 967 n60
 three hidden vessels of, to be shown, one of seven wonders of Messiah, 1021
 to be built by Solomon, 928
 to stand in perfection in Messianic times, as described by Ezekiel, 1021
 vessels of, 1091-1092
   desecrated by Ahasuerus in drinking bouts, 1130

Temple (cont.)
 vessels of (cont.)
   gold and silver for, 968 n66
   hidden by Josiah, 1062 n118
   hidden in tower at Baghdad by Levite Shimur and friends, 1091 prevented from falling into hands of enemy, 1091
   western wall only remnant of,
     1076 n27
   work of rebuilding stopped after 72 towers completed, 1138
     n47
 Temple, First (see also Temple: of Solomon)
   five things in First Temple only (heavenly fire, holy oil of anointing, ark, Holy Spirit, Urim and Thummim),
     1123-1124 n36
   one of seven holy places destroyed
     by Esau, 264
 Temple, Second absence of Shekinah from, 156
     n65
   destruction of, 1087 n52
     because most Jews remained in foreign lands, 1123 n36
     on same day as that of First Temple, 1077 n29
   one of seven holy places destroyed
     by Esau
   See also Hekhal; high priest; Holy of Holies; Holy Place;
     sanctuary; Tabernacle;
     Temple Mount
 Temple, Third (Messianic), 731
   n600
   Rome not to contribute to, 649
 Temple Mount
   created first, 825 n927
   Mount Moriah as, 232 n253
   site of originally a plain, 233 n255
     same as site of Akedah, 232 n253 (see also Temple: site
       of)
 temptation(s)
   of Abraham, 187
     assigned to Job, 232 n247
   of Israel
     ten in number, 565, 757 Israel tempting God with ten temptations during wandering in desert, 565
   resisting, through knowledge and
     wisdom, 414 n406

Ten Commandments, 602-610
 First, 602-605, 604 n212
   corresponding to first word of
     creation, 610
   corresponding to Sixth Commandment, 609
   singular used in, 605 n216
   transgression of, on account of
     covetousness, 607
 Second
   corresponding to second word of creation, 610
   corresponding to Seventh Commandment, 609
   forbidding false oath and also swearing in vain, 608 n218
   transgression of, on account of
     covetousness, 607
 Third corresponding to Eighth Commandment, 609
   corresponding to word of creation about gathering
       waters, 610
   against swearing falsely by name of Lord, 605
   transgression of, on account of
     covetousness, 607
 Fourth
   corresponding to Ninth Commandment, 609
   corresponding to word of creation about earth bringing forth grass, 610
   most important of commandments, 608 n223
   to observe Sabbath, 606
   transgression of, on account of
     covetousness, 607
 Fifth corresponding to Tenth Commandment, 609
   corresponding to word of creation about lights in firma-
       ment, 610
   to honor father and mother, 606
   transgression of, on account of
     covetousness, 607
 Sixth
   corresponding to word of creation about waters bringing forth moving creatures, 610 against murder, 606-607
   transgression of, on account of
     covetousness, 607
 Seventh
   against adultery, 607

Ten Commandments (cont.)Seventh (cont.)

corresponding to word about earth bringing forth living creatures, 610 transgression of, on account of covetousness, 607

Eighth

corresponding to word of creation about herb-bearing seed, 610

forbidding stealing, 607

transgression of, on account of covetousness, 607

Ninth

corresponding to word of creation about creation of man, 610

forbidding false witness against companions, 607

transgression of, on account of covetousness, 607

Tenth

corresponding to word of creation about creation of woman, 610

forbidding covetousness, 607

transgression of, on account of covetousness, 607-608

and Abraham

A. fulfilling commandments, 593

A. observing commandment against false witness, 594

A. observing commandment not to covet, 594

alef having first place in, 4

all received by Israel directly from God, 612 n243

in ark of covenant in desert, 429

containing kernel of entire Torah, 619 n258 containing 620 letters, 635 n308

corresponding to ten words of creation, 612 n243

in Deuteronomy, containing all letters of Hebrew alphabet, 635 n308 difference between, in Exodus and Deuteronomy, 635 n308 distribution of, on tablets, 619 n258

division of, 609 n234

first five, written on one tablet, 609

first two learned directly from God, 611 received by Israel directly from God, 612 n243

Ten Commandments (cont.)

against idolatry, 605

and Isaac

I. fulfilling commandment to honor father and mother, 593

and Jacob

J. fulfilling first commandment, 593

and Joseph

J. fulfilling commandment not to commit adultery, 593-594 not to kill, 593

to observe Sabbath, 593

last eight learned through intercession of Moses, 611

last five written on second tablet, 609

reactions of nations to, 606

repeated to angels, 614-615

among statutes of Israel, 567

tablets of

breaking of, 625-626

angels rejoicing at, 615-616 n248

brought about by evil eye of nations, 661

by Moses, 4

one of three things Moses did on own authority, 626 n279

celestial, 4

characters and stylus for, created during twilight of first Sabbath eve, 619 n258 (see also under creation: sixth day)

contained in ark of covenant, 643

corresponding to heaven and earth, 639 created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78, 618 (see also under creation: sixth day)

hewn out of Eben Shetiyyah, 619 n258

made of sapphire-like stone, 618, 626 n279

measurement of, 635 n308

sapphire for, taken from Divine Throne, 619 n258

second, 632-636

coming from diamond quarry, 633 containing Halakhot, Midrash, and Haggadot, 632

Ten Commandments (cont.)

tablets of (cont.)

second (cont.)

containing Mishnah, Talmud, and Haggadah, 633

given quietly, 632-633

given with great ceremony, 635 n304

God writing words on, 635 n305

made of sapphire, 635 n305

and story of marriage contract, 632-633 to be received by Moses on 10 Tishri, 631 weight of 60 seah, 626 n279

70 seah, 625

writing vanishing from, 625, 626 n279

unity of, 609-610

use of singular in, 635 n306

written by God with middle finger of right hand, 638 n315

See also commandment(s)

Ten Days of Penitence. See Penitence: Ten Days of ten martyrs. See martyrs: ten tent

holy, carried by angel to mount whence Moses viewed Holy Land, 1091

as metaphor for house of study, 256 n29

wife, 155 n60

tentpin

as metaphor for wife of Ishmael, 221-222

Tephros

demon of ashes, coming before Solomon, 963

Terah

and Abraham

T. exchanging handmaid's child for A., 182

T. not convinced about idols, 184-185

T. telling Nimrod about A., 185

at circumcision of Isaac, 218

death of, 237 n270

entering Paradise alive, 180 (see also Paradise: entering alive)

on account of merits of

Abraham, 508 n118

fate of, 200 n114

favorable opinion of, 180 n45

as high official in court of Nimrod, 181

Terah (cont.)

- marriage of
  - to Emtelai, 168
  - to Pelilah, 243
- name, meaning of, 167, 168 n5
- penance of, 199
- perished by fire for idolatry, 180 n40
- settling in Palestine, 184 n49
- son of Nahor, 167
- to have share in world to come, 199

teraphim

- curse of thief of, 293
- etymology of, 965 n56
- and Laban
  - L. getting another set of teraphim, 294 n220
  - teraphim consulted by L., 281
  - stolen by Rachel, 291
  - destroyed by Jacob, 316
- method of making, 291
- transformed into drinking vessels, 292

terebinth

- Jacob hiding foreign gods under, 857 n5

Teresh. See Bighthan and Teresh

terrestrial beings

- contact with, defiling celestial beings, 17 n68
- created by God with left hand, 49 n3
- hymns of praise of, 46 n194 (see also praise)

terumah

- ordained by men of Great Synagogue, 1128 n56

tet (letter)

- creation of world through, 4
- as letter of word bet ("sin"), not contained in names of 12 tribes, 409 n383
- missing from Ten Commandments in Exodus version, 635 n308
- in word Shittim, standing for tovah ("good"), 647
- See also* alphabet; letters of alphabet

Tetragrammaton

- designating God's attribute of goodness, 3 n6
- name by which Adam called God, 62 n29
- pronounced by Ezra "as it is written," 1125 n49
- standing for God's mercy, 150 n46

Tetragrammaton (cont.)

- used to describe God as merciful, 767 n743
- use of, by Boaz, 866 n53
- See also* God: names and titles of
- Tevet (month), 2
- 2nd of
  - date of death of Ezra and Nehemiah, 1126 n51
  - as fast day, 1126 n51
- Jephthah's daughter sacrificed and wept for in, 877 n109
- and Kislev, Sihon and Og conquered in, 1151
- Leviathan spouting up water in, 2
- See also* date
- Tharbis (daughter of king of Ethiopians)
  - falling in love with Moses, 492 n80
- theater
  - prejudice against attending, 39 n143

theft

- famine as punishment for, 607
- forbidden by Eighth Commandment, 69, 607
- girdle of Aaron atoning for, 650
- never forgiven by God, 607
- not a capital offense according to Jewish law, 387 n268
- one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)
- See also* robbery; thief (thieves)
- Thelac, Mount. See Telag, Mount
- Themac (Sisera's mother), 869
- theodicy, 629-630, 630 n291
- Elijah's teachings of, 1014-1016
- theophany
  - to Elijah on Mount Horeb, one of three hurricanes sent by God, 458 n24

theophorous names

- of angels, 128 n60

Thermuthis. See Thermutis

Thermutis (daughter of Pharaoh)

- advising Moses to undertake campaign against Ethiopians, 492 n80
- arm of, lengthening miraculously, 478
- moved by weeping of Moses and Aaron, 478
- observing circumcision of Moses, 478
- perceiving Shekinah in ark with Moses, 478
- rescuing Moses from Nile, 477-478

Thermutis (cont.)

- source of name, 479 n48
- thief (thieves)
  - and keeper of vineyard, 774-775
  - legend of thief who betrayed self, 957 n30
  - making double restitution, 384
  - proverb about thief and receiver, 701, 702 n493
  - punishment of, 246
  - in Sodom, 209
  - stealing teraphim, 293
  - story of David and thief, 956 n27
  - viewed by Abraham from heaven, 246
- See also* robbery; theft
- third
  - God having preference for, 592
  - Seth as third son of Adam, 592
  - Shem as third son of Noah, 592
  - Solomon as third of Jewish kings, 592

thirst

- in wilderness, 566

thornbush

- accepted by God to serve as cross for Haman, 1175
- as burning bush, 501
- cleanliness of, 595 n185
- compared with
  - Israel, 502
  - myrtle, 255
- Ezra hearing voice from, 1122
- lowliness of, 501-502, 502 n115
- numerical value of Hebrew word for (seneh) (120), 502
- purity of, 502 n115
- as symbol for Israel, 502, 502 n115
- symbolic significance of, 502 n115
- as vessel for divine vision, 501
- See also* burning bush

thorns

- burned by sparks from cherubim, 643

three youths. See youths: three

throne(s)

- of Abraham
  - greatest in Paradise, 507, 508 n118
- in Paradise
  - made of precious metals and gems, 507
  - size of, 507
- of pious, 508 n118
- reserved for time after resurrection, according to rabbinic literature, 508 n118

throne(s)

of Solomon (see also Solomon: throne of)
 brazen images on, 949 n12

Throne, Divine color of, blue, 643
 and crown, imagery of, 613-614
 curtain before, 57 n19
 description of, 17 n70
 footstool of, made from brick containing child of Rachel, daughter of Shuthelah, 541 four beings represented on (lion, man, eagle, bull), 621 hashmal surrounding, 14
 having four standards (righteousness, justice, grace, truth), 687 n440
 over heads of hayyot (see also hayyot) Moses saved by holding on to, 614, 615 n247 mysteries of, discussed by Jeroboam and Ahijah, 983 n7
 one of seven things created in beginning, 1
 repentance reaching, 505 n117
 representation of bull on, as model for golden calf, 621 Sandalfon standing behind, 613 sapphire for tablets of Ten Commandments taken from, 619 n258 sapphire quarry under, 635 n305, 635 n306
 in seventh heaven, 6
 similarity of, to throne of Solomon, 864 n39 snow under, and creation of earth, 5 surrounded by four angels (Michael, Gabriel, Uriel, Raphael), 685 as Throne of Mercy, 816 wheels of, 614

Throne of Glory. See Throne, Divine

Throne of Joy
 God sitting upon, 83 (see also Throne, Divine)

Thummim. See Urim and Thummim thunder and lightning

 aiding Israelites in battle against Philistines, 895 weapons of God against Egyptians, 559, 561 n46

thunder (cont.)

of seventh plague, suspended until siege of Samaria, 532
See also hurricane; lightning; storm; thunderstorms

thunderstorms, on mountains, 502 n114
See also hurricane; lightning; storm; thunder

Thursday
 fasting on, because Moses ascended to heaven on, 628-629 n286
 Moses ascended to heaven on, 628-629 n286
 protesting annihilation of Israel, 1150
 souls of pious reading from Torah scroll on, 812

Tiamat
 and Babylonian creation myths, 30 n123
 and Kingu, 30 n118, 31 n127

Tiberias, Sea of fishing in, lawful for anyone, 852
 Jacob's libation at Bethel compared to, 318

Tiberias (city)
 as center of Jewish learning in amoraic period, 410 n391 located in territory of Naphtali, 288 n180 hot springs of, and hell, 15 n55 house of instruction in, 823

Tibni
 rival of Omri, 986

Tidal (king of several nations) alliance of, with Chedorlaomer, 194

Tiglath-pileser
 one of eight other names of Sennacherib, 1054 n92

Tigris River
 source of, beneath tree of life, 69

timbrel, 394
 accompanying song at Red Sea, 564
See also instruments, musical

time
 compression of, 239-240, 241 n287 (see also distance; earth[s]: contracting of distances of)
 for Abishai, 241 n287
 for Abraham, 241 n287
 for Eliezer, 239, 240, 241 n287, 242 n299
 four times in history, 278

time (cont.)

compression of (cont.)
 for Jacob, 241 n287, 278
 in Laban's pursuit of Jacob, 292 one of Lord's days as 1,000 years, 59
 creation of, 7 n14
 58,088 moments in hour, 770
 of Grace, time between creation and revelation, 593 n177
See also time to come

time to come Aaron not to be anointed in, 658 n371 bastards not to be excluded from community of Israel in, 1022 n118
 evil inclination to disappear in, 1128 n57 impurity of idolatry to be removed in, 677 n417
 impurity of unchastity to be removed in, 677 n417
 manna to return in, 577 n134 miracles to take place in, prefigured in present world, 1103 n95
See also days to come; future world; world to come

Timna (person)
 and Amalek
 T. as mother of A., 323
 T. inciting A. to attack Israel, 580 n138
 T. persuading A. to leave Jacob alone, 580 n138 daughter of royal house, 863, 865 n52
 princess of royal blood, concubine of Eliphaz, 323 rejected by patriarchs, 323 wife of Eliphaz, dissuading Eliphaz from killing Jacob, 580 n138

Timna (place)
 ceded to Jacob by Amorites, 315

Tiranus
 identified with Turus, king of Benevento, 419 n425

Tirathites
 descendants of Jethro, 590

Tirhakah (Ethiopian king)
 liberated from Assyrians by Hezekiah, 1049

Tishri (month)
 1st of Israelites ceasing to serve the Egyptians, 543 n234

Tishri (cont.)1st of (cont.)

Jacob erecting altar at Bethel,
317 n299

New Year's Day, 77

sixth day of creation, 77

3rd of

Gedaliah killed on, declared fast day for all time, 1087 n53

10th of

circumcision of Abraham, 202
Day of Atonement, 202, 631-632 day of mourning on account of Joseph, 341

God being merciful on, 631

Jacob receiving word of Joseph's
death, 341

Moses remaining in heaven from 20 Av to, 629 n286

Moses returning with second
tablets, 631, 632

Moses to receive tablets for second time, 631

sin offering of atonement on, to be kid of goat, 341

11th of

Moses instructing people about
Tabernacle, 653

Moses returning from heaven, 585 and autumnal equinox, 2

competition with Nisan for highest place in Jewish legend, 219
n203

Egyptian redemption to begin in, 428

festival in, one of three given as reward for observing Sabbath, 572

and great bird Ziz flapping his wings, 2

Israelites resting from war in, 753 Jewish kingdom established by dedication of Temple, 1151

as seventh month, 682

See also date

Tit ha-Yawen

in fifth earth, 6

one of seven divisions of hell, 13, 506

Samael searching for Moses in, 835
See also hell

tithe(s), 721

Isaac and, 260, 262 n60

and Jacob

J. vowing to tithe, 278

tithe(s) (cont.)

and Jacob (cont.)

and Ten Days of Penitence, 280
n144

ordained by men of Great Synagogue, 1128 n56

for poor, introduced by Isaac, 260 priestly, introduced by Abraham

and Jacob, 262 n60

on straw and salt, 255

title

position of, before or after name, 484-485 n68

Titus

death of, to be caused by gnat, 45
n191

Nebuchadnezzar standing for,
1087 n52

to destroy Temple, 273 n113

Tob (brother of Boaz), 864, 876
n107

declining to marry Ruth, 864
name, 866 n61

son of Nahshon, 864 n34

Tob (land)

identified with city of Hippos in Decapolis, 876 n107

Tobai

one of ten rulers who became pros-
elytes, 1093 n66

Tobiah

as name of Moses, 481 n57

Tobiah the Ammonite

oath of Ahasuerus to, 1167

Tobiah the Canaanite

adherent of Belchira, 1057 n101

Tobit

story of, and legend of Elijah and young groom, 1016, 1017
n96

Tofet

and worship of Moloch in Gehinnom, 15 n55

See also Gehinnom; hell; Moloch

toga

as reward for descendants of Japheth, 154

Tohu, 8 n19

dispensing darkness, 5

as green band encompassing world, 5

one of ten things produced on first day of creation, 5

separating second from first earth, 6

over seventh earth, 6

See also Bohu

Tohu (person)

great-grandfather of Elkanah, 888
n1

identified with psalmist Asaph,
888 n1

Tola (son of Issachar)

name, meaning of, 433

tongs, first pair of created in twilight, 82 n99 (see also under creation: sixth day)

tongue

evil, meriting severe punishment,
988-989 n35

one of 12 guides of men, rendering speech possible, 671 (see also body, human; guides:
of men)

supremacy of, to all organs of body, story about, 978-979

tools, iron

forbidden in construction of altar, 973

topaz

having inverted face of man to signify turning good to evil, 651

stone of tribe of Dan in breastplate
of Aaron, 651

See also precious stones

Torah

and Abraham

A. taught Torah by Melchizedek, 196

Torah as one of crowns of A., 188 n57

Torah given to Isaac by A., 244
n313

and Adam

A. to study Torah in Paradise, 69

Torah given to A. by God, 60
n21, 77, 142

admitting of 49 correct interpretations, 956 n25

Ahaz issuing edict against study of,
1044 n40

and angels

angels reading Torah, in first heaven, 505 n117

angels transgressing Torah by eating forbidden food and meat with milk, 616 n248

as Book of Raziël, 142

as bride, 601-602 n200

of Israel, 820, 824 n917

burned by Amon, 1055

candlestick as symbolic representation of, 646 n340

Torah (cont.)

coming from heaven and letters of tablets returning there, 984 n15 compared to wine, 18
 completeness of, 635 n308
 conceived of as having emanated from God's wisdom, 2 n2 connected with sacrifices, 771 n759
 consisting of three parts:
   Pentateuch, Prophets,
   Hagiographa, 592
 containing crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters brought to Jerusalem by Ezra, 892 n24 buried by prophets under threshold of Temple, 892 n24 found by Ezekiel, 892 n24 taken by Ezekiel to Babylon, 892 n24 containing 365 prohibitions, corresponding to days of year, 603 containing 248 positive commandments, corresponding to number of members of body, 603 contempt of, one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy: 13 sins punished by) copy of, found by Josiah in Temple, 1059, 1061 n115
 and creation
   through tav, 3
   Torah interfering in creation of man, 54
 creation of
   Torah as one of seven things created in beginning, 1
   Torah created before creation of world, 2 n5 custom of reading from, on Saturday, Monday, and Thursday, 567 (see also Torah: readings from) date of revelation of, on Mount Sinai (6 Sivan), 479 n47 devotion of Hezekiah to study of, 1052 n67
 Ezra not permitted to write one letter of, from memory, 1125 n50
 as gift of God to Moses, 504 given in desert, 10 n33

Torah (cont.)

given to all inhabitants of earth, 595 n185 glorified with 22 letters, 807
 and God
   God giving Torah to Moses with right hand, 619 n260
   God making covenant with Israel for sake of Torah, 634
   God ornamenting letters in which Torah written, 616
   God taking counsel with Torah, 1, 2 n3
 Torah lying in lap of God, 1 horn of, one of four horns in four corners of Tabernacle, 648 (see also horn[s])
 and Israel
   Israel finally receiving Torah on Day of Atonement, 631-632
   Israel's acceptance of Torah, 48 necessary for existence of world, 1166 n143
   Torah bestowed on Israel by God, 433
   Torah given to Israel
     unconditionally, 590-591 n173 (see also gifts)
     as weapon against angel of death, 621 n262
   Torah offered to Israel, 596-598
   Torah rejoicing to be given to Israel, 592 n176
   Torah to bring happiness and life to Israel, 567 knowledge of Manasseh's mastery of, 1057 n99 revived by Babylonians (Ezra, Hillel, R. Hiyya), 1124 n42 transmitted to Enoch by Seth, 152 n51
     to Seth by Adam, 152 n51
     to Shem by Enoch, 152 n51 lamenting over edict of Ahasuerus, 1159
 meaning of, 1011
 as means for man to perform his task, 50 n8 merit of study of, not taken away by sin, 924 n67
 of Moses
   origin of name of, 616-617
   as reward for M. putting life in danger, 619 n257

Torah (cont.)

of Moses (cont.)
 Torah named after M., 806
 nearly forgotten in three periods of Israel's history, 1124 n42 neglect of study of, 567
   as main cause of destruction of Temple, 1072 n16 war of Amalek as punishment for, 577 new, to be revealed through Messiah, 1120 n25
 observance of, 55-56
   by Abraham before revealed, 206 n140
 one of three crowns Israel received from God, 670 (see also crown[s]) one of three things for whose sake world exists, 660 oral, 633-634
   binding power of, 1013 n89
   as true teaching, 633
 originally intended only for Moses, 635 n306 people neglecting after manna ended, 844
 personification of, 592 n176
   as female, 1
 preexistence of, 102 n2
 readings from (see also Torah: custom of . . .) on Mondays and Thursdays, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122 on Sabbath afternoons, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122 refraining from testifying against Israel, 1079 rejection of
   by other nations, 593-594, 1081 n34
   by sons of Esau, 625 n276
 as remedy against evil inclination, 452 restored and reestablished by Ezra, 1122 revelation of direct character of, 616 n248
   source of 11th of Eighteen Benedictions, 1127
   taking place in wilderness, 595 n185 rewritten in "Assyrian" characters after exile, 1119 ridiculed by Manasseh, 1054 scholars explaining, sitting under tree of life, 19

Torah (cont.)

secret lore of, 949 n14
 severe marriage laws of Jews of Ezra's time revolting
     against, 1124 n38
 significance of, viii 613 commandments of, 593, 594
   n181
   division of, into ten classes, 619
     n258
   not found in tannaitic sources,
     594 n181
   observed by Jacob, 296
 as sixth revelation of God upon earth since creation, 601
 students of, receiving one-third of Haman's fortune, 1176
 study of
   as duty, 199, 200 n111, 575
   forbidden by Ahaz, 1043
   under God's guidance, 22 n89
   by Israelites as first thing in morning and before going to sleep, 775
   mandated by Hezekiah, 1045
   by pious in shade of tree of life,
     22 n85
   standing while studying, 790
     n832
   studying text four times, 636
     n312
   vocation of Issachar, 408
 sweetness of, like honeycomb (nofet), 18, 286, 433
 to be revealed 50 days after Exodus, 592 n175
 to be taught in territory of Naphthali, 286
 to remain in heaven for 1,000 generations after creation, 592
     n177
 as tree of life, 77, 568 n82
 world created for sake of, 50 n8,
   1160 n122
 world existing for sake of Torah studied by Israel, 1154 written, 633-634
   binding power of, 1013 n89
   written down 974 generations before creation, 102 n2
   with black fire on white fire, 1 written on altar on Mount Ebal in 70 languages, 843
   stones of Gilgal camp containing crowns and embellishments of Hebrew letters,
     892 n24

Torah (cont.)

Zagzagel (angel) as prince of, 504
 torch, flaming as revelation on Sinai, in vision of Abraham, 198-199, 200
     n114
 tortures in hell, 506
 touch
   one of ten parts of body received
     from God, 606 (see also
     body, human)
 Tower of Babel, 163-166
   arrows shooting toward heaven
     from, 164
   as attempt to prevent second deluge, 164 n88
   builders of destroying altar, 232 n251
     eight sins of (neglect of justice,
       idolatry, incest, bloodshed,
       blasphemy, arrogance, slander, obscenity), 562 n54
     punishment of, 215 n179
   building of, 160, 161 n76, 162
     n77, 163
   reasons for, 164 n88
   ten years after death of Noah,
     178 n35
   time spent in (43 years), 165
     n88
   dimensions of, 165 n88
   fate of, 164
   generation of, 162 n77
   height of, 163
   overthrown by wind, 166 n90
   as revolt against God, 164 n88 tradition, chain of, 1128 n56
   extended to last of geonim, 1128
     n56
   extending over 40 generations,
     1128 n56
   Ezra and men of Great Synagogue
     as middle of, 1128 n56
 translation
   of Elijah, 1000-1006, 1000 n39,
     1000 n40
 traveler(s)
   story of, and fox in Sodom, 207-208
   three maxims to be observed by, 390 treatment of, in sinful cities, 207-208
   See also hospitality; strangers; wayfarer treasure(s)
   of Exodus, returning in possession of Shishak, 984 n15

treasure(s) (cont.)

returning to place whence they came (Israel, Torah, treasures of Exodus), 984 n15 treasure chambers
   of God, 321
 treasure troves
   stored up for pious, 629
 treaty. See covenant(s) tree(s)
   blessed by God for willingness to serve as cross for Haman, 1175 command to bear seed given to, 18
   competition of, 1175
   confusion of legends about,
     1177 n184
   created on third day, 77, 82 n98
   curative properties of, 157
   distinguishing between clean and
     unclean, 204
   erelim (angels) appointed over, 503
   fable of trees and iron, 18 fruitful, hymn of praise of, 44 (see also praise) fruit of
     in fourth year to belong to
       priest, 156
     not to be used during first three years of bearing, 156
 golden planted by Solomon at Temple, 966 in Temple, to blossom again in time of Messiah, 966
 identifying believers or idolaters, 204
 kinds apple
     symbolic of Israel, 1175
     willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175
   carob
     swallowing Isaiah, 1057 n103
     and tree of knowledge, 74
     n70
   cedar coming to Babylon at time of exile, 1074 n24
     of Lebanon
       created on third day, 18
       planted in Paradise, 21 n74
     at Magdala
       considered holy, 393 n308
       planted by patriarchs, 393
       n308
     to be used for Tabernacle,
       393 n308

tree(s) (cont.)kinds (cont.)cedar (cont.)

only species of shittim to be used, 647
 planted at head of Jacob's grave, 412
 sent to Solomon by Hiram of Tyre, becoming green again, 646
 swallowing Isaiah, 1057 n103
 symbolic of Israel, 1175
 for Tabernacle
   planted in Egypt, 647
   praising God, 647
 for Temple, blossoming and bearing fruit, 647 n342
 tree for cross of Haman, 1177 n184
   cedar willing to serve as, 1175, 1177 n184
 wainscoting of first and second divisions of Paradise made from, 19

etrog

Israel praising God with fruit of, at Tabernacles, 1175 willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175

fig

Deborah pictured as, 874 n103
 dried, as food on ark, 148 n37
 of Ebed-melech, staying fresh for 66 years, 1090
 as forbidden fruit, 73 n70, 93, 95 n122
 fruits of, brought to Temple as first fruits, 1175
 leaves of, covering Adam and Eve, 72, 74 n70, 74
 symbolic of Israel, 1175
 willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175

gopher, Noah's ark built from, 142

laurel, to make water sweet, 566

mulberry, David not to attack until he hears marching in tops of mulberry trees, 920-921

nut

symbolic of Israel, 1175
 willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175

tree(s) (cont.)kinds (cont.)

oak

of Abraham, 206 n137
   A. sitting under, at Mamre, 247
   healing properties of, 206 n137
 Absalom caught in branches of, 932
 pieces of idols broken by Jacob buried under, 316
 under which Deborah buried called "oak of mourners of Deborah," 318 n301

olive

depicted on Asher's flag in wilderness, 688 Othniel pictured as, 874 n103
 as tree of life, 92 n113
 wainscoting of fourth division of Paradise made from, 19

palm, 567

brought to Babylon 40 years before exile, 1074 n24
 Deborah buried under, 317
 Deborah (prophetess) sitting under, 317 indicating accession to royal dignity, 901 n52 70 in number, corresponding to 70 elders, at Elim, 567
 symbolic of Israel, 1175
 symbolic significance of, 568 n86
 as tree of life, 92 n113
 willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175

tamarisk

of Abraham, 206 n137
 and middle bar in boards of Tabernacle, 224 n225

terebinth, Jacob hiding foreign gods under, 857 n5

willow

symbolic of Israel, 1175
 willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175

language of, 45 n194

human, 46 n194, 248 n317

number of, in Paradise, 19

pride of, 21 n74

story of kind of tree used for cross of Haman, 1175-1176

of Temple, withering when heathen entered sanctuary, 95 n125

tree(s) (cont.)

voice from, talking to Abraham, 245

weeping of, 18

withering of leaves of, at time of fall, 95 n121

See also tree of knowledge; tree of life

tree of knowledge

description of, 74 n70

forming hedge around tree of life, 69

of good and evil

  Samael searching for Moses at, 836

  Noah's vine as offshoot of, 155 n58

in Paradise, 69

tree of life

description of, 124

distribution of food of, in world to come, 92 n114

Elijah sitting under, 1000 n38

as God's residence, 95 n126, 127 n60

olive tree as, 92 n113

palm tree as, 92 n113

in Paradise, 69

  in middle of Paradise, 19

  in third heaven, 124

and pious

  pious studying Torah in shade of, 22 n85

  tree preserved for pious in world to come, 81 n96

rod of Moses taken from, 568 n82

Samael searching for Moses at, 836
 scholars sitting under, explaining Torah, 19

size of, 69, 69 n50, 127 n60

streams flowing from, 124, 507

tastes of, 19

See also tree(s)

tribes

covenant with, 434 n3

four as standard-bearers (Reuben, Judah, Dan, Ephraim), 685 merits of, invoked by Elijah, 998 n18

names of engraved on precious stones on ephod of Aaron, 650

  numerical value of, as number of Israelites, 636 numerical value of first letters of names of, as number of Israelites, 637 n314 order of, in census, 680

tribes (cont.)

- order of names of
  - on left shoulderpiece of Aaron (Simeon, Judah, Zebulun, Dan, Asher, Benjamin), 650
  - on right shoulderpiece of Aaron (Reuben, Levi, Issachar, Naphtali, Gad, Jehoseph), 650 princes of, names of, indicating history, 679-680

ten

- dwelling beyond Sambation River, 1089 n56
- exile of, 86 n105
- Jacob's prayer for, 377
- repudiated by God forever, according to R. Akiba, 1089 n56

twelve

- blessing of, 406-411
- compared to wells, 567
- corresponding to signs of Zodiac, 687 n441
- creation of world brought about through merits of, 434 n2
- each having flag of different color in wilderness, 688
- as fixed order of nature, 279 n133
- Jacob as father of, 277
- merits of, creation of world through, 434 n2
- Moses copying Torah scroll for each tribe on last day of life, 812
- names of
  - on breastplate of high priest, 35
  - engraved on rod of Moses, 554
  - not containing letters for "sin" or "end," 409 n383
- part of plan of creation, 343 n70
- pointing to redemption of Israel, 433 (see also under individual names of tribes)
- princes of, 678-681
- Rebekah destined to be mother of, 254 n16
- separation of, in dream vision of Naphtali, 445-446

tribute

- demanding from Hamites by Chedorlaomer, 194
- paid by
  - Moabites to Edomites, 420

tribute (cont.)

- paid by (cont.)
  - sons of Esau to Kittim, 421
- paid to Joseph, 422
- to priests, imposed on people by Moses, 720-721

Trinity, 2 n3

trumpet(s)

- at advent of Messiah, 232 n246
- announcing Moses' return to heaven, 632
- blowing of, in warfare, 313
- blown by
  - angel at death of Adam, 96
  - Elijah in Messianic time, 1021
  - Michael to introduce Messiah, 1021

description of, 697 n480

fashioned by Moses, 696, 697 n480

Jericho to be overthrown through sound of, 775

music of, 697 n480

seven sounds of, at resurrection, 605 n214

sounded at

- ascent of Shekinah, 118-119 n56

- Deborah's victory celebration, 873 n92

used by Pharaoh against Israelites, 559

See also instruments, musical; ram(s): horn of; shofar truth

- one of four standards of Divine Throne, 687 n440

tsade (letter). See tzade

Tubal

- sons of, war with Zepho, 418

Tubal-cain (son of Lamech and Zillah)

- furnished instruments of war, 112

Tuesday

- refusing to help in ruin of Israel, 1150

Tummim. See Urim and Thummim

tunny

- possessions of Zebulun distinguished by, 667

turbot

- only species not returning to Holy Land after exile, 1073 n24

Turnus (king of Benevento)

- asking for Yaniah's hand in marriage, 417

- killed in battle in Valley of Campania, 417

Turnus (cont.)

- making war on King Lucus of Sardinia, brother of Agnias, 417

turquoise

- giving owner speed in riding, 651
- stone of tribe of Naphtali in breastplate of Aaron, 651

See also precious stones

turtledove

- sacrificed

- by Abraham, 198

- by Noah, 150

Twins (sign of Zodiac). See Gemini

twos, all things in, 448

two ways, put before men by God, 448

Tyrian language, 158 n72

tzade (letter)

- creation of world through, 4

- as letter of word ketz ("end"), not contained in names of 12 tribes, 409 n383

- numerical value of, 263 n69

- as second letter of name of Isaac, on standard of tribe of Reuben, 686

- standing for

- tzadik* ("pious one"), 4

- tzarot* ("misfortunes" of Israel), 4

- in Zaphenath-paneah, standing for tzofeh ("seer"), 368

See also alphabet; letters of alphabet tzadik ("pious")

- as name of pillar, 9 n28

- title given to Joseph, 328-329 n3

- See also* God: names and titles of

tzitzit (fringes)

- commandment of

- given to descendants of

- Abraham, 196

- occasioned by Zelophehad's sin, 690

- and rebellion of Korah, 720 n566

- David cutting off, from Saul's garment, 905 n81

- of Isaiah's garment, 1057 n103

- law of, read to people by Moses, 719

- to recall all commandments of God, 690

- significance of, 196

U

umbilical cord

- legend of, 139

unchastity

- with betrothed woman, one of
  - crimes of Achan, 847 n25
- breeches of Aaron atoning for, 650
- as cause of flood, 140 n17
- as grave sin, 316
- impurity of, to be removed from
  - Israel in time to come, 677 n417
- loathed by God, 778
- as mother of all evil, 436
- and nakedness, 158 n67
- one of eight grievous sins of
  - Sennacherib, 1048 n60
- one of 13 sins punished by leprosy, 675 (see also leprosy)
- wine leading to, 880 n121

uncircumcised ones

- Canaanites as, 310
- not able to bear divine presence, 961 n43
- not able to stand and listen to
  - words of God, 768, 769 n749
- Shechem as, 308
- See also* circumcision

uncleanness

- Noah admonished against, 156

unclean persons

- prohibited from staying near sanctuary, 675
- put out of camp, 674

understanding

- 8,000 gates of, opened to Moses
  - on Sinai, 956 n25
- one of ten parts of body received
  - from God, 606 (see also body, human)
- in Talmud, aiding in building
  - Tabernacle, 641

unicorn

- depicted on tribe of Manasseh's
  - flag in wilderness, 688
- getting horn prior to hooves, 87, 88 n108
- offered to God by Adam, 87, 88 n108

unity

- first condition of Israel's redemption, 406

universe

- chanting continuous song to God, 84 n100
- depending on preservation of
  - Israel, 1161 n122
- See also* world[s]

Ur, 161 n76

- place of birth of Abraham, 172 n20

urethra

- one of ten orifices of man, 960
- See also* body, human

Uriah

- called "Gibeonite," 1071 n14
- incurring death penalty for refusing to take his ease in own house, 928
- killed by Jehoiakim, identified with
  - priest Uriah, 1068, 1071 n14

Uriah of Kiriathjearim

- relative of Jeremiah, 1068

Uriah the Hittite

- assisting David with Goliath's
  - armor in return for Israelite wife, 916

Uriel (archangel)

- corresponding to Dan, 685
- as Enoch's teacher, 127 n60
- explaining to Ezra about appointed time of evil, 1122
- giving knowledge to Seth, 116 n53

- identified with Suriel, 687 n440
- and Jacob, 306 n273

- as leader of most exalted rank of
  - angels, 13

- and Michael burying Adam, 97 n135

and Moses

- encounter of U. with Moses, 306 n273

- U. attacking M. on road to
  - Egypt, 517 n146

- name, meaning of ("God is my light"), 685

and Noah

- U. informing N. of coming of
  - flood, 143 n23

- U. sent to N. to announce
  - flood, 135

- one of four angels surrounding
  - Divine Throne, 685

Urim and Thummim

- Aaron permitted to bear on heart, 516

- Abimelech consulting for David, 906

- ceasing to give oracular answers
  - after death of first prophets, 652 n358

- consulted by Phinehas concerning
  - battle at Gibeah, 881

- consulted concerning Saul, 898

- giving answer to Zadok, 947 n10

- high priest clad in, 775

Urim and Thummim (cont.)

- made to perform functions by precious stones in breastplate
  - of high priest, 652

- name, meaning of, 652

- one of five things in First Temple
  - only, 1123-1124 n36

- refusing to give answer to Abiathar, 947 n10

- taken into battle by Phinehas, 794

- to be consulted only for king, 906
- to belong to Aaron, 821

- wisdom of Ahitophel coinciding
  - with, 922

- See also* augury; divination; lots; magic arts; sorcery; witchcraft

- urshana, among immortals, 147, 148 n37

Ushpiziwnah

- beauty of, 420
- daughter of Asdrubal, marriage of,
  - to Latinus, 420

usurer(s)

- excluded from resurrection, 1102, 1102 n94

Uz

- Edom also called, 455

Uzriah (king), 821

Uzza (angel)

- as adversary of Moses and Israel in
  - Egypt and at Red Sea, 965 n56

- charging that bondage of Israel was
  - only 86 years, 552

- fallen angel, as Azza and
  - Shemhazai, 118 n56

- first to be drowned in sea, 557

- interceding for Egyptians at Red
  - Sea, 556

- opposition of, to creation of man, 137 n10

- as prince of sea, 558 n42

- teaching magic arts, 117

- tutelary angel of Egyptians, making accusation against
  - Israel, 552

- Uzza (elder from tribe of Issachar), 696

Uzzah, dropping dead

- for easing self near ark, 924 n68

- for forgetting about transportation of ark on shoulders, 786

- for touching ark, 924 n68

- for uncovering ark, 924 n68

Uzziah (son of Amaziah) administering kingdom during last years of Amaziah's life,
 1039 n19
 arrogance of, 1042 n30
 arrogating to self privileges of priesthood, 1040
 killing Amos, 1040
 love of husbandry as cause of downfall of, 1042 n30
 neglecting study of Torah, 1042
 n30
 possessing forehead of Adam, 58 reign of, marking beginning of activity of Hosea, Amos,
 and Isaiah, 1039
 stricken with leprosy, 59, 1040, 1042 n29, 1043
   on account of David's curse of Joab, 946
   for presuming on rights of priesthood, 675
   for trying to burn incense in Temple, 728
 Uzziel
   father of Mishael and Elzaphan, 663
   one of four sons of Kohath, 718
 Uzzi of Timnah daughter of, married to Reuben, 347

V

Vale of Siddim
   five godless kings of Palestine
   routed at, 194
 Valeria. See Beruria valley of ants
   story of Solomon in, 971-972
 Valley of Campania battle in, between kings of Bene-vento, Sardinia, and Africa, 417 Valley of Pathros battle in, between Zepho and sons of Jacob and Egyptians, 419 Valley of Shechem battle in, between Jacob and Amorites, 314
 Vashti
   arraying self in high priestly garments, 1134
   banquet of consisting of Palestinian meats and dishes, liqueurs, and sweets, 1134

Vashti (cont.)
   banquet of (cont.)
     held in halls of palace, 1134 political motivation for, 1134
   V. exhibiting treasures at, 1134 V. refusing Ahasuerus's order to appear at banquet naked, 1134-1135
   for women, 1134-1135
 as daughter of Belshazzar, 1134
   Evil-merodach, 1137 n31
 death of caused by Haman, 1174-1175, 1177 n179
   execution
     bringing about rebellion against Ahasuerus, 1137
     ordained in heaven, 1137 n34
   Memucan responsible for, 1147
   disfigured with leprosy by Gabriel, 1135 forcing Jewish women to spin and weave on Sabbath, 1135
 legend about refusal to appear naked, similar to story told by Herodotus about Candaules and Gyges,
   1137 n31
   marriage of, to Ahasuerus, 1131
   n6
   one of four women of perfect beauty, 941 n132
   one of two heathen queens, 990
   n51 (see also Semiramis) story of fate of, 1135-1138
 vav (letter)
   creation of world through, 4
   See also alphabet; letters of alphabet
 vegetarianism practiced by Esther, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, 1142 veins
   one of five parts of body received
   from father, 606 (see also
   body, human)
 venom, of serpents, 15 n59
 Venus (angel), 120 n57
 Venus (planet), 18
   Aniel as angel in charge of, 131
   n61
   cooling sun, 504
   in fourth heaven, 504
 verdicts, partial breastplate of Aaron atoning for, 650

vermin
   as consequence of fall, 79 n90
 vernal equinox
   God turning waters of Egypt into blood, 877 n109
 Vespasian
   as ruler of world, 163 n82 (see also cosmocrator)
   to spring from Esau as nation of sin, 252
 vessels, holy brought to Babylon, 1092 n52
   hidden by priest Simeon, 1092 n63
 vetches eaten during famine, 936 n111
 vigils, kept by Jacob, 277
 vine
   Gideon pictured as, 874 n103 spies not able to carry, 709 n518
   symbolic of Israel, 1175
   willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175
   wine of, brought to altar, 1175
   See also tree(s)
 vineyard image of keeper of, and thief, 774-775 Israel described as, 774-775
   as metaphor for woman, 752
   n673
   people described as, 859
 violence
   as cause of flood, 140 n17
 violet. See under color(s) viper
   gnat as antidote for poison of, 43 venom of, as cure for skin eruptions, 43
   See also serpent
 Virgin (sign of Zodiac). See Virgo virgins throwing selves on flames, 1075
   weaving curtains for sanctuary,
   1077 n30
 Virgo (Virgin) (sign of Zodiac)
   answering Haman in defense of Israel, 1151
 visibility of audible, in revelation at Sinai, 612 n238
 vision
   of Boaz, concerning descendants of Ruth, 863
   divine, at Sinai, greater than visions of prophets, 612
   n238
   of Saul, 901 n52
   See also dream(s)

visitations

alien rule as, 199

Gehenna as, 199

voice(s)

calling Samuel at age of eight years, 896 n40

calling to Moses, in form of tube of fire, 673

heavenly, 747

announcing birth of Samuel, 889 directing Solomon to Mount Zion as best site for Temple, 965 heard in Israel from time to time, 1124 n36

identifying mother of child in case before Solomon, 950 preventing Solomon from dispensing judgment without witnesses, 950

sanctioning Boaz's greeting "The Lord be with you," 865 n53

one of seven things created in beginning, 1

at revelation at Sinai

four in number, 605 n214

five in number, 605 n214

seven in number, 605 n214

still, small

as last judgment, 995

one of four phenomena preceding appearance of God, 995

validating words of mortals, 347 n89

vow

fulfilling of, 316

and Jacob

J. as first to make vow, 278

J.'s vow at Bethel not fulfilled promptly, 316 of Jonah to go to Nineveh, 1033 n32

law of absolution from, 624

submitted to by God, 624, 625 n276

Vretil (angel)

Enoch's teacher (should be Uriel), 127 n60

See also oath

vulture(s)

fearing to swoop down, 2

hymn of praise of, 44, 46 n194 (see also praise)

See also bird(s): of prey; eagle(s)

W

wagons

for Tabernacle

brought by princes, 665

lasting for all eternity, 665

walls

in Egypt and Goshen, falling at roaring of Judah, 387

war/warfare

of Amalek against Israel, 745-746

with Amorites, 314-316

of Anibal against Latinus, 420 of Aram and nations of East against Ethiopia, 491

armor and, 314

between Carthage and Rome, 421 n426

of confusion

three occasions of (battle of Gibeon, battle against

Sisera, battle of Samuel against Philistines), 896

n42

to be in Messianic time, 896 n42

defensive war

no man exempt from service in, 920 n50

of Edom against Moab, 420 between Edomites and Kittim, 421

between Egypt and Canaan mention of, in Tel-Amarna letters, 548 n10

of Ephraimites against Philistines at Gath, 547 between Ethiopia and nations of East, 489 exaggerated numbers in, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 415, 416,

418, 419, 420 (see also under number)

first step in preparation for, selection of spies, 842-843

holding sway in this world 563-564

horses used in, 314

of Israel

against Amorites, 716-717

against Og, 753

against Sihon, 751-752

taking place in Elul, 752 n666

of Jacob and sons

against Ninevites, 311-314

against Shechemites, 309-311

of Joshua against Amalek, 581-582

magic and, 581

between Midianites and Moabites,

420

war/warfare (cont.)

among nations, 420-421

observance of religious statutes during, 797

only meat of sacrifice to be eaten during, 902 n58 purification of warriors before, 583 n145

of Simon and Levi, against

Shechemites, 309-310

between sons of Esau and sons of Jacob, 415

second campaign of, 416

between sons of Esau and sons of Seir, 416

teaching, as evil, 167

window of, in first heaven, 503

between Zepho and

Africa, 418-419

Islands of the Sea, 418 sons of Tubal, 418

warriors

purification of, before war, 583

n145

wasp

David saved from Abner by, 919

See also hornet

watchers of heaven

as fallen angels, 119-120

water(s)

as abode of demons, 67 n40

above

distance of, from firmament, 14 n48

as foundations for seven heavens, Divine Throne, and abode of angels, 12

identified with light, 14 n48 becoming transparent as glass, one of ten miracles at Red Sea, 556

below

as foundations for netherworld,

12 (see also Hades; hell;

Gehenna; Gehinnom;

netherworld; Sheol; Tofet)

identified with darkness, 14 n48

of bitterness, 1068, 1070 n13

boundaries of, sealed by Name of God, 21 n73 bringing about death of Moses, 735

as chaotic primeval substance, 11 n42

chief of, Rahab, angel of sea, 18

and creation

created on first day, 82 n98

water(s) (cont.)and creation (cont.)

- created on second day, 735
- division of waters in, 12-13, 14 n52, 48
- element of creation, 29 n114
- gathering of waters on third day, 82 n98
- one of ten things produced on first day of creation, 5
- ordered to divide before Moses, 48
- division of, when Red Sea divided, 554
- drinking, congealed in heart of sea, one of ten miracles at Red Sea, 556
- eagerness of, to obey, 20 n73
- effect of, on those who partake of it, 779 n787
- first to give praise to God, 12
- flowing from beneath tree of life, 69
- gender of, 21 n74
  - female, issuing from earth, 147
  - male, above firmament, 147
- in Haran, 278
- identical with darkness, 11 n42
- in Jewish legend, 9 n23
- lack of
  - at Elim, 567
  - at Marah, 567
  - as punishment for neglect of study of Torah, 575
  - in wilderness, 566
- ministering to demons, 67 n40
- miracles connected with, 750 n665
- poisoning of, in four equinoxes, 877 n109
- of purification, sprinkled on warriors before war, 583 n145
- rebellion of, 14 n50, 18, 20 n72, 20 n73
- refusal of, to separate, 12
- from rock, 575
- separating second from first earth, 6
- over seventh earth, 6
- song of praise of, 14 n53 (see also praise)
- spring of living water in Paradise, 507
- springs of, having various effects on those who drink them, 778
- stream of
  - in first heaven, 503
  - flowing through brackish sea, one of ten miracles at Red Sea, 556

water(s) (cont.)

- trial by, 625-626
- at Mizpah, 895 n40
- for worshipers of golden calf, 895 n40
- turning bitter to sweet in wilderness, 566-567
- turning to blood, as plague in Egypt, 527
- united in vault above heads of Israelites, one of ten miracles connected with passage of Israelites, 555
- walls of, transformed into rocks, one of ten miracles connected with passage of Israelites, 556
- weeping of, at separation, 20 n73
- See also* ocean; sea
- Water-bearer (sign of Zodiac). See Aquarius
- water libation
  - performed on Feast of Tabernacles, 929 n78
  - in Temple, commanded by God, 14 n52
- watersprings
  - created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78 (see also under creation: sixth day)
- waw (letter). See vav
- wax
  - heavenly decree sealed with, 1159, 1161 n122
- wayfarer
  - kindness toward, 393 n296 (see also hospitality; strangers; traveler[s])
- ways, two. See two ways
- weak, protection of, 1-2
- wealth
  - bringing destruction, 798-800
  - desired by Esau, 304
  - not desired by Jacob, 304
  - one of three gifts of God to world, 798 (see also gifts)
  - as qualification of prophet, 633 (see also prophet: qualifications of)
  - of Sodom, 208-209
  - two men perishing on account of (Korah, Haman), 798
- wealthy people
  - legends about, and Elijah and R. Joshua b. Levi, 1014
- window of, in first heaven, 503

weapon(s)

- acquiring, as evil, 167
- Azazel teaching men to make, 119
- bow, as chief weapon of tribe of Judah, 821
- catapults, used by Babylonians against Jerusalem, 1074
- of Israelites, taken away by angels, 627
- javelins, 314
- lime powder as, 312
- mentioned by Isaac, 268 n78
- swords, 314
- throwing spears as, 314
- See also* armor; bow; javelins; spears; swords; war/warfare
- weasel, 42 n188
- wedding
  - day, bridegroom pardoned on, for all past sins, 273
  - festivities, lasting seven days, 425
  - See also* marriage(s)
- Wednesday
  - considered unlucky day in Middle Ages, 27 n109
  - protesting annihilation of Israel, 1150
- Weeks, Feast of. See Pentecost
- weeping
  - of angels, 231 n242
  - over Isaac, 264
  - of dying, 58 n20
  - of Esau, 270
  - of Eve after death of Adam, 98
  - of Jacob
    - at command of Rebekah, 295
    - for kissing Rachel, 281
  - of Jeremiah, 1086-1087 n47
  - of Joseph
    - over going to Egypt, 337
    - at Rachel's grave, 337-338
    - at sight of Benjamin, 381 n244
  - of Joshua, 809
  - of Judah
    - for Joseph, 340
  - of Leah, 283, 285
  - of Messiah, 20, 23 n97
  - of Rebekah, 273, 273 n113
  - significance of, 922 n54
  - of sons of Jacob, for what they did to Joseph, 340
  - of trees, 18
  - window of, in first heaven, 503
  - See also* crying; tears
- weights and measures
  - Cain as first to introduce, 111, 112 n41

well(s)

of Abraham
 names of, restored by Isaac, 260 restored by Isaac, 260 dug by Isaac
 fourth well identified with well of Miriam, 263 n63
 motivation for, 263 n68
 number of, 263 n63
 significance of, 263 n63
 of Miriam (see Miriam, well of) reappearing on account of merits of Aaron and Moses, 573 12, at Elim, corresponding to 12
 tribes, 567
 12, made by God at creation at Elim, 567
 to which pious repair, 241 n288
 in wilderness
 identified with Miriam's well,
 750 n663
 one of six blessings of generation of wilderness, 86 n105
 one of three gifts received by Israel, given on account of merits of Miriam, 573, 574
 n113 (see also gifts; merits) revealing miracle in valley of Arnon
 Well of Lewdness identified with well of Shittim,
 778, 779 n787
 inhabitants of Sodom drawing
 from, 779 n787
 werewolf, 39 n148
 west
 assigned to Eve, 92
 Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin to pitch camp in, 685
 location of ocean, 6
 location of Shekinah, 824 n914
 wheat
 as forbidden fruit of Paradise, 73-74 n70
 white. See under color(s)
 whole offering. See offering; sacrifice(s) whoredom punished by stoning and hanging corpses on gallows, 779
 wicked
 actions of, made known while in womb, 254 n13
 death of, 58 n20
 distinguished from pious by odor of dead bones, 339 n58
 experiencing sorrow after joy, 399

wicker (cont.)

having to search laboriously for manna, 573 n102
 in hell, resting on Sabbath, 85
 n103
 judged in river of fire, 97 n134
 looking at, causing blindness, 267
 n74
 marked by angel with blood, 1075
 n26
 punished
 after death, 383 n257
 by God during night, 538 n216
 by God while naked, 562 n55 seized by angels of destruction at
 death, 430 n444
 as slaves to their hearts, 273 n109
 to be led from hell to Paradise on judgment day, 939
 torture of, in Gehenna, announced
 by angels in fifth heaven, 505 n117
 wicked kingdom identified with Rome, one of three things to be removed before advent of Messiah,
 307 n275
 wicked men
 wicked from first to last, five in number (Nimrod, Esau, Dathan and Abiram, Ahaz, Ahasuerus), 1044 n39
 wickedness
 coming into world with Cain, 101 widower
 rule concerning marriage of, 243
 n308
 widows Job's concern for, 454
 wife having one at a time, 461
 of Lot (see Lot: wife of)
 metaphors for, 155 n60
 of Potiphar (see Zuleika)
 same as sister, 878 n111
 wild beasts
 being devoured by, as punishment of thieves, 246
 slain by David with stones, 914
 n15
 wild cock
 as guardian bird of shamir, 975
 n85
 identified with hoopoe, 975 n85
 wilderness
 Gabriel appearing to Joseph in, 332 wilderness (cont.)

generation of Solomon's wisdom greater than
 wisdom of, 949-950
 heavenly gifts received by Israel in, as rewards for kindness and piety of Abraham, 570
 n92
 Ishmael and family in, 221
 Israel in, 48
 Israel receiving three gifts in (well, clouds of glory, manna), 573, 574 n113 (see also
 gifts)
 Israel wandering in, for 40 years,
 542, 545-548, 548 n8
 while Palestine made habitable, 717
 Joseph losing way in, 332
 revelation of Torah taking place in,
 595 n185
 sojourn of Israelites in Israelites studying Torah in, 546 spiritually and materially beneficial for Israelites, 546
See also camp(s); desert; Israel (nation; people)/Israelites:
 in wilderness; Moses: in wilderness
 wilderness generation. See generation(s): of wilderness
 willow tree
 symbolic of Israel, 1175
 willing to serve as cross for Haman, 1175
See also tree(s)
 wind
 as anger of God, 699
 created on first day, 82 n98
 God flying on, against Pharaoh, 558 ministering to God, 67 n40
 north
 most beneficial for production of nourishment, 645 n337
 as sign of God's grace, 717 n548
 one of four phenomena preceding
 appearance of God, 995
 one of ten things produced on first
 day of creation, 5
 standing for this world, 995
 stilling of, 10 n36
 strength of, 999 n29
See also God: spirit of windows in first heaven, names of, 503
 of heaven, 17 n67

windpipe

- one of 12 guides of men, rendering breathing and utterance of sounds possible, 671 (see also body, human; guides: of men)

wine

- brought to Adam by angels, 69
- causing one to disclose secrets, 440
- drunk from golden vessels at feast of Ahasuerus, 1133
- fall of Adam due to, 153
- given to
  - Isaac by archangel like wine of pious in world to come, 268 n92
  - Isaac by Jacob, 266
  - pious in world to come, 268 n92
- of heathens, Israelites forbidden to drink, 798
- intoxication with, twisting understanding, 440
- leading Judah astray, 440
- leading to unchastity, 880 n121
- mixed with water, given to Sisera by Jael, 869
- moderation in consumption of, 155 n58
- one of rivers in Paradise, 507 (see also rivers: flowing under thrones of pious)
- one of ten mighty things existing in world, 1120 n24
- Persian custom to compel excessive drinking of, at banquet, 1133
- preserved for pious, 21 n79
- potency of, 1118
- red, given to Esau by Jacob, 259 n45
- required for libations
  - coming from En-Gedi, 709 n519
  - coming from Miriam's well, 709 n519
- and seduction of Israelites by Moabites, 778
- served at Sabbath meal by Joseph to sons of Jacob, 380
- and Solomon, 958
- S. drinking wine when Temple completed, 949 n13
- as stream from tree of life, 127 n60
- well of Asmodeus filled with, 973
- See also* drunkenness; inebriate; intoxication

winter

- color white corresponding to, 971

winter solstice

- and Leviathan spouting up water, 2
- time when Jephthah offered daughter, 877 n109
- See also* Tevet (month)

wisdom

- causing Balaam and Ahithophel to lose this world and world to come, 798
- celestial, Bezalel endowed with, 469
- divine
  - cannot be comprehended by man, 459
  - as source of Torah, 2 n2
- gates of
  - 49 in number, 956 n25
  - 50 in number, 633, 635 n306
  - 5,000 opened to Moses on Sinai, 956 n25
  - open to Moses and Solomon, 950
- given by God to be used for sanctification of His holy name, 414 n406
- heart as seat of, 956 n24
- intellect as seat of, 956 n24
- one of three gifts of God to world, 798 (see also gifts)
- originating with the Jews, 159 n75
- as qualification of prophet, 633 (see also prophet: qualifications of)
- required for building of Noah's ark, 141
- of Solomon (see Solomon: wisdom of)
- in Torah, aiding in building Tabernacle, 641
- and tribe of Issachar, 433
- Zagzagel (angel) as prince of, 504

wise men

- greater than prophets, 1124 n36
- summoned to Pharaoh to interpret dreams, 362

witch

- of En-dor, 900
- deceiving people for 40 years, 903-904 n74
- Queen of Sheba as, 458 n20

witchcraft

- coming from fallen angels, 121 n57
- Egypt as seat of, 66 n40
- having no power over men born in second Adar, 1152 n108
- Laban and, 294 n223

witchcraft (cont.)

- and making of "image of jealousy," 1101 n93
- prohibition of, 70 n55
- used against Esther, 1144 n78
- See also* augury; divination; lots; magic arts; sorcery; Urim and Thummim

witness, false

- drought as punishment for, 607
- forbidden by Ninth Commandment, 607

witnesses

- necessary for capital punishment, three in number, 989 n39
- necessary for dispensing judgment, 950
- women disqualified as, 207 n151

wolf (wolves)

- among animals of fourth plague, 530
- Benjamin known as, 409
- depicted on tribe of Benjamin's flag in wilderness, 688
- and ram, legend of, 303
- on Solomon's throne, 968

woman (women), 64-68

- at banquet of Vashti refusing to participate in desecration of holy vessels, 1135 n28
- and barrenness (see barrenness)
- beauty of, leading astray, 440
- women of perfect beauty, four in number (Sarah, Rahab, Esther, Abigail), 940, 941 n132
- blackening faces of, 797
- "born of," as designation of contempt, 632 n296
- character of, ascertained from barking of dogs, 241 n288
- in childbirth, 1020 n100
- corpses of, not proper to transport, 319 n310
- covering hair, 65
- covering head, 68 n45
- creation of
  - from bone, 65, 263
  - from man, 65
  - from rib, 65
- Cushite, Zipporah as, 701 n488
- disqualified as witnesses in court, 207 n151
- distinguished from man by odor of dead bones, 339 n58
- division of, into seven classes, 23 n97
- as eavesdroppers, 268 n81

woman (women) (cont.)

edict of Ahasuerus
that wife must obey husband, 1137
that wife must speak language of husband, 1137
Edomite, Moses assuring king of Edom that Israelites would not attack, 737 n622 of Egypt, to find hidden male Israelite children, 472 eligibility of, for office of judge, 870 n74 eminent, in Bible, two in number (Deborah, Huldah), 1061-1062 n117 expected to instruct children in ways of Torah, 596 extinguishing light of man's soul, 65 faithless, dying after tasting dust on floor of Tabernacle, 672 n393 forbidden to use weapons, 871 n85 foreign, married by Solomon, 949 n16 free from punishment for rebellion in wilderness, 715 n546
of Gibeah, deserving her death, 884 n134
giving birth to giants, 121 n57 Hebrew, legendary fertility of, 466 n4, 468 impure for 33 days after giving birth to male child, 967 n57 intelligence of, 65, 67-68 n44 of Israel, singing before angels, 563 jealous disposition of, 288 n176
of Jerusalem
afflicted with repulsive diseases, 1082
beauty of, 1082, 1085 n45
cast off by Babylonians, 1082
Jewish, despised by Persians, 1139 n53 led by Miriam, singing song at Red Sea, 564 lighting candles
on Sabbath, 65
to celebrate appointment of elders, 700
liking to show selves in street, 307 making bricks for Tower of Babel, 163-64
and man (men)
woman not to claim equality with man, 67 n40

woman (women) (cont.)

and man (men) (cont.)
women more scrupulous than men in observance of religious precepts, 596 mendacious nature of, 207 n151
metaphors for, 752 n673
of Midian, killed by Israelites, 797 Moses at first rejecting gifts of, 653-654 mourning, story of, 1084 n43
name, meaning of, 68 n47
needing perfume, 65
New Moon as festival for, 655 n364 only one found worthy to receive divine communication directly, 254 n18 Paradise of, 940
physical formation of, 65
piety of, 785
pious
not included in curse pronounced on Eve, 476
22 in number, 942 n134
praised for virtue in last chapter of Proverbs
22 in number, 949 n13
producing woolen hangings for Tabernacle, 653
purification offerings of, 893 n26 refusing to give up jewels for making of golden calf, 620 rejuvenated monthly as reward for, 620 remaining true to Moses and God, 785 of returning exiles, losing beauty, 1124 n38
seducing angels, 41 n168, 118 n55, 121 n57
and serpent, enmity between, 75 seven sterile, who bore children (Sarah, Rebekah, Leah, Rachel, Hannah, Hazlelponith, Zion), 878 n111 shrill voice of, 65
of Shunem (see Shunammite) spinning wool while still on goats, 653 suspected of adultery, 568 n82
water test of, 654
talkativeness of, 280 n149 to cover lower parts of bodies with garment called sinar, one of ten regulations of Ezra, 1122

woman (women) (cont.)

transformed into sirens, 41 n168
star, 137 n10
trying to restrain men from worshipping golden calf, 785
of valor, 22 in number (Bathsheba, Bithiah, Elisheba, Esther, Hannah, Hazlelponith, Jael, Jochebed, Leah, Michal, Miriam, Naomi, Noah's wife, Obadiah's wife, Rachel, Rahab, Rebekah, Ruth, Sarah, Serah, Shunammite, Zarephath's widow), 238 n271 virtuous, Solomon not finding any, 952 in wilderness, spared customary ailments of women, 675 words of Solomon against, 957 n32 wonder children, 172 n15 wonders
six, since creation of world, 849 seven great, in history, 237
wool of goat, same as hair of angel of Edom, 307 n275
prohibition against using with flax, 105 n12 word, spoken effect of, whether curse or blessing, 294 n224 word of God. See God: word of work(s)
kinds of, permissible on Sabbath in construction of sanctuary, 653 of love, one of three things for whose sake world exists, 660
world(s)
created by God
with left hand, 1166 n143
with one hand, 49 n3 created for sake of
Abraham, 50 n8
David, 50 n8, 939 n128
Israel, 20 n8, 48, 1165
man, 47-48, 51 n8, 63 n35, 146 n32 merits of Abraham, 167 merits of Jacob, 400
Messiah, 50 n8, 939 n128
Moses, 50 n8, 939 n128
R. Hanina b. Dosa, 51 n8
Torah, 50 n8, 1160 n122

world(s) (cont.)

creation of
 through letters of alphabet, 3-4 through merits of 12 tribes, 434
 n2
 from creation to Sinai, owing existence to love and grace of God, 660 destruction of, beginning with Zion, 11 n40 division of, into 12 zones, 10 n33
 duration of, 7,000 years, 126, 859
 existence of, conditional upon Israel's acceptance of Torah, 635 n308 existing for sake of three things (Torah, Divine service, works of love), 660 Torah studied by Israel, 1154 existing on account of one godly person, 212 n164
 four, through which man must pass, 999 n30 Israel and Torah necessary for existence of, 1166 n143
 and man, 47-51
 world as macroanthropos, 49
 n4, 60 n22
 world as reflex of man, 47
 new, 574 n108
 creation of, beginning with Zion, 11 n40
 one of six gifts as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572 (see also gifts; Sabbath: observance of) three who lived to see (Daniel, Job, Noah), 462 n35
 number of
 310, 10 n30
 18,000, 23 n97
 two, greater and lesser, 24
 other, created by God before this one, 1 owing existence to three sons of Korah, 728 n590 of pious, received according to merit, 22 n85 resting on three pillars
 as three patriarchs, 728 n590
 as three sons of Korah, 728 n590
 as three youths, Hananiah, Mishaël, and Azariah, 728 n590, 1099
 seven parts of, 683 n430
 seventh, only one inhabited by human beings, 682

world(s) (cont.)

from Sinai to erection of sanctuary, owing existence to Torah and to love, 660 traversing of, by Michael, Gabriel, Elijah, and angel of death, 1004 n46 zones of, corresponding to signs of Zodiac, 10 n33
See also earth(s)
 world to come angels in, 17 n66
 blessing of God in, 428
 creation of, 8 n17
 David to be member of company of righteous in, 940 n129
 as day of Lord, 99 n140
 distribution of food of tree of life in, 92 n114 erection of sanctuary in, 640 evil and sin to be abolished in, 306 n275 healing of all disease in, 591 Israel to receive 13 gifts from God in, 640 (see also gifts) larger than this world, 23-24
 life in, as eternal life, 1022 n119 light of sun in, 24
 and Moses
 M. to be teacher of Israel in, 508
 M. to lead Israel in, 838
 part to be played by Moses in, 543 n235 song of praise led by Moses in, 564 observance of Day of Atonement in, 632 n301
 one delight of, to gaze at light of Shekinah, 645
 one of six gifts as reward for observance of Sabbath, 572 (see also gifts; Sabbath: observance of) pious in (see also under pious) light of first day to appear to pious in, 5
 manna as food of pious in, 574 n108
 310 worlds prepared for pious in, 807 tree of life preserved for pious in, 81 n96 world to come set apart for pious, 327 righteous to perform resurrection of dead in, 1103 n95

world to come (cont.)

and Sabbath
 joy of Sabbath as one-sixtieth of world to come, 608 n220 Sabbath as foretaste of world to come, 99 n140, 606 world to come as eternal Sabbath, 85 n102 world to come as Great Sabbath, 99 n140
 those having no share in, 989 n46
 Absalom, 932
 Ahab, 988, 1058 n109
 Ahaz, 1044 n44
 Ahaz and Ahaziah, 967 n59, 1038-1039 n6
 Ahitophel, 922
 Esau, 259 n43
 generation of revelation, 612-613 n244 generation of Tower, 165 n90
 Jeroboam, 1058 n109
 kings who do evil, 1038-1039 n6
 Manasseh, 1058 n108
 those having share in all except three kings (Jeroboam, Ahab, Manasseh) and four men (Balaam, Doeg, Ahitophel, Gehazi), 908 n100 children, 1022 n118
 Terah, 199
See also days to come; future world; time to come worms
 being eaten alive by, 908 n106
 as punishment, 884 n136
 betraying Dathan and Abiram as sinners, 572, 574 n110 corpses of eight not touched by (Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Aaron, Miriam, Benjamin, David), 939 n128 (see also under corpse[s])
 created on fifth day, 82 n98
 excrement of, as cinnamon, 34 excrement of phoenix as, 34
 in hell, 506
 wreath of bridegroom, 26 n101
 of sun, 26 n101
 withering of, as sign of death, 934 n110 writing
 art of taught to Greeks by Phoenicians, 484 n67

writing (cont.)
 art of (cont.)
   taught to Hebrews by Moses, 484 n67 taught to Phoenicians by Hebrews, 484 n67 characters used for, 157
 Japhethite system of, 158 n72 meaning editing, 1071 n15
 on tablets of Sinai, created in twilight between sixth day and Sabbath, 78 (see also under creation: sixth day)

writings, holy canonization of, 1128 n56
See also Bible; Hagiographa; Scripture

Y

Yaasriel (angel) having charge of 70 pencils, 605-606 sent to engrave Ineffable Name anew on shard over abyss, 605-606

Yabbashah (third earth), 6

Yaddua identified with “vegetable man,” 760 n720
See also Yadua

Yadua (bird)
   tongue of, used in construction of bird of Balak, 759, 760 n720

Yagon
   one of names of Messiah, 548 n10
See also Ganon

Yah (God)
   name by which God created world, 686

See also God: names and titles of

Yam Suf
   meaning of, 479 n46

Yaniah
   becoming ill in Africa, 418
   daughter of Uzi, 417
   marriage of, to Agnias, 417 recovering from illness with water from Forma in land of Kittim, 418

yashpeh
   Hebrew name of jasper, 652

year
   1569 as year after creation when Noah divided earth, 156 year (cont.)

   to begin with month of Nisan, 534
See also date
 Yefefiyah (angel)
   handing over Torah to Moses, 615
   placing Moses on couch to die, 832 n948
   prince of Torah, 615
   teacher of Torah, not revealer, 616 n248

Yefefiyah. See Yefefiyah

Yehudi. See Jew(s)

Yemen, Jews of refusing to return to Holy Land, 1124 n36

Yetzer ha-Ra. See evil inclination

Yiganon. See Ganon

Yikon (angel)
   ringleader of rebellious angels, 137 n9

Yireh
   name, meaning of, 231
   site of altar of Abraham, 231

Yishtabbah
   composed by Solomon, 1128 n58
See also prayers, Jewish

Yoam (wife of Jonah), 113 n42

yod (letter)
   creation of world through, 4
   first letter of name of Isaac, on standard of tribe of Judah, 686

first letter of name of Jacob, 253
   on standard of tribe of Judah, 686

and he (letter), sacred letters over ark, 686

lamenting for being removed from name of Sarah, 706 numerical value of (10), standing for Ten Commandments, 253

in Passim, standing for Ishmaelites, 330

prefixed to Hoshea's name to make it Joshua (Yehoshua), 706

standing for Yah (God), 4 story of complaint of Book of Deuteronomy about Solomon trying to remove yod, 973 visible in pillar of cloud over holy ark, 686

in word Shittim, standing for yeshuah (“salvation”), 647

See also alphabet; letters of alphabet

Yofiel (angel)
   placing Moses on couch to die, 832 n948
   as teacher of Shem in Kabbalah, 505 n117

Yohanan b. Zakkai. See Johanan b. Zakkai, R.

Yorkami. See Yurkami

Yotzer (daily morning prayer)
   and goodness of God, 2 n6
See also prayers, Jewish younger set above older, Ephraim and Manasseh, 404

youth Jochebed regaining, though old, 475

youths
   of fiery furnace
     as descendants of Hezekiah, 1047 n47
     three in number, saved as reward for Judah, 347 n89 innocent, worthy to offer sacrifices, 599 n193 Jewish, beauty of, 1102 n94 who have not tasted sin, in sixth compartment of Eden, 19

Yubal
   stream flowing from Paradise for Behemoth, 33

Yurkami (angel)
   name, meaning of, 1099 n87
   offering to extinguish fire in furnace, 1098

Z

Zabdi (elder from tribe of Naphtali), 696

Zabnak (judge in Admah), 208

Zaccur (elder from tribe of Reuben), 696

zadde (letter). See tzade

Zadkiel (angel)
   in charge of Jupiter, 131 n61
   teacher of Abraham in Kabbalah, 505 n117

Zadok
   and Aaron and sons as only anointed priests, 658 n371, 893 n30
   anointing of, 947 n10
   appointed high priest by Solomon, 947 n10 described as second Aaron, 947 n10 stopping plague by prayers, 947 n10

- Zadok (cont.)
 succeeding Abiathar as high priest, 893 n30
 Urim and Thummim giving answer to, 947 n10
- Zadokite sect
 connection of, with Gehazi and Damascus, 1030 n17
- Zafiel (angel)
 angel of showers, prostrating before Metatron, 130
- Zagzagel (angel)
 accompanying God to fetch Moses' soul, 828, 831
 as angel who appeared to Moses in bush, 505 n117 prince of Torah and wisdom, 504 scribe of angels, 811 teacher of Moses, 801
   in Kabbalah, 505 n117
   Z. teaching M. ten mysteries, 504
 teaching Torah in 70 languages, 504
- zain (letter). See zayin
- Zakiel (archangel)
 angel of storms, 120 n57
- Zakkiel (angel)
 angel of storms, prostrating before Metatron, 130
- Zakun (angel)
 leading angels to snatch words of Israelites interceding for Moses, 809
- Zaliah
 one of four heroes of tribe of Dan, 796 n854
 ordered to kill Balaam, 796
 as sorcerer, 795
 from tribe of Dan, flying after Balaam, 795
- Zalmonah
 Israelites murmuring against Moses and God at, 749
- Zamiel (angel)
 angel of hurricane, prostrating before Metatron, 130
- Zamzamai (queen)
 identified with Zenobia, queen of Palmyra, 1085 n45
- Zamzummin
 name, meaning of, 137
 as offspring of fallen angels and Cainite women, 137
- Zaphenath-paneah
 name
   meaning of ("he who can reveal secret things with ease"), 368, 370 n187
- Zaphenath-paneah (cont.)
 name (cont.)
   meaning of letters of, 368
 name Joseph called by Pharaoh, 368
 as ruler of Egypt, 377
- Zarephath, widow of, 997 n9
 hospitality of, 997 n11
 one of 22 women of valor, 238 n271
 reproaching Elijah, 997 n10
 son of, as future Messiah of tribe of Joseph, 997 n9, 1035 n39
- Zarhi (elder from tribe of Gad), 696
- Zarua (mother of Jeroboam)
 name, meaning of, 982 n2
- zayin (letter)
 creation of world through, 4
 standing for zakhor ("remembrance"), 4
See also alphabet; letters of alphabet
- Zebaot
 name of God when rising up to do battle, 510 (see also God: names and titles of)
- Zebub ("fly")
 as real name of Shishak, 984 n13
- Zebul (person)
 appointed as successor of Kenaz, 859 identified with Ehud, second judge, 860 n21 instituting treasury at Shiloh, 859
 name, meaning of, 860 n21
 reigning for 25 years, 859
- Zebul (place)
 one of heavens, 965 n56
 third portal of Garden of Eden, 68
- Zebulun. See Zebulun
- Zebulun
 Accho as allotment of, 852
 age of, at death, 114 years, 443
 always to be victorious in battle, 822
 blessing of, by Jacob, 408
 compact of, with Issachar, 289 n194
 death of, 443
 given land by Sea of Chaifa, 822
 guarding pit, 333
 marriage of, to Maroshah, daughter of Molad, grandson of Midian, son of Abraham by Keturah, 348
 name
   inscribed on standard of tribe of Judah, 685
- Zebulun (cont.)
 name (cont.)
   meaning of ("dwelling place"), 287, 433
 one of weak among sons of Jacob, 396 n324
 possessions of, distinguished by tunny, purple snail, and white glass, 667 rewarded for sacrifice for brother Issachar, 408 showing pity for Joseph, 332, 333
 sixth son of Leah, 287
 sons of, to dwell in Holy Land, 287
 testament of, 442-443
 to support brothers by trade, 408
 tribe of
   blessed by Moses, 822
   carrying on commerce to support tribe of Issachar, 287, 667 confessing to desiring to eat flesh of children, 855 devoted to commerce, 822
   elders from (Sered, Elon, Sodi, Oholiab, Elijah, Nimshi), 696 flag of, white with picture of ship, 688 pearl as stone of, 651
   prince of (Eliab), 679 spy representing (Gaddiel), 705
   to join Judah in camp in east, 685
 warfare of
   attacking Edom to north, 321
   against Ninevites, 313
   to conquer seacoast as far as Sidon, 408
   to make Mizraim like Gomorrah, 386
- Zechariah (elder from tribe of Gad), 696
- Zechariah (father of John Baptist) substituted for prophet Zechariah in Christian stories, 1077 n30
- Zechariah (son of Berechiah; post-exilic prophet; author of biblical book), 1078 n30
 contemporary of Jeremiah, 1068
 and Haggai and Malachi
 accompanying Daniel, 1096 n76
 last representatives of prophecy, 1121

Zechariah (cont.)

- one of eight postexilic prophets, 991 n56
- among returning exiles, 1119
- Zechariah (son of Jehoiada; preexilic prophet), 1078 n30
- active in synagogue, 1068
- avenged by Nebuzaradan, 1038
- blood of
  - seething and pulsating in hall of priests for 252 years, 1038, 1075
- spattering walls of sanctuary, 1077 n30
- informing people of location of altar, 1119
- murdered in Temple, 1075
- one of martyred prophets, according to Josephus, 1078 n30
- son of Jehoiada
  - blocking entrance to Temple from Joash, 1038
  - killed by Joash, 1038
- Zedekelbab (city)
  - founded by Shem, 156
- Zedekelbab (wife of Shem), 156
- Zedekiah (false prophet), 1065-1067
- and Ahab
  - attempting to seduce daughter of Nebuchadnezzar, 1106
  - false prophets, most notorious Jewish sinners, 1106
  - punished by fire, 1106
- described as "righteous man," 1106 n107, 1109 n119
- and Nebuchadnezzar
  - Z. buried with great honors by N., 1109 n117
  - Z. killed by N., 1108, 1109 n117
- revived by contact with Elisha's corpse, 1030 n21
- Zedekiah (king)
  - blinded, 59
  - and then taken to Babylonia, 1066
  - children of, killed before own eyes, 1066
  - exile under, 1096 n76
  - light becoming dark during time of, 967 n57
  - losing wealth to Chaldeans, 397
  - and Nebuchadnezzar
    - conflict between, 1065-1066
    - Z. seeing N. eating piece of live hare, 1065
  - oath of, 1065-1066, 1066 n2

Zedekiah (cont.)

- one of princes who assist Messiah, 100 n142
- other names of
  - Mattaniah, 1062 n124
  - Shallum, 1062 n124, 1066 n1
- perjury of, 1067
- punishment for, 1066
- piety of, 1062 n127
- possessing eyes of Adam, 58
- treatment of, in captivity, 1067 n8
- Zelaponit
  - of tribe of Judah, 877
- Zelophehad
  - breaking Sabbath, 690
  - daughters of, 784-787
    - addressing Moses and elders, 787 n812
    - bringing case to Moses, 785, 787 n818
    - claiming inheritance, 690
    - marrying uncle's sons, 786
    - wanting case decided by lower authorities, 787 n818
- death of
  - in battle against Amalekites, 785
  - in battle against Amorites, 717
  - killed by serpents, 787 n814
- as firstborn of Hephher, 786
- as ignorant man, 787 n814
- sin of, occasion for God's commandment of tzitzit, 690
- willing to sacrifice life to show sacredness of Sabbath, 691 n452
- Zemaraim, Mount
  - Abijah (son of Rehoboam) addressing people on, 985
- Zemarites
  - land provisionally granted to, 157
- Zenek
  - form of name Kenaz, 857 n1
- Zenobia (queen of Palmyra)
  - Zamzamai identified with, 1085 n45
- Zephaniah
  - great-grandson of King Hezekiah, teacher of Jeremiah, 1071 n13
  - one of eight postexilic prophets, 991 n56
  - one of four prophets appointed to proclaim punishment of Lot's descendants, 214
  - one of princes who assist Messiah, 100 n142
- Zepho
  - captured by Joseph, 415

Zepho (cont.)

- death of, 420
- escaping from Egypt and taking refuge with Agnias, 416
- founder of city of Rome, 419 n425
- idolatry of, 419
- killed by Tiranus, king of Elisha, 419 n425
- king of Kittim and of Italy, 417-418, 419 n425
- prayer of, to God of Abraham and Isaac, 418
- slaying monster in mountains of Koptitziah, 418
- story of, 417-420
  - likely source of, 417 n424
- warfare of
  - against Africa, 418-419
  - against Islands of Sea, 418
  - against sons of Tubal, 418
  - Z. allied with Hadad, Ishmaelites, and nations of East against descendants of Jacob, 419
  - Z. defeated by Israelites, 419
  - Z. made commander-in-chief of troops of Agnias, 416
  - Z. persuading Agnias to invade Egypt, 417
  - Z. trying to persuade Agnias to make war on sons of Jacob, 416
- Zerah (elder from tribe of Judah), 696
- Zerah (king of Ethiopia)
  - conquered by King Asa, 397, 985
  - identified with Osorchon I, 986 n19
  - taking wealth from Shishak, 397
- Zerah (son of Judah)
  - five sons of (Zimri, Ethan, Kalkol, Ethan, Darda), 490 n79
  - giving to Rahab line that was bound to her window, 345
  - name, meaning of, 345
  - and Perez, twin sons of Judah and Tamar, as spies, 345, 844 n10
  - scarlet thread on hand of, 345, 347 n93
- Zeresh (wife of Haman), 1168
  - advising death by hanging for Mordecai, 1168
  - advising Haman not to do evil against Mordecai, 1169 n158

Zeresh (cont.)

- telling Haman that he could not prevail against descendant of tribe of Judah or of Rachel tribes, 1177 n175
- telling Haman that he could not prevail against relative of Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, 1177 n175

Zerori (king of Shiloh)

- identified with Isidao, 315 n292
- slain by Jacob, 314

Zerubbabel, 1118-1121

- appointed to succeed Daniel, 1115
- coming to Darius from Jerusalem on behalf of Jews, 1121 n30
- described as "Messianic herald," 1120 n25
- described by God as His servant, 805 n880 (see also servant of God)
- and Elijah

- Messiah to ascend Mount of Olives with E. and Z., 1120 n25
- to explain all obscure passages of Torah in time to come, 1120 n25

- God revealing secrets of future to, 1119

grandson of Jehoiachin, 1061

- identified with Nehemiah, 1063 n135, 1119

- identified with Sheshbazzar, "prince of Jews," under Cyrus, 1120 n23

- introduced to Cyrus by Daniel, 1113

- among members of Great Synagogue, 1127 n56

- one of 18 called "servant of God," 452 n2 (see also servant of God)

- part played by, in Messianic times, 1120 n25

- possessing voice of Adam, 58

- son of Jehoiachin, 1063 n135

- successor of Daniel, 1118

- to recite Kaddish after God's lecture on new Torah to be revealed through Messiah, 1120 n25

- wisdom of, 1118

Zeruel (angel)

- aiding Kenaz in battle, 860 n17
- name, meaning of, 860 n17
- set over strength, 860 n17

Zethar (angel)

- name, meaning of ("observer of immorality"), 1135
- one of seven angels of confusion sent to disrupt Ahasuerus's banquet, 1135

Ziah

- name, meaning of, 110
- sixth earth, inhabited by handsome men, 110

Zidon

- land provisionally granted to, 157

zikta

- eating worms on ark, 147

Zillah

- Tubal-cain and Naamah as son and daughter of, 112
- wife of Lamech, 112

Zilpah (daughter of Laban)

- bones of, to be taken from Egypt and buried near sepulchre of Bilhah and Rachel, 428

- daughter of Laban and concubine, given to Jacob, 284

- daughter of Rotheus, brother of Deborah, 444

- given to Jacob by Leah, 286

- not a bondwoman, 284 n167

sons of

- first, named Gad by Leah, 286

- second, named Asher by Leah, 286

- treated with contempt by brothers of Joseph, 328

- youngest daughter of Kenaz, 859

Zimri

- Cozbi as wife of, 779, 781 n791

- elder from tribe of Simeon, 696

- head of tribe of Simeon, 679

- identified with Saul, 782 n799

- identified with Shelumiel, prince of tribe of Simeon, 782 n799

- before Moses, 779-780

- name, meaning of, 782 n799

- as prince of tribe of Simeon, 779
- sin of, 679, 779-782

- with daughters of Moab, 285
- from tribe of Simeon, 825 n923

Zion

- and beginning of creation of new world, 11 n40

daughters of

- being haughty, 65
- stricken with leprosy for unchastity, 675

Zion (cont.)

- "mother of Israel," as metaphor of Christian writers, 1070 n13

- as mourning woman, 1084 n43

- one of seven sterile women who bore children, 878 n111

Zion, Mount

- in precincts of Shem, 156
- Solomon directed to, as best site for Temple, 965

- story of brotherly love at, 965

Zipper

- son of, Balak known as, 759

Zipporah

- beauty of, 496 n88
- called "bird," 515, 517 n147
- as Cushite woman, 701 n488
- divorced from Moses, 584
- as Ethiopian wife of Moses, 493 n80, 496
- name, allegorical interpretations of, 517 n147

- piety of, 496 n88

Zitidos (wife of Job), 460

Ziz (great bird), 2, 3 n7

- as ben netz, "son of the nest," 29, 32 n134

- as clean animal, 32 n139

- connected with Sandalfon, 33 n139 (see also Sandalfon)

- darkening sun with its pinions, 71
- flapping wings at autumnal equinox, 2

- food for pious in world to come, 28-29, 33 n139

- identified with Bar Yokni, 32 n139

- influenced by Iranic mythology, 32-33 n139

- name, meaning of, 32 n129

- originally taken as heavenly singer, 33 n139

- as Renanim, 29

- ruler over birds, 29

- as Sekwi (the seer), 29

- size of, 29, 32 n131

- slaughtered by Moses, 32 n139

- tearing Leviathan, 32 n139

- wings of, eclipsing the sun, 33 n139

Zizit. See tzitzit

Zmargad

- kingdom of Lilith, 458 n20

Zoan (city)

- built by sons of Ham, 707
- destruction of, at time of Exodus, 236-237 n268

Zoar

- destruction of, 215 n182
- left undestroyed among sinful cities, 213
- smallest of sinful cities, 211
- wickedness of, 215 n182

Zoba (son of Terah and Pelilah)

- begot three sons, 243

Zodiac, signs of

- allegorical interpretation of, 11 n42
- connected with 12 archangels, 17 n65
- corresponding to zones of world, 10 n33
- Haman casting lots on, 1151
- See also under individual signs of Zodiac*

Zohar (book)

- description of seven worlds in, in Hebrew, 112 n37

Zohar (cont.)

- on Moses as faithful shepherd, 501 n109

Zohar (elder from tribe of Simeon),

696

Zophar

- offering to have Job treated by physicians, 460
- one of four friends of Job, 459-460 (see also Job: friends of)
- as prophet to heathens, 761

Zoroaster (living star)

- identified with Ham, 163 n83
- identified with Nimrod, 163 n83
- worshiped by Persians as celestial fire, 163 n83

Zuar (elder from tribe of Issachar),

696

Zucheus

- form of name of, 184 n49
- god of Nahor, Terah's brother, 183

Zuleika (wife of Potiphar), 352-356

- babe of, speaking in defense of Joseph, 358
- illness of, 354, 356 n118
- indecent language of, contrasted with modest words of Ruth, 356 n115

and Joseph

- Z. accusing J. of immorality, 357-358
- Z. attempting to seduce J., 352
- Z. visiting J. in prison, 359
- name of, 356 n113

Zur

- name of Balak as vassal of Sihon, 759

PASSAGES

A. Ancient Bible Versions		Judges		Job		3.8	78 n73
		1.13	861 n25	42.14	462 n37	6.2, 4	121 n57
I. SEPTUAGINT		3.2	856 n1	(additions)	453 n3, 456 n14	22.2	232-233 n253
Genesis		1 Samuel		Esther		4. THEODOTON
2.20	62 n30	4.21	894 n33	1.4	1131 n6	Genesis
2.24	72 n60	5.6	894 n34	1.8	1134 n23	2.23	68 n48
3.23	89 n109	5.9	894 n34	2.7	1144 n79	3.8	78 n73
4.7	105 n12	6.5	894 n34	2.20	1144 n78	4.4	104 n10
4.8	105 n16	6.17	894 n34	2.21	1146 n88
4.26	118 n54	6.19	895 n37	3.13	1138 n47	5. SAMARITAN
5.24	122 n58	9.14	901 n51	4.1	1161 n125	Genesis
5.29	134-135 n5	13.1	905 n80	4.8	1164 n140	4.8	105 n16
8.7	156 n47	16.12	914 n13	(additions)	1144 n75, 1146 n88, 1150 n100, 1158 n115, 1161 n123, 1163 n132, 1166 n143, 1169 n146, 1179 n192	46.28	394 n310
10.21	146 n30	21.8	908 n96			6. TARGUM ONKELOS
13.3	191 n79	28.14	904 n75			Genesis
22.2	232 n253					4.14	112 n37
26.32	263 n63	2 Samuel		Additions to Daniel		4.26	118 n54
39.1	355 n111	12.25	948 n11	1099 n85,		5.24	122 n58
46.28	394 n310			1100 n88, 1116 n8		6.2, 4	121 n57
		1 Kings		2 Chronicles		6.3	140 n19
Exodus		11.42	946 n1	24.3	1039 n11	8.4	151 n48
1.11	468 n7	14.1	982 n4			9.6	153 n56
8.17	534 n188	(additions)	982 n4			9.27	156 n65
		18.10	988 n31			15.9	199 n110
Leviticus						23.16	236 n267
24.7	645 n337	2 Kings				24.63	242 n300
		2.1	999 n32			24.67	242 n302
Numbers				2. AQUILA		25.3	244 n311
21.1	746 n646, 752 n669	Isaiah		Genesis		26.12	262 n60
23.10	774 n771	24.1	760 n719			27.40	271 n105
						36.24	324 n322
Deuteronomy		Jonah				39.21-23	361 n142
32.8-9	166 n91	1.3	1032 n28			43.32	381 n247
34.6	833 n952	Psalms				45.27	393 n294
						46.28	394 n310
Joshua				3. SYMMACHUS
(end)	853 n55, 861 n22, 885 n140	78.25	571 n95	Genesis		Exodus
		78.85	207 n143			6.20	474 n33
		104.26	30 n124	2.17	78 n72	12.32	542 n231

TARGUM ONKELOS

TARGUM YERUSHALMI

Exodus (cont.)		6.3	140 n19	20.18	218 n202	27.33	270 n100
15.8	561 n52,	6.4	121 n57	21.9	220 n211	27.35	268 n93
	565 n60	6.14-15	142 n21	21.15	221 n215	27.40	271 n150
25.20	644 n335	6.16	149 n41	21.16	221 n215,	27.41	273 n108
		7.4	141 n19		221 n16	27.46	273 n113
	Numbers	7.8	149 n45	21.21	222 n218	28.3	274 n114
11.25	697 n479	7.10	141 n19,	21.24	294 n220	28.9	274 n121
21.16	577 n129		145 n26	22.2	227 n229,	28.10	279 n131,
21.17-20	750 n664	7.11	149 n45		232 n253		280 n148
		7.12	145 n27	22.4	228 n236	28.12	279 n134
	Deuteronomy	7.16	145 n25	22.5	228 n238	28.22	280 n149
3.9	876 n108	8.1	150 n46	22.8	231 n240	29.3	282 n156
		8.4	151 n48	22.9	152 n52,	29.10	280 n151
	7. TARGUM YERUSHALMI	8.11	150 n46		231 n242,	29.12	284 n164
	Genesis	8.20	89 n109,		232 n251	29.17	284 n163
1.2	2 n6		152 n52	22.13	217 n196	29.24	284 n167
1.16	25 n100	9.6	153 n56,	22.14	187 n34,	29.30	288 n175
1.20	29 n117,		155 n59		232 n248	29.34	288 n174
	32 n128	9.24-25	155 n60	22.15	232 n249	30.1	517 n142
1.21	31 n127	9.27	156 n65	22.19	233 n254	30.1-2	288 n177
1.26	15 n61	10.8	162 n77	23.16	236 n267	30.5	288 n175
1.27	61 n26	10.9	163 n86	24.2	239 n276	30.8	288 n181
2.6	70 n52	10.11	162 n77,	24.31	241 n293	30.11	289 n184
2.7	54 n15		178 n36,	24.33, 55	241 n294	30.12	289 n196
2.12	70 n51		180 n40	24.61	242 n299	30.13	289 n187
2.17	78 n72	10.21	146 n30	24.62	242 n303	30.20	289 n195
2.21	67 n42	11.1	205 n91	24.64	243 n308	30.23	289 n200
3.6	73 n65	11.4	164 n88	24.67	242 n302	30.25	291 n291
3.7	73 n69	11.7	158 n72,	25.3	244 n310,	30.27	291 n205
3.9	78 n77		165 n88		435 n6	31.4	291 n216
3.10	95 n120	11.8	165 n88,	25.8	248 n317	31.19	292 n218
3.15	92 n113,		166 n91	25.21	253 n7,	31.21	294 n219,
	95-96 n131	11.26	31 n127		253 n8		294 n220
3.21	73 n69,	11.28	180 n40	25.22	253 n13,	31.22	280 n149,
	79-80 n93	12.2	188 n55		253 n17		294 n219,
3.23	89 n109	12.11	191 n67	25.23	254 n21		294 n220
3.24	80 n94,	13.7	196 n82	25.25	254 n23,	31.23	294 n222
	80-81 n95	14.1	195 n85		255 n28,	31.46	294 n226
4.1	102 n3,	14.2	196 n87		258 n38	32.3	295 n232
	102-103 n4	14.13	196 n87	25.27	256 n29	32.25	301 n251
4.2	105-106 n17,	14.14	197 n93	25.29, 34	258 n37	32.32	305 n255
	178 n34	14.18	197 n102	26.1	191 n74	33.2	305 n261
4.3	105 n12	14.20	197 n100	26.2	262 n61	33.4	305 n263
4.7	105 n14	15.5	180 n42	26.10	263 n67	33.16	307 n276,
4.8	105 n16,	15.6	199 n109	26.12	262 n60		307 n279
	106 n18	15.9	199 n110	26.20, 27, 28	263 n66	33.17	307 n277
4.10	108 n21	15.10	200 n112	26.35	267 n73	35.4	317 n295
4.13	108 n25	15.17	200 n114	27.1	267 n74,	35.8	318 n302
4.14	112 n37	16.5	203 n121		268 n79	35.9	68 n48
4.15	108 n27	18.1	206 n127	27.5	268 n81	35.14	317 n299,
4.16	109 n29	18.2	206 n132	27.6	268 n83		319 n305
4.22	113-114 n45	18.8	206-207 n143	27.9	268 n87	35.21	319 n311
4.24	112 n37	18.10	207 n148	27.22	282 n154	35.22	319 n312
4.26	118 n54	18.17	168 n4	27.27	268 n92	36.2-3	328 n3
5.3	102 n3	18.21	210 n157	27.29	268 n96	36.12	460 n31
5.20	145 n24	18.24	211 n162	27.30	270 n99	36.24	324 n322
5.24	130 n61	18.32	212 n165	27.31	256 n32,	36.32	325 n324
6.2	121 n57	20.16	217 n198		270 n100	37.2	329 n5,
							331 n9

Genesis (cont.)		46.3	393 n304	6.18	996 n3	19.19	11 n39
37.3	334 n43	46.4	393 n305	7.5	533 n186	20.2	604 n210
37.11	208 n85	46.13-14	434 n5	7.11	492 n80	20.6	608 n218
37.13	334 n22	46.17	393 n295	7.15	528 n175	20.13	609 n230
37.15	334 n29	46.20	349 n97	8.17	534 n188	20.14	609 n234
37.17	334 n31	46.23	435 n6	9.20-21, 29	534 n194	21.19	602 n201
37.19	334 n41	46.27	396 n321	10.19	534 n197	22.13	609 n231
37.25	343 n64	46.28	394 n 310	10.23	534 n198	22.30	548 n4
37.29	342 n60	46.29	396 n315	10.29	517 n142	24.4	599 n194
37.31	343 n62	46.30	396 n320	12.6	536 n206	24.10	543 n234,
37.32	343 n64	47.2	396 n324	12.12	538 n213,		715 n540
37.33	343 n67	47.21	381 n251,		538 n221	25.20	644 n335
38.1	346 n74		399 n342	12.21	536 n201	26.28	648 n344
38.3	346 n76	47.22	399 n340	12.29	540 n222	28.17	652 n357
38.4	346 n80	47.30	401 n352	12.31	540 n228	28.30	10 n30,
38.5	346 n81	48.2	409 n383	12.32	543 n231		11 n39,
38.7	346 n79	48.9	405 n366	12.34	544 n248		280 n142,
38.15	346 n85	48.16	381 n236,	12.37	543 n241,		653 n358
38.24	347 n88		406 n375		544 n246	31.18	626 n279
38.25-26	347 n89	48.20	406 n371	12.38	544 n246	32.1	621-622 n264
38.27	339 n41	48.22	311 n289,	12.40	511 n126	32.3-5	622 n265
38.29	347 n92		406 n377	12.42	538 n216,	32.19	626 n279
39.1	351 n101	49.1-2	409 n382		543 n235	32.30	626 n281
39.6	351 n103	49.3-4	410 n384	13.17	548 n10,	33.6-7	626 n285
39.14, 20	358 n130,	49.5-7	410 n387		1102 n94	34.10	1089 n55
	399 n340	49.8-12	410 n388	13.19	430 n438	35.26	655 n363
39.21-23	361 n142	49.13	410 n390	14.2	552 n13	35.27	655 n365
40.1	361 n143	49.16-18	410 n392	14.3	553 n18
40.14	364 n154	49.19	410 n393	14.9	561 n48		Leviticus
40.20	361 n150	49.20-1	410 n394,	14.11	725 n579	10.2	664 n382
40.22	362 n153		410 n397,	14.13	553 n23	10.4-5	664 n385
40.23	364 n154		411 n398	14.16	557 n36	24.10	488 n73
41.1	375 n212	49.22-26	411 n399	14.21	496 n88,	24.11	691 n451
41.10	364 165	49.27	411 n401		555 n31	24.12	691 n455
41.45	349 n97,	50.1	414 n409	14.22	557 n38	29.10	691 n449
	370 n187	50.3	414 n411	15.2	565 n61
41.47	370 n192	50.12	415 n422	15.12	562 n56		Numbers
41.48	370 n193	50.15-20	422 n427	15.18	565 n66	1.15-16	703 n498
42.5	372 n201	50.23	422 n429	15.21	565 n71	1.51	601 n197
42.6	372 n202			15.22	568 n84	2.2-25	652 n357
42.8	375 n205			15.25, 26	568 n83	2.3	689 n447
42.21	415 n422	1.11	468 n7	16.8	580 n140	2.3-25	687 n442
42.23	375 n214	1.21	470 n19	16.15	571 n94	2.10	687 n440
42.24	334 n41,	2.2	476 n44	16.21	574 n103	3.10, 38	601 n197
	375 n217	2.5	479 n48	16.22	568 n81	7.11	730 n595
42.27	375 n221	2.12	488 n75	17.1	576 n120	7.19	672 n390
43.14	378 n233,	2.18-19	494 n84	17.8	580 n141	7.84-88	673 n403
	393 n294	2.21	496 n88	17.9	582 n143	9.8	691 n455
43.16	381 n237	2.23	499 n101	17.10-13	583 n145	10.32	590 n171
43.32	381 n247	3.2	505 n117	18.6-7	585 n153	10.33	693 n457
44.3	383 n258	4.13	514 n134,	18.8-11	585 n156	11.1	580 n141,
44.15	384 n263		514 n137	18.27	590 n170		693 n460,
44.18	387 n269	4.19	517 n142	19.2	593 n178,		693 n462
45.4, 12	390 n281	4.20	496 n88		597 n188	11.5, 10	694 n469
45.14	390 n284	4.25	517 n146,	19.3	597 n189	11.12-15	694 n471
45.24	390 n292		517 n149,	19.4	536 n210	11.16	696 n474
45.27	393 n294		538 n216	19.4-7	597 n191	11.23, 25	697 n479
45.28	393 n297	4.26	517 n149	19.13	601 n197	11.26	698 n482,
							698 n484

TARGUM YERUSHALMI

TARGUM JONATHAN

Numbers (cont.)
11.28	698 n483	25.8	782 n798	34.6	68 n48,	19.19, 23 908 n101
11.31-33	700 n486,	25.12	996 n3		624 n274,	20.1 908 n101
	700 n487	25.13	784 n801		832 n948	22.18 904 n78
12.1	493 n80,	25.14	782 n799	34.12	496 n88
	701 n488	27.1	787 n811			2 Samuel
12.12	703 n496	27.2	787 n818	Targum Yerushalmi II		1.18 850 n41
13.21	708 n510	27.3	787 n812,	(Fragment Targum)		5.6 921 n51
15.32-35	691 n452		787 n813	Genesis		8.19 942 n141
15.34	691 n455	27.4	787 n812	1.1	162 n82	18.18 933 n108
16.4	721 n569	27.5	691 n455	7.4, 10	141 n19	20.26 928 n78
16.12	724 n574	27.46	411 n398	10.8	162 n77	21.19 928 n78,
16.19	719 n560	28.15	25 n100	10.9	163 n86	943 n146
16.22-34	726 n584	31.6	795 n850	11.2	165 n88	23.8 926 n76,
17.5	730 n593	31.8	796 n853	16.3	202 n118	928 n78
17.12-13	730 n598	31.9	798 n861	26.10	262 n57	23.20-25 980 n94
20.1	746 n646	31.50	798 n859	28.10	280 n148	24.15 937 n122
20.8	733 n607,	32.28	800 n867	30.22	997 n12
	733 n608,	32.38	799 n866	44.18	390 n278	1 Kings
	739 n626	33.4	538 n221,	48.22	311 n289	5.13 977 n93
			747 n647			18.37 998 n18
20.11	739 n627	33.4-42	750 n660	Exodus		18.46 998 n22
20.16	538 n213	33.9	568 n88	14.3	553 n18	19.11 999 n30
20.17	737 n622	33.40	746 n646	14.29	555 n32
20.29	744 n643	38.8	561 n48	15.18	543 n235	2 Kings
21.1	747 n650					2.1 999 n32
21.5	748 n651	Deuteronomy		Targum Jonathan on		4.1 1027 n7
21.6	748 n653	1.1	758 n708	Prophets		22.14 1062 n117
21.8-9	748 n658	2.11	146 n35	Joshua		23.29 970 n71
21.16	577 n129	2.25	752 n671	2.1	844 n12
21.17-20	750 n664	2.28	752 n675	6.20	847 n22	Isaiah
21.22	752 n673	3.10	146 n35	24.26	1061 n116	6.1 1042 n29
21.35	756 n695	3.11	755 n687,			6.6 1043 n33
22.4	759 n718		756 n697,	Judges		8.2 1071 n14
22.5	761 n724,		756 n704	2.1	861 n22	9.5 1052 n70
	777 n784	3.25	805 n882	4.5	870 n74	14.29 912 n7
22.12	765 n732	9.19	624 n274	5.1	870 n83,	28.21 1042 n30
22.18	82 n99	10.6	747 n650		871 n90	34.13 43 n190
22.22	767 n740	21.8	574 n110	5.5	595 n183	38.7 231 n242
22.24	767 n744	22.5	878 n111	5.23	870 n73	65.9 733 n607
22.25	761 n722	25.19	580 n141	5.24, 26	871 n86
22.27-28	768 n745	26.5	294 n220	11.39	877 n109	Jeremiah
22.30	767 n744,	27.9, 25	844 n15	15.15	879 n118	1.1 1070 n10
	768 n747	28.12	997 n12	19.2	884 n134
		30.4	996 n3	21.19	884 n135	Ezekiel
22.41-23.1	776 n776	32.1-43	824 n920			1.1 1061 n116
23.9	774 n768	32.2	824 n915	1 Samuel
23.10	774 n771	32.8-9	166 n91	1.1	888 n1	Hosea
23.19	775 n772	32.9	158 n72	1.3	888 n5	9.6 43 n190
24.1	776 n776	33.5	824 n918	1.4-5	888 n7
24.2	777 n777	33.7	825 n923	1.11	897 n43	Joel
24.3	762 n725,	33.11	825 n925	2.1-11	891 n20	1.4 991 n56
	769 n749	33.16-17	825 n927	3.20	896 n40
24.4	779 n785	33.18-19	825 n928	6.19	895 n37	Amos
24.5	777 n780	33.20	825 n930	7.6	896 n41	2.1 992 n56
24.7-9	777 n782	33.21	838 n966	13.1	901-902 n53
24.17-24	777 n782	33.24	825 n933	15.4	637 n314	Jonah
25.4	780 n790	34.1-4	815 n902	15.7	905 n80	1.16 1033 n33
25.6	781 n791	34.3	1027 n1,	16.4	902 n62	2.8 1033 n31
25.7	782 n796		1032 n23

1441

Targum Esther I ( cont. )
1.2	1115 n7, 1131 n13		1081 n39, 1086 n47, 1087 n48,	3.8	1155 n112, 1158 n115	2 Kings 23.29 970 n71, 1062 n123
1.3	1131 n6		1089 n54,	3.9	1158 n116
1.4	1131 n9		1097 n80,	3.14-15	1158 n118
1.5	1134 n20		1115 n7,	4.1	1073 n22, 1138 n47,	Isaiah 38.7 231 n242
1.6	1134 n20, 1141 n65		1131 n4, 1131 n13, 1134 n14		1158 n115, 1161 n122, 1161 n123,	Psalms 12.9 254 n19 89.3 112 n42
1.7	1134 n22		1076 n29, 1131 n6,	4.2	1160 n121
1.10, 12	1137 n31, 1137 n32, 1137 n36	1.3	1134 n14, 1138 n47	4.11	1164 n137	Ruth 3.3 866 n57
1.13	1138 n38		1131 n9,	4.13	1164 n140
1.14	1138 n40	1.4	1131 n11, 1131 n13	4.14	1164 n140
1.16	1138 n41, 1139 n49		1134 n20	4.16	1164 n141, 1166 n173	2 Chronicles 33.7 1056 n97
1.19	1138 n42	1.5	1134 n20	4.17-5.1	1166 n143
2.1	1139 n52	1.6	1131 n13,	5.1	1169 n146, 1177 n173	9. VULGATE Genesis 4.13 108 n25 8.7 150 n47 13.3 191 n79
2.5	1141 n61	1.7	1134 n21, 1134 n22	5.8	1169 n151
2.7	1130 n1, 1144 n67		1131 n13, 1134 n23	5.11	1169 n158
2.9	1144 n77	1.8	1131 n13,	5.14	1169 n159
2.21	1146 n88		1131 n6, 1135 n29	6.1	1171 n160, 1171 n167, 1171 n168	Exodus 2.21 501 n108 20.6 608 n218
3.2	1150 n100	1.9	1137 n31	6.6	1171 n168
3.6	1150 n104	1.10	1073 n22, 1076 n29,	6.9	1176 n169, 1178 n189	Numbers 10.11 494 n83
3.8	1155 n112	1.11	1131 n11	6.10	1176 n170, 1176 n171, 1176 n172	1 Samuel 17.4 917 n29
4.1	1161 n122		1076 n29, 1137 n31, 1137 n36,	6.11	1177 n174, 1177 n183, 1177 n184	2 Samuel 12.25 948 n11 14.26 932 n98
4.5	1163 n129		1137 n37	7.10	1179 n192
4.10	1164 n136		1138 n39	8.13	1178 n189
4.11	1164 n135, 1164 n137	1.12	1138 n43	8.15-16	1178 n185	1 Kings 15.13 986 n18
4.12	1164 n138		1138 n42	9.14	1178 n186
4.14	1164 n139	1.14	1137 n34, 1138 n42	9.24	1178 n190
4.17	1166 n142	1.16	1140 n56, 1141 n61	10.1	1130 n1, 1178 n191	2 Chronicles 24.3 1039 n11
5.1	1147 n93, 1169 n145, 1177 n173	1.18-21	1141 n65, 1144 n67, 1144 n75	(end)
5.3	1169 n150	2.1	1139 n55
5.11	1169 n158	2.2	1144 n76
6.10	1176 n169	2.5	1144 n81
6.13	1177 n175	2.6	1144 n84
7.1	1140 n56	2.7	1144 n85
7.3	1177 n177		1147 n88
7.6	1177 n180		1147 n93
7.7	1177 n181		1150 n102
8.1-2	1178 n188		1151 n107,
9.14-17	1178 n188		1152 n111
Targum Esther II		2.8		8. PESHITTA Genesis		B. Apocrypha
1.1	1103 n96, 1108 n116, 1130 n2, 1131 n 4, 1138 n47	2.9		4.8 105 n16		I. BEL AND DRAGON
		2.10		4.13 108 n25		1116 n8, 1116 n13
		2.18		4.26 118 n54
		2.19		6.1-4 121 n57
		2.21		22.2 232 n253		2. ECCLESIASTICUS (BEN SIRA)
1.2	1067 n8, 1073 n22, 1076 n29, 1077 n30,	3.1		22.12 232 n247		10.13 109 n28 32.1-5 639 n318 38.17 99 n139 39.9 762 n727 39.28-34 45 n191 40.1 54 n15 44.16 122 n58
		3.4		46.28 394 n310
		3.7			1 Samuel 2.22 893 n26
					2 Samuel
					24.15 937 n122

ECCLESIASTICUS ( cont. )	9.9	717 n552	10.14	370 n183	54	72 n60,
44.20	188 n52	10.29	917 n38	10.20	562 n55	82 n99,
44.22-45.1	482 n64	12.43	509 n118	11.5	526 n172	95 n120
45.1	996 n1			11.6-8	529 n178	60 106 n17
46.1	706 n505	9. 4 MACCABEES		11.24	2 n6	63 92 n113
46.11	897 n43	2.2	328 n3	12.8-10	756 n701	78 106 n17
46.20	904 n77	2.10	654 n359	14.12-13	118 n54	82 139 n14
47.13	955 n18	2.17	725 n578	15.8	236 n259
48.9	999 n32	6.5	517 n149	15.11	122 n58	2. APOCALYPSE OF
48.10-11	1021 n105,	6.6	1099 n87	15.16	236 n259	ABRAHAM
	1022 n119	7.11	730 n598	16.10-13	748 n658	1-7 184 n49
49.14	122 n58	7.20	629 n287	16.15-23	534 n194	10 31 n127
49.16	60 n23,	12.17	248 n318	16.20	571 n95	11-32 200 n114
	116 n52,	13.12	232 n242	16.21	571 n99	23 74 n70,
	118 n54,	14.17	8 n21	17-18	534 n198	95 n131,
	155 n63	14.20	232 n242	18.9	540 n225	102 n3,
50.11	596 n187	16.20	232 n242	18.15-20	543 n237	155 n59
		16.25	629 n287	19.7-10	557 n36	29-53 184 n49
				19.9	536 n206
3. 3 EZRA		10. PRAYER OF MANASSEH		C. Pseudepigrapha		3. APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH
2.1-14	1115 n7	1058 n108		I. ADAMSSCHRIFTEN		a. Greek text
3.1-4.57		3 21 n73		16 81 n96		9 n22,
(=1 Esdras)	1120 n24	7 100 n142		24 62 n31	2	79 n92
15	1117 n17			26 149 n44	2.2	165 n88
				27 10 n39,	3	70 n52
4. JUDITH		11. PRAYER OF AZARIAH		16 n64,		10 n32,
8.6	1169 n145	12 168 n4		72 n60,	4.8	110 n35,
8.14	462 n33	26-27 1099 n87		89 n109		165 n88
11.7	1103 n97			49 n3,		74 n70,
5. LETTER OF JEREMIAH		12. SUSANNAH		60 n24		96 n131,
7	1131 n5	(Greek) 1097 n79		29 87 n106,	4.10	155 n59
				88 n108	6	138 n13
6. JEREMIAH, REST OF THE WORDS		13. TOBIT		62 n31,		26 n102,
4.5	1083 n42	1.8 870 n73		105 n11,		27 n106,
9	1083 n42	4.4 1035 n37		108 n20	7	33 n139,
(end)	1057 n102	4.12 146 n29		105 n13,		46 n194
		5.22 878 n111		106 n19	8	26 n105,
7. I MACCABEES		6.18 242 n297		109 n28,	9	33 n139
1.15	248 n318	8.3 66 n40		113 n44	11	28 n112
1.52	188 n52	12.19 207 n143		113 n44		53 n13
1.57	599 n195	14.10 1058 n108		122 n58,	b. Syriac text
1.63	248 n318			139 n14	1-77	1093 n66
2.53	370 n183	14. WISDOM		140 n19	1.3	1062 n127
9.50	315 n292	1.2 78 n72		87 n106,	2	1076 n28
12.10, 21	244 n314	1.13 100 n142		103 n4,	3.1	1070 n13
14.20	244 n314	1.16 78 n72		115 n50	4.5	509 n118
16.15	588 n163	2.15-20 534 n188		104 n9	6.7-10	1092 n61
		2.23 100 n142		109 n28	7-8	1076 n29
8. 2 MACCABEES		2.24 95 n131		97 n136,	10	1083 n42
1.19-2.12	1121 n30	3.16 691 n451,		109 n31	10.8	41 n168,
2.1	73 n67,	4.6 691 n451,		115 n50		115 n47
	1093 n66	1022 n118		116 n52	10.18-19	1077 n30
2.4-8	1092 n61	7.15 955 n18		80 n93,	14.17	48 n1,
2.10	661 n380	7.20 956 n25		85 n104		50 n8
3.26	58 n20	9.15-16 462 n33		80 n93	17.4	646 n340
5.9	244 n314	10.1 62 n29
9.5	499 n104	10.3 103 n7
		10.6 215 n180
		10.7 215 n184

Apocalypse of Baruch	3.14	168 n4	15-30	94 n116	8.13	9 n22
(cont.)	3.15	200 n114	16	94 n117,	8.26	508 n118
21.6	15 n61	601 n198		96 n131	9.9	122 n58
21.25	42 n187	999 n30	17-18	94 n118	9.10	508 n118
23.4	58 n20	49 n4,	18	73 n62	9.16	42 n187
23.5	57 n19	462 n33	19	94 n119	11.40	508 n118
29.2	401 n345	49 n3	20	95 n120	24	615 n247
29.4	31 n127	4.15-17	21	74 n70,
29.5	109 n30	4.35		78 n78,	10. ASSUMPTION OF
29.7	9 n22,	5.6		95 n121	MOSES
	92 n113	5.16-18	23	95 n126	1	791 n838
29.8	9 n22	5.25	24	95 n127	1.12	50 n8
32.6	574 n108	5.26	25	95 n128,	1.15	815 n904
33	1083 n42	5.28		95 n131	2.3	852 n46
40.2	401 n345	5.37	26	95 n131	3.2	1092 n62
48.9	25 n100	6.9-10	27-29	81 n96	3.5	1072 n16
48.24	724 n573		31-32	97 n132	12	827 n941
48.40	594 n181	6.26	33-36	97 n133	12.2	790 n832
50.2-4	1022 n113	6.38	37	97 n134,	105	830 n946
51.3	8 n19	6.40		98 n137	106-107	73 n67
54.15	57 n20		38	95 n125,
56.6	103 n4	6.49-52		97 n134	BIBLICAL ANTIQUITIES, see
59.2	646 n340	6.55	39	97 n134	Ps.-PHILO
59.4	509 n118	7.3	40	97 n137,
60.1	848 n34	7.20-21		108 n21,	11. BOOK OF ADAM (ed.
63.6	1047 n55			109 n31	Maian)
63.7	1047 n52	7.29	41-45	98 n138	1.79	97 n136
63.8	1048 n59	7.52	43	99 n140	2.13	113 n44
64	1058 n108	7.66			3.6	149 n44
64.2-3	1056 n98	7.80-81	7. APOCALYPSE OF		3.8	152 n54
64.3	1056 n97	7.101	SEDRACH		3.11	151 n51,
64.4	1056 n97	7.132	5	63 n35		152 n54
66.11-15	121 n57	7.132-139	7	60 n24	3.13	155 n60
69.3-4	608 n221	8.8	14	931 n95	3.23, 25	163 n87
71.1	401 n345	8.30			73.90-91	103 n4
73.2	9 n22,	9.38-10.28	8. ARISTEAS		76	106 n17
	92 n113	10.22	35	152 n54	77	105 n11
77.2	73 n67,	13.41-50	83	10 n39	79	108 n20
	1081 n32	13.48-49	93	674 n411	125-126	1105 n105
77.10	1072 n16	14.9	97	651 n356
78-87	1093 n67	42	140	838 n965	12. ENOCH
80	1076 n29	(end)			1	16 n62
87.26	964 n50	1126 n50	9. ASCENSION OF ISAIAH		1.7	27 n105
				1057 n103	2.1-5.3	25 n100
c. Slavonic text		6. APOCALYPSE OF MOSES	1.1	1042 n25,	6-8	120 n57
9	79 n92	1-2		1056 n94	7.2	138 n13
10.8	21 n74	5	2.1	1056 n95	7.3	137 n10
97	102 n3		2.4-5	1056 n95,	8.1	137 n10
		6		1057 n98	9.1	16 n65
4. APOCALYPSE OF DANIEL			2.12	1070 n11	9-10	137 n9
(beg.)	1076 n29,	8	2-3	1057 n101	10.1-3	143 n23
	1077 n30	9-10	4.5	140 n19	10.4	31 n127
(end)	1022 n116	11	4.16	80 n93	10.11-12	137 n10
			4.22	1058 n104	10.19	109 n30
5. APOCALYPSE OF EZRA		12	4(end)	328 n3	12-16	121 n58
(beg.)	49 n3	13	7.18	10 n31	14.17	48 n1
3.11	145 n28	14	7.22	508 n118	17.4	26 n104,
3-14	1025 n50	15	8.7	687 n440		70 n51

ENOCH ( cont. )		99.7	118 n54	25	92 n113	4 EZRA, see APOCALYPSE
18.13-16	28 n112	106-107	134 n4	27	14 n48	OF EZRA
18.15-16	25 n100,	106.18	135 n5	27.38	124 n59
	121 n57	107.3	135 n5	28	128 n60	14. JUBILEES
19.2	41 n168,	108.12	508 n118	29.3	15 n61	1.1	597 n188
	118 n55			29.4-5	63 n35	1.17	616 n248
20	16 n62	13. 2 ENOCH		30	70 n54	2.2	7 n15,
20.1	16 n64	(Slavonic)		30.8	54 n15		15 n61
20.1-8	17 n65	2.5	46 n194	30.13	54 n15	2.4	14 n44
20.2-3	53 n13	3.31	9 n22	31.2	70 n57,	2.7	21 n76
20.7	80 n94	4.1	127 n60		127 n60	2.17-20	84 n102
22.1-6	53 n13	4.91	109 n31	31.3	72 n60	3.2	82 n98
22.7	109 n31,	6	127 n60	31.7-8	79 n85	3.4	81 n97
	609 n228	6.5	127 n60	33	99 n140	3.28	70 n58,
24.1	687 n440	7.3	127 n60	33.4	48 n1,		166 n91
24.4	92 n113	7.4	127 n60		127 n60	3.33	146 n30
25.4	81 n96,	7.5	127 n60	33.6	127 n60	4	113 n42
	92 n114	8.3	95 n126,	33.9	91 n110	4.1	103 n4,
25.5	92 n113		127 n60	33.10	91 n110,		106 n17,
26.1	10 n39	8.5	21 n79		116 n52		112 n40
32	10 n33	8.7	92 n113,	33.11	128 n60	4.8	106 n17
32.4	74 n70,		127 n60	33.12	143 n23	4.14	121 n57
	155 n59	10.1-2	127 n60	34	140 n17	4.15	120-121 n57
38.4	8 n19	10.13	127 n60	37	128 n60	4.17-23	121 n58
40.1	16 n63	10.15	127 n60	37.2	26 n103	4.19	145 n28
40.2-10	16 n65	11.2	26 n100,	38.8	128 n60	4.22	121 n57
41.5	28 n112		26 n101	40.8	453 n6	4.23	122 n58
41.7	26 n102	11.4	26 n102	40.11	10 n36	4.29	97 n136
52.2	1105 n105	12	40 n151,	41.1	128 n60	4.30	78 n72
53.1	649 n350		40 n155	42.4	127 n60	4.31	108 n20,
54.8-9	149 n39	12.1	127 n60	42.5	128 n60		112 n40,
55.4	306 n275	15	33 n48,	44.1	49 n3,		113 n44
59.1-5	1012 n77		40 n155		128 n60	4.33	146 n29
60.7-10	31 n127	18	3 n9,	45.2	128 n60	5.1	121 n57
60.17	9 n22		121 n57	45.2-4	639 n318	5.2	146 n32
61.10	80 n94	18.15	127 n60	49	58 n20	5.28	151 n48
62.16	80 n93	19.1	127 n60	49.11	128 n60	6.1	152 n52
66.6	118 n54	19.4	127 n60	52.4	128 n60	7.12	156 n66
67-69	137 n9	19.5	57 n20	53.1	128 n60,	7.13-39	158 n67
67.2	143 n23	19.6	80 n94		508 n118	7.14-16	113 n42
69.6	95 n131	20.1	127 n60	55.5	128 n60	7.21	140 n17
70.3-4	122 n58	21.1	21 n76,	56	128 n60	8.1	113 n42
71.9	16 n65		128 n60	56.2	127 n60	8.3	116 n53
72.37	26 n100	21.4	95 n131	58	153 n56	8.8	158 n69
73.2	26 n100	22	9 n22	58.5	57 n19	8.10-30	158 n68
75.8	26 n101	22.6	127 n60,	59	232 n242	8.12	10 n39
78.4	26 n100		128 n60	59.3	128 n60	9.14-15	158 n71
80.4-5	140 n19	22.8	80 n93,	61.2	22 n85	10.1	121 n57
81.5	17 n65		92 n113,	64	128 n60	10.21	165 n88
85.8-9	116 n52		127 n60	65.3	128 n60	10.23	166 n91
88	166 n91	22.9	9 n22,	66.2	92 n113	10.26	165 n88,
89.12	284 n162		80 n93,	66.3	8 n19		166 n90
89.39	790 n830		128 n60	66.9	8 n19	10.29-34	189 n62
90.20	10 n39	22.10	80 n93,	67	128 n60	10.114	159 n74
90.21-22	17 n65,		128 n60	67.2	128 n60	11.1-14	168 n5
	166 n91	22.12	127 n60	68	128 n60	11.2-3	161 n76
90.30	649 n350	23.14	57 n19	68.5	89 n109,	11.4	118 n54
93.3	122 n58	24.1	127 n60		128 n60	11.7	168 n3

JUBILEES ( cont. )		29.9	756 n699	16. LETTERS OF HEROD AND PILATE (in Apocrypha Anecdota II, 164)		12C	11.2	604 n212
11.14	169 n6	30.1	307 n279			12C	11.3	602 n201
11.16-21.21	184 n49	31.2	317 n295			12D	11.5	601 n198
12.12	180 n40	31.3-32	317 n299	996 n3,		12D	11.7	608 n219
12.16	188 n54,	31.16	288 n174	998 n15,		13A	11.15	568 n82,
	199 n108	32.3	301 n251	1083 n42				577 n129
12.25-26	166 n91	32.4-29	317 n299			13A	12.1	619 n255,
13.11	191 n78	32.8	262 n60	17. MELCHIZEDEK FRAGMENT				619 n260,
13.17-14.1	202 n115	32.25	619 n256					636 n311
13.25	262 n60	32.33	319 n308	1-2	132 n62	13B	12.5	626 n279
14.1	202 n115	32.33	319 n308	2.35-36	98 n137	14C	12.7	626 n281
15.8	182 n48	33.16	239 n275	3	158 n68	14D	12.10	635 n305
15.14	248 n318	33.22	319 n309	3.35	89 n109	16C	15.1	705 n503
15.27	16 n62,	34.11	355 n111	85-93	197 n102	16C	15.2	709 n515
	50 n6,	34.14-19	343 n65	88	128 n60	16D	15.6	601 n198
	249 n118	35.27	318 n302	91	128 n60	16D	16.1	720 n566
15.31-32	166 n91	36.1-8	322 n315			16D	16.2	108 n21,
16.13	219 n203	36.20	239 n275	18. Ps.-PHILO<sup>1</sup>				726 n581
16.17	220 n214	37.9	322 n317	(beg.) 1.1-4	92 n115	16D	16.3	726 n586
17.4	220 n214	38	322 n317,	1 2.1	871 n87	17A	16.7	733 n601
18.1	232 n247	40.10	415 n422	1-2 2.3	105 n11,	17B	17.3-4	731 n600
18.3-4	236 n260	41.1	351 n100		112 n40	17B	18.2	759 n714
18.4	228 n236	42.23	346 n79	2 2.6	113 n44	17B	18.4 <sup>3</sup>	763 n730
18.6	225 n228	42.25	381 n249	4C 4.7	162 n77	18C	18.5	232 n242,
18.10	232 n242	42.25	381 n252	4D 4.10	161 n76			233 n255
19.4	116 n53	43.15	390 n281	4D 4.11	168 n3	18C <sup>4</sup>	18.6	301 n249
19.8	188 n52	44.2-4	393 n301	4D <sup>2</sup> 4.13	168 n5	18C	18.8	765 n736
19.16-30	256 n34	44.9	394 n310	5A 4-5	161 n76	18C-D	18.10-12
19.24	116 n52	44.12-33	396 n321	5A 4.16	161 n76,			773 n764
19.25	257 n35	44.13	349 n98		180 n40	19A	19.3	835 n955
21.9	328 n3	44.28	435 n6	5A 5.1	162 n81	19B	19.6-7	805 n879
21.15, 20	168 n4	44.33-34	435 n6	6D 6.2	165 n88	19B	19.10-13
22.1-23.7	257 n36	45.9-10	396 n329	6D 6.7-9	161 n76			815 n902
23.9	62 n28	46.9-11	548 n10	6-8 6.16-18	874 n104	20C	19.11	496 n88
24.4-9	315 n292	47	479 n48	8C 6.18	161 n76	20D	19.16	815 n904,
24.28-33	922 n59	47.10	488 n76	8C 7.4	165 n88			833 n952,
25.1-23	263 n72	48.2	538 n216	8D 7.5	150 n47,			834 n953,
25.17	254 n15	48.11	488 n76		161 n76			835 n955
26.13	268 n91	48.14	561 n43,	9 8.5	274 n122	20D	20.2	835 n957,
26.31	271 n105		561 n51	10 9.1	470 n14			842 n9
26.35	273 n109	48.15-17	553 n27	10C 9.2	474 n27	21A	20.5	698 n482
27.1	273 n109	48.18	543 n233,	10C 9.3	511 n126	21A	20.6 <sup>5</sup>	844 n10
27.5	273 n110		553 n27	10D 9.5	477 n44,	21A	20.8	574 n113
27.7	273 n112	49.2	538 n216		480 n56	21B	21.3	847 n27
27.8	273 n113	49.5	540 n225	10-11 9.10	476 n40	22D	22.1	853 n52
27.13-18	274 n123	15. LADDER OF JACOB		11A 9.16	481 n57	24	23.8	890 n13
27.14	878 n111	(in James, Lost Apocrypha)		11B 10.3	553 n23	24D	23.10	601 n198,
28.4	284 n165			11B 10.4	553 n24			604 n210
28.8	284 n166	69 n49,		12C 10.7	568 n82,	26C	25.7	848 n31
28.11-12	434 n4	279 n134			577 n129

1. The figures in the first column refer to the pages in the Latin text, Basel 1527; in the second column to the chapter and verse in the English translation of James, London 1917.

2. In the notes it is misprinted as 4A.

3. In the notes the reference is misprinted as 18.173.

4. In the notes the reference is misprinted as 18A.

5. In the notes the reference is misprinted as 20, 21.

Ps.-PHILO (cont.)			20. REVELATION OF EZRA		(ed. Kohler)
26D	25.10, 26		50 <sup>7</sup>	50.7-8	889 n11
		848 n34	51	51.1-2	890 n17	288
28	26.12	857 n13	51	51.3	891 n20	169 n6
33	30.1-2, 3	869 n70,	51	51.6 <sup>8</sup>	888 n2	290
		870 n80	51	52.1	893 n26	462 n39
33-34	30.4-7	870 n78	51-52	52.2-4	893 n27
34C-D	31.1	870 n81	52	53.1	896 n40
34	31.2-3	870 n80,	53	53.11	890 n17	25. TESTAMENT OF SOLOMON
		871 n84,	53	54.2	893 n31
		871 n85	53	54.3-4	901 n48,
					917 n34
35	31.6-7	871 n85	53	54.3-6	894 n33	26. TESTAMENTS OF THE 12 PATRIARCHS
35A	31.8	112 n40,	53-54	55.1-2	897 n42	Testament of Reuben
		871 n88	53-54	55.2-9	894 n34,	1-6
					894 n35	436 n7
35B	32.7-8	601 n198,			894 n34,	4.6
		604 n210	54D	55.10	894 n35	610 n236
					894 n35	5.6
35-36	32.1-17	871 n90			898 n47	121 n57
37	33.1-6	871 n91	54	56.1-3	898 n47	Testament of Simeon
37	34.1-5	873 n93	54	56.4	901 n51	1-5, 8
38	35.6-7	873 n97	55	56.6	901 n51	437 n8
38	36.1-2	873 n98	55	57.4	898 n47	5.6
38	36.3-4	874 n101	55	57.11	884 n135	825 n923
39	38.1-2	874 n104	55	58.2-3	902 n65
40	39.5	934 n110	55	58.3-4	903 n66	Testament of Levi
40-42	39.6-40.4		55	58.4	898 n47,	1-2
		876 n108			902 n62	439 n9
41A	40.2	231 n240	56	59.2	914 n19	3
42	41.1	877 n110	56	59.4	914 n13,	9 n22
42-43	42.1	879 n111			914 n15	5-8
43	42.8	879 n111	56	59.5	914 n15	311 n290
43	43.4	879 n115	56	60.2-3	903 n67	8.1
43	43.5	880 n121	57	61.1	914 n15	11
44	43.8	880 n124	57	61.2	917 n32	439 n9,
44	44.2	860 n21,	57	61.4-8	918 n43	439 n9,
		883 n131,	57	61.5	917 n38	474 n33
		892 n25	57	61.6	917 n27,	17
					917 n28,	475 n36
44	44.2-9	883 n131,			917 n34	17.7
		884 n136	57	61.8-9	918 n44	18.2
44	45-47	883 n134	57	62.2	937 n113	306 n275
45	44.10	936 n112	58	62.3	919 n50	92 n114
46	45.3	884 n134	58	62.5	912 n7	(in James, Lost Apocrypha , 20)
47A	47.1	860 n21	58	63.1	907 n92,	1117 n18
48	47.11 <sup>6</sup>	884 n135			908 n96	Testament of Judah
48	48.1-2	884 n135,	58	63.3	904 n78	315 n292
		885 n140,	58-59	63.4	908 n106	1-2
		892 n25	59	64.1	903 n73	9
49	49.1	890 n17	59	64.3-8	904 n77	9.8, 11
50	50.2	888 n9,	(end)	65.4	903 n66	10-11
		889 n12,				346 n75,
		892 n25	19. REST OF THE WORDS OF BARUCH			346 n81
50	50.4	888 n9	1-8			210 n155
50	50.5-6	889 n11	3			440 n10
						347 n87
						440 n10
						Testament of Issachar
						1-7
						442 n11
						4.4
						109 n31

6. In the notes the reference is misprinted as 57.11.

7. In the notes the reference is misprinted as 52.

8. In the notes the reference is misprinted as 61.6.

Testament of Zebulun	25.4	81 n96		214 n172		612 n238
1	443 n12	26	97 n133	23	206 n143	12	43 n190,
2	334 n34	30	89 n109,	25	206 n135		610 n236
3	328 n3,		92 n111	27	210 n155,	14 (192 ed. Mangey)	175
	337 n54	31	92 n112		215 n180		n26
4	334 n45,	34	95 n129	28	207 n154	22	608 n226
	337 n51,	40-42	92 n114	32	228 n230,	25	609 n228
	343 n63	44	92 n115		232 n242	29	619 n258
5-8	443 n12	46-47	97 n134	39	197 n93
		48	97 n135	42	202 n119
Testament of Dan		50-51	99 n139,	43	203 n120	2, 7, 10	155 n61
1-6	444 n13		99 n140	44	236 n259	11	585 n156
				46	239 n277	13	156 n66,
Testament of Naphtali		28. ZADOKITE FRAGMENTS					597 n190
1-2	447 n14	2	127 n60,		De Agricultura	21	644 n330
1.9	284 n167		138 n13	1	154 n57	23	701 n490
3.5	121 n57					34	897 n43
		5.18	965 n56
Testament of Gad		8.20	1030 n17		De Caritate
1-2, 5-8	330 n9,	10.8-10	257 n36	1-3	790 n837		De Fortitudine
	448 n15	12	248 n318	3	26 n102,	3	49 n6
		16.5	159 n74		790 n835,	7	779 n785,
Testament of Asher		18	520 n161		831 n947		782 n798,
1-8	449 n16	27	342 n60	4	824 n920		793 n842
6	430 n444
		29. CODEX			Cherubim		De Gigantibus
Testament of Joseph		PSEUDEPIGRAPHICUS		2	203 n122	2	16 n63,
1.7	188 n52	VETERIS TESTAMENTI,					121 n57
2.2	200 n114	(ed. Fabricius,		De Confusione		6-8	82 n98,
3	352 n107	Hamburg 1722)		Lingarum			697 n479
3.5	381 n250	6 and 12	62 n30	2	165 n88	14	203 n122
3-7	355 n110	106-223	122 n58	3	71 n58	15	162 n77,
7	356 n118	120-122	113 n44	15	760 n719		203 n122
9	361 n138	141, 143, 145	116 n52	16	301 n253
10	370 n183	224-227	132 n62	17	396 n327
11-16	351 n99	842	830 n946	20	301 n253	1	329 n6,
18	328 n3	1156-1160	1125 n50	22	105 n14		501 n109
18.3	351 n100			25	105 n12	2	331 n11,
		D. Hellenistic Literature		27	52 n12,		334 n23
					598 n191	3	343 n64
Testament of Benjamin		I. PHILO		35	52 n12,	6	289 n201,
1	319 n308	De Abrahamo			825 n923		405 n367
1-7	450 n18					8	351 n105
2	381 n253	2	118 n54			9	356 n114
3	398 n331	3	122 n58	De Congr. Quaer.		10	399 n340
7.1-5	112 n37	5	135 n5	Erud. Gratia		16	361 n142
10	450 n18	7	145 n28,	10	301 n253	19	364 n155
10.7	100 n142		238 n273	11	580 n137	20	366 n171
11	411 n401	8	145 n25	17	102 n1	21	376 n221
12	328 n3,	8.46	239 n275			27	371 n197
	450 n18	12	301 n253			30	334 n41,
		14	188 n53		De Decalogo		376 n222
27. VITA ADAE		15	199 n108	1	595 n185	32	346 n74,
1-17	87 n106	16 (Mangey, I, 12)	351	5	612 n243		372 n198,
14-16	63 n35		n102	8	54 n15		378 n229
18	102 n4	17 (I., 401)	168 n4	9	604 n213,	38	383 n256
19-21	103 n5	18	203 n122	10	612 n238	39	381 n252
21	103 n6	19	61 n24,	11	50 n8,	40	390 n281
22	103 n7		191 n73		605 n216	41	406 n370
24-39	92 n113	22	206 n135,		599 n192,
					602 n206,

De Josepho ( cont. )		1.11	496 n88,	2.11	142 n142	22	43 n190
42	393 n307,		496 n94,	2.12	145 n24	23	61 n25
	398 n330		501 n109	2.36 (ed.		24	49 n6,
43	430 n442,	1.12	501 n112,	Mangey, 175)	116 n53		52 n12,
	629 n287		502 n115	2.39	832 n951		60 n22,
De Legum Allegoriis		1.14	499 n104,	2.43	255 n25		67 n42,
			514 n140	2 (3).2	511 n122,		79 n87
1.2	8 n21	1.17	525 n170,		635 n309	25	50 n8
1.21	78 n82		528 n176	2 (3).2-14	651 n353	28	49 n4,
1.30	69 n50	1.18	529 n179	2 (3).3	641 n324		92 n113
1.33	78 n72	1.19	529 n183	2 (3).3-10	649 n346	30	683 n430
2.1	14 n54	1.20	534 n194	2 (3).8	644 n333	30-34	8 n21
2.4	60 n22	1.21	534 n198,	2 (3).9	646 n339	40	78 n72,
2.20	748 n657		534 n199	2(3).10	645 n337		79 n87
3.24	135 n5	1.23	534 n188	2 (3).15	655 n364	46	49 n6,
3.31	642 n326	1.25	543 n233	2 (3).17	661 n380		60 n22,
3.56	570 n93	1.26	529 n182	2 (3).19	626 n278		67 n42
3.66 <sup>1</sup>	580 n137	1.27	544 n246,	2 (3).20	627 n281	47	55 n16,
3.72 <sup>2</sup>	232 n243		598 n191	2 (3).21	720 n566		60 n21
3.84	351 n101	1.29	555 n35,	2 (3).23	616 n248	51	54 n15,
3.84	355 n111		588 n164	2 (3).24	528 n176,		60 n21,
De Migratione Abrahami		1.30	561 n51		691 n455		60 n22,
		1.32	557 n36	2 (3).27	612 n243,		608 n224
11	612 n238	1.33	568 n82		654 n360	54	81 n96
13	104 n8,	1.34	568 n87	2 (3).27-28	691 n452	56	102 n3
	105 n16,	1.35	570 n89	2 (3).31	787 n819	60	80 n94
	106 n19	1.36	570 n91,	2 (3).33	85 n102,
18 (end)	301 n253		574 n113		553 n23	De Mutatione Nominum
19	188 n55	1.37	575 n116	2 (3).34	557 n36,	2	319 n304,
24	462 n33	1.39	583 n145,		562 n55,		632 n299
36-39	301 n253		769 n752		565 n70	3	511 n128
De Vita Mosis		1.40-41	705 n503	2 (3).37	627 n281	3.22	838 n965
		1.41-42	709 n518	2 (3).38	720 n566	5	2 n6
1 (beg.)	615 n245,	1.41	705 n503,	2 (3).39	824 n920	8.9	203 n122
	616 n248		709 n518	2 (3).97	612 n238	12	301 n253
1.2	474 n31	1.42	709 n518	2 (3) end	832 n951,	13.14	203 n122
1.3	472 n23,	1.45	746 n646,		835 n954	15	319 n308,
	476 n43,		747 n648,	3.14	49 n4		370 n187
	479 n50,		752 n669			16	434 n4
	481 n62	1.46	750 n664	De Mundi Opificio		17	494 n83
1.4	479 n48,	1.47	753 n681	3-4	25 n98	20	517 n147
	481 n59	1.48	760 n720,	5	2 n6	37	517 n152
1.5	481 n64,		763 n730	7	7 n14, 7 n15	De Nobilitate
	781 n790	1.49	598 n191	8	8 n19,	5	181 n46,
1.5-7	484 n67	1.50	774 n771		85 n104		199 n108
1.6	484 n68	1.51	775 n772	10	14 n44	6	346 n82
1.7	468 n7,	1.52	776 n776	13	21 n74,
	468 n8,	1.54	779 n785		60 n21	De Plantatione Noe
	488 n70	1.55	779 n785,	14-15	25 n99,	2.4	49 n6
1.8	488 n70,		782 n798,		73 n62	3	25 n100,
	488 n71,		784 n804	18	8 n19,		28 n112
	488 n73,	1.56	793 n842,		85 n104	4	16 n63,
	488 n75		795 n848	19	28 n112		612 n241
1.9	488 n75	1.57	798 n859	20	32 n128	6	612 n242,
1.10	494 n84	2.10	215 n180	21	73 n62		642 n326

1. Misprinted as 2.66

2. Misprinted as 3.71.

De Plantatione Noe ( cont. )	1.92	121 n57	2.28	40 n157	20	105 n12
8	69 n50	1.94	78 n82,	2.42	619 n258	32	68 n45
19	49 n4		146 n32	2.48	615 n247	36	301 n253
		2.2	199 n110	2.52	641 n324
De Posteritate Caini	2.9	146 n32	2.54	644 n330		De Sobrietate
11	112 n42	2.13	141 n20	2.51-124	649 n346	4	239 n277
13	132 n62	2.14	149 n42	2.62	644 n333
20	103 n7	2.15-16 <sup>1</sup>	135 n5	2.82-83	641 n324		De Somniis
33	113 n45	2.17	149 n45			1.3	54 n15
43	605 n216	2.28	150 n46	Quis Rerum Divinarum		1.4	25 n100,
44	241 n290	2.35	149 n46	Heres Sit			28 n112
48	632 n299	2.45	149 n45	5	602 n201,	1.10	462 n33
		2.47	149 n45		674 n405,	1.11	228 n236,
De Praemiis		2.49	152 n54		699 n485		1164 n139
2 (end)	118 n54	2.56	60 n22	6	3 n6	1.22	16 n63
3	122 n58	2.63	152 n55	11	106 n19	1.22 (133-136)	82 n98
4, 5	219 n203	2.64	153 n55	15	301 n253	1.24	279 n134
8	301 n253	2.65, 70, 77	155 n61	20	199 n108,	1.27	319 n304
9	484 n68,	2.79	146 n30		199 n110	1.28	188 n55
	514 n140	2.82	162 n77,	26	470 n17	1.36	49 n3,
			164 n88	35	608 n222		462 n33
De Profugis		3.15	200 n114	38	658 n372	2.3	434 n4
	664 n383	3.47-48	249 n318	45	646 n339	2.4, 6	301 n253
14	52 n12	3.53 <sup>2</sup>	203 n122	52	62 n30,	2.16	25 n100
21	78 n72	4.10	206 n140		134 n4	2.26	301 n253
25	301 n253	4.17	207 n151			2.35-36	838 n965
29	632 n299	4.24 <sup>3</sup>	212 n167	Quod Deterius Potiori			De Specialibus Legibus
38	301 n253	4.27	259 n44	Insidiari Soleat			Passim
		4.30	214 n170	1.10-11	105 n16		619 n258
Quaestiones in Genesin		4.33-34	214 n172	7	334 n29
1.12	43 n190	4.56	215 n188	9	242 n300		Book I
1.12-13	70 n51	4.73	236 n259	11	106 n19		De Circumcisione
1.14	70 n54	4.74	236 n260	14	105 n16,	(Beg.)	249 n318
1.16	78 n72	4.80 <sup>4</sup>	236 n263		106 n19
1.19	67 n42	4.85	239 n277	29	49 n6		De Monarchia
1.20	67 n41	4.140	242 n300	41	108 n25	7	781 n790
1.21	62 n31	4.147	243 n309	46	511 n128
1.22	62 n31,	4.170	232 n243	48	113 n44		De Sacerdotibus
	70 n58	4.188	262 n56			1.4 (322-24)	627 n281
1.25	81 n97	4.194	262 n62	Quod Deus Sit
1.32	71 n58	4.196, 198	267 n75	Immutabilis
1.33-34	73 n61	4.200	268 n82	5	141 n20		De Praemiis Sacerdotum
1.45	78 n77	4.233	271 n104			3	784 n801
1.52	68 n48	4.245	274 n121	Quod Omnis Probus
1.53	80 n93			Liber Sit			De Sacrificantibus
1.57	80 n95			7	838 n965		Offerentibus
1.62	105 n12	Quaestiones				5	890 n18
1.63	105 n10	in Exodum		De Sacrificiis Abelis		11	724 n573
1.69	108 n24	1.1	81 n97	et Caini		15-16	651 n353
1.82-86	122 n58	1.6	536 n206	3	50 n8
1.87	134 n4,	1.10	890 n18	12	517 n147		Book II
	135 n5	2.11-12	536 n206	13	105 n12,	2.1(2 ed. Cohn)	259 n49
1.91	140 n19	2.13	845 n20		517 n147	2.3	294 n277
		2.24	756 n701	18	48 n1

1. Misprinted in the notes as 2.245.

2. Quoted in the notes as Gen. 17.5.

3. Misprinted in the notes as 15.24.

4. Misprinted in the notes as 3.80.

De Septenario		I., 15.1	244 n314		479 n46,	IV., 6.5	773 n764,
2.6	654 n360	I., 16.1	241 n288		479 n47		775 n772,
2.19	81 n97	I., 16.2	241 n290	II., 9.5	479 n48,		777 n782
		I., 18	268 n89		479 n50	IV., 6.6-9	779 n785
De Colendis Parentibus		I., 19.1	280 n140	II., 9.6	474 n31,	IV., 6.9	781 n790
1	608 n226	I., 19.4	280 n149		481 n64	IV., 6.10-11	781 n791
7 (241		I., 19.7	284 n166	II., 9.7	479 n48,	IV., 6.12	782 n798
ed. Cohn)	259 n49	I., 19.8	284 n167		481 n64,	IV., 6.13	777 n784
8	691 n452	I., 20.1	298 n236,		484 n65	IV., 7	795 n849
			298 n245	II., 10-11	492 n80	IV., 8	813 n899
Book IV		I., 20.3	307 n275	II., 11.1	494 n81	IV., 8.2	608 n226
De Iudice		I., 20.9-11	294 n224	II., 11.2	494 n82	IV., 8.3	835 n954
2	598 n191	I., 21.1	309 n284,	II., 12.1	494 n83,	IV., 8.5	724 n573
			318 n302		501 n113	IV., 8.44	824 n920
De Concupiscentia		I., 32	140 n19	II., 12.3	511 n129	IV., 8.48	815 n904,
2	609 n235	I., 32.1	231 n240	II., 14.2	529 n179		832 n951,
		II., 2.1	328 n2,	II., 14.3	534 n188		835 n954
De Vita Contemplativa			329 n6	II., 14.5	534 n198	IV., 8.49	835 n954
11	565 n70	II., 2.2	331 n13	II., 14.6	543 n233	V., 1.2	844 n12
		II., 2.3	331 n14,	II., 15.3	548 n8,	V., 1.11	845 n16
2. JOSEPHUS			331 n16,		548 n10,	V., 1.12	847 n23
a. Antiquities			331 n18		561 n43	V., 1.13	847 n27
I., 1	20 n71	II., 2.4	334 n22	II., 15.4	553 n23	V., 1.14	848 n31
I., 1.2	54 n15	II., 3.1-3	334 n36	II., 16.1	553 n25	V., 1.15	847 n22
I., 1.4	70 n58,	II., 3.2	334 n41	II., 16.2	557 n36	V., 1.17	848 n35
	73 n61	II., 4.1	351 n105	II., 16.3	561 n46	V., 1.19	845 n15,
I., 2.1	104 n8	II., 4.2	529 n183	II., 16.6	562 n55		852 n46
I., 2.2	112 n37,	II., 4.4	358 n128	III., 1.2	568 n80	V., 1.21	853 n47
	112 n42,	II., 4.5	358 n132	III., 1.3	568 n85	V., 2.1	861 n22,
	134 n4	II., 5.1	361 n142,	III., 1.3-5	570 n89		997 n4
I., 2.3	92 n115,		364 n155	III., 1.6	571 n99	V., 3.3	856 n1
	116 n52	II., 5.2	361 n150	III., 3.1	585 n157	V., 5.1	870 n80
I., 3.1	121 n57,	II., 5.4	366 n172	III., 4.1-2	588 n164,	V., 5.4	870 n81
	145 n25	II., 5.5	366 n171		590 n167	V., 5.11, 12	880 n121
I., 3.2	142 n21	II., 6.1	370 n187,	III., 4.2	705 n503	V., 6.2	873 n97
I., 3.3	149 n45		372 n197,	III., 5.2-3	601 n198	V., 6.3	873 n98,
I., 3.4	122 n58		375 n205,	III., 5.4	612 n243		874 n100
I., 3.5-6	151 n48		398 n333	III., 5.5	609 n234	V., 7.1	874 n103
I., 4.1	163 n84,	II., 6.2	372 n202	III., 6.4-5	644 n333	V., 7.8	876 n106,
	165 n90	II., 6.3	769 n752	III., 6.7	646 n339		876 n107
I., 4.2	163 n84,	II., 6.5	379 n234	III., 7.5	651 n356	V., 7.10	877 n109
	164 n88	II., 6.6	375 n220,	III., 7.7	651 n353	V., 7.15	877 n110
I., 6.5	178 n38		645 n337	III., 9.1	890 n18	V., 8.2	879 n111,
I., 7.2	181 n46	II., 6.7	381 n252,	III., 12.1	580 n140		884 n136
I., 8.1	191 n66,		383 n256	III., 13.1	694 n470	V., 8.3	879 n111
	191 n70	II., 6.8	387 n268	IV., 2.2	720 n563	V., 8.4	879 n111,
I., 8.2	191 n80	II., 6.10	390 n281	IV., 2.3	721 n570		879 n116
I., 10	206 n137	II., 7.2	393 n300	IV., 3.4	726 n585	V., 8.6	880 n121
I., 10.1	196 n91	II., 7.3	378 n234	IV., 3.32	724 n576	V., 8.9	879 n119
I., 11	214 n177	II., 7.4	396 n321	IV., 4.2	731 n600	V., 9.1	864 n31
I., 11.2	206 n132,	II., 7.7	399 n339	IV., 4.6	738 n625	V., 9.4	866 n62,
	206 n143	II., 9.1	474 n29	IV., 5.2	755 n682		867 n69
I., 11.4	215 n180,	II., 9.2	470 n17,	IV., 5.3	755 n683,	V., 10.2	889 n11
	215 n188		472 n24		756 n704	V., 10.3	903 n69
I., 12.3	220 n211	II., 9.3	474 n28,	IV., 6.2	759 n717,	V., 11.2	893 n32
I., 13	70 n51		476 n39		760 n721,	V., 11.4	890 n13,
I., 13.1	228 n230	II., 9.4	476 n39,		762 n725		894 n33
I., 13.2	233 n253		476 n41,	IV., 6.3	768 n745	V., 11.5	892 n25

Antiquities (cont.)	VIII., 5.2	967 n58	X., 11.4	1096 n76,	1.26	499 n101
V., 11.12	893 n27	VIII., 5.3		1116 n10	2.23	724 n573
V., 16.2	888 n4	VIII., 6.5-6	X., 11.6	1117 n16	1.31	481 n59
V., 16.4	896 n40	VIII., 7.2	X., 11.7	1096 n76,	2.27-28	608 n226
VI., 1.1	894 n34	VIII., 7.3		1117 n18,
VI., 1.2, 4	894 n35,	VIII., 7.5		1117 n19
	894 n37		XI., 1.2	1117 n18	3. ARTAPANUS
VI., 2.2	896 n42	VIII., 8.5	XI., 3.1	1121 n30	344b	499 n101
VI., 3.3	898 n47		XI., 3.3-9	1120 n24	429d (9.23)	398 n339
VI., 4.1	902 n63	VIII., 9	XI., 4.9	1120 n23	431	488 n76
VI., 4.5	901 n51	VIII., 10.3	XI., 5.2	1123 n34	432 (9.27)	481 n62,
VI., 5.1	902 n56	VIII., 12.2	XI., 5.5	1126 n51		484 n67,
VI., 7.2-3	902 n60	VIII., 13.5	XI., 6.1	1131 n4,		492 n80
VI., 7 (end)	902 n65	VIII., 13.6		1134 n23,	433c	481 n61
VI., 8.1	914 n13,	VIII., 13.7		1134 n26,	433c-d	540 n226
	915 n22			1137 n35	434	481 n59
VI., 8.2	915 n24		XI., 6.2	1138 n42,	434b	497 n96
VI., 11.4	941 n133	VIII., 14.15		1141 n65,	434d	520 n155
VI., 11.9	905 n80	VIII., 15.4		1144 n84	435c	528 n176
VI., 12.1	908 n96	IX., 2.2	XI., 6.3	1164 n135	436b	557 n38
VI., 12.3	912 n9	IX., 3.2	XI., 6.4	1146 n88	436c	520 n157
VI., 12.6	908 n104	IX., 4.2	XI., 6.5	1150 n100,
VI., 12.7	902 n63	IX., 4.6		1150 n104	4. DEMETRIUS
VI., 13.5	903 n69	IX., 5.2	XI., 6.6	1158 n115	422d (9.11)	396 n325
VI., 14.2	904 n75,	IX., 6.1	XI., 6.7	1164 n137,	424c (9.12)	366 n169
	904 n77	IX., 7.5		1164 n139	425 (9.12)	381 n249
VI., (end)	905 n80	IX., 8.5-6	XI., 6.8	1150 n100,	438d (10.29)	474 n31
VII., 1.5	947 n9	IX., 9.3		1161 n123	439d	493 n80
VII., 4.2	924 n68	IX., 10.2	XI., 6.10	1171 n166
VII., 4.3	941 n133	IX., 10.4	XI., 6.13	1178 n191	5. EUPOLEMUS
VII., 4.20	942 n135		XII., 4.6	912 n11	418d	161 n76
VII., 5.4	942 n141	IX., 11.2	XII., 14.1	705 n503	419	123 n59
VII., 7.8	946 n1	IX., 11.3	XIV., 2.1	1091 n58	431c	484 n67
VII., 8.5	932 n98		XIV., 2.2	1076 n29	448-449	958 n36
VII., 9.4	931 n96	X., 1.4	XV., 5.3	616 n248	451	958 n36
VII., 11.3	985 n16		XVIII., 15.5	989 n43	452	946 n1
VII., 11.7	947 n9	X., 3.1			454b-d	1071 n15,
VII., 12.3	929 n81,	X., 4.4	b. Bellum Judaicum			1072 n16
	930 n84	X., 5.1	II., 8.9	1120 n26	477b	905 n80
VII., 13.1 <sup>1</sup>	638 n314	X., 6.3	IV., 5.4	1078 n30
VII., 13.1-3	937 n119,		IV., 8.4	215 n180,	6. Ps.-EUPOLEMUS
	937 n121,	X., 7.1		215 n184		165 n88
	937 n122		IV., 9.7	206 n137
VII., 13.4	967 n57	X., 8.2	V., 5.5	1124 n36	7. EZEKIEL
VII., 13.6, 8	942 n137	X., 8.3	V., 11.5	1075 n26	348	493 n80
VII., 15.3	943 n144	X., 8.7	VI., 4.3	1076 n29	349	494 n82
VIII., 1.4	947 n10		VI., 4.5-8	1077 n29	438b	484 n67,
VIII., 2.5	955 n18,	X., 10.1	VI., 5.3	1077 n29		487 n69
	964 n48	X., 10.5	VI., 9.2	1076 n29	440	517 n143
VIII., 2.6-7	958 n36	X., 10.6	VI., 10	197 n102	446	568 n88
VIII., 3.4	967 n61		VII., 5.1	1089 n56	458b	481 n62
VIII., 4.2	946 n2,	X., 11.1	VII., 6.3	289 n189
	984 n9	X., 11.2			8. Ps-PHOCYLIDES
VIII., 5	1053 n90		c. Contra Apionem		5.8	608 n226
VIII., 5.1	948 n11		1.8	1128 n56

1. In the text the reference is misprinted as 181.

E. Tannaitic Literature <sup>1</sup>	F. Talmud and Minor Treatises <sup>1</sup>	Talmud Commentary by Rashi	3. MINOR TREATISES Abot de R. Nathan
I. MEKILTA OF R. ISHMAEL	I. BABLI	Sukkah	1.6 73 n68
Shira	Berakot	52b 263 n69	30.90-91 50 n8
9.43a <sup>2</sup> 737 n622	29b 1012 n78	Megillah	156 832 n948,
10.44a 168 n4		12b 1137 n34	836 n958
	Erubin	15a 1164 n140	157 836 n958
Wa-Yassa	18b 74 n70	Kiddushin	34.10 334 n21
1.44a 467 n72		70a 1000 n35	Gerim
1.46a 568 n83	Pesahim	Bekorot	2 599 n192
1.46b 570 n89	117a 567 n72,	8a 40 n168	2.4 1093 n66
1.47a 570 n90	1058 n103
Amalek	118a, b 1099 n87	YERUSHALMI	Kallah
1.53a 1039 n16	Megillah	Berakot	1.1b 977 n93
2.56a 583 n147	16a 1177 n178	7.11c 1128 n58	1.4b 612 n240
Yitro	Gittin	Kilayim	1.6a 1131 n5,
1.59a 206 n134	68a 976 n86	9.32c 980 n99	1146 n88
2.60a 590 n166	68b 976 n86,	Shabbat	2.4a 635 n309
Bahodesh	1005 n54	1.3b 43 n190	2.6 744 n643
6.68 625 n276	Kiddushin	14.14c 1000 n92	2.8a 121 n57
6.69a 608 n221	6a 31 n127	Erubin	2.9b 862 n30
Not in our texts	Baba Mezia	10.26c 289 n189	3 (end) 1022 n119
552 n15,	107b 1100 n92	Yebamot	3.7a 196 n84,
565 n62	114a-b 1005 n54	4.6a 842 n7	196 n86
2. MEKILTA OF R. SIMON	Baba Batra	Nedarim	3.8a 138 n12
48 328 n3	91a 878 n111	6.39-40a 1121 n32	6.13b 206 n132
76 573 n101	Sanhedrin	Sanhedrin	6.16 923 n62
94 597 n189	92b 1099 n85,	2.20a 538 n213	8b 396 n319
3. MEKILTA TO DEUTERONOMY	1100 n90	10.29b 967 n59	8.15a 619 n257
4 597 n191	93a 1100 n90	Makkot	G. Midrashim<sup>3</sup>
189, 190 844 n15	101b 271 n104	2.31a 800 n869	I. ABBA GORION
4. SIFRE ZUTA	108b 141 n20,	Abodah Zarah	8.12-13 1131 n6
160-162 790 n827	152 n53	1.39b 985 n17	15-16 1137 n36
5. MIDRASH TANNAIM	109a 165 n89	1.39c 88 n107	26-29 1155 n113
14-15 827 n941	Abodah Zarah	Quotations not in our editions	36-37 1169 n158
6. MEGILLAT TA'ANIT	73a 67 n41	583 n147,	41 1177 n176
3 315 n292	Zebahim	871 n89,
7. SEDER OLAM	115a 664 n385	915 n19,
24 1058 n112	Talmud	919 n48,
30 61 n27	Quotations not in our texts	936 n112,
8. TOSEFTA SOTAH	42 n190,	1012 n77
11.11 901 n52	1180 n193

1. Only the passages that are explained are cited here.

2. In the text this reference is misprinted as 11.49a.

3. In this section only the passages explained are cited, unless there is an asterisk.

ABKIR ( cont. )	300 n248,	7. ALPHABETOT	6.172	118 n56,	401	259 n48,
	301 n250,	83 3 n6		137 n10		262 n52
	305 n256,	8. BAMIDBAR RABBAH	6.173	118 n54	407-8	262 n62
	305 n263,	9.48 635 n306	6.175	131 n61	440	274 n118
	306 n275,		6.179-180	3 n8	463	284 n164
	349 n97,	9. BARAITA DI YESHUA	17. KONEN		503	298 n236,
	351 n102,	46 989 n37	24	11 n40		298 n238,
	358 n121,	10. BERESHIT RABBAH	25	11 n40,	594-5	298 n240
	358 n131,	8.1 56 n17		14 n44,	720-1	361 n145
	370 n189,	8.2 67 n43		27 n112,	761	405 n367
	375 n216,	11.1 85 n104	26	27 n112,		414 n414
	390 n278,	11.9 81 n98		29 n113,	Exodus
	393 n307,	12.6 85 n104		29 n114	11	475 n34,
	410 n386,	15.7 73 n70				475 n35
	468 n8,	19.5 74 n70	18. LEKAH TOB, GENESIS
	488 n75,	22.6 105 n13	4.8 108 n20		MIDRASH RABBAH, see
	490 n78,	25.3 191 n64	5.24 122 n58		respective Hebrew names
	494 n84,	35.2 152 n55	27.36 271 n102		of the Pentateuch and the 514 n131,	45.2 202 n119	40.4-6 361 n147		five Scrolls
	514 n138,	45.5-8 203 n122	19. LEKAH TOB, NUMBERS		25. MISHLE
	520 n155,	49.13 212 n165	22.1 760 n719		1.1 955 n18
	520 n157,	64.4 1070 n11			23.94 632 n303
	552 n15,	65.1-3 284 n162	20. LEKET MIDRASHIM		30.107-108 949 n13
	553 n24,	67.11 273 n113	5a 458 n25
	555 n34,	68.2 276 n124			26. NISTAROT R. SIMON
	558 n40,	98.12 289 n191	21. MA'ASEH ABRAHAM		8 32 n139
	558 n42,
	561 n53,	II. DIBRE HA-YAMIM SHEL			27. OSEH FELEH
	565 n69,	MOSHEH			II., 21 1017 n96
	570 n93,	2 475 n36	32.34 175 n26,		II., 22b, 23 1017 n96,
	574 n105,		43 171 n13			1020 n103
	594 n182,	12. EKAH RABBAH	(In Beth Ha-Midrash)		II., 44a 1005 n58
	654 n360,	2. 114-115 1066 n3	II., 118 172 n16		II., 52 1005 n56
	1022 n119
		13. ESFAH	22. MAASIYYOT		28. PANIM AHERIM
3. AGGADAT AGGADOT			(Jellinek's Beth ha-Midrash		63 1141 n65
57-59 970 n72		656 n369,	V., 150-156)		66 1146 n91
77-78 869 n72		677 n417,		14 n50	70 1163 n131
		691 n448,			71 1169 n149,
4. AGGADAT SHIR HA-		696 n476,	23. MIDRASH AGGADA			1169 n151,
SHIRIM		697 n478,	Genesis			1169 n152
6.41 and 88-89 711 n527		701 n490,	9.2 152 n53		72 1169 n157
		701 n491,	30.14 289 n189		76 1177 n180
5. AGUR		733 n605,	49.14 289 n189
684 n437		784 n805
			Numbers		29. PEREK HA-SHALOM
6. 2 ALPHABET OF BEN		14. ESTHER RABBAH	27.38 681 n424			585 n155,
SIRA		1.2 1087 n52				588 n65
23a-b 66 n40		1.7 1134 n21,	24. MIDRASH HA-GADOL		30. PESIKTA DE
24a 42 n182		1134 n23	Genesis		R. KAHANA
25a 42 n184		1.13 1134 n23	11 8 n21		7.65b 191 n80
26a 42 n183		1.9, 9-10 1135 n28	26 14 n53		13.116a 1071 n13
27a-28a 42 n190			12-13 5 n12		71b, 72b 1176 n170
28b 73 n67		15. HALLEL	76 69 n50
29a-b 73 n67		103 1072 n18	127 81 n96		31. PESIKTA RABBATI
33a-b 66 n40			179-80 159 n73		3.12a-b 405 n367
33b 42 n182		16. HEKALOT	182 158 n72		20.97a 17 n70
36a 73 n67		6.170-171 130 n61	400 259 n48

Pesikta Rabbati ( cont. )	38. SHEMUEL	46. YALKUT SHIMEONI,	153	468 n8,
24.124b 609 n228	5.60 1100 n90	PART I (PENTATEUCH)*		1022 n119
26.131a-b 1067 n6,		17 51 n10	157	410 n386
1067 n8		20 22 n90,	167	488 n75,
33.155a 40 n162	39. SHIR HA-SHIRIM	66 n37		490 n78
40.167a 2 n6	RABBAH	34 60 n22,	168	491 n80
47.190b-191a 453 n4	3.4 1053 n83	80 n93,	169	494 n84
	7.9 1100 n87	88 n106	171	514 n131
		38 113 n44	173	514 n138,
32. PETIRAT AHARON	40. TADSHE	41 62 n28,		520 n155
92 738 n626	8 870 n73	912 n12	182	42 n190,
93-94 742 n636		131 n61,		526 n173
94-95 743 n640	41. TANHUMA	132 n64,	184	534 n193
	(Ed. Buber)	134 n5,	213	585 n154
33. PETIRAT MOSHEH	Intro., 154 50 n6	135 n6	219	646 n339
121 10 n30,	I., 103 874 n103	44 137 n10	230	552 n14
807 n894	I., 133 268 n89	47 78 n81,	233	553 n24
125-126 818 n908	II., 33 1106 n107	113 n45,	234	555 n34,
127-128 830 n947		118 n54,		558 n42
128-129 832 n948	Vulgate Text	118 n55	235	561 n53
	Bereshit	57 145 n25,	240	562 n55
34. PIRKE R. ELIEZER	11 113 n44	149 n41	241	520 n157,
3 8 n19	12 118 n56	61 155 n58,		552 n15,
11 162 n82		158 n72		553 n28,
12 68 n48	Noah	77 178 n39		558 n40,
14 78 n79	10 1100 n91	96 225 n228		565 n62,
20 87 n106		98 228 n232,		565 n69
21 105 n11	Lek.	228 n235,	243	558 n40
25 214 n171	12 224 n224	236 n259	256	215 n180
27 217 n197	Not in our texts 632 n298	228 n235	258	570 n93,
29 219 n206		100 233 n253,		574 n103
30 221 n216,	42. TEHILLIM	233 n255	276	594 n182,
222 n218	Quotation not in our texts	101 232 n245		597 n189
32 280 n152	700 n486,	109 241 n292,	301	612 n240
33 1030 n16	947 n8	241 n294,	408	654 n360
35 693 n460	1.14 721 n567	242 n301	426	577 n129
38 336 n51	2.26 70 n55	254 n15,	427	688 n445
45 703 n494	60.305 927 n77	258 n38	429	641 n322
48 638 n315	78.349-350 533 n188	267 n73	513	650 n353
53 1109 n117	90.389 1067 n8	132 300 n248,	540	832 n948
35. RUTH RABBAH	104.442-443 45 n194	301 n250,	673	733 n603
1.4 864 n35,	104.445 43 n190	305 n256,	683	691 n448
864 n40	109.471 8 n22	315 n292,	719	640 n321,
1.7 865 n43	118.484 178 n39	322 n317		678 n419
		133 306 n275	723	639 n316
36. SEDER ELIAHU	43. WAYIKRA RABBAH	142 334 n42	729	26 n102,
RABBAH	18.2 1105 n105	145 358 n121		644 n330,
8.39 1030 n22	19.6 1063 n134	146 349 n97,		831 n947
8.46 1052 n75	Not in our texts 20 n73	358 n129,	732	693 n466,
18.95 1013 n88		358 n131,		696 n472
18.97-98 997 n9	44. WA-YISSA'U	370 n189	736	696 n477
28.154 1087 n53	315 n292,	49 n4,	737	656 n369,
	322 n317	372 n200,		697 n478
37. SEDER RABBA DI		375 n216	738	701 n488,
BERESHIT	45. WEHIZHIR	381 n251,		701 n491
4-5 10 n30	Quotation not in our texts	383 n255,	739	693 n456,
5-6 8 n22	641 n322	384 n265,		701 n490,
7-8 84 n101		390 n278		701 n492

YALKUT SHIMEONI I ( cont. )		793 n844,	296	180 n45		740 n632,
742	703 n498	794 n846,	317	612 n243		1030 n20
743	49 n4,	796 n853	319	595 n184	879	733 n609
	705 n502,	742 n637,	321	248 n318	890	930 n84
	705 n503,	743 n640,	358	1101 n93	897	387 n275
	713 n532,	744 n642,	359	1101 n93	907	738 n623
	715 n540,	753 n678,	367	73 n67,	916	57 n20
	801 n870	756 n694		132 n62	924	728 n590
744	78 n71,	693 n466,	376	728 n590	925	16 n63
	329 n3	805 n877	378	577 n134	932	239 n275
752	721 n568,	612 n241,	382	200 n111	936	861 n23
	724 n574,	805 n877	394	288 n168	940	564 n60,
	726 n582,	1012 n77	404	1042 n29		674 n404
	728 n589	635 n304	418	759 n712	950	259 n45
763	731 n600,		424	1052 n71	956	267 n73
	733 n609,	YALKUT SHIMEONI,	439	737 n622	959	842 n3
	746 n647,	PART II (PROPHETS AND	440	215 n179	960	152 n54,
	750 n663,	HAGIOGRAPHIA)	447	612 n240		596 n187
	750 n665	15	574 n113,	871 n86	961	79 n84,
764	557 n37,		577 n134,	612 n243		691 n451
	577 n128,		844 n14	501 n113	988	538 n216
	735 n614,	24-28		145 n26	1001	1076 n27
	735 n617,	(Joshua 15)	168 n2	565 n63	1054	1152 n110,
	740 n632,	43	626 n281	985 n17		1177 n184
	742 n636,	47	595 n183		1057	1171 n164,
	743 n640,	62	873 n94,	746 n647,		1171 n168,
	743 n641,		873 n97	1035 n37,		1177 n176
	747 n649,	64	874 n101	1035 n37,	1059	1169 n159,
	750 n663,	69	16 n63	1041 n20,		1177 n182,
	752 n672	80	890 n15,	1087 n52,		1178 n184
765	769 n748,		891 n20	1090 n57	1074	1093 n65
	772 n762,	86	806 n891	574 n113	1080	719 n561
	773 n763,	123	915 n19
	773 n764,	124	307 n276,	561-562
	774 n768,		915 n21	(Nahum)
	774 n770,	130	909 n107,	197 n102	YALKUT SHIMEONI,
	777 n778		920 n50	574 n113	SUPPLEMENT
766	453 n3,	131	908 n104	577 n132	16	254 n18
	460 n32,	139	664 n387	674 n409	18	274 n121
	761 n722,	141	903 n70,	224 n224	19	276 n125
	762 n727,		942 n140	543 n235
	769 n751,	151	924 n66	88 n106	47. YALKUT DAVID*
	773 n764,	182	40 n164	605 n214	Genesis
	773 n765,	214	998 n15	214 n170	4.16	108 n26
	777 n779	215	998 n17	915 n21,	12.1	132 n63
768	774 n769	219	988 n35,	917 n35	27.27	233 n255
771	777 n777,		998 n23	758
	777 n780,	223-230		301 n248,
	777 n784,	(2 Kings, 5)	1030 n15	372 n198	Exodus
	779 n787,	241	1047 n54	777 n778	11.7	548 n3
	784 n804	243	1052 n71	1033 n32	32.1	622 n270
773	784 n805,	257	1067 n7	199 n110,
	786 n810	271	730 n593,	548 n10	Numbers
776	789 n823		848 n33	49 n6,	13.32	706 n509
783	793 n840	284	805 n876	367 n182
785	214 n171,	285	370 n196,	605 n214	48. YALKUT HADASH
	779 n785,		907 n85	1012 n77	Keshafim
	793 n841,	292	724 n576	731 n600	55	866 n58
				806 n891,
				830 n946	s.v. Hurban
				238 n272,	7 and 18	1092 n64

49. YALKUT MAKIRI		Numbers	27a	180 n41,	Toledot
Psalms		13.17		186 n51	50a 253 n8
136, 260	755 n685	23.22	27b-28a	180 n45	50b 248 n317,
		26.56	29a	196 n85	253 n8,
50. YALKUT REUBENI*					253 n11,
Genesis		30.14			255 n28,
1.1	608 n219,		Lek		258 n37
	851 n47,	Deuteronomy	29b	193 n81	51a 256 n34
	924 n70	1.1	31a	191 n67,	51b 258 n38
1.26	3 n8,	3.22	31b	193 n81	52a-b 258 n38,
	1000 n39,	12.2	32a	191 n68	262 n55,
	1084 n42			191 n73,	262 n56
2.2	1089 n56	Addenda s.v. Elijah	32b	191 n74,	53a-b 256 n29,
2.3	84 n101	1000 n38		196 n82	259 n50,
3 (end)	112 n37		33a	196 n85	262 n59,
4.1	102 n3,	51. YASHAR BERESHIT*	34a	202 n119,	263 n65,
	109 n31	Bereshit		203 n121	273 n107
4.8	956 n26	9a			54b 248 n317,
4.16	108 n26		Wa-Yera		274 n114
5.22	132 n64		35b	206 n140,	55a-b 274 n114,
5.24	130 n61			209 n155	276 n124
5 (p 25b-c)	118 n56	9b	36a-38a	209 n155
7.7	152 n54		39a-b	210 n157,	Wa-Yeze
7.14	148 n37	10a		215 n180,	57a 284 n164
15.14	398 n335			217 n190	57b-58b 284 n164,
19.1	279 n134	10b, 11a	40a	217 n190	291 n204
22.2	233 n255		40b	219 n207,	58b 291 n218
23.9 (p 44c)	921 n51	11a-13a		221 n217	59a 291 n218,
25.18	244 n309,		41a-b	222 n218	294 n220,
	244 n312		42a	224 n219	295 n229
25.25	254 n24		42b	224 n223,	59b 295 n229
25.32	259 n42			244 n315	(end) 298 n233
26. (p 2, 36c)	244 n309	13b	43a	244 n315,
27.27	233 n255			263 n71	Wa-Yishlah
28.12	279 n134		43b	225 n227,	60b-61b 295 n229,
28.20	282 n156	Noah		225 n228,	298 n243
29.15	282 n157	14a-b		263 n71	62b 305 n263
29.17	291 n205		43b-44a	227 n229,	63a-b 309 n284
32.4	298 n233			228 n232	63b-69a 311 n289
32.25-33	301 n248,	15a-16a	44b	228 n232,	69a-b 318 n300,
	206 n273			228 n234,	318 n302,
32.29	306 n273			248 n317	319 n307
41.46	398 n335	16b	45a-b	228 n234,	70a 324 n320
45.28	393 n307	17a		228 n236	70b-79b 315 n292
47.31	396 n325		46a	231 n242
		17b	46b	228 n235,	Wa-Yesheb
Exodus		18a		232 n245,	80a-90b 349 n98
1.1	263 n69			235 n256	80b 334 n22
1.8	422 n429		47a	235 n256	81a 334 n41,
1.10	470 n12				334 n44
3.5	511 n122	18a-19a	Hayye Sarah		81b-82a 336 n49
16.14	574 n114	20a	24a	236 n266	82b-84a 342 n59
19.2	618 n250	20b-21a	47a-48b	236 n268,	84a-85a 343 n64,
34.35	636 n310			239 n278,	343 n66
				242 n303	85b 342 n59,
Leviticus		23a		253 n4,	343 n66
1.1	511 n122	23b-26b	49a	291 n204	86a 342 n59
1.3	456 n15

Wa-Yesheb ( cont. )		Wa-Yehi		Bo
86b-89a	355 n111, 358 n126, 359 n134	112a-113a	414 n405, 415 n416	114b	534 n198	372 n200, 378 n234,
				142b	529 n185	394 n310,
89a-b	348 n95, 361 n139, 399 n340	113b-114a	415 n422	143b	529 n177	401 n351,
		114b-117b	417 n424, 422 n429	144b-145a	540 n226	401 n358, 405 n366,
91a-b	361 n145, 362 n151	Shemot		Joshua		410 n387,
92a-93a	322 n316	112b	466 n5	157a-b	421 n426	410 n392, 410 n393,
		118a	466 n3	52. YELAMMEDENU*		453 n3,
		118b-119b	417 n424		2 n6,	460 n32,
Mikkez		120a-125b	419 n425		11 n41,	501 n113,
94a-b	364 n163, 364 n166	121a-b	421 n426		15 n61,	526 n170,
95a-b	364 n166, 366 n168, 415 n415	122a-b	466 n3		16 n63,	526 n173,
		124a-b	470 n12		26 n102,	543 n235,
95b-97a	367 n178, 367 n182	125a-b	466 n5		52 n12,	548 n10,
		125b-127a	421 n426, 468 n6		54 n15,	557 n37,
97a-99a	370 n186, 370 n191, 370 n194, 371 n197	127b	470 n16		57 n20,	564 n60,
		128a-130b	421 n426, 471 n21, 472 n25, 475 n36, 476 n42, 479 n48		68 n45,	565 n63,
99a-101a	372 n202, 375 n204, 375 n209	131a-b	421 n426, 479 n48,		78 n81,	574 n105,
			480 n54, 481 n57, 484 n65		79 n84,	574 n113,
101b-102a	375 n218, 375 n221, 376 n226		484 n65,		108 n26,	577 n128,
102b-103a	376 n226, 378 n230, 378 n234	132a-b	487 n69,		109 n28,	577 n132,
103b-104a	378 n234, 381 n241, 381 n249	133a	487 n69, 488 n72		145 n26,	595 n183,
		133b	488 n74, 488 n76, 491 n80, 691 n450		165 n88,	595 n184,
104b	381 n249, 381 n252		421 n426, 491 n80		168 n2,	602 n203,
105a	381 n252, 383 n256, 384 n262	134a-136b	421 n426, 491 n80		180 n40,	605 n214,
(end)	387 n266	135b-136a	850 n44		180 n45,	612 n240,
		137a-b	421 n426, 548 n11		188 n57,	612 n243,
			491 n80		197 n93,	626 n279,
Wa-Yiggash		138a	491 n80		197 n102,	635 n304,
(beg.)	387 n266	138b-140a	497 n96, 499 n104		199 n107,	639 n316,
107a-108a	390 n285		421 n426, 496 n95, 497 n96		199 n110,	644 n330,
108b-109a	390 n285, 390 n291	141a	421 n426, 496 n95, 497 n96		207 n151,	645 n337,
109b-110a	390 n291, 393 n293, 393 n298, 393 n307		497 n97, 517 n146		214 n170,	650 n353,
		141b	497 n97, 517 n146		215 n179,	664 n383,
			497 n97		215 n188,	673 n403,
		142a-143b	497 n97		219 n204,	676 n415,
110b	393 n307, 396 n314, 396 n317	143a	496 n88		224 n224,	678 n419,
		145b-146a	552 n12, 553 n23		238 n272,	691 n451,
111a	396 n317		553 n25		239 n275,	693 n456,
111b	398 n330, 398 n335	146b	580 n140, 583 n144		242 n307,	693 n466,
		147a	580 n140, 583 n144		248 n318,	701 n488,
					254 n18,	703 n498,
					256 n31,	705 n503,
					274 n121,	706 n507,
					276 n125,	709 n518,
					279 n134,	711 n522,
					288 n168,	713 n532,
					289 n201,	715 n540,
					295 n228,	719 n561,
					301 n248,	721 n568,
					305 n266,	724 n574,
					322 n316,	726 n582,
					328 n3,	728 n589,
					329 n7,	730 n593,
					367 n174,	731 n600,
					370 n196,	733 n602,

YELAMMEDENU ( cont. )		908 n104,	58.174	870 n81,	231 n242,
733 n609,		909 n107,		871 n88 <sup>1</sup>	232 n245,
735 n617,		915 n21,	58.175	873 n97,	233 n253,
737 n622,		915 n23,		874 n104,	233 n255,
742 n636,		920 n50,		874 n105 <sup>2</sup>	236 n259,
742 n637,		922 n59,	59.176	876 n108	238 n271,
743 n641,		936 n112,	59.180	885 n140	241 n292,
744 n644,		942 n140,	59.180-181	883 n134	242 n301,
746 n647,		946 n2,	66.205-206	1104 n103	244 n309,
750 n663,		949 n13,	66.206	1108 n113	249 n318,
752 n670,		988 n35,	66.206-207	1108 n116	254 n24,
753 n677,		989 n41,	67.207-212	1112 n2	256 n35,
756 n694,		998 n23,	71-72	175 n26	258 n37,
756 n706,		1005 n58,	72.220-221	1116 n8	259 n45,
761 n722,		1012 n77,	79.236	1146 n88	257 n74,
762 n727,		1030 n20,	81.241-244	1157 n115	274 n118,
769 n748,		1033 n32,	84.251-253	970 n69	280 n144,
769 n751,		1042 n29,	89.237	1161 n124	289 n189,
772 n761,		1052 n71,	91	356 n118	301 n251,
773 n765,		1087 n52,			317 n298,
774 n770,		1099 n84,	54. ZERUBBABEL		324 n322,
777 n778,		1101 n93,		1120 n25	329 n3,
777 n779,		1106 n105			343 n67,
777 n780,			55. MIDRASHIM*		347 n87,
777 n781,	53. YERAHMEEL*		Lost and Unknown		358 n125,
777 n782,	23.1-4	132 n63			361 n136,
777 n783,	23.5-6	118 n54,		2 n3,	367 n176,
777 n784,		132 n64		2 n6,	375 n211,
779 n785,	24.7	117 n53		10 n33,	375 n221,
779 n787,	24.10-12	139 n14		14 n53,	381 n239,
784 n801,	25	137 n10		26 n103,	381 n252,
789 n823,	27.7	169 n6		27 n112,	382 n254,
793 n840,	28-29	161 n76		30 n119,	384 n265,
793 n841,	29.2	165 n88		39 n142,	390 n281,
793 n842,	32	163 n87		50 n7,	409 n382,
793 n844,	35.1	180 n40		54 n15,	409 n383,
794 n845,	35.5	206 n137		60 n21,	410 n388,
794 n846,	36	315 n292		61 n25,	410 n396,
794 n847,	37	322 n317		63 n34,	414 n413,
801 n870,	42.8	476 n40		73 n64,	422 n429,
805 n881,	45	491 n80		152 n53,	435 n6,
806 n891,	45.2	490 n77		158 n72,	455 n9,
830 n946,	46.6-9	491 n80		180 n42,	456 n14,
838 n962,	48.128	562 n54		188 n57,	458 n21,
842 n3,	50.4	417 n424		196 n86,	458 n25,
844 n11,	53.149	687 n443		199 n110,	458 n27,
844 n14,	53.152-153	689 n447		203 n126,	459 n28,
848 n33,	53.155-156	688 n445		206 n134,	470 n12,
861 n23,	54.159	561 n53		206 n138,	499 n107,
873 n94,	57.165-173	856 n1,		210 n157,	505 n117,
873 n97,		857 n6,		211 n132,	511 n126,
874 n103,		859 n17,		215 n188,	534 n194,
891 n20,		860 n19		222 n218,	536 n206,
897 n43,	58.2	869 n70		225 n228,	538 n215,
908 n100,	58.172	871 n86		228 n235,	548 n2,

1. In the notes the reference is misprinted as 58.184.

2. In this note the reference is misprinted as 68, 175, and 48, 175.

MIDRASHIM ( cont. )			Genesis	Deuteronomy
553 n23,	901 n51,		10 n30,	25.19
558 n40,	902 n64,	1.1	16 n64	(Ki Teze, end) 902 n61
564 n58,	903 n73,		3 n6
564 n60,	909 n107,	1.31	511 n128	4. BA'AL HA-TURIM
574 n109,	912 n11,	2.4	69 n50	Genesis
580 n138,	914 n15,	2.9	63 n34	23.2 236 n259
582 n144,	918 n42,	2.19	162 n79	32.16 305 n270
592 n175,	918 n44,	3.21	200 n114	42.6 375 n206
599 n196,	921 n51,	11.32	196 n86
602 n203,	924 n66,	14.5	210 n157	Numbers
608 n221,	926 n77,	18.21	328 n1	1.46 681 n426
612 n243,	929 n81,	26.15	262 n62	22.1 760 n719
615 n247,	930 n84,	26.18	319 n310
619 n257,	930 n91,	35.19	315 n292	5. BEKOR SHOR
625 n275,	931 n93,	36.6	331 n11,	Genesis
625 n276,	941 n131,	37.3	334 n33	45.16 390 n285
635 n304,	947 n10,		15 n61
637 n313,	949 n16,	38.12	361 n143	6. DA'AT ZEKENIM
639 n317,	977 n93,	40.1, 21	349 n97,	Tosafot on the Pentateuch
648 n344,	984 n9,	41.45	351 n101	Genesis
661 n381,	997 n13,		390 n288	1.1 5 n10
677 n415,	1022 n114,	45.22	409 n383	3.21 30 n123,
678 n420,	1027 n4,	47.28		80 n93,
680 n422,	1032 n27,		Exodus	162 n79
687 n440,	1043 n36,		592 n175	5.29 134 n5,
691 n452,	1052 n70,	3.12	393 n305	135 n6
693 n461,	1062 n118,	12.37	414 n413	7.7 152 n54
696 n472,	1066 n5,	15.12	582 n144	18.1 203 n124
707 n509,	1071 n13,	16.9	1152 n108	18.8 206 n140,
709 n513,	1072 n17,	17.9	232 n246,	207 n144
709 n515,	1077 n29,	19.13	929 n82	22.23 761 n722
728 n589,	1078 n30,		23 n97,	23.1 236 n258
731 n600,	1081 n39,	20.8	85 n103	24.5 242 n301
747 n647,	1120 n25,		904 n77	25.25 254 n25
752 n667,	1137 n35,	22.7	628 n284	25.27 259 n48
767 n738,	1144 n76,	22.23	845 n21	25.29-32 162 n79,
777 n783,	1146 n89,	23.20	652 n357	259 n38
781 n791,	1169 n159,	28.17	1045 n46	25.33 259 n51
781 n795,	1177 n181	32.8	661 n381	26.8 262 n56
798 n858,		40.17		27.1 270 n101
810 n895,	H. Medieval Bible		Leviticus	27.15 162 n79
824 n921,	Commentators<sup>1</sup>		693 n461	27.30 270 n99
830 n947,	I. ABRAVANEL	9.24	284 n167	28.22 280 n144,
832 n948,	Isaiah	20.21		301 n251
842 n2,	45 1120-1121 n29		Numbers	30.29-30 406 n379
846 n22,			10 n33	31.52 295 n229
847 n28,	2. ALSHEKH	10.35	693 n460	31.52 (Wa-Yeze end) 767 n744
853 n56,	2 Samuel	11.1	709 n515	32.33 305 n259
857 n5,	12 931 n93	13.7	711 n524	34.1 349 n97
861 n27,	13 918 n44	13.22	709 n518	35.8 318 n301
883 n126,		13.23		37.2 337 n51
884 n134,	3. BAHYA	21.34		37.31 343 n64
894 n34,	Introduction	(Hukat end)	152 n54	38.22-23 337 n52
896 n40,	970 n69	32.38	799 n866

1. In this section all passages are cited.

DA'AT ZEKENIM	(cont.)	3.21	30 n123,	37.31	343 n64	24.6	599 n195
40.1	361 n143		80 n93,	38.15	346 n86	24.10	558 n40
40.21	361 n143		162 n79	38.22-23	337 n52	27.20	628 n284
41.45	349 n97,	3.22	69 n50	40.1, 21	361 n143	30.21	638 n315
	370 n187	4.3, 4	105 n12	41.45	349 n97,	32.1 (42d, 43a)	622 n264
45.4	390 n281	4.5	106 n19		370 n187	32.4	882-883
45.22	390 n288	4.26	118 n54	42.27 (20b			n126
45.27	393 n296	5.29	134 n4,	Mikkez)	376 n221	33.7	602 n204
46.5	393 n309		135 n6	44.18	387 n276	34b (Yitro)	601 n197
47.8-9	396 n328	6.2	137 n10,	44.20	390 n280	35.22	655 n366
47.22	399 n340		139 n14	45.4	390 n281
47.30	401 n353	7.5	14 n53	45.22	390 n288		Leviticus
48.1	401 n344,	8.19	152 n53	45.26	393 n293	9.2	661 n381
	405 n360,	9.21	155 n58	45.27	393 n296	24.11	691 n451
	409 n383	15.10 (6b)	200 n114	46.5	393 n309
48.2	405 n362	18.1	203 n124	47.8-9	396 n328		Numbers
49.2	410 n395	19.8 (7b)	215 n188	47.22	399 n340	7.28	681 n424
50.12	415 n417	19.3 (7c)	219 n203	47.30	401 n353	11.26	698 n484
		23.1 (8a)	232 n248,	48.1	405 n360,	12.3	701 n490
			236 n258		409 n383	13.2, 28	709 n513
1.10	Exodus 295 n229	23.2	236 n259	48.2	405 n362	14.7	618 n249
1.13	468 n6,	24.33 (9a Hayye		48.22	316 n292	17.23	731 n600
	474 n32	Sarah)	238 n272,	49.2	410 n395	21.8	748 n656
3.2	650 n351		242 n301	49.33	415 n422	21.17-20	750 n664
4.13	514 n134	24.1 (9a)	238 n272	50.12	415 n417	21.34 (Hukkat,
8.12	529 n185	24.10 (9c)	241 n285			end)	752 n668
14.16	262 n53	25.25	254 n25,	Exodus		22.5	761 n722
14.21	555 n34		255 n28	1.10	295 n229,	23.28	1027 n4
17.18	580 n138	25.27	253 n7		761 n722	26.59	474 n33
19.17	602 n202	25.29-32	162 n79,	1.13	468 n6,	32.38	799 n864
22.23	628 n284		259 n41		474 n32
30.21	638 n315	25.33	259 n51	3.2	650 n351		Deuteronomy
		26.8	262 n56	4.4	543 n234	1.44	718 n556
		26.25	259 n46	4.13	514 n134	2.20	138 n13
24.11	Leviticus 691 n451	27.1 (10b		6.1	263 n69	3.25	810 n897
		Toledot)	233 n255	7.14	42 n190	22.5	871 n86
		27.15	162 n79	8.12	529 n185	25.18	552 n15
11.26	Numbers 698 n484	27.30	270 n99	12.3	536 n206	31.26 (Wa-Yelek,
21.34		27.42	274 n118	13.17	548 n9,	end), 75a	861 n25
(Hukkat, end)	752 n668	28.13	137 n10		687 n439	32.1	26 n102,
26.59	474 n33	28.22	280 n144,	13.19	430 n442		615 n245,
			301 n251	14.10	553 n21,		831 n947
	Deuteronomy	30.29-30	406 n379		553 n28,	32.5	159 n73
1.44	718 n556	31.4	317 n298		558 n41	33.24	393 n293
32.12	399 n340	31.52 (Wa-Yeze,		14.16	262 n53,	34.5	832 n948
34.5	832 n948	end)	767 n744		555 n32,	(end)	838 n962
		31.52	295 n229		558 n42
7. HADAR ZEKENIM		31.53	294 n227	14.21	555 n34
Tosafot on the Pentateuch		32.14	305 n269	14.28	562 n54	8. HIZKUNI
Genesis		32.19	306 n273	15.8	14 n53	Genesis
1.1	5 n10	32.33	305 n259	15.10	562 n53	3.16	78 n81
1.4	14 n52	34.1	349 n97	17.16 <sup>1</sup>	580 n138	3.21	80 n93
1.9	14 n50	35.8	318 n301	19.17	602 n202
1.16	27 n112	35.22	319 n312	19.19	11 n39	9. IBN EZRA
1.27	52 n12	37.2	336 n51	21.11 (37a		Genesis
3.20	70 n57	37.15	334 n29	Mishpatim)	196 n82	35.31	590 n170

1. In the notes the reference is misprinted as 17, 18.

22.28	Numbers	22.23	767 n743	3.3	949 n16	MINHAT YEHUDAH, see DA'AT ZEKENIM
	768 n745	22.24	767 n744	6.19	1062 n118
1.2	Micah	24.3 (Balak, end)	422 n429	14.25	977 n91	15. NAHMANIDES Genesis
		25.6	781 n791	15.2	986 n18
		25.13	784 n804	17.4	997 n6
		32.14 (Mattot, end)	806 n889	18.30	902 n64
4.8		34.21 (Mass'e)	698 n484	18.37	998 n18	34.13 315 n292
1.1	Zephaniah			2 Kings		36.6 316 n292
10. IMRE NO'AM	Genesis	Deuteronomy		2.1	131 n61	Numbers
		25.18	552 n15	2.24	1027 n4
3.20		II. KARA, JOSEPH Joshua		4.1	1027 n8	16. PA'ANEAH RAZA Genesis
3.22				22.8, 11	1061 n115,
4.3-4					1061 n116	1.1 5 n10
25.3				25.4	1066 n5	3.24 80 n94
25.26		22.57	1032 n27	25.27	1108 n116	5.29 135 n6
29.15		1 Kings				8.19 152 n53
32.25		10.1	244 n311	Isaiah		24.64 233 n255
38.22-23				6.6	1052 n70	25.22 254 n17
41.16		12. KIMHI, DAVID Genesis		27.1	31 n127	25.25 254 n24
46.34				Jeremiah		27.2 284 n167
47.8		9.12	153 n55	1.1	1070 n10	31.52 (Wa-Yeze, end) 767 n744
47.22		49.23	411 n400	20.14-15	1070 n11	32.33 305 n259
		Joshua		39.4	1066 n5	34.65 242 n301
				Ezekiel		35.8 318 n301
		8.3	847 n28	1.3	1101 n93	41.10
		24.26	857 n5	12.13	1066 n5	41.45 370 n187
		24.30	853 n56			45.27 393 n296
1.13	Exodus	Judges		Micah		47.22 399 n340
1.15						48.1 409 n383
6.1		5.23	870 n73	4.8	319 n311	49.2 681 n426
7.14		11.1	876 n106	5.4	100 n142
11.6 (Bo, end)		11.39	877 n109	Zephaniah		Exodus
14.16		17.2	882 n125
15.10		20.5	884 n135	1.1	1071 n13	6.1 263 n69
21.1 (Mishpatim, end)		21.19	884 n135	Malachi		13.18 538 n213
28.12		1 Samuel				13.21 618 n254
38.32				3.23	999 n32	14.7 561 n43
		3.20	896 n40	1 Chronicles		18.13 588 n160
		4.21	894 n33			32.4 622 n271
		6.12	894 n36	20.5	943 n146	(end) 628 n284
		15.12	997 n13	2 Chronicles		Leviticus
		17.40	917 n38
		17.44	918 n41	20.11	747 n647	11 (end) 43 n190
		17.49	918 n42	35.3	1062 n118	12.2 41 n177
		18.25	904 n77			24.11 691 n451
		22.18	904 n78	13. KIMHI, JOSEPH 1 Kings		Numbers
		2 Samuel		10.1	1073 n21	1.4-14 681 n424
						1.7 70 n51
		5.6	921 n51	14. MASNUT Job		11.26 698 n484
		8.13	927 n77			11.33 700 n486
		12.24	946 n3			13.17 706 n507
		21.10	941 n131	1.3	453 n5	13.2 709 n513
		1 Kings		2.10	459 n28	13.28 709 n513
				3.1	463 n39	16.1 720 n563
		2.8	948 n11	29.13	455 n11	32.14 (Mattot, end) 806 n889

Deuteronomy		Jeremiah		3.6	73 n64	56c	435 n6
3.24	805 n883	39.4	1066 n5	5a	936 n112	(Gen. 45.16)	390 n285
32.44 (Haazinu, end)	845 n19	44.14	1083 n42	7a	78 n81	(Gen. 45.19)	390 n290
				8d	861 n27	(Gen. 49.21)	411 n398
		Ezekiel		9a	132 n64
17. RASHI		12.13	1066 n5	9b	134 n4	Wa-Yehi
Genesis						59a-d	846 n22
1.27	49 n3	Micah		Noah	151 n49	59c	406 n378
4.4	104 n10	1.15	1134 n14	10d		60a	410 n385
11.6	189 n62	4.8	319 n311			62a (top)	410 n388
19.11	276 n124			Wa-Yera		63a, 63c	410 n396,
28.18	280 n141	Job		18b	206 n137		410 n397,
29.34	288 n174	1.1	456 n14	22a <sup>1</sup>	188 n57		411 n399
30.11	288 n183	1.3	453 n5	22b	767 n738	104a	414 n413
31.42	294 n227	39.26	32 n134			(end)	430 n438
35.8	318 n300			Hayye Sarah
36.43	324 n322	Daniel		24a	236 n266	Shemot
37.35	343 n71	6.29	1121 n30			66d, 67a	502 n115
40.4	361 n145	Ps.-RASHI		Toledot
		1 Chronicles		27c	224 n223	Bo
Numbers		20.5	943 n146	28a	162 n79	71b	536 n203
1.1	680 n422	2 Chronicles				Wa-Era
1.49	682 n427	20.11	747 n647	Wa-Yeze		69d	529 n185,
11.1	693 n459			27d	871 n88		533 n187
16.11	730 n596	18. RECANATI		31a	279 n134	(end)	526 n170,
21.4	748 n651	Genesis		33b	958 n34		526 n173,
22.23	767 n743	2	61 n27	34a	288 n177,		534 n194
		3.6	102 n3		289 n189	Beshallah
Joshua		3.13	102 n3	35d	288 n173	74b	548 n2
24.26	857 n5	3.24	23 n97,	36b	824 n921	77a (Exodus
24.30	853 n56		69 n50,	42c	294 n223	17.16) <sup>2</sup>	580 n138
			85 n103,	Wa-Yishlah
Judges			159 n75	45a	322 n317	Tezawweh
3.10	862 n29	6.9	145 n28	46b	280 n144,	84	958 n36
17.2	882 n125	25.6 (Hayye, end)	244 n313		316 n292
1 Samuel				Wa-Yesheb		Zaw
3.20	896 n40	Exodus		48a	334 n37	95c	602 n203
20.30	902 n55	3.1	502 n114	Mikkez		Emor
		3.2	505 n117	51b-c	367 n176	104c	592 n175
2 Samuel		20.17	635 n308	53a	375 n211	(end)	691 n451
5.6	921 n51	33.6 (Ki-Tissa)	602 n203	53b (Gen. 43.16)	95 n129	Bamidbar
5.24	922 n54			53c	381 n239,	110a-b	687 n443
8.13	927 n77	Leviticus			381 n240
		18.6	284 n167	53b	381 n252	Beha'aloteka
1 Kings		23.24	54 n15	53d	383 n256	116b	694 n468
18.30	902 n64	Deuteronomy		54a	384 n265
		31.17 (Wa-Yelek)		Wa-Yiggash		Hukkat
2 Kings			508 n118	54d	381 n253,	(end)	750 n664
25.4	1066 n5	19. SABBA			390 n281	Balak
Isaiah		Bereshit		55c	396 n325
30.6	39 n144	2.19	62 n30	56b	393 n305	127c	784 n800

1. In the notes it is misprinted as 32a.

2. In the notes it is misprinted as 17.18.

Pinhas		Wa-Yesheb		Terumah		Mattot
128 (end)	781 n795	18d	347 n87	36b	640 n321, 649 n346	91d	1071 n13
Wa-Ethanan		21	200 n110	36c	640 n321	Debarim
134a	958 n36	22a	361 n136	37b	648 n344	(beg.), 98c	630 n290
Ki Tabo		Wa-Yishlah		(end)	81 n96	100b	453 n3
152a	824 n921	16a	305 n262, 349 n96	Zakor		Ekeb
152c	294 n223	16c	298 n240	37c	580 n138	104b	903 n72
Haazinu		Mikkez		Ki Tissa		Reeh
162b	1178 n188	Genesis 41.10	422 n429	Exodus 32.4	882-883 n126	107c	159 n75
Berakah		Wa-Yiggash		39c	60 n21	Nizzabim
165b	824 n912	21a	263 n69, 599 n196	40b	628 n282, 628 n285	114a	984 n9
20. SHU'AIB		Genesis 45.19		Pekude		Haazinu
Bereshit		45.27	390 n290	41c	640 n321	119a	159 n75
3a	159 n75	47.8-9	393 n296	(end)	661 n381	Kippurim
5d	109 n30	47.22	396 n328	Wa-Yikra		121a	930 n91, 931 n92
(end)	850 n40	47.28	399 n340	44b	612 n241	Jonah
Noah		48.1	396 n329 409 n383	Zaw		122a	1033 n32, 1035 n35
4b	145 n29	Wa-Yehi		47c	536 n206	Shemini Azeret
4d	134 n1	22d	236 n258, 409 n382	1 Pesah		126b	256 n35
5a	140 n17, 146 n33, 146 n34	24a	349 n96	51c	592 n175	21. SIFTE KOHEN
5b	145 n25, 146 n33, 155 n60	Shemot		Tazri'a		Bereshit
5d	155 n58	25b	502 n114	61a	61 n26	(end)	132 n63
(end)	166 n91	Bo		Ahare Mot		Noah
Lek		28c	929 n83	62d	608 n221	4d	132 n63
6b	188 n57	29c	538 n215	Bamidbar		Hayye Sarah
7a	196 n82, 508 n118	Wa-Era		74a	387 n439 689 n447	Genesis 23.2	236 n259
Wa-Yera		Exodus 8.12	529 n185	Beha'aloteka		Shemot
8c	211 n159	26d	585 n156	Numbers 11.26	698 n484	Exodus 2.25	499 n107
9a	224 n220	27a	523 n166	Numbers 11.28	698 n483	Beshallah
9b	219 n203	Beshallah		Shelah		Exodus 14.2	552 n14
Hayye Sarah		Exodus 14.16	262 n53	(beg.)	930 n84	22. SFORNO
10d	180 n44, 1061 n116	30a	557 n39, 564 n58	83d-84a	980 n97	Genesis
11a	236 n258	30b	555 n34, 564 n58	Korah		9.25	155 n61
11b	233 n255	Exodus 17.11	583 n145	Numbers 16.2	720 n563	23. SAMUEL LANIADO
11c	242 n301, 242 n304	Yitro		Numbers 17.23	731 n600	1 Samuel
Toledot		32b	256 n35	Hukkat		17.50	918 n44
Genesis 25.25	254 n25	33b	604 n210, 1008 n63	88c	677 n417	24. TOLDOT YIZHAK
12c	268 n93	Shekalim		Balak		Genesis
12d	256 n31	34c	956 n26	90d	1027 n4	1.1	5 n10
13a	253 n5					1.16	27 n112
13b	258 n37

Genesis (cont.)	6b	735 n611,	55a	62 n28,	82b	46 n194,
2.19 63 n34		1052 n81		113 n45,		191 n68,
21.23, Wa-Yera,	7b	1028 n10		912 n12		939 n128
25c 224 n220	8a	248 n317	55b	87 n106,	84a	214 n171
22.13 232 n246	8b	931 n93		90 n110,	85a	329 n3,
30.14 289 n189	9b	110 n34,		912 n12		1032 n27
41.45 370 n187		110 n36	56a	119 n56	85b	8 n22
	10a-11b	225 n226	56b	98 n137	86a	196 n84,
Exodus	10b	46 n194	57b	565 n60,		197 n98
28.17 652 n357	13a	1004 n46,		912 n12,	86b	196 n88,
38.21 656 n368		1052 n75	58a	138 n12,		256 n35
	13b	1104 n104		135 n6	88a	1027 n8
Leviticus	15b	8 n21	58b	135 n6,	90b	61 n27
9.24 693 n461	16	999 n30		143 n23	92a-b	46 n194
	17b	305 n264	59b	329 n3	93b	517 n146
25. ZIYYONI	17	720 n566	60a	295 n227	94a	931 n93
Genesis	18b	39 n142	60b-61a	103 n4	95b	771 n758
4.26 118 n56	19b	67 n40,	61b	565 n60	96	137 n10
11.4 (Noah, end)		370 n183	62a	145 n26	96b	769 n749
12.7 188 n59	23a	138 n10	62	140 n19	97a	431 n444
18.8 207 n144	24b	703 n497	63	151 n48	98a	58 n20
25.22 254 n14	25a	138 n10,	63b	628 n285,	98b	203 n124,
25.5 (Hayye,		625 n276		908 n104		977 n93
end) 244 n313	26a	625 n276	64b	1029 n12	99a	42 n187,
25.25 255 n27	28b	625 n276	65b	100 n142		830 n946
32.27 301 n249	31a	102 n3	66a	145 n26,	99b	978 n93
38.8 767 n744	31b	8 n19		505 n117,	100a	200 n111
	33b	242 n304		1052 n75	100b	244 n313
Exodus	34a	8 n19	67b	628 n284	101b	207 n150
3.2 505 n117	34b	67 n40	68a	148 n38,	102a	207 n143
3.14 511 n128	36a	70 n55		151 n49	102b	206 n137
13.19 (Beshallah,	36b	73 n69,	68b	148 n38	103	242 n295
beg.) 401 n345		80 n93,	69a	148 n38,	104a	207 n143
24.21 206 n140		109 n27,		149 n44	104b-105a	211 n159
23.20 (Mishpatim,		752 n673	71b	329 n3	105-106b	980 n94
end) 301 n248	37a	138 n10,	72a	46 n194	105b	210 n155
32.1 622 n271		140 n14	72b	127 n60,	108a	196 n83
32.4 883 n126	37b	90 n110,		143 n23,	112b	196 n91
		127 n60,		1013 n92	113b	86 n105
Leviticus		143 n23	73b	162 n79,	113b-114a	401 n345
18.21 159 n75	38a	8 n21,		162 n80	114b	842 n6
20.6 (Kedoshim,		70 n56,	74a	162 n80,	117a	191 n68,
end) 904 n77		135 n6		967 n60		538 n213
	39b-40a	110 n36	75b	166 n91	118a	90 n110
Numbers	40b	46 n194	76a	165 n88	120b	231 n242,
1.1 689 n447	41a	23 n97	77a-b	46 n194,		232 n245
1.52 (Bamidbar)	45b	8 n19		175 n26,	121a	57 n18,
21.29 759 n715	46a	15 n61		180 n40,		1032 n29,
	48b	608 n221		200 n114		1033 n32
Deuteronomy	49a	874 n105	78b	200 n114	122a	57 n18
5.6 626 n279,	52b	628 n285	79a	58 n20,	123b	60 n23,
635 n308	53a	853 n56		72 n60,		431 n444
31.27 (Wa-Yelek)	53b	57 n18		180 n45,	125a	22 n84,
805 n886	54b	100 n142,		214 n171		61 n25,
		102 n3,	81a	100 n142		62 n30,
26. ZOHAR I		106 n17,	81b	191 n66		237 n270,
2b-3a 5 n12		108 n20,	82a	191 n75,		779 n787
5a 615 n247,		110 n36,		931 n94	125b	431 n444
636 n312		115 n47

ZOHAR I

ZOHAR II

126a	137 n10	168a-b	912 n12	217b	401 n345	43a	16 n64
127a	100 n142,	169b	57 n18,	218b	46 n194	44a	1028 n12
	236 n265		292 n218	222a	328 n3	45a	543 n240
128a	236 n265,	171b	305 n263	223a	39 n142,	45a-b	542 n230,
	237 n269	172a	305 n263		244 n313,		548 n7
128b-129a	237 n269,	173a	317 n295		284 n163	46a	46 n194,
	401 n345	175b	319 n312	223b	244 n313		430 n438
131b	619 n258	176a	319 n312,	225b	978 n93	46b	552 n15
132a	241 n288		893 n26	227a	401 n345	49a	328 n3
133a	242 n304	177a	322 n316	231	280 n141	51a-b	552 n16
133b	244 n313,	178b	46 n194	246b	329 n3	52b	558 n41
	242 n302	180a	328 n3,	248b	62 n28,	53a	557 n39
135a	219 n204,		401 n344		912 n12	54b	558 n41
	977 n93	180b	393 n294	250b	415 n423	55a	67 n42,
136b-137a	401 n345	182b	328 n3	294	414 n411		60 n24,
137b	253 n8,	183a	57 n18				127 n60
	253 n9,	184a	334 n29			57a	46 n194
	253 n13,	185a	334 n37	3	616 n248	58a	615 n247,
	254 n18	185b	334 n37,	4a	691 n449		619 n260,
138a	307 n282		343 n62	4b	301 n253		1000 n41
138b	253 n13	186a	346 n74	5a	585 n156	60a	565 n64
139a-b	259 n41	188a-b	324 n321,	8a	23 n97	61a	958 n36
140a	22 n81,		324 n322,	11a	57 n20	63a	574 n107
	22 n90,		346 n82	11b	57 n20,	65b	8 n17
	62 n28,	189	351 n104		476 n42,	66a	842 n5
	912 n12	189b	329 n3		610 n237	69b	585 n154
140b	262 n56	191	72 n60	12a	610 n237	70a	977 n93
142a	268 n79	191a	57 n20	12b	494 n86	78a	956 n25
142b	60 n24,	194a	364 n160	13b	494 n84	78b	592 n177
	162 n79	194b	329 n3,	16	393 n305	80a	110 n34,
143a	270 n101		366 n169	16b	466 n3		110 n36
144a	207 n143,	195b	534 n200	18b	8 n17	80b	127 n60
	270 n101	196	398 n335	19	474 n30	82a	612 n238
144b	57 n20,	196a	367 n174	19a	476 n40	82b <sup>1</sup>	676 n412
	271 n101	198b	375 n220	19b	422 n429,	84a	619 n258
146a	306 n273	200a	57 n18,		553 n21	84b	604 n210,
146b	242 n295		930 n89	21a	502 n114		619 n258
151b	932-933 n100	200b	375 n220,	22a	762 n727	90a	610 n236
153b	329 n3,		375 n221	23a	256 n35,	91b	594 n181,
	381 n251	202b	381 n244	26a	329 n3		608 n219
154a	381 n251	204a	329 n3	28	534 n200	92a	608 n221
155a	138 n11	205b	5 n12	28b	529 n178	94a	612 n238
157a	110 n36	206a	387 n273	29b	401 n345	96b	57 n19
158a	329 n3	206b	329 n3	30a	284 n163	101a	930 n84
160b	282 n157,	206b-207b	929 n80	32b	411 n400	107a	931 n93,
	1029 n12	207a	329 n3	33a	456 n18		922 n59
161a	291 n207	207b	405 n366		471 n21,	107b	933 n101
165b	57 n20	208a	329 n3	33b	553 n27	108a	922 n59,
166a	294 n223,	209a	915 n19,		453 n4,		948 n11
	298 n240		999 n25	34a	553 n27	108b	30 n118
166b	295 n229	209b	390 n284,	38a-b	534 n194	113b	626 n280
167a	294 n223		999 n25	39b	543 n237	125b	1096 n77
167b	294 n223,	216b	331 n10,	41b-42a	242 n300	127a	978 n93
	298 n239		393 n294,	41b	57 n20	146a	612 n238
168a	62 n28		401 n344		110 n36,	147b	189 n61
					306 n273

1. In the notes it is misprinted as 51b.

148a	641 n322	9a-9b	8 n22,	124b	568 n82	212a	585 n156,
150a	80 n93		110 n36	147b	764 n730		761 n723
150b	15 n56,	10a	110 n36	148a	199 n109	213b	355 n111,
	80 n93	14a	329 n3	149a	538 n213,		367 n182
151a	10 n39	16b	97 n34		543 n238	214a	328 n3
151b	862 n28	19a	67 n40	157a	787 n814	217a	15 n61,
156a	466 n3	19b	870 n74	158a	705 n504		39 n142
157	11 n39	21b	870 n76-77	158b	709 n517	218a	553 n27
158b	8 n19	22a	46 n194,	159a	709 n517,	219b	50 n7
159a	958 n36		870 n77		711 n524	221a	137 n10
164b-165a	8 n22	22b	46 n194,	160b	709 n515	221b	10 n39
166a	460 n32		592 n177	161b	10-11 n39	222b	930 n84
170b	565 n60,	23a	46 n194	162a	711 n525	224a	608 n221
	1032 n27	23b	651 n354	164a	415 n423	231	456 n18,
171b	127 n60,	24a	933 n101	167b	23 n97		1029 n12
	978 n93	26a	329 n3	168a	189 n61	232b	930 n84
172a	8 n22	27b-28a	1022 n110	172a	1081 n39	233a-b	964 n53
173b	46 n194	32b	661 n380,	175b	929 n83	234b	57 n18
175a	1108 n111		965 n56	181a	756 n691	240a	127 n60
175b	46 n194	33a	661 n380	183a	742 n636,	240b	39 n142
181b	553 n27	34b	8 n18		743 n641	242b	329 n3
191a	594 n181,	44b	67 n42,	183b	748 n654	246a	628 n284
	622 n265		106 n17	184b	760 n720	248b	127 n60
191b	544 n245,	45a	301 n252	188a	759 n712	251b-252b	949 n11
	574 n103,	49a	720 n565	188b	409 n383	253a	975 n84
	574 n114,	52a	191 n76	189a	329 n3	253b	127 n60
	577 n129,	52b	46 n194	189b	760 n721	261b-262a	612 n242
	622 n265	53a	58 n20	190a	760 n721,	265b	1029 n13
192a-b	594 n181	55a	305 n259		864 n40,	272a	917 n37
196a	46 n194	56b	664 n386		912 n9	275a	27 n105
197a	999 n32,	57a	1100 n88	193a	46 n194	275b-276b	1144 n80
	1000 n39	57b	664 n386	193b	977 n93	277a	975 n84
198a	189 n61	64b	17 n70	194a	796 n854,	279	31 n127
198b	51 n9	70a	82 n98		796 n856	289b	580 n141
203	654 n360	76b	113 n45,	194b	977 n93,	299	200 n114
206a-b	917 n39		115 n47		796 n854,	304a	771 n757
211	40 n158	78b	931 n93,		796 n856	309a	977 n92
214b	967 n57		615 n247	196b-197a	759 n718	309b	965 n55
224a-b	1027 n4	83b	60 n24	198a	511 n122,
226	656 n368	84a	939 n128		763 n728
230b	328 n3,	84b	605 n216	198b	760 n720,
	1032 n29,	86a	127 n60		924 n70
	1032 n30	87a	105 n12	199b	1051 n64
231a-b	108 n20,	88a	97 n135	200a	294 n221,
	1032 n29	92b	608 n221		763 n730,
235a	62 n28,	101b	553 n27		1053 n86,	1.14	934 n110
	912 n12	106a	57 n20		1102 n94	4.6	867 n65
240b	1092 n64	112b	771 n757,	200b	772 n760	97b	110 n36,
241a	661 n381		964 n53	205b	787 n814,		112 n37,
250-251a	398 n330	113a	294 n221,		787 n818		236 n264
254-263a	9 n22		771 n758	206a	676 n413	97c	236 n265
256a	97 n135	113b	262 n56	207	329 n6	99a	113 n45,
258a	329 n3	114a	1062 n119	207b	767 n743		137 n10,
270	558 n42	117a	102 n3	208a	137 n10,		138 n11
		118b	687 n440		964 n53
		119a	57 n18,	209b	763 n728,
			871 n88		768 n747
			890 n18	210a	768 n747
Zohar III						Ruth
3a	701 n492					(beg.)	964 n53
3b	661 n381	124a				1.1	864 n37
						1.4	779 n787,
							864 n40
						1.14	934 n110
						4.6	867 n65
						97b	110 n36,
							112 n37,
							236 n264
						97c	236 n265
						99a	113 n45,
							137 n10,
							138 n11
						Shir ha-Shirim
						(beg.)	1019 n98
						1.2	268 n94

Shir ha-Shirim ( cont. )	1.7	1027 n7	5. HASIDIM	3	419 n425,
(addition from	2.1	996 n2,	18		1092 n61
Sitre Otiyyot		1000 n39	23	824 n912
1.15a)	84 n101	97b	31	88 n106	3.2b
(additions), I., 3a-b		98b	36	456 n18	3.3a, 3b
	112 n37	99a	46	58 n20	3.4b-5a
supplement, 4a, 68a			71	1101 n93	3.5b
	151 n49			254 n24,	3.6c-7b
a quotation from,		28. TIKKUNE ZOHAR		806 n889	3.7b-d actually in the		(beg.)	78	1030 n20	3.8b-c
Yalkut Reubeni		17	80	207 n151
	233 n255	20	85	242 n295	3.9b-10a
		47	91	956 n27	3.10a-11a
			122	884 n134	3.11d-12a
27. ZOHAR HADASH		48, 86a	123	632 n297	4
Bereshit		70	126	84 n101
8a-b	110 n36,	(end)	183	1180 n193
	112 n37		225	839 n966
11b-12a	15 n61	I. Other Medieval	231, 232	548 n10
Genesis, 1.9	14 n54	Writings	240-241	43 n190
3.17b	46 n194		247	132 n64	8. KAD HA-KEMAH
4.19b	26 n102,	I. AZILUT	269	262 n53	68a
	27 n112	(beg.)	277	16 n63	78b
4.22a	84 n100		290	66 n37	93a
4.23a	27 n106,	2. EMUNOT WE-DEOT	294	242 n302
	27 n107	3.92	294-295	244 n309
24a	78 n81,		296	635 n309	9. KUZARI
	105 n12		341	259 n51	I., 89
24b	79 n89		383	414 n405	II., 14
25a	105 n11		394	505 n117	III., 73
(end)	139 n14,	3. ESHKOL (HADASSI)	397	1144 n68
	983 n7	24b-c-d	399	575 n118	10. MA'ASEH BOOK
			400	17 n70	143.40a-40b
Noah			416	924 n68	145.42d-43c
(beg.)	69 n49	30a, nos. 82,	426	502 n114	157.47d
28b	149 n46,	338	438	681 n424
	152 n53	36a, no. 82	446	259 n44,	161
29a	149 n46,	45a, nos. 117,		259 n51	163.49b
	151 n49,	118	454	71 n58	169.52c
	873 n96,		455	140 n14	180.54d
	874 n101	45b, no. 118	461	215 n188	194
29b	152 n51,	45b, no. 119	478	49 n6	199.67d
	197 n102	45b	479	406 n370	201
(end)	999 n27	92c, no. 242	480	288 n183,	230
Lek	430 n444,	132a, no. 358		406 n370
	1009 n65	133a, no. 362			II. MAHZOR VITRY
Wa-Yeze (end)	280 n137	134a			3
Beshallah	568 n82	134d, nos. 362,			8
Terumah	143 n23	363			33
Ahare Mot (end)	930 n84	137a-b, no. 364			164
Balak, 66a	97 n134,				320-322
	100 n142,				331
	508 n118,				332
	985 n17
Ki Teze	511 n122
Ki Tabo (beg.)	1005 n52,
	1019 n98
		4. ESHKOL (ABRAHAM B.
		ISAAC)
Ruth		I. 17
1.1 (beg.)	999 n33

12. MENORATH HA-MAOR III., 1.5 602 n203	PIYYUT, see Hebrew Index	22. TOLA'AT YA'AKOB (end of Asher Yazar) 9 n22	12.44 655 n364 13.32 410 n383 15.34 1168 n145
13. MISHNEH TORAH Yesode ha-Torah	16. RAZIEL	23. YEZIRAH	Luke
2.7 16 n64, 97 n132	6b 301 n253 11a 608 n219 11b 14 n52 12a-13d 9 n22 18a-b 14 n52 19a-c 9 n22 20b 2 n4 27c-d 9 n22, 14 n52 38a, 61a 17 n65	82 n98 8 n21 15 n60, 172 n13	1.41 254 n13 3.38 121 n57 3.52 482 n64 10.19 306 n275 11.29 1035 n38 17.32 215 n180 18.12 629 n286 22.30 100 n142 24.5 520 n158
3.9 28 n112		Al Barceloni's Commentary on Yezirah
Abodat Kokabim		57 228 n238 247 131 n61
1.1 118 n54, 119 n56		J. New Testament	John
Abodah Zarah	17. RIMZE HAFTAROT
1.3 172 n13	Yitro 1044 n43	Matthew	4.5, 12 307 n281 5.4 577 n135 5.17 85 n102 8.39-44 937 n114 8.44 72 n60 8.52 1032 n27 8.56 200 n112 9.6 1006 n60 10.34-35 715 n539 11.39 58 n20 11.51 228 n239 12.28 664 n385 12.31 21 n75 14.2 22 n85
Teshubah	1 Shebuot 3 n8		Acts
2.4 203 n122	Naso 41 n177	1.17 967 n57 1.21 706 n505 3.9 203 n122 3.16 7 n15 5.18 975 n80 6.34 511 n127 7.1 526 n172 7.4 864 n32 7.29 971 n76 8.22 629 n287 9.28 508 n118 10.15 215 n184 10.30 453 n6 11.24 215 n184 12.3-4 909 n107 12.5 608 n221 12.29 306 n275 12.39 1035 n38 14.25 1096 n76 15.5 1053 n88 16.14 1022 n114, 1071 n13 18.10 57 n20 19.17 2-3 n6 19.28 100 n142 21.16 1124 n36 22.31-32 629 n287 22.35 1078 n30 23.14 721 n567 24.38 145 n29 26.29 21 n79 26.53 514 n135 27.45 79 n89 27.46 1168 n145 33.15 212 n164	1.15 588 n164 5.19, 23 1146 n88 7.5 188 n54 7.7 200 n112 7.23 487 n69 8.20 482 n64 12.23 717 n552 13.36 939 n128
9.2 790 n836			Romans
Issure Biah	18. ROKEAH
17.13 1039 n11	221 747 n648		4.3 199 n109 4.15 239 n275 5.14 57 n19
Bet ha-Behirah	Hasidut Zakuyyot Arum 172 n13		1 Corinthians
4.1 11 n39	19. SEMAG
Kele ha-Mikdash	10 Positive Precept 585 n154		6.2 100 n142 4.19 1009 n71 9.5 274 n123 10.4 577 n129 13.12 612 n242 15.22 57 n19
5.10 1039 n11	29 Negative Precept 608 n221		2 Corinthians
9.9 651 n355	116 Negative Precept 585 n154
Melakim	20. SHALSHELET HA- KABBALAH
9.1 476 n37	13a 453 n3, 488 n72, 698 n484 16a 943 n144 19a 1042 n24 92b 155 n58 93b 132 n62 96 561 n43 97 1042 n28 99b 1042 n25 99b-100a, 101a 1083 n42 100a 1102 n94 101a 1087 n53 101b 1126 n54 102b 955 n18
Sanhedrin		Mark
2.7 588 n162		8.22 1006 n60 9.1 999 n32 9.7 612 n241 11.21 517 n144	3.7 635 n309 3.18 612 n242 11.4 94 n118 15.6 9 n22
14. MOREH NEBUKIM	21. SHIBBOLE HA-LEKET
I., 1 50 n6 I., 21 632 n299 I., 66 501 n113 II., 5 28 n112 II., 8 27 n107 II., 10 84 n101 II., 29 51 n9 II., 30 69 n50 II., 34 and 48 329 n3 II., 39 132 n64, 141 n20 II., 42 768 n745 II., 46 1041 n23 II., 47 78 n72, 755 n687 III., 13 50 n8 III., 23 57 n20 III., 46 329 n3 III., 49 249 n318	7 612 n243
15. OR ZARU'A
I., 139, no. 321 678 n420

Galatians	3.21	508 n118	5 Ezra	9.2	726 n585
	3.8	188 n57		13	102 n3
	3.17	616 n248		18	605 n213
	3.24	594 n181		24	1077 n30
	4.26	220 n211		Questions of Bartholomew
1 Timothy			History of Joseph the Carpenter		63 n35
	2.15	68 n45		13
	5.6-7	629 n287		22	57 n20
				31-32	53 n13
					131 n61
2 Timothy			Gospel of the Savior's Infancy	Slavonic Palaea
	3.8	520 n161			103 n4
				52	109 n31
				Visio Pauli
				4	58 n20
Hebrews			Gospel of Ps. Matthew	4-6	25 n100,
	1.6	63 n35			26 n105
	1.14	63 n35		14	57 n20,
	2.9	999 n32		18	430 n444
	6.3	1009 n71		20	609 n228
K. New Testament Pseudepigrapha	6.13	232 n243	Gospel of Nicodemus	22	122 n58
	7.1-3	197 n104		23	109 n30
	9.19-22	599 n195		27	21 n79
	11.3	48 n1		29	214 n170
	11.5	122 n58		49	940 n130
Acts of Andrew and Matthew	11.19	232 n243	Gospel of Thomas		214 n170,
	11.37	1058 n103,		6	458 n26,
		1083 n42			462 n34,
	12.23	481 n62		18	1058 n103,
	12.24-25	488 n70			1083 n42,
Acts of Barnabas			Liber Johannis Apocryphus	50	1102 n94
	9.8	197 n93			140 n19
	12.2	583 n145		L. Church Fathers and Medieval Christian Writers
	15.4	99 n140
	(end)	922 n53
Acts of Matthew			Martyrdom of Bartholomew	Albertus Magnus
					Physics , XIX
				1.731	14 n54
				Ambrosius
					De Cain
Acts of Philip			Narrative of Zosimus	2.10	105 n12
Acts of Pilate			Nicephorus, Stichometry	De Fide
	2	200 n113			(ed. Migne), III., 11.88,
					XVI., 607
					1000 n39
Acta Thomae			Passing of Mary	De Viduis , I
				8.45	870 n73
				16.248	870 n73
Acts of Xanthippe			Passing of Maria, second version	Aphraates
	30	46 n194			Homilies
				28	381 n238
				57	767 n743,
					845 n21
Descent of Christ			Protevangelium of James	58	1047 n55
	3	92 n113
Evangel of Seth			5 Ezra
	39	142 n21,
		145 n24,
		145 n25,
		146 n29,
Revelation		146 n31	History of Joseph the Carpenter
	(beg.)	109 n30,
		131 n61
	1.8	511 n128
	2.7	81 n96
	2.14	779 n785

Homilies (cont.)		In Epistolam Joan.		3.39	141 n20,	Protrepticus
63	104 n10	Ad Parthos			151 n50,	(end)	50 n6
84-85	1105 n105	5.3	102 n3		212 n167
110	517 n148			4.34	49 n3	Stromata
122	697 n479	Contra Faustum		7.18-19	159 n74	1.5	197 n102
138	78 n77,	12, 71	543 n233	8.11-12	137 n10	1.15	256 n35,
	140 n19			8.11-15	121 n57		484 n67
162	833 n952	Contra Adversarium Legis		8.13	138 n12	1.20	1041 n20,
168	78 n72,	2.5	67 n40	8.15	140 n15,		1042 n25
	81 n97	Quaestiones in Exodum			146 n32	1.21	62 n30,
196	501 n109	69	62 n31	9.4-6	163 n83		140 n19,
215	456 n14			9.5	118 n54		481 n57,
234	146 n30	Quaestiones ex		11.4	50 n6		870 n73,
240	49 n3	Novo Testamento		16.19	50 n6		958 n36,
245	79 n84	III., 2282 (Migne's		17.7	50 n6		1035 n38,
272	892 n25	edition)		18.9	99 n140		1070 n10,
293	212 n167	102 n3		19.12	608 n221		1071 n14
310	153 n56	Bar Hebraeus				1.22	479 n46,
314	996 n3,	Historia Dynastiarum		Recognitiones			488 n75,
	997 n7	13	180 n40	1.27	8 n17		501 n109,
354	62 n30			1.29	756 n699		1125 n50
362	1042 n29	Basilius		1.30	146 n30,	1.23	484 n67,
363	924 n68	Hexaemeron			155 n60,		543 n233
400	233 n253	3	7 n15		158 n68,	1.26	158 n72
420	815 n902,	4	25 n98		163 n83,	2.1	153 n56
	824 n920	9.6	52 n12		166 n91	2.5	168 n4,
452	746 n646			1.31	180 n40		301 n253
461	977 n91	Chronicon Paschale		1.35	548 n8,	4.6	649 n346
471	1062 n123	1.299	1104 n104		571 n99	5.1, 10	121 n57
481	861 n22	92.396	1118 n20	1.45	84 n101,	6.11	197 n93
					92 n113	6.16	99 n140
					60 n21	6.17	57 n20,
					100 n142		610 n236
					166 n91	Codex Nazareus
					632 n296	III., 72	150 n47
					608 n221
					122 n58	Comestor
					118 n54	Genesis
					163 n83	41	180 n40
					172 n16
					61 n26	Commodianus
					166 n91	Instructiones
					608 n221	3	74 n70,
					10 n33		121 n57
						Constitutiones
						Apostolicae
						2.23	1058 n111
						2.60	434 n4,
							1141 n60
						6.20	622 n271
						Christian-Palestinian
						Homilies
						Anecdota Oxon.;
						Semitic Series
						I., Part IX
						56	140 n19

Cyprian	153E	777 n782	Isaiah	Amos
Epistola ad Donatum	156D-157A	180 n40	36.1	1056 n94	1042 n28
1.14	159	60 n21
	166B	782 n797	Job	Obadiah
Epistolae	166D	784 n801	42.16	462 n35	1027 n7
62.3	173	242 n300
	178C	479 n51	Ed. Lagarde	Hippolytus
Cyril of Alexandria	181B	301 n251	80.22	150 n47	Genesis
Glaphyra	191A-C	825 n924			1.3	20 n71
1.3	200D	517 n148	Eusebius	1.27	67 n42
	202A	511 n126	Praeparatio Evangelica
De Trinitate	205A-B, D	517 n149,	206	82 n98	Deuteronomy
19		517 n151	410-11	484 n67	33.11	477 n44
	216B	750 n663	418d, 9.17	172 n20
Ephraem	216D	561 n52	420b, 9.18	191 n78	Isaiah
Opera Omnia, I	218	571 n99	430d-431, 9.25	456 n14	630-631	1053 n81
5, 2E	222D	602 n205	452	958 n36
8B	223A	696 n472	484d	163 n87	Daniel
8B, F	224A	622 n265	515c	62 n31	3.16	1099 n83
15A	225B	625 n275	517b	68 n48	4	99 n140
	254E	494 n83	689a	57 n20	4.32	1100 n90
	257	700 n485			641	1062 n128
15B-C	257E	698 n482	Isaiah
19C	263	577 n129,	22.15	1051 n62
23C		748 n653	39.1	1052 n71	Susannah
23E	287A	577 n132			1.1	1070 n10,
26D	526C	1027 n7	Epiphanius			1083 n42
41	560	1052 n71	Haereses
43E			1.1, 4	151 n48	De Consummatione
47	Opera Omnia II		1.4, 4	60 n22	Mundi
47E-F	189F	1105 n105	15 (ed. Migne, XII, 976)	1000 n39	18	410 n388
47F	313E	105 n12
51J			26.5	102 n3	De Anti-Christo
52C-D	Genesis		40.5	102 n3,	9	410 n388
54B	19.31	215 n188		105 n17
56F			45	74 n70	Haereses
57A-B	Exodus		55.3	996 n3	2.175	215 n184
59E	2.5	479 n48	55.6	197 n102	4.33	40 n157
61D	20.3-6	608 n217			5.21	102 n3
61E			De Mensuris et Ponderibus		8.7	48 n1
64B-C	1 Samuel		16	254 n25	9.25	45 n194
	1.1	888 n1
65	2.22	893 n26	Ancoratus		Philosophumena
76E	15.27	902 n64	97	824 n920	5.1	67 n42
77B	16.13	915 n23			5.2	60 n22,
77D	17.55	918 n44	Ps. Epiphanius			70 n51,
78B			Hexaemeron			92 n113
79D	2 Samuel		251	79 n83	5.3	67 n42
100, 17C	6.7	924 n68			5.4 (end)	915 n22
102	12.24-25	946 n2	De Vitis Prophetarum		5.21	32 n127
105E	1 Kings		(s.v. Elijah)	996 n3	5.22	70 n51
126A-B	14.25	977 n91			6.1	67 n42
127C	18.19	998 n15	Isaiah		6.22	74 n70
135			1042 n25		7.1	74 n70
143D	2 Kings				7.16, 20	52 n12
148B	3.26-27	991 n54	Jeremiah		8.16	60 n22
149E	6.1	989 n43		1083 n42	10.26	158 n72
150C
153C

Ps.-Hippolytus	11.28	180 n40	22.12	1062 n128	7.16	902 n60
Sermo in Sancta	11.29	178 n38	22.20	1077 n29	12.13	977 n93
Theophania	12.17	191 n77
2	158 n67	13.3		Ezekiel	Epistola ad Damasum
2-3	142 n21,	14.2-7	1.1	1061 n116	36 (ed. Migne, I.,
	149 n44,	14.18	18.4	850 n41	458)	784 n806
	152 n54		23.12	118 n54	39.3	259 n41
4	152 n54	19.14	27.18	106 n19	72 (22, 674)	946 n1
705	1048 n61,	19.31	28.11	1105 n105	125	112 n37,
	1058 n103	21.9				112 n42,
		22.2		Hosea		113 n44
		22.21	1.1	1041 n20	I., n369	1057 n102
Hermas Pastor		23.2	1.3	1042 n23	I., 375	1043 n35
2.3	698 n482	23.16	2.10	118 n54
V., 6.2	57 n20	24.2	3.2	874 n100	Epistola ad Evagrium
		24.63	4.14	986 n18	73	197 n102
Irenaeus		25.1	7.4-7	984 n9
Adversus Haereses		27.16	10.2	1044 n45	Adversus Helvidium
I., 30	184 n49	33.16			7	1124 n41
I., 30.7	61 n24,	35.21		Amos	Adversus Jovinianum
	102 n3	36.10	1.3	1042 n31	1.16	103 n4
2.5	52 n12	36.24	2.1	992 n56
2.58	49 n3	37.36
2.66	131 n61	41.45
III., 5.3	156 n65			Joel	Ps.-Jerome
5.5, 1	49 n3				Leviticus
III., 21.2	1125 n50		1.1	992 n56,	26.8	928 n78
III., 23.5	74 n70,		1.4	1041 n20
	80 n93,	Isaiah	4.4-12	991 n56	Quaestiones in Iudices
	88 n106	1.10		1013 n90	5.1	870 n73,
IV., 31	215 n180	6.6				870 n83
V., 22.2	60 n22,	7.3		Micah	5.4-5	594 n181
	78 n72,	7.12			5.23	870 n82
	81 n97	10.3			5.25	870 n73
5.23	109 n30	10.13		Jonah
V., 30	410 n392	10.16		Introduction	1 Samuel
4.5	184 n49	14.19		997 n9	1.1	888 n1
		15.7		1.2	1.3	888 n5
		17		1032 n27	1.4-5	888 n7
		20.1		1032 n28	2.5	891 n22
Fragmenta		21.2		1032 n30	2.22	893 n26
32	703 n495	22.15		1033 n33	2.27	893 n28,
		27.1		1033 n31		997 n3
		30.2		1035 n35	4.19	895 n38
Jerome		36.1		1032 n27	7.6	626 n281,
Quaestiones		39.1		Obadiah		895 n40
Genesis				Introduction	9.20	901 n52
1.2	7 n15			1027 n6	10.6	902 n54
1.8	14 n54			1.1	13.1	902 n53
2.12	70 n51			998 n23	14.34	902 n58
2.17	78 n72	39.7			15.6	902 n60
2.21	62 n30			Habakkuk	16.10	930 n88
2.23	68 n48	44.2		2.15	17.18	917 n33
3.1	72 n60	47.2			21.1	893 n30
3.8	78 n73			Zechariah	21.6	909 n107
4.4	104-105 n10	56.4-5		8.18-19	25.44	941 n133
4.26	118 n54	64.1			28.7	903 n74
5	132 n62			Malachi	28.8	903 n71
5.29	135 n5			Introduction	31.6	904 n77,
6.3	140 n19			1123 n33		909 n110
9.27	156 n65			1.1
10.25	158 n69			1115 n5
		Jeremiah		Ecclesiastes
		22.11		946 n2

2 Samuel		32.21	1048 n60	62	52 n12	De Ira Dei
1.2	909 n107	33.10	1057 n102	75	301 n253	13	608 n221
3.5	941 n131	32.33	1053 n92	79	121 n57
4.2	929 n79	33.13	1058 n107	81	78 n72	Manoimus
5.4-5	931 n96	35.3, 22-25	1062 n118	90	583 n145	Philosophoumena
5.24	922 n54	36.8	1062 n125	91	583 n145,	8.7	525 n170
6.11	942 n135				748 n658
10.10	937 n123	Joel		94	748 n658	Martinus Raymundi
11.3	923 n61	Chronographia		95	100 n142	Pugio Fidei
13.37	942 n143	p 3	116 n53	96	197 n104	554	61 n25
14.26	932 n98			97	200 n111	563	63 n35
15.25	933 n101	Johannes Malalas		99	78 n77	837-838	137 n10
16.10	982 n2	Chronologia		112	298 n245,	956	1115 n6
17.25	912 n7	1.151	116 n53		306 n274,
18.18	933 n108	71	193 n81		748 n658	Methodius
19.29	909 n112	97.257	1117 n18	113	706 n505	Symposium
21.8	941 n133			116	1106 n108		140 n19
21.19	928 n78	John a Lapide		120	1058 n103	2	74 n70
23.8	928 n78	Commentarium		121	166 n91
23.20-25	980 n94	in Genesim		124	64 n35	Michael Glycas
24.9	937 n120	106 n19		128	16 n62,	Annales
24.15	937 n122				502 n115	228-233	116 n53
24.24	921 n53	Julius Africanus		131	544 n241,	Minucius Felix
		I., 93	903 n69		544 n242,	Octavius
					580 n141,
					688 n446	26.7	118 n54
1 Kings		Epistola ad Aristidem
1.6	942 n139	1	470 n19,	139	155 n60	Moses bar Cepha
1.17	946 n3		784 n800	141	931 n94	36E	74 n70
2.11	931 n96					De Paradiso
2.34	926 n75	Justin Martyr		Cohortatio ad Gent.		84A	80 n93
4.31-32	955 n24	Apologia		30	67 n42	90A	81 n97
7.14	967 n61	1.10	51 n8
1 Chronicles		1.45	51 n8	Ad Diogenem		Moses Chronensis
2.17	918 n45	2.15	118 n54	7	51 n8	53	851 n45
3.1	942 n141	11.5	121 n57	Ps.-Justinian
4.17	698 n484			Quaestiones		Novatian
6.13	897 n46	1 Apologia		ad Orthodoxes		De Cibis Judaicis
8.38	908 n96,	60	748 n658	VI., 1293	80 n93	2	70 n56
	908 n98
9.44	909 n107	2 Apologia		Lactantius		Origen
11.11	928 n78	5	57 n20	Divinae Institutiones		Gen. Selecta
11.18	929 n78	7	50 n8	2.11	51 n8	7.19	152 n54
14.14	922 n54			2.13	49 n6,
17.8	931 n94	Dialogue			70 n54,	Genesis
20.7	948 n11	5	57 n20		78 n72	1.7	25 n100
21.7	947 n10	10	51 n8	2.14	140 n19	2.2	25 n98
33.19	1058 n104	19	248 n318	2.15	121 n57,	3.9	256 n35
		20	153 n56,		140 n19,	9.20	74 n70,
			502 n115		164 n88		155 n59,
2 Chronicles			197 n104,	2.16	118 n54		155 n60
2.7	848 n31	33	248 n318,	4.10	232 n253,	12.10d	146 n30
2.13	967 n61		1052 n70		622 n271,	15.9	199 n110
15.16	986 n18				861 n22	19.3	214 n172
20.5	988 n29	34	961 n40	4.14	1107 n108	37.36	351 n100
20.31, 37	988 n28	49	1022 n112	5.6	609 n235	41.45	370 n187
23.9	1044 n39	55	166 n91	7.4	45 n191
24.17	1039 n12	56	206 n132	8.5	51 n8	Numbers
24.27	1039 n16	57	206-207 n143	12.13	81 n95	36.8	876 n100
26.22	1042 n29	60	16 n62

Numbers (ed. Migne) 12, 578B 833 n952	Photius Bibliotheca VIII., 453 n3	2.8 50 n6 2.21, 12 846 n22 2.24 78 n77 2.25 166 n90 2.26 625 n275 2.30 543 n233 3.8 748 n658 3.18 410 n387 4.24 568 n88 5.8 68 n45, 248 n318 5.9 1052 n70 11 62 n30	6 50 n6 7 80 n93
In Josuam, Homily 2.1 (Lommatzsch ed.) 11.22 833 n952	Procopius II., 20 848 n34	Specilegium Syriacum 89 622 n266
Isaiah, Homily 1.5 1057 n102 39.7 1053 n88	Schatzhöhle 7 81 n97 34 105 n17 78 113 n44 176 864 n31	De Spectactulis 4 39 n143
Ezekiel, Homily 4 456 n14	Syncellus Chronographia 1.16-17 116 n53 I., 21 140 n19, 151 n48 I., 34 121 n57 107 al. 86 317 n296 I., 176, 18 188 n54 I., 227 484 n65	De Virgin. 7 121 n57
John 892 n25 2.25 256 n35 2.31 306 n273 6.7 997 n3	Tertullian Ad Nationes 2.8 622 n266 3.8 484 n65 11.8 548 n3	Ps.-Tertullian Genesis 35-40 49 n3 85 74 n70 86 74 n70 113 78 n73 184 105 n13
Contra Celsum 3.41 140 n19 4.27-31 51 n8 4.31 121 n57 4.34 14 n50 4.37 49 n3 4.38 67 n42 4.40 80 n93 4.41 143 n21 4.43 215 n188 4.66 3 n9 5.30 164 n88, 166 n91 6.22 1105 n105 6.27 92 n113 6.30 687 n440 6.43 453 n3 6.62 612 n238 6.66 351 n102 7.63 50 n6	Adversus Omnes Haereses 1 9 n22 2 102 n3 4 608 n221	Sodoma 41 214 n171 160-170 215 n180
De Principiis I., 3.3 56 n17 I., 3.7 62 n30 I., 8.1 53 n13 I., 33 7 n15 III., 2.5 168 n4 III., 6.1 50 n6 3.21 94 n117	Adversus Hermogenem 26 67 n42 34 15 n61, 131 n61	Adversus Marcionitas 3.210 1030 n20 3.235 1072 n16 3.245, 257 1083 n42 280-281 1125 n50
Epistola ad Africanum 1106 n106 4 14 n54 12 68 n48	Adversus Judaeos 2 70 n55 4 248 n318, 846 n22 7 961 n40 9 706 n505 10 410 n387, 748 n658 14 1107 n108	De Baptismo 3 14 n53 13 248 n318 19 543 n235	Adversus Omnes Haereses 2 95 n119, 147 n36
Petrus Damascus (ed. Migne), CXIV 382B 997 n3	Adversus Marcionem I., 25-26 54 n15 2 49 n3 2.2 74 n70, 78 n78 2.3 54 n15 2.3-4 51 n8 2.5 50 n6	De Cultu Fem. 1.3 1124 n41, 1125 n50	De Jona 20 1032 n27
		De Idol. 5 748 n658 9 121 n57	Theodoretus Haeres 1.11 105 n17
		De Oratione 22 68 n45 26 206 n134	Genesis 1.2 7 n15, 56 n17 1.27 52 n12 3.15 200 n114 3.27 80 n93 9.3, 29 153 n56 12.17 191 n77 15.9 200 n114 18 145 n24 18.8 207 n143 25.22 254 n18 31.19 292 n218 43 112 n37 247 118 n54
		De Patientia 5 102 n3 14 1058 n103
		De Pudicitia 9 80 n93 10 1032 n27
		De Resurrectione 5 49 n3, 52 n12

Exodus	De Fabrica Mundi	Lobeck	Ibn Tufail
2.6 479 n51	81 n97,	Aglaophamos	39 n148
3.1 502 n115	99 n140	909 279 n134
6.5 511 n122			Istahri
11.2 543 n233	M. Greek and Latin Writers	Plato	54 172 n20
14.16 557 n36		Timaeus
20.3-6 608 n218	Aristotle	92a 43 n190	Koran
32.10 625 n275	De Coelo	Symposium	2.33 63 n35
72 81 n97	I., 4 45 n191	189d, 190d 67 n42	2.60 118 n55,
			691 n452
Numbers	De Generatione Animalium	Pliny	2.67 574 n110
10.11 494 n83	III., 6.5 41 n177	Historia Naturalis	4.124 168 n4
11.17 697 n479		VIII., 32, 50 43 n190	6.100 178 n34
11.21 700 n485		X., 68, 87 40 n157	7.174 118 n55
12.1 701 n488	Historia Animalium	26.1, 5 499 n101	9.30 1115 n5
22.23 767 n743	V., 19 40 n157	30.1, 11 520 n161	11.73 207 n143
24.17 777 n782	V., 47 41 n177	31.2 1089 n56	12.26-28 399 n340
Deuteronomy	IX., 13 43 n190		12.30-33 356 n118
Interr., 43 833 n952		Strabo	18.59-82 1015 n94
	Arrian	Geographia	21.69 177 n33
2 Kings	Alexander's Campaigns	16.11 430 n438	47.16-17 21 n79
4.1 1027 n7	7.2 430 n438		Maras
		Seneca	II., 519 172 n20
Theophilus	Berosus	Epistolae
πρὸς Ἀντόλῳκον	(Richter's Ed.)	65.24 61 n25	Mas'udi
1.2 351 n102	56 151 n48		Les Prairies d'Or
2 66 n38	56.39 165 n88	Stoicorum Veter.	39 n148
2.3 197 n102		Fragmenta	I., 100 1077 n29
2.13 14 n45	Diogenes of Babylonia	(ed. Arnim)	I., 161 1089 n56
2.15 25 n99	Philodem. De Piet.,	II., 584 81 n97	Pantschatantra
2.18 49 n3,	(ed. Gomperz)		(ed. Benfey)
52 n12	82 61 n25	Suidas	I., 376, 377 172 n16
2.19 70 n54		Lexicon	IV., 1 42 n190
2.26, 29 78 n77	Herodotus	s.v. χαναάν 848 n34
2.27 50 n6	I., 8 598 n191	s.v. Seth 116 n52	Pend-Nameh
2.30 113 n45	I., 32 62 n28		207 42 n183
2.31 166 n90,	I., 134 291 n217	Tacitus
193 n81,	I., 181 1105 n105	Annales	Tabari
232 n253	II., 21, 23 20 n73	XIV., 15.2 1087 n52	Annales
3.19 135 n5,	II., 35 468 n7		I., 414 903 n69
140 n19,	III., 23 779 n787	Xenophon	II., 45 1035 n35
155 n60	III., 109 39 n144	Memorabilia
7 632 n296	III., 153 228 n239	IV., 3.14 351 n102
Tatian	IV., 65 1100 n90
Oratio ad Graecos	IV., 120 718 n558	N. Oriental Literature
8 118 n54	IV., 168 241 n294	Buchari
Victorinus of Peteau	Juvenal	Sabih
Apocalypse of John	Saturnalia	III., 379 307 n275
11.1 1083 n42	6.542 930 n87

HEBREW AND ARAMAIC WORDS AND PHRASES

אבות	434 n2	איִקון	137 n9	אספסוף	552 n12
אבינו	484 n68	איש אלהים	838 n965	אסקופים	573 n101
אבותיך	1017 n97	איש הבינים	917 n27	אסקפטרין	980 n99
אבלון	458 n21	אנשי שם	720 n563	איִסקבטיריי	980 n99
אבני אישתא	11 n39	איתמלאי	169 n6	אסרשא	315 n292
אבירים	571 n98	אכל לעלמיה	1005 n54	אפלישוס	1147 n93
אברך	1099 n84	אל	113 n42, 121	אפים	888 n7
אבריקא	848 n34		n57, 306	אפיקון	1112 n4
אנוסטיאני	1087 n52		n273	אפרענית	499 n104
אדם	54 n15, 145	ואל אחיו	331 n18	אצטרנגא	619 n258
	n28, 576	אלה	108 n20	אקטורין	552 n15
	n122	אלהים	3 n6, 121	ארה	773 n764
אדם הקדמוני	60 n21		n57, 128	ארים	131 n61
אדום	259 n46		n60, 150	ארמי	131 n61, 253
אדמי	908 n96, 908		n46, 622		n5, 322 n317
	n98		n264, 884	ארץ	7 n16
אדן	39 n148		n134	ארקלין	962 n47
אדנת נשא	113 n42	האלהים	553 n27	ארעא תקיף	120 n57
אדורין	322 n317	אלהים עולים	904 n77	אשה	68 n48, 273
אהב	168 n4	אלקים	128 n60		n113, 288
אהוב	168 n4	אם ירצה השם	1009 n71		n179
לאהליך	984 n10	אמה תיביקין	143 n21	אשיא	608 n219
אומות	158 n78	אמזרע	113 n42	אשל	224 n225
אופסים	573 n101	אם זרע	146 n29	את	334 n21
אוקינוס	20 n73	אמפורין	435 n6	מאת ד'	214 n179
אור הננוז	8 n19	אמר המגיד	178 n34	אתוראה	178 n36
אורולי דימא	39 n145	אמתי	997 n9	אתרוג	74 n70,
אוראל	128 n60	אמתלא	169 n6		356 n118
אוריה	128 n60, 161	אמתלאי	169 n6
	n76	אניפונים	1131 n13	בבל	1092 n64
אוריו	128 n60	אניפורנים	1131 n13	בגד	288 n183
אותיותיה משולשות	593 n179	אנקא	43 n190	בד	27 n109
אחיו	262 n52	אניקא	970 n67	בהמות שדה	31 n127
אחיך במצות	274 n123	אנוקו	180 n45	בונה	348 n96
אחד	262 n57	אניקש	180 n45	בוה	231 n240
כאחד	879 n114	אנונות	737 n622	מבזה אותו בקלון	1106 n107
אחו	67 n40	אנקניהא	43 n190	ביל	131 n61
אחוזה	89 n109	אסותא	401 n357	בישין	110 n34
ואחותיה נשיין	878 n111	אסטרשא	315 n292	בית יואב	926 n76
לאט	1051 n66	אספים	573 n101	בכאים	922 n54
אי	894 n33	אספיים	573 n101	בכי	1058 n103

ולבכתה	236 n259	גליגי לאימך	140 n16	זכור לשוב	996 n1, 1004 n45
בכרו	908 n98	גלומי	40 n162	זמין	237 n269
בלצוציחא	810 n896	גלמא	40 n162	זמרגד	458 n20
בולקה	760 n719	גם זו לשובה	1004 n48	זעקפי המלחמה	410 n385
במה	901 n51	געגע	2 n6	זקן	904 n75
בן אחרוני של עולם	289 n201	מתגעגעין	827 n941	זקק לאישה	95 n128
בן דודוהו	988 n28	גרוד	276 n124	זקאל	120 n57
בן יומו	396 n316	גרידא	276 n124	זרעאל	860 n17, 918 n43
בן ימים	319 n308	גרסי	499 n101
בן נבו	169 n6	גורפת מחושמה	273 n113
בן נץ	32 n134	גרשה	800 n869
בני	435 n6
בני אלהים	306 n273	דוביאל	3 n8	המחבל	104 n8
בני בליעל	985 n16	דויג	909 n107	חגב בעל כנפים	61 n25
בני דויה	790 n827	דוכיפת	975 n85	חד שבעה	1099 n85
בני ימא	40 n168	דולפיין	40 n168	חדים	20 n71
בנים	933 n108	דיקומני	1087 n52	בחדש	597 n188
בסוסו	1030 n15	דכיין	284 n164	חזה	68 n48, 102 n3
בספריה	127 n60	דליים ובנריות	203 n122	מחזיא	91 n110
בעל	1085 n45	דמואל	3 n8	חויא	68 n48
בעל בכי	1058 n103	דקלים	15 n55	חוח	43 n190
בער	1058 n112	דקריוני	1087 n52	חול	39 n151
בקמון	874 n104	דרך שמים מת	743 n641	חויץ לפילייה	1062 n128
ברונא	689 n447	דורשי רשומות	908 n100	חיצא	231 n242
ברוי	3 n8	דתנה	334 n29	חוצה	231 n242
ברולא	689 n447			חזיל	161 n76
בריא	42 n184	הבל	104 n8	חזיר מיער	284 n162
בראילא	689 n447	הדר עלה	967 n59	חשה	74 n70
ברחילא	689 n447	היכל	639 n318	חי	1066 n3
בר יוכני	32 n137	הימק סורו	1099 n85	חייא	137 n10
ברנבו	169 n6	הכי	271 n102	חיה	301 n253
בר נפלי	1063 n136	המדתא	1147 n93	חיה יחיה	1022 n119
ברקוליאני	1087 n52	הימקסירוס	1099 n85	חייה	137 n10
בר נש דטורא	39 n148	הינדיק	70 n51	חיל	322 n317
ברנשא	1095 n75	הלך	284 n162	חכם	1067 n8
ברא	32 n136	הלך וגדל	262 n62	חלילה	211 n161
ברית	248 n318	הלכו לאורה	942 n137	חלומי בראשו	361 n147
בריתו של אברהם	248 n318	הליכתו	80 n95	החלות	805 n883
ברכת הגומל	564 n58	ותהם הארץ	893 n31	חלונות	172 n14
ברק נביאה	870 n73	הן	805 n886	חליפין	867 n65
בת אנוש	113 n42	הצללפוני	878 n111	חליצה	867 n65
		להורת	394 n310	חמור גרם	289 n193
גבינא	1112 n2	וי	309 n287, 894 n33	חמור חמרתים	879 n118
גדר	289 n185			וחמשים	784 n806
גדוד	276 n124	זיבורית	259 n45	חנם	694 n469
גדול הדור	474 n27	זהוב	259 n46	חסד	929 n78
ואגדלוהו	295 n229	נזדווגה	103 n4	חסיד	88 n106, 329 n3, 485 n68, 715 n543, 929 n78
גדלם	739 n627	זונה	844 n12	חסידות	715 n543
גדלת שפתים	414 n414	זונה	876 n106	חסנת	427 n432
גוטאוכי	158 n72	זונרא	1125 n47	חוסנא	427 n432
גועש	315 n292	זירורי	315 n292	חצות	896 n40
גוף	57 n19, 66 n37	זח	184 n49	החצר החדשה	988 n29
גוש של רוק	1101 n92	זוחא	184 n49	הצרמות	161 n76
גוריגון	422 n429	זמרי	860 n21	חורב	501 n113
גחון	87 n106	זכות אבות	912 n7
גלוי אליהו	1013 n93	זכר	926 n77
גלוי עריות	158 n67	זכר ונקבה	67 n42

מחרמת	184 n49	יוחני	492 n80	כרשינה	936 n111
חרס	844 n11	יחנה	520 n161	כשף	137 n9
חרסום	1112 n2	יין המשומר	268 n93	כשילאה	1131 n13
חרפה	289 n200	יין שחור	1135 n28	כתב	1071 n15
חרש	844 n11	ייוס	492 n80	כתב ליבונאה	158 n72
יתחשב	773 n764	יכולנו	1087 n52	כתב ומכתב	82 n99
ונתחדש	462 n35	ילדא בהות	106 n17	כתובין	1177 n176
חתך	1163 n129	ים	9 n23	כתים	770 n782
חכמי המשנה	1128 n56	הימים	324 n322	לא	27 n108, 263 n63
טוב	635 n308,	ותניקתו	479 n51	לא ירבה	975 n80
	876 n107	יפי	184 n49	לובש תפלין	942 n134
כטובתו	399 n341	והוציא	289 n189	לבוזר דוק	1112 n2
טוטפן	1178 n189	יקך	740 n632	לבנים	42 n182
טטרנוא	619 n258	ירד	120 n57	לביאל	53 n13
טורא בריכא	874 n103	ירח	27 n112	לו	263 n63
טחן	880 n121,	ירוקה	88 n106	לוה	288 n174
	1085 n45	ירושלמי	224 n223	לולבא	456 n14
טחרי זהב	894 n34	ירושת שלמה	232 n253	לחי	880 n119
טליא	471 n21, 970 n67	ישוע ליספאה	848 n34	לחם אבירים	207 n143,
טלניס	1100 n87	ישראל סבא	558 n39		571 n95
טפסר	1099 n84	ישר	828 n943	לילה	904 n75
		יתרך	733 n607	ליליאל	120 n57
ויואל	501 n108,	כבוד	602 n206	לשונות	158 n72
	517 n148	כדובין	1177 n176	מאמרא אפיתרניו	128 n60
יאניס	184 n49	כדי כניסה	212 n165	מביט	962 n47
יבין	860 n19	כה	228 n238	מגבעון	1057 n101
יברוחא	289 n189	כהן	494 n82, 928 n78	מדבחא	655 n365
יד	902 n64	כהנים	942 n141	מדברא	655 n365
יד ה'	998 n22	כודות ברזל	713 n532	מדון	322 n316
ידיד	168 n4	בכזיב	346 n81	מדורה	15 n56
ידעוני	760 n720	כוס של עקרים	202 n117	מדורי	15 n56
ידעתי	232 n247	כושאי	980 n99	מדינה	173 n22
יה	113 n42, 118 n56, 128 n56, 128	כותא	172 n20	מדינים	793 n842
	n60, 184 n49	כחושים	466 n4	מדרש	224 n223,
יהו	118 n56	כידנו לרחים	192 n80		398 n335,
יהואל	200 n114	כיון	103 n6		564 n60
יהודי	434 n4, 1141 n60	כיל	131 n61	מה לו	1008 n63
		כיפה	163 n82	מהויא	91 n110
יהודים	1177 n175	כוכבים	27 n112	מהנדיא	1179 n192
מתייהדים	1178 n191	כל ונוכחת	217 n198	מולא	1169 n158
שנתייהדו	865 n40	כלוב	1067 n6	מומסים	1137 n36
יהועזי	118 n56	כלבו	88 n106	מונחס	492 n80
יו	128 n60	כלוני	1087 n52	מוקרת ראש	67 n43
יום הולדת	362 n151	כלי לדברות	94 n117	מושב	894 n34
היום כפול	615 n245	כמלנית	533 n188	מזוגת	1131 n6
יומא	961 n42	כנס	529 n183	מזלות	583 n144
מימים ימימה	884 n135,	כנניה	697 n477	מזרע	113 n42
	888 n5, 888 n9	כנסת ישראל	1043 n36	מזרק	672 n400
יומברוס	492 n80	כנעני	348 n95, 752 n669	משבע תפלה	1128 n58
יורקמי	1099 n87	כנענית	348 n96	למחות	949 n13
ייחד	677 n416	כאפא רנומיהא	1099 n87	משעת	903 n70
שנתייהדו	865 n40	כרב	80 n94	מטריאל	120 n57
יחדיו	231 n240	כרדו	172 n20	מי נדה	574 n112
יחני	520 n162	כרה	1030 n22	מים	574 n112
		כרש	1115 n7	מים מתוקים	9 n23

מינין	113 n42	משוח מלחמה	795 n849	סומא	94 n116
מינקת רבקה	319 n302	משמר	1146 n90	סוף	479 n46,
מיתת קרח	1087 n53	משפטן	787 n818		1033 n31
מך	870 n73	משקה	536 n209	סטרטן	315 n292
מכרותיהם	410 n387	מישלהא	1131 n13	סיגרי	499 n101
מלאך בשמים	1000 n39	משולשות	593 n179	סיגר	1125 n47
מלאכי חבלה	80 n94	משלשת	199 n110	סילונית	533 n188
מלאכי שטן	64 n35	משנה	1067 n8	סלונות	172 n14
מלאכי השרת	122 n58			סלם	576 n122
מלח סדומית	215 n184	נבאר	1112 n2	סלמאל	306 n273
מלחם	39 n151,	הנביא	484 n68	סמל	1056 n97
	73 n67	נביאים אחרונים	1124 n36	סמלנית	534 n188
מלחם	39 n151	נבון	890 n17	סמוכין	720 n566
מלחם	73 n67	נגד השמש	780 n790	סנאב	697 n477
מלך	456 n17,	נוגף ישמעאל	274 n120	סנאה	697 n477
	1164 n140,	נהר	170 n12	סנדטור	842 n2
	1171 n161,	נופך	462 n37	סנהדרין	866 n62
	1177 n177	נחל	170 n12, 318	סנאה	697 n477
המלך	484 n68		n301	סניאב	697 n477
מלכת	244 n311	נחל קדומים	870 n73	ספר	635 n306
מלכיות	1099 n85	נחשול	672 n388	ספר עזרא	1125 n44
ממשיח	678 n421	נינוס	70 n51, 681	ספר התורה	842 n9
מקושש	691 n452		n424	ספיר	635 n306
ממתיח	678 n421	נינוח היה נישול	580 n141	סקנדרין	1177 n176
מנות	888 n7	נכה	1062 n123	סקרישורין	1177 n176
מנרכוס	492 n80	נכה רגלים	970 n71	סרשן	315 n292
מסורת	291 n203,	נסות	601 n200	סריסים	1097 n78
	869 n71	נסיכי	100 n142	ובסתרים	597 n191,
מעדנות	902 n65	נעל	867 n65		844 n15
מעונות	8 n22, 14	למסעיו	191 n79	ועבדתי	282 n158
	n48	נעם זרע	146 n29	ויעבר	1166 n142
מעניות	8 n22	נעמיות	902 n65	עד לו	1124 n39
כמעט	263 n67	נעץ חרב	941 n133	עדאל	912 n11
מעלה	999 n32	נעוריתא	533 n188	עדה	912 n11
מעשה חיוי	72 n60	נער פורפורה	384 n265	עדיאל	912 n11
מעשה כל הדורות	1000 n36	נוער	67 n41	עדישה	222 n218
מעשר כספים	280 n144	ויפל	105 n13	עדית	215 n180
מעשר ממון	280 n144	נפילים	120 n57	עודד	1028 n10
מפלצת	986 n18	נקבה	282 n157	עול	271 n105
מצוה	805 n878	הקיש בוזג	68 n47	עור	73 n69, 80
מצפיר	760 n719	נרתיק	26 n100		n93
מצרים	66-67 n40,	נשא פניו	918 n44	עורבתי	1147 n93
	370 n184,	חשא ראש	637 n313	בעזר השם	1009 n71
	375 n204	מנשבין	22 n82	עזרא וסייעתו	1125 n49
מצרים סבא	558 n39	נשיין	878 n111	עזרה	930 n88
מקום	279 n130,	נשמה	58 n20	עזרו	113 n42
	756 n701,	נתזה	890 n17	עזריאל	113 n42
	1164 n139	נתן	543 n233	עזריה	113 n42
מקלו	731 n600	ויתן לך האלהים	880 n122	עזיה	118 n56
מראה	40 n165			עזיהו	118 n56
מריאים	81 n98	סבא	256-257 n35	עשהאל	860 n17
מרכבה	26 n101	מסנן	152 n55	עשיאל	860 n17
מרודים	346 n74	סנן סגניאל	812 n898	עיר	173 n22
מרפא	401 n357	סגנואל	812 n898	עיפה	222 n218
מרום	999 n32	סדר תפלה	1128 n58	עירם	322 n316
מריו	128 n60	סדר	27 n112	עכבית	40 n159
נמרצת	931 n96	סוניא	152 n55	עכן	848 n31
משה רבינו	484 n68	סוד העבור	536 n203

עכנא	848 n31	פקד יפקד	430 n434	קצתי	273 n113
עולה ויורדת	57 n18	פקידה	1071 n13	קורסור	693 n457
בעלות המנחה	998 n18	פקפילי	158 n72	קודור	1013 n88
עלילה	271 n104,	פרגוד	57 n19	קשורין	552 n15
	888 n9	פרגוד מצויר	343 n43	קינסלי	926 n77
התעללות	768 n746	פרח רוחה	61 n25	קיפא	691 n452
עלומה	878 n111	פרשוריאני	1087 n52	הקל ראש	67 n43
לעולם הבא	571 n97	פרמשתקו	499 n101	קלקל	1073 n24
עליהא	40 n159	פרי	148 n37	מקולקל	568 n85
עם שופרא	1172 n168	מחפרסמת	79 n85	קמין	874 n104
עומד בבכי	567 n72	פריעה	203 n126	לקמציים	370 n192
מחעננין	827 n941	פרנטוס	1076 n29	קמוש	43 n190
עניתני	914 n13	פרעתון	315 n292	קן צפור	896 n40
ענקים	121 n57	פרץ	347 n92	קנים	896 n40
עסתר	120 n57	בפרק אחד	1041 n20	קניחי	866 n64
עסתראל	120 n57	פורק על	271 n105	קניהו	31 n127
עפלים	894 n34	פרת	430 n438	קנסור	693 n457
עפר	774 n770	פרתמים	1131 n7	קנסרי	926 n77
עצה	456 n14	פתח עינים	346 n84	קנעתי	31 n127
עצורה	113 n42	פתקא	1134 n23	קסדור	1013 n88
עצורתי	113 n42			קסרין	926 n77
ער	346 n79	צדי	43 n190	קפדקי	158 n72
ערב רב	552 n12	צדק	329 n3	קפישילין	430 n438
ערוב	533 n188	צדקה	224 n224,	קפיצת הדרך	241 n287
ערבים	997 n6		1017 n96	קציעי צואריא	711 n526
ערומים	95 n120	צדקות	224 n224	קד	1100 n92
לעתיד לבוא	571 n97	צדק לא	903 n74	קרא על יברוחא	289 n189
ויעתר	253 n8	צדוק הדין	343 n64, 819 n908, 896 n40	קרדו	172 n20
				קרדוניא	1178 n184
פנה	931 n93			ויקר	866 n57
ויפגע	279 n130	צדיק	145 n28,	קרינוס	1176 n170
פדיאל	879 n111		328-329 n3,	קרקע	752 n673
פואה	470 n17		1015 n94,	קרקע בתולה	54 n15
פוך	462 n37		1106 n107,	קשר תפלה	463 n39
פולסא	810 n896		1109 n119	קשר הספד	463 n39
פונדקיתא	844 n12, 876 n106	וצדקת אבות	912 n7	לראות	309 n285,
		צופים	888 n1		394 n310
פוסטין	1030 n22	צורי	158 n72	ראש סינהדרין	474 n27
פועה	470 n17	ציון	726 n581	רב	484 n68
בפחד אביו	294 n227	ציר	967 n61	רב לך	805 n887
פחדאל	879 n111	צפרה	470 n17	רבי	484 n68
פשוות	699 n485	צפית	1112 n4	רבינו	484 n68
פטרנוס	1076 n29	צרדי	158 n72	רבן	484 n68
פלא	120 n57	צרי	967 n61	למרבה	1052 n70
פלניס	1100 n87	צרוע	982 n2	רגג	74 n70
פילגש	961 n41,	והצרעת זרחה	1042 n30	ברגול	405 n367
	1073 n21			ברגליו	871 n84
הפליט	756 n697	קבוע	202 n117	לרגליו	517 n149
פלילה	271 n104	קובע	202 n117	וירד	346 n74
פגנוס	595 n185	מקדם	15 n61	רהט	152 n55
לפני	236 n262	שמקדם	735 n615	רהומי	158 n72
פנים	122 n58	קברנישין	430 n438	רוזנים	949 n14
פנימי	137 n9	קודיר	1013 n88	רוח	56 n17, 58 n20, 1101 n92
פניקין	158 n72	קולצאני	170 n10
פסוסו	315 n292	מקולל	568 n85	רוח אלהים	7 n15
פסים	334 n43	קוליני	170 n10	רוסתקיאחא	847 n22
פסל	884 n138	קוסטינר	842 n2	הרם	555 n32
פספסין	334 n43	קין	618 n250

הרים	20 n71
רחמי	168 n4
רחומי	158 n72
רק	1100-1101 n92
ראקא	1009 n72
ריקה	1009 n72
ריגוסר	1112 n2
ריש קטיעא	711 n526
רמון	884 n135
רומניא	884 n135
רננים	32 n139
רעמיאל	120 n57
רעיא מדימנא	501 n109
רפאים	965 n56
רצואל	113 n42
רצויה	113 n42
ונתרקנה כבודו	11 n42
מרחוק	334 n33
הרמותים	888 n4
הרפה	917 n27
תרצח	609 n228
רקת	410 n391
הרשע	43 n190
שאל	543 n233
שבא	1073 n21
שבע	284 n166
שבעה	1063 n136
שבעה עדנין	1104 n103
שבעתים	15 n56, 112 n37
שבת	85 n103, 1089 n56
שנעון	1032 n25
שדים	80 n94
שדה	31 n127, 39 n148, 82 n98, 752 n673
שדי	11 n43, 1005 n58
שה	914 n15
שהוצדה	865 n43
שה	904 n77
שוח	857 n9
שופט	864 n36
שורניקא	970 n68
שור הבר	32 n136, 38 n141
שושן	113 n42
שותף	64 n35
וישתחו	401 n348, 401 n355

שחוק באמך	140 n16
שחור	1135 n28
שיפדו	1176 n169
שיפרגו	1176 n169
שיר נצח	127 n60
שכה	178 n38
שכוי	32 n137
ואשטיף	1012 n75
משכמם	977 n90
שכרה	1032 n28
שלג	876 n108
שלח	132 n62, 132 n64
שלם	307 n279, 197 n102
שלשה סימנים	574 n112
שלוהאל	1126 n50
שם	292 n218, 347 n89
שם רוח טומאה	291-292 n218
שמו של אל עליון	890 n17
שמות שאינן נמחקין	306 n273
שמחה	113 n42
שמים	7 n16, 8 n20
שמע	17 n70
השומרים	1047 n55
שמירמה	1063 n134
שמירמית	1063 n134
שמירעם	1063 n134
שמש	27 n112
שנצחבת	744 n643
שניות לעריות	955 n18
שפטים	1039 n16
שר הטבחים	355 n111
שר הפנים	14 n50, 122 n58
שר צבא הגדול	127 n60
שרש	184 n49
ששון	113 n42
שתי	10 n38, 11 n39
שתיה	11 n39
שתיל	115 n50
תאווה	217 n198
תאנא	122 n58
תדוי	1012 n78
תהומאל	120 n57
תוכו כבודו	644 n330
תור בר	38 n141
תורפה	292 n218
תחטי	1012 n78
תלג	876 n108

תלי אתליא	31 n127
תמה	172 n19
תמח	112 n40, 871 n87
תמר	456 n14
תנה כופר ופדין	231 n242
תנין	29 n117, 39 n145
תפוח	74 n70
תרב	271 n105
תרדמה	62 n30
תרי	168 n5
תריכון	733 n607, 739 n626
תרנגול ברא	32 n136, 975 n85
תרפים	965 n56
התרשתא	1120 n26
תשנק רוחך	947 n10
ותתע	221 n216
ותלה	398 n334
מתקן	147 n36

INDEX OF PIYYUTIM

אדני אלהי ישראל	1128 n58
האומרים אחד	57 n20
או במלאת	1084 n43
או רוב ניסים	191 n76
אולת יוכבד	835 n956
איכה עצת	82 n98
איתן	682 n427
אל ברוב עצות	84 n101
אלה אוכרה	97 n134
אלהינו אלהים אמת	26 n102
אליהו הנביא	1023 n119
אמיצי שחקים	63 n34
בימים ההם	1120 n25
התקבצו מלאכים	481 n57
ובכן ויהי בחצי הלילה	874 n100
ויכון עולם	30 n127, 39 n141
זכר ברית	434 n3
כך גזרו	557 n39
מה נהדר	961 n42
מראה כהן	1130 n1
רחמנא אדכר	715 n543
פרשת החדש	485 n68